In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

Following is the complete lineup of concerts.

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second Week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux) Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third Week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

4th week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

5th week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

6th week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100; Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6, Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella"; a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder"; Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319; and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

The series of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String

Theatre.

Boston Globe - March 14, 1954

Jean Morel, Ernst Toch, Frederic Cohen Join Berkshire Music Center Staff

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this Summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this Summer. Mr. Toch, a native of Austria, who has taught at the New York School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California, will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of Opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the Summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to Aug. 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of 50 includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I—Orchestral Conducting: Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin, Orchestra: Jean Morel, conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Chamber Music: Richard Burgin and William Kroll, Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher, and 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and William Valkenier. Dept. II—Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron. Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss. Dept. IV—Opera: Frederic Cohen. Morton Siegel, Stage Director; Elsa Kahl, Acting; Emanuel Balaban, Coaching; John Blankenship, Stage Design; Felix Wolfes, Coaching; Leo Van Witsen, Costume; Frederic Waldman, Conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, Technical Director. Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the Associate Div. Dept. V—The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this Summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

BRIDGEPORT CONN
POST

MAY 8 - 1954

The final instrumental auditions for applicants to the Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood—will be conducted in Carnegie Recital Hall in New York next Sunday between 12 and 2 p.m. . . . All students accepted for the school orchestra at Tanglewood will be eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Receiving Scholarship Fund. . . . Final auditions for active participants in the Opera department will be conducted in the same hall on Saturday, May 15, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. . . . The Tanglewood season will extend from July 5 to Aug. 15.

11a
[168]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAY 1 - 195

Berkshire Center Auditions Set

The final instrumental auditions for applicants to the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall on Sunday, May 9, between noon and 2 P. M. Final auditions for participants in the opera department will be held in the same hall on Saturday, May 15, from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

FEB 28 1954

To Give 24 Concerts At Berkshire Festival

UNDER the supervision of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival, July 7 to Aug. 15, at Tanglewood, have been arranged to include 24 concerts.

In the Theater-Concert Hall there will be six programs by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings and six by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players Friday evenings.

In the Shed the full orchestra will present six programs on Saturday nights and six on Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts conductor Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by presenting the composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts, and Jean Morel and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

The Shed series will open Saturday, July 10, with 'Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. Monteux will conduct a Beethoven program the following afternoon, including the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, the "Emperor" Piano Concerto, with Claudio Arrau, and the Fifth Symphony.

Programs for the succeeding Shed concerts follow: July 17 and 18, Saturday—a Franck program conducted by Monteux including "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, piono solist), Symphony in D Minor. Sunday afternoon, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Copland, Leo Smit, soloist; "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

July 24, 25, Saturday—Overture, "Der Freischutz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma" Variations, Elgar, Morel conducting. Sunday—"Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz, William Primrose, viola soloist; Symphony No. 2, Ernst Toch.

July 31, Aug. 1, Saturday—"Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz, with Festival Chorus and soloists. Sunday—"Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius, Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7, 8, Saturday—"Alceste" Overture, Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday—Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", from "The Trojans;" "Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra, Eleanor Steber, soloist; "Te Deum."

Aug. 14, 15, Saturday—"Lohengrin" Prelude, Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston: Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday—Berlioz' "Requiem," with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Chamber Orchestra Series

For the Friday night chamber orchestra series in the Theater-Concert Hall the following programs are announced: July 9—Bach's Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5; July 16—Bach's Cantata No. 93, Suites Nos. 1 and 4; July 23—Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30—Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute Concerto, Doriot Anthony, soloist; Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor, K.388, and the "Paris" Symphony, K.297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella," a Mozart piano concerto, with Seymour Lipkin, soloists, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, K.319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Groups appearing in the six chamber music concerts Wednesday evenings follow: July 7—Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14—Albeneri Trio; July 21—Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28—Griller String Quartet; Aug. 4—Boston Woodwind Quintet; Aug. 11—Kroll Quartet.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

MAR 21 1954

Berkshire Music Center Adds to School Faculty

Jean Morel, Ernst Toch and Frederic Cohen will be added this summer to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

In the conducting and opera departments, Morel and Cohen will take the places, respectively, of Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky who will be on leave of absence.

Morel is at present head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. He has conducted the Opera Comique in Paris, the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and opera in Rio de Janiero, Mexico and the New York City Center.

Cohen is head of the opera department at the Juilliard school.

Toch will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in composition. A native of Austria he has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, the New School for Social Research in New York, and more recently at the University of Southern California.

Lukas Foss, who has taught at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group and teach composition while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Foss and Morel will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25.

The school will have a six-week session starting July 5 under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by Copland. There is a faculty of 50 members, including 24 from the Boston Symphony.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER

MAY 9 - 1954

BERKSHIRE CONCERTS

Twenty-four concerts are scheduled for the Berkshire Music Festival (Lenox, Mass.) this year between July 7 and August 15. Six concerts will be by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six by the full Boston Symphony on Saturday evenings, and the final six by the same group on Sunday afternoons.

Full programs and ticket information may be obtained from Berkshire Festival office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
MAY 1 1954

Tanglewood Auditions

Auditions for applicants to attend the coming summer session at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., will be held Monday from noon at 2:30 p.m. in Room 412, Eastman School of Music.

TIGHT BINDING

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
FEB 28 1954

Berlioz' Principal Works On Tanglewood Programs

Music Shed Series to Open July 10 With 'Damnation Of Faust'; Programs for Whole Enlarged Berkshire Festival Announced, With Soloists

Boston, Feb. 27—The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August have been decided on under the supervision of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The increased season has been planned by Mr. Munch to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last summer.

12 Shed Concerts

Twenty-four concerts are announced for the six weeks from July 7 to Aug. 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed on Saturday evenings and six Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the fifth symphony.

Second week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux)—Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, piano concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernest Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth Week End

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist Ruth Posselt); Sibelius Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding the [illegible]ed concerts, except in the final [illegible]week when it will be given on T[illegible]ursday, the concerts will be give[illegible] in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert flute concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297.

On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a piano concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Mar 2 - [illegible]

Berkshire Auditions

Auditions for instrumental musicians who wish to join the Berkshire Music Center's orchestra for this summer's session at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held from noon to 2 p. m. next Sunday in Carnegie Recital Hall. Those accepted for this student orchestra will be eligible for tuition for applicants for the Center's opera department will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. Saturday, May 15. Intending applicants are requested to notify the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Boston Globe - Feb. 28 1954

Complete Be

Complete Programs Announced for Larger Berkshire Festival

The programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival of July and August have been decided under the supervision of Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The increased season has been planned by Mr. Munch to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last Summer. Twenty-four concerts are announced for the six weeks from July 7 to Aug. 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings and six Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts, Charles Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel, and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

Following is the complete lineup of concerts.

Shed Programs

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second Week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday evening (Pierre Monteux) Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third Week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday evening (Jean Morel)—Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations." Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

4th week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday afternoon (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

5th week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program; "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

6th week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday evening (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday afternoon (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Bach-Mozart Series

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theatre-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100; Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6, Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella"; a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert, on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder"; Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319; and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

The series of concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs together with ticket information will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

NEW CANAAN, CONN
ADVERTISER
3/4/54

28.

Tales of Tanglewood . . .

County music-lovers who think nothing of the trek to the Berkshires for the Tanglewood concerts held there every summer under the auspices of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be heartened to know that their enthusiasm is shared by many others.

According to Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony's music director, an enlarged program has been planned for July and August of this year, to meet the constantly growing popularity of these concerts, which drew a record number to Lenox in the Berkshire Hills last summer.

Twenty-four concerts have been announced for the six weeks from July 7 to August 15, including six concerts by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six concerts by the full Orchestra in the Shed on Saturday evenings, and six on Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the concerts, Mr. Munch will honor the 150th anniversary of the birth of Berlioz by conducting this composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors in the Shed concerts will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts; Jean Morel and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

Theatre.
Boston Globe - March 14, 1954

Jean Morel, Ernst Toch, Frederic Cohen Join Berkshire Music Center Staff

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this Summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, will take the place of Leonard Bernstein, who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this Summer. Mr. Toch, a native of Austria, who has taught at the New York School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California, will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of Opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the Summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to Aug. 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of 50 includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I—Orchestral Conducting: Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin, Orchestra; Jean Morel, conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Chamber Music: Richard Burgin and William Kroll. Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher, and 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and William Valkenier. Dept. II—Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron. Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss. Dept. IV—Opera: Frederic Cohen, Morton Siegel, Stage Director; Elsa Kahl, Acting; Emanuel Balaban, Coaching; John Blankenchip, Stage Design; Felix Wolfes, Coaching; Leo Van Witsen, Costume; Frederic Waldman, Conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, Technical Director; Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the Associate Div. Dept. V—The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this Summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

BRIDGEPORT CONN
POST
MAY 2 - 1954

The final instrumental auditions for applicants to the Berkshire Music Center—Tanglewood—will be conducted in Carnegie Recital Hall in New York next Sunday between 12 and 2 p.m. . . . All students accepted for the school orchestra at Tanglewood will be eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. The final auditions for active participants in the Opera department will be conducted in the same hall on Saturday, May 15, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. . . . The Tanglewood season will extend from July 5 to Aug. 15.

16

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
MAY 1 - 195

Berkshire Center Auditions Set

The final instrumental auditions for applicants to the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall on Sunday, May 9, between noon and 2 P. M. Final auditions for participants in the opera department will be held in the same hall on Saturday, May 15, from 11 A. M. to 1 P. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
FEB 28 1954

To Give 24 Concerts At Berkshire Festival

UNDER the supervision of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the programs for the enlarged Berkshire Festival, July 7 to Aug. 15, at Tanglewood, have been arranged to include 24 concerts.

In the Theater-Concert Hall there will be six programs by chamber music groups on Wednesday evenings and six by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players Friday evenings.

In the Shed the full orchestra will present six programs on Saturday nights and six on Sunday afternoons.

In the course of the Shed concerts conductor Munch will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Berlioz by presenting the composer's principal works in their complete form. Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux, conducting two concerts, and Jean Morel and Richard Burgin, each conducting one.

The Shed series will open Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. Monteux will conduct a Beethoven program the following afternoon, including the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, the "Emperor" Piano Concerto, with Claudio Arrau, and the Fifth Symphony.

Programs for the succeeding Shed concerts follow: July 17 and 18, Saturday—a Franck program conducted by Monteux including "Le Chausseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," Les Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, piono solist), Symphony in D Minor. Sunday afternoon, "Iberia," Debussy; Piano Concerto, Copland, Leo Smit, soloist; "Fantastic" Symphony, Berlioz.

July 24, 25, Saturday—Overture, "Der Freischutz," Weber; Sixth Symphony, Prokofieff; "Don Juan," Strauss; "Enigma" Variations, Elgar, Morel conducting. Sunday—"Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy," Berlioz, William Primrose, viola soloist; Symphony No. 2, Ernst Toch.

July 31, Aug. 1, Saturday—"Romeo and Juliet," Berlioz, with Festival Chorus and soloists. Sunday—"Chout," Prokofieff; Violin Concerto, Dvorak, Ruth Posselt, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius, Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7, 8, Saturday—"Alceste" Overture, Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beethoven, Zino Francescatti, soloist; Symphony No. 2, Brahms. Sunday—Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm," from "The Trojans;" "Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra, Eleanor Steber, soloist; "Te Deum."

Aug. 14, 15, Saturday—"Lohengrin" Prelude, Wagner; Fourth Symphony, Piston: Piano Concerto, Ravel, Nicole Henriot, soloist; Organ Symphony, Saint-Saens. Sunday—Berlioz' "Requiem," with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

Chamber Orchestra Series

For the Friday night chamber orchestra series in the Theater-Concert Hall the following programs are announced: July 9—Bach's Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5; July 16—Bach's Cantata No. 93, Suites Nos. 1 and 4; July 23—Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" Symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. July 30—Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute Concerto, Doriot Anthony, soloist; Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor, K.388, and the "Paris" Symphony, K.297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella," a Mozart piano concerto, with Seymour Lipkin, soloists, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, K.319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Groups appearing in the six chamber music concerts Wednesday evenings follow: July 7—Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio; July 14—Albeneri Trio; July 21—Zimbler Sinfonietta; July 28—Griller String Quartet; Aug. 4—Boston Woodwind Quintet; Aug. 11—Kroll Quartet.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Programs and ticket information may be obtained by writing to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
MAR 21 1954

Berkshire Music Center Adds to School Faculty

Jean Morel, Ernst Toch and Frederic Cohen will be added this summer to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

In the conducting and opera departments, Morel and Cohen will take the places, respectively, of Leonard Bernstein and Boris Goldovsky who will be on leave of absence.

Morel is at present head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. He has conducted the Opera Comique in Paris, the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and opera in Rio de Janiero, Mexico and the New York City Center.

Cohen is head of the opera department at the Juilliard school.

Toch will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in composition. A native of Austria he has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, the New School for Social Research in New York, and more recently at the University of Southern California.

Lukas Foss, who has taught at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group and teach composition while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Foss and Morel will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25.

The school will have a six-week session starting July 5 under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by Copland. There is a faculty of 50 members, including 24 from the Boston Symphony.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
MAY 9 - 1954

BERKSHIRE CONCERTS

Twenty-four concerts are scheduled for the Berkshire Music Festival (Lenox, Mass.) this year between July 7 and August 15. Six concerts will be by chamber groups on Wednesday evenings, six by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players on Friday evenings, six by the full Boston Symphony on Saturday evenings, and the final six by the same group on Sunday afternoons.

Full programs and ticket information may be obtained from Berkshire Festival office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
MAY 1 1954

Tanglewood Auditions

Auditions for applicants to attend the coming summer session at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass., will be held Monday from noon at 2:30 p.m. in Room 412, Eastman School of Music.

Kingston Vistor Press March 11, 1954

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Berkshire Music Festival programs for twenty-four concerts, to be given during a six-week period this year, from July 7 to August 15, have just been released. Shed programs, with the full orchestra participating, are scheduled for each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon during the festival. The Bach-Mozart series, to be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is to be split up this year, with five programs listed for Friday nights and the sixth on Thursday night.

Each Wednesday evening during the series, there will be a chamber music concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs, together with ticket information, will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. The program follows:

Shed Programs

July 10, Saturday — Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Mr. Munch conducting.

July 11, Sunday — Beethoven program including Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Empehor" piano Concerto with Cludio Arrau as soloist and the Fifth Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 17 — Saturday — Franck program, "Le Chasseur Maudit", "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), and Symphony in D minor, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 18 — Sunday — Debussy "Iberia", Copland Piano Concerto (soloist Leo Smit). Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony", Charles Munch conducting.

July 24—Saturday—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz", Prokofieff Sixth Symphony, Strauss "Don Juan", Elgar "Enigma Variations," Jean Morel conducting.

July 25—Sunday—Berlioz "Beatriceand Benedict" overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose). Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2, Charles Munch conducting.

July 31—Saturday — Berlioux, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists, Charles

(Continued on Page 10)

Munch, conducting.

Aug. 1 — Sunday — Prokofieff "Chout", Dvorak violin concerto, Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7 — Saturday — Cluck "Alceste" overture, Beethoven, violin concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti), Brahms, symphony No. 2, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 8 — Sunday — Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber, soloist, and the "Te Deum", Charles Munch conducting.

Aug. 14—Saturday — Wagner "Lohengrin" (prelude, Piston fourth symphony, Ravel, piano concerto, (soloist Nicole Henriot), Saint-Saens organ symphony, Charles Munch conducting.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

July 9 and 16—first two Friday evenings, Charles Munch will conduct music by Bach, including in the first concert Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and in the second concert Contata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

July 23 — Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6 No. 4, Haydn's "Military" symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

July 30 — Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388 and his Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella", a Piano Concerto by Mozart, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder", Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

July 7—the program will be shared by Claudio Arrau, Piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

July 14—the Albeneri Trio.

July 21—the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

July 28 — the Griller String Quartet.

Aug. 5—the Boston Woodwind Quintet.

Aug. 11—the Kroll Quartet.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
MAR 13 1954

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAR 27 1954

MUSIC

To judge from the preview offered in Carnegie Hall, by way of a performance of the complete "Romeo and Juliet," this summer's Berlioz festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra promises to be something that Americans would go thousands of miles to hear, especially if it was in Rouen or the Loire valley. Let us hope they will not discriminate against the Housatonic, for the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Berlioz's birth will not occur soon again—nor the riches of repertory promised.

Charles Munch's performance, with Mary Davenport, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Yi-Kwei Sze, bass, had its absorbing aspects, especially where Berlioz's genius was functioning at full force: in the superb ball music, the inspired love scene, the magical Queen Mab scherzo. Elsewhere, which is to say, in those passages where an interpreter's penetration would have been contributory, it tended to bog down and lose momentum. Unquestionably the loose construction of the score, with its comings and goings of solo singing, choral music, and instrumental writing, makes an imperfect whole; but Munch did not divine Berlioz's purpose, so to speak, where it was not clearly set forth.

This conjecture became a conclusion near the end of the love scene, when Berlioz's great melodic invention is menaced by interjections in the strings, trills, and mutterings. The levels of prominence can be arranged so that the melody streams on, serenely, despite the threats to it. With Munch the stress was on the objections rather than on the thing which triumphs over them—which makes no special sense, musical or otherwise. Mechanically, the performance was of a high order, with Miss Davenport a self-possessed (perhaps too self-possessed) mezzo, the other singers satisfactory, the choral discipline good.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
MAR 14 1954

Morel, Toch, Cohen Added To Faculty at Tanglewood

Boston March 13—Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conduting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Bernstein on Leave

Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence.

Morel and Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Toch's second symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the opera department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to Aug. 15, directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of 50 includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I—Orchestral Conducting, Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Grego Piatigorsky, guest teacher; 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and Willem Valkenier.

Dept. II—Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen; Morton Siegel, stage director; Elsa Kahl, acting; Emanuel Balaban, coaching; John Blankenchip, stage design; Felix Wolfes, coaching; Leo Van Witsen, costume; Frederic Waldman, conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, technical director; Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the associate Division.

Dept. V—The Tanglewood Study Group, Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chorus to Sing

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departmetns.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME
MAR 31 1954

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student is eligible for a tuition grant from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be heard by a faculty committee of Boston Symphony Orchestra members at Carnegie Recital Hall on Wednesday, April 7th from 3 to 5 o'clock. Percussion and Harp applicants will be heard at 7 o'clock in Carnegie Hall.

Applicants for membership in the Opera Department at Tanglewood will have vocal auditions on Saturday, April 10th, from 11 to 1 o'clock in Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with The Berkshire Festival and will this summer have its twelfth session from July 5th to August 15th.

Those who intend to apply at the auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance for catalog and application forms; address—Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
MAR 14 1954

Three To Join Tanglewood Music Faculty

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Morel, the French conductor who is at present head of the orchestra at Juilliard School of Music in New York, will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Cohen, head of the department of Opera at Juilliard School will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to August 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Copland as assistant director.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
MAY 9 - 195

New Copland Opera In Berkshire Bow

"The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and a New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances of the work in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3.

There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who support its activities with contributions.

[169]

Three Musicians Added To Staff At Tanglewood

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the haed of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of th eprincipal production of the Opera Departemnt, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I — Orchestral Conducting: Jean Moral and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel, conductor; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher.

Dept. II—Choral music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen.

Dept. V — The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
MAR 15 1954

Tanglewood School To Open on July 5

The Berkshire Music center, the advanced school for serious students of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open July 5 for its six-week season, it was announced today by Charles Munch, its director and music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

An enrollment of around 450 students is expected. Fifty musicians, including many members of the Boston orchestra, will comprise the faculty. The six weeks of the school will coincide with the season of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood which this year has been extended to six weeks.

Aaron Copland will again be assistant director and among the eminent musicians returning to direct departments or teach will be Hugh Ross, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Gregor Platigorsky, Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin. Newcomers will include Jean Morel, head of the orchestra at the Julliard school of music in New York, who will head the orchestra and conducting departments in the absence on leave of Leonard Bernstein; Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department at the Julliard school, who will head the opera department at Tanglewood in the absence on leave of Boris Goldovsky, and Ernest Toch of the University of California, who will join Mr. Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Mr. Foss, who has taught at Tanglewood since 1946, will head the study group in the absence of Ingolf Dahl, besides teaching composition.

Kingston Vistor Press March 11, 1954

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Berkshire Music Festival programs for twenty-four concerts, to be given during a six-week period this year, from July 7 to August 15, have just been released. Shed programs, with the full orchestra participating, are scheduled for each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon during the festival. The Bach-Mozart series, to be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is to be split up this year, with five programs listed for Friday nights and the sixth on Thursday night.

Each Wednesday evening during the series, there will be a chamber music concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs, together with ticket information, will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. The program follows:

Shed Programs

July 10, Saturday — Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Mr. Munch conducting.

July 11, Sunday — Beethoven program including Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Empehor" piano Concerto with Cludio Arrau as soloist and the Fifth Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 17 — Saturday — Franck program, "Le Chasseur Maudit", "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), and Symphony in D minor, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 18 — Sunday — Debussy "Iberia", Copland Piano Concerto (soloist Leo Smit). Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony", Charles Munch conducting.

July 24—Saturday—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz", Prokofieff Sixth Symphony, Strauss "Don Juan", Elgar "Enigma Variations," Jean Morel conducting.

July 25—Sunday—Berlioz "Beatriceand Benedict" overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose). Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2, Charles Munch conducting.

July 31—Saturday — Berlioux, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists, Charles

(Continued on Page 10)

Munch, conducting.

Aug. 1 — Sunday — Prokofieff "Chout", Dvorak violin concerto, Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7 — Saturday — Cluck "Alceste" overture, Beethoven, violin concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti), Brahms, symphony No. 2, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 8 — Sunday — Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber, soloist, and the "Te Deum", Charles Munch conducting.

Aug. 14—Saturday — Wagner "Lohengrin" prelude, Piston fourth symphony, Ravel, piano concerto, (soloist Nicole Henriot), Saint-Saens organ symphony, Charles Munch conducting.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

July 9 and 16—first two Friday evenings, Charles Munch will conduct music by Bach, including in the first concert Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and in the second concert Contata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

July 23 — Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6 No. 4, Haydn's "Military" symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

July 30 — Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388 and his Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella", a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder", Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

July 7—the program will be shared by Claudio Arrau, Piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

July 14—the Albeneri Trio.

July 21—the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

July 28 — the Griller String Quartet.

Aug. 5—the Boston Woodwind Quintet.

Aug. 11—the Kroll Quartet.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
MAR 13 1954

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
MAR 14 1954

Morel, Toch, Cohen Added To Faculty at Tanglewood

Boston March 13—Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conduting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Bernstein on Leave

Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence.

Morel and Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Toch's second symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the opera department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to Aug. 15, directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of 50 includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I—Orchestral Conducting, Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Grego Piatigorsky, guest teacher; 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and Willem Valkenier.

Dept. II—Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen; Morton Siegel, stage director; Elsa Kahl, acting; Emanuel Balaban, coaching; John Blankenchip, stage design; Felix Wolfes, coaching; Leo Van Witsen, costume; Frederic Waldman, conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, technical director; Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the associate Division.

Dept. V—The Tanglewood Study Group, Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chorus to Sing

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departmetns.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME
MAR 31 1954

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student is eligible for a tuition grant from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be heard by a faculty committee of Boston Symphony Orchestra members at Carnegie Recital Hall on Wednesday, April 7th from 2 to 5 o'clock. Percussion and Harp applicants will be heard at 7 o'clock in Carnegie Hall.

Applicants for membership in the Opera Department at Tanglewood will have vocal auditions on Saturday, April 10th, from 11 to 1 o'clock in Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with The Berkshire Festival and will this summer have its twelfth session from July 5th to August 15th.

Those who intend to apply at the auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance for catalog and application forms; address—Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
MAR 14 1954

Three To Join Tanglewood Music Faculty

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Morel, the French conductor who is at present head of the orchestra at Juilliard School of Music in New York, will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Cohen, head of the department of Opera at Juilliard School will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to August 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Copland as assistant director.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
MAY 9 - 195

New Copland Opera In Berkshire Bow

"The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and a New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances of the work in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3.

There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who support its activities with contributions.

[169]

Three Musicians Added To Staff At Tanglewood

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the haed of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of th eprincipal production of the Opera Departemnt, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follosw:

Dept. I — Orchestral Conducting: Jean Moral and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel, conductor; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher.

Dept. II—Choral music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen.

Dept. V — The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N. Y.
MAR 27 1954

MUSIC

A

Let ate

against the Housatonic for the one

...nner, rather than the conductor's. ...n the concert stage, as in the army, ...nk has its privileges.

Cantelli's deficiencies were most ...pparent in the Mozart Divertimento, ... which almost all the movements ...ere too fast and nervous, over-...ccentuated, lacking lilt and songful-...ess. Indeed, the variations of the ...ndante sounded like something out ... Tommassini's "Carnival of Venice" ...esigned to show off string virtuosity ...ather than Mozart's spirited word-...ay in music. Finally, by omitting the ...econd minuet Cantelli made a mock-...y of Mozart's purpose in writing a ...ow introduction to the finale—as, in ...e revised sequence, the finale was ...elf preceded by a slow movement

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
MAR 15 1954

Tanglewood School To Open on July 5

The Berkshire Music center, the advanced school for serious students of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open July 5 for its six-week season, it was announced today by Charles Munch, its director and music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

An enrollment of around 450 students is expected. Fifty musicians, including many members of the Boston orchestra, will comprise the faculty. The six weeks of the school will coincide with the season of the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood which this year has been extended to six weeks.

Aaron Copland will again be assistant director and among the eminent musicians returning to direct departments or teach will be Hugh Ross, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Gregor Piatigorsky, Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin. Newcomers will include Jean Morel, head of the orchestra at the Julliard school of music in New York, who will head the orchestra and conducting departments in the absence on leave of Leonard Bernstein; Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department at the Julliard school, who will head the opera department at Tanglewood in the absence on leave of Boris Goldovsky, and Ernest Toch of the University of California, who will join Mr. Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Mr. Foss, who has taught at Tanglewood since 1946, will head the study group in the absence of Ingolf Dahl, besides teaching composition.

Kingston Vister Press March 11, 1954

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Berkshire Music Festival programs for twenty-four concerts, to be given during a six-week period this year, from July 7 to August 15, have just been released. Shed programs, with the full orchestra participating, are scheduled for each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon during the festival. The Bach-Mozart series, to be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is to be split up this year, with five programs listed for Friday nights and the sixth on Thursday night.

Each Wednesday evening during the series, there will be a chamber music concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs, together with ticket information, will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. The program follows:

Shed Programs

July 10, Saturday — Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Mr. Munch conducting.

July 11, Sunday — Beethoven program including Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Empehor" piano Concerto with Cludio Arrau as soloist and the Fifth Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 17 — Saturday — Franck program, "Le Chasseur Maudit", "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), and Symphony in D minor, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 18 — Sunday — Debussy "Iberia", Copland Piano Concerto (soloist Leo Smit). Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony", Charles Munch conducting.

July 24—Saturday—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz", Prokofieff Sixth Symphony, Strauss "Don Juan", Elgar "Enigma Variations," Jean Morel conducting.

July 25—Sunday—Berlioz "Beatriceand Benedict" overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose). Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2, Charles Munch conducting.

July 31—Saturday — Berlioux, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists, Charles

(Continued on Page 10)

Munch, conducting.

Aug. 1 — Sunday — Prokofieff "Chout", Dvorak violin concerto, Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7 — Saturday — Cluck "Alceste" overture, Beethoven, violin concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti), Brahms, symphony No. 2, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 8 — Sunday — Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber, soloist, and the "Te Deum", Charles Munch conducting.

Aug. 14—Saturday — Wagner "Lohengrin" prelude, Piston fourth symphony, Ravel, piano concerto, (soloist Nicole Henriot), Saint-Saens organ symphony, Charles Munch conducting.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

July 9 and 16—first two Friday evenings, Charles Munch will conduct music by Bach, including in the first concert Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and in the second concert Contata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

July 23 — Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6 No. 4, Haydn's "Military" symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

July 30 — Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388 and his Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella", a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder", Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

July 7—the program will be shared by Claudio Arrau, Piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

July 14—the Albeneri Trio.

July 21—the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

July 28 — the Griller String Quartet.

Aug. 5—the Boston Woodwind Quintet.

Aug. 11—the Kroll Quartet.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
MAR 13 1954

SATURDAY REVIEW
NEW YORK, N. Y.

MUSIC

To judge from the preview offered in Carnegie Hall, by way of a performance of the complete "Romeo and Juliet," this summer's Berlioz festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra promises to be something that Americans would go thousands of miles to hear, especially if it was in Rouen or the Loire valley. Let us hope they will not discriminate against the Houdatonic, for the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Berlioz's birth will not occur soon again—nor the riches of repertory promised.

Charles Munch's performance, with Mary Davenport, alto, John McCollum, tenor, and Yi-Kwei Sze, bass, had its absorbing aspects, especially where Berlioz's genius was functioning at full force, in the superb ballet music, the inspired love scene, the magical Queen Mab scherzo. Elsewhere, which is to say, in those passages where an interpreter's penetration would have been contributory, it tended to bog down and lose momentum. Unquestionably the loose construction of the score, with its comings and goings of solo singing, choral music, and instrumental writing, makes an imperfect whole; but Munch did not divine Berlioz's purpose, so to speak, where it was not clearly set forth.

This conjecture became a conclusion near the end of the love scene, when Berlioz's great melodic invention is menaced by interjections in the strings, trills, and mutterings. The levels of prominence can be arranged so that the melody streams on, serenely, despite the threats to it. With Munch the stress was on the objections rather than on the thing which triumphs over them—which makes no special sense, musical or otherwise. Mechanically, the performance was of a high order, with Miss Davenport a self-possessed (perhaps too self-possessed) mezzo, the other singers satisfactory, the choral discipline good.

This Clipping From
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
MAR 14 1954

Morel, Toch, Cohen Added To Faculty at Tanglewood

Boston, March 13—Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conduting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Bernstein on Leave

Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence.

Morel and Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Toch's second symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the opera department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to Aug. 15, directed by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of 50 includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

Dept. I—Orchestral Conducting, Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Grego Piatigorsky, guest teacher; 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and Willem Valkenier.

Dept. II—Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke DeVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen; Morton Siegel, stage director; Elsa Kahl, acting; Emanuel Balaban, coaching; John Blankenchip, stage design; Felix Wolfes, coaching; Leo Van Witsen, costume; Frederic Waldman, conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, technical director; Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the associate Division.

Dept. V—The Tanglewood Study Group, Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

Chorus to Sing

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departmetns.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME
MAR 31 1954

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student is eligible for a tuition grant from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, will be heard by a faculty committee of Boston Symphony Orchestra members at Carnegie Recital Hall on Wednesday, April 7th from 2 to 5 o'clock. Percussion and Harp applicants will be heard at 7 o'clock in Carnegie Hall.

Applicants for membership in the Opera Department at Tanglewood will have vocal auditions on Saturday, April 10th, from 11 to 1 o'clock in Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be present.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with The Berkshire Festival and will this summer have its twelfth session from July 5th to August 15th.

Those who intend to apply at the auditions should, if possible, notify the school office in advance for catalog and application forms; address—Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

WILMINGTON, DEL.
STAR
MAR 14 1954

Three To Join Tanglewood Music Faculty

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Morel, the French conductor who is at present head of the orchestra at Juilliard School of Music in New York, will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Toch, a native of Austria, will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Cohen, head of the department of Opera at Juilliard School will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer.

Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshire Festival. There will be a six-week session from July 5 to August 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Copland as assistant director.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
MAY 9 - 195

New Copland Opera In Berkshire Bow

"The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and a New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances of the work in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3.

There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who support its activities with contributions.

[169]

Three Musicians Added To Staff At Tanglewood

Three eminent musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchstra and conducting departments, Ernst Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the haed of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Toch, a native of Austria, has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of th eprincipal production of the Opera Departemnt, which is to be announced.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follosw:

Dept. I — Orchestral Conducting: Jean Moral and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra, Jean Morel, conductor; chamber music, Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher.

Dept. II—Choral music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron.

Dept. III—Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

Dept. IV — Opera: Frederic Cohen.

Dept. V — The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
MAR 15 1954

Tanglewood School To Open on July 5

The Berkshire Music center, the advanced school for serious students of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, will open July 5 for its six-week season, it was announced today by Charles Munch, its director and music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra.

An enrollment of around 450 students is expected. Fifty musicians, including many members of the Boston orchestra, will conduct the faculty. The six weeks [illegible] school will coincide with the season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood which has been extended to [illegible] weeks.

Aaron Copland will again be assistant director and among the musicians returning to their departments or teach will be Hugh Ross, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Gregor Piatigorsky, Lukas Foss and Seymour Lipkin. Newcomers will include Jean Morel, head of the orchestra department of the school of music in [illegible] who will head the orchestra conducting department, absence on leave of absence for the season; Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department of the [illegible] school, who will head the opera department, Boris Goldovsky, and Ernst Toch, of the University of Southern California, will join Mr. Copland as guest teacher in the composition department. Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of opera at Tanglewood which will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department, which is to be announced.

BOSTON MASS.
HERALD

MAR 14 1954

The Tanglewood Programs, And a Word About the Met

By RUDOLPH ELIE

With the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company in the offing it is presumably the season for the annual think-piece on the situation in this department, but I must confess that there is bewilderingly little to be said about it this time. It is appearing here—barring a sad outcome to the current confusion in New York—on April 26 for the shortest season in years, and giving us as routine a repertoire as it has given in years as well—and it never has exactly strayed from the path in this respect.

The reason for the short season hasn't been announced, but it means, of course, that more thousands of New Englanders are doomed to disappointment than last year. It has long been known that the Metropolitan comes here very reluctantly anyway: the Opera House is simply not large enough to allow it to make it worth while from its point of view. It makes more money, indeed, in three or four days in places like Cleveland with larger theaters than it does here in a ten-day stand. On the other hand, I have always been confident that the demand is so great in this area, that it would easily play for a month to sold-out houses.

But the wheels within wheels in connection with the operations of the Metropolitan remain a baffling mystery, even to those fairly close to it, and there appears to be nothing that can be done about it but accept the expensive bones it tosses us and pray that the lottery that distributes mail order tickets will fall our way, like an Irish sweepstakes winner.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAMS

If the ticket situation for the Met is a sort of lottery and the repertoire a bore, the contrary is certainly the case with the forthcoming Music Festival at Tanglewood. This great event, which attracts many more than 100,000 people from the nation over, has been enlarged this season, to such an extent as can only be indicated in the following full announcement of programs, soloists, conductors and events:

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday eve. (Pierre Monteux)—Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday eve. (Jean Morel)—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations," Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday aft. (Richard Burgin) — Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch) — Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

CHAMBER CONCERTS

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

KINGSTON, N.Y
PRESS
3/11/54

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Berkshire Music Festival programs for twenty-four concerts, to be given during a six-week period this year, from July 7 to August 15, have just been released. Shed programs, with the full orchestra participating, are scheduled for each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon during the festival. The Bach-Mozart series, to be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is to be split up this year, with five programs listed for Friday nights and the sixth on Thursday night.

Each Wednesday evening during the series, there will be a chamber music concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs, together with ticket information, will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. The program follows:

Shed Programs

July 10, Saturday — Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Mr. Munch conducting.

July 11, Sunday — Beethoven program including Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Empehor" piano Concerto with Cludio Arrau as soloist and the Fifth Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 17 — Saturday — Franck program, "Le Chasseur Maudit", "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), and Symphony in D minor, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 18 — Sunday — Debussy "Iberia", Copland Piano Concerto (soloist Leo Smit). Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony", Charles Munch conducting.

July 24—Saturday—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz", Prokofieff Sixth Symphony, Strauss "Don Juan", Elgar "Enigma Variations," Jean Morel conducting.

July 25—Sunday—Berlioz "Beatriceand Benedict" overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose). Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2, Charles Munch conducting.

July 31—Saturday — Berlioux, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 1 — Sunday — Prokofieff "Chout", Dvorak violin concerto, Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7 — Saturday — Cluck "Alceste" overture, Beethoven, violin concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti), Brahms, symphony No. 2, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 8 — Sunday — Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber, soloist, and the "Te Deum", Charles Munch conducting.

Aug. 14—Saturday — Wagner "Lohengrin" prelude, Piston fourth symphony, Ravel, piano concerto, (soloist Nicole Henriot), Saint-Saens organ symphony, Charles Munch conducting.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

July 9 and 16—first two Friday evenings, Charles Munch will conduct music by Bach, including in the first concert Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and in the second concert Contata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

July 23 — Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6 No. 4, Haydn's "Military" symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

July 30 — Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388 and his Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella", a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder", Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

July 7—the program will be shared by Claudio Arrau, Piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

July 14—the Albeneri Trio.

July 21—the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

July 28 — the Griller String Quartet.

Aug. 5—the Boston Woodwind Quintet.

Aug. 11—the Kroll Quartet.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 18 1954

AUDITIONS FRIDAY AT SYMPHONY HALL

Boston, April 17—Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Friday from 10 a. m. until 12 noon. The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applications and catalog—address—The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall., Boston 15, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

MAR 14 1954

Going On in Music— Festivals Getting Busy

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Two members of the Juilliard School's faculty will be ment heads at the Berkshire Center for this summ sion at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 to Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard Orchestra the conducting and orchestra departments, Cohen, who heads Juilliard's opera department, will direct the center's operatic activities, replacing Boris Goldovsky, who is on leave of absence. Ernst Toch will be guest teacher of composition; his colleagues will be Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss, who will also be head of the Tanglewood Study Group.

As already announced, Mr. Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one concert each of the regular and the chamber orchestra series (July 24 and Aug. 12), and Mr. Foss will conduct in the latter series Aug. 6. Charles Munch continues as director of the center and Mr. Copland as assistant director; the faculty includes twenty-four Boston Symphony musicians. Detailed information can be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15. As usual, the center's concerts and operas will be open to contributing members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

APR 7 - 1954

Berkshire Auditions

Auditions for instrumentalists wishing to join the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here today from 2 to 5 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Percussionists and harpists will be heard at 7 tonight in Carnegie Hall. Singers applying for the Center's Opera Department will be heard Saturday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be provided. The center's twelfth session runs July 5 to Aug. 15.

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

JUN 29 1954

Students at Berkshire

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six week Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily, until the full enrollment of 400-450 is reached for the opening of the 12th season next Sunday.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
POST

APR 24 1954

Auditions To Be Held at Oberlin

Auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held at the Oberlin Conservatory, Oberlin, O., from 2 to 5 p. m. May 4. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, associate head of the Berkshire chamber music department, will be in charge.

The summer session at Tanglewood, the 12th since the music center was founded, will extend from July 5 to August 15. Charles Munch is director and Aaron Copland is assistant director of the center. Faculty members are principals of the Boston Orchestra. Gregor Piatigorsky and Jean Morel will be guest teachers.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. Applicants planning to attend the auditions should, if possible, notify the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

WESTPORT, CONN
TOWN CRIER
4/1/54

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student

STRATFORD, CONN
NEWS
4/1/54

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

APR 16 1954

Berkshire Auditions

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall next Friday, from 10 a. m. until 12 noon. (Please use stage entrance).

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to August 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

For applications and catalogue, write The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

[170]

BOSTON MASS.
HERALD

MAR 14 1954

The Tanglewood Programs, And a Word About the Met

By RUDOLPH ELIE

With the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company in the offing it is presumably the season for the annual think-piece on the situation in this department, but I must confess that there is bewilderingly little to be said about it this time. It is appearing here—barring a sad outcome to the current confusion in New York—on April 26 for the shortest season in years, and giving us as routine a repertoire as it has given in years as well—and it never has exactly strayed from the path in this respect.

The reason for the short season hasn't been announced, but it means, of course, that more thousands of New Englanders are doomed to disappointment than last year. It has long been known that the Metropolitan comes here very reluctantly anyway: the Opera House is simply not large enough to allow it to make it worth while from its point of view. It makes more money, indeed, in three or four days in places like Cleveland with larger theaters than it does here in a ten-day stand. On the other hand, I have always been confident that the demand is so great in this area, that it would easily play for a month to sold-out houses.

But the wheels within wheels in connection with the operations of the Metropolitan remain a baffling mystery, even to those fairly close to it, and there appears to be nothing that can be done about it but accept the expensive bones it tosses us and pray that the lottery that distributes mail order tickets will fall our way, like an Irish sweepstakes winner.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAMS

If the ticket situation for the Met is a sort of lottery and the repertoire a bore, the contrary is certainly the case with the forthcoming Music Festival at Tanglewood. This great event, which attracts many more than 100,000 people from the nation over, has been enlarged this season, to such an extent as can only be indicated in the following full announcement of programs, soloists, conductors and events:

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday eve. (Pierre Monteux)—Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday eve. (Jean Morel)—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations," Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday aft. (Richard Burgin)—Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch) — Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

CHAMBER CONCERTS

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

KINGSTON, N.Y
PRESS
3/11/54

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

Berkshire Music Festival programs for twenty-four concerts, to be given during a six-week period this year, from July 7 to August 15, have just been released. Shed programs, with the full orchestra participating, are scheduled for each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon during the festival. The Bach-Mozart series, to be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall, is to be split up this year, with five programs listed for Friday nights and the sixth on Thursday night.

Each Wednesday evening during the series, there will be a chamber music concert in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Seats at subscription rates are now available for all concerts. Full programs, together with ticket information, will be mailed promptly upon request to the Berkshire Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. The program follows:

Shed Programs

July 10, Saturday — Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, Mr. Munch conducting.

July 11, Sunday — Beethoven program including Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, "Empehor" piano Concerto with Cludio Arrau as soloist and the Fifth Symphony, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 17 — Saturday — Franck program, "Le Chasseur Maudit", "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), and Symphony in D minor, Pierre Monteux conducting.

July 18 — Sunday — Debussy "Iberia", Copland Piano Concerto (soloist Leo Smit). Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony", Charles Munch conducting.

July 24—Saturday—Weber Overture, "Der Freischutz", Prokofieff Sixth Symphony, Strauss "Don Juan", Elgar "Enigma Variations," Jean Morel conducting.

July 25—Sunday—Berlioz "Beatriceand Benedict" overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose). Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2, Charles Munch conducting.

July 31—Saturday — Berlioux, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 1 — Sunday — Prokofieff "Chout", Dvorak violin concerto, Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin conducting.

Aug. 7 — Saturday — Cluck "Alceste" overture, Beethoven, violin concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti), Brahms, symphony No. 2, Charles Munch, conducting.

Aug. 8 — Sunday — Berlioz program, "Benvenuto Cellini" overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm", "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber, soloist, and the "Te Deum", Charles Munch conducting.

Aug. 14—Saturday — Wagner "Lohengrin" prelude, Piston fourth symphony, Ravel, piano concerto, (soloist Nicole Henriot), Saint-Saens organ symphony, Charles Munch conducting.

Bach-Mozart Concerts

July 9 and 16—first two Friday evenings, Charles Munch will conduct music by Bach, including in the first concert Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 6, and in the second concert Contata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

July 23 — Charles Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6 No. 4, Haydn's "Military" symphony No. 100 and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

July 30 — Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast", the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, and Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388 and his Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Aug. 6—Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet, "Pulcinella", a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists.

Aug. 12—Jean Morel will conduct Rossini's overture to "The Silk Ladder", Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

Chamber Concerts

July 7—the program will be shared by Claudio Arrau, Piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

July 14—the Albeneri Trio.

July 21—the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

July 28 — the Griller String Quartet.

Aug. 5—the Boston Woodwind Quintet.

Aug. 11—the Kroll Quartet.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

APR 18 1954

AUDITIONS FRIDAY AT SYMPHONY HALL

Boston, April 17—Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Friday from 10 a. m. until 12 noon. The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Applications and catalog—address—The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall., Boston 15, Mass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

MAR 14 1954

Going On in Music— Festivals Getting Busy

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Two members of the Juilliard School's faculty will be ment heads at the Berkshire Center for this summ sion at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., from July 5 to Jean Morel, conductor of the Juilliard Orchestra the conducting and orchestra departments, Cohen, who heads Juilliard's opera department, will direct the center's operatic activities, replacing Boris Goldovsky, who is on leave of absence. Ernst Toch will be guest teacher of composition; his colleagues will be Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss, who will also be head of the Tanglewood Study Group.

As already announced, Mr. Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in one concert each of the regular and the chamber orchestra series (July 24 and Aug. 12), and Mr. Foss will conduct in the latter series Aug. 6. Charles Munch continues as director of the center and Mr. Copland as assistant director; the faculty includes twenty-four Boston Symphony musicians. Detailed information can be obtained from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15. As usual, the center's concert and operas will be open to contributing members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

APR 7 - 1954

Berkshire Auditions

Auditions for instrumentalists wishing to join the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here today from 2 to 5 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. Percussionists and harpists will be heard at 7 tonight in Carnegie Hall. Singers applying for the Center's Opera Department will be heard Saturday from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Carnegie Recital Hall. An accompanist will be provided. The center's twelfth session runs July 5 to Aug. 15.

[170]

BOSTON, MASS.
EVENING GLOBE

JUN 29 1954

Students at Berkshire

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six week Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily, until the full enrollment of 400-450 is reached for the opening of the 12th season next Sunday.

CINCINNATI, OHIO
POST

APR 24 1954

Auditions To Be Held at Oberlin

Auditions for admission to the Berkshire Music Center, summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held at the Oberlin Conservatory, Oberlin, O., from 2 to 5 p. m. May 4. Ralph Berkowitz, dean, and William Kroll, associate head of the Berkshire chamber music department, will be in charge.

The summer session at Tanglewood, the 12th since the music center was founded, will extend from July 5 to August 15. Charles Munch is director and Aaron Copland is assistant director of the center. Faculty members are principals of the Boston Orchestra. Gregor Piatigorsky and Jean Morel will be guest teachers.

All students accepted for the orchestra are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund. Applicants planning to attend the auditions should, if possible, notify the Registrar, Symphony Hall, Boston 15

WESTPORT, CONN
TOWN CRIER
4/1/54

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student

STRATFORD, CONN
NEWS
4/1/54

Tanglewood Tries . . .

Auditions for instrumentalists and singers applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center Tanglewood, Mass., will be held in Carnegie Recital Hall, New York City.

Applicants for the student orchestra, of which each student

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN

APR 16 1954

Berkshire Auditions

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall next Friday, from 10 a. m. until 12 noon. (Please use stage entrance).

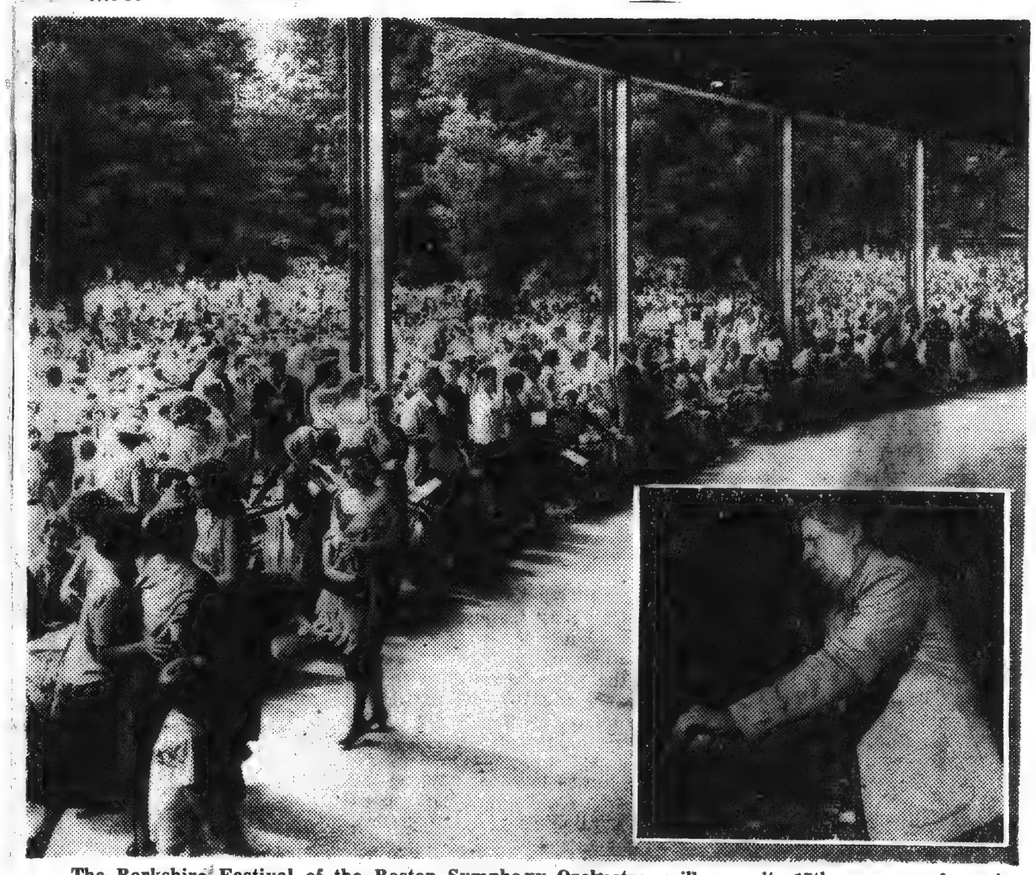
The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to August 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

For applications and catalogue, write The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

NEW HAVEN, CONN
REGISTER

MAY 9 - 1954



The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will open its 17th summer of music in the hills of Western Massachusetts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, the 15th in which the orchestra has participated, on Monday, July 5. The six-week festival, enlarged in scope this season, will last through August 15. Last year festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of 117,950, an average of 4,360 in its chamber concerts. The crowds attending concerts in the huge Music Shed, as shown above, averaged 10,200. Charles Munch, insert above, will direct the Berkshire Festival. He has been director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the past five years and is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

SPRINGFIELD
REPUBLICAN

MAY 9

Aaron Copland's New Opera To Be Given at Tanglewood

'The Tender Land,' With American Theme, Have New England Premiere Aug. 2, 3; Toch's 'The Princess and the Pea' Listed

Boston, May 8—"The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second performance anywhere and its New England premiere as the major production of the Berkshire Music Festival Opera department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announced today. There will be two performances of "The Tender Land" in the Tanglewood concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

Opera by Toch

There will be a second performance on July 27 of the opera by Ernest Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," the 16th-century fantasy after "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi which will have its first performance in the United States.

The Music Center, of which Copland is assistant director, is the summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival concerts.

Admission to Tanglewood opera performances is limited to the Friends of the Music Center, who support activities with contributions and membership in the Friends. Students an invitation to some of the concerts by students at the Tanglewood season.

In announcing "The Tender Land," Frederic Cohen, who will head the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department this summer while its head, Boris Goldovsky, is on leave of absence, said that the planned production by students at Tanglewood will be different in conception, for the opera's premiere by the New York City Opera Co. at New York City Center on April 1.

Colloquial Flavor

Mr. Copland says of it: "The music is very plain, even classically plain. It has a certain flavor, even, and in some spots is quite folkish."

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young Ohio poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Edward Hopper and a book about Southern tenant farmers in the 30's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" by James Agee. It has two acts, lasting an hour and a half, it tells the story of the eldest of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the eve of her graduation to sacrifice for happiness beyond the confines of the farm.

Mr. Cohen, who, as head of the Opera Theater of the Juilliard School of Music, has staged many productions at Juilliard, is a stranger to the Berkshire Music Center's opera department. He began in 1946 with Eric Crozier's libretto for Britten's "Peter Grimes," a season later was associated with Boris Goldovsky in the American premiere of Mozart's "Idomeneo."

Cohen will bring to Tanglewood some of his Juilliard associates in the opera department, Thomas Siegel as stage director, Hugh Kahl as acting conductor, Jan Balaban for singing, Frederic Waldman as conductor and Thomas de.Guerin as musical director. John Blankenship will return as the opera department designer, Leo Van Witsen is the costume head, Felix Fox is dance coach, and Ludwig and Leonore to head the associate group.

Based on Fairy Tale

Based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, with book by Beatrice Lilkan, English version by Richard Jones Farquhar, Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" was composed in the spring of 1927 and proposed in the summer festival of contemporary music at Baden-Baden, Germany. It had its American performance in 1935 when by the WPA-Federal Theatre in New York, and it has since been given in a number of colleges and workshops. Its composer will be guest composer at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Less known is "L'Amfiparnaso," composed in 1594, which is described as a five-part unaccompanied choral setting. A plot is prescribed in which Cornuto the pantaloon characters figure, and at Tanglewood it will be seen in pantomime, with the opera department assisted by the choral department.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

MAY 9 - 1954

Munch Keeping European Dates

BOSTON, May 8—Charles Munch has completed his fifth season as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with a performance of Beethoven's symphony in D minor (No. 9, "Choral"). He has left for Paris to conduct the Orchestre Nationale and the Orchestre de l'Opera.

He will conduct in the festival at Bordeaux, Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christ"; also in the festival of his native Strasbourg.

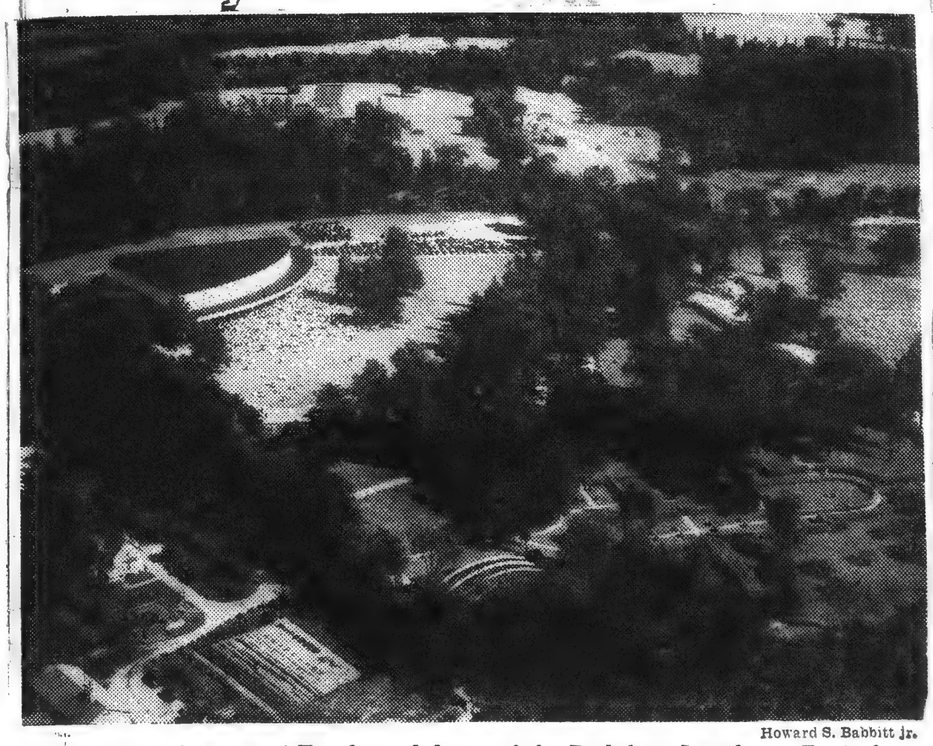
Mr. Munch will open the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 10, with Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," the first of several important works to celebrate the Berlioz anniversary. The Berkshire Festival ends Aug. 15, whereupon Mr. Munch will return to Europe, to conduct at Besancon and the Edinburgh Festival.

The new Boston Symphony Orchestra season will open Oct. 8.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

MAY 9 - 1954

Many Resort Areas



Howard S. Babbitt Jr.

Music: aerial view of Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

MAY 9 - 1954

1954 Berkshires Theme Is 'Vacation Variety'

By Richard V. Happel

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

"Vacation Variety" could well be called the theme of the 1954 season in the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts. One hundred and twenty miles from New York City, this convenient recreation area offers extensive facilities for the sportsman, the music lover, the theater enthusiast or, for that matter, the plain porch sitter.

Shed Concerts

Biggest attraction of the area is certain to be the 1954 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood which this year is honoring the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz. With an expanded concert schedule of twenty-four programs running from July 7 through Aug. 15, six concerts will be devoted to the complete works of the nineteenth-century French master whose popularity with American audiences continues to grow.

"The Damnation of Faust," "The Romeo and Juliet Dramatic Symphony" and the great "Requiem" are to be performed at three of the Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest choruses all under the direction of the Boston's musical director, Charles Munch.

In addition to the above three programs of long Berlioz compositions three other Shed concerts will be devoted to shorter works of the composer. Intervening programs will be given over to various musicians ranging from Bach to Sibelius. Complete listings have been printed in a folder which may be obtained by addressing the festival offices at Tanglewood, Mass.

GREENWICH, CONN.
TIME

JUN 30 1954

Berkshire Hill Notes . . .

Music is on the ascendancy in the Berkshire Hills . . . for both subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained in connection with the annual concerts, have passed last year's figures at this time.

As against last summer's fourteen foreign students, there are thirty to date, 12 from Canada, 4 from Cubt, 3 each from France and Israel, 1 each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti.

Remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office — telephone Lenox (Mass.) 600 — which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season gets under way, the box office will also be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts may also be filled on receipt of check or money order payable to the Boston Symphony and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Music No Longer Class Item, Chairman of Friends States

Music is no longer a class item, only for those who can afford the luxury, but a mass item for ever-increasing millions, according to William C. Cox, the new chairman of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, who made his first public appearance locally this noon at a Kiwanis meeting in the Sherwood Hotel. He was introduced by John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

Mr. Cox, here to speak on behalf of the Friends, pointed out that the annual operation of the Berkshire Music Center has accounted for more than $50,000 of the deficit incurred each year by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Stating that the Friends' membership has grown to more than 5,000 persons, 35 per cent of them Berkshire County residents, Mr. Cox said that this group contributed more than $27,000 toward the expense of the school.

"This year, we sincerely hope that the number and the amount will grow even larger," he said.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra was a 1½ million dollar operation last year, according to Mr. Cox. Of this amount about one million dollars in revenue comes from the sale of tickets, $200,000 comes from royalties on recordings; and $100,000 represents income from endowment, rental of Symphony Hall and auxiliary operations.

"The rest must be made up by popular support—another word for philanthropy," he said.

Mr. Cox talked about the constructive force that philanthropy has been in the modern American community. He pointed out that 30 million people last year contributed time and money to the support of almost a half-million different voluntarily supported activities.

He said that 30 million Americans now voluntarily accept the responsibility which used to be shouldered by a handful of wealthy individuals.

"This is the shift to a mass from a class," he said. "There is one field, however, in which this shift is lagging—the field of the arts."

On Right Track

Mr. Cox then discussed the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center. He expressed his hope that contributions would be even larger this year than last.

"If it (the amount of contributions) does grow larger, I will concede that we are on the right track toward the success of our ambition to make more and more people conscious of the enrichment of music in their own lives and their responsibility to support schools like the Berkshire Music Center which will train and inspire our future artists," he concluded.

"They contributed, along with the gifts of foundations and businesses, about five billion dollars," he said, "an utterly fantastic sum which, as recently as 1933, represented the annual amount of expense necessary to run the federal government."

There has been a major shift in American philanthropy in the last 100 years, according to Mr. Cox.

[17]

TIGHT BINDING

(Les Dernieres Nouvelles d'Alsace, Tues., 21 June, 1954)
ALBERT SCHWEITZER AND CHARLES MUNCH MEET AGAIN AT THE STRASBOURG FESTIVAL

Two great men of our part of the country met again in Strasbourg Sunday evening: Albert Schweitzer and Charles Munch, who has just had a triumphal succes ss in his home town. The two men are visibly stirred by strong emotion; Albert Schweitzer ha s just listened to the second symphony of Brahms conducted by Ernest Munch's son as only he can. The [illegible] has caught the two gre at men talking of bygone days. "If only your father were alive tonight," said Schweitzer to "Charry", whom he has known since the day he was born. Schweitzer and the Munch fami ly are linked (...in long and happy memory. Schweitzer and CM's papa, Ernest, were buddies and CM's older sister is married to Schweitzer's brother.)

Copland's New Opera Given at Tanglewood

'Tender Land,' With American Theme, Will Have England Premiere Aug. 2, 3; Ernst Toch's 'Princess and the Pea' Slated July 27

Boston [illegible] "The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and its New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances of "The Tender Land" in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

Opera by Toch

There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernest Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," a one-act opera, and the 16th-century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its performance in the United States.

The Music Center, which Copland is [illegible] the summer school of the Boston Symphony [illegible] connection with its Berkshire Festival concerts [illegible]

Admission to Tanglewood [illegible] opera performances [illegible] to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who support its activities with contributions. Membership in the Friends [illegible] also an invitation to some of the additional concerts by students during the Tanglewood season, July 5-Aug. 1.

In announcing "The Tender Land," Frederic Cohen, who will head the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department this summer while its head, Boris Goldovsky, is on leave of absence, said that the planned production for students at Tanglewood will be different in conception, from the opera's premiere by the New York City Opera Co. at New York Center on April 1.

Colloquial Flavor

Mr. Copland says of his work: "The music is very plain, almost really plain. It has a colloquial flavor, even, and in some spots is quite folkish."

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Edward Weston. The book about Southern tenant farmers in the 30's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" by James Agee. In two acts, lasting an hour and a half, it tells the story of Laurie, eldest of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the eve of her graduation to strike out for happiness beyond the horizons of the farm.

Mr. Cohen, who, as director of the Opera Theater of the Juilliard School of Music, has staged several productions at Juilliard, is a stranger to the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, which in 1946 with Eric Crozier's staging the first American performance of Britten's "Peter Grimes" and a season later was associated with Boris Goldovsky in the American premiere of Mozart's "Idomeneo."

Cohen will bring to Tanglewood some of his Juilliard associates in the opera department: Mortimer Siegel as stage director; Eleanor Kahl as acting coach; Samuel Balaban for singing coaching; Frederic Waldman as conductor and Thomas de Gaetani as technical director. John Blankenship will return as the opera department's costume head, Felix Wolfes as coach, and Ludwig and Laura Zirato to head the associate division.

Based on Fairy Tale

Based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, with book by Benno Likan, English version by Marion Jones Farquhar, Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" was composed in the spring of 1927 for a festival of contemporary music in Baden-Baden, Germany. Its first American performance in 1936 was by the WPA-Federal Theater in New York, and it has since been given in a number of college operas workshops. Its composer will be guest composer at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Less known is "L'Amfiparnaso," composed in 1594, which Mr. Cohen describes as a five-part unaccompanied choral setting. A plot is described in which Commedia dell'arte characters figure, and at Tanglewood it will be staged as a pantomime, with the opera department assisted by the choral department.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
MAY 16 1954

Music News: Tanglewood To Hear 'Tender Land'

FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Brandeis University been to carry out its plans for its festival, Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" would have started at Waltham this [illegible] campus [illegible] had made a 1954 festival unfeasible, and [illegible] been put off to [illegible] "The Tender Land," will not have to wait [illegible] for its first New England production, which will be [illegible] the Berkshire Music Center's opera department Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 2 and 3, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The center will also give a double bill, Orazio Vecchi's six-teenth-century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnasso," and Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," on Tuesday, July 27. According to Frederic Cohen, who heads the opera department this summer, the Tanglewood production of "The Tender Land" will differ in conception from that one first staged here by the Opera on April 1.

"The Princess and the Pea," first performed in 1927 at Baden Baden in Germany, was introduced to America by a W. P. A. opera company in New York in June, 1936. The Vecchi work, which has been heard here in concert form, will have its first American stage performance.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
MAY 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Slates New, Old Operas

Special to The Blade

BOSTON, May 8 — "The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and its New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces.

There will be two performances of "The Tender Land" in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

* * *

THERE WILL be a single performance July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnasso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first staged performance in the United States.

Based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, with book by Benno Likan, English version by Marion Jones Farquhar, Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" was composed in the spring of 1927 for a festival of contemporary music in Baden-Baden, Germany. Its first American performance in 1936 was by the WPA-Federal Theater in New York, and it has since been given in a number of college operas workshops. Its composer will be guest conductor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

* * *

LESS KNOWN is "L'Amfiparnaso," composed in 1594, which Mr. Cohen describes as a five-part unaccompanied choral setting. A plot is described in which Commedia dell'Arte characters figure, and at Tanglewood it will be staged in pantomime, with the opera department assisted by the choral department.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
MAY 7 - 1954

High Mass To Be Celebrated At Tanglewood May 22

Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of Springfield, will celebrate a pontifical high mass in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, on May 22, highlighting the biennial convention of Massachusetts Court, Catholic Daughters of America.

Delegates from the two Worcester CDA groups, Court Bishop O'Leary and Court Bishop Wright, will attend convention sessions May 21-22 in Pittsfield and Lenox.

First at Tanglewood

The pontifical mass will mark the first time such an event has been held at Tanglewood, site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's annual Summer Berkshire Music Festival. A special altar is being constructed on the stage of the shed for the mass, which will be celebrated in observance of the Marian Year.

A choir of 250 voices from Cathedral High School, Springfield, will be led by Rev. James P. Sears, director of church music for the Springfield diocese. George Hart of St. Michael's Cathedral, Springfield, will be organist.

100-Voice Choir

The proper of the Mass will be sung by a 100-voice choir composed of seminarians and priests from six Berkshire County religious communities.

More than 200 altar boys from Berkshire area parishes will be under the direction of Rev. John J. Murphy of St. Mary's Church, Pittsfield.

Delegates to the convention will be led in procession by Miss Catherine A. Dwyer of Boston, state regent, and Misses Marion T. Byron, grand regent of Court Bishop Conaty, Pittsfield, and Helen O'Connell, grand regent of Court Bishop Weldon, Springfield, co-chairmen of the convention.

The Bishop Conaty Assembly, fourth degree Knights of Columbus, will serve as honor guard. Catholic Boy Scouts and leaders from the Berkshire area will assist in traffic direction and parking under the direction of Rev. Thomas M. Courtney of Sacred Heart Church, Pittsfield.

Rev. Robert L. Ahern, pastor of St. Charles Church, Pittsfield, is in charge of arrangements for the mass, which will be celebrated at 10 a.m.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
MAY 15 1954

SIX SOLOISTS ADDED TO BERKSHIRE FETE

Six artists have been added to the roster of soloists for the six-week Berkshire Music Festival to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., beginning July 7.

They are Martial Singher, baritone; David Poleri, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, Metropolitan Opera bass, and E. Power Biggs, organist.

Mr. Singher, Mr. Poleri, Mr. Gramm and Eleanor Steber, Metropolitan soprano, will be soloists in Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," to be presented Saturday evening, July 10, with Charles Munch conducting.

Mr. Poleri also will be the soloist in Berlioz' "Te Deum," which Mr. Munch will conduct at the concert of Saturday evening, Aug. 7, and in the Berlioz Requiem, with which Mr. Munch will close the festival on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15.

Other soloists for the season will be Lukas Foss, pianist, July 9; Claudio Arrau, pianist, July 11; Vera Franceschi, pianist, July 17; Leo Smit, pianist, July 18; William Primrose, violist, July 25; Doriot Anthony, flutist, July 30; Ruth Posselt, violinist, Aug. 1; Seymour Lipkin, pianist, Aug. 6; Zino Francescatti, violinist, Aug. 8, and Nicole Henriot, pianist, Aug. 14.

Two Saturday afternoon organ recitals will be played by Mr. Biggs during the latter part of the festival.

Conductors for this year's festival, in addition to Mr. Munch, will be Mr. Foss, Pierre Monteux and Hugh Ross.

"Sun" - May 8, 1954
HANOVER, PA. SAT

The fifth season of Charl Munch as Conductor of the Bost Symphony Orchestra came to close on Saturday, May 2, wi Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. M Munch flies to Paris, this we where he will conduct the Orches tre Nationale and the Orchestre de l'Opera. He will conduct in the Festival at Bordeaux, where he will present in the Cathedral Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." He will also conduct in the Festival in his native Strausbourg.

Returning to America, he will open the Ber e Festival in Lenox, Mass. o with Berlioz' "The Dam of Faust," the first of all principal works of Berlioz wh ll be performed at Tanglewo onor of the French composer' niversary season. Mr. Munc r the conclusion of the Festiv August he will return to Eu to conduct te Besancon and the Edinburgh Festival.

He will open the Seventy-fourth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8. The Saturday night concerts next season will be broadcast on the NBC network.

In his addition to his activities as Conductor, Charles Munch has found time to write a book which will shortly be published in French and subsequently in English. It is entitled, "Je suis chef d'orchestre" ("I am a conductor").

A resume of the Boston Symphony programs through the five years under the directorship of Mr. Munch shows 408 performances of works by 104 composers. Of these, 38 works have been by 23 composers American birth or long residence. These five years have included this Orchestra's first tour of Europe in the spring of 1952, and its first transcontinental tour in the spring of 1953.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is propably the most active in the country. Its total number of concerts for the season 1953-4, including the Pops concerts and outdoor Esplanade concerts in Boston conducted by Arthur Fiedler, is 217; the over-all season, 45 weeks.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUN 26 1954

375 So Far Signed For 12th Season at Berkshire Center

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily, until the full enrollment of 400-450 is reached. The 12th season opens on Sunday, July 4. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the Berkshire Music Center; composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is [illegible] and Boston Symphony [illegible] manager-elect Thomas D. Perry, Jr., is executive secretary with Gail Rector as his assistant.

Miss Bossler reports 30 foreign students to date, 12 from Canada, four frum Cuba, three each from France and Israel, one each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti. The Study Group includes seven from Canada, one each from France and Haiti.

DANVILLE, VA.
BEE
JUN 23 1954

A Violin, Like A Fairy Princess, Is Awakened By Prince Charming

NEW YORK (AP)—"A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty: it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer-time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. "Sit," however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini—teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father—had "bequeathed" to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working [illegible]

"It had dried up, [illegible] of shoes left in a closet dries."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

"A violin needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

[72]

TIGHT BINDING

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

MAY 9 1954

Copland's New Opera Given at Tanglewood

Land,' With American Theme, Will England Premiere Aug. 2, 3; Ernst e Princess and the Pea' Listed July 27

Boston, May 8—"The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and its New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces. There will be two performances of "The Tender Land" in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

Opera by Toch

There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernest Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th-century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first performance in the U. S.

The Music Center, of which Mr. Copland is assistant director, is the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival concerts.

Admission to Tanglewood for the opera performances is by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who support its activities with contributions. Membership in the Friends results also in an invitation to some 40 additional concerts by students during the Tanglewood season, July 5-Aug. 15.

In announcing "The Tender Land," Frederic Cohen, who will head the Berkshire Music Center's Opera department this summer while its head, Boris Goldovsky, is on leave of absence, said that the planned production by students at Tanglewood will be different in conception from the opera's premiere by the New York City Opera Co. at New York Center on April 1.

Colloquial Flavor

Mr. Copland says of his work: "The music is very plain, musically plain. It has a colloquial flavor, even, and in some spots is quite folkish."

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Edward Weston in a book about Southern tenant farmers in the 30's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men" by James Agee. The two acts, lasting an hour and a half, it tells the story of Laurie, eldest of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the eve of her graduation to strike out for happiness beyond the horizons of the farm.

Mr. Cohen, who, as director of the Opera Theater of the Juilliard School of Music, has staged several productions at Juilliard, is a stranger to the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, which in 1946 with Eric Crozier he started the first American performance of Britten's "Peter Grimes," and a season later was asociated with Boris Goldovsky in the American premiere of Mozart's "Idomeneo."

Cohen will bring to Tanglewood some of his Juilliard associates in the opera department: Mortimer Siegel as stage director; Elsa Kahl as acting coach; Emanuel Balaban for singing coaching; Frederic Waldman as conductor and Thomas de Gaetani as technical director. John Blankenship will return as the opera department designer, Leo Van Witsen as its costume head, Felix Wolfes as coach, and Ludwig and Laura Zirner to head the associate division.

Based on Fairy Tale

Based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, with book by Benno Ulkan, English version by Marion Jones Farquhar, Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" was composed in the spring of 1927 for a festival of contemporary music in Baden-Baden, Germany. Its first American performance in 1936 was by the WPA-Federal Theater in New York, and it has since been given in a number of college opera workshops. Its composer will be guest conductor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Less known is "L'Amfiparnaso" composed in 1594, which Mr. Cohen describes as a five-part unaccompanied choral setting. A plot is described in which Commedia dell'Arte characters figure, and at Tanglewood it will be staged as a pantomime, with the opera department assisted by the choral department.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE

MAY 16 1954

Music News: Tanglewood To Hear 'Tender Land'

FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Brandeis University has been to carry out its plans for its festival, Aaron Copland's Tender Land" would have staged in Waltham this e. But on-and-off campus struction has made a 1954 ndeis festival unfeasible, and event has been put off to year. "The Tender Land," t year, will not have to wait ter long for its first New Engd production, which will be n by the Berkshire Music ter's opera department Monand Tuesday nights, Aug. 2 3, at Tanglewood, Lenox, ss.

The center will also give a ible bill, Orazio Vecchi's six-nth-century madrigal opera, Amfiparnasso," and Ernst ch's "The Princess and the a," on Tuesday, July 27. According to Frederic Cohen, who ads the opera department this mmer, the Tanglewood proction of "The Tender Land" ll differ in conception from e one first staged here by the ty Opera on April 1.

"The Princess and the Pea," st performed in 1927 at Baden aden in Germany, was introced to America by a W. P. A. pera company in New York in ne, 1936. The Vecchi work, hich has been heard here in oncert form, will have its first merican stage performance.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

MAY 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Slates New, Old Operas

Special to The Blade

BOSTON, May 8 — "The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will have its second production anywhere and its New England premiere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department, the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces.

There will be two performances of "The Tender Land" in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3.

* * *

THERE WILL be a single performance July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will have its first staged performance in the United States.

Based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, with book by Benno Ulkan. English version by Marion Jones Farquhar, Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" was composed in the spring of 1927 for a festival of contemporary music in Baden-Baden, Germany.

Its first American performance in 1936 was by the WPA-Federal Theater in New York, and it since has been given in a number of college opera workshops. Its composer will be guest conductor at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

* * *

LESS KNOWN is "L'Amfiparnaso," composed in 1594, which Mr. Cohen describes as a five-part unaccompanied choral setting. A plot is described in which Commedia dell'Arte characters figure, and at Tanglewood it will be staged as a pantomime, with the opera department assisted by the choral department.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM

MAY 7 - 1954

High Mass To Be Celebrated At Tanglewood May 22

Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of Springfield, will celebrate a pontifical high mass in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, on May 22, highlighting the biennial convention of Massachusetts Court, Catholic Daughters of America.

Delegates from the two Worcester CDA groups, Court Bishop O'Leary and Court Bishop Wright, will attend convention sessions May 21-23 in Pittsfield and Lenox.

First at Tanglewood

The pontifical mass will mark the first time such an event has been held at Tanglewood, site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's annual Summer Berkstire Music Festival. A special altar is being constructed on the stage of the shed for the mass, which will be celebrated in observance of the Marian Year.

A choir of 250 voices from Cathedral High School, Springfield, will be led by Rev. James P. Sears, director of church music for the Springfield diocese. George Hart of St. Michael's Cathedral, Springfield, will be organist.

100-Voice Choir

The proper of the Mass will be sung by a 100-voice choir composed of seminarians and priests from six Berkshire County religious communities.

More than 200 altar boys from Berkshire area parishes will be under the direction of Rev. John J. Murphy of St. Mary's Church, Pittsfield.

Delegates to the convention will be led in procession by Miss Catherine A. Dwyer of Boston, state regent, and Misses Marion T. Byron, grand regent of Court Bishop Conaty, Pittsfield, and Helen O'Connell, grand regent of Court Bishop Weldon, Springfield, co-chairmen of the convention.

The Bishop Conaty Assembly, fourth degree Knights of Columbus, will serve as honor guard. Catholic Boy Scouts and leaders from the Berkshire area will assist in traffic direction and parking under the direction of Rev. Thomas M. Courtney of Sacred Heart Church, Pittsfield.

Rev. Robert L. Ahern, pastor of St. Charles Church, Pittsfield, is in charge of arrangements for the mass, which will be celebrated at 10 a. m.

"Sun" - May 8, 1954

HANOVER, PA. SA

The fifth season of Charl Munch as Conductor of the Boste Symphony Orchestra came to close on Saturday, May 2, wi Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. M Munch flies to Paris this wee where he will conduct the Orchestre Nationale and the Orchestre de l'Opera. He will conduct in the Festival at Bordeaux, where he will present in the Cathedral Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." He will also conduct in the Festival in his native Strausbourg.

Returning to America, he will open the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. on July 10 with Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," the first of all the principal works of Berlioz which will be performed at Tanglewood in honor of the French composer's anniversary season. Mr. Munch, after the conclusion of the Festival on August 15, will return to Europe to conduct te Besancon and at the Edinburgh Festival.

He will open the Seventy-fourth season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8. The Saturday night concerts next season will be broadcast on the NBC network.

In his addition to his activities as Conductor, Charles Munch has found time to write a book which will shortly be published in French and subsequently in English. It is entitled, "Je suis chef d'orchestre" ("I am a conductor").

A resume of the Boston Symphony programs through the five years under the directorship of Mr. Munch shows 408 performances of works by 104 composers. Of these, 36 works have been by 23 composers American by birth or long residence. These five years have included this Orchestra's first tour of Europe in the spring of 1952, and its first transcontinental tour in the spring of 1953.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is propably the most active in the country. Its total number of concerts for the season 1953-4, including the Pops concerts and outdoor Esplanade concerts in Boston conducted by Arthur Fiedler, is 217; the over-all season, 45 weeks.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

MAY 15 1954

SIX SOLOISTS ADDED TO BERKSHIRE FETE

Six artists have been added to the roster of soloists for the six-week Berkshire Music Festival to be presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., beginning July 7.

They are Martial Singher, baritone; David Poleri, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, Metropolitan Opera bass, and E. Power Biggs, organist.

Mr. Singher, Mr. Poleri, Mr. Gramm and Eleanor Steber, Metropolitan soprano, will be soloists in Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," to be presented Saturday evening, July 10, with Charles Munch conducting.

Mr. Poleri also will be the soloist in Berlioz' "Te Deum," which Mr. Munch will conduct at the concert of Saturday evening, Aug. 7, and in the Berlioz Requiem, with which Mr. Munch will close the festival on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15.

Other soloists for the season will be Lukas Foss, pianist, July 9; Claudio Arrau, pianist, July 11; Vera Franceschi, pianist, July 17; Leo Smit, pianist, July 18; William Primrose, violist, July 25; Doriot Anthony, flutist, July 30; Ruth Posselt, violinist, Aug. 1; Seymour Lipkin, pianist, Aug. 6; Zino Francescatti, violinist, Aug. 8, and Nicole Henriot, pianist, Aug. 14.

Two Saturday afternoon organ recitals will be played by Mr. Biggs during the latter part of the festival.

Conductors for this year's festival, in addition to Mr. Munch, will be Mr. Foss, Pierre Monteux and Hugh Ross.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION

JUN 26 1954

375 So Far Signed For 12th Season at Berkshire Center

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, has passed the 375 mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, reports. Additional applications are being processed daily, until the full enrollment of 400-450 is reached. The 12th season opens on Sunday, July 4. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the Berkshire Music Center; composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean; and Boston Symphony Manager-elect Thomas D. Perry, Jr., is executive secretary with Gail Rector as his assistant.

Miss Bossler reports 30 foreign students to date, 12 from Canada, four frum Cuba, three each from France and Israel, one each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti. The Study Group includes seven from Canada, one each from France and Haiti.

[172]

(Les Dernieres Nouvelles d'Alsace, Tues., 21 June, 1954)
ALBERT SCHWEITZER AND CHARLES MUNCH MEET AGAIN AT THE STRASBOURG FESTIVAL

Two great men of our part of the country met again in Strasbourg Sunday evening: Albert Schweitzer and Charles Munch, who has just had a triumphal succe ss in his home town. The two men are visibly struck by strong emotion; Albert Schweitzer ha s just listened to the second symphony of Brahms conducted by Ernest Munch's son as only he can. The lens has caught the two gre at men talking of bygone days. "If only your father were alive tonight," said Schweitzer to "Charry", whom he has known since the day he was born. Schweitzer and the Munch fami ly are linked (...in long and happy memory. Schweitzer and CM's papa, Ernest, were buddies and CM's older sister is married to Schweitzer's brother.)

DANVILLE, VA.
BEE

JUN 23 1954

A Violin, Like A Fairy Princess, Is Awakened By Prince Charming

NEW YORK (AP)—"A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty: it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer-time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. "Sit," however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini—teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father—had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in.

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

"A violin needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston, which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

April 11, 1954

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, APR

Scenes From Debussy Opera Go on NBC-TV in English

"PELLEAS AND MELISANDE"
NBC-TV OPERA
Scenes from Claude Debussy's five-act opera, presented yesterday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p. m. over the National Broadcasting Co.'s Channel 4. The cast:
Pelleas ..... Doris Cunningham
Melisande ..... Virginia Haskins
Golaud ..... Carlton Gauld
Arkel ..... Lee Cass
Geneviève ..... Mary Davenport
Yniold ..... Bill McIver
Chorus: Jan Gbur, Ethel Gissene, Robert Jeffrey, Joseph Lambiase, Doris Okerson, Margaret Tynes and John Zadorozny
Conductor: Jean Morel.

By J. S. Harrison

Scenes from Claude Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," the greatest of musical plays, were presented yesterday afternoon by the NBC-TV Opera Theater. In so doing, the network continued to uphold its invaluable service of supplying this nation's television viewers with first class performances of operas new and old.

I imagine that no single work produced by NBC has burdened the company with so many shades of difficulty. "Pelleas" is a fiendishly fragile opera which collapses like a house of cards the moment it is touched by nervous hands. In addition, yesterday's rendition was offered in English, a language as little associated with Maeterlinck's tragedy as Greek is with "Hiawatha." For "Pelleas and Melisande," of all operas, is a study in the juncture of music and word, an essay in the manner by which the inflections of speech are able to create and control the rise and fall of a melodic line.

With this in mind, it came as a great surprise that Debussy's masterwork suffered not fatally from being sung in a tongue not its own. In fact, the skill and verbal talent of the NBC Opera Theater translation department may be roundly applauded for having provided a singable and unslangy version of the text, which left few, if any, crucial things unsaid. By this, however, I do not mean to imply that "Pelleas" in English is the equal, in expressive depth, of its French original. No amount of linguistic wizardry will ever make "If I were God, if I were God I would show pity" a substitute for the sonorously mighty "Si j'etais Dieu, j'aurais pitie du coeur des hommes." And in looking over my notes, I find at least twenty-five examples in which divergencies between the opera's prose and the NBC translation are vast and significant.

But, when all is said and done, if we are to involve the TV audience at large in an art form which is certainly unfamiliar to them, we must sacrifice something. The laminated quality of "Pelleas," which allows words and music to appear as though they both arose out of one source, was yesterday's sacrifice. It is not, all things considered, a great one.

The production was—as is ever the way of NBC's brilliant technical staff—entirely in keeping with the misty and somber mood of the plot. And while the lighting seemed a mite dark to accommodate all the gestures and facial attitudes of the performers, the fault may well be due to this reviewer's inability to properly operate the numberless dials on his television set.

Vocally, also, the occasion was a grand one. Miss Haskins, a wee slip of a girl, is in her physical disposition a perfect Melisande; and even the slight and bodiless character of her voice did little to destroy a generally superior impression. For his part, Mr. Cunningham, as Pelleas, was noble and elegant and he stayed in tune, the latter condition being infrequently observed by Debussy heros. And Mr. Gaul, as always, was a vocally powerful and majestic Golaud. Indeed, why more use is not made of Mr. Gaul's artistry is a mystery no one seems prepared to solve.

The performance was under the direction of Jean Morel. In effect, he was the star of the show. But then, whenever Mr. Morel conducts a French opera, he always is.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
APR 18 1954

'Tanglewood Story' Among Films On Library Schedule

Film programs will be presented under the sponsorship of the City Library on Thursday, at 7.30 p. m., in the Winchester Square Branch Library, and Friday, at 8 p. m., in the William Pynchon Memorial Building.

At Winchester Square Branch Library "A Picture of Britain" "Royal Scotland," and "The Tanglewood Story" will be shown. "A Picture of Britain" depicts the changes in the British economy and social life in postwar Britain. "Royal Scotland," in color, shows scenes of the Scottish countryside as well as the historic cities which are most closely associated with the royal family.

Tanglewood Scenes

"The Tanglewood Story," a film produced by the United States Department of State to interpret American culture to people in other countries, presents a thrilling picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky, and smaller groups of musicians receiving instruction from Leonard Bernstein and Aaron Copland. There are many scenes of students participating in informal performances, and the large audiences which gather for the major performances.

At the William Pynchon Memorial Building, two films will be presented under the joint sponsorship of the City Library and the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum. "The Life Along the Waterways," a film in color, shows the plant and animal life along a small stream in Connecticut which empties into Long Island Sound. In "The River" the Mississippi from its source to the Gulf of Mexico is dramatically presented, with a musical score by Virgil Thomson in the background.

All of the films to be shown are from the collection of the City Library and may be borrowed on a library card by groups presenting film programs. These programs are free and the public is cordially invited.

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1

Manager of Boston Symphony to Retire After 40 Years' Service With the Group

George E. Judd, an official of the Boston Symphony for forty years and its manager since 1935, announced his imminent retirement to members of the orchestra at a rehearsal last Wednesday morning, it was learned yesterday. Mr. Judd will leave the organization at the end of the summer's Berkshire Festival. He will be succeeded by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

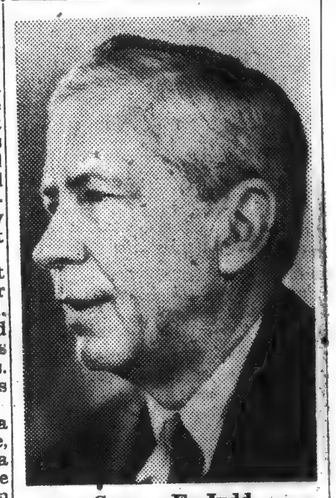
It was Mr. Judd's boast that he had worked under the founder of the Boston Symphony, Col. Henry L. Higginson, and had been assistant to the orchestra's first manager, Charles A. Ellis. The Boston Symphony was formed in 1881.

Mr. Judd plans to retire to a farm he owns near Cannonsville, N. Y. He was born in that area in 1887. From 1907 to 1911 he attended Harvard, and then spent three years in Washington as secretary to a member of Congress. He became Mr. Higginson's secretary in 1914, secretary to Mr. Ellis, 1915-18, and assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, 1918-35.

Yesterday, Mr. Judd said that he was finishing his career in the musical field and that he had no plans except to work on his farm. He added that he "had found a good man" in his successor.

During Mr. Judd's tenure the Boston Symphony established the Berkshire Festival, which last year broke all attendance records for the summer series. Mr. Judd also was one of the guiding spirits of the orchestra's first coast-to-coast tour, in the spring of 1953. Last week he negotiated a contract with the National Broadcasting Company under which the Boston Symphony will replace the N. B. C. Symphony for a series of weekly Saturday evening concerts.

Mr. Perry went to the Boston Symphony after World War II. He had managed the placement bureau of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and had managed the concert hall of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. For the last four summers, Mr. Perry has been executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in addition to his work as assistant manager of the Boston Symphony.



George E. Judd

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
APR 20 1954

The Roving Reporter:

Melville, Hawthorne Amity Lapsed Due to Geography

By TIP ROSEBERRY

The grass is greening at Tanglewood. Before we know it the blankets will be breaking out like dandelions all over it to cushion the reclining worshippers at the shrine of noble music.

Once again the devotees will be reminded of the Tanglewood literary tradition—of how Nathaniel Hawthorne lived in the little red cottage at the time he wrote "Tanglewood Tales."

A GREATER BOOK

It is curious the the name of Herman Melville has been so little exploited in publicity of the Berkshire Music Festival, for that lovely spot—and particularly the presence of Hawthorne there—had an incalculable influence upon him in the fashioning of "Moby Dick", a greater book than Hawthorne ever wrote.

A remarkable coincidence is the part that two violent thunderstorms played in the history of Tanglewood. At the time of their first meeting on a picnic-party, Melville and Hawthorne were driven by a storm to take shelter together under shelving rocks on Monument Mountain, and this began their communion of souls. In 1937, when Tanglewood concerts were being held under a circus-tent, a furious storm ruined a concert and brought about the erection of the Music Shed.

The meteoric Melville-Hawthorne relationship — which waned as fast as it waxed — was much misunderstood in the past. The notion even grew that Hawthorne, after inspiring Melville to his finest work, then let him down by cooling towards him.

A more sensible view of the matter is set forth by Randall Stewart, of Brown University, in an essay included in the little book of "Moby Dick Centennial Essays", put out by the Melville Society. It was first presented at the Centennial celebration at Williams College.

IT'S FRIENDSHIP

The two authors were on the most intimate terms for 15 months, then Hawthorne left the Berkshires. They saw each other briefly only twice after that. Rather than an estrangement, Stewart thinks: "The best explanation of the lapse is simply the absence of opportunities to meet and smoke and drink and talk together . . . Friendships of the Hawthorne-Melville sort seem to require a vis-a-vis basis and the accoutrements of conviviality."

He points out that "geographical proximity counted for more then than it does now"; that Hawthorne was in Europe for seven years, and that when he returned he was a sick man. "If Hawthorne had remained in the Berkshires," he says, "the issue might have been different."

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
APR 7 - 1954

Great Kills Club Hears Talk on Music Festival

"America's challenge to European music festivals" is the Tanglewood Music Festival held each year in Stockbridge, Mass., according to Miss Jeanne Smith, an English teacher at Tottenville High School.

Miss Smith gave a talk on the Massachusetts event, also called the Berkshire Festival, at a meeting of the Great Kills Woman's Club yesterday afternoon in the Great Kills clubhouse.

The festival is usually held from early July until mid-August, said Miss Smith, and features the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It is called Tanglewood because it is held on an estate of that name, which was donated to the festival in 1936.

The festival grew from an attendance of 5,000 people to last year's total of 150,000, said Miss Smith.

Mrs. Thomas Hyland, president Mrs. William Kain, Mrs. Edwin Jones, Mrs. Robert Millner, and Mrs. William Siersema were named delegates to a spring meeting of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs May 7 in the Hotel Astor, Manhattan.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Kain, chairman, Mrs. John Shepard, Mrs. S. T. Schiele, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Siersema, Mrs. Anna Sargent, Mrs. Leroy Fisher, and Mrs. Charles Asensio.

The group will sponsor a President's Day luncheon April 28 in the Richmond County Country Club, under the chairmanship Mrs. David Napier.

Mrs. Hyland presided at yesday's session. The program arranged by Mrs. Horace L

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 29 1954

Unable to Stage Benefit for Lenox

The Boston Symphony orchestra has informed Lenox town officials that it cannot stage an extra concert this summer a Tanglewood for the benefit o the town.

Lenox officials had suggested the benefit concert as a means of helping the town meet the extra fire, police and library costs resulting from the operation of the Berkshire Symphonic festival and Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood each summer. But President Henry B. Cabot of the orchestra trustees, in a reply, said "We have obligated ourselves concertwise to as great an extent as it would be wise to do this summer." Mr. Cabot said he was not sure what could be done in future seasons but he indicated that if the orchestra held a benefit for Lenox, other communities, particularly Stockbridge, probably would feel they should get some help too.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUN 26 1954

SOPRANO SONGSTRESS Jean Lunn, post-deb daughter of the John A. Lunns of Cambridge, is a member of the Radcliffe Choral Society, which is on a transcontinental tour with the Harvard Glee Club. They'll return to Tanglewood early in July for the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" with the Boston Symphony Orcheestra under the direction of Charles Munch. On July 30, Jean and her mother will sail on the Ile de France for an eight weeks trip to Europe. They'll go first to the Bayreuth Festvial in Germany, where Jean, who will be a senior at Radcliffe this fall, will do research for her thesis. They'll als go to the Salsburg Festival and later to France. Switzerland and the British Isles, returning home on La Liberte.

DEAN LUNN

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN & TIMES
APR 25 1954

MUSIC

Aspen,

By Felix Borowski

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, with Charles Munch as director, opens July 7 and continues to Aug. 15. As at Aspen, there is an effective combination of solo, chamber and orchestral music. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in the Music Shed, with Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as conductors.

In the smaller hall such chamber music organizations as the Griller String Quartet, the Albineri Trio, the Kroll String Quartet and Bel Arte Trio will play, as well as the Zimbler Sinfonietta. Zino Francescatti, violinist, also is scheduled for a sonata program.

The most weighty feature of the Berkshire Festival will be a commemorative cycle of works by Hector Berlioz. His "Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," Requiem, Te Deum, and various orchestral pieces will be performed.

The program at Lenox may not contain the numerous novelties set forth at Aspen, but it will offer a number of interesting works not in the hackneyed category—Haydn's "Nelson" Mass; Piston's Fourth Symphony, Copland's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Flute Concerto etc.

[173]

April 11, 1954

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, APR

Scenes From Debussy Opera Go on NBC-TV in English

"PELLEAS AND MELISANDE"
NBC-TV OPERA

Scenes from Claude Debussy's five-act opera, presented yesterday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p. m. over the National Broadcasting Co.'s Channel 4. The cast:

Pelleas ..... Davis Cunningham
Melisande ..... Virginia Haskins
Golaud ..... Carlton Gauld
Arkel ..... Lee Cass
Genevieve ..... Mary Davenport
Yniold ..... Bill McIver
Chorus: Jan Gbur, Ethel Greene, Robert Jeffrey, Joseph Lambiase, Doris Okerson, Margaret Tynes and John Zadorozny
Conductor: Jean Morel.

By J. S. Harrison

Scenes from Claude Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," the greatest of musical plays, were presented yesterday afternoon by the NBC-TV Opera Theater. In so doing, the network continued to uphold its invaluable service of supplying this nation's television viewers with first class performances of operas new and old.

I imagine that no single work produced by NBC has burdened the company with so many shades of difficulty. "Pelleas" is a fiendishly fragile opera which collapses like a house of cards the moment it is touched by nervous hands. In addition, yesterday's rendition was offered in English, a language as little associated with Maeterlinck's tragedy as Greek is with "Hiawatha." For "Pelleas and Melisande," of all operas, is a study in the juncture of music and word, an essay in the manner by which the inflections of speech are able to create and control the rise and fall of a melodic line.

With this in mind, it came as a great surprise that Debussy's masterwork suffered not fatally from being sung in a tongue not its own. In fact, the skill and verbal talent of the NBC Opera Theater translation department may be roundly applauded for having provided a singable and unslangy version of the text, which left few, if any, crucial things unsaid. By this, however, I do not mean to imply that "Pelleas" in English is the equal, in expressive depth, of its French original. No amount of linguistic wizardry will ever make "If I were God, if I were God I would show pity" a substitute for the sonorously mighty "Si j'etais Dieu, j'aurais pitie du coeur des hommes." And in looking over my notes, I find at least twenty-five examples in which divergencies between the opera's prose and the NBC translation are vast and significant.

But, when all is said and done, if we are to involve the TV audience at large in an art form which is certainly unfamiliar to them, we must sacrifice something. The laminated quality of "Pelleas," which allows words and music to appear as though they both arose out of one source, was yesterday's sacrifice. It is not, all things considered, a great one.

The production was — as is ever the way of NBC's brilliant technical staff—entirely in keeping with the misty and somber mood of the plot. And while the lighting seemed a mite dark to accommodate all the gestures and facial attitudes of the performers, the fault may well be due to this reviewer's inability to properly operate the numberless dials on his television set.

Vocally, also, the occasion was a grand one. Miss Haskins, a wee slip of a girl, is in her physical disposition a perfect Melisande; and even the slight and bodiless character of her voice did little to destroy a generally superior impression. For his part, Mr. Cunningham, as Pelleas, was noble and elegant and he stayed in tune, the latter condition being infrequently observed by Debussy heros. And Mr. Gaul, as always, was a vocally powerful and majestic Golaud. Indeed, why more use is not made of Mr. Gaul's artistry is a mystery no one seems prepared to solve.

The performance was under the direction of Jean Morel. In effect, he was the star of the show. But then, whenever Mr. Morel conducts a French opera, he always is.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
APR 20 1954

The Roving Reporter:

Melville, Hawthorne Amity Lapsed Due to Geography

By TIP ROSEBERRY

The grass is greening at Tanglewood. Before we know it the blankets will be breaking out like dandelions all over it to cushion the reclining worshippers at the shrine of noble music.

Once again the devotees will be reminded of the Tanglewood literary tradition—of how Nathaniel Hawthorne lived in the little red cottage at the time he wrote "Tanglewood Tales."

A GREATER BOOK

It is curious the the name of Herman Melville has been so little exploited in publicity of the Berkshire Music Festival, for that lovely spot—and particularly the presence of Hawthorne there—had an incalculable influence upon him in the fashioning of "Moby Dick", a greater book than Hawthorne ever wrote.

A remarkable coincidence is the part that two violent thunderstorms played in the history of Tanglewood. At the time of their first meeting on a picnic-party, Melville and Hawthorne were driven by a storm to take shelter together under shelving rocks on Monument Mountain, and this began their communion of souls. In 1937, when Tanglewood concerts were being held under a circus-tent, a furious storm ruined a concert and brought about the erection of the Music Shed.

The meteoric Melville-Hawthorne relationship — which waned as fast as it waxed — was much misunderstood in the past. The notion even grew that Hawthorne, after inspiring Melville to his finest work, then let him down by cooling towards him.

A more sensible view of the matter is set forth by Randall Stewart, of Brown University, in an essay included in the little book of "Moby Dick Centennial Essays", put out by the Melville Society. It was first presented at the Centennial celebration at Williams College.

IT'S FRIENDSHIP

The two authors were on the most intimate terms for 15 months, then Hawthorne left the Berkshires. They saw each other briefly only twice after that. Rather than an estrangement, Stewart thinks: "The best explanation of the lapse is simply the absence of opportunities to meet and smoke and drink and talk together . . . Friendships of the Hawthorne-Melville sort seem to require a vis-a-vis basis and the accoutrements of conviviality."

He points out that "geographical proximity counted for more then than it does now"; that Hawthorne was in Europe for seven years, and that when he returned he was a sick man. "If Hawthorne had remained in the Berkshires," he says, "the issue might have been different."

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUN 26 1954

SOPRANO SONGSTRESS Jean Lunn, post-deb daughter of the John A. Lunns of Cambridge, is a member of the Radcliffe Choral Society, which is on a transcontinental tour with the Harvard Glee Club. They'll return to Tanglewood early in July for the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" with the Boston Symphony Orcheestra under the direction of Charles Munch. On July 30, Jean and her mother will sail on the Ile de France for an eight weeks trip to Europe. They'll go first to the Bayreuth Festvial in Germany, where Jean, who will be a senior at Radcliffe this fall, will do research for her thesis. They'll als go to the Salsburg Festival and later to France. Switzerland and the British Isles, returning home on La Liberte.

DEAN LUNN

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1

Manager of Boston Symphony to Retire After 40 Years' Service With the Group

George E. Judd, an official of the Boston Symphony for forty years and its manager since 1935, announced his imminent retirement to members of the orchestra at a rehearsal last Wednesday morning, it was learned yesterday. Mr. Judd will leave the organization at the end of the summer's Berkshire Festival. He will be succeeded by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

It was Mr. Judd's boast that he had worked under the founder of the Boston Symphony, Col. Henry L. Higginson, and had been assistant to the orchestra's first manager, Charles A. Ellis. The Boston Symphony was formed in 1881.

Mr. Judd plans to retire to a farm he owns near Cannonsville, N. Y. He was born in that area in 1887. From 1907 to 1911 he attended Harvard, and then spent three years in Washington as secretary to a member of Congress. He became Mr. Higginson's secretary in 1914, secretary to Mr. Ellis, 1915-18, and assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, 1918-35.

Yesterday, Mr. Judd said that he was finishing his career in the musical field and that he had no plans except to work on his farm. He added that he "had found a good man" in his successor.

During Mr. Judd's tenure the Boston Symphony established the Berkshire Festival, which last year broke all attendance records for the summer series. Mr. Judd also was one of the guiding spirits of the orchestra's first coast-to-coast tour, in the spring of 1953. Last week he negotiated a contract with the National Broadcasting Company under which the Boston Symphony will replace the N. B. C. Symphony for a series of weekly Saturday evening concerts.

Mr. Perry went to the Boston Symphony after World War II. He had managed the placement bureau of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and had managed the concert hall of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. For the last four summers, Mr. Perry has been executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in addition to his work as assistant manager of the Boston Symphony.

George E. Judd

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y:
ADVANCE
APR 7 - 1954

Great Kills Club Hears Talk on Music Festival

"America's challenge to European music festivals" is the Tanglewood Music Festival held each year in Stockbridge, Mass., according to Miss Jeanne Smith, an English teacher at Tottenville High School.

Miss Smith gave a talk on the Massachusetts event, also called the Berkshire Festival, at a meeting of the Great Kills Woman's Club yesterday afternoon in the Great Kills clubhouse.

The festival is usually held from early July until mid-August, said Miss Smith, and features the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It is called Tanglewood because it is held on an estate of that name, which was donated to the festival in 1936.

The festival grew from an attendance of 5,000 people to last year's total of 150,000, said Miss Smith.

Mrs. Thomas Hyland, president Mrs. William Kain, Mrs. Edwin Jones, Mrs. Robert Millner, and Mrs. William Siersema were named delegates to a spring meeting of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs May 7 in the Hotel Astor, Manhattan.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs Kain, chairman, Mrs. John Sheppard, Mrs. S. T. Schiele, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Siersema, Mrs. Anna Sargent, Mrs. Leroy Fisher, and Mrs. Charles Asensio.

The group will sponsor a President's Day luncheon April 28 in the Richmond County Country Club, under the chairmanship Mrs. David Napier.

Mrs. Hyland presided at yesday's session. The program arranged by Mrs. Horace L

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
APR 18 1954

'Tanglewood Story' Among Films On Library Schedule

Film programs will be presented under the sponsorship of the City Library on Thursday, at 7.30 p. m., in the Winchester Square Branch Library, and Friday, at 8 p. m., in the William Pynchon Memorial Building.

At Winchester Square Branch Library "A Picture of Britain" "Royal Scotland," and "The Tanglewood Story" will be shown. "A Picture of Britain" depicts the changes in the British economy and social life in postwar Britain. "Royal Scotland," in color, shows scenes of the Scottish countryside as well as the historic cities which are most closely associated with the royal family.

Tanglewood Scenes

"The Tanglewood Story," a film produced by the United States Department of State to interpret American culture to people in other countries, presents a thrilling picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky, and smaller groups of musicians receiving instruction from Leonard Bernstein and Aaron Copland. There are many scenes of students participating in informal performances, and the large audiences which gather for the major performances.

At the William Pynchon Memorial Building, two films will be presented under the joint sponsorship of the City Library and the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum. "The Life Along the Waterways," a film in color, shows the plant and animal life along a small stream in Connecticut which empties into Long Island Sound. In "The River" the Mississippi from its source to the Gulf of Mexico is dramatically presented, with a musical score by Virgil Thomson in the background.

All of the films to be shown are from the collection of the City Library and may be borrowed on a library card by groups presenting film programs. These programs are free and the public is cordially invited.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 9 1954

Boston Symphony Unable to Stage Benefit for Lenox

The Boston Symphony orchestra has informed Lenox town officials that it cannot stage an extra concert this summer a Tanglewood for the benefit o the town.

Lenox officials had suggested the benefit concert as a means of helping the town meet the extra fire, police and library costs resulting from the operation of the Berkshire Symphonic festival and Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood each summer. But President Henry B. Cabot of the orchestra trustees, in a reply, said "We have obligated ourselves concertwise to as great an extent as it would be wise to do this summer." Mr. Cabot said he was not sure what could be done in future seasons but he indicated that if the orchestra held a benefit for Lenox, other communities, particularly Stockbridge, probably would feel they should get some help too.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN & TIMES
JUN 5 1954

MUSIC Aspen,

By Felix Borowski

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, with Charles Munch as director, opens July 7 and continues to Aug. 15. As at Aspen, there is an effective combination of solo, chamber and orchestral music. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in the Music Shed, with Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as conductors.

In the smaller hall such chamber music organizations as the Griller String Quartet, the Albinoni Trio, the Kroll String Quartet and Bel Arte Trio will play, as well as the Zimbler Sinfonietta. Zino Francescatti, violinist, also is scheduled for a sonata program.

The most weighty feature of the Berkshire [illegible] commemorative cycle of [illegible] His Damnation [illegible] and Juliet," Requiem, Te[illegible] of Faust," [illegible] orchestral pieces will be [illegible] performed.

The [illegible] at Lenox may not contain the [illegible] novelties set forth at Aspen, but it will [illegible] number of interesting works not in the [illegible] category—Haydn's "Nelson" Mass, [illegible] Fourth Symphony, Copland's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Flute Concerto, etc.

[173]

April 11, 1954

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, APR

Scenes From Debussy Opera Go on NBC-TV in English

"PELLEAS AND MELISANDE"
NBC-TV OPERA
Scenes from Claude Debussy's five-act opera, presented yesterday afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p. m. over the National Broadcasting Co.'s Channel 4. The cast:
Pelleas ..... Doris Cunningham
Melisande ..... Virginia Haskins
Golaud ..... Carlton Gauld
Arkel ..... Lee Cass
Genevieve ..... Mary Davenport
Yniold ..... Bill McIver
Chorus: Jan Gbur, Ethel Gibbs, Robert Jeffrey, Joseph Lambiase, Doris Okerson, Margaret Tynes and John Zadorozny
Conductor: Jean Morel.

By J. S. Harrison

Scenes from Claude Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," the greatest of musical plays, were presented yesterday afternoon by the NBC-TV Opera Theater. In so doing, the network continued to uphold its invaluable service of supplying this nation's television viewers with first class performances of operas new and old.

I imagine that no single work produced by NBC has burdened the company with so many shades of difficulty. "Pelleas" is a fiendishly fragile opera which collapses like a house of cards the moment it is touched by nervous hands. In addition, yesterday's rendition was offered in English, a language as little associated with Maeterlinck's tragedy as Greek is with "Hiawatha." For "Pelleas and Melisande," of all operas, is a study in the juncture of music and word, an essay in the manner by which the inflections of speech are able to create and control the rise and fall of a melodic line.

With this in mind, it came as a great surprise that Debussy's masterwork suffered not fatally from being sung in a tongue not its own. In fact, the skill and verbal talent of the NBC Opera Theater translation department may be roundly applauded for having provided a singable and unslangy version of the text, which left few, if any, crucial things unsaid. By this, however, I do not mean to imply that "Pelleas" in English is the equal, in expressive depth, of its French original. No amount of linguistic wizardry will ever make "If I were God, if I were God I would show pity" a substitute for the sonorously mighty "Si j'etais Dieu, j'aurais pitie du coeur des hommes." And in looking over my notes, I find at least twenty-five examples in which divergencies between the opera's prose and the NBC translation are vast and significant.

But, when all is said and done, if we are to involve the TV audience at large in an art form which is certainly unfamiliar to them, we must sacrifice something. The laminated quality of "Pelleas," which allows words and music to appear as though they both arose out of one source, was yesterday's sacrifice. It is not, all things considered, a great one.

The production was—as is ever the way of NBC's brilliant technical staff—entirely in keeping with the misty and somber mood of the plot. And while the lighting seemed a mite dark to accommodate all the gestures and facial attitudes of the performers, the fault may well be due to this reviewer's inability to properly operate the numberless dials on his television set.

Vocally, also, the occasion was a grand one. Miss Haskins, a wee slip of a girl, is in her physical disposition a perfect Melisande; and even the slight and bodiless character of her voice did little to destroy a generally superior impression. For his part, Mr. Cunningham, as Pelleas, was noble and elegant and he stayed in tune, the latter condition being infrequently observed by Debussy heros. And Mr. Gaul, as always, was a vocally powerful and majestic Golaud. Indeed, why more use is not made of Mr. Gaul's artistry is a mystery no one seems prepared to solve.

The performance was under the direction of Jean Morel. In effect, he was the star of the show. But then, whenever Mr. Morel conducts a French opera, he always is.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
APR 18 1954

'Tanglewood Story' Among Films On Library Schedule

Film programs will be presented under the sponsorship of the City Library on Thursday, at 7.30 p. m., in the Winchester Square Branch Library, and Friday, at 8 p. m., in the William Pynchon Memorial Building.

At Winchester Square Branch Library "A Picture of Britain" "Royal Scotland," and "The Tanglewood Story" will be shown. "A Picture of Britain" depicts the changes in the British economy and social life in postwar Britain. "Royal Scotland," in color, shows scenes of the Scottish countryside as well as the historic cities which are most closely associated with the royal family.

Tanglewood Scenes

"The Tanglewood Story," a film produced by the United States Department of State to interpret American culture to people in other countries, presents a thrilling picture of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky, and smaller groups of musicians receiving instruction from Leonard Bernstein and Aaron Copland. There are many scenes of students participating in informal performances, and the large audiences which gather for the major performances.

At the William Pynchon Memorial Building, two films will be presented under the joint sponsorship of the City Library and the Connecticut Valley Historical Museum. "The Life Along the Waterways," a film in color, shows the plant and animal life along a small stream in Connecticut which empties into Long Island Sound. In "The River" the Mississippi from its source to the Gulf of Mexico is dramatically presented, with a musical score by Virgil Thomson in the background.

All of the films to be shown are from the collection of the City Library and may be borrowed on a library card by groups presenting film programs. These programs are free and the public is cordially invited.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
APR 20 1954

The Roving Reporter:

Melville, Hawthorne Amity Lapsed Due to Geography

By TIP ROSEBERRY

The grass is greening at Tanglewood. Before we know it the blankets will be breaking out like dandelions all over it to cushion the reclining worshippers at the shrine of noble music.

Once again the devotees will be reminded of the Tanglewood literary tradition—of how Nathaniel Hawthorne lived in the little red cottage at the time he wrote "Tanglewood Tales."

A GREATER BOOK

It is curious the the name of Herman Melville has been so little exploited in publicity of the Berkshire Music Festival, for that lovely spot—and particularly the presence of Hawthorne there—had an incalculable influence upon him in the fashioning of "Moby Dick", a greater book than Hawthorne ever wrote.

A remarkable coincidence is the part that two violent thunderstorms played in the history of Tanglewood. At the time of their first meeting on a picnic-party, Melville and Hawthorne were driven by a storm to take shelter together under shelving rocks on Monument Mountain, and this began their communion of souls. In 1937, when Tanglewood concerts were being held under a circus-tent, a furious storm ruined a concert and brought about the erection of the Music Shed.

The meteoric Melville-Hawthorne relationship — which waned as fast as it waxed — was much misunderstood in the past. The notion even grew that Hawthorne, after inspiring Melville to his finest work, then let him down by cooling towards him.

A more sensible view of the matter is set forth by Randall Stewart, of Brown University, in an essay included in the little book of "Moby Dick Centennial Essays", put out by the Melville Society. It was first presented at the Centennial celebration at Williams College.

IT'S FRIENDSHIP

The two authors were on the most intimate terms for 15 months, then Hawthorne left the Berkshires. They saw each other briefly only twice after that. Rather than an estrangement, Stewart thinks: "The best explanation of the lapse is simply the absence of opportunities to meet and smoke and drink and talk together . . . Friendships of the Hawthorne-Melville sort seem to require a vis-a-vis basis and the accoutrements of conviviality."

He points out that "geographical proximity counted for more then than it does now"; that Hawthorne was in Europe for seven years, and that when he returned he was a sick man. "If Hawthorne had remained in the Berkshires," he says, "the issue might have been different."

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUN 26 1954

SOPRANO SONGSTRESS Jean Lunn, post-deb daughter of the John A. Lunns of Cambridge, is a member of the Radcliffe Choral Society, which is on a transcontinental tour with the Harvard Glee Club. They'll return to Tanglewood early in July for the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" with the Boston Symphony Orcheestra under the direction of Charles Munch. On July 30, Jean and her mother will sail on the Ile de France for an eight weeks trip to Europe. They'll go first to the Bayreuth Festvial in Germany, where Jean, who will be a senior at Radcliffe this fall, will do research for her thesis. They'll als go to the Salsburg Festival and later to France. Switzerland and the British Isles, returning home on La Liberte.

DEAN LUNN

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1

Manager of Boston Symphony to Retire After 40 Years' Service With the Group

George E. Judd, an official of the Boston Symphony for forty years and its manager since 1935, announced his imminent retirement to members of the orchestra at a rehearsal last Wednesday morning, it was learned yesterday. Mr. Judd will leave the organization at the end of the summer's Berkshire Festival. He will be succeeded by Thomas D. Perry Jr., assistant manager.

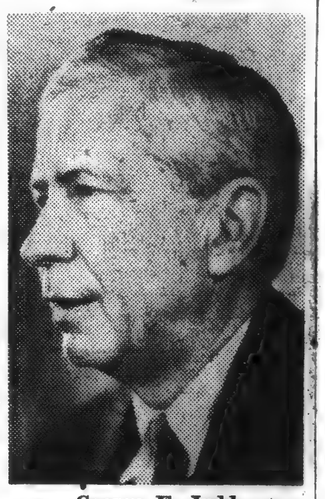
It was Mr. Judd's boast that he had worked under the founder of the Boston Symphony, Col. Henry L. Higginson, and had been assistant to the orchestra's first manager, Charles A. Ellis. The Boston Symphony was formed in 1881.

Mr. Judd plans to retire to a farm he owns near Cannonsville, N. Y. He was born in that area in 1887. From 1907 to 1911 he attended Harvard, and then spent three years in Washington as secretary to a member of Congress. He became Mr. Higginson's secretary in 1914, secretary to Mr. Ellis, 1915-18, and assistant manager of the Boston Symphony, 1918-35.

Yesterday, Mr. Judd said that he was finishing his career in the musical field and that he had no plans except to work on his farm. He added that he "had found a good man" in his successor.

During Mr. Judd's tenure the Boston Symphony established the Berkshire Festival, which last year broke all attendance records for the summer series. Mr. Judd also was one of the guiding spirits of the orchestra's first coast-to-coast tour, in the spring of 1953. Last week he negotiated a contract with the National Broadcasting Company under which the Boston Symphony will replace the N. B. C. Symphony for a series of weekly Saturday evening concerts.

Mr. Perry went to the Boston Symphony after World War II. He had managed the placement bureau of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and had managed the concert hall of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company. For the last four summers, Mr. Perry has been executive secretary of the Berkshire Music Center in addition to his work as assistant manager of the Boston Symphony.



George E. Judd

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y.
ADVANCE
APR 7 - 1954

Great Kills Club Hears Talk on Music Festival

"America's challenge to European music festivals" is the Tanglewood Music Festival held each year in Stockbridge, Mass., according to Miss Jeanne Smith, an English teacher at Tottenville High School.

Miss Smith gave a talk on the Massachusetts event, also called the Berkshire Festival, at a meeting of the Great Kills Woman's Club yesterday afternoon in the Great Kills clubhouse.

The festival is usually held from early July until mid-August, said Miss Smith, and features the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It is called Tanglewood because it is held on an estate of that name, which was donated to the festival in 1936.

The festival grew from an attendance of 5,000 people to last year's total of 150,000, said Miss Smith.

Mrs. Thomas Hyland, president Mrs. William Kain, Mrs. Edwin Jones, Mrs. Robert Millner, and Mrs. William Siersema were named delegates to a spring meeting of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs May 7 in the Hotel Astor, Manhattan.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Kain, chairman, Mrs. John Sheppard, Mrs. S. T. Schiele, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Siersema, Mrs. Anna Sargent, Mrs. Leroy Fisher, and Mrs. Charles Asensio.

The group will sponsor a President's Day luncheon April 28 in the Richmond County Country Club, under the chairmanship Mrs. David Napier.

Mrs. Hyland presided at yesterday's session. The program arranged by Mrs. Horace L

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 29 1954

Boston Symphony Unable to Stage Benefit for Lenox

The Boston Symphony orchestra has informed Lenox town officials that it cannot stage an extra concert this summer at Tanglewood for the benefit of the town.

Lenox officials had suggested the benefit concert as a means of helping the town meet the extra fire, police and library costs resulting from the operation of the Berkshire Symphonic festival and Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood each summer. But President Henry B. Cabot of the orchestra trustees, in a reply, said "We have obligated ourselves concertwise to as great an extent as it would be wise to do this summer." Mr. Cabot said he was not sure what could be done in future seasons but he indicated that if the orchestra held a benefit for Lenox, other communities, particularly Stockbridge, probably would feel they should get some help too.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN & TIMES
APR 25 1954

MUSIC

Aspen,

By Felix Borowski

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, with Charles Munch as director, opens July 7 and continues to Aug. 15. As at Aspen, there is an effective combination of solo, chamber and orchestral music. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard in the Music Shed, with Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as conductors.

In the smaller hall such chamber music organizations as the Griller String Quartet, the Albineri Trio, the Kroll String Quartet and Bel Arte Trio will play, as well as the Zimbler Sinfonietta. Zino Francescatti, violinist, also is scheduled for a sonata program.

The most weighty feature of the Berkshire Festival will be a commemoration [illegible] works by Hector Berlioz. His "Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," Requiem, Te Deum, and various orchestral pieces will be performed.

The program at Lenox may not contain the numerous novelties set forth at Aspen, but it will offer a number of interesting works not in the hackneyed category—Haydn's "Nelson" Mass; Piston's Fourth Symphony, Copland's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Flute Concerto etc.

[173]

ry' Among ry Schedule

he changes in the British my and social life in postwar n. "Royal Scotland," in shows scenes of the Scottish ryside as well as the historic which are most closely as- ed with the royal family.

Tanglewood Scenes

Tanglewood Story," a film ced by the United States De- ent of State to interpret ican culture to people in countries, presents a thrill- icture of the Boston Sym- Orchestra conducted by Koussevitsky, and smaller s of musicians receiving in- ion from Leonard Bernstein Aaron Copland. There are scenes of students participat- informal performances, and rge audiences which gather e major performances.

he William Pynchon Memori- ilding, two films will be pre- under the joint sponsorship City Library and the Con- ut Valley Historical Museum.

Life Along the Waterways," in color, shows the plant animal life along a small in Connecticut which es into Long Island Sound. The River" the Mississippi its source to the Gulf of o is dramatically presented, a musical score by Virgil son in the background.

of the films to be shown are the collection of the City Li- and may be borrowed on a y card by groups presenting programs. These programs ee and the public is cordially d.

RTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 29 1954

...Symphony able to Stage nefit for Lenox

e Boston Symphony orche has informed Lenox tow ials that it cannot stage a concert this summer a glewood for the benefit o town.

nox officials had suggested benefit concert as a means elping the town meet the ex fire, police and library costs ulting from the operation of Berkshire Symphonic festival Berkshire Music center a glewood each summer. Bu sident Henry B. Cabot of th nestra trustees, in a repl "We have obligated o ves concertwise to as great ent as it would be wise to summer." Mr. Cabot said not sure what could be d future seasons but he ind that if the orchestra he nefit for Lenox, other con ies, particularly Stockbr obably would feel they s some help too.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN & TIMES
APR 25 1954

MUSIC Aspen,

By Felix Borowski

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, with s Munch as director, opens July 7 ntinues to Aug. 15. As at Aspen, there effective combination of solo, chamber rchestral music. The Boston Symphony tra will be heard in the Music Shed Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel an d Burgin as conductors.

he smaller hall such chamber mus zations as the Griller String Quarte lbineri Trio, the Kroll String Quart el Arte Trio will play, as well as er Sinfonietta. Zino Francescatti, also is scheduled for a sonata progr most weighty feature of the Berks estival will be a commemorative orks by Hector Berlioz. His "Da Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," Req eum, and various orchestral pieces erformed.

The program at Lenox may not contain numerous novelties set forth at Aspen, t it will offer a number of interesting works ot in the hackneyed category—Haydn's "Nel- n" Mass; Piston's Fourth Symphony, Cop- nd's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Flute Concerto

Music: Premiere of Two-Act Opera

Copland's 'Tender Land' Is Put On at Center

THE TENDER LAND, opera in two acts by Aaron Copland; text by Horace Everett; costumes by John Boyt; sets by Oliver Smith; staged by Jerome Robbins; conducted by Thomas Schippers. At the City Center.

Ma Moss	Jean Handzlik (debut)
Laurie	Rosemary Carlos (debut)
Top	Andrew Gainey
Martin	Jon Crain
Grampa	Norman Treigle
Splinters	Michael Pollock
Mrs. Splinters	Mary Kreste
Beth	Adele Newton (debut)
Mrs. Jenks	Teresa Gannon
Mr. Jenks	Thomas Powell

AMAHL AND THE NIGHT VISITORS, opera in one act by Gian-Carlo Menotti; text by the composer; sets and costumes by Eugene Berman; staged by the composer; conducted by Thomas Schippers.

Amahl	William McIver (debut)
Mother	Rosemary Kuhlman
Three Kings	Michael Pollock
	Richard Wentworth
	Lawrence Winters
Servant	William Starling

By OLIN DOWNES

AARON COPLAND'S first full-length opera, "The Tender Land," the libretto by Horace Everett, received its première as the first half of a double bill by the New York City Opera Company Thursday night at the City Center.

This Aaron Copland "first" attracted a brilliantly representative audience and the opera was heard with every sign of respect and appreciation. How long sustained the applause and the recalls were after this scribe hurried from the theatre to do his reviewer's stint cannot be detailed here. But the impression was of a reception somewhat conditional, and of a second act that had a less inspired and effective concluding scene than the first one.

And this, in the present observer's opinion, was inevitable, because of the libretto. It is a book that simply does not convince, or present much that is of character, or motivation, or consequence. The composer often produces interesting music, not because of, but mainly in spite of this flimsy and pseudo-dramatic material.

There is no need here to particularize the opera's story. It is said that the plot of "The Tender Land" was conceived before the warm and compelling drama of William Inge's "Picnic," came to this city last season. Hence the similarity of the fundamental idea of both drama and opera is accidental.

But anyone who has seen "Picnic" with its play of passions and powerful dénouement, and compared it with Thursday night's affair, will immediately have realized the difference between the thing that is real and the thing that is theoretical and artificial.

The end of the opera comes when the unhappy and awakened girl, Laurie Moss, her lover having disappeared and her dream vanished, decides that she must leave home and "break that pattern and assert her own being." Then, the mother turns to her younger daughter — the baby sister, rather insufferable on the stage—"knowing that the one responsibility has ended and another has begun."

To the eye in the heatre, this is unconvincing and a singularly inconclusive curtain.

One place where Mr. Copland's music says much to us is the fine quintet sung at the fall of evening by the principal characters. The , peace and poetry of the silent fields and sky, the tranquility and solace of those for whom the day's work is done, are in it. And this motivation harks back to and completes the effect of the music of the sunrise and the stretching plains that opens the opera and unifies the entire musico-dramatic structure.

Then there is the love duet of the second act, which, so far at least as Martin, the man in it is concerned, has a straightforward melodic, operatic splurge, expressive enough even if written, as one suspects of a composer of Mr. Copland's sensitivity and horror of the banal, as perhaps a concession, if a skilful one, to the commonly acknowledged needs of the lyric theatre.

The most deeply emotional and imaginative passage of the score, at least at a first hearing, is the moment when the dance that has been sheer romping and gaiety suddenly is transformed, as the figures of the dancers become shadowy, and the music becomes that of an inner world of tenderness and longing.

A motive admirably reflective of this is reiterated and developed, quite symphonically, through the scenes that lead to the final parting of Laurie and her suitor. There is also to be applauded the dance to the fiddle tune in the celebration of Laurie's graduation by the assembled guests, and the ditty in the style of a folk rhyme sung by Top, the drifter. The music d'action, when Top drags Martin hurriedly away from his rendezvous with Laurie in the morning is telling, and so is Martin's brief song of departure.

But the musical characterization is a very one-sided affair. Of the women, their natures and feelings, Mr. Copland's music tells us very little. We do not once feel them as persons or passions, either. The men, including the rough old hard-drinking grandfather, have outline and contour. The ladies are sexless and negligible. The libretto hardly makes anything else possible, and there are many lines that are uninspiring for musical setting, as there is also a good deal of music that is pulseless, dry, and uninspired.

Mr. Copland's orchestration is fine-grained subtly colored, and considerate of the voices.

The performance was effective in much the same way as the music and the singing—on the part of the men, excellent; on the part of the women, uninteresting and insipid. What could they do? The stage designs of Oliver Swift, done with economy of line and imaginative suggestion, were atmospheric in the Grant Wood style.

The dramatic direction of Jerome Robbins was usually effective, though not so skilfully planned in the sudden transitions from the dance in the lighted room and the emergence of certain figures from it into the night scene outside. This can probably be adjusted in future performances. Thomas Schippers conducted masterfully and made the orchestra speak.

It is said that Mr. Copland, distrustful of his limited experience of operatic composition and the exigencies of the lyric stage, intended originally to try out this opera, commissioned of him through the League of Composers by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, in some theatre outside the metropolitan area till he found out how certain of his effects worked out in actual performance.

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
APR 11 1954

Overtones

Santa Barbara Venue Of Festival of Music

BY WILLIAM FLEMING

When it was no longer fashionable for Europeans to spend their summers at a spa drinking mineral water, the hotel keepers and city fathers had to think fast. They came up with the idea of a music festival, probably, more from economic desperation than from any very deep desire to become patrons of the arts. It not only caught on, but turned out to be the neatest trick of the tourist trade since medieval pilgrimages went out of date.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
APR 16 1954

Plans for the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., have now been fully formulated Jean Morel of the Paris Opera Comique and Juilliard, School in New York will head the conducting and orchestra departments. Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss will be the joint leaders of a study group on modern music. It is something of a surprise to find the name of Ernst Toch on the list as guest teacher of composition after some of his recent pronouncements on the subject.

MUNCH TO CONDUCT

Charles Munch, Director of the Center, will conduct 8 of the 12 symphony concerts, while Pierre Monteux will do two. The most interesting programs seem to be the performance of Berlioz's Damnation of Faust, on Saturday July 10; the all-Cesar Franck concert on Sunday, July 18, which will include three seldom heard symphonic poems, Les Eolides, Le Chasseur Maudit, and Les Djinns. The entire Romeo and Juliet choral symphony of Berlioz will be played on Saturday, July 31 and the great Requiem on August 15. For reservations and information address the Berkshire Festival, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
APR 16 1954

INSTRUMENTAL AUDITIONS

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston on Friday, April 23 from 10 a.m. until 12 noon.

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its twelfth session from July 5 to August 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 3 1954

PREPARES FOR TANGLEWOOD OPENING

LENOX—Charles Munch, music director for the past five years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will direct its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox Monday through Aug. 15. The festival is in its 17th season, and is the 15th in which the Boston Orchestra has participated. Mr. Munch also directs the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music operated by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

[174]

Copland's 'The Tender Land' Has Its World Premiere

N. Y. C. OPERA

World premiere of Aaron Copland's two-act opera. Presented in a twin bill with Gian Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors. Libretto by Horace Everett. Sets by Oliver Smith. costumes by John Boyt. Stage director: Jerome Robbins. The cast:

Ma Moss	Jean Handzlik (debut)
Lauri	Rosemary Carlos (debut)
Top	Andrew Gainey
Martin	John Crain
Grampa	Norman Treigle
Splinters	Michael Pollack
Mrs. Splinters	Mary Kreste
Beth	Adele Newton (debut)
Mrs. Jenks	Teresa Cannon
Mr. Jenks	Thomas Powell

CONDUCTOR: Thomas Schippers

By Jay S. Harrison

The very first chord of Aaron Copland's new two-act opera, "The Tender Land," premiered Thursday at the City Center, lets the secret out. We are to hear a landscape piece, say the opening measures; we are to hear wide-spread open harmonies, and melodies as simple and guileless as a child's prayer. We are, in fact, promised a full hour and a half of these individual qualities and features long ago brought to music by Mr. Copland and since sent round the world as a genuine representation of what has become our national style.

But, alas, though these promises are fulfilled, the final product is not at all the equal of Mr. Copland's best work. For while the texture, the sentiment, the clarity and purity of the ideas remain, in "The Tender Land," a mate to similar aspects in his most successful ballets and symphonies, the opera is lacking in the inner compulsion, the sheer verve and spontaneity that have made his orchestral pieces a major contribution to the repertoire.

"The Tender Land's" most obvious fault, to my ears at any rate, is its lack of really eloquent tunes. Here and there a few began to soar, but soon their flight is clipped. Throughout, there are moments to indicate that Copland—and the very best of him—will be placed before us, that we are due for the easily digestible and highly contagious brand of folkishness that is the composer's way; but as often as not our expectations are only mildly satisfied. As a result, Mr. Copland remains constantly on the brink of his own especial kind of greatness without taking that final plunge to bring this greatness to us.

What the composer has achieved in doing, however, is to create a genuine atmosphere piece that breathes, smells, even feels like the Mid-West. It is homespun, gentle, sweet and casual. In "The Tender Land" time moves slowly and life is unhurried. People grow up, grow old, have their little problems and accept them. There is no metropolitan hysteria, no screaming for survival. As outlined in his libretto, Horace Everett tells a simple tale of two drifters who arrive on a farm the very day that the young girl of the household is to graduate from high school. At a party to mark the occasion, she and one of the hoboes fall in love and plan an elopement that is doomed from the start. That, in the barest outline, is all. It is a characteristic and inconsequential situation that offers no room for high passion and searing drama.

For his part, Mr. Copland has taken this outline and decked it with several arias, a love duet, a striking quintet and barn dance. Between these episodes he has woven a flexible parlando that allows the words to be heard and gives them, at the same time, the expressive powers of melody. All of the features are unified, as is the consistently brilliant orchestral writing, by the spacious and amiable sonority effects and harmonic usages that are the backbone of the Copland method. And nowhere has the composer seen fit to punch his way into the listener's consciousness. It is, in the main, simple and serene music—albeit lacking in memorable tunefulness—that Mr. Copland has provided.

The production as a whole is perfect. I, for one, have never seen an operatic cast with artists resembling so closely the persons they are meant to impersonate. And the singing, especially that of Mr. Treigle, was polished, rounded and remarkably in keeping with the character of the score. Two newcomers to the City Center, Jean Handzlik and Rosemary Carlos, revealed in their initial appearance considerable poise of manner, and voices that are hearty, colorful and soundly under control.

All told, then, "The Tender Land" has been given a splendid mounting. From its nostalgic setting by Oliver Smith to the vigorous and authoritive conducting of Thomas Schippers, it is ever a treat for eye and ear. And though "The Tender Land" itself is covered with blemishes, it has to be heard by any one pretending even a remote interest in opera. For it is a work by Aaron Copland. That should be recommendation enough.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
APR 25 1954

Bishop to Sing Tanglewood Mass May 22

Lenox, April 24 — A history making premier will be sung in the huge music shed at Tanglewood next month. It will be a pontifical solemn high mass. Scheduled for the morning of May 22, it will be the highlight of the biannual state convention of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Pontificating will be Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Springfield.

During the long and colorful history of the internationally famous Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood the shed, which accommodates some 5000, has never been used for any other purpose other than concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A large all-male choir will sing the Gregorian mass.

Some 62 courts of the Catholic Daughters of America and an additional number of junior courts will be in the Berkshires for this convention and will be in attendance. Outside of the Berkshire Living Rosary held in Pittsfield a few years ago, this will be the largest religious service ever held in the county. And it will perhaps have the largest congregation ever to attend mass in the history of the diocese of Springfield.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 15 1954

Final Auditions April 23 For Tanglewood School

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with the Berkshire festival, will be held at Symphony hall, Boston, Friday, April 23 from 10 o'clock until noon.

The Berkshire Music center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

'Aida' at the Met

Thursday's Metropolitan Opera performance of "Aida" was sprinkled with important "firsts"—those of George London and Norman Scott, who were singing their respective roles of Amonasro and Ramfis for the first time this season, and that of conductor Kurt Adler, substituting on short notice for Renato Cellini, who was indisposed. The remaining members of the cast were Lubomir Vichegonov, Nell Rankin, Herva Nelli, Gino Penno, Paul Franke and Margaret Roggero.

Mr. Adler had not previously conducted "Aida" at the Metropolitan, and perhaps his unusual double function as conductor and Chorus Master had something to do with the gratifying precision and sonorousness

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
APR 18 195

Final Berkshire Auditions Friday

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the Summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston next Friday, April 23, from 10 a. m. until 12 noon.

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

For applications and catalogue, address The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, 15, Mass.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUN 30 1954

Announce Changes In Tanglewood Program

Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed, at Tanglewood, Lenox, are announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

ry' Among ry Schedule

he changes in the British my and social life in postwar n. "Royal Scotland," in shows scenes of the Scottish yside as well as the historic which are most closely as- ed with the royal family.

Tanglewood Scenes

Tanglewood Story," a film ced by the United States De- ent of State to interpret ican culture to people in countries, presents a thrill- icture of the Boston Sym- Orchestra conducted by Koussevitsky, and smaller s of musicians receiving in- ion from Leonard Bernstein Aaron Copland. There are scenes of students participat- informal performances, and rge audiences which gather e major performances.

he William Pynchon Memori- ilding, two films will be pre- under the joint sponsorship e City Library and the Con- ut Valley Historical Museum.

Life Along the Waterways," n in color, shows the plant animal life along a small m in Connecticut which es into Long Island Sound. The River" the Mississippi its source to the Gulf of o is dramatically presented, a musical score by Virgil son in the background.

of the films to be shown are the collection of the City Li- and may be borrowed on a y card by groups presenting programs. These programs ee and the public is cordially d.

ORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 29 1954

...n Symphony able to Stage nefit for Lenox

e Boston Symphony orche- has informed Lenox tow ials that it cannot stage a concert this summer a lewood for the benefit o town.

nox officials had suggested benefit concert as a means elping the town meet the ex- fire, police and library costs lting from the operation of Berkshire Symphonic festival Berkshire Music center at glewood each summer. But sident Henry B. Cabot of th nestra trustees, in a reply "We have obligated ou es concertwise to as great ent as it would be wise to summer." Mr. Cabot said s not sure what could be d uture seasons but he ind that if the orchestra he nefit for Lenox, other com ies, particularly Stockbr bably would feel they sh some help too.

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN & TIMES
APR 25 1954

MUSIC Aspen,

By Felix Borowski

E BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL, with s Munch as director, opens July 7 ntinues to Aug. 15. As at Aspen, there effective combination of solo, chamber chestral music. The Boston Symphony tra will be heard in the Music Shed Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel an d Burgin as conductors.

he smaller hall such chamber musi vations as the Griller String Quarte bineri Trio, the Kroll String Quart el Arte Trio will play, as well as er Sinfonietta. Zino Francescatti, v also is scheduled for a sonata progra most weighty feature of the Berksh stival will be a commemorative orks by Hector Berlioz. His "Da Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," Requ eum, and various orchestral pieces erformed.

The program at Lenox may not contain e numerous novelties set forth at Aspen, t it will offer a number of interesting works t in the hackneyed category—Haydn's "Nel- n" Mass; Piston's Fourth Symphony, Cop- nd's Piano Concerto, Ibert's Flute Concerto c.

AMUSEMENTS April 3, '54 THE NEW YORK TIMES,

Music: Premiere of Two-Act Opera

Copland's 'Tender Land' Is Put On at Center

By OLIN DOWNES

AARON COPLAND'S first full-length opera, "The Tender Land," the libretto by Horace Everett, received its première as the first half of a double bill by the New York City Opera Company Thursday night at the City Center.

This Aaron Copland "first" attracted a brilliantly representative audience and the opera was heard with every sign of respect and appreciation. How long sustained the applause and the recalls were after this scribe hurried from the theatre to do his reviewer's stint cannot be detailed here. But the impression was of a reception somewhat conditional, and of a second act that had a less inspired and effective concluding scene than the first one.

And this, in the present observer's opinion, was inevitable, because of the libretto. It is a book that simply does not convince, or present much that is of character, or motivation, or consequence. The composer often produces interesting music, not because of, but mainly in spite of this flimsy and pseudo-dramatic material.

There is no need here to particularize the opera's story. It is said that the plot of "The Tender Land" was conceived before the warm and compelling drama of William Inge's "Picnic," came to this city last season. Hence the similarity of the fundamental idea of both drama and opera is accidental.

But anyone who has seen "Picnic" with its play of passions and powerful dénouement, and compared it with Thursday night's affair, will immediately have realized the difference between the thing that is real and the thing that is theoretical and artificial.

The end of the opera comes when the unhappy and awakened girl, Laurie Moss, her lover having disappeared and her dream vanished, decides that she must leave home and "break that pattern and assert her own being." Then, the mother turns to her younger daughter — the baby sister, rather insufferable on the stage—"knowing that the one responsibility has ended and another has begun."

To the eye in the heatre, this is unconvincing and a singularly inconclusive curtain.

One place where Mr. Copland's music says much to us is the fine quintet sung at the fall of evening by the principal characters. The peace and poetry of the silent fields and sky, the tranquility and solace of those for whom the day's work is done, are in it. And this motivation harks back to and completes the effect of the music of the sunrise and the stretching plains that opens the opera and unifies the entire musico-dramatic structure.

Then there is the love duet of the second act, which, so far at least as Martin, the man in it is concerned, has a straightforward melodic, operatic splurge, expressive enough even if written, as one suspects of a composer of Mr. Copland's sensitivity and horror of the banal, as perhaps a concession, if a skilful one, to the commonly acknowledged needs of the lyric theatre.

The most deeply emotional and imaginative passage of the score, at least at a first hearing, is the moment when the dance that has been sheer romping and gaiety suddenly is transformed, as the figures of the dancers become shadowy, and the music becomes that of an inner world of tenderness and longing.

A motive admirably reflective of this is reiterated and developed, quite symphonically, through the scenes that lead to the final parting of Laurie and her suitor. There is also to be applauded the dance to the fiddle tune in the celebration of Laurie's graduation by the assembled guests, and the ditty in the style of a folk rhyme sung by Top, the drifter. The music d'action, when Top drags Martin hurriedly away from his rendezvous with Laurie in the morning is telling, and so is Martin's brief song of departure.

But the musical characterization is a very one-sided affair. Of the women, their natures and feelings, Mr. Copland's music tells us very little. We do not once feel them as persons or passions, either. The men, including the rough old hard-drinking grandfather, have outline and contour. The ladies are sexless and negligible. The libretto hardly makes anything else possible, and there are many lines that are uninspiring for musical setting, as there is also a good deal of music that is pulseless, dry, and uninspired.

Mr. Copland's orchestration is fine-grained subtly colored, and considerate of the voices.

The performance was effective in much the same way as the music and the singing—on the part of the men, excellent; on the part of the women, uninteresting and insipid. What could they do? The stage designs of Oliver Swift, done with economy of line and imaginative suggestion, were atmospheric in the Grant Wood style.

The dramatic direction of Jerome Robbins was usually effective, though not so skilfully planned in the sudden transitions from the dance in the lighted room and the emergence of certain figures from it into the night scene outside. This can probably be adjusted in future performances. Thomas Schippers conducted masterfully and made the orchestra speak.

It is said that Mr. Copland, distrustful of his limited experience of operatic composition and the exigencies of the lyric stage, intended originally to try out this opera, commissioned of him through the League of Composers by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d, in some theatre outside the metropolitan area till he found out how certain of his effects worked out in actual performance.

E, SATURDAY, APRIL 3, 1954 N.Y. Herald-Trib

Copland's 'The Tender Land' Has Its World Premiere

N. Y. C. OPERA

World premiere of Aaron Copland's two-act opera. Presented in a twin bill with Gian Carlo Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors. Libretto by Horace Everett. Sets by Oliver Smith, costumes by John Boyt. Stage director: Jerome Robbins. The cast:

Ma Moss.....Jean Handzlik (debut)
Laurie.....Rosemary Carlos (debut)
Top.....Andrew Gainey
Martin.....John Crain
Grampa.....Norman Treigle
Spinners.....Michael Pollack
Mrs. Spinners.....Mary Kreste
Beth.....Adele Newton (debut)
Mrs. Jenks.....Teresa Cannon
Mr. Jenks.....Thomas Powell
CONDUCTOR: Thomas Schippers

By Jay S. Harrison

The very first chord of Aaron Copland's new two-act opera, "The Tender Land," premiered Thursday at the City Center, lets the secret out. We are to hear a landscape piece, say the opening measures; we are to hear wide-spread open harmonies, and melodies as simple and guileless as a child's prayer. We are, in fact, promised a full hour and a half of these individual qualities and features long ago brought to music by Mr. Copland and since sent round the world as a genuine representation of what has become our national style.

But, alas, though these promises are fulfilled, the final product is not at all the equal of Mr. Copland's best work. For while the texture, the sentiment, the clarity and purity of the ideas remain, in "The Tender Land," a mate to similar aspects in his most successful ballets and symphonies, the opera is lacking in the inner compulsion, the sheer verve and spontaneity that have made his orchestral pieces a major contribution to the repertoire.

"The Tender Land's" most obvious fault, to my ears at any rate, is its lack of really eloquent tunes. Here and there a few began to soar, but soon their flight is clipped. Throughout, there are moments to indicate that Copland—and the very best of him—will be placed before us, that we are due for the easily digestible and highly contagious brand of folkishness that is the composer's way; but as often as not our expectations are only mildly satisfied. As a result, Mr. Copland remains constantly on the brink of his own especial kind of greatness without taking that final plunge to bring this greatness to us.

What the composer has achieved in doing, however, is to create a genuine atmosphere piece that breathes, smells, even feels like the Mid-West. It is homespun, gentle, sweet and casual. In "The Tender Land" time moves slowly and life is unhurried. People grow up, grow old, have their little problems and accept them. There is no metropolitan hysteria, no screaming for survival. As outlined in his libretto, Horace Everett tells a simple tale of two drifters who arrive on a farm the very day that the young girl of the household is to graduate from high school. At a party to mark the occasion, she and one of the hoboes fall in love and plan an elopement that is doomed from the start. That, in the barest outline, is all. It is a characteristic and inconsequential situation that offers no room for high passion and searing drama.

For his part, Mr. Copland has taken this outline and decked it with several arias, a love duet, a striking quintet and barn dance. Between these episodes he has woven a flexible parlando that allows the words to be heard and gives them, at the same time, the expressive powers of melody. All of the features are unified, as is the consistently brilliant orchestral writing, by the spacious and amiable sonority effects and harmonic usages that are the backbone of the Copland method. And nowhere has the composer seen fit to punch his way into the listener's consciousness. It is, in the main, simple and serene music—albeit lacking in memorable tunefulness—that Mr. Copland has provided.

The production as a whole is perfect. I, for one, have never seen an operatic cast with artists resembling so closely the persons they are meant to impersonate. And the singing, especially that of Mr. Treigle, was polished, rounded and remarkably in keeping with the character of the score. Two newcomers to the City Center, Jean Handzlik and Rosemary Carlos, revealed in their initial appearance considerable poise of manner, and voices that are hearty, colorful and soundly under control.

All told, then, "The Tender Land" has been given a splendid mounting. From its nostalgic setting by Oliver Smith to the vigorous and authoritive conducting of Thomas Schippers, it is ever a treat for eye and ear. And though "The Tender Land" itself is covered with blemishes, it has to be heard by any one pretending even a remote interest in opera. For it is a work by Aaron Copland. That should be recommendation enough.

'Aida' at the Met

Thursday's Metropolitan Opera performance of "Aida" was sprinkled with important "firsts" —those of George London and Norman Scott, who were singing their respective roles of Amonasro and Ramfis for the first time this season, and that of conductor Kurt Adler, substituting on short notice for Renato Cellini, who was indisposed. The remaining members of the cast were Lubomir Vichegonov, Nell Rankin, Herva Nelli, Gino Penno, Paul Franke and Margaret Roggero.

Mr. Adler had not previously conducted "Aida" at the Metropolitan, and perhaps his unusual double function as conductor and Chorus Master had something to do with the gratifying precision and sonorousness

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
APR 25 1954

Bishop to Sing Tanglewood Mass May 22

Lenox, April 24 — A history-making premier will be sung in the huge music shed at Tanglewood next month. It will be a pontifical solemn high mass. Scheduled for the morning of May 22, it will be the highlight of the biannual state convention of the Catholic Daughters of America.

Pontificating will be Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Springfield.

During the long and colorful history of the internationally famous Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood the shed, which accommodates some 9000, has never been used for any other purpose other than concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A large all-male choir will sing the Gregorian mass.

Some 62 courts of the Catholic Daughters of America and an additional number of junior courts will be in the Berkshires for this convention and will be in attendance. Outside of the Berkshire Living Rosary held in Pittsfield a few years ago, this will be the largest religious service ever held in the county. And it will perhaps have the largest congregation ever to attend mass in the history of the diocese of Springfield.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
APR 15 1954

Final Auditions April 23 For Tanglewood School

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with the Berkshire festival, will be held at Symphony hall, Boston, Friday, April 23 from 10 o'clock until noon.

The Berkshire Music center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood revolving scholarship fund.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
APR 18 195

Final Berkshire Auditions Friday

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the Summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston next Friday, April 23, from 10 a. m. until 12 noon.

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its 12th session from July 5 to Aug. 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

For applications and catalogue, address The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston, 15, Mass.

This Clipping From
SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
APR 11 1954

Overtones

Santa Barbara Venue Of Festival of Music

BY WILLIAM FLEMING

When it was no longer fashionable for Europeans to spend their summers at a spa drinking mineral water, the hotel keepers and city fathers had to think fast. They came up with the idea of a music festival, probably, more from economic desperation than from any very deep desire to become patrons of the arts. It not only caught on, but turned out to be the neatest trick of the tourist trade since medieval pilgrimages went out of date.

Plans for the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., have now been fully formulated. Jean Morel of the Paris Opera Comique and Juilliard School in New York will head the conducting and orchestra departments. Aaron Copland and Lukas Foss will be the joint leaders of a study group on modern music. It is no surprise to find the ... of Ernst Toch on the list ... teacher of composition ... of his recent pronouncements on the subject.

MUNCH TO CONDUCT

Charles Munch, Director of the Center, will conduct 8 of the 12 symphony concerts, while Pierre Monteux will do two. The most interesting programs seem to be the performance of Berlioz's dramatic legend, The Damnation of Faust, on Saturday, July 10; the all-Cesar Franck program on Sunday, July 18, which will include three seldom heard symphonic poems, Les Eolides, Le Chasseur Maudit, and Les Djinns. The entire Romeo and Juliet choral symphony of Berlioz will be played on Saturday, July 24, and the great Requiem on August 15. For reservations and information address the Berkshire Festival, Symphony Hall, Boston, Mass.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
APR 16 1954

INSTRUMENTAL AUDITIONS

Final auditions for instrumentalists applying for admission to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, will be held at Symphony Hall, Boston on Friday, April 23 from 10 a.m. until 12 noon.

The Berkshire Music Center will hold its twelfth session from July 5 to August 15 at Tanglewood under the direction of Charles Munch with Aaron Copland as assistant.

Students accepted for the student orchestra as well as active participants in the other advanced departments of the school, are eligible for tuition grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 3 - 1954

PREPARES FOR TANGLEWOOD OPENING

LENOX—Charles Munch, music director for the past five years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will direct its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox Monday through Aug. 15. The festival is in its 17th season, and is the 15th in which the Boston Orchestra has participated. Mr. Munch also directs the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music operated by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUN 30 1954

Announce Changes In Tanglewood Program

Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed, at Tanglewood, Lenox, are announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

[174]

BOSTON, MASS.
POST
JUN 27 1954

Trenet (With Helian) and Piaf Make You Go French

By A. LAWRENCE MacKENZIE

CHARLES TRENET SONGS, interpreted by Jacques Helian and his orchestra (Angel High Fidelity recording)

We remember standing in a public square in the ancient city of St. Mihiel years ago. From a truck an American negro band was playing the "new" music. The crowd in the square, mostly male, might have been from the tower of Babel. There were Italians, Russians, Japanese, Algerians, Senegalese, French, Annamites, Scots, English, Australians and Americans. When the band finished a roar of joyous laughter went up from that polyglot mob as spontaneously as breathing.

That's the way Charles Trenet affects you but not only in your risibles. Your feet react, too, because Helian's orchestra has the smoothest swing this side of grandfather's clock. The Angel recording is a bit of perfection with no surface noises to mar the subleties of Trenet's insinuating voice or Helian's superb conducting. Among the several songs that delight are "Boum," "Printemps a Rio," and, of course, "La Mer," which has been translated into about 40 languages, two in English, one for the British and one for Americans. Others excellently recorded are "Il Pleut dans ma Chambre," and "Y'a d'la Joie," which do indeed invite you to dance in Paris.

* * *

EDITH PIAF (Angel 64005) has put on a platter several of her newest songs. Piaf, as everybody calls her now, is France. Sentimental in a hard boiled way, studiedly careless she makes one believe what Jefferson, we think, once said; "Chaque homme a deux pays, le sien et la France" (every man has two countries, his own and France). Piaf lures you into that sophisticated simplicity that gives the world an opera bouffe touch, a nice thing to dream about. Two of her several songs that sing in your head are "Johnny, tu n' es pas un Ange," and "N'y va pas, Manuel." If you are a Piaf fan these recordings are splendid.

GEZA ANDA plays Tchaikowsky's piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor, opus 23, with the Philharmonia Orchestra, Alceo Galliera conducting. (Angel High Fidelity)

Geza Anda, who elicits from the keys an astounding precision of tone, executes this most popular of Tchaikowsky's concertos brilliantly both in his interpretation and his control of the keyboard. The first movement, the theme of which was derived from Ukrainian folk songs, makes one wonder why his composition was at first rejected with anger.

NICOLAI GEDDA, Swedish tenor, with the Philharmonic Orchestra, Alceo Galliera conducting, sings opera arias (Angel). Gedda, a former bank cashier, and now being hailed as a "Schipa in the making," has a sweet, well-controlled voice. He made his debut at the Stockholm Opera two years ago and since then has been at La Scala, in Rome and Turin. The recording includes 12 arias and his voice is shown in its finest in "Ah, leve-toi, soleil!" from Gounod's Romeo et Juliette, in the Lenski aria from Tchaikowsky's "Eugene Onegin," and in "Parmi veder le lagrime" from Verdi's "Rigoletto."

* * *

Stan Kenton during the latter's 1953 European tour brings to modern jazz an original interpretation of swing. Combined with Gerry Mulligan's creative extemporizations these experimenters in modern sound and rhythms bring to jazz fans something new and something to talk about. On the Lee Konitz platter are several modern songs among them, "I May Be Wrong," "Love Me or Leave Me," and "Jeru." Gerry Mulligan, in his recording, does his best with "Too Marvelous for Words," "These Foolish Things," and "Broadway."

* * *

A recording of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch for RCA Victor, [illegible] in September, 1953, has been awarded the "Grand Prix" for vocal ensemble with orchestra, according to an announcement from the French Academie Charles Cros.

The recording itself was made in Symphony Hall, Boston, in February of last year with the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses. Soloists were Margaret Roggiero, contralto; Leslie Chabay, tenor; and Yi Kwei-Sze, bass, assisting the orchestra.

Both the recording as well as concert performances of the work by the Boston Symphony have been a feature of the commemoration this year of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' birth.

The work will be performed again by Munch and the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival this coming July and August during the course of a commemorative Berlioz festival. Also included in the festival will be the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" recently recorded by Munch with the Boston Symphony for fall release.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens Wednesday

An all-Beethoven program of chamber music will mark the opening Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. of the 17th Berkshire Festival in the Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio are the featured artists on the program which opens a six week schedule of 24 concerts.

Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening week end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's 9; Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening, and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD
JUL 4 - 1954

OPENER AT TANGLEWOOD

A six-week schedule of 24 concerts in the 17th Berkshire Festival will open Wednesday evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The opening concert will be an all-Bethoven program of chamber music featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The symphony will also appear in concerts Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUN 26 1954

Tanglewood Series Ticket Sales Top '53

SUBSCRIBERS for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts on six Saturday evenings, July 10 to Aug. 14, and on six Sunday afternoons, July 11 to Aug. 15, in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, have surpassed those of 1953, manager George E. Judd announces.

Prices for the Shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, are one-third less this year, since the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall are being sold separately. Yet Festival patrons have 12, instead of nine, Shed concerts this Summer.

Single tickets for the 12 Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon Music Shed concerts are on sale: Box seats $6.50; front sections, center, $5.50; front sections, sides, $4; rear sections, $3.50, $3, and $2.50.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office—telephone Lenox 600—which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center starts, the box office will also be open Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders are payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets.

* * *

THE 15th BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated commences Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p.m., with the first of six Wednesday chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Claudio Arrau, eminent Chilean concert pianist, will perform Sonatas Op. 79, 119, and 57 ("Appassionata"); and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Martin Hoherman, cello) will perform the String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1 on an all-Beethoven program. Seats for the Wednesday concerts are $2 and $3.

Charles Munch will conduct a chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist, at the first of six Friday evening chamber orchestra programs, at 8:30 p. m., in the Theater-Concert Hall, Friday, July 9. Seats for the Friday programs are $4 and $5.

* * *

NOTED SOLOISTS of the season will include Metropolitan Opera stars Eleanor Steber, soprano, and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; David Poleri and John McCollum, tenors; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone. Piano soloists are Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, Seymour Lipkin and Leo Smit. Violin soloists are Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt. Other assisting artists are Doriot Anthony, flutist; William Primrose, violist, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society; the Albeneri Trio; the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the Griller String Quartet, and the Kroll String Quartet.

In greatest demand, to date, is the opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, July 9-10-11; with Series E, Aug. 7-8, and the Stravinsky-Mozart chamber orchestra program on Aug. 6, in popular favor also.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

MUSIC CENTER AT TANGLEWOOD TO OPEN TODAY

Munch to Greet Students And Guests This Afternoon

Lenox, July 3—The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 12th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood, tomorrow afternoon. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, will address students and guests at the opening exercises, at 3.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, and an orchestra trustee, will preside. Composer Aaron Copland, who is assistant director of the school, will introduce the faculty.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitsky in 1940, Randall Thompson's "Alleulia," composed for the first opening of the school, will be sung by the students. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, will conduct. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises.

The first school performance will be given Thursday, at 8.30 p. in the Music Shed, when for the first time the symphony orchestra of 100 students in Depts. I will play together.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Department I in the Chamber Music Hall, will be the ing, July 11, at 10 a. m. That evening at 8.30 p. m., also in the Chamber Music Hall, will bring the first composers' forum by students of Department III studying with Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and guest composer Ernst Toch. Their works will be performed by fellow students and commented upon.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, are invited to all student concerts.

[175]

LOS ANGELES, CAL.
MIRROR
JUL 2 - 1954

MUSIC

By RAYMOND KENDALL

HARVARD SENDS GLEE CLUB WEST; SUMMER MUSIC IN PROSPECT

Since the Harvard Glee Club shed its rah-rah tradition in the early 30s, its joint concerts with the Radcliffe Choral Society have become legendary, including appearances with the Boston Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra and through recordings.

Now, for the first time since 1911, the Harvard ensemble is touring west of the Mississippi, happily joined by its female contingent. Fortunately, Los Angeles was included in the itinerary, if the response of a sizable Royce Hall audience last night is any indication.

The concert, sponsored locally by UCLA and the Harvard Club of Southern California, was well-programmed, and set off to advantage the youthful enthusiasm of the singers and their mature concept of the music. They were guided by Veteran G. Wallace Woodworth, who has presided over the Cambridge ensemble since the retirement of Archibald Davison years back.

High points of the opening sacred groups were Mozart's "Regina Coeli" (K.108), the famous "Miserere" by Allegri, and the almost-20th-century-sounding "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" by Dufay. Worthy of mention, too, was the 1937 "Three Motets for Voices" by Preger.

Among a group of French chansons, the suave "Mon Coeur Se Recommander a Vous" and two of the "Trois Chansons" (1908) by Debussy, made the best impression.

There are choirs with finer tone quality and more elegance of sound than the Harvard-Radcliffe contingents, but none with better sensitivity to appropriateness of style and vitality of performance.

It is as though each singer thinks in advance of the quality of sound he wishes to produce. That their quality is so unified is the miracle!

After the intermission came choral works by Irving Fine (1937), Allen Sapp (1943), and Henry Leland Clarke (1928). Then, after the Brahms Love Songs and two Philippine songs, a stirring performance of the "Cum Sancto Spiritu" from Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Part of the charm of these young singers is their utter lack of sophistication. They love to sing and don't care who gets in on the secret. Their tour will close on July 10 when they join the Boston Symphony and guest soloists for a performance of Berlioz's "Damnation of

MILHAUD

Faust" at the Berkshire Festival in Lennox, Mass.

* *

On July 10 the Burbank Symphony Orchestra will present "A Night in Vienna" with Leo Damiani conducting. Soprano Bonnie Murray will be soloist for this opening summer concert season in the Burbank Starlight Amphitheater.

Five concerts of first performances by resident composers will be given on Aug. 18, 21, 25, 28 and 31, in connection with the Bennington (Vt.) Composer's Conference.

* *

A REMINDER: Hollywood Bowl opens on Thursday, July 15, with a concert conducted by Sir Adrian Boult, and featuring Eleanor Steber and Jan Peerce as soloists.

(Editor's Note: See Raymond Kendall every Sunday at 6:30 p.m., as a regular panel member of "Debut," television's best tribute to young musical hopefuls.)

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens This Week

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fifteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday evening at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. On Friday also at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

BOSTON, MASS.
POST

JUN 27 1954

Trenet (With Helian) and Piaf Make You Go French

By A. LAWRENCE MacKENZIE

CHARLES TRENET SONGS, interpreted by Jacques Helian and his orchestra (Angel High Fidelity recording).

We remember standing in a public square in the ancient city of St. Mihiel years ago. From a truck an American negro band was playing the "new" music. The crowd in the square, mostly male, might have been from the tower of Babel. There were Italians, Russians, Japanese, Algerians, Senegalese, French, Annamites, Scots, English, Australians and Americans. When the band finished a roar of joyous laughter went up from that polyglot mob as spontaneously as breathing.

That's the way Charles Trenet affects you but not only in your risibles. Your feet react, too, because Helian's orchestra has the smoothest swing this side of grandfather's clock. The Angel recording is a bit of perfection with no surface noises to mar the subleties of Trenet's insinuating voice or Helian's superb conducting. Among the several songs that delight are "Boum," "Printemps a Rio," and, of course, "La Mer," which has been translated into about 40 languages, two in English, one for the British and one for Americans. Others excellently recorded are "Il Pleut dans ma Chambre," and "Y'a d'la Joie," which do indeed invite you to dance in Paris.

* * *

EDITH PIAF (Angel 64005) has put on a platter several of her newest songs. Piaf, as everybody calls her now, is France. Sentimental in a hard boiled way, studiedly careless she makes one believe what Jefferson, we think, once said; "Chaque homme a deux pays, le sien et la France" (every man has two countries, his own and France). Piaf lures you into that sophisticated simplicity that gives the world an opera bouffe touch, a nice thing to dream about. Two of her several songs that sing in your head are "Johnny, tu n' es pas un Ange," and "N'y va pas, Manuel." If you are a Piaf fan these recordings are splendid.

GEZA ANDA plays Tchaikowsky's piano Concerto No. 1 in B flat minor, opus 23, with the Philharmonia Orchestra, Alceo Galliera conducting. (Angel High Fidelity)

Geza Anda, who elicits from the keys an astounding precision of tone, executes this most popular of Tchaikowsky's concertos brilliantly both in his interpretation and his control of the keyboard. The first movement, the theme of which was derived from Ukrainian folk songs, makes one wonder why this composition was at first rejected with anger.

NICOLAI GEDDA, Swedish tenor, with the Philharmonic Orchestra, Alceo Galliera conducting, sings opera arias (Angel). Gedda, a former bank cashier, and now being hailed as a "Schipa in the making," has a sweet, well-controlled voice. He made his debut at the Stockholm Opera two years ago and since then has been at La Scala, in Rome and Turin. The recording includes 12 arias and his voice is shown in its finest in "Ah, leve-toi, soleil!" from Gounod's Roneo et Juliette, in the Lenski aria from Tchaikowsky's "Eugene Onegin," and in "Parmi veder le lagrime" from Verdi's "Rigoletto."

Stan Kenton during the latter's 1953 European tour brings to modern jazz an original interpretation of swing. Combined with Gerry Mulligan's creative extemporizations these experimenters in modern sound and rhythms bring to jazz fans something new and something to talk about. On the Lee Konitz platter are several modern songs among them, "I May Be Wrong," "Love Me or Leave Me," and "Jeru." Gerry Mulligan, in his recording, does his best with 'Too Marvelous for Words," "These Foolish Things," and "Broadway."

* * *

A recording of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch for RCA Victor, and released in September, 1953, has been awarded the "Grand Prix for vocal ensemble with orchestra" according to an announcement from the French Academie Charles Cros.

The recording itself was made in Symphony Hall, Boston, in February of last year with the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses. Soloists were Margaret Roggiero, contralto; Leslie Chabay tenor; and Yi Kwei-Sze, bass assisting the orchestra.

Both the recording as well as concert performances of the work by the Boston Symphony have been a feature of the commemoration this year of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz birth.

The work will be performed again by Munch and the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival this coming July and August during the course of a commemorative Berlioz festival. Also included in the festival will be the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" recently recorded by Munch with the Boston Symphony for fall release.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens Wednesday

An all-Beethoven program of chamber music will mark the opening Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. of the 17th Berkshire Festival in the Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio are the featured artists on the program which opens a six week schedule of 24 concerts.

Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening week end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's 9; Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening, and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.
HERALD

JUL 4 - 1954

OPENER AT TANGLEWOOD

A six-week schedule of 24 concerts in the 17th Berkshire Festival will open Wednesday evening at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The opening concert will be an all-Bethoven program of chamber music featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The symphony will also appear in concerts Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUN 26 1954

Tanglewood Series Ticket Sales Top '53

SUBSCRIBERS for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for concerts on six Saturday evenings, July 10 to Aug. 14, and on six Sunday afternoons, July 11 to Aug. 15, in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, have surpassed those of 1953, manager George E. Judd announces.

Prices for the Shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, are one-third less this year, since the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall are being sold separately. Yet Festival patrons have 12, instead of nine, Shed concerts this Summer.

Single tickets for the 12 Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon Music Shed concerts are on sale: Box seats $6.50; front sections, center, $5.50; front sections, sides, $4; rear sections, $3.50, $3, and $2.50.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office—telephone Lenox 600—which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center starts, the box office will also be open Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt: checks and money orders are payable to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Inc., and should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets.

* * *

THE 15th BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra has participated commences Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p.m., with the first of six Wednesday chamber music concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall. Claudio Arrau, eminent Chilean concert pianist, will perform Sonatas Op. 79, 119, and 57 ("Appassionata"); and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Martin Hoherman, cello) will perform the String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1 on an all-Beethoven program. Seats for the Wednesday concerts are $2 and $3.

Charles Munch will conduct a chamber section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist, at the first of six Friday evening chamber orchestra programs, at 8:30 p. m., in the Theater-Concert Hall, Friday, July 9. Seats for the Friday programs are $4 and $5.

* * *

NOTED SOLOISTS of the season will include Metropolitan Opera stars Eleanor Steber, soprano, and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; David Poleri and John McCollum, tenors; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone. Piano soloists are Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, Seymour Lipkin and Leo Smit. Violin soloists are Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt. Other assisting artists are Doriot Anthony, flutist; William Primrose, violist, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society; the Albeneri Trio; the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the Griller String Quartet, and the Kroll String Quartet.

In greatest demand, to date, is the opening weekend of the Berkshire Festival, July 9-10-11; with Series E, Aug. 7-8, and the Stravinsky-Mozart chamber orchestra program on Aug. 6, in popular favor also.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

MUSIC CENTER AT TANGLEWOOD TO OPEN TODAY

Munch to Greet Students And Guests This Afternoon

Lenox, July 3—The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 12th session, a six-week course of music studies for advanced students and professionals, at Tanglewood, tomorrow afternoon. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, will address students and guests at the opening exercises, at 3.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, and an orchestra trustee, will preside. Composer Aaron Copland, who is assistant director of the school, will introduce the faculty.

As at every opening of the school since its founding under the direction of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitsky in 1940, Randall Thompson's "Alleulia," composed for the first opening of the school, will be sung by the students. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, will conduct. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens following the exercises.

The first school performance will be given Thursday, at 8.30 p. in the Music Shed, when for the first time the symphony orchestra of 100 students in Dept. I will play together.

The first of six weekly chamber music concerts will be given by students of Department I in the Chamber Music Hall, will be the ing, July 11, at 10 a. m. That evening at 8.30 p. m., also in the Chamber Music Hall, will bring the first composers' forum by students of Department III studying with Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and guest composer Ernst Toch. Their works will be performed by fellow students and commented upon.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, are invited to all student concerts.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.
MIRROR

JUL 2

MUSIC

By RAYMOND KENDALL

HARVARD SENDS GLEE CLUB WEST; SUMMER MUSIC IN PROSPECT

Since the Harvard Glee Club shed its rah-rah tradition in the early 30s, its joint concerts with the Radcliffe Choral Society have become legendary, including appearances with the Boston Symphony, the Philadelphia Orchestra and through recordings.

Now, for the first time since 1911, the Harvard ensemble is touring west of the Mississippi, happily joined by its female contingent. Fortunately, Los Angeles was included in the itinerary, if the response of a sizable Royce Hall audience last night is any indication.

The concert, sponsored locally by UCLA and the Harvard Club of Southern California, was well-programmed, and set off to advantage the youthful enthusiasm of the singers and their mature concept of the music. They were guided by Veteran G. Wallace Woodworth, who has presided over the Cambridge ensemble since the retirement of Archibald Davison years back.

High points of the opening sacred groups were Mozart's "Regina Coeli" (K.108), the famous "Miserere" by Allegri, and the almost-20th-century-sounding "Gloria in Excelsis Deo" by Dufay. Worthy of mention, too, was the 1937 "Three Motets for Voices" by Preger.

Among a group of French chansons, the suave "Mon Coeur Se Recommander a Vous" and two of the "Trois Chansons" (1908) by Debussy, made the best impression.

There are choirs with finer tone quality and more elegance of sound than the Harvard-Radcliffe contingents, but none with better sensitivity to appropriateness of style and vitality of performance.

It is as though each singer thinks in advance of the quality of sound he wishes to produce. That their quality is so unified is the miracle!

After the intermission came choral works by Irving Fine (1937), Allen Sapp (1943), and Henry Leland Clarke (1928). Then, after the Brahms Love Songs and two Philippine songs, a stirring performance of the "Cum Sancto Spiritu" from Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Part of the charm of these young singers is their utter lack of sophistication. They love to sing and don't care who gets in on the secret. Their tour will close on July 10 when they join the Boston Symphony and guest soloists for a performance of Berlioz's "Damnation of

MILHAUD

Faust" at the Berkshire Festival in Lennox, Mass.

✓ ✓

On July 10 the Burbank Symphony Orchestra will present "A Night in Vienna" with Leo Damiani conducting. Soprano Bonnie Murray will be soloist for this opening summer concert season in the Burbank Starlight Amphitheater.

Five concerts of first performances by resident composers will be given on Aug. 18, 21, 25, 28 and 31, in connection with the Bennington (Vt.) Composer's Conference.

✓ ✓

A REMINDER: Hollywood Bowl opens on Thursday, July 15, with a concert conducted by Sir Adrian Boult, and featuring Eleanor Steber and Jan Peerce as soloists.

(Editor's Note: See Raymond Kendall every Sunday at 6:30 p.m., as a regular panel member of "Debut," television's best tribute to young musical hopefuls.)

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens This Week

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fifteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday evening at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. On Friday also at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

[175]

TIGHT BINDING

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL
JUN 27 1954

Stage and Music Here

Six Wisconsin Theaters Open Summer Season This Week

THE play's the thing this week in Wisconsin, with no less than six summer troupes starting their schedules of stage entertainment. Others will open their seasons in July.

"I Found April," a comedy by George Batson, will open the Port Players' 16th season at Oconomowoc high school Wednesday night, running through Sunday. A newcomer, Anne Starr, will take the leading role, with Pernell Roberts as leading man. Others in the cast include Bette Ramey, Adele Gordon and Jeanne Dixon.

The newly organized Port Washington Playhouse will begin its schedule of 10 plays with "Yes, M'Lord," running Thursday through Sunday night at the Port Washington city hall.

At Fish Creek, the Peninsula Players will stage John Patrick's mystery comedy, "Lo, and Behold!" in a six night run starting Tuesday to open their 20th summer season. The group's new leading lady, June Stewart, will be in the cast, which also includes Helen Bragdon and William Munchow. Other plays tentatively scheduled this summer include "Mister Roberts," "The Lady's Not for Burning," "Claudia," "On Borrowed Time" and "My Three Angels."

Noel Coward's "Present Laughter" will be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights by the Racine Summer theater on highway 32 just north of Racine. The cast includes Nancy Fowlkes, Bob Heise and Sally Petersen.

The Beloit College Court theater season already has started, with a guest actor list of seven players. Its second play in a series of nine will be Tennessee Williams' "Portrait of a Madonna," running Tuesday through Saturday night. Other plays to be given include "The Rivals," July 6-10; "The Time of the Cuckoo," July 13-17; "The Heiress," July 20-24; "Bury Me Not," July 27-31; "Jason," Aug. 3-7; "Hotel Universe," Aug. 10-14, and either "The Male Animal" or "The Devil Passes," Aug. 17-21.

June Stewart

Bette Ramey

At Williams Bay, the Belfry Players will open Thursday with "Mister Roberts," to be followed in later weeks by "Affairs of State," "Country Girl," "The Lady's Not for Burning," "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" and "Gigi."

In summer music, the 1954 Ravinia festival will open its regular season Tuesday night with William Steinberg conducting the Chicago symphony orchestra in a program of Wagner, Hindemith and Brahms. He will also conduct Thursday and Saturday nights, with Leon Fleisher, piano, and Michael Rabin, violinist, as soloists, and next Sunday afternoon with Fleisher as soloist.

The six week Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Mass., will commence July 7, with a schedule of six concerts of chamber music, six programs by the chamber section of the Boston symphony orchestra and 12 by the full orchestra. The festival will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of his major works.

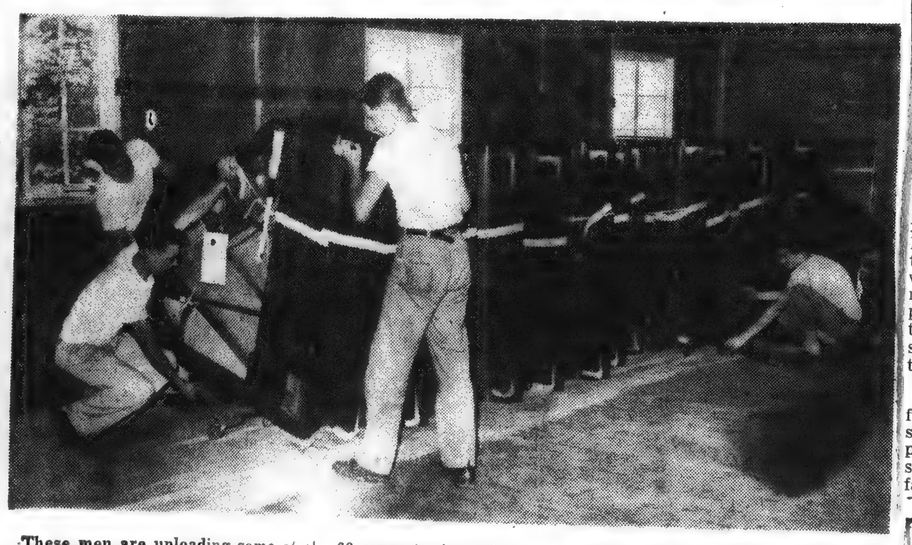
* * *

Wisconsin's own summer festival, the Peninsula event at Ephraim-Fish Creek in Door county, will be held for a second time, Aug. 9 to 21, with Thor Johnson, again in charge. Donald Gramm, ex-Milwaukee basso, and Grant Johannsen, noted pianist, will be among the guest soloists.

The College camp concerts at Williams Bay, Wis., will be held July 11, 14, 18, 25, Aug. 1, 8, 15, 18, 22. Forty members of the Chicago symphony will open the series, and the Milwaukee "Pops" will end it.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUN 30 1954

Piling Up Pianos for Berkshire Festival



These men are unloading some of the 69 concert pianos just arrived at Tanglewood, Lenox, for use in the Berkshire Music Festival and summer school which opens with the first concert Wednesday night, July 7, and continues through Aug. 15.

69 New Pianos for Six-Week Berkshire Festival Unloaded

Sixty-nine new concert pianos have just arrived at Tanglewood, Lenox, heralding the Berkshire Festival, which will open its six weeks of 24 concerts next Wednesday night, July 7.

The 69 pianos, which include 14 concert grands, will be used for the festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the festival, and for the big-name soloists who will appear in the festival.

17th Year of Festivals

This year's is the 17th annual festival at Tanglewood, the 15th since the Boston orchestra first took part. The honor of opening the season with next Wednesday's concert falls to Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio, who will give an all-Beethoven concert of chamber music. This will be in the Theater-Concert Hall, at 8.30 p. m. On Friday night, July 9, also at 8.30 in the same place, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

The "big" concerts, those in the Music Shed, start Saturday night, July 10, at 8.30, and Sunday afternoon at 2.30, and will continue each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 15.

The "little" concerts, in the Theater-Concert Hall, will be given each Wednesday and Friday nights through Aug. 11, and on Thursday night Aug. 12. The spectacle, 'Tanglewood on Parade," takes place on Friday, Aug. 13.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.
CALL
JUL 1 - 1954

Violinist Francescatti Seen One Of Best Waker Uppers

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)— "A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty: it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Waker Upper

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer-time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. "Sit," however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius, the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

Coaxing Needed

"A violin needs to have its merit brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, touring the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was five, and his American debut in 1939. He speaks English fluently, if not quite perfectly, but that will come, for he works at it all the time.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini — teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father— had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

Had Dried Up

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUN 28 1954

Berkshire Festival Ticket Sale Points To Record Attendance

It looks like the biggest year ever for the Berkshire Symphonic festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, where the 1954 season opens a week from this Wednesday.

Festival officials said today that more subscription tickets than ever before have been sold for the festival series. The series tickets this year cover 12 concerts in the huge music shed by the full Boston Symphony orchestra on six successive Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Separate tickets are being sold for six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts and six Friday evening Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts, all in the theater-music hall at Tanglewood. Separate concert tickets also are available now for the major series concerts.

Charles Munch, director of the festival and of the Boston orchestra, has announced two changes in the programs for the six-week season.

On Saturday evening, July 17, when Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra, two Debussy works, "St. Sebastian" and the tone poem "La Mere," will be substituted for two compositions by Franck. And on the Saturday, Aug. 14, program which Mr. Munch will conduct, Brahm's "Tragic" overture will be presented in place of a "Faust" overture by Wagner.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
MAY - 2 1954

High Mass May 22 at Tanglewood

PITTSFIELD, May 1—The Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Catholic bishop of the Springfield diocese, will celebrate a pontifical high mass at the Tanglewood Music Shed May 22, highlighting the biannual state convention of the Catholic Daughters of America, it was announced here today.

The mass will be the first celebrated at Tanglewood, site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's annual summer Berkshire Music Festival. More than 10,000 persons are expected to attend the mass, held in conjunction with the Marian Year observance.

A choir of 200 voices from Springfield's Cathedral high school will sing the Missa Tella Matutina by Carnevale, an Ave Verum by Guilmant and an Ave Maria by Archedelt. The Proper of the mass will be sung by a 100-voice combined choir of seminarians and priests from Berkshire county religious communities: the Jesuit Novitiate at Shadowbrook, Lenox, the Carmelite Seminary, Williamstown; the Marian Seminary, Lenox; the Franciscan Novitiate, Becket; and the Fathers of the Sacred Heart at Dehon Seminary, Great Barrington.

Delegates to the convention represent 62 courts of the Catholic Daughters in Massachusetts. Miss Catherine Dwyer of Boston, state grand regent of the organization, is co-chairman of the convention.

[176]

TIGHT BINDING

, CAL.
R
- 1954

Mus

By RAYMOND K

ARD SENDS GLEE
MMER MUSIC IN

Glee Club shed its oint concerts with the de legendary, includi ymphony, the Philade ngs.

time since semble is Mississippi, its female nately, Los uded in the sponse of a all audience indication.
sponsored and the Southern well-pro-
t off to ad-ful enthu-
gers and cept of the re guided Wallace has pre-
Cambridge
he retire-
Davison

he opening
Mozart's 06), the fay Allegri,
th-century-
Excelsis Worthy of the 1937
Voices" by of French ave "Mon

mander a the "Trois Debussy, ession.
with finer e elegance rvard-Radout none ity to ap-and vital-ch sing-ce of the wishes eir qual-

the mir-

sion came ving Fine 1943), and ke (1928).
hms Love Philippine rformance Spiritu"
B Minor. of these utter lack love to o gets in r will they join hony and formance nation of 55.

1954

Festival
aturated n Massafteenth
y Or-ll comoncerts
t 8:30
rt Hall
Mass., program aturing
and the Friday
eatre-
Munch,
Boston
will con-ra of Bos-
n an all-
's Foss

MILHA

Faust" at the P
tival in Lennox,

On July 10 the phony Orchestra
"A Night in Vie
Damiani conduc
Bonnie Murray
for this opening cert season in Starlight Amphi
Five concerts o ances by reside will be given on 28 and 31, in co
the Bennington
er's Conference.

A REMINDE
Bowl opens on T
15, with a concer
Sir Adrian Boult
Eleanor Steber a as soloists.

*(Editor's No
mond Kendall day at 6:30 p.m
lar panel m
"Debut," telev tribute to you hopefuls.)*

MILWAUKEE, WIS.
JOURNAL
JUN 27 1954

Stage and Music Here

Six Wisconsin Theaters Open Summer Season This Week

THE play's the thing this week in Wisconsin, with no less than six summer troupes starting their schedules of stage entertainment. Others will open their seasons in July.

"I Found April," a comedy by George Batson, will open the Port Players' 16th season at Oconomowoc high school Wednesday night, running through Sunday. A newcomer, Jane Starr, will take the leading role with Pernell Roberts as leading man. Others in the cast include Bette Ramey, Adele Gordon and Jeanne Dixon.

The newly organized Fort Washington Playhouse will begin its schedule of 10 plays with "Yes, M'Lord," running Thursday through Sunday night at the Port Washington city hall.

At Fish Creek, the Peninsula Players will stage John Patrick's mystery comedy, "Lo, and Behold!" in a six night run starting Tuesday to open their 20th summer season. The group's new leading lady, June Stewart, will be in the cast, which also includes Helen Bragdon and William Munchow. Other plays tentatively scheduled this summer include "Mister Roberts," "The Lady's Not for Burning," "Claudia," "On Borrowed Time" and "My Three Angels."

Noel Coward's "Present Laughter" will be presented Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights by the Racine Summer Theater on highway 32 just north of Racine. The cast includes Nancy Fowlkes, Bob Heise and Ellis Petersen.

The Beloit College Court theater season already has started, with a guest actor list of seven players. Its second play in a series of nine will be Tennessee Williams' "Portrait of a Madonna," running Tuesday through Saturday night. Other plays to be given include "The Rivals," July 6-10; "The Time of the Cuckoo," July 13-17; "The Heiress," July 20-24; "Bury Me Not," July 27-31; "Jason," Aug. 3-7; "Hotel Universe," Aug. 10-14, and either "The Male Animal" or "The Devil Passes," Aug. 17-21.

At Williams Bay, the Belfry Players will open Thursday with "Mister Roberts," to be followed in later weeks by "Affairs of State," "Country Girl," "The Lady's Not for Burning," "The Two Mrs. Carrolls" and "Gigi."

In summer music, the 1954 Ravinia festival will open its regular season Tuesday night with William Steinberg conducting the Chicago symphony orchestra in a program of Wagner, Hindemith and Brahms. He will also conduct Thursday and Saturday nights, with Leon Fleisher, piano, and Michael Rabin, violinist, as soloists, and next Sunday afternoon with Fleisher as soloist.

The six week Berkshire festival at Tanglewood, Mass., will commence July 7, with a schedule of six concerts of chamber music, six programs by the chamber section of the Boston symphony orchestra and 12 by the full orchestra. The festival will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of his major works.

* * *

Wisconsin's own summer festival, the Peninsula event at Ephraim-Fish Creek in Door county, will be held for a second time, Aug. 7 to 22, with Thor Johnson again in charge. Donald Gramm, ex-Milwaukee basso, and Grant Johannsen, noted pianist, will be among the guest soloists.

The College camp concerts at Williams Bay, Wis., will be held July 11, 14, 18, 25, Aug. 1, 8, 15, 18, 22. Forty members of the Chicago symphony will open the series, and the Milwaukee "Pops" will end it.

June Stewart

Bette Ramey

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUN 30 1954

Piling Up Pianos for Berkshire Festival

These men are unloading some of the 69 concert pianos just arrived at Tanglewood, Lenox, for use in the Berkshire Music Festival and summer school which opens with the first concert Wednesday night, July 7, and continues through Aug. 15.

69 New Pianos for Six-Week Berkshire Festival Unloaded

Sixty-nine new concert pianos have just arrived at Tanglewood, Lenox, heralding the Berkshire Festival, which will open its six weeks of 24 concerts next Wednesday night, July 7.

The 69 pianos, which include 14 concert grands, will be used for the festival concerts and rehearsals, for lessons and practice by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the festival, and for the big-name soloists who will appear in the festival.

17th Year of Festivals

This year's is the 17th annual festival at Tanglewood, the 15th since the Boston orchestra first took part. The honor of opening the season with next Wednesday's concert falls to Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio, who will give an all-Beethoven concert of chamber music. This will be in the Theater-Concert Hall, at 8.30 p. m. On Friday night, July 9, also at 8.30 in the same place, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

The "big" concerts, those in the Music Shed, start Saturday night, July 10, at 8.30, and Sunday afternoon at 2.30, and will continue each Saturday night and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 15.

The "little" concerts, in the Theater-Concert Hall, will be given each Wednesday and Friday nights through Aug. 11, and on Thursday night Aug. 12. The spectacle, 'Tanglewood on Parade," takes place on Friday, Aug. 13.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.
CALL
JUL 1 - 1954

Violinist Francescatti Seen One Of Best Waker Uppers

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK (AP)— "A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty: it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in another way.

"A violin is like a woman: if it's good at the start, it's still better after years."

Monsieur and madame both beists, speak with equal

though Mrs. Francescatti plays concerts: "One in a family is enough," she says.

Waker Upper

husband is one of the best

ers of violins and he has ed by the experts here

ed as a splendid Prince

this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as quit the concert platform for a summer-time rest in his home

the Berkshires, in Monterey, was to sit for this interview.

He, however, is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who,

besides French,

speaks English as well as French.

His car does not often sit still.

His fingers are agile from taking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius,

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini — teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father— had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

Had Dried Up

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is, in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer patina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some 'Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

Coaxing Needed

"A violin needs to have its merit brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was five, and his American debut in 1939. He speaks English fluently, if not quite perfectly, but that will come, for he works at it all the time.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUN 28 1954

Berkshire Festival Ticket Sale Points To Record Attendance

It looks like the biggest year ever for the Berkshire Symphonic festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, where the 1954 season opens a week from this Wednesday.

Festival officials said today that more subscription tickets than ever before have been sold for the festival series. The series tickets this year cover 12 concerts in the huge music shed by the full Boston Symphony orchestra on six successive Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Separate tickets are being sold for six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts and six Friday evening Bach-Mozart-Haydn concerts, all in the theater-music hall at Tanglewood. Separate concert tickets also are available now for the major series concerts.

Charles Munch, director of the festival and of the Boston orchestra, has announced two changes in the programs for the six-week season.

On Saturday evening, July 17, when Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra, two Debussy works, "St. Sebastian" and the tone poem "La Mere," will be substituted for two compositions by Franck. And on the Saturday, Aug. 14, program which Mr. Munch will conduct, Brahm's "Tragic" overture will be presented in place of a "Faust" overture by Wagner.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
MAY - 2 1954

High Mass May 22 at Tanglewood

PITTSFIELD, May 1—The Most Rev. Christopher J. Weldon, Catholic bishop of the Springfield diocese, will celebrate a pontifical high mass at the Tanglewood Music Shed May 22, highlighting the biannual state convention of the Catholic Daughters of America, it was announced here today.

The mass will be the first celebrated at Tanglewood, site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's annual summer Berkshire Music Festival. More than 10,000 persons are expected to attend the mass, held in conjunction with the Marian Year observance.

A choir of 200 voices from Springfield's Cathedral high school will sing the Missa Tella Matutina by Carnevale, an Ave Verum by Guilmant and an Ave Maria by Archedelt. The Proper of the mass will be sung by a 100-voice combined choir of seminarians and priests from Berkshire county religious communities: the Jesuit Novitiate at Shadowbrook, Lenox, the Carmelite Seminary, Williamstown; the Marian Seminary, Lenox; the Franciscan Novitiate, Becket; and the Fathers of the Sacred Heart at Dehon Seminary, Great Barrington.

Delegates to the convention represent 62 courts of the Catholic Daughters in Massachusetts. Miss Catherine Dwyer of Boston, state grand regent of the organization, is co-chairman of the convention.

[176]

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54

Berkshire Hill Notes . . .

Music is on the ascendancy in the Berkshire Hills . . . for both subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained in connection with the annual concerts, have passed last year's figures at this time.

As against last summer's fourteen foreign students, there are thirty to date, 12 from Canada, 4 from Cubt, 3 each from France and Israel, 1 each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti

Remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office — telephone Lenox (Mass.) 500 — which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 13th season gets under way, the box office will also be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts may also be filled on receipt of check or money order payable to the Boston Symphony and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54

CLAUDIO ARRAU, pianist, will be guest soloist with the Boston Symphony in an All-Beethoven Berkshire Festival program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Sun[illegible], at 2:30 p.m. He will play in a Beethoven super music program [illegible] Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p.m., which opens the six-week Festival season.

Route

Along the Pamlico marshes of North Carolina, looking toward Hatteras, the gulls swoop and cry; in Aspen, Colorado, Jacques Berzun wrote, "one feels nearer to the [illegible] San Francisco, the fog sifts eerily in from the s[illegible] sunlight blazed minutes before. The United S[illegible] delights and American resorts have as much variety as the country's climate and scenery.

For a pleasant change of scene, you might put your car on board Eastern Steamship's Evangeline at Boston and sail overnight to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; or fly over to Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard via Northeast Airlines. On Cape Cod between Buzzards Bay and the Atlantic there are still quiet estuaries, small and charming inns, uncrowded beaches. • The Celtic Ballet of Scotland will be introduced at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, Massachusetts, this summer; and at Tanglewood, Jean Morel will conduct the Berkshire Music Festival.

Elizabeth Schwarzkopf

BATHENAU-PIX

Benjamin Britten

BLAU-PIX

Henri Sauguet

ROY SCHATT

• Serge Diaghilev, sketched by Picasso (opposite left) with a lawyer friend, will be honored this summer, twenty-five years after his death, at the Edinburgh Festival. A legend in his lifetime as impresario of the Ballet Russe, and a lavish patron of all the arts, he commissioned Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps and much of the liveliest and most enduring music of the enterprising Twenties . . . Wilhelm Backhaus, in this country after a twenty-eight-year absence, gave a single Carnegie Hall recital of Beethoven piano works last year, so well received he'll be back this winter . . . Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, whose pure soprano voice was already famous here on recordings, dazzled both critics and public when she flew to New York for a one-night-stand debut last winter. Her first American tour is scheduled for autumn . . . Benjamin Britten's new opera The Turn of the Screw is to be presented in September at Venice's modern music festival. The libretto is based on Henry James's frightening story of haunted children . . . Henri Sauguet brought his reputation as France's most vigorous neo-Romantic composer to this country when he came to visit last winter. His opera Les Caprices de Marianne, based on the play by Alfred de Musset, will have its world première this summer in Aix-en-Provence . . . William Steinberg, after a highly satisfactory season as conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, is the musical director this summer of Colorado's internationally celebrated Aspen Institute . . . Samuel Barlow, composer, critic and entrepreneur, is currently giving the North Shore of Massachusetts its fourth summer of chamber music in the idyllic garden setting of Castle Hill . . . Jean Paul Morel, who last winter conducted programs of Debussy, Bizet and Sauguet in New York, will lead the orchestra at Tanglewood this month in an unexpectedly non-French program: works by Prokofiev, Strauss and Sir Edward Elgar . . . Walter Gieseking's interpretations of Debussy and Ravel have set a standard of performance not likely to be equaled on either side of the Atlantic. His plans for the coming season include a series of piano recitals, as well as an appearance with the New York Philharmonic.

William Steinberg

JOHN STEWART

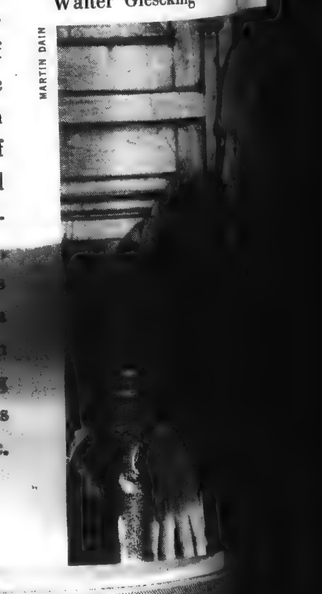
Samuel Barlow

JOHN STEWART

Jean Paul Morel

JOHN STEWART

Walter Gieseking



MARTIN DAIN

NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y.
JULY, 1954

Festival, L.I. Parks Ideal Short Trips

The first of this month's Club-recommended short motor trips is to the annual Berkshire Music Festival, held between July 7 and Aug. 15. The second suggestion is not really a trip at all, but rather a listing of the lesser-known state parks on Long Island which may be visited separately or as part of a tour.

Berkshire Festival

For many years, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., near the village of Lenox, has been the cultural highlight of the New England summer season. This year's program indicates that the concerts will draw even greater crowds that ever before.

Music lovers from around the world have learned that whether they have seats in the acoustically perfect Music Shed, or merely sprawl on the spacious lawn, the music is uniformly beautiful and enjoyable.

Under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch, a series of formal and informal concerts will be given Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from early July to mid-August.

Such greats in the field of classical music as Dr. Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Lukas Foss will conduct on week-ends.

Accommodations are at a premium in the area during the festival, and advance reservations are advisable. The round-trip mileage to Tanglewood is 282 miles. The routing is Taconic State Parkway, U.S. 44 to Canaan, Conn., and U.S. 7 to Lenox.

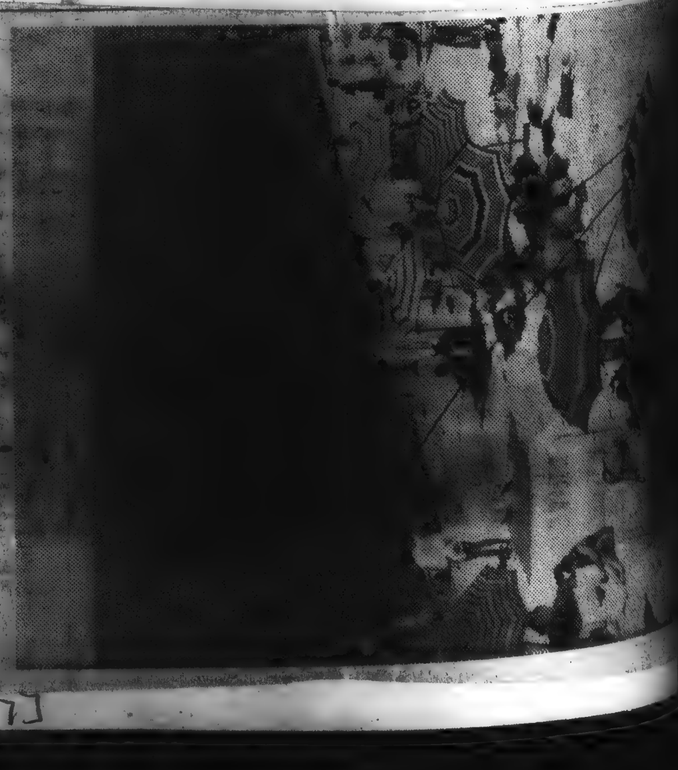
Long Island Parks

Almost ev[illegible] is familiar with Jones Beach State Park and its facilities, but all too many city dwellers fail to take advantage of the other fine state parks on Long Island.

Here are a few which have all facilities to provide for a pleasant interlude. Some are but a short distance away, others can be visited on a week end.

Belmont Lake, 42 Miles

The lake is surrounded by large wooded tracts with picnic grounds. Facilities include canoeing, rowboating and bridle paths.



INFORMATION OBSCURED

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54

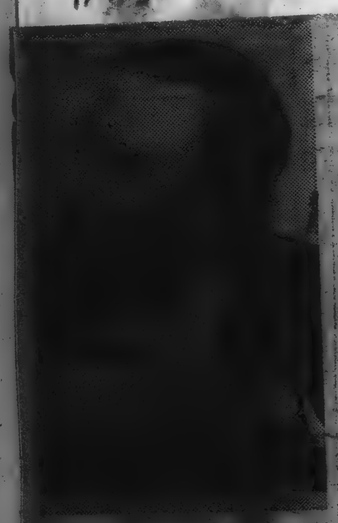
Berkshire Hill Notes . . .

Music is on the ascendancy in the Berkshire Hills . . . for both subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained in connection with the annual concerts, have passed last year's figures at this time.

As against last summer's fourteen foreign students, there are thirty to date, 12 from Canada, 4 from Cubt, 3 each from France and Israel, 1 each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti.

Remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office — telephone Lenox (Mass.) 500 — which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season gets under way, the box office will also be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts may also be filled on receipt of check or money order payable to the Boston Symphony and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54



CLAUDIO ARRAU, pianist, will be guest soloist with the Boston Symphony in an All-Beethoven Berkshire Festival program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. He will also play in a Beethoven chamber music program in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p.m., which opens the six-week Festival season.

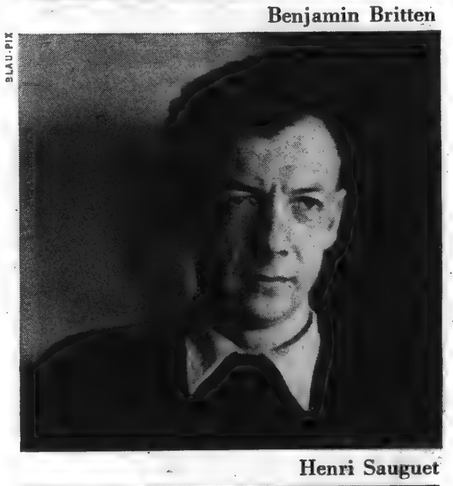
Along the Pamlico marshes of North Carolina, looking toward Hatteras, the gulls swoop and cry; in Aspen, Colorado, Jacques Barzun wrote, [illegible] nearer to the [illegible] San Francisco, the [illegible] sunlight blazed [illegible] delights and [illegible] scenery.

Autumn, 1954:

Music en Route

Elizabeth Schwarzkopf

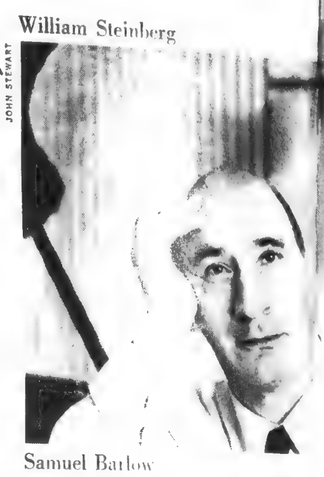
Benjamin Britten



Henri Sauguet

• Serge Diaghilev, sketched by Picasso (opposite left) with a lawyer friend, will be honored this summer, twenty-five years after his death, at the Edinburgh Festival. A legend in his lifetime as impresario of the Ballet Russe, and a lavish patron of all the arts, he commissioned Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps and much of the liveliest and most enduring music of the enterprising Twenties . . . Wilhelm Backhaus, in this country after a twenty-eight-year absence, gave a single Carnegie Hall recital of Beethoven piano works last year, so well received he'll be back this winter . . . Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, whose pure soprano voice was already famous here on recordings, dazzled both critics and public when she flew to New York for a one-night-stand debut last winter. Her first American tour is scheduled for autumn . . . Benjamin Britten's new opera The Turn of the Screw is to be presented in September at Venice's modern music festival. The libretto is based on Henry James's frightening story of haunted children . . . Henri Sauguet brought his reputation as France's most vigorous neo-Romantic composer to this country when he came to visit last winter. His opera Les Caprices de Marianne, based on the play by Alfred de Musset, will have its world première this summer in Aix-en-Provence . . . William Steinberg, after a highly satisfactory season as conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, is the musical director this summer of Colorado's internationally celebrated Aspen Institute . . . Samuel Barlow, composer, critic and entrepreneur, is currently giving the North Shore of Massachusetts its fourth summer of chamber music in the idyllic garden setting of Castle Hill . . . Jean Paul Morel, who last winter conducted programs of Debussy, Bizet and Sauguet in New York, will lead the orchestra at Tanglewood this month in an unexpectedly non-French program: works by Prokofiev, Strauss and Sir Edward Elgar . . . Walter Gieseking's interpretations of Debussy and Ravel have set a standard of performance not likely to be equaled on either side of the Atlantic. His plans for the coming season include a series of piano recitals, as well as an appearance with the New York Philharmonic.

William Steinberg



Samuel Barlow

Jean Paul Morel

Walter Gieseking

NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y.
JULY, 1954

Festival, L.I. Parks Ideal Short Trips

The first of this month's Club-recommended short motor trips is to the annual Berkshire Music Festival, held between July 7 and Aug. 15. The second suggestion is not really a trip at all, but rather a listing of the lesser-known state parks on Long Island which may be visited separately or as part of a tour.

Berkshire Festival

For many years, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., near the village of Lenox, has been the cultural highlight of the New England summer season. This year's program indicates that the concerts will draw even greater crowds than ever before.

Music lovers from around the world have learned that whether they have seats in the acoustically perfect Music Shed, or merely sprawl on the spacious lawn, the music is uniformly beautiful and enjoyable.

Under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch, a series of formal and informal concerts will be given Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from early July to mid-August.

Such greats in the field of classical music as Dr. Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Lukas Foss will conduct on weekends.

Accommodations are at a premium in the area during the festival, and advance reservations are advisable. The round-trip mileage to Tanglewood is 282 miles. The routing is Taconic State Parkway, U.S. 44 to Canaan, Conn., and U.S. 7 to Lenox.

Long Island Parks

Almost everyone is familiar with Jones Beach State Park and its facilities, but all too many city dwellers fail to take advantage of the other fine state parks on Long Island.

Here are a few which have all facilities to provide for a pleasant interlude. Some are but a short distance away, others can be visited on a week-end.

Belmont Lake, 42 Miles

The lake is surrounded by large wooded tracts with picnic grounds. Facilities include canoeing, rowboating and bridle paths.

INFORMATION OBSCURED

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54

Berkshire Hill Notes . . .

Music is on the ascendancy in the Berkshire Hills . . . for both subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire Festival series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained in connection with the annual concerts, have passed last year's figures at this time.

As against last summer's fourteen foreign students, there are thirty to date, 12 from Canada, 4 from Cubt, 3 each from France and Israel, 1 each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti

Remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office — telephone Lenox (Mass.) 400 — which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season gets under way, the box office will also be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts may also be filled on receipt of check or money order payable to the Boston Symphony and accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

FAIRFIELD, CONN
NEWS
7/1/54

CLAUDIO ARRAU, pianist, will be guest soloist with the Boston Symphony in an All-Beethoven Berkshire Festival program in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. He will also play in a Beethoven chamber music program in the Theatre-Concert Hall on Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p.m., which opens the six-week Festival season.

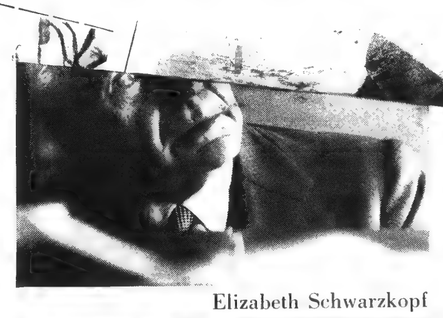
HARPER'S BAZAAR
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 1954

Along the Pamlico marshes of North Carolina, looking toward Hatteras, the gulls swoop and cry: in Aspen, Colorado, Jacques Barzun wrote, [illegible]rer to the stars than to the earth"; in San Francisco, the [illegible]veloping the streets where sunlight blazed [illegible]discovered delights and [illegible]te and scenery.

autumn, 1954:

[illegible] still q[illegible]

Music en Roule

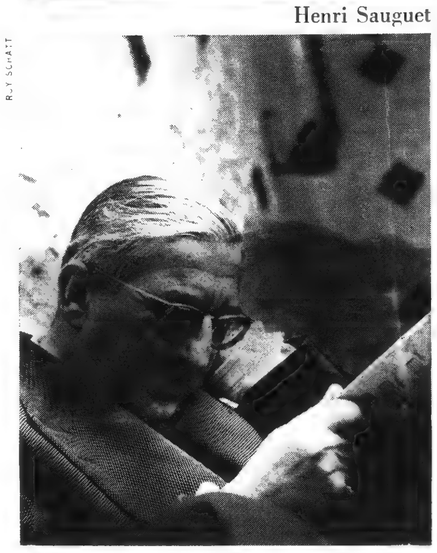


Elizabeth Schwarzkopf

RATHENAU-PIX

Benjamin Britten

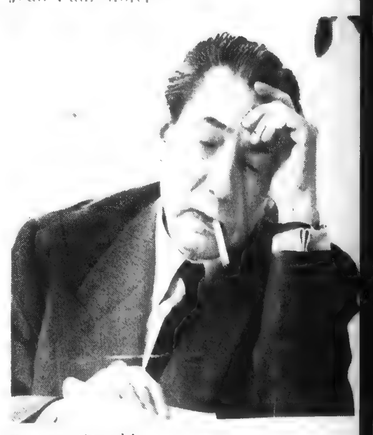
Henri Sauguet



• Serge Diaghilev, sketched by Picasso (opposite left) with a lawyer friend, will be honored this summer, twenty-five years after his death, at the Edinburgh Festival. A legend in his lifetime as impresario of the Ballet Russe, and a lavish patron of all the arts, he commissioned Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps and much of the liveliest and most enduring music of the enterprising Twenties . . . Wilhelm Backhaus, in this country after a twenty-eight-year absence, gave a single Carnegie Hall recital of Beethoven piano works last year, so well received he'll be back this winter . . . Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, whose pure soprano voice was already famous here on recordings, dazzled both critics and public when she flew to New York for a one-night-stand debut last winter. Her first American tour is scheduled for autumn . . . Benjamin Britten's new opera The Turn of the Screw is to be presented in September at Venice's modern music festival. The libretto is based on Henry James's frightening story of haunted children . . . Henri Sauguet brought his reputation as France's most vigorous neo-Romantic composer to this country when he came to visit last winter. His opera Les Caprices de Marianne, based on the play by Alfred de Musset, will have its world première this summer in Aix-en-Provence . . . William Steinberg, after a highly satisfactory season as conductor of the Pittsburgh Orchestra, is the musical director this summer of Colorado's internationally celebrated Aspen Institute . . . Samuel Barlow, composer, critic and entrepreneur, is currently giving the North Shore of Massachusetts its fourth summer of chamber music in the idyllic garden setting of Castle Hill . . . Jean Paul Morel, who last winter conducted programs of Debussy, Bizet and Sauguet in New York, will lead the orchestra at Tanglewood this month in an unexpectedly non-French program: works by Prokofiev, Strauss and Sir Edward Elgar . . . Walter Gieseking's interpretations of Debussy and Ravel have set a standard of performance not likely to be equaled on either side of the Atlantic. His plans for the coming season include a series of piano recitals, as well as an appearance with the New York Philharmonic.

Willia[illegible]

Jean Paul Morel



Walter Gieseking

NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y
JULY, 1954

Festival, L.I. Parks Ideal Short Trips

The first of this month's Club-recommended short motor trips is to the annual Berkshire Music Festival, held between July 7 and Aug. 15. The second suggestion is not really a trip at all, but rather a listing of the lesser-known state parks on Long Island which may be visited separately or as part of a tour.

Berkshire Festival

For many years, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., near the village of Lenox, has been the cultural highlight of the New England summer season. This year's program indicates that the concerts will draw even greater crowds than ever before.

Music lovers from around the world have learned that whether they have seats in the accoustically perfect Music Shed, or merely sprawl on the spacious lawn, the music is uniformly beautiful and enjoyable.

Under the direction of Dr. Charles Munch, a series of formal and informal concerts will be given Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday from early July to mid-August.

Such greats in the field of classical music as Dr. Munch, Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Lukas Foss will conduct on week-ends.

Accommodations are at a premium in the area during the festival, and advance reservations are advisable. The round-trip mileage to Tanglewood is 282 miles. The routing is Taconic State Parkway, U.S. 44 to Canaan, Conn., and U.S. 7 to Lenox.

Long Island Parks

Almost everyone is familiar with Jones Beach State Park and its facilities, but all too many city dwellers fail to take advantage of the other fine state parks on Long Island.

Here are a few which have all facilities to provide for a pleasant interlude. Some are but a short distance away, others can be visited on a week-end.

Belmont Lake, 42 Miles

The lake is surrounded by large wooded tracts with picnic grounds. Facilities include canoeing, rowboating and bridle paths.

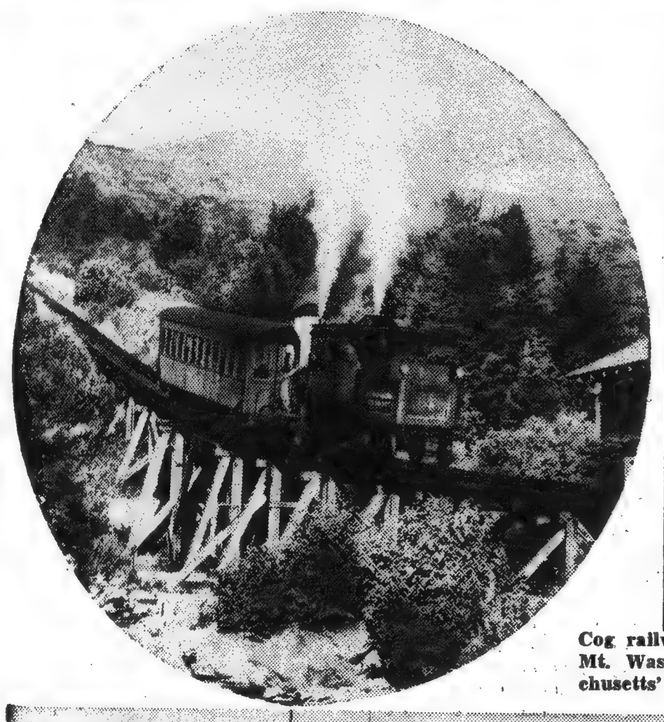
NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y
JULY, 1954

Travel & Vacation Section

NOTHING LIKE NEW ENGLAND

By Jack Westeyn

New England bears its age well. The countryside is scenic despite that aged-in-the-woods look . . . many of its sturdy natives are descended from the Pilgrims . . . its customs and traditions can be traced back to Colonial times and before. In fact, it is just this maturity, a sort of rock-ribbed solidness, which has pleased vacationers for years.



Cog railway chugs way up to summit of Mt. Washington. Below, one of Massachusetts' summer art colonies.

It would be a serious mistake, however, to assume that there is absolutely nothing new in the area. For New England, mindful of its position as the top-drawer attraction in the East, goes all out to please the tourist. It can boast of some of the finest resorts in the world, offering the last word in luxury and convenience.

The suggested routing for the Club-recommended tour, as shown on the accompanying map, is designed to take in the best of New England, except for Cape Cod. This resort area is so full of things to do and see that it can be fully appreciated only in a longer visit. As a result, many tourists prefer to conserve time and make it the destination of a separate tour.

Scenic Parkways Lead To Historic Boston

The first leg of the tour is the scenic drive over fine parkways to Boston. This city is so rich in history that several days might be spent profitably here. In a short time, however, the tourist will certainly wish to see Boston Common, Old North Church, Bunker Hill Monument, Boston Harbor, Faneuil Hall, and other landmarks so closely associated with our early history. Northeast of Boston is the delightful Cape Ann peninsula. This colorful rock coastal region provides a fine opportunity for bathing, sightseeing, fishing and the usual seashore activities.

If time is of the essence, the trip north to Portland is over the New Hampshire-Maine Turnpike. An excellent toll road, it enables the tourist to save many miles and much time. The alternate route—U. S. 1—skirts the rock-bound coast. Beach towns like Kennebunk Beach, York Harbor, Ogunquit and Old Orchard Beach are ideal for an overnight stop. Incidentally, if you are brave enough to test the frigid waters off the Maine coast, be prepared to incur the scorn of the natives. Maine water, they believe, is fine for lobsters—and that's all.

Picturesque Acadia Well Worth a Visit

The resort town of Bar Harbor and near-by Acadia National Park are well worth a visit, even for a short stay. Acadia's scenery is a unique combination of mountains, forests and rocky coast. Bar Harbor, of course, is one of the most fashionable resorts in the world.

Continuing through the lake district of Maine, fisherman may break out rod and reel for a bit of angling in the hundreds of sparkling lakes. For the less active, a particularly fine resort, complete with excellent summer playhouse, is located near Skowhegan.

High spot of the tour is an unforgettable drive through the White Mountains of New Hampshire. Each of the principal mountains is named for a President of the United States, with Mt. Washington as the key point of interest. There are two ways of reaching the summit of this peak—by a thrilling cog railway ride, or by car using a toll road. The latter is not recommended for some models of cars with automatic drive.

Nature's Handiwork Seen in White Mts.

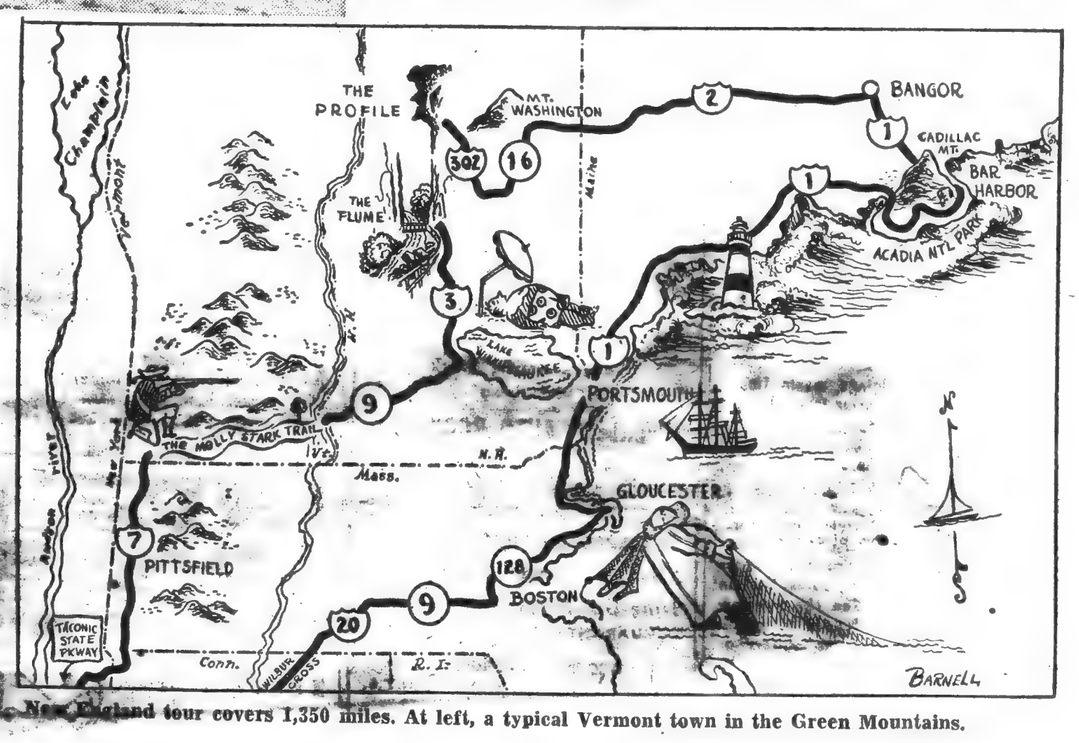
An aerial tramway to the top of Cannon Mountain is another feature of a visit to the White Mountains. The view from the summit is unsurpassed. Most famous of all local landmarks is the "Profile," better known as the "Old Man of the Mountain." This great stone face is the handiwork of Nature though it almost seems to have been carved by human hands.

Lake Winnipesaukee, in the center of the state, has rightfully earned its reputation as an excellent recreation center. A bit of adventure can be had in visiting the many fascinating caves and islands.

Vermont's Green Mountains have a charm all their own and are certain to afford opportunity for pleasant hours of relaxation. The route is along the historic Molly Stark Trail, leading from Brattleboro to Bennington.

The final leg is through the near-by Berkshire and Litchfield Hills. The numerous resorts that dot this area are popular all year.

Although the 1,350-mile tour is tailor-made for a two week vacation, it can be lengthened or shortened as desired. Certainly, if time permits, stops should be made at Cape Cod as well as the Berkshire Music Festival. An alternate route home from the White Mountains is via U.S. 2 to Burlington, Vt., across Lake Champlain by ferry and down U.S. 9.



New England tour covers 1,350 miles. At left, a typical Vermont town in the Green Mountains.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

Second Thoughts in Music

Appeal of Chamber Music Recognized at Tanglewood

Berkshire Festival Wednesday Night Series Added to Those of Friday; Music of Hector Berlioz to Provide Focal Point of Concerts in Music Shed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Thousands of people will be making the trek to Tanglewood this week, for the 17th Berkshire Festival opens Wednesday night. This is the 17th season of the festival and the 15th since the Boston Symphony orchestra first participated. Under the leadership of the late Serge Koussevitzky, the festival assumed international importance and the present Boston Symphony orchestra conductor, Charles Munch is carrying on the tradition.

More Chamber Music

There is one important change in the schedule this season. It will last six weeks and embrace a total of 24 concerts. Another new departure is a series of chamber music concerts to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall each Wednesday evening, commencing at 8.30 p. m. It will be most interesting to see the reaction and public support.

Here in Springfield there is a demand for chamber music concerts, but when one is given few attend. Ben Kalman tells us he is going to make every effort to provide chamber music for Springfield next season. We wish him luck, but are keeping our fingers crossed.

Turning back to the Berkshire Festival, it has already been noted that the music of Hector Berlioz will provide the focal part of the Shed concerts. Charles Munch has an affinity for this music and we may be certain that some memorable performances will be heard of such works as "The Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," and several overtures, etc.

Soloists and Chorus

The first of the Shed concerts will be conducted by Mr. Munch on Saturday night, at 8.30. The work will be "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. The participants will include Eleanor Steber as Marguerite; David Poleri as Faust; Martial Singher as Mephistopheles and Donald Gramm as Brander. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will form the chorus.

The veteran conductor Pierre Monteux will direct the Sunday afternoon concert, July 11, to begin at 2.30. The soloist will be Claude Arrau, pianist, who is observing the 30th anniversary of his initial appearance with the Boston Symphony orchestra, then under the leadership of Mr. Monteux. Arrau will play Beethoven Concerto No. 5. This will be an all Beethoven program with the "Leonore" overture No. 3 and the fifth symphony included. The conservative should have a wonderful time, for Pierre Monteux interprets Beethoven just as they would wish.

Wednesday and Friday Concerts

The first of the chamber music concerts will be given Wednesday night at 8.30 p. m. by Mr. Arrau, who will play three Beethoven sonatas including the "Appassionata" and the Bel Arte Trio composed of Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph di Pasquale, viola and Martin Hoherman, cello. They will be heard in the String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 by Beethoven.

On Friday night, Mr. Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony, in five of the Bach "Brandenburg" concerti. Lukas Foss will be the piano soloist. This concert will begin at 8.30 p. m. Other soloists will include Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin.

South Mountain Concerts

Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Alexander Schneider, violinist; the Kroll String Quartet and the Juilliard String Quartet will be among those appearing during the nine South Mountain concerts to be given during July and August.

Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director of the South Mountain Association, has arranged a series of six Saturday afternoon chamber music concerts beginning Thursday at 4 p. m. and continuing through August 14.

Alexander Schneider and Artur Balsam will perform all the Beethoven sonatas in a cycle of three concerts to be presented July 10, 24 and Aug. 7. Leontyne Pri, soprano, wife of William Warfield, will present a recital on July 17, comprised of works commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation. Rarely heard trios for horn, violin and piano will be heard on July 31 performed by Mr. Schneider, Mr. Balsam and John Barrows. The Saturday series will close Aug. 14 with a concert by the Juilliard String Quartet.

As a special tribute to Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, her son, Albert Sprague Coolidge, will give a festival of chamber music in her memory, Saturday, Aug. 21 at 11 a. m. and Sunday, Aug. 22 at 4 p. m. Among the artists participating will be Rudolf Serkin, the Kroll Quartet, a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony and Alexander Schneider.

We are looking forward to all the music the Berkshires will offer this summer. There seems to be something to satisfy ever taste as far as the classical repertory goes. At least there seems to be a sincere effort on the part of those directing these affairs to provide well balanced programs of fine music performed by one of the greatest orchestras and by as fine soloists as may be found these days.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
JUL 13 1954

All-Expense Berkshire Tours

Special all-expense tours to the Berkshire Music Festival are offered by Ski Bird Tours every weekend through August 16. Departures are scheduled for 6:00 p.m. every Friday, returning to New York City on Sunday evenings. Rates include de luxe transportation by motorcoach, accommodations at the Sheraton Hotel in Pittsfield, sports facilities, local sightseeing and all tips and taxes. Attendance at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival is also featured and available to tour patrons.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
JUL 11 1954

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux; Claudio Arrau, pianist. Beethoven program: Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5; Symphony No. 5.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. The Albeneri Trio.
Trio in B, Op. 8 ..... Brahms
Trio in D minor ..... Martinu
Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ..... Beethoven

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra. Hugh Ross and Charles Munch, conductors.
Bach program: Cantata No. 93, Wer nur den lieben Gott; Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Pierre Monteux, conductor. Vera Francesch, pianist.
Excerpts from St. Sebastian;
La Mer ..... Debussy
Les Djinns for Piano and Orchestra:
Symphony in D minor ..... Franck

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, conductor; Leo Smit, pianist.
Iberia ..... Debussy
Piano Concerto ..... Copland
Symphonie Fantastique ..... Berlioz

Eagle
gle, Wednesday, July 14, 1954

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Chamber music recital by Albeneri Trio. Tanglewood theater-concert hall, Lenox.

8:45—"My Three Angels," starring Paul Lipson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"My Three Angels." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 p.m.—Dance Festival, starring Danilova and Charles Weidman, Jacob's Pillow, Lee.

JUST ABOUT EVERYTHING: Understand Tanglewood is alert to hazards of "Central Park" type of crime in the dark reaches of the property during concerts. Patroled thoroughly by uniformed and plain-[illegible]hesmen . . . Echo of Legion [illegible]

NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER
JUL 4 - 1954

Music festival to open

Special to The Star-Ledger

LENOX, Mass.—The music of the world's greatest composers played by some of America's finest musicians rings out over the Berkshire hills again with the start of the six-week summer music festival at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening.

The Wednesday evening concert will mark the start of a series of six evening programs of chamber music, featuring various well known chamber music groups. The first program will offer the Bel Arte Trio and Claudio Arrau at the piano in all-Beethoven evening.

• • •

CHAMBER ORCHESTRA concerts will be given every Friday evening for six weeks, starting this week, under the direction of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Symphony concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will start on Saturday evening and will be given every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 15.

The Berkshire Center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston orchestra to provide the opportunity for music study in connection with the festival concerts. About 400 students are enrolled at the center. Activities of the school, together with the festival performances, make concerts in some form an almost daily occurrence at Tanglewood. Student concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

• • •

WITHIN EASY driving distance of the music center is the Jacob's Pillow dance center where leading artists also teach and perform during the summer festival. Courses in ballet, modern and ethnic dance are given at the school and outstanding dancers in every realm of the dance field appear for weekend performances, which are open to the public.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 4 - 1954

Music Notes:

Berkshire Festival

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York Friday by Air France from Paris, and drove to his summer residence at Elm Court, Lenox, Mass.

Mr. Munch immediately began preparations for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony as a Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday night with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukes Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance at Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

ASIDE TO MUSIC lovers, and men with an eye or two for a pretty face. That flutist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra who tootles away as cute as a button, has just been wed. Relax, and enjoy the music.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

Tanglewood Time

It will be 20 years in August since the late Henry Hadley conducted the first concert of the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival, forerunner of the present vast series of musical productions at Tanglewood. Some 65 musicians from the New York Philharmonic Symphony performed in a comparatively crude setting on the Dan Hanna farm in Stockbridge that moonlit summer night in 1934.

Two years later Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra took over, though not until 1938 was the Music Shed, originally called the Pavilion of Music, dedicated. Now, among all the other summer music centers in America, none is quite like Tanglewood. Though both Dr. Hadley and Dr. Koussevitzky are gone, the educational edifice they helped erect lives on, and continues to expand.

The Tanglewood concerts start this week, with welcoming ceremonies today and the first of the chamber music programs Wednesday evening. This year for the first time there will be 12 major concerts, instead of nine, in the big wedge-shaped Shed, open on three sides; six will take place on Saturday nights, starting this week, and six on Sunday afternoons.

This year's festival is to feature the works of the noted French composer, Hector Berlioz, by way of celebrating the 150th anniversary of his birth, which occurred, incidentally, Dec. 11, 1803. In addition to "The Damnation of Faust," the "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony and the "Requiem," a variety of Berlioz' shorter works —"Harold in Italy," the "Fantastic Symphony" and others—will be presented, all conducted by Charles Munch. Some of these compositions are orchestral, others require soloists and choral groups.

Hector Berlioz was a brilliant and eccentric character, temperamentally akin to Poe and Byron, Liszt and Richard Wagner. Experts are generally agreed that his prime service to musical art was in perfecting the science of orchestration; his themes may lack inspiration and his limited technical knowledge may have resulted in an absence of coherent construction, but his music contains highly colorful description and portrayal.

Berlioz was a man of imagination, a subjectivist, a visionary whose fantasy often jumped its bounds. He wrote bold, romantic music and has been called the greatest of all those pathological composers who never succeeded in fully subjugating their creative powers.

Tanglewood has many facets, not least important of which are the student activities of the Berkshire Music Center summer school. Throngs even surpassing those of last season are expected to enjoy the pastoral environment and listen to such artists as Claudio Arrau, Zino Francescatti, William Primrose, Ruth Posselt and Eleanor Steber. But, after all, the main attraction is the music of the masters, and there the spirit of Bach and Mozart, Brahms and Beethoven, Dvorak and Debussy, as well as Berlioz, will be exalted.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

YWCA PLANNING TRIP TO STURBRIDGE VILLAGE

All-Day Visit Scheduled Wednesday

The Young Women's Christian Association will sponsor a trip to Sturbridge Village Wednesday. A chartered bus will leave the "YW," 26 Howard St., at 8, and will return at 4 that afternoon. Picnic lunches may be carried by those making the trip, or luncheon may be purchased at the village.

Sturbridge is a replica of an American village of the early 1800's. It is extremely interesting to go through the buildings that have been taken there from all over New England and to wander around the grounds getting a good idea of how everyday chores of life were carried on so many years ago.

The "YW" also will sponsor two trips to Tanglewood, Lenox, where the Boston Symphony orchestra holds its summer concerts. These trips will be made Sunday, the 11th and 18th.

Reservations for the trips may be made by calling the "YW" at anytime. Seats are limited, so reservations should be made as early as possible.

• • •

Miss Martha Kirkland of Oak St., Indian Orchard, is spending the holiday week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Kirkland, at their summer home at Hawk's Nest Beach, Old Lyme, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland are established there for the season.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

WEEKLY EXHIBITS AT TANGLEWOOD

Paintings, Sculpture, Photos to Be Shown

Lenox, July 3—A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture and photographs again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at Tanglewood, here, and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Three large wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn, of West Stockbridge, will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer, in the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. They are "Early Spring," a seven-foot study symbolizing a plant unfolding, done last winter at the artist's studio in Glen Head, L. I.; "School of Fish," a laminated work, 60 inches long, mounted on wooden base, created in 1953; and "Horses," a panel two feet by five feet, finished this year.

The first art exhibit at Tanglewood, starting Saturday, July 3, will be of photographs of music and musicians, entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge Rd., which was recently housed in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

Week of July 12, will feature an exhibit of sculpture by Miss Frances Epping of Lenox, director of the Sculpture Workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox Library gardens. Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at the Lenox School, will exhibit paintings week commencing July 19. Additional sculpture and paintings of Homer Gunn will be on display week of July 26. Miss Carol Clemworth, of Stockbridge, will show modern paintings week beginning August 2. From August 9 to 15, paintings will be on view by Lawrence B. McCoy, vice-president of the Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt.

During the summer, at the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is co-operating in the Childs Gallery of Boston, in exhibiting the Wilson Collection of etchings, engravings and lithographs of famous composers.

[179]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

Second Thoughts in Music

Appeal of Chamber Music Recognized at Tanglewood

Berkshire Festival Wednesday Night Series Added to Those of Friday; Music of Hector Berlioz to Provide Focal Point of Concerts in Music Shed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Thousands of people will be making the trek to Tanglewood this week, for the 17th Berkshire Festival opens Wednesday night. This is the 17th season of the festival and the 15th since the Boston Symphony orchestra first participated. Under the leadership of the late Serge Koussevitzky, the festival assumed international importance and the present Boston Symphony orchestra conductor, Charles Munch is carrying on the tradition.

More Chamber Music

There is one important change in the schedule this season. It will last six weeks and embrace a total of 24 concerts. Another new departure is a series of chamber music concerts to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall each Wednesday evening, commencing at 8.30 p. m. It will be most interesting to see the reaction and public support.

Here in Springfield there is a demand for chamber music concerts, but when one is given few attend. Ben Kalman tells us he is going to make every effort to provide chamber music for Springfield next season. We wish him luck, but are keeping our fingers crossed.

Turning back to the Berkshire Festival, it has already been noted that the music of Hector Berlioz will provide the focal part of the Shed concerts. Charles Munch has an affinity for this music and we may be certain that some memorable performances will be heard of such works as "The Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," and several overtures, etc.

Soloists and Chorus

The first of the Shed concerts will be conducted by Mr. Munch on Saturday night, at 8.30. The work will be "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. The participants will include Eleanor Steber as Marguerite; David Poleri as Faust; Martial Singher as Mephistopheles and Donald Gramm as Brander. The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society will form the chorus.

The veteran conductor Pierre Monteux will direct the Sunday afternoon concert, July 11, to begin at 2.30. The soloist will be Claude Arrau, pianist, who is observing the 30th anniversary of his initial appearance with the Boston Symphony orchestra, then under the leadership of Mr. Monteux. Arrau will play Beethoven Concerto No. 5. This will be an all Beethoven program with the "Leonore" overture No. 3 and the fifth symphony included. The conservative should have a wonderful time, for Pierre Monteux interprets Beethoven just as they would wish.

Wednesday and Friday Concerts

The first of the chamber music concerts will be given Wednesday night at 8.30 p. m. by Mr. Arrau, who will play three Beethoven sonatas including the "Appassionata" and the Bel Arte Trio composed of Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Martin Hoherman, cello. They will be heard in the String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1 by Beethoven.

On Friday night, Mr. Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony, in five of the Bach "Brandenburg" concerti. Lukas Foss will be the piano soloist. This concert will begin at 8.30 p. m. Other soloists will include Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin.

South Mountain Concerts

Rudolf Serkin, pianist; Alexander Schneider, violinist; the Kroll String Quartet and the Juilliard String Quartet will be among those appearing during the nine South Mountain concerts to be given during July and August.

Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director of the South Mountain Association, has arranged a series of six Saturday afternoon chamber music concerts beginning Thursday at 4 p. m. and continuing through August 14.

Alexander Schneider and Artur Balsam will perform all the Beethoven sonatas in a cycle of three concerts to be presented July 10, 24 and Aug. 7. Leontyne Pri, soprano, wife of William Warfield, will present a recital on July 17, comprised of works commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation. Rarely heard trios for horn, violin and piano will be heard on July 31 performed by Mr. Schneider, Mr. Balsam and John Barrows. The Saturday series will close Aug. 14 with a concert by the Juilliard String Quartet.

As a special tribute to Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, her son, Albert Sprague Coolidge, will give a festival of chamber music in her memory, Saturday, Aug. 21 at 11 a. m. and Sunday, Aug. 22 at 4 p. m. Among the artists participating will be Rudolf Serkin, the Kroll Quartet, a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony and Alexander Schneider.

We are looking forward to all the music the Berkshires will offer this summer. There seems to be something to satisfy ever taste as far as the classical repertory goes. At least there seems to be a sincere effort on the part of those directing these affairs to provide well balanced programs of fine music performed by one of the greatest orchestras and by as fine soloists as may be found these days.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

JUL 13 1954

All-Expense Berkshire Tours

Special all-expense tours to the Berkshire Music Festival are offered by Ski Bird Tours every weekend through August 16. Departures are scheduled for 6:00 p.m. every Friday, returning to New York City on Sunday evenings. Rates include de luxe transportation by motorcoach, accommodations at the Sheraton Hotel in Pittsfield, sports facilities, local sightseeing and all tips and taxes. Attendance at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival is also featured and available to tour patrons.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES

JUL 11 1954

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux; Claudio Arrau, pianist. Beethoven program: Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5; Symphony No. 5.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. The Albeneri Trio.
Trio in B, Op. 8.....Brahms
Trio in D minor.....Martinu
Trio in B flat, Op. 97.....Beethoven

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber Orchestra. Hugh Ross and Charles Munch, conductors. Bach program: Cantata No. 93, Wer nur den lieben Gott; Suites Nos. 1 and 4.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Pierre Monteux, conductor. Vera Franceschi, pianist.
Excerpts from St. Sebastian;
La Mer.....Debussy
Les Djinns for Piano and Orchestra:
Symphony in D minor.....Franck

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, conductor; Leo Smit, pianist.
Iberia.....Debussy
Piano Concerto.....Copland
Symphonie Fantastique.....Berlioz

Eagle

gle, Wednesday, July 14, 1954

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Chamber music recital by Albeneri Trio. Tanglewood theater-concert hall, Lenox.

8:45—"My Three Angels," starring Paul Lipson. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

8:45—"My Three Angels." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow

4:00 p.m.—Dance Festival, starring Danilova and Charles Weidman, Jacob's Pillow, Lee.

JUST ABOUT EVERYTHING: Understand Tanglewood is alert to hazards of "Central Park" type of crime in the dark reaches of the property during concerts. Patroled thoroughly by uniformed and plain-[illegible]hesmen . . . Echo of Legion [illegible]ention: Thomas[illegible]

NEWARK, N. J.
STAR-LEDGER

JUL 4 - 1954

Music festival to open

Special to The Star-Ledger

LENOX, Mass.—The music of the world's greatest composers played by some of America's finest musicians rings out over the Berkshire hills again with the start of the six-week summer music festival at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening.

The Wednesday evening concert will mark the start of a series of six evening programs of chamber music, featuring various well known chamber music groups. The first program will offer the Bel Arte Trio and Claudio Arrau at the piano in all-Beethoven evening.

* * *

CHAMBER ORCHESTRA concerts will be given every Friday evening for six weeks, starting this week, under the direction of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Symphony concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will start on Saturday evening and will be given every Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon through Aug. 15.

The Berkshire Center is a six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston orchestra to provide the opportunity for music study in connection with the festival concerts. About 400 students are enrolled at the center. Activities of the school, together with the festival performances, make concerts in some form an almost daily occurrence at Tanglewood. Student concerts are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, according to seating capacity. A voluntary contribution constitutes membership in the Friends.

* * *

WITHIN EASY driving distance of the music center is the Jacob's Pillow dance center, where leading artists also teach and perform during the summer festival. Courses in ballet, modern and ethnic dance are given at the school and outstanding dancers in every [illegible] of the dance field appear [illegible] weekend performances, which are open to the public.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION

JUL 4 - 1954

Music Notes:

Berkshire Festival

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York Friday by Air, France from Paris, and drove to his summer residence at Elm Court, Lenox, Mass.

Mr. Munch immediately began preparations for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony as a Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday night with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukes Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance at Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

ASIDE TO MUSIC lovers, and men with an eye or two for a pretty face. That flutist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra who tootles away as cute as a button, has just been wed. Relax, and enjoy the music.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

Tanglewood Time

It will be 20 years in August since the late Henry Hadley conducted the first concert of the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival, forerunner of the present vast series of musical productions at Tanglewood. Some 65 musicians from the New York Philharmonic Symphony performed in a comparatively crude setting on the Dan Hanna farm in Stockbridge that moonlit summer night in 1934.

Two years later Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra took over, though not until 1938 was the Music Shed, originally called the Pavilion of Music, dedicated. Now, among all the other summer music centers in America, none is quite like Tanglewood. Though both Dr. Hadley and Dr. Koussevitzky are gone, the educational edifice they helped erect lives on, and continues to expand.

The Tanglewood concerts start this week, with welcoming ceremonies today and the first of the chamber music programs Wednesday evening. This year for the first time there will be 12 major concerts, instead of nine, in the big wedge-shaped Shed, open on three sides; six will take place on Saturday nights, starting this week, and six on Sunday afternoons.

This year's festival is to feature the works of the noted French composer, Hector Berlioz, by way of celebrating the 150th anniversary of his birth, which occurred, incidentally, Dec. 11, 1803. In addition to "The Damnation of Faust," the "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony and the "Requiem," a variety of Berlioz' shorter works —"Harold in Italy," the "Fantastic Symphony" and others—will be presented, all conducted by Charles Munch. Some of these compositions are orchestral, others require soloists and choral groups.

Hector Berlioz was a brilliant and eccentric character, temperamentally akin to Poe and Byron, Liszt and Richard Wagner. Experts are generally agreed that his prime service to musical art was in perfecting the science of orchestration; his themes may lack inspiration and his limited technical knowledge may have resulted in an absence of coherent construction, but his music contains highly colorful description and portrayal.

Berlioz was a man of imagination, a subjectivist, a visionary whose fantasy often jumped its bounds. He wrote bold, romantic music and has been called the greatest of all those pathological composers who never succeeded in fully subjugating their creative powers.

Tanglewood has many facets, not least important of which are the student activities of the Berkshire Music Center summer school. Throngs even surpassing those of last season are expected to enjoy the pastoral environment and listen to such artists as Claudio Arrau, Zino Francescatti, William Primrose, Ruth Posselt and Eleanor Steber. But, after all, the main attraction is the music of the masters, and there the spirit of Bach and Mozart, Brahms and Beethoven, Dvorak and Debussy, as well as Berlioz, will be exalted.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

YWCA PLANNING TRIP TO STURBRIDGE VILLAGE

All-Day Visit Scheduled Wednesday

The Young Women's Christian Association will sponsor a trip to Sturbridge Village Wednesday. A chartered bus will leave the "YW," 26 Howard St., at 9, and will return at 4 that afternoon. Picnic lunches may be carried by those making the trip, or luncheon may be purchased at the village.

Sturbridge is a replica of an American village of the early 1800's. It is extremely interesting to go through the buildings that have been taken there from all over New England and to wander around the grounds getting a good idea of how everyday chores of life were carried on so many years ago.

The "YW" also will sponsor two trips to Tanglewood, Lenox, where the Boston Symphony orchestra holds its summer concerts. These trips will be made Sunday, the 11th and 18th.

Reservations for the trips may be made by calling the "YW" at anytime. Seats are limited, so reservations should be made as early as possible.

* * *

Miss Martha Kirkland of Oak St., Indian Orchard, is spending the holiday week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Kirkland, at their summer home at Hawk's Nest Beach, Old Lyme, Conn. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkland are established there for the season.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

WEEKLY EXHIBITS AT TANGLEWOOD

Paintings, Sculpture, Photos to Be Shown

Lenox, July 3—A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture and photographs again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at Tanglewood, here, and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Three large wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn, of West Stockbridge, will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer, in the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. They are "Early Spring," a seven-foot study symbolizing a plant unfolding, done last winter at the artist's studio in Glen Head, L. I.; "School of Fish," a laminated work, 60 inches long, mounted on wooden base, created in 1953; and "Horses," a panel two feet by five feet, finished this year.

The first art exhibit at Tanglewood, starting Saturday, July 3, will be of photographs of music and musicians, entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge Rd., which was recently housed in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

Week of July 12 will feature an exhibit of sculpture by Miss Frances Epping of Lenox, director of the Sculpture Workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox Library gardens. Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at the Lenox School, will exhibit paintings week commencing July 19. Additional sculpture and paintings of Homer Gunn will be on display week of July 26. Miss Carol Clemesha, of Stockbridge, will show modern paintings week beginning August 2. From August 9 to 15 paintings will be on view by Lawrence B. McCoy, vice-president of the Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt.

During the summer, at the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is co-operating [illegible] Childs Gallery of Boston, in exhibiting the Wilson Collection of etchings, engravings and lithographs of famous composers.

[179]

TIGHT BINDING

BOSTON, MASS.
POST

JUL 4 - 1954

At Tanglewood

Berkshire Music Festival Opens With Performances This Week

By TUCKER KILPATRICK

Increased popularity and mounting pressure for tickets have dictated an expanded Berkshire Festival, the nation's foremost summer music series. Instead of the three pair of Shed concerts, formerly held on concluding week ends of the Tanglewood season, we will have six, beginning next Saturday. Each of these Saturday-Sunday pairs will, as usual have the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A concert in the Bach-Mozart series for chamber orchestras will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall every Friday evening during the Festival. The chamber orchestra will consist of principal players of the Boston Symphony who are teaching in the summer music school. In addition to works of Bach and Mozart, scores for classical instrumentation by Roussel, Ibert, Stravinsky, Rossini, Ravel, and Richard Strauss will be included.

Esplanade, Too

Concerts will be given concurrently at Tanglewood and the Esplanade this summer, but the latter will take place only on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings. This plan will actually provide more programs in the Hatch Shell than previously, but they will be stretched over a six-week period. Those members of the Symphony not teaching at Tanglewood will commute between Boston and Berkshires in what Symphony Hall amilingly calls its "town and country" series.

Arthur Fiedler will, of course, direct the "town" series for the popular conductor's 26th season on the banks of the Charles.

The Berkshire Festival will honor, a trifle belatedly, the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz in 1803, that erratic and undisciplined genius having arranged to be born without proper consideration for the crowded schedule of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Magnanimously, under the circumstances, the orchestra will perform complete versions of the composer's principal works.

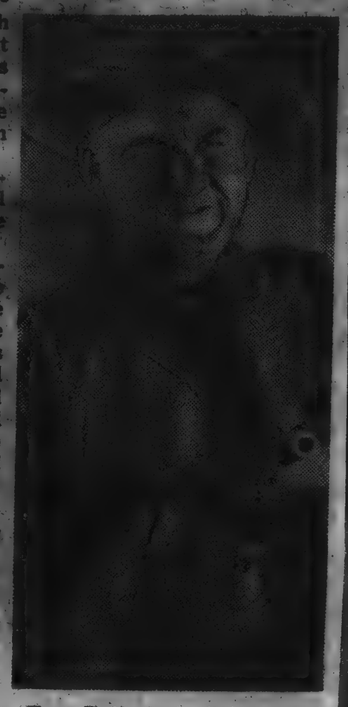
The coming week-end will witness the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society returning from its first transcontinental tour and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm—the same artists, with the exception of Miss Steber, who turned in the brilliant performance in Symphony Hall last February.

Other big works by this composes this summer will include "Romeo and Juliet," the "Fantastic Symphony," "Harold in Italy," and the "Te Deum." Miss Steber will give the first Tanglewood performance of the same composer's song cycle "Nuit d'ete," the finest cycle in all French song literature. The concluding concert, August 15, lists the Berlioz "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

In this last-named performance Mr. Munch should take advantage of the many excellent musicians attending the school by bringing them in to fill up Berlioz demands for his own first performance of the "Requiem." At that time, Berlioz, also performing in a place similar to the barn-like Shed, used 190 instruments and 210 singers. In the awesome Dies Irae, the composer calls for four brass bands, placed in four different parts of the hall, and added timpani.

New Opera

A new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, "The Tender Land," will have its second production anywhere. This opera, premiered with considerable success last spring by the New York City Center Opera, will be given two performances on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3. There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one act opera, "The Princess and the Pea" (seen here last winter at the Esquire Theatre) and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will receive its first staged performance in the U. S.



Tom Tully is in "Arrow in the Dust," at the Center Theatre.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Begins

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will begin six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. An all-Beethoven program of chamber music will feature Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. Friday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

The first week's programs:

Wednesday, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Beethoven: String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1—The Bel Arte Trio (Rudolf Mauerer, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Martin Hoherman, cello); Piano Sonatas, Op. 78; Op. 110; Op. 57 ("Appassionata"), Claudio Arrau.

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Bach: Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, in F; No. 2, in F—With the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin: No. 3, in G, for strings; No. 5, in D—with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano; Miss Anthony, Mr. Burgin, violin: No. 6, in B-flat for strings. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz, "The Damnation of Faust"—with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano (Marguerite); David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11, 3:30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"); Fifth Symphony. Pierre Monteux conductor.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 12th session at Tanglewood this afternoon.

Charles Munch will arrive from Paris to address students and guests at the opening exercises, at 3:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, and an orchestra trustee, will preside. Composer Aaron Copland, who is assistant director of the school, will introduce the faculty.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER

JUL 4 - 1954

Air Conditioning in Hall Ready for Pop Concert

By Rena C. Holtkamp

With vacation over the Cleveland Summer Orchestra is now mobilized again for the long pull of its Pop Concert series at Public Hall.

"Full air conditioning will be available for all the concerts from now on," reports C. J. Vosburgh, manager of the orchestra. Audiences may look forward to pleasantly cool evenings of listening pleasure, light refreshments and comfortable informality. Beginning Thursday evening at 8:30, the pop series will run steadily on a two-concert-a-week schedule through Saturday night, Aug. 21.

Dr. Frank Black, well-known National Broadcasting Co. conductor, will be guest conductor of the orchestra's two concerts this week. On Thursday evening he will present an all-Gershwin program, opening with "Cuban Overture," continuing with tunes from "Porgy and Bess," and concluding with the orchestral work, "An American in Paris."

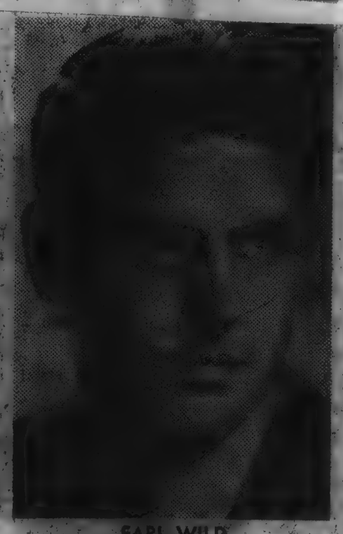
The soloist on the Gershwin program will be young Earl Wild, a native of Pittsburgh, whose phenomenal command of the piano keyboard has won high praise in the virtuoso world. He will play the piano with the orchestra in "Rhapsody in Blue," and also the Concerto in F. When Arturo Toscanini first performed "Rhapsody in Blue" on his programs, he asked Wild to be his pianist, and after that he appeared on many programs with the great Italian master. Wild is one of the few pianists who devotes about equal time to both serious and popular programs.

On Saturday evening Dr. Black offers a miscellaneous program but leans heavily on such Russian masters as Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov and Rachmaninoff. Perhaps this was in deference to his Russian-born soloist, Mischa Elman, who is now completing his 50th year before the public as a concert violinist.

Elman, born in 1891, first played the violin in public at the age of 5. He was educated at St. Petersburg and made his American debut in New York with the Russian Symphony Orchestra in 1908. His appearance on Saturday evening at Public Hall will be his first with the Pop Concerts, but he has been heard several times with the Cleveland Orchestra in Severance Hall. For the pop program he has chosen Bruch's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in G minor, No. 1.

Dr. Black will lead the orchestra in his own orchestration of the Third Movement of Debussy's String Quartet, Op. 10, and also an arrangement of Kreutzer's Second Etude in orchestral fantasy style which he calls "Good Morning, Mr. Kreutzer!" Black will round out his program with Wagner's Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

MISCHA ELMAN

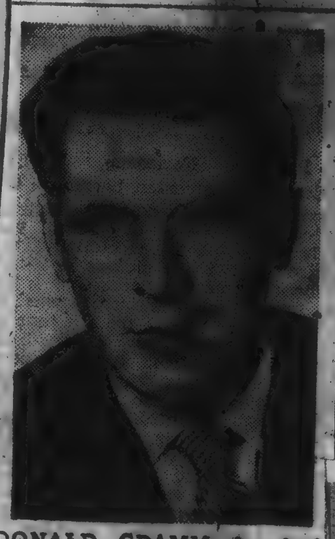


EARL WILD

POP CONCERT STARS. Earl Wild, young pianist, will be soloist in a Gershwin program by the Cleveland Summer Orchestra Thursday evening at Public Hall, and Mischa Elman, seasoned concert violinist, will play a modern concerto Saturday evening at the Pop Concerts.

Music Notes

With guest artists from New York, the Cafarelli Opera Company will present its annual opera, Verdi's "La Traviata," with a local chorus directed by Carmela Cafarelli, Friday evening, Sept. 12, in Masonic Auditorium . . . Phillip MacGregor, Cleveland-Akron bass-baritone, will give a song recital Tuesday evening at Chautauqua Institution on Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. . . . The 17th Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass., will begin its six-week series of 24 concerts Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its concerts at the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the Tanglewood estate on Saturday evening . . . During this month the Cleveland Institute of Music offers to the public three concerts. An ensemble program July 14 at 8:30 in Willard Clapp Hall; two-piano program by Gerald Snyder and Eugene Snyder July 21, and a conservatory recital July 28.



DONALD GRAMM, bass-baritone, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival performance of "The Damnation of Faust," next Saturday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

JUL 4 - 1954

Season To Open At Tanglewood On Wednesday

The 1954 Berkshire Music Festival programs, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., get under way this week with concerts ranging from chamber orchestra to performances by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch in the music shed.

Wednesday evening, Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard. The ensemble will do Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1, and Mr. Arrau will play the Beethoven sonatas Op. 79, 110 and 57 (Appassionata).

Friday evening, the "Bach-Mozart" concerts will begin in the theater-concert hall. Mr. Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra in the Bach Brandenburg concerti, nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss in the piano solos.

The main concerts in the shed begin Saturday evening, with Mr. Munch, the Boston Symphony, Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will guest-conduct in the shed, playing the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, the "Emperor" piano concerto, and the Fifth Symphony, of Beethoven. Mr. Arrau will be pianist for the concerto.

Evening concerts begin at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance at 2:30.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL 4 1954

Performers Making Bow At Museum

Sunday's chamber music concert at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts will mark the debuts of two string players on the series.

Roberta Guastafeste, cello, and Helen Greene, violin, will join regular members of the series for the season's fifth program at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Hoblitzelle Gallery. Mrs. Guastafeste will appear on two other concerts this summer.

Vivaldi's Sonata in A Minor for Cello and Strings, Quartet and Schubert's Quintet in C Major for Strings, Opus ... will make up the afternoon. O... quintet members are Catherine ... violin; Arlington Judel... violin, and Samuel Isaacson, ...

A native ... New York, Mrs. Guastafeste ... most of her early years ... Angeles, where she attended ... A and studied with Joseph ... r. Before joining the Dall... ony Orchestra three seasons ... she played with studio orchestr... d at Hollywood Bowl.

MRS. GU... died privately with string ... om the Boston Symphon... one summer served as co... ress of the Tanglewood ... phony in the Berkshires. She ... concertized in Boston, Washington and Detroit, and played with the Florida Symphony in Orlando for two seasons. Last year she was a member of the Dallas Symphony.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAM CHANGES

Lenox, July 3—Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony Festival, in the Music Shed, at Orchestra during the Berkshire Tanglewood, are announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E-flat piano concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

METROPOLITAN HOST
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 10 1954

The story has a Biblical theme and brings Odets back to the Broadway scene after a four-year absence, his last play, "The Country Wife." . . . Lovers of Shakespeare are trekking to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Canada. James Mason and other great stars will appear. Mason's assignments thus far are: "Measure for Measure" and "Oedipus Rex."

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) will celebrate the Sesquicentennial season of Berlioz with a performance of some of the workers of the noted composer.

"The Damnation of Faust" will be given with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe: "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; and the song cycle, "Summer Nights."

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will appear with the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form, and in "Requiem," which will conclude the ceremonies.

In recent years the music of Hector Berlioz has become increasingly popular and in recognition of his stature he will be honored.

IN THE COUNTRY

NEW YORKER JULY 17

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 16, at 8:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 17, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony, in a Debussy-Franck program, with Vera Franceschi, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 18, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Leo Smit, pianist. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 21: The Zimbler Sinfonietta. . . . ¶ Friday, July 23: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in a Handel-Haydn program. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 24: Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony, with Nicole Henriot, piano. . . . ¶ Tuesday, July 27, at 8:30: Ernst Toch's one-act opera "The Princess and the Pea," and a sixteenth-century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso," by Orazio Vecchi, presented by the Opera and Choral Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. For information about opera tickets, which are very scarce and must be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 15.)

[140]

TIGHT BINDING

BOSTON MASS.
POST

JUL 4 - 1954

At Tanglewood

Berkshire Music Festival Opens With Performances This Week

By TUCKER KEISER

Increased popularity and mounting pressure for tickets have dictated an expanded Berkshire Festival, the nation's foremost summer music series. Instead of the three pair of Shed concerts, formerly held on concluding week ends of the Tanglewood season, we will have six, beginning next Saturday. Each of these Saturday-Sunday pairs will, as usual have the full Boston ton Symphony Orchestra.

A concert in the Bach-Mozart series for chamber orchestras will be held in the Theatre-Concert Hall every Friday evening during the Festival. The chamber orchestra will consist of principal players of the Boston Symphony who are teaching in the summer music school. In addition to works of Bach and Mozart, scores for classical instrumentation by Roussel, Ibert, Stravinsky, Rossini, Ravel, and Richard Strauss will be included.

Esplanade, Too

Concerts will be given concurrently at Tanglewood and the Esplanade this summer, but the latter will take place only on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings. This plan will actually provide more programs in the Hatch Shell than previously, but they will be stretched over a six-week period. Those members of the Symphony not teaching at Tanglewood will commute between Boston and Berkshires in what Symphony Hall smilingly calls its "town and country" series.

Arthur Fiedler will, of course, direct the "town" series for the popular conductor's 26th season on the banks of the Charles.

The Berkshire Festival will honor, a trifle belatedly, the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz in 1803, that erratic and undisciplined genius having arranged to be born without proper consideration for the crowded schedule of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Magnanimously, under the circumstances, the orchestra will perform complete versions of the composer's principal works.

The coming week-end will witness the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society returning from its first transcontinental tour and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm—the same artists, with the exception of Miss Steber, who turned in the brilliant performance in Symphony Hall last February.

Other big works by this composer this summer will include "Romeo and Juliet," the "Fantastic Symphony," "Harold in Italy," and the "Te Deum." Miss Steber will give the first Tanglewood performance of the same composer's song cycle "Nuit d'ete," the finest cycle in all French song literature. The concluding concert, August 15, lists the Berlioz "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

In this last-named performance Mr. Munch should take advantage of the many excellent musicians attending the school by bringing them in to fill up Berlioz' demands for his own first performance of the "Requiem." At that time, Berlioz, also performing in a place similar to the barn-like Shed, used 190 instruments and 210 singers. In the awesome Dies Irae, the composer calls for four brass bands, placed in four different parts of the hall, and added timpani.

New Opera

A new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, "The Tender Land," will have its second production anywhere. This opera, premiered with considerable success last spring by the New York City Center Opera, will be given two performances on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Aug. 2 and 3. There will be a single performance on July 27 of a double bill of Ernst Toch's one act opera, "The Princess and the Pea" (seen here last winter at the Esquire Theatre) and the 16th century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" by Orazio Vecchi, which will receive its first staged performance in the U. S.

Tom Tully is in "Arrow in the Dust," at the Center Theatre.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE

JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Begins

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will begin six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. An all-Beethoven program of chamber music will feature Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. Friday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

The first week's programs:

Wednesday, 8:30 p. m. Theatre-Concert Hall. Beethoven: String Trio in G Op. 9 No. 1—The Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Martin Hoherman, cello); Piano Sonatas, Op. 79; Op. 110; Op. 57 ("Appassionata"). Claudio Arrau.

Friday, 8:30 p. m., Theatre-Concert Hall. Bach: Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, in F; No. 2, in F—With the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute, Harold Gomberg, oboe, Roger Voisin, trumpet, Richard Burgin, violin: No. 3, in G for strings; No. 5, in D—with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano, Miss Anthony, Mr. Burgin, violin; No. 6, in B-flat for strings. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, 8:30 p. m., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust"—with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Chorale Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber soprano (Marguerite), David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch conductor.

Sunday, July 11, 2:30 p. m., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"), Fifth Symphony. Pierre Monteux conductor.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival, opens its 12th session at Tanglewood this afternoon.

Charles Munch will arrive from Paris to address students and guests at the opening exercises, at 3:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Dr. Lewis Perry, honorary chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school, and an orchestra trustee, will preside. Composer Aaron Copland, who is assistant director of the school, will introduce the faculty.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER

JUL 4 - 1954

Air Conditioning in Hall Ready for Pop Concert

By Rena C. Holtkamp

With vacation over the Cleveland Summer Orchestra is now mobilized again for the long pull of its Pop Concert series at Public Hall.

"Full air conditioning will be available for all the concerts from now on," reports C. J. Vosburgh, manager of the orchestra. Audiences may look forward to pleasantly cool evenings of listening pleasure, light refreshments and comfortable informality. Beginning Thursday evening at 8:30, the pop series will run steadily on a two-concert-a-week schedule through Saturday night, Aug. 21.

Dr. Frank Black, well-known National Broadcasting Co. conductor, will be guest conductor of the orchestra's two concerts this week. On Thursday evening he will present an all-Gershwin program, opening with "Cuban Overture," continuing with tunes from "Porgy and Bess," and concluding with the orchestral work, "An American in Paris."

The soloist on the Gershwin program will be young Earl Wild, a native of Pittsburgh, whose phenomenal command of the piano keyboard has won high praise in the virtuoso world. He will play the piano with the orchestra in "Rhapsody in Blue," and also the Concerto in F. When Arturo Toscanini first performed "Rhapsody in Blue" on his programs, he asked Wild to be his pianist, and after that he appeared on many programs with the great Italian master. Wild is one of the few pianists who devotes about equal time to both serious and popular programs.

On Saturday evening Dr. Black offers a miscellaneous program but leans heavily on such Russian masters as Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov and Rachmaninoff. Perhaps this was in deference to his Russian-born soloist, Mischa Elman, who is now completing his 50th year before the public as a concert violinist.

Elman, born in 1891, first played the violin in public at the age of 5. He was educated at St. Petersburg and made his American debut in New York with the Russian Symphony Orchestra in 1908. His appearance on Saturday evening at Public Hall will be his first with the Pop Concerts, but he has been heard several times with the Cleveland Orchestra in Severance Hall. For the pop program he has chosen Bruch's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in G minor, No. 1.

Dr. Black will lead the orchestra in his own orchestration of the Third Movement of Debussy's String Quartet, Op. 10. and also an arrangement of Kreutzer's Second Etude in orchestral fantasy style which he calls "Good Morning, Mr. Kreutzer." Black will round out his program with Wagner's Prelude to "The Mastersingers of Nuremberg."

MISCHA ELMAN

EARL WILD

POP CONCERT STARS. Earl Wild, young pianist, will be soloist in a Gershwin program by the Cleveland Summer Orchestra Thursday evening at Public Hall, and Mischa Elman, seasoned concert violinist, will play a modern concerto Saturday evening at the Pop Concerts.

Music Notes

With guest artists from New York, the Cafarelli Opera Company will present its annual opera, Verdi's "La Traviata," with a local chorus directed by Carmela Cafarelli, Friday evening, Sept. 12, in Masonic Auditorium . . . Phillip MacGregor, Cleveland-Akron bass-baritone, will give a song recital Tuesday evening at Chautauqua Institution on Lake Chautauqua, N. Y. . . . The 17th Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass., will begin its six-week series of 24 concerts Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open its concerts at the 6,000-seat Music Shed on the Tanglewood estate on Saturday evening . . . During this month the Cleveland Institute of Music offers to the public three concerts: An ensemble program July 14 at 8:30 in Willard Clapp Hall; two-piano program by Gerald Snyder and Eugene Snyder July 21, and a conservatory recital July 28.

DONALD GRAMM, bass-baritone, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival performance of "The Damnation of Faust," next Saturday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

This Clipping From
HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT

JUL 4 - 1954

Season T Open At Tanglewood On Wednesday

The 1954 Berkshire Music Festival programs, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., get under way this week with concerts ranging from chamber orchestra to performances by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch in the music shed.

Wednesday evening, Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard. The ensemble will do Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1, and Mr. Arrau will play the Beethoven sonatas Op. 79, 110 and 57 (Appassionata).

Friday evening, the "Bach-Mozart" concerts will begin in the theater - concert hall. Mr. Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra in the Bach Brandenburg concerti nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss in the piano solos.

The main concerts in the shed begin Saturday evening, with Mr. Munch, the Boston Symphony, Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony, will guest-conduct in the shed, playing the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3, the "Emperor" piano concerto, and the Fifth Symphony, of Beethoven. Mr. Arrau will be pianist for the concerto.

Evening concerts begin at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon performance at 2:30.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL 4 1954

Performers Making Bow At Museum

Sunday's chamber music concert at the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts will mark the debuts of two string players on the series.

Roberta Guastafeste, cello, and Helen Greene, violin, will join regular members of the series for the season's fifth program at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Hoblitzelle Gallery. Mrs. Guastafeste will appear on two other concerts this summer.

Vivaldi's Sonata in A Minor for Cello and String Quartet and Schubert's Quintet in C Major for Strings, Opus 163, will make up the afternoon. Other quintet members are Catherine Rauch, violin; Arlington Judefind, violin, and Samuel Isaacson, cello.

A native of New York, Mrs. Guastafeste spent most of her early years in Los Angeles, where she attended UCLA and studied with Joseph Schuster. Before joining the Dallas Symphony Orchestra three seasons ago, she played with studio orchestras and at Hollywood Bowl.

MRS. GRE[illegible] studied privately with string players from the Boston Symphony, and one summer served as concert mistress of the Tanglewood Youth Symphony in the Berkshires. She has concertized in Boston, Washington and Detroit, and played with the Florida Symphony in Orlando for two seasons. Last year she was a member of the Dallas Symphony.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 4 - 1954

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAM CHANGES

Lenox, July 3 Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony Festival, in the Music Shed, at Orchestra during the Berkshire Tanglewood, are announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E-flat piano concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

METROPOLITAN HOST
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 10 1954

The story has a Biblical theme and brings Odets back to the Broadway scene after a four-year absence, his last play, "The Country Wife." . . . Lovers of Shakespeare are trekking to the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Canada. James Mason and other great stars will appear. Mason's assignments thus far are: "Measure for Measure" and "Oedipus Rex."

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass) will celebrate the Sesquicentennial season of Berlioz with a performance of some of the workers of the noted composer.

"The Damnation of Faust" will be given with the choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe: "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist; and the song cycle, "Summer Nights."

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will appear with the orchestra in "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form, and in "Requiem," which will conclude the ceremonies.

In recent years the music of Hector Berlioz has become increasingly popular and in recognition of his stature he will be honored.

IN THE COUNTRY

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 16, at 8:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in an all-Bach program. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 17, at 8:30: Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony, in a Debussy-Franck program, with Vera Franceschi, piano. . . . ¶ Sunday, July 18, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Leo Smit, piano. . . . ¶ Wednesday, July 21: The Zimbler Sinfonietta. . . . ¶ Friday, July 23: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in a Handel-Haydn program. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 24: Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony, with Nicole Henriot, piano. . . . ¶ Tuesday, July 27, at 8:30: Ernst Toch's one-act opera "The Princess and the Pea," and a sixteenth-century madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso," by Orazio Vecchi, presented by the Opera and Choral Departments of the Berkshire Music Center. For information about opera tickets, which are very scarce and must be procured at least a week in advance, address the Berkshire Music Center. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 15.)

NEW YORKER JULY 17

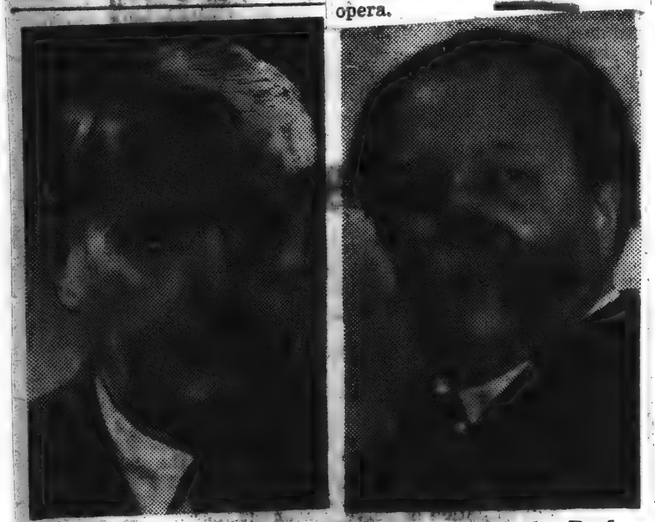
[180]

THE SIX weeks of 24 concerts of the Berkshire Festival will start Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood"—an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio. On Friday night, also in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch will conduct a Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program with Lukas Foss, pianist.

MORE THAN 400 students have arrived in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., for the opening of Berkshire Music Center today. The Music Center is a School of Music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts this month and next. This marks the twelfth season of the Center, with students from most of the 48 states, Canada and foreign countries. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony is director of Berkshire Music Center; Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean. Boston Symphony Manager-elect Thomas D. Perry, Jr., is executive secretary with Gail Rector, assistant.

SYRACUSE N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

A MOTHER and son are students enrolled in Berkshire Music Center. They are Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of the Island Radio Broadcasting Co. and her son, William Keith Rogers, musical director of Radio Station CFCY, both of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada. There are three husband-wife combinations, also three heads of music departments of various colleges in the student group. Lukas Foss heads the Tanglewood Study Group with a six weeks course for students of music, professional or amateur. Others on the Music Center faculty: Jean Morel, orchestra playing and conducting; First Chair members of the Boston Symphony, chamber music; Hugh Ross, choral singing and conducting; Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and Guest Composer Ernst Toch, composition; Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School, opera.



Charles Munch, left, is music director of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux, right, is among guest conductors. Munch is conductor of the Boston Symphony which has its summer home in "Tanglewood" during July and August.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 4 - 1954

Radio Airwaves

By WILLIAM BUCHANAN

CBS radio has lost its highly rated Lux Radio Theater program to the NBC network and the results of this loss will be noted on WEEI's programming starting tomorrow evening.

Gunsmoke, an authentic western drama, and Gangbusters, one of radio's oldest crime shows, will move from their Saturday night berths to fill the big hour between 9 and 10 each Monday on WEEI. Gunsmoke at 9 and Gangbusters at 9:30 p. m.

John McLellan whose Top Shelf program, heard each Saturday at 7 p. m. on WHDH, features such modern jazz artists as Dave Brubeck, Stan Getz and Paul Desmond announces that a jazz contest is open to all concerned.

In 50 words or less write why a certain artist in the jazz field is your favorite. Send the entry to John F. McLellan at WHDH and if you win then a Lafayette hi-fi music system valued at more than $300 will be yours.

Incidentally, John McLellan with his Saturday Show at 7 and Bob Martin with his daily show at 5:05 p. m. on WVDA have the two best jazz shows in Boston.

PREVIEW ON BERKSHIRE

On his evening concert tonight at 8:05 on WCOP Martin Bookspan will present the second of two special Berkshire Festival Preview programs. The music scheduled tonight will be performed at Tanglewood during July and August by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tuesday at 11:45 p.m. WNAC will carry Vice President Richard M. Nixon's address from Jackson, Michigan. The occasion is the "Freedom Festival" marking Jackson's 125th anniversary and the 100th birthday of the Republican Party.

Today at 4 p.m. on WCRB (1330 kc.) the complete opera, "Romeo et Juliette" by Charles Gounod will be presented as part of its daily "Afternoon at Symphony" broadcast.

Each weekday at 10:30 p.m. WDVA features music from Boston's Latin Quarter. The broadcast emanates from the lounge at the Latin Quarter and features the music of whichever group is appearing. The show is emceed by Ken Malden and Bob Martin.

Congratulations to Lindy Miller of WBZ for turning out an enjoyable pop music show each day at 5 and 7 p.m. Lindy plays new and old records and so far he's been successful at staying away from some of the tripe that is regularly featured on some DJ shows.

And don't forget Christine Evans' show each morning at 9:35 on WHDH. Chris talks about a variety of subjects and somehow manages to make them all seem most interesting.

July 8
Knickerbocker News, Albany, N.Y.

Tanglewood Resumes Art Exhibits

Weekly exhibits of paintings, sculpture and photographs are again a feature of the Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood.

Currently on display in the reception hall at Tanglewood is an exhibit of photographs of musicians entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge, which was recently housed in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

Beginning today an exhibit of [illegible] by Miss Franc Eppinger, director of the Stockbridge Workshop, will be on view.

Three [illegible] wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge, will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer at the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. The art exhibits are arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

First Music Shed Concert At Tanglewood Saturday

Berlioz' 'Damnation of Faust,' With Soloists, Chorus And Orchestra Listed; Chamber Music of Beethoven Wednesday and Bach Friday

Lenox, July 3—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

On Friday also at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

Shed Concert Saturday

For the first time in Berkshire history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening weekend, July 10 at 8.30 p. m. and July 11 at 2.30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Next Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr Monteux.

Scope Increased

Since 1938 when the 6000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada until last summer all attandance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

To accomodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework — twelve Shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the Festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

Honor to Berlioz

The Music Shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust," a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the Symphony "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25).

Also the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCl[illegible] and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," the song cycle "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum," with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 15). The first week's Berkshire Festival programs:

Wednesday—8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall

Beethoven: String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1—The Bel Arte Trio (Boris Kroyt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Martin Hoherman, violoncello); Piano Sonatas, Op. 78; Op. 110; Op. 57 ("Appassionata") —Claudio Arrau.

Friday—8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall

Bach: Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, in F; No. 2, in F—with the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin; [illegible] G—strings: No. 5, in D—with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano; Doriot Anthony, flute; Richard Burgin, violin; [illegible] in B-flat—Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Saturday—8:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust"—with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano (Marguerite) David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday—2:30 p. m.—Music Shed
Beethoven: Overture to "Leonore," No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")—with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Symphony No. 5. Pierre Monteux, conductor.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

Garden Center Group Will Hear About Metal Flowers

Mrs. Avery Robinson to Describe Art of Fabrication And Exhibit Her Creations

Special to The Sunday Republican

Berkshire Hills, July 3 — This coming week's meeting at Berkshire Garden Center Interlaken, Tuesday afternoon, beginning at 2.30, will feature a talk by Mrs. Avery Robinson of New Lebanon, N. Y. She will speak on, "The fabrication of metal flowers." Mrs. Robinson is better known in the business world as Mary Chess, a noted perfumer. But she is also well-known for her works in metal flowers. Among displays she will have with her Tuesday will be pieces she contributed toward the furnishings of the late Queen Mary's doll house, which was displayed at an exhibition of British arts and crafts of the 20th century.

Wednesday at the Garden Center, officers, trustees and various chairmen will meet for an organizational meeting following a buffet luncheon.

Club Officers Named

Officers of Stockbridge Gold Club, oldest in Western Massachusetts, are John F. Kennedy, who was named to succeed Dr. Robert K. Knight, president for the past five years; Miss Rosamond Sherwood and George K. Livermore, executive vice-presidents; Edward McKenna, secretary, and Mrs. Henry Rathbun, treasurer. The club will hold its fourth annual home-in-one golf tournament this week end which will be concluded Monday afternoon. The Stockbridge club is also arranging a member-guest tournament for July 10 and 11th.

Billboards Banned

The century-old Laurel Hill Association of Stockbridge, leading civic improvement organization in the country, has received assurance from the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority that no signs or billboards will be placed within the right of way of the Massachusetts turnpike.

George N. Lenci, president of the association, has received a letter from William F. Callahan, chairman of the Turnpike Authority, assuring him that this policy will be adhered to. The Laurel Hill Association has been opposing bill board advertising on the turnpike, and Mr. Callahan's letter to Mr. Lenci states that no signs or billboards of any kind shall be erected, other than directional signs, within the right of way of the Authority on the proposed turnpike.

Summer Chapel Open

The Chapel of Our Lady of the Hills, Monerey, has opened for the summer season, and Rev. Charles Van Duren, S. J.; of Dehon Seminary, Great Barrington, will officiate at the masses each Sunday at 10.

The chapel was erected mostly through generosity of the late Congressman Arthur Somers of New York who maintained a fine summer home bordering Lake Garfield. It is of great convenience to summer visitors in and around Monterey. The chapel will remain open through September.

Berkshire Briefs

The 12th season of Berkshire Music Center music school will open tomorrow and Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, announced that registrations have been very heavy and the full complement of 400 to 450 studens will be reached. Students have begun arriving for the summer courses from the 48 states as well as from foreign countries.

Enrollments have been running ahead of last year. Last summer there were 14 foreign students but this year the figure is over 30, with 12 coming from Canada. Others are from Hungary, Greece, Cuba, France, Japan, Korea, Haiti, Venezuela and South Africa. Among students are a mother and son combination, Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of Island Radio Broadcasting Co. and her son, William Keith Rogers, musical director of radio station CFCY, both of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Elm Court, Lenox, opened this past week for its seventh season, and is again under management of Robert L. Curry who, during the off-season, is headmaster of Lenox School for Boys. The establishment has a large number of reservations for the Tanglewood season, and will be headquarters of many of the directors and musicians among them Benny Goodman, one of the best known jazz impresarios but who is also an artist in the classical, probably a fact less known because of his great popularity as a jazz clarinetist. Among other guests will be Dr. Charles Munch of Paris director of Boston Symphony Orchestra, which features the Tanglewood concerts at the shed and Pierre Monteaux, also o France, who will be a guest conductor.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUL 4 1954

Berlioz Winner

Special to The News

NEW YORK.—An RCA Victor recording of Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, has been awarded the Grand Prix for Vocal Ensemble With Orchestra, according to an announcement from the French Academie Charles Cros.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 13 1954

All Expense Tours Run to Tanglewood

Special all-expense tours to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., are offered by Ski Bird Tours. Operating every weekend from now to Aug. 16.

Departures are scheduled for 6 p.m. every Friday, returning to New York Sunday evening. Rates are from $23.75, including de luxe transportation by motorcoach, accommodations at the famous Sheraton Inn in Pittsfield, sports facilities, sightseeing and all tips and taxes.

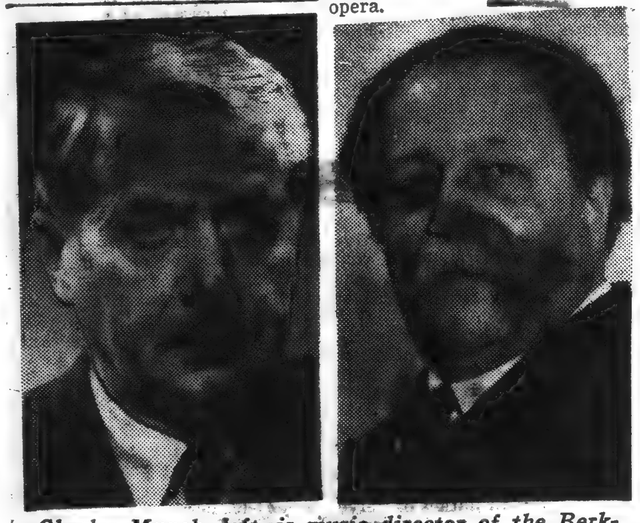
[161]

THE SIX weeks of 24 concerts of the Berkshire Festival will start Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood"—an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist and the Bel Arte String Trio. On Friday night, also in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch will conduct a Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program with Lukas Foss, pianist.

MORE THAN 400 students have arrived in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., for the opening of Berkshire Music Center today. The Music Center is a School of Music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts this month and next. This marks the twelfth season of the Center, with students from most of the 48 states, Canada and foreign countries. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony is director of Berkshire Music Center; Composer Aaron Copland is assistant director; Ralph Berkowitz is dean. Boston Symphony Manager-elect Thomas D. Perry, Jr., is executive secretary with Gail Rector, assistant.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

A MOTHER and son are students enrolled in Berkshire Music Center. They are Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of the Island Radio Broadcasting Co. and her son, William Keith Rogers, musical director of Radio Station CFCY, both of Charlottetown Prince Edward Island, Canada. There are three husband-wife combinations, also three heads of music departments of various colleges in the student group. Lukas Foss heads the Tanglewood Study Group with a six weeks course for students of music, professional or amateur. Others on the Music Center faculty: Jean Morel, orchestra playing and conducting; First Chair members of the Boston Symphony, chamber music; Hugh Ross, choral singing and conducting; Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and Guest Composer Ernst Toch, composition; Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School, opera.



Charles Munch, left, is music director of the Berkshire Music Festival in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. Pierre Monteux, right, is among guest conductors. Munch is conductor of the Boston Symphony which has its summer home in "Tanglewood" during July and August.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 4 - 1954

Radio Airwaves

By WILLIAM BUCHANAN

CBS radio has lost its highly rated Lux Radio Theater program to the NBC network and the results of this loss will be noted on WEEI's programming starting tomorrow evening.

Gunsmoke, an authentic western drama, and Gangbusters, one of radio's oldest crime shows, will move from their Saturday night berths to fill the big hour between 9 and 10 each Monday on WEEI. Gunsmoke at 9 and Gangbusters at 9:30 p. m.

John McLellan whose Top Shelf program, heard each Saturday at 7 p. m. on WHDH, features such modern jazz artists as Dave Brubeck, Stan Getz and Paul Desmond announces that a jazz contest is open to all concerned.

In 50 words or less write why a certain artist in the jazz field is your favorite. Send the entry to John F. McLellan at WHDH and if you win then a Lafayette hi-fi music system valued at more than $300 will be yours.

Incidentally, John McLellan with his Saturday Show at 7 and Bob Martin with his daily show at 5:05 p. m. on WVDA have the two best jazz shows in Boston.

PREVIEW ON BERKSHIRE

On his evening concert tonight at 8:05 on WCOP Martin Bookspan will present the second of two special Berkshire Festival Preview programs. The music scheduled tonight will be performed at Tanglewood during July and August by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Tuesday at 11:45 p.m. WNAC will carry Vice President Richard M. Nixon's address from Jackson, Michigan. The occasion is the "Freedom Festival" marking Jackson's 125th anniversary and the 100th birthday of the Republican Party.

Today at 4 p.m. on WCRB (1330 kc.) the complete opera, "Romeo et Juliette" by Charles Gounod will be presented as part of its daily "Afternoon at Symphony" broadcast.

Each weekday at 10:30 p.m. WDVA features music from Boston's Latin Quarter. The broadcast emanates from the lounge at the Latin Quarter and features the music of whichever group is appearing. The show is emceed by Ken Malden and Bob Martin.

Congratulations to Lindy Miller of WBZ for turning out an enjoyable pop music show each day at 5 and 7 p.m. Lindy plays new and old records and so far he's been successful at staying away from some of the tripe that is regularly featured on some DJ shows.

And don't forget Christine Evans' show each morning at 9:35 on WHDH. Chris talks about a variety of subjects and somehow manages to make them all seem most interesting.

July 8

Tanglewood Resumes Art Exhibits

Weekly exhibits of paintings, sculpture and photographs are again a feature of the Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood.

Currently on display in the reception hall at Tanglewood is an exhibit of photographs of musicians entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge, which was recently housed in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

Beginning today an exhibit of sculpture by Miss Franc Epping[illegible] director of the Silvermine Workshop, will be on view.

Three large wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge, will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer at the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. The art exhibits are arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield.

Pittsfield, Mass. News

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

First Music Shed Concert At Tanglewood Saturday

Berlioz' 'Damnation of Faust,' With Soloists, Chorus And Orchestra Listed; Chamber Music of Beethoven Wednesday and Bach Friday

Lenox, July 3—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

On Friday also at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

Shed Concert Saturday

For the first time in Berkshire history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening weekend, July 10 at 8.30 p. m. and July 11 at 2.30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Next Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr Monteux.

Scope Increased

Since 1938 when the 6000-sea Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada until last summer all attandance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

To accomodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework — twelve Shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the Festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

Honor to Berlioz

The Music Shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust," a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the Symphony "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25).

Also the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum, and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini" "Royal Hunt and Storm" from The Trojans," the song cycle "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum," with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 15). The first week's Berkshire Festival programs:

Wednesday—8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall

Beethoven: String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1—The Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Martin Hoherman, violoncello); Piano Sonatas, Op. 79; Op. 110; Op. 57 ("Appassionata")—Claudio Arrau.

Friday—8:30 p. m.
Theater-Concert Hall

Bach: Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, in F; No. 2, in F—with the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute; Harold Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; Richard Burgin, violin; [illegible] G—strings; No. 5, in D—with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano; Miss Anthony, flute; Mr. Burgin, violin; No. 6, in B-flat—[illegible] conductor.

Saturday—[illegible]—Music Shed

Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust"—with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber soprano (Marguerite) David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday—2.30 p. m.—Music Shed

Beethoven: Overture to "Leonore" No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")—with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Symphony No. 5, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 4 - 1954

Garden Center Group Will Hear About Metal Flowers

Mrs. Avery Robinson to Describe Art of Fabrication And Exhibit Her Creations

Special to The Sunday Republican

Berkshire Hills, July 3 — This coming week's meeting at Berkshire Garden Center Interlaken, Tuesday afternoon, beginning at 2.30, will feature a talk by Mrs. Avery Robinson of New Lebanon, N. Y. She will speak on, "The fabrication of metal flowers." Mrs. Robinson is better known in the business world as Mary Chess, a noted perfumer. But she is also well-known for her works in metal flowers. Among displays she will have with her Tuesday will be pieces she contributed toward the furnishings of the late Queen Mary's doll house, which was displayed at an exhibition of British arts and crafts of the 20th century.

Wednesday at the Garden Center, officers, trustees and various chairmen will meet for an organizational meeting following a buffet luncheon.

Club Officers Named

Officers of Stockbridge Gold Club, oldest in Western Massachusetts, are John F. Kennedy, who was named to succeed Dr. Robert K. Knight, president for the past five years; Miss Rosamond Sherwood and George K. Livermore, executive vice-presidents; Edward McKenna, secretary, and Mrs. Henry Rathbun, treasurer. The club will hold its fourth annual home-in-one golf tournament this week end which will be concluded Monday afternoon. The Stockbridge club is also arranging a member-guest tournament for July 10 and 11th.

Billboards Banned

The century-old Laurel Hill Association of Stockbridge, leading civic improvement organization in the country, has received assurance from the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority that no signs or billboards will be placed within the right of way of the Massachusetts turnpike.

George N. Lenci, president of the association, has received a letter from William F. Callahan, chairman of the Turnpike Authority, assuring him that this policy will be adhered to. The Laurel Hill Association has been opposing billboard advertising on the turnpike, and Mr. Callahan's letter to Mr. Lenci states that no signs or billboards of any kind shall be erected, other than directional signs, within the right of way of the Authority on the proposed turnpike.

Summer Chapel Open

The Chapel of Our Lady of the Hills, Monerey, has opened for the summer season, and Rev. Charles Van Duren, S. J.; of Dehon Seminary, Great Barrington, will officiate at the masses each Sunday at 10.

The chapel was erected mostly through generosity of the late Congressman Arthur Somers of New York who maintained a fine summer home bordering Lake Garfield. It is of great convenience to summer visitors in and around Monterey. The chapel will remain open through September.

Berkshire Briefs

The 12th season of Berkshire Music Center music school will open tomorrow and Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, announced that registrations have been very heavy and the full complement of 400 to 450 studens will be reached. Students have begun arriving for the summer courses from the 48 states as well as from foreign countries.

Enrollments have been running ahead of last year. Last summer there were 14 foreign students but this year the figure is over 30, with 12 coming from Canada. Others are from Hungary, Greece, Cuba, France, Japan, Korea, Haiti, Venezuela and South Africa. Among students are a mother and son combination, Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of Island Radio Broadcasting Co. and her son, William Keith Rogers, musical director of radio station CFCY, both of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island.

Elm Court, Lenox, opened this past week for its seventh season, and is again under management of Robert L. Curry who, during the off-season, is headmaster of Lenox School for Boys. The establishment has a large number of reservations for the Tanglewood season, and will be headquarters of many of the directors and musicians among them Benny Goodman, one of the best known jazz impresarios but who is also an artist in the classical, probably a fact less known because of his great popularity as a jazz clarinetist. Among other guests will be Dr. Charles Munch of Paris director of Boston Symphony Orchestra, which features the Tanglewood concerts at the shed and Pierre Monteaux, also of France, who will be a guest conductor.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUL 4 1954

Berlioz Winner

Special to The News

NEW YORK.—An RCA Victor recording of Berlioz' dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, has been awarded the Grand Prix for Vocal Ensemble With Orchestra, according to an announcement from the French Academie Charles Cros.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 13 1954

All Expense Tours Run to Tanglewood

Special all-expense tours to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., are offered by Ski Bird Tours. Operating every weekend from now to Aug. 16.

Departures are scheduled for 6 p.m. every Friday, returning to New York Sunday evening. Rates are from $23.75, including de luxe transportation by motorcoach, accommodations at the famous Sheraton Inn in Pittsfield, sports facilities, sightseeing and all tips and taxes.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Music Festival Opens Six-Week Program

The 17th Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood outside of Lenox, Mass., opens today with six weeks of chamber, orchestral and choral music ahead performed by Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a variety of distinguished guest artists.

The Festival's new schedule will be arranged to provide: chamber music programs on Wednesday evenings at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall: the usual Bach-Mozart concerts held this season on each Friday night at 8:30 instead of over the first three weekends: and the regular concerts in the Music Shed with the full orchestra on Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Besides Dr. Munch, the conductors will include Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel, Lukas Foss and Richard Burgin. Soloists will include Eleanor Steber, Claudio Arrau, David Poleri, William Primrose, Zino Francescatti, Ruth Posselt and Vera Franceschi.

The Opera Department will present the New England premier of Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land" on Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 2 and 3 and a single performance of Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea" on July 27.

* * *

THE COMPLETE major programs for the Festival, which will feature the music of Berlioz, will be as follows:

Friday, July 9: Bach, Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6.

Saturday, July 10: "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz.

Sunday, July 11: Beethoven, Leonore Overture No. 3, the Emperor Piano Concerto with Claudio Arrau, and the Fifth Symphony.

Friday, July 16: Bach, Cantata No. 93 and Suites 1 and 4.

Saturday, July 17: Debussy, La Mer and excerpts, St. Sebastian, and Franck, "Les Dijinns" and D Minor Symphony.

Sunday, July 18: Debussy's "Iberia," Copland's Piano Concerto with Leo Smit; and Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony.

Friday, July 23: Handel's Concerto Grosso Opus 6, No. 4, Haydn's Symphony No. 100 and "Nelson" Mass.

Saturday, July 24: Weber's Overture to "Die Freischutz," Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Strauss' Don Juan, and Elgar's Enigma Variations.

Sunday, July 25: Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and "Harold in Italy" by Berlioz and Symphony No. 2 by Ernst Toch.

Friday, July 30: Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Ibert's Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony; and the Paris Symphony and Serenade for Eight Winds by Mozart.

Saturday: July 31: "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony by Berlioz.

* * *

SUNDAY, AUG. 1: Prokofieff's ballet suite "Chout," Dvorak's Violin Concerto with Ruth Posselt and Sibelius' Second Symphony.

Friday, Aug. 6: a complete "Pulcinella" ballet suite by Stravinsky, and Piano Concerto in B Flat with Seymour Lipkin and excerpts from the opera "Idomeneo" by Mozart.

Saturday, Aug. 7: All Berlioz. Overture to "Benevenuto Cellini;" Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," Summer Nights for soprano and orchestra, with Eleanor Steber, and the Te Deum for Chorus and Soloists conducted by Hugh Ross.

Sunday, Aug. 8: Overture to Gluck's "Alceste," the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti, and Brahms' Second Symphony.

Thursday, Aug. 12: Rossini's Overture to "Scala di Seta," Mozart's Symphony in B Flat, Ravel's Mother Gosse Suite and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann," Jean Morel, conductor.

Friday, Aug. 13: Tanglewood on Parade.

Saturday, Aug. 14: Brahms' "Tragic" Overture, Piston's Fourth Symphony, Ravel's Piano Concerto with Nicole Henriot, and Saint-Saens Symphony No 3.

Sunday, Aug. 15: Berlioz Requiem.

DR. MUNCH

MISS STEBER

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 6 - 1954

Music Notes

By D. E. BITZ

THE SOUTH MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION at Pittsfield, Mass., is planning its biggest season since 1938 for this summer. Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director of the association, has announced that programs, at 4 p.m., will be held July 10, 17, 24, 31, Aug. 7 and 14.

Two nationally known foundations, the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago are joining with the South Mountain Association to make the extensive season possible.

Alexander Schneider, violinist, and Artur Balsan, Pianist, will perform all of the Beethoven Sonatas in a cycle of three concerts to be presented July 10, 24 and Aug. 7. Mr. Schneider played the Bach sonatas at Tanglewood several seasons ago and had a prominent part in the organization of the Casals Music Festival at Prades, France.

Leontyne Price, soprano, and Samuel Barber, pianist, will present a program July 17 made up of works commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation.

Rarely heard trios for horn, violin and piano will appear on the program for July 31 performed by Mr. Schneider, Mr. Balsan and John Barrows. The Saturday series will close Aug. 14 with a program by the Juilliard String Quartet.

Albert Sprague Coolidge, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Coolidge, will give a festival of chamber music in memory of his mother on Aug. 21 and 22 with two concerts on Aug. 21 at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Participants will include Rudolph Serkin, the Kroll Quartet, a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony and Mr. Schneider.

South Mountain receives no endowment of any kind. It is maintained entirely through contributions in the form of gifts and memberships, which are open to anyone interested in music. A limited number of tickets for students are available free upon written application to Mrs. Willeke.

* * *

PETER BERTASSO, organist, is presenting programs in the Hall of Springs on the state reservation at Saratoga Springs. The recitals, which opened Saturday, will continue through Labor Day. Weekday programs, expect Monday, are from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2 through 5 p.m. Sunday programs will open at 1 p.m. and continue to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge. Visitors also have the opportunity to drink the naturally carbonated mineral waters and see the state exhibits and museum displays.

* * *

ELIZABETH KINGDON of this city is one of the principal sopranos singing with the Chautauqua Opera Association at Chautauqua, NY, this summer. Alfredo Valenti, artistic director of the association, has announced that six operas will be presented in English at Norton Memorial Hall. Alberto Bimboni and Edward Murphy will share the conducting.

The Chautauqua season opened Sunday and will continue through Aug. 29.

Walter Headl continues as conductor and musical director of the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra, which is heard Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

Frederic McConnell, director of the Cleveland Play House, will have his staff and company at Chautauqua for the six plays scheduled by the Chautauqua Repertory Theater.

The Mischakoff String Quartet will appear in three recitals under the patronage of the Elizabeth Calhoun Norton Chamber Music Concerts.

Cecil Stewart, choral director, will be assisted by Charles W. Schmitt in conducting choral events with the Chautauqua Choir.

George William Volkel, official organist, will present recitals in the Amphitheater on July 11 and Aug. 29 at 3 p.m. and each Thursday at 4 p.m.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS
JUL 11 1954

Bus Trips to Music Festival

A series of all-expense bus tours will be operated on weekends through August 15 to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., by Ski Bird Tours, 2039 Broadway, New York 23. Buses will leave at 6 P.M. on Fridays, and return on Sunday evenings, at rates starting at $23.75.

Rates include transportation, rooms at Pittsfield's Sheraton Hotel, sightseeing and other items, but do not include meals. An optional side trip to the Jacobs Pillow Dance Festival at nearby Jacob's Ladder, Mass., may be included.

BOSTON, MASS.
RECORD
JUL 7 - 1954

FESTIVAL BEGINS IN BERKSHIRES

The 15th Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will commence six weeks of 24 concerts this evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio.

On Friday also at 8:30 p. m. in the same hall, Charles Munch will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 6 - 1954

Munch Will Present First Tanglewood Concert Friday

Charles Munch will present his first concert of the season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Friday in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 8:30 p.m. An all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos with Lukas Foss as piano soloist has been announced. Saturday night he will inaugurate the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." Soloists will include Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

* * *

Mr. Munch arrived in New York Friday by Air France from Paris and drove to his summer residence at Elm Court, Lenox, Saturday. He will have his first rehearsal with the orchestra tomorrow afternoon. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 o'clock, preceding the Shed concert, will benefit the Boston Symphony Orchestra's pension fund. Similar public rehearsals will be held each Saturday during the Berkshire Festival.

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of works by Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer under Mr. Munch's baton. The series is in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.

* * *

During the conductor's month vacation in France, following the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 73rd season, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg. He has just performed Berlioz' biblical work, "L'Enfance du Christ" at the Cathedral St. Andre in Strasbourg. He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

CHARLES MUNCH
Tanglewood Conductor

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
JUL 6 - 1954

All "Pal Joey" Tunes In Paragraph May Win Free Tickets

THE LYRIC Circus management announces a contest with free tickets to next Sunday night's performance to the three people writing the best paragraph using all the tunes from "Pal Joey" which opens tonight in the Tent near Skaneateles. Each prize is two tickets. Entries should be mailed to Contest, Finger Lakes Lyric Circus, Skaneateles, before midnight Thursday. Judges will be Jo Hurst and Walter Long, stars in the show.

THE TUNES in "Pal Joey" are: "I Could Write a Book," "You Mustn't Kick It Around," "What Is a Man?" "Happy Hunting Horn," "Bewitched, Bothered and Bewildered" and "Zip." This sample paragraph is submitted by the management as a guide to contestants: "I could write a book, but you mustn't kick it around. The title would be, 'What Is a Man?" It will tell girls how to sound the happy hunting horn until their boy friends were bewitched, bothered and bewildered, and then, zip, chase them to the altar."

* * *

CHANGES INVOLVING two Saturday night programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., are announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony. Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday night, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E. flat piano concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed. On the concert Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel piano concert, Director Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

Millbrook Roundtable
July 8, 1954

Charles Munch to Conduct at Tanglewood

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orechestra, arrived in New York Friday, July 2, by Air France from Paris, and drove to Lenox, Mass., Saturday, to his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch immediately prepared for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday, July 9, with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p.m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night (Sat. July 10) he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society.

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.

During the distinguished conductor's month vacation in France, at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 73rd season, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg, where at the Cathedral St. Andre he has just performed Berlioz' biblical work, "Le'Enfance du Christ." He also conducted at the Opera in Paris.

The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a.m., July 10, preceding the first Music Shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for the nominal admission of $1.00, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

[182]

...wood Began Eagle - July 15
...ed material on the beginnings of Ameri... music festival gleaned by Eagle County ...Mahanna from official records and the ... Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who ...RDAY FEATURES section.

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 8 - 1954

Getting Your Man—a Vacation Project

Seashore or Mountains? A Gal Must Pick the Spot

By HOPE JOHNSON.

Two weeks with pay to get a tan and a man. And not a second to waste.

The decision between seashore and mountain is vital as any U.N. question—to you at least.

Some sage and successful friends keep telling you a beachhead on the shore is worth two outposts in the hills.

But hillbillies from the Poconos, Catskills, Berkshires argue: "The only way a gal can find a man at the shore is to pick him up. In the mountains, you are introduced—on a hike, at a barbecue, during a round of golf."

Could be something in this. There was a handsome Princeton man once who spent a week getting up enough courage to speak to a "knockout looking" woman on a Jersey Beach. By the time he finally got up enough courage, he found she was leaving the next day.

Smartest solution—if you've been saving your money—is to spend several weekends at different vacation spots nearby before checking out of the office for the big two weeks. Not only makes decisions simpler, it's good for you to change backgrounds.

How About Mountains?

This week, we're plumping the advantages of a mountain vacation. Choose the Great Barrington, Stockbridge, Lenox, Lee (all in Massachusetts) area partly out of a hat and for several good reasons.

Round trip by railroad to South Lee is $8.84 (New Haven). Car is not necessary to get about. Scenery is breathtakingly beautiful. Temperature goes well below that at your New York desk.

Nearby, by bicycle, bus or foot are: Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—symphony under the stars (opened yesterday and will continue for six weeks. Last year, broke all its records with 117,950 attendance); climbing, swimming and boating in several lakes, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival (special attraction, this year, are the Celtic Dancers, Scotch ballet), Berkshire Summer Playhouse, golf courses, artists and writers colonies, summer skiing, forests, trout fishing, tennis courts, archery ranges, swimming pools, modern outdoor museums of modern art. Many inns schedule hayrides, barbecues, dancing under the stars.

Consider Rates, Too.

Room rates range from about $3 per day without meals to $8 with three meals. General admission to Tanglewood is $2. Natives claim that even most un-ardent music and dance lovers come back raving from Symphony and Jacob's Pillow.

How should you act to have the most fun?

Join in the fun of the organized entertainment.

Inn owners there say it's often heartbreaking to watch new arrivals.

"They want to find their Prince Charming standing behind the door the moment they open it. When girls don't find a handsome man the first hour or so, they want to take their bags and leave."

Some young women have been known to go from one hotel to another checking in and checking out until they find an attractive man.

Finding Your Man.

Hold out at least a few days, recreation directors advise. The man you're looking for may be out on the golf course or on an overnight hike. The only way you're going to meet him is to join in the organized activity.

Fellows are shy, too, they point out.

Don't hesitate to accept that rather uninteresting looking fellow's invitation to the hotel's after-dinner dance either. He may have five friends—all attractive.

Photos by Phyllis Twachtman.

Barbecues, music of Beethoven at Tanglewood, Berkshire Summer Playhouse. It's hard to waste time, in Berkshires. Two summer stock players, Deirdre Owens and William Swan get acquainted with visiting dog, Beverly.

No summer is complete without basic ingredient—vacation romance. Just place for goodbye smack is Kissing Bridge in South Lee, Mass. Covered bridge will be torn down soon unless local residents can raise $5000.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 7 - 1954

"Operation Shuttle"

At the close of tonight's Esplanade Concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles River, 65 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra begin "Operation Shuttle," commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, for week-end concerts in the Berkshire Festival, under the baton of Charles Munch, music director and guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin.

The 65 "shuttling" members of the Boston Symphony return to Boston, either Sunday afternoon or evening, or Monday morning, in time for Monday's Esplanade Concert.

Joseph de Pasquale, principal cellist, Boston Symphony Orchestra, took his post there in 1937 at the age of 27. In "Tanglewood" this summer, de Pasquale also is a member of the Bel Arte Trio which opened the 17th Berkshire Festival earlier this month for the Boston Symphony.

[183]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 10 1954

Music

The Berkshires Echo to Bach

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 10.—The opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's first weekend was given last night in the theater-concert hall. This is a small house, seating 1200. Actually the attendance was 2800, counting the music lovers huddled about the lawn outside the auditorium.

It was all Bach, this program. Five of his six Brandenburg concertos (the No. 4, excluded), which, you will agree, is quite a lot of Bach.

Wonderful Variety.

But these audiences at Tanglewood are true devotees of Johann Sebastian. (He isn't called the "All-Father" of music for nothing, you know.) And, as you can imagine, five "Brandenburg" concertos filled the cool, cloudless evening with notes like swarms of fireflies.

There is a wonderful variety to these concertos. None is like any other, really, yet all have the same stamp. The variety, the difference between them is to be noted in the choice of instrumental combinations employed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, reduced, with Charles Munch at the helm, sailed through these compositions in a practiced manner. They have always been especial glories of the orchestra, the "Brandenburgs." Yet I would say that on the whole, such as I have heard of them before this were delicately handled.

Rough Sound.

Last night, Mr. Munch seemed generally bent on keeping the strong beats heavier than seemed necessary. Not in all places, of course, but enough to give one that impression. When that happened, naturally, the results were rough sound, particularly in complicated passages, where musical lines intertwine about each other like vines.

Moreover, the situation was by no means improved by rather frequent and, it appeared to me, unnecessary deviation of the tempo. I heard jazz groups, without conductor, keep a tempo perfectly, without variation any kind from beginning to of a session. And that me that Mr. Munch's lacked the buoyancy Bach music required. know, a jazz session is at all without buoyance. for that matter, in a session.

Now that I've got gripes, there is much to in favor of certain The Concerto No. 2 for trumpet, flute, oboe olin, with strings, and Major, No. 5, for orchestra piano, flute and violin the listeners with such tions as, perhaps, they awaiting.

A High Level.

Chief among these playing of the various In the No. 2, Roger trumpet; Doriot Anthony, Ralph Gombert, oboe and ard Burgin, violin, were a high level of give-and- However, this could not happened without the tion of either the orchestra the conductor. Mr. Munch particular, tooted a tremely difficult passages small bore trumpet, a toy, that were thrilling

And in the last work program, the No. 5 Lalo, piano; Mr. Burgin and thony gave a splendid tion of ensemble playing second movement, which fettuoso.

Anyway, if the recital wanted certain things, sessed others in abundance, things like energy and

Claremont (N.H.) Eagle
July 16, 1954

SUMMER CROWDS overflow the giant music shed of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for week end concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra of 104 pieces. The festival, now in its 17th year, has been compared to the Salzburg festival, for importance in the world of music.

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 8 - 1954

Getting Your Man—a Vacation Project

Seashore or Mountains? A Gal Must Pick the Spot

By HOPE JOHNSON.

Two weeks with pay to get a tan and a man. And not a second to waste.

The decision between seashore and mountain is vital as any U.N. question—to you at least.

Some sage and successful friends keep telling you a beachhead on the shore is worth two outposts in the hills.

But hillbillies from the Poconos, Catskills, Berkshires argue: "The only way a gal can find a man at the shore is to pick him up. In the mountains, you are introduced—on a hike, at a barbecue, during a round of golf."

Could be something in this. There was a handsome Princeton man once who spent a week getting up enough courage to speak to a "knockout looking" woman on a Jersey Beach. By the time he finally got up enough courage, he found she was leaving the next day.

Smartest solution—if you've been saving your money—is to spend several weekends at different vacation spots nearby before checking out of the office for the big two weeks. Not only makes decisions simpler, it's good for you to change backgrounds.

How About Mountains?

This week, we're plumping the advantages of a mountain vacation. Choose the Great Barrington, Stockbridge, Lenox, Lee (all in Massachusetts) area partly out of a hat and for several good reasons.

Round trip by railroad to South Lee is $8.84 (New Haven). Car is not necessary to get about. Scenery is breathtakingly beautiful. Temperature goes well below that at your New York desk.

Nearby, by bicycle, bus or foot are: Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—symphony under the stars (opened yesterday and will continue for six weeks. Last year, broke all its records with 117,950 attendance); climbing, swimming and boating in several lakes, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival (special attraction, this year, are the Celtic Dancers, Scotch ballet), Berkshire Summer Playhouse, golf courses, artists and writers colonies, summer skiing, forests, trout fishing, tennis courts, archery ranges, swimming pools, modern outdoor museums of modern art. Many inns schedule hayrides, barbecues, dancing under the stars.

Consider Rates, Too.

Room rates range from about $3 per day without meals to $8 with three meals. General admission to Tanglewood is $2. Natives claim that even most un-ardent music and dance lovers come back raving from Symphony and Jacob's Pillow.

How should you act to have the most fun?

Join in the fun of the organized entertainment.

Inn owners there say it's often heartbreaking to watch new arrivals.

"They want to find their Prince Charming standing behind the door the moment they open it. When girls don't find a handsome man the first hour or so, they want to take their bags and leave."

Some young women have been known to go from one hotel to another checking in and checking out until they find an attractive man.

Finding Your Man.

Hold out at least a few days, recreation directors advise. The man you're looking for may be out on the golf course or on an overnight hike. The only way you're going to meet him is to join in the organized activity.

Fellows are shy, too, they point out.

Don't hesitate to accept that rather uninteresting looking fellow's invitation to the hotel's after-dinner dance either. He may have five friends—all attractive.

Photos by Phyllis Twachtman.

Barbecues, music of Beethoven at Tanglewood, Berkshire Summer Playhouse. It's hard to waste time, in Berkshires. Two summer stock players, Deirdre Owens and William Swan get acquainted with visiting dog, Beverly.

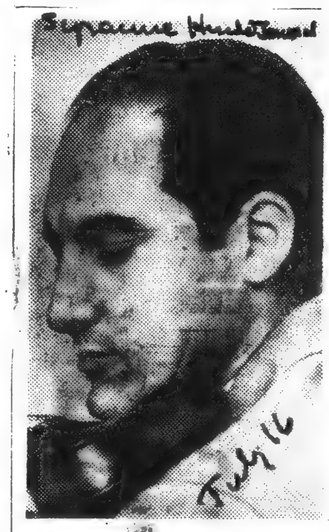
No summer is complete without basic ingredient—vacation romance. Just place for goodbye smack is Kissing Bridge in South Lee, Mass. Covered bridge will be torn down soon unless local residents can raise $5000.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 7 - 1954

"Operation Shuttle"

At the close of tonight's Esplanade Concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles River, 65 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra begin "Operation Shuttle," commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, for week-end concerts in the Berkshire Festival, under the baton of Charles Munch, music director and guest conductors Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin.

The 65 "shuttling" members of the Boston Symphony return to Boston, either Sunday afternoon or evening, or Monday morning, in time for Monday's Esplanade Concert.



Joseph de Pasquale, principal cellist, Boston Symphony Orchestra, took his post there in 1947 at the age of 27. In "Tanglewood" this summer, de Pasquale also is a member of the Bel Arte Trio which opened the 17th Berkshire Festival earlier this month for the Boston Symphony.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 10 1954

Music

The Berkshires Echo to Bach

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 10.—The opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's first weekend was given last night in the theater-concert hall. This is a small house, seating 1200. Actually the attendance was 2800, counting the music lovers huddled about the lawn outside the auditorium.

It was all Bach, this program. Five of his six Brandenburg concertos (the No. 4, excluded), which, you will agree, is quite a lot of Bach.

Wonderful Variety.

But these audiences at Tanglewood are true devotees of Johann Sebastian. (He isn't called the "All-Father" of music for nothing, you know.) And, as you can imagine, five "Brandenburg" concertos filled the cool, cloudless evening with notes like swarms of fireflies.

There is a wonderful variety to these concertos. None is like any other, really, yet all have the same stamp. The variety, the difference between them is to be noted in the choice of instrumental combinations employed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, reduced, with Charles Munch at the helm, sailed through these compositions in a practiced manner. They have always been especial glories of the orchestra, the "Brandenburgs." Yet I would say that on the whole, such as I have heard of them before this were delicately handled.

Rough Sound.

Last night, Mr. Munch seemed generally bent on keeping the strong beats heavier than seemed necessary. Not in all places, of course, but enough to give one that impression. When that happened, naturally, the results were rough sound, particularly in complicated passages, where musical lines intertwine about each other like vines.

Moreover, the situation was by no means improved by the rather frequent and, it appeared to me, unnecessary deviation of the tempo. I have heard jazz groups, without conductor, keep a tempo perfectly, without variation of any kind from beginning to end of a session. And that seemed to me that Mr. Munch's tempo lacked the buoyancy that Bach music required. As you know, a jazz session is ruined at all without buoyance. For that matter, in a "[illegible]" session.

Now that I've got all the gripes, there is much to be said in favor of certain readings. The Concerto No. 2, in F major, for trumpet, flute, oboe and violin, with strings, and the Major, No. 5, for orchestra, piano, flute and violin are the listeners with such [illegible] tions as, perhaps, they had awaiting.

A High Level.

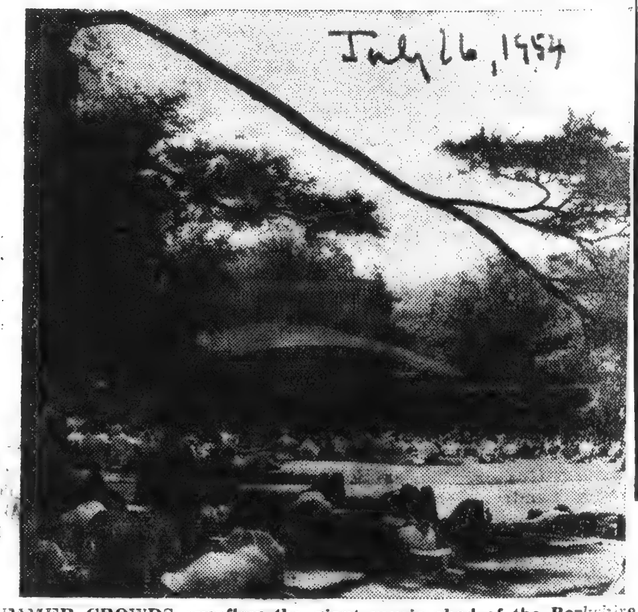
Chief among these was playing of the various [illegible] In the No. 2, Roger [illegible] trumpet; Doriot Anthony, Ralph Gombert, oboe and [illegible] ard Burgin, violin, were on a high level of give-and-[illegible] However, this could not have happened without the coöperation of either the orchestra or the conductor. Mr. Munch, in particular, tooted some extremely difficult passages on a small bore trumpet, almost a toy, that were thrilling to hear.

And in the last work in the program, the No. 5, Lukas Foss, piano; Mr. Burgin and Miss Anthony gave a splendid exhibition of ensemble playing in the second movement, adagio affettuoso.

Anyway, if the reader wanted certain things there, he possessed others in abundance, things like energy and elegance.

Page Eight Claremont (N.H.) Eagle

July 16, 1954



SUMMER CROWDS overflow the giant music shed of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for week end concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra of 104 pieces. The festival, now in its 17th year, has been compared to the Salzburg festival, for importance in the world of music.

[183]

TIGHT BINDING

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
JUL 6 - 1954

New England's Musical Scene

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

GLOUCESTER, Mass., July 4—Since I came to this section of the country years ago I have been a constant observer of the musical climate but which finds it difficult to examine at very close.

The back of the typewriter and I are facing directly into Gloucester harbor. It is evening and there are few boats going out. But there is an apparently unending line of fishing craft of all shapes and sizes coming in. The sun has set behind the hills across the harbor but the afterglow has covered the sky and is reflected in the water with a brilliance that is concise and yet serene. It is a gorgeous coloring, yet it is gentle. The amiable evening and the almost harsh salt smell are not such matters as lead one to thoughts about the musical scene here or anywhere else.

But one does not escape music around these parts. Arthur Feidler concluded another session of the annual Boston Pops last Saturday night. Tomorrow night, Monday, the same Mr. Feidler begins another year of Esplanade concerts. This year however, because of the enlarged schedule at Tanglewood the Esplanade concerts will be held only through Wednesday nights. Then all the players will go on to Tanglewood to rehearse and play there in the concerts which will continue through six Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

IN THE New York Times today I read that there will be special trains running to the Tanglewood concerts beginning next weekend and continuing for the five weekends following. When I was in Boston one day last week there was talk that a similar plan might be worked out for the Boston people who want to hear the concerts but do not like to get out on the roads. The roads incidentally, if the cars that have come into this community during the past few days are an indication, must be jammed.

The now famous Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will get under way on Wednesday, with a concert of chamber music. On Friday night there will be an all-Bach concert played by a chamber orchestra from the Boston forces. On Saturday night and Sunday afternoon the complete orchestra will play full scale symphonic concerts. And that schedule will hold for five more weeks until the completion of this year's festival.

My acquaintance with the Berkshire Festival goes back some years. It began on the evening when the elements defeated the Boston Orchestra. The concert hall at that time, 1936 it was, was a tent. And on that particular night the thunder and lightning and sheets of rain were more than the tent and the orchestra would bear. I have often wondered if all the cars in the vicinity of the tent have been removed yet. Mine was drowned out that night and when I went back the next morning to retrieve it there were hundreds of vehicles about that looked pretty hopeless.

* * *

IT WAS later in that year that the 200-acre Brooks estate which was known as Tanglewood was turned over to Serge Koussevitzky who in turn immediately transferred it to the Boston Orchestra. Dr. Koussevitzky had frequently spoken of his plans for a school, for a summer music center that would in time be world renowned.

I was in Tanglewood for a longer period in 1940, the first year in which the school functioned. I think there are very few of us who knew of Koussevitzky's plans that far back who will ever forget about him. He was a vain man in some respects but he was never inclined, so far as I know, to set up a monument to himself. That he did so is as permanent a proof as anything earthly could be of his singleminded determination to obtain his end.

From 1936 on he never veered from the path he had set himself. In those days he reminded me a little of a soundly trained hunting dog. His concentration on the Tanglewood project was fierce and there was nothing that turned him from it more than passingly. What he accomplished is worth investigating whether one is interested in music or not. It is a magnificent one-man job.

* * *

CLOSE to the Tanglewood setting is South Mountain near Pittsfield. That has been a summer chamber music center for more years than I can remember. This summer the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation and the Fromm Music Foundation have joined forces to make possible nine Saturday afternoons of chamber music during July and August.

The Castle Hill concerts, which are played in the open air theatre on the magnificent former Crane estate at Ipswich, will embark on another season next Friday night. These concerts, I am told, will be more varied this summer with an assortment of dancers, instrumentalists, and singers on every program.

The Cape Anne Festival of the Arts will be concluded in the near future with a recital by Emma Endres Kountz.

On July 17 and 18 in Newport, R.I., there will be a jazz festival. I have looked over the list of performers. They impress me only vaguely. I wonder if they are anything like the jazz men I used to know, like Mole and Teegarden, like Joe Venuti and Buck Clayton, like Peewee Russell and a dozen more who knew their business thoroughly. If it were not for the salt water and the extraordinary serenity of my front yard I would go to Newport to find out. As it is I am sure I shall not know the answer this summer.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 2 - 1954

Munch Arrives in Tanglewood Tomorrow

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York today by Air France from Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Mass., tomorrow, to his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert a week from tonight with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p.m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

TRENTON, N. J.
SUNDAY TIMES-ADVERTISER
JUL 4 - 1954

The New Records

After considerable neglect by the recordmakers, Mendelssohn's three principal symphonies have appeared at the same time—indeed, with two on the same record. You hardly should expect more effective playing of the 3rd "Scotch," and the 5th, "Reformation," than that of Dimitri Mitropoulos and the New York Philharmonic-Symphony (Columbia).

Josef Krips and the London Philharmonic are responsible for a no less appreciative performance of the 4th, "Italian." The companion symphony on the record is Schumann's 4th, which has its moments of a turgid emptiness as well as moments of no little exaltation. It's a big chore for a conductor, and Krips has given it all possible cohesion (London).

A recording of Hector Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch for RCA Victor, and released in September, 1953, has been awarded the "Grand Prix for vocal ensemble with orchestra" according to an announcement from the French Academie Charles Cros.

The recording itself was made in Symphony Hall, Boston in February of last year with the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses. Soloists were Margaret Roggiero, contralto; Leslie Chabay, tenor; and Yi Kwei-Sze, bass, assisting the orchestra.

But the recording as well as concert performances of the work by the Boston Symphony have been a feature of the commemoration this year of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' birth.

The work will be performed again by Munch and the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival this coming July and August during the course of a commemorative Berlioz festival. Also included in the Festival will be the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" recently recorded by Munch with the Boston Symphony for Fall release.

Label "X" has put out some of its long-embalmed jazz originals. Among them is an LP by "Eddie Condon's Hot Shots" and among the eight numbers are "I'm Gonna Stomp Mr. Henry Lee" (No. 1 and No. 2). The sidemen are Jack Teagarden, the late Glenn Miller, Red McKenzie, Coleman Hawkins and Pee Wee Russell.

Among the better dance albums: (1) "Just One More Chance," nine smooth numbers by Les Elgart (Columbia) including "For Me and My Gal" and "Cuddle Up a Little Closer" and (2) "Dance Craze," a Capitol EP that includes the Bunny Hop, the Creep, Charleston and Hokey Pokey.

Mambo of the month: "Hernando's Hideaway," from "The Pajama Game," by Tito Rodriguez and His Orchestra (RCA-Victor).

Best encore: "I Wished on the Moon," Ella Fitzgerald and Gordon Jenkins, his orchestra and chorus (Decca).

Hillbilly hit: "I Hit the Jackpot (When I Won You)," Bob Wills and his Texas Playboys (MGM).

Daily Hampshire Gazette
Northampton - July 12, 1954

SIX

Premiere At Tanglewood Captivates Vast Audience

A crisp cool night ushered in the first of the shed concerts on Saturday with the premiere performance at Tanglewood of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." An audience of more than 8,500 was completely captivated with the unerring presentation by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra of this graphic concert opera. The fresh young voices of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club were an exceptionally fine complement to the solo voices and the orchestra.

Based on Gerard de Nerval's French translation of Goethe's Faust, it unfolds the dramatic story in four distinct parts. The instrumental music is dominant throughout, as Berlioz intended it to be, and therein lies its strength and the enjoyment of the whole.

The first part shows the disillusioned Faust, sung by David Poleri, a tenor with a warm but heady voice, against a background of joyous peasant music, well sung by the chorus, their heads and voices bouncing with the infectious rhythm of the music. Berlioz ended this part with his famous "Rackoczy March," which Charles Munch in his inimitable style brought from a quiet insistence to a rousing finish, the audience applauding before the final notes.

In the second part Faust, about to end his life, is suddenly joined by Mephistopheles, sung with excellent enunciation and in true operatic style by Martial Singher, whose charactization now dominates the story. A wonderfully ingenious development, including "The Song of the Rat" sung by David Gram, a pleasing bass, and "The Song of the Flea" by Mephistopheles and the Ballet of the Sylphs, ends with a clever interplay of the songs of the soldiers and the students.

Marguerite, the important figure in the third part, was sung with tender and impassioned voice by Eleanor Steber, especially the modal and folk-like melody, "King of Thule," using a small orcestra, as accompaniment. A love duet leading to a trio ends with a choral and orchestral ensemble.

During the last part, the lovers are united, then torn apart, Faust is doomed, Marguerite saved and Mephistopheles triumphed. Mr. Munch led the orchestra, soloists and choristers through each phase as it unfolded with a skill that his devotion to Berlioz proves is well-founded.

Sunday afternoon's concert, the second in the shed series, was an all-Beethoven program with the orchestra directed by Pierre Monteux, a great favorite with Tanglewood audiences. It started with tthe Lenore Overture No. 3, performed in true classic style. Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, in his 30th anniversary with Monteux and the Boston Symphony, played the Emperor concerto with delicacy and strength, at times insinuating a South American flavor that was a little distracting. A pianist of amazing power and technique, he used a tremendous range of dynamics. The audience recalled him several times.

The program ended with the popular fifth symphony, Mr. Monteux with his sparse but telling gestures making it a new and exciting experience. The audience of 10,050 was vociferous in their approval and seemed loath to leave this unique place of musical enjoyment.—Martha R. Beaver.

Knick News
Albany, N.Y.

FESTIVAL SOLOIST — Vera Franceschi, pianist, will be soloist in the performance of Cesar Franck's "Lee Djinns" in a Berkshire Festival concert at 8:30 p. m. Saturday at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux in a program of French music.

LENOX, Mass., July 16—The third week of four Berkshire festival concerts at Tanglewood comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini by The Zimbler Sinfonietta next Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert hall; a program of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon, July 25, in the music shed.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, founded by Josef Zimbler, 'cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, and under his musical direction, consisting of 21 players, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new Wednesday evening Chamber Music series.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power

[184]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
JUL 10 1954

Berkshire Festival:

Munch Offers Bach Program

2,800 Attend Fine Opening

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, Mass, July 10—Charles Munch opened the first of six big weekends of this year's Berkshire Festival with a Bach program in the theatre-concert hall last night.

A crowd of 2,800 people attended.

The program consisted of five of the six Brandenburg concertos played by 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. They were well conducted by giving Nos. 1, 3, and 2 before and Nos. 6 and 5 after the intermission.

Ragged Tempo

This "Bach Madness" did not have quite so much method in it as one might have expected. Munch always has approached Bach in virile fashion but perhaps not with such an over-vital rhythmic urge as he did last night.

For that reason the performances sounded unnecessarily rough and altogether too rugged. Things went wrong here and there with tempos, difficult passages, and endings.

The soloists were the bright spot of the first half of the concert.

Roger Voisin's "Bach" trumpet in the second concerto may have sounded like a child's toy instrument injected into the assemblage, but it was most skillfully played.

So, too, were the flute of Doriot Anthony, the oboe of Ralph Gomberg, and the violin of Richard Burgin.

Fine Evening

In the sixth and fifth concertos much was much more in the vein. The former found the viola and cello sections of the orchestra in excellent form.

The latter gained in stature through the finely-controlled playing of Lukas Foss whose piano cadenza in the first movement was a model of crescendo playing.

Whatever the reservation about the performances, however, the music gave everyone a lift. A whole evening of the Brandenburg concertos is just enough. They never let the listener down.

Millbrook, Conn
"Roundtable"
July 15, 1954

Guest Soloist

Vera Franceschi, pianist, is guest soloist in the performance of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" in a Berkshire Festival program of French music with Pierre Monteux conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed on Saturday evening, July 17, 8:30 p.m., at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TIGHT BINDING

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
JUL 10 1954

MUSIC

Munch Conducts Bach At Berkshire Festival

By PAUL AFFELDER

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 10—The first orchestral concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival was presented last evening by the Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony players, under the direction of Charles Munch. In the new six-week festival setup this year, these Chamber Orchestra programs are offered on Friday evenings, with the full orchestra performing Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

This initial weekend is devoted to works by three "Bs"—Bach, Berlioz and Beethoven. Mr. Munch's program last night was concerned with five of the six Bach Brandenburg Concerti, only No. 4 being omitted. This list was sufficient to attract an audience that filled the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall to capacity, with another 1,600 music lovers gathered on the spacious lawns, where they could enjoy the music in the open air.

Mr. Munch and the 40 musicians under his baton did not attempt to attack these wonderful Concerti with any degree of historic authenticity. The accompanying continuo parts were played on a modern piano instead of a harpsichord, and in the First Concerto, the several returns to the beginning of the Menuetto were eliminated. One noted also a tendency to romanticize in certain passages, particularly in the opening movement of the Fifth Concerto.

F Major Outstanding

By far the outstanding performance of the evening was that of the Concerto No. 2 in F Major for solo violin, flute, oboe, trumpet and string orchestra, in which the solo parts were brilliantly played by Richard Burgin, Doriot Anthony, Ralph Gomberg and Roger Voisin, all first-chair members of the orchestra. Mr. Voisin, in particular, distinguished himself by his performance of the extremely difficult and dangerously high passages on a specially constructed miniature trumpet. Contrary to usual practice, this instrument did not blast out above the rest of the orchestra, but was made to blend with most telling effect. It was this Concerto, too, into which Mr. Munch infused the most vitality.

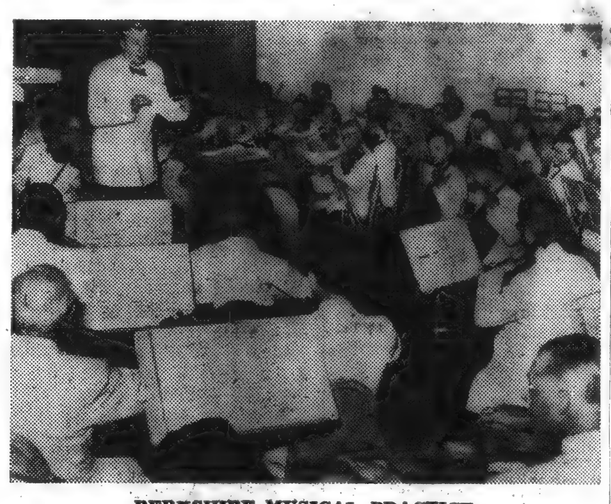
Elsewhere, we found him somewhat on the stiff, slow, heavy-handed side. There was ample elegance of style in the Concerto No. 1, but the Concerto No. 3 in G Major suffered from choppiness in the first movement. Here, however, the conductor employed some interesting, if unorthodox, effects by his wide variation of dynamics.

The Concerto No. 6 in B flat Major, which is scored only for violas, cellos and double-basses, requires a certain amount of vitalising in order to keep it from bogging down and losing its unique coloristic effect. Unfortunately, it was played so broadly last night that it became difficult to sustain the listeners' interest. Despite an excessive weightiness of texture in the final movement, however, that section moved along with more rhythmic verve.

Mr. Burgin, Miss Anthony and Lukas Foss, pianist, were the soloists in the concluding Concerto No. 5 in D Major. It was here that Mr. Munch's overly romantic approach made itself most strongly felt. As a result, the music often took on a plodding, wooden quality, and Mr. Foss' long solo in the first movement was made to sound more like Brahms than Bach. The high point of this work was the middle movement, scored only for the three solo players, and it was delivered with great sensitivity and refinement. The finale, too, was better, taking on more rhythmic buoyancy and propulsion than had more of the other music on the program.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
JUL 9 - 1954

at the
NEW YORK THEATRES
by Charles K. Freeman



BERKSHIRE MUSICAL PRACTICE

MUSIC

In a summer swing around the Eastern Coast this observer of the Theatre, Music and Dance departments, all closely related each to the other, paused in the quiet countryside of Lennox Mass. to note the preparations attendant upon the oncoming Berkshire Festival, which tees odd with a chamber orchestra of symphony players this evening.

* * *

Since we haven't anything quite of the same kind, the Berkshire Festival is as important to be aware of musically as, let us say, the Shakespeare season at Stratford, Ontario. The latter Festival of plays which aroused considerable excitement last year is digging deeper and more experimentally into seldom done plays and is paying court to a far greater number of attendees than ever before.

* * *

But back to Berkshire, where the towns are beautifully laid out and the highways planned for swarming traffic. This is the fourth season that Charles Munch lifts his baton as conductor of much of the orchestra's presentations and head of the musical activities, which includes besides the chamber and full Boston Symphony orchestras, the music school, as well. An all-Bach program of Brandenberg Concerto, with Lukas Foss as Piano soloist is tonight's offering and, tomorrow the Music Shed will be inaugurated with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth.

* * *

Mr. Munch, who addressed the opening exercises of the Center last Sunday and had his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, is expecting this to be the most active of the many Berkshire seasons, now seventeen in number. There will be six weeks of music and particular note will be taken of this, the 150th anniversary of the composer Berlioz. The Saturday morning rehearsal will be open to the public with proceeds for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
JUL 11 1954

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Opens Series

Tanglewood, Mass., July 10—The Berkshire Festival currently celebrating its 17th season, is not only growing older but bigger. Last year's concert's numbered nine by the full Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat music shed; six by the Boston Chamber Orchestra in the theater-concert hall seating 1,200.

Spurred on by having had all attendance records broken during the '53 season, with approximately a total of 118,000 music lovers present for these 15 concerts, the festival this year has enlarged to a point of boasting 24 concerts to be presented over a period of three weeks: 12 by the full Boston Symphony in the shed; six Chamber Orchestra concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall; six Chamber Music concerts also in the Latter Auditorium.

Thus, during the current initial week, the festival, specifically, is having three opening nights. Last Wednesday, pianist Claudio Arrau and the Bel Art Trio opened the Chamber Music Series. Friday night a selection of 40 men from the 104-strong present in the regular Boston ensemble opened the Chamber Orchestra concerts. Saturday night the complete Boston Symphony begins its shed series.

Friday's concert, the first I've attended, featured five of the six concertos Bach wrote in 1721 for the Margrave of Brandenburg, familiarly known as the "Brandenburg concertos." Charles Munch, toasting the summer with a white tuxedo, was on deck to lead his orchestra for the entire five. Lukas Foss, pianist composer, was soloist in No. 555, and regular members of the orchestra, including the personable lady flutist, Doriot Anthony, officiated for the other solo portions.

Attending concerts here in the picturesque Berkshire hills—which have not only contributed to the inspiration of a great music festival, but also have provided the setting for Hawthorne to write "The House of Seven Gables" and for Melville to write "Moby Dick"—is, at best, a rare experience.

When one does not agree with the interpretation of the music, as was the case with this reviewer last night, the impact of the experience lessens but it still remains memorable.

Munch conducted the five Bach works (among the most joyous and effervescent the composer wrote) with a driving tension which did not become them. With the reliably high standard of the Bostonians, however, backed by the incredible genius of the Leipsig giant, the music came through with a measure of integrity if not suffused with the splendor it deserved.

Music and Dance Tonight

Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park. 8:30.

N. Y. Summer Dance Festival. Pearl Primus featured at 2:40 . . . at 8:40, Myra Klinch with William Mille and Rhoda Johnson. YM-YWHA, Lexington Av. and 92nd St.

Hartford Times - July 10, 1954

Berlioz and Beethoven Works Featured at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The genius of Berlioz consists in a masterly use of orchestral timbres, a galvanic rhythmic sense, and a resplendence of tonal resource.

All these traits crowded upon the ear Saturday night at Tanglewood when the Shed concerts were formally initiated with an exciting performance of the composer's "Damnation of Faust." Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists in the first of many scheduled Berlioz works.

* * *

TO THOSE ACQUAINTED only with the famous orchestral excerpts this masterpiece, so sorely neglected in this country, must come as a complete revelation. It contains an infinitude of Berliozan effect, an astounding gamut of orchestral color, and a propulsive drive that carries everything before it.

This is no literal re-telling of the Goethe classic and, considering the dramatic weakness of the Boito version, the composer wisely avoided this pitfall. He chose at random what appealed to him in the story and made some original additions which, at first consideration, may seem disjointed and out of context.

But there is at least a spiritual unity here, one might call it a symbolic verisimilitude to the story. Faust, Marguerite, and Mephistopheles are directly out of Goethe, eternal figures for all to observe.

* * *

ONE MAY CAVIL — with esthetic justice — over the composer's placing Faust in the Hungarian plains so that the celebrated Rakoczy March may be interpolated. But no one can deny its tremendous effect, coming as a climax to Part One. The audience was almost literally pulled up out of its seat Saturday night.

Mr. Munch, who is such an ardent protagonist for Berlioz, conducted with dedication and complete understanding and the orchestra responded with a cohesive fervor rare in the annals of these Summer concerts. The well-trained choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe were in unusually good form, especially in the peasant choruses which require facile articulation.

The distinguished soloists were Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm. It was Martial Singher, however, who dominated the proceedings with his authoritative and beautifully conceived Mephisto, a more diabolical figure than Gounod created.

Mr. Poleri sang Faust with ringing intensity and surprising refinement and Miss Steber, as Marguerite, was at her very best. Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander was resonantly effective.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood was an occasion for greeting old and trusted friends.

Certainly not least in importance was the return of Pierre Monteux in the role of guest conductor. According to the archives and veteran followers of the Boston organization Mr. Monteux was regular conductor of the orchestra right after World War One and since 1951 has been a frequent guest.

* * *

HIS ROLY-POLY FIGURE and inscrutable expression are always a source of delight, but he is not a man to be taken at face value. For behind this amiable facade is a leader of impeccable musicianship and taste, a peerless conductor of the French repertory, and one of the great symphonic directors of this era.

And he brought with him three other tried and true "friends" — Beethoven's "Leonore No. 3 Overture," the "Emperor" Concerto, and the most popular of all symphonies, the same composer's "Fifth." The mere inclusion of the latter did not guarantee a record-breaking crowd — but there were more than 10,000 in attendance.

It is almost superfluous to say that Mr. Monteux expounded this All-Beethoven program to the audience with his customary adherence to reasonable tempi and tasteful dynamics. Such an approach, coming after so many exaggerated interpretations, can have a salutary effect — and such was the case Sunday.

* * *

A PARTICULAR delight was the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which gained immeasurably in emotional impact from the emphasis on the cantilena passages. Mr. Monteux knows how to draw out the long line and make it count for something.

Claudio Arrau, the Chilean pianist, was the soloist in the Beethoven "Emperor" and sustained his reputation as one of the outstanding technicians today. However, there is more than technique to Beethoven and we occasionally found his bravura style a little annoying. He did relax his dynamism in the second movement with very gratifying results.

MANCHESTER, N. H.
UNION-LEADER
JUL 7 - 1954

Tanglewood Opens Concert Season Tonight

LENOX, Mass.—(UP)—The Berkshire Music festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood.

The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte string trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist.

During the six-week season, the Boston symphony orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

Hartford Times - July 9, 1954

Brandenburg Concerti Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — The annual celebration dedicated to the glorification of both music and the tourist trade and known as the Berkshire Music Festival opened here last night with all the appropriate fanfare and all but one of the six Brandenburg Concerti of Bach.

It is not unusual, shall we say, for Tanglewood to open with one or more of the Brandenburg Concerti. These eminently worthy compositions have become something of a ritual with this festival. Indeed, it might be possible to imagine that Bach wrote nothing else beyond these six concerti, since they have been performed here for the past three years without a single lapse or variation.

* * *

ONLY ONCE BEFORE, I believe, have Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra made such a marathon of it and performed five of them on one evening. Towards the end of the concert it became a contest as to who would succumb first, Mr. Munch, the orchestra, the audience or Bach.

All this is not to say that the music was not ably, even exquisitely, performed. Each piece this year was turned out with even more bite and vivacity than ever before, although if memory serves, some iota of tonal shimmer was sacrificed for the added energy. Only the Fourth Concerto was omitted this year.

The high point of the Brandenburgs was, as it always has been, the unsurpassable performance of Lukas Foss in the Fifth. Mr. Foss has made the piano rendition of this piece something that is very much his own, and I doubt if there is a pianist in the land who can give the brilliant cadenza in the first movement so much rich expressiveness.

* * *

AFTER MR. FOSS' unbeatable cadenza [illegible] the delicate interplay of Miss Anthony on the flute [illegible] Gomberg on the oboe [illegible] Second Even Roger Voisin who seems to be able to play a very mean trumpet except in this super-human trumpet part, excelled himself and did a creditable job.

Dr. Munch, who seems to have a great affinity as well as an inordinate fondness for these works, conducted throughout the arduous evening with brisk attention to detail and nuance without once allowing the broad sweep and power of the music to escape him.

Some 2,200 [illegible] seated themselves in the Theater Concert Hall and sprawled themselves on the grass outside to hear the music. The night itself was cool and most conducive to a pleasant evening of listening. Only Bach, I fear, might have had cause to sweller a bit. He must now and then wonder why the inexhaustible splendor and richness of the vast amount of music he created must remain unheard by Tanglewood ears.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE
JUL 1954

Pianist's Appearance At Tanglewood Changed

NOX, Mass., July 1—Chan[illegible] involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony orchestra during the Berkshire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, have been announced. [illegible] the Boston music [illegible] symphony.

Pianist [illegible] will appear with [illegible] three weeks [illegible] uled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert [illegible] by Jean Morel. [illegible] Liszt E flat Piano [illegible] will replace [illegible] Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of August [illegible] replacing the Ravel Piano [illegible] certo, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

[185]

TIGHT BINDING

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE

JUL 10 1954

MUSIC

Munch Conducts Bach At Berkshire Festival

By PAUL AFFELDER

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 10—The first orchestral concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival was presented last evening by the Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony players, under the direction of Charles Munch. In the new six-week festival setup this year, these Chamber Orchestra programs are offered on Friday evenings, with the full orchestra performing Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons.

This initial weekend is devoted to works by three "Bs"—Bach, Berlioz and Beethoven. Mr. Munch's program last night was concerned with five of the six Bach Brandenburg Concerti, only No. 4 being omitted. This list was sufficient to attract an audience that filled the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall to capacity, with another 1,600 music lovers gathered on the spacious lawns, where they could enjoy the music in the open air.

Mr. Munch and the 40 musicians under his baton did not attempt to attack these wonderful Concerti with any degree of historic authenticity. The accompanying continuo parts were played on a modern piano instead of a harpsichord, and in the First Concerto, the several returns to the beginning of the Menuetto were eliminated. One noted also a tendency to romanticize in certain passages, particularly in the opening movement of the Fifth Concerto.

F Major Outstanding

By far the outstanding performance of the evening was that of the Concerto No. 2 in F Major for solo violin, flute, oboe, trumpet and string orchestra, in which the solo parts were brilliantly played by Richard Burgin, Doriot Anthony, Ralph Gomberg and Roger Voisin, all first-chair members of the orchestra. Mr. Voisin, in particular, distinguished himself by his performance of the extremely difficult and dangerously high passages on a specially constructed miniature trumpet. Contrary to usual practice, this instrument did not blast out above the rest of the orchestra, but was made to blend with most telling effect. It was this Concerto, too, into which Mr. Munch infused the most vitality.

Elsewhere, we found him somewhat on the stiff, slow, heavy-handed side. There was ample elegance of style in the Concerto No. 1, but the Concerto No. 3 in G Major suffered from choppiness in the first movement. Here, however, the conductor employed some interesting, if unorthodox, effects by his wide variation of dynamics.

The Concerto No. 6 in B flat Major, which is scored only for violas, cellos and double-basses, requires a certain amount of vitalizing in order to keep it from bogging down and losing its unique coloristic effect. Unfortunately, it was played so broadly last night that it became difficult to sustain the listeners' interest. Despite an excessive weightiness of texture in the final movement, however, that section moved along with more rhythmic verve.

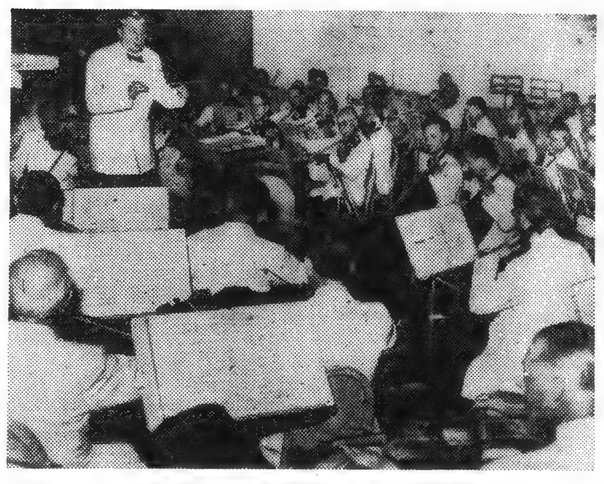
Mr. Burgin, Miss Anthony and Lukas Foss, pianist, were the soloists in the concluding Concerto No. 5 in D Major. It was here that Mr. Munch's overly romantic approach made itself most strongly felt. As a result, the music often took on a plodding, wooden quality, and Mr. Foss' long solo in the first movement was made to sound more like Brahms than Bach. The high point of this work was the middle movement, scored only for the three solo players, and it was delivered with great sensitivity and refinement. The finale, too, was better, taking on more rhythmic buoyancy and propulsion than had more of the other music on the program.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS

JUL 9 - 1954

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman



BERKSHIRE MUSICAL PRACTICE

MUSIC

In a summer swing around the Eastern Coast this observer of the Theatre, Music and Dance departments, all closely related each to the other, paused in the quiet countryside of Lennox Mass. to note the preparations attendant upon the oncoming Berkshire Festival, which tees odd with a chamber orchestra of symphony players this evening.

* * *

Since we haven't anything quite of the same kind, the Berkshire Festival is as important to be aware of musically as, let us say, the Shakespeare season at Stratford, Ontario. The latter Festival of plays which aroused considerable excitement last year is digging deeper and more experimentally into seldom done plays and is paying court to a far greater number of attendees than ever before.

* * *

But back to Berkshire, where the towns are beautifully laid out and the highways planned for swarming traffic. This is the fourth season that Charles Munch lifts his baton as conductor of much of the orchestra's presentations and head of the musical activities, which includes besides the chamber and full Boston Symphony orchestras, the music school, as well. An all-Bach program of Brandenberg Concerto, with Lukas Foss as Piano soloist is tonight's offering and, tomorrow the Music Shed will be inaugurated with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth.

* * *

Mr. Munch, who addressed the opening exercises of the Center last Sunday and had his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, is expecting this to be the most active of the many Berkshire seasons, now seventeen in number. There will be six weeks of music and particular note will be taken of this, the 150th anniversary of the composer Berlioz. The Saturday morning rehearsal will be open to the public with proceeds for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST

JUL 1 1 1954

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Opens Series

Tanglewood, Mass., July 10—The Berkshire Festival currently celebrating its 17th season, is not only growing older but bigger. Last year's concert's numbered nine by the full Boston Symphony in the 6,000-seat music shed; six by the Boston Chamber Orchestra in the theater-concert hall seating 1,200.

Spurred on by having had all attendance records broken during the '53 season, with approximately a total of 118,000 music lovers present for these 15 concerts, the festival this year has enlarged to a point of boasting 24 concerts to be presented over a period of three weeks: 12 by the full Boston Symphony in the shed; six Chamber Orchestra concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall; six Chamber Music concerts also in the Latter Auditorium.

Thus, during the current initial week, the festival, specifically, is having three opening nights. Last Wednesday, pianist Claudio Arrau and the Bel Art Trio opened the Chamber Music Series. Friday night a selection of 40 men from the 104-strong present in the regular Boston ensemble opened the Chamber Orchestra concerts. Saturday night the complete Boston Symphony begins its shed series.

Friday's concert, the first I've attended, featured five of the six concertos Bach wrote in 1721 for the Margrave of Brandenburg, familiarly known as the "Brandenburg concertos." Charles Munch, toasting the summer with a white tuxedo, was on deck to lead his orchestra for the entire five. Lukas Foss, pianist composer, was soloist in No. 555, and regular members of the orchestra, including the personable lady flutist, Doriot Anthony, officiated for the other solo portions.

Attending concerts here in the picturesque Berkshire hills which have not only contributed to the inspiration of a great music festival, but also have provided the setting for Hawthorne to write "The House of Seven Gables" and for Melville to write "Moby Dick"—is, at best, a rare experience.

When one does not agree with the interpretation of the music, as was the case with this reviewer last night, the impact of the experience lessens but it still remains memorable.

Munch conducted the five Bach works (among the most joyous and effervescent the composer wrote) with a driving tension which did not become them. With the reliably high standard of the Bostonians, however, backed by the incredible genius of the Leipsig giant, the music came through with a measure of integrity if not suffused with the splendor it deserved.

Music and Dance Tonight

Goldman Band, Edwin Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

N. Y. Summer Dance Festival. Pearl Primus featured at 2:40 . . . at 8:40, Myra Klinch with William Mille and Rhoda Johnson. YM-YWHA, Lexington Av. and 92nd St.

Hartford Times - July 18, 1954

Berlioz and Beethoven Works Featured at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The genius of Berlioz consists in a masterly use of orchestral timbres, a galvanic rhythmic sense, and a resplendence of tonal resource.

All these traits crowded upon the ear Saturday night at Tanglewood when the Shed concerts were formally initiated with an exciting performance of the composer's "Damnation of Faust." Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists in the first of many scheduled Berlioz works.

* * *

TO THOSE ACQUAINTED only with the famous orchestral excerpts this masterpiece, so sorely neglected in this country, must come as a complete revelation. It contains an infinitude of Berliozan effect, an astounding gamut of orchestral color, and a propulsive drive that carries everything before it.

This is no literal re-telling of the Goethe classic and, considering the dramatic weakness of the Boito version, the composer wisely avoided this pitfall. He chose at random what appealed to him in the story and made some original additions which, at first consideration, may seem disjointed and out of context.

But there is at least a spiritual unity here, one might call it a symbolic verisimilitude to the story. Faust, Marguerite, and Mephistopheles are directly out of Goethe, eternal figures for all to observe.

* * *

ONE MAY CAVIL — with esthetic justice — over the composer's placing Faust in the Hungarian plains so that the celebrated Rakoczy March may be interpolated. But no one can deny its tremendous effect, coming as a climax to Part One. The audience was almost literally pulled up out of its seat Saturday night.

Mr. Munch, who is such an ardent protagonist for Berlioz, conducted with dedication and complete understanding and the orchestra responded with a cohesive fervor rare in the annals of these Summer concerts. The well-trained choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe were in unusually good form, especially in the peasant choruses which require facile articulation.

The distinguished soloists were Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm. It was Martial Singher, however, who dominated the proceedings with his authoritative and beautifully conceived Mephisto, a more diabolical figure than Gounod created.

Mr. Poleri sang Faust with ringing intensity and surprising refinement and Miss Steber, as Marguerite, was at her very best. Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander was resonantly effective.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood was an occasion for greeting old and trusted friends.

Certainly not least in importance was the return of Pierre Monteux in the role of guest conductor. According to the archives and veteran followers of the Boston organization Mr. Monteux was regular conductor of the orchestra right after World War One and since 1951 has been a frequent guest.

* * *

HIS ROLY-POLY FIGURE and inscrutable expression are always a source of delight, but he is not a man to be taken at face value. For behind this amiable facade is a leader of impeccable musicianship and taste, a peerless conductor of the French repertory, and one of the great symphonic directors of this era.

And he brought with him three other tried and true "friends" — Beethoven's "Leonore No. 3 Overture," the "Emperor" Concerto, and the most popular of all symphonies, the same composer's "Fifth." The mere inclusion of the latter did not guarantee a record-breaking crowd — but there were more than 10,000 in attendance.

It is almost superfluous to say that Mr. Monteux, expounded this All-Beethoven program to the audience with his customary adherence to reasonable tempi and tasteful dynamics. Such an approach, coming after so many exaggerated interpretations, can have a salutary effect — and such was the case Sunday.

* * *

A PARTICULAR delight was the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which gained immeasurably in emotional impact from the emphasis on the cantilena passages. Mr. Monteux knows how to draw out the long line and make it count for something.

Claudio Arrau, the Chilean pianist, was the soloist in the Beethoven "Emperor" and sustained his reputation as one of the outstanding technicians today. However, there is more than technique to Beethoven and we occasionally found his bravura style a little annoying. He did relax his dynamism in the second movement with very gratifying results.

MANCHESTER, N. H.
UNION-LEADER

JUL 7 - 1954

Tanglewood Opens Concert Season Tonight

LENOX, Mass.—(UP)—The Berkshire Music festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood.

The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte string trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist.

During the six-week season, the Boston symphony orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

Hartford Times - July 19, 1954

Brandenburg Concerti Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — The annual celebration dedicated to the glorification of both music and the tourist trade and known as the Berkshire Music Festival opened here last night with all the appropriate fanfare and all but one of the six Brandenburg Concerti of Bach.

It is not unusual, shall we say, for Tanglewood to open with one or more of the Brandenburg Concerti. These eminently worthy compositions have become something of a ritual with this festival. Indeed, it might be possible to imagine that Bach wrote nothing else beyond these six concerti, since they have been performed here for the past three years without a single lapse or variation.

* * *

ONLY ONCE BEFORE, I believe, have Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra made such a marathon of it and performed five of them on one evening. Towards the end of the concert it became a contest as to who would succumb first, Mr. Munch, the orchestra, the audience or Bach.

All this is not to say that the music was not ably, exquisitely, performed. Each [illegible] this year was turned out [illegible] even more bite and vivacity than ever before, although if memory serves, some iota of tonal sweetness was sacrificed for the added energy. Only the Fourth Concerto was omitted this year.

The high point of the Brandenburgs was, as it always has been, the unsurpassable performance of Lukas Foss in the Fifth. Mr. Foss has made of this something that is very much his own, and I doubt if there is a pianist in the land who could give the brilliant cadenza in the first movement so much [illegible] expressiveness.

* * *

AFTER MR. FOSS' [illegible] able cadenza might [illegible] the delicate interplay of [illegible] Anthony on the flute [illegible] Ralph Gomberg on the oboe [illegible] Second Even Roger Voisin who seems to be able to play a very mean trumpet except in this super-human trumpet part, excelled himself and did a creditable job.

Dr. Munch, who seems to have a great affinity as well as an inordinate fondness for these works, conducted throughout the arduous evening with lavish attention to detail and nuance without once allowing the broad sweep and power of the music to escape him.

Some 2,800 music admirers seated themselves in the Theater-Concert Hall and sprawled themselves on the grass outside to hear the music. The night itself was cool and most conducive to a pleasant evening of listening. Only Bach, I fear, might have had cause to sweltter a bit. He must now and then wonder why the inexhaustible splendor and richness of the vast amount of music he created must remain unheard by Tanglewood ears.

CLAREMONT, N. H.
EAGLE

JUL 1 a 1954

Pianist's Appearance At Tanglewood Changed

NOX, Mass., July 1—Chan[illegible] involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Sym[illegible] phony orchestra at the Berk[illegible]shire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, have been announced. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony, [illegible] Pianist, Victor Rosen[illegible] will appear with the [illegible] three weeks' [illegible] uled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert [illegible] Jean Morel, [illegible] E flat Piano Concerto [illegible] will replace the [illegible] Juan previously listed.

On the concert of August [illegible] replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

[185]

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
JUL 12 1954

MUSIC

Berlioz, Beethoven Works Heard at Berkshire Festival

By PAUL AFFELDER

Lenox, Mass., July 12—The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close here at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with an all-Beethoven program conducted by Pierre Monteux.

To at least one observer, it seems rather foolish to ask an audience to drive as far as 125 miles to listen to another performance of the Leonore Overture No. 3, the Fifth Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto. Festivals are for more unusual fare than this.

What made the weekend so distinguished was the exciting performance on Saturday evening of the complete "Damnation of Faust" of Hector Berlioz. This is a true festival work, and it touched off what will be a whole series of performances of Berlioz compositions, commemorating the sesquicentennial of the composer's birth.

In calling "The Damnation of Faust" a "dramatic legend" or "dramatic oratorio" Berlioz knew what he was about. Without resorting to narration, but relying purely on dialogue and song, underlined with vivid orchestral commentary, he gives us, in a little over two hours, the most moving and effective of all the musical settings of the "Faust" legend.

Munch Praised

Charles Munch, who directed the performance, is one of the most inspiring Berlioz interpreters of our day, and the reading he gave us on this occasion was, in most respects, a memorable one.

The orchestra itself was in top form, whether it was storming forth the triumphant strains of the thrice-familiar "Rakoczy March," the ethereal "Dance of the Sylphs" or the hair-raising tumult and hoof-beating in the "Ride to the Abyss."

Berlioz could have asked for no more stirring presentation of this music, which is able to provide both the aural and visual resources for the recreation of Goethe's tale.

Considering the vastness of the area to be covered by sound in the shed, one kept wishing for larger, more powerful choral forces than those provided by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, though there was no denying the excellence of their work, which was generally clean and spirited.

Singher Leads Soloists

Dominating the soloists by his wonderful sense of style was Martial Singher, who is somewhat of a specialist at singing the role of Mephistopheles. How ominous it was to hear him in some of his evil passages, with the brasses snarling underneath!

David Poleri, as Faust, got off to a shaky start, but as the evening wore on his voice seemed to become firmer and fresher. In his brief solos as Brander, Donald Gramm sang with considerable command and resonance.

It is a long time since we have heard such beautiful singing from Eleanor Steber, the Marguerite. Not only was she in good voice, producing a [illegible] even tone, but she was especially inspired by [illegible]

By delivering "Le Roi de Thule" in [illegible]ree, with its extensive viola obbligato, so cunningly played by Joseph De Pasquale, and the "Romance" in part four, with the melancholy English horn solo, sensitively set forth by Louis Speyer, were among the high points of the evening.

8,500 Shout Approval

It was Mr. Munch, however, whose inspired leadership struck fire so many times throughout the performance. When it was all over, the audience of 8,500 applauded and shouted its approval.

Such was the dynamism and beauty of this music that we wanted to hear it all over again. Fortunately for us and for Brooklyn music lovers, "The Damnation of Faust" will be presented at the Academy of Music during the forthcoming regular Boston Symphony season.

At yesterday afternoon's Beethoven concert, Mr. Monteaux and Claudio Arrau, the piano soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto, observed another anniversary—the 39th of their first appearance together with the Boston Orchestra in February, 1924.

Mr. Monteaux treated both the Leonore Overture and the Fifth Symphony with considerable breadth, power and dignity. Here was Beethoven playing that moved the hearer not by its stark dramatic effects but rather by its rich nobility.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 4 - 1954

Music

Life of Hector Berlioz A Fascinating Story

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The five concerts of Berlioz' music to be given at Tanglewood beginning Saturday night recall one of the most turbulent, temperamental, and troublesome composers in the annals of music.

These programs will be conducted by Charles Munch on the following dates: Saturday evenings, July 10, 31, and Aug. 7; Sunday afternoons, July 25 and Aug. 15.

Broken Romance

Berlioz' life was spotted with frustrations and fixations. They went back at least to his twelfth year. The boy fell in love with a girl of 18. He pursued her with such ardor that it became the talk of the neighborhood. Their families put a stop to it. Hector Berlioz didn't speak to her for 50 years!

His father was a general practitioner in a small French town. He wanted his son to be a physician, too. But the musical fire had been ignited when the boy made his first communion. Eucharistic hymns by the church choir stirred up "a new world of love and feeling." That's the way he expressed it later.

Father Berlioz won the first round. Hector was sent to Paris to study medicine. The then 18-year-old was positive that medicine was not for him when he had to dissect his first animal.

Compromise

He told his father and after a long harangue there was a compromise. His father would continue his allowance if he could prove within a stipulated time that he was cut out for music.

Most composers begin with failures. Berlioz had his share and his father stopped his financial assistance. The young man gave music lessons and became a choirmaster to prevent hunger and cold.

The stormiest scenes in his personal life were over Henrietta Smithson. She was an actress whom he first saw in the role of Ophelia in Hamlet.

He couldn't speak English and she could speak French so he wrote her violently ardent letters, nearly scaring her to death. The last straw was when he rented a room next to hers. She left Paris in a hurry.

Wins Henrietta

Henrietta eventually was married to Hector. Maybe it was [illegible] did it. He gave an explanation of the symphony and saw to it that it had an English translation.

The first sentence tells the story — "A young musician of unhealthily sensitive nature and endowed with vivid imagination has poisoned himself with opium in a paroxysm of lovesick despair."

After their marriage, the tables were turned. Henrietta became fanatically jealous. So Berlioz wrote some more music. This time it was his dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

At least indirectly, Berlioz always wrote about himself, so the "Romeo and Juliet" story was a "natural" with which to vent his feelings.

As a matter of fact, he is known to have contemplated both murder and suicide at least one. The first was because of a woman he thought had been unkind.

Plunge In Water

"Two tears of rage started from my eyes," he wrote, "and my mind was made up on the spot to kill without mercy."

He started out on this project, but when he was about to sail to where this poor creature was, he either fell or jumped into the water.

Another time, Chopin and Schumann followed Berlioz in a dither because he had threatened to kill himself. At the last minute he changed his mind.

There was nothing resembling moderation in Hector Berlioz. He hated Wagner, so he did everything in his power to make "Tannhauser" a failure.

But he contributed [illegible] enormously and in [illegible] wave. He found new sounds for instruments—put bags over the horns [illegible] struck instead [illegible] together, put sponges [illegible] sticks, and he loved [illegible] ween trombone and piccolo.

Adolphe Saxe put out a new instrument (saxophone) and Berlioz went all out to put it over.

Jazz Band Founder

The Tanglewood Programs, And a Word About the Met

May 14

By RUDOLPH [illegible]

With the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company in the offing it is presumably the season for the annual think-piece on the situation in this department, but I must confess that there is bewilderingly little to be said about it this time. It is appearing here—barring a sad outcome to the current confusion in New York—on April 26 for the shortest season in years, and giving us as routine a repertoire as it has given in years as well—and never has exactly strayed from the path in this respect.

The reason for the short season hasn't been announced, but it means, of course, that more thousands of New Englanders are doomed to disappointment than last year. It has long been known that the Metropolitan comes here very reluctantly anyway: the Opera House is simply not large enough to allow it to make it worth while from its point of view. It makes more money, indeed, in three or four days in places like Cleveland with larger theaters than it does here in a ten-day stand. On the other hand, I have always been confident that the demand is so great in this area, that it would easily play for a month to sold-out houses.

But the wheels within wheels in connection with the operations of the Metropolitan remain a baffling mystery, even to those fairly close to it, and there appears to be nothing that can be done about it but accept the expensive bones it tosses us and pray that the lottery that distributes mail order tickets will fall our way, like an Irish sweepstakes winner.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAMS

If the ticket situation for the Met is a sort of lottery and the repertoire a bore, the contrary is certainly the case with the forthcoming Music Festival at Tanglewood. This great event, which attracts many more than 100,000 people from the nation over, has been enlarged this season, to such an extent as can only be indicated in the following full announcement of programs, soloists, conductors and events:

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon [illegible] lios was the founder of the jazz band!

There couldn't be enough instruments or voices to perform his music. One of his favorite boasts was that at one of his concerts, a member of the audience had a fit from the noise.

Perhaps this will sum it up. The King of Prussia once said to Berlioz —

"I understand that you are the composer who writes for five hundred musicians."

Replied Berlioz: "Your Majesty has been misinformed. But I sometimes write for four hundred and fifty."

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 7, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, No. 297. On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

CHAMBER CONCERTS

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations," Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday aft. (Richard Burgin) — Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude; Piston, Fourth Symphony; Ravel, Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicole Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch) — Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN
JUL 7 - 1954

Opening Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 7 (UP)—The Berkshire music festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood.

The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte string trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist.

During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUN 1 - 1954

Ticket Sales Rise

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Subscription sales for the forthcoming Berkshire Festival concerts already has exceeded the number for 1953, the Boston Symphony has announced. Tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES
JUL 1954

TANGLEWOOD OPENS TONIGHT

LENOX, Mass. — (UP) — The Berkshire Music Festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood. The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte String Trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist. During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

Symphonic Success

REMEMBER the great furor in 1952 when Doriot Anthony was chosen to succeed the one and only Georges Laurent as first flutist of the Boston Symphony? It was the first time that august body had ever appointed a woman a principal player.

She had been selected by Charles Munch, Richard Burgin, the Concertmaster, and Laurent himself, over some of the world's best flutists, and there seems to be no one now, in 1954, who would question their choice. To hear her play was persuasion enough for all but the most reactionary.

However, it took the traditionally all-male orchestra a little while to get accustomed to the new situation. Doriot recalls, "They were very nice to me, friendly and polite, but they sort of let me alone." This stand-offishness lasted about three weeks, while Doriot acted her usual calm, courteous, unimposing and feminine self. Then, the first rehearsal after she turned in a fine solo performance in Bach's Suite for Flute and Strings, came the initiation.

One of the players came to the door of her little room backstage and began talking to her. She had her back turned. "I think you dropped something," he said, but all Doriot could see was what looked like a large pair of men's gloves lying on the floor. (She is quite near-sighted). "Those aren't mine," she said, and turned back.

"But if you will only look a little closer,—" the man coaxed. So Doriot walked over and knelt down to peer, and suddenly jumped back with a scream. "It was a live lobster crawling across the floor!"

That was only the beginning. When she walked out to her seat in the orchestra, several men rushed over and dusted off her chair, and with elaborate gestures helped her sit down. But the second she began to warm up, the air was filled with flying spitballs, while hoots and howls came from every corner.

Finally one of the most dignified players approached her and said with a friendly grin, "From now on, you can expect nothing but insults from us." And so Doriot was officially accepted. If you haven't heard her solo yet, plan to be on hand at Tanglewood on the 30th of July to hear her perform in Ibert's Flute Concerto.

[186]

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
JUL 12 1954

MUSIC

Berlioz, Beethoven Works Heard at Berkshire Festival

By PAUL AFFELDER

Lenox, Mass., July 12—The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close here at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with an all-Beethoven program conducted by Pierre Monteux.

To at least one observer, it seems rather foolish to ask an audience to drive as far as 125 miles to listen to another performance of the Leonore Overture No. 3, the Fifth Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto. Festivals are for more unusual fare than this.

What made the weekend so distinguished was the exciting performance on Saturday evening of the complete "Damnation of Faust" of Hector Berlioz. This is a true festival work, and it touched off what will be a whole series of performances of Berlioz compositions, commemorating the sesquicentennial of the composer's birth.

In calling "The Damnation of Faust" a "dramatic legend" or "dramatic oratorio" Berlioz knew what he was about. Without recourse to narration, but relying purely on dialogue and song, underlined with vivid orchestral commentary, he gives us, in a little over two hours, the most moving and effective of all the musical settings of the "Faust" legend.

Munch Praised

Charles Munch, who directed the performance, is one of the most inspiring Berlioz interpreters of our day, and the reading he gave us on this occasion was, in most respects, a memorable one.

The orchestra itself was in top form, whether it was storming forth the triumphant strains of the three-familiar "Rakoczy March," the ethereal "Dance of the Sylphs" or the hair-raising tumult and hoof-beating in the "Ride to the Abyss."

Berlioz could have asked for no more stirring presentation of this music, which is able to provide both the aural and visual resources for the recreation of Goethe's tale.

Considering the vastness of the area to be covered by sound in the shed, one kept wishing for larger, more powerful choral forces than those provided by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, though there was no denying the excellence of their work, which was generally clean and spirited.

Singher Leads Soloists

Dominating the soloists by his wonderful sense of style was Martial Singher, who is somewhat of a specialist at singing the role of Mephistopheles. How ominous it was to hear him in some of his evil passages, with the brasses snarling underneath!

David Poleri, as Faust, got off to a shaky start, but as the evening wore on his voice seemed to become firmer and fresher. In his brief solos as Brander, Donald Gramm sang with considerable command and resonance.

It is a long time since we have heard such beautiful singing from Eleanor Steber, the Marguerite. Not only was she in good voice, producing a smooth, even tone, but she seemed especially inspired by the occasion.

Her delivery of "Le Roi de Thule" in part three, with the expressive viola obligato so stunningly played by Joseph De Pasquale, and the "Romance" in part four, with the melancholy English horn solo, sensitively set forth by Louis Speyer, were among the high points of the evening.

8,500 Shout Approval

It was Mr. Munch, however, whose inspired leadership struck fire so many times throughout the performance. When it was all over, the audience of 8,500 applauded and shouted its approval.

Such was the dynamism and beauty of this music that we wanted to hear it all over again. Fortunately for us and for Brooklyn music lovers, "The Damnation of Faust" will be presented at the Academy of Music during the forthcoming regular Boston Symphony season.

At yesterday afternoon's Beethoven concert, Mr. Monteaux and Claudio Arrau, the piano soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto, observed another anniversary—the 30th of their first appearance together with the Boston Orchestra in February, 1924.

Mr. Monteaux treated both the Leonore Overture and the Fifth Symphony with considerable breadth, power and dignity. Here was Beethoven-playing that moved the hearer not by its stark dramatic effects but rather by its rich nobility.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES
JUL 7 - 1954

TANGLEWOOD OPENS TONIGHT

LENOX, Mass.—(UP)—The Berkshire Music Festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood. The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte String Trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist. During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 4 - 1954

Music

Life of Hector Berlioz A Fascinating Story

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The five concerts of Berlioz' music to be given at Tanglewood beginning Saturday night recall one of the most turbulent, temperamental, and troublesome composers in the annals of music.

These programs will be conducted by Charles Munch on the following dates: Saturday evenings, July 10, 31, and Aug. 7; Sunday afternoons, July 25 and Aug. 15.

Broken Romance

Berlioz' life was spotted with frustrations and fixations. They went back at least to his twelfth year. The boy fell in love with a girl of 18. He pursued her with such ardor that it became the talk of the neighborhood. Their families put a stop to it.

Hector Berlioz didn't speak to her for 50 years!

His father was a general practitioner in a small French town. He wanted his son to be a physician, too. But the musical fire had been ignited when the boy made his first communion. Eucharistic hymns by the church choir stirred up "a new world of love and feeling." That's the way he expressed it later.

Father Berlioz won the first round. Hector was sent to Paris to study medicine. The then 18-year-old was positive that medicine was not for him when he had to dissect his first animal.

Compromise

He told his father and after a long harangue there was a compromise. His father would continue his allowance if he could prove within a stipulated time that he was cut out for music.

Most composers begin with failures. Berlioz had his share and his father stopped his financial assistance. The young man gave music lessons and became a choirmaster to prevent hunger and cold.

The stormiest scenes in his personal life were over Henrietta Smithson. She was an actress whom he first saw in the role of Ophelia in Hamlet.

He couldn't speak English and she could speak French so he wrote her violently ardent letters, nearly scaring her to death. The last straw was when he rented a room next to hers. She left Paris in a hurry.

Wins Henrietta

Henrietta eventually was married to Hector. Maybe it was the "Fantastic Symphony" that did it. He gave an explanation of the symphony and saw to it that it had an English translation.

The first sentence tells the story — "A young musician of unhealthily sensitive nature and endowed with vivid imagination has poisoned himself with opium in a paroxysm of lovesick despair."

After their marriage, the tables were turned. Henrietta became fanatically jealous. So Berlioz wrote some more music. This time it was his dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

At least indirectly, Berlioz always wrote about himself, so the "Romeo and Juliet" story was a "natural" with which to vent his feelings.

As a matter of fact, he is known to have contemplated both murder and suicide at least one. The first was because of a woman he thought had been unkind.

Plunge In Water

"Two tears of rage started from my eyes," he wrote, "and my mind was made up on the spot to kill without mercy."

He started out on this project, but when he was about to sail to where this poor creature was, he either fell or jumped into the water.

Another time, Chopin and Schumann followed Berlioz in a dither because he had threatened to kill himself. At the last minute he changed his mind.

There was nothing resembling moderation in Hector Berlioz. He hated Wagner, so he did everything in his power to make "Tannhauser" a failure in Paris.

But he contributed to music enormously and in unsuspected ways. He found new sounds for instruments—put bags over the horns, had cymbals struck instead of clashed together, put sponges on drumsticks, and he loved duets between trombone and piccolo.

Adolphe Saxe put out a new instrument (saxophone) and Berlioz went all out to put it over.

Jazz Band Founder

All of which means that Berlioz was the founder of the jazz band!

There couldn't be enough instruments or voices to perform his music. One of his favorite boasts was that at one of his concerts, a member of the audience had a fit from the noise.

Perhaps this will sum it up. The King of Prussia once said to Berlioz —

"I understand that you are the composer who writes for five hundred musicians."

Replied Berlioz: "Your Majesty has been misinformed. But I sometimes write for four hundred and fifty."

The Tanglewood Programs, And a Word About the Met

By RUDOLPH ELIE

With the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company in the offing it is presumably the season for the annual think-piece on the situation in this department, but I must confess that there is bewilderingly little to be said about it this time. It is appearing here—barring a sad outcome to the current confusion in New York—on April 26 for the shortest season in years, and giving us as routine a repertoire as it has given in years as well—and it never has exactly strayed from the path in this respect.

The reason for the short season hasn't been announced, but it means, of course, that more thousands of New Englanders are doomed to disappointment than last year. It has long been known that the Metropolitan comes here very reluctantly anyway: the Opera House is simply not large enough to allow it to make it worth while from its point of view. It makes more money, indeed, in three or four days in places like Cleveland with larger theaters than it does here in a ten-day stand. On the other hand, I have always been confident that the demand is so great in this area, that it would easily play for a month to sold-out houses.

But the wheels within wheels in connection with the operations of the Metropolitan remain a baffling mystery, even to those fairly close to it, and there appears to be nothing that can be done about it but accept the expensive bones it tosses us and pray that the lottery that distributes mail order tickets will fall our way, like an Irish sweepstakes winner.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAMS

If the ticket situation for the Met is a sort of lottery and the repertoire a bore, the contrary is certainly the case with the forthcoming Music Festival at Tanglewood. This great event, which attracts many more than 100,000 people from the nation over, has been enlarged this season, to such an extent as can only be indicated in the following full announcement of programs, soloists, conductors and events:

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations," Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday aft. (Richard Burgin) — Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15) Saturday eve. (Charles Munch—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude Piston, Fourth Symphony; Rave Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicol Henriot); Saint-Saens, Orga Symphony; Sunday aft. (Charle Munch) — Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and fou auxiliary orchestras.

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

CHAMBER CONCERTS

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN
JUL 7 - 1954

Opening Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 7 (UP)—The Berkshire music festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood.

The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte string trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist.

During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUN 1 1954

Ticket Sales Rise

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Subscription sales for the forthcoming Berkshire Festival concerts already has exceeded the number for 1953, the Boston Symphony has announced. Tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

which Doriot Anthony was chosen to succeed the one and only Georges Laurent as first flutist of the Boston Symphony? It was the first time that august body had ever appointed a woman a principal player.

She had been selected by Charles Munch, Richard Burgin, the Concertmaster, and Laurent himself, over some of the world's best flutists, and there seems to be no one now, in 1954, who would question their choice. To hear her play was persuasion enough for all but the most reactionary.

However, it took the traditionally all-male orchestra a little while to get accustomed to the new situation. Doriot recalls, "They were very nice to me, friendly and polite, but they sort of let me alone." This stand-offishness lasted about three weeks, while Doriot acted her usual calm, courteous, unimposing and feminine self. Then, the first rehearsal after she turned in a fine solo performance in Bach's Suite for Flute and Strings, came the initiation.

One of the players came to the door of her little room backstage and began talking to her. She had her back turned. "I think you dropped something," he said, but all Doriot could see was what looked like a large pair of men's gloves lying on the floor. (She is quite near-sighted). "Those aren't mine," she said, and turned back.

"But if you will only look a little closer,—" the man coaxed. So Doriot walked over and knelt down to peer, and suddenly jumped back with a scream. "It was a live lobster crawling across the floor!"

That was only the beginning. When she walked out to her seat in the orchestra, several men rushed over and dusted off her chair, and with elaborate gestures helped her sit down. But the second she began to warm up, the air was filled with flying spitballs, while hoots and howls came from every corner.

Finally one of the most dignified players approached her and said with a friendly grin, "From now on, you can expect nothing but insults from us." And so Doriot was officially accepted. If you haven't heard her solo yet, plan to be on hand at Tanglewood on the 30th of July to hear her perform in Ibert's Flute Concerto.

[186]

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
EAGLE
JUL 12 1954

MUSIC

Berlioz, Beethoven Works Heard at Berkshire Festival

By PAUL AFFELDER

Lenox, Mass., July 12—The first weekend of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close here at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with an all-Beethoven program conducted by Pierre Monteux.

To at least one observer, it seems rather foolish to ask an audience to drive as far as 125 miles to listen to another performance of the Leonore Overture No. 3, the Fifth Symphony and the "Emperor" Concerto. Festivals are for more unusual fare than this.

What made the weekend so distinguished was the exciting performance on Saturday evening of the complete "Damnation of Faust" of Hector Berlioz. This is a true festival work, and it touched off what will be a whole series of performances of Berlioz compositions, commemorating the sesquicentennial of the composer's birth.

In calling "The Damnation of Faust" a "dramatic legend" or "dramatic oratorio" Berlioz knew what he was about. Without recourse to narration, but relying purely on dialogue and song, underlined with vivid orchestral commentary, he gives us, in a little over two hours, the most moving and effective of all the musical settings of the "Faust" legend.

Munch Praised

Charles Munch, who directed the performance, is one of the most inspiring Berlioz interpreters of our day, and the reading he gave us on this occasion was, in most respects, a memorable one.

The orchestra itself was in top form, whether it was storming forth the triumphant strains of the thrice-familiar "Rakoczy March," the ethereal "Dance of the Sylphs," or the hair-raising tumult and hoof-beating in the "Ride to the Abyss."

Berlioz could have asked for no more stirring presentation of this music, which is able to provide both the aural and visual resources for the recreation of Goethe's tale.

Considering the vastness of the area to be covered by sound in the shed, one kept wishing for larger, more powerful choral forces than those provided by the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, though there was no denying the excellence of their work, which was generally keen and spirited.

Singher Leads Soloists

Dominating the soloists by his wonderful sense of style was Martial Singher, who is somewhat of a specialist at singing the role of Mephistopheles. How ominous it was to hear him in some of his evil passages, with the brasses snarling underneath!

David Poleri, as Faust, got off to a shaky start, but as the evening wore on his voice seemed to become firmer and fresher. In his brief solos as Brander, Donald Gramm sang with considerable command and resonance.

It is a long time since we have heard such beautiful singing from Eleanor Steber, the Marguerite. Not only was she in good voice, producing a smooth, even tone, but she seemed especially inspired by the occasion.

Her delivery of "Le Roi de Thule" in part three, with the expressive viola obligato so stunningly played by Joseph De Pasquale, and the "Romance" in part four, with the melancholy English horn solo, sensitively set forth by Louis Speyer, were among the high points of the evening.

8,500 Shout Approval

It was Mr. Munch, however, whose inspired leadership struck fire so many times throughout the performance. When it was all over, the audience of 8,500 applauded and shouted its approval.

Such was the dynamism and beauty of this music that we wanted to hear it all over again. Fortunately for us and for Brooklyn music lovers, "The Damnation of Faust" will be presented at the Academy of Music during the forthcoming regular Boston Symphony season.

At yesterday afternoon's Beethoven concert, Mr. Monteaux and Claudio Arrau, the piano soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto, observed another anniversary—the 30th of their first appearance together with the Boston Orchestra in February, 1924.

Mr. Monteaux treated both the Leonore Overture and the Fifth Symphony with considerable breadth, power and dignity. Here was Beethoven-playing that moved the hearer not by its stark dramatic effects but rather by its rich nobility.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 4 - 1954

Music

Life of Hector Berlioz A Fascinating Story

By RAYMOND MORIN, Telegram Music Critic

The five concerts of Berlioz' music to be given at Tanglewood beginning Saturday night recall one of the most turbulent, temperamental, and troublesome composers in the annals of music.

These programs will be conducted by Charles Munch on the following dates: Saturday evenings, July 10, 31, and Aug. 7; Sunday afternoons, July 25 and Aug. 15.

Broken Romance

Berlioz' life was spotted with frustrations and fixations. They went back at least to his twelfth year. The boy fell in love with a girl of 18. He pursued her with such ardor that it became the talk of the neighborhood. Their families put a stop to it.

Hector Berlioz didn't speak to her for 50 years!

His father was a general practitioner in a small French town. He wanted his son to be a physician, too. But the musical fire had been ignited when the boy made his first communion. Eucharistic hymns by the church choir stirred up "a new world of love and feeling." That's the way he expressed it later.

Father Berlioz won the first round. Hector was sent to Paris to study medicine. The then 18-year-old was positive that medicine was not for him when he had to dissect his first animal.

Compromise

He told his father and after a long harangue there was a compromise. His father would continue his allowance if he could prove within a stipulated time that he was cut out for music.

Most composers begin with failures. Berlioz had his share and his father stopped his financial assistance. The young man gave music lessons and became a choirmaster to prevent hunger and cold.

The stormiest scenes in his personal life were over Henrietta Smithson. She was an actress whom he first saw in the role of Ophelia in Hamlet.

He couldn't speak English and she could speak French so he wrote her violently ardent letters, nearly scaring her to death. The last straw was when he rented a room next to hers. She left Paris in a hurry.

Wins Henrietta

Henrietta eventually was married to Hector. Maybe it was the "Fantastic Symphony" that did it. He gave an explanation of the symphony and saw to it that it had an English translation.

The first sentence tells the story — "A young musician of unhealthily sensitive nature and endowed with vivid imagination has poisoned himself with opium in a paroxysm of lovesick despair."

After their marriage, the tables were turned. Henrietta became fanatically jealous. So Berlioz wrote some more music. This time it was his dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet."

At least indirectly, Berlioz always wrote about himself, so the "Romeo and Juliet" story was a "natural" with which to vent his feelings.

As a matter of fact, he is known to have contemplated both murder and suicide at least one. The first was because of a woman he thought had been unkind.

Plunge In Water

"Two tears of rage started from my eyes," he wrote, "and my mind was made up on the spot to kill without mercy."

He started out on this project, but when he was about to sail to where this poor creature was, he either fell or jumped into the water.

Another time, Chopin and Schumann followed Berlioz in a dither because he had threatened to kill himself. At the last minute he changed his mind.

There was nothing resembling moderation in Hector Berlioz. He hated w[illegible]

[illegible] launch [illegible] ries of Your City Govern- ent broadcasts tonight at 6.15 WTAG.

The programs will introduce e unpaid chairmen of boards d trustee groups comprising important part of Worces- r's city government. They will ell listeners about the func- ons and activities of their re- pective boards and committees.

Tonight's guest, City Clerk Walter J. O'Keefe, will outline some of the groups to be represented on upcoming programs. He will briefly describe some of their responsibilities.

On each succeeding program Jim Little will interview two guests. Next Sunday he will [illegible] is Mansfield M. Gillette, 59, assistant secretary of the Waterbury Savings Bank.

The band's tall, handsome drum major continues service.

That was only the beginning. When she walked out to her seat in the orchestra, several men rushed over and dusted off her chair, and with elaborate gestures helped her sit down. But the second she began to warm up, the air was filled with flying spitballs, while hoots and howls came from every corner.

Finally one of the most dignified players approached her and said with a friendly grin, "From now on, you can expect nothing but insults from us." And so Doriot was officially accepted. If you haven't heard her solo yet, plan to be on hand at Tanglewood on the 30th of July to hear her perform in Ibert's Flute Concerto.

which Doriot Anthony was chosen to succeed the one and only Georges Laurent as first flutist of the Boston Symphony? It was the first time that august body had ever appointed a woman a principal player.

She had been selected by Charles Munch, Richard Burgin, the Concertmaster, and Laurent himself, over some of the world's best flutists, and there seems to be no one now, in 1954, who would question their choice. To hear her play was persuasion enough for all but the most reactionary.

However, it took the traditionally all-male orchestra a little while to get accustomed to the new situation. Doriot recalls, "They were very nice to me, friendly and polite, but they sort of let me alone." This stand-offishness lasted about three weeks, while Doriot acted her usual calm, courteous, unimposing and feminine self. Then, the first rehearsal after she turned in a fine solo performance in Bach's Suite for Flute and Strings, came the initiation.

One of the players came to the door of her little room backstage and began talking to her. She had her back turned. "I think you dropped something," he said, but all Doriot could see was what looked like a large pair of men's gloves lying on the floor. (She is quite nearsighted). "Those aren't mine," she said, and turned back.

"But if you will only look a little closer,—" the man coaxed. So Doriot walked over and knelt down to peer, and suddenly jumped back with a scream. "It was a live lobster crawling across the floor!"

The Tanglewood Programs, And a Word About the Met

By RUDOLPH ELIE

With the annual visit of the Metropolitan Opera Company in the offing it is presumably the season for the annual think-piece on the situation in this department, but I must confess that there is bewilderingly little to be said about it this time. It is appearing here—barring a sad outcome to the current confusion in New York—on April 26 for the shortest season in years, and giving us as routine a repertoire as it has given in years as well—and it never has exactly strayed from the path in this respect.

The reason for the short season hasn't been announced, but it means, of course, that more thousands of New Englanders are doomed to disappointment than last year. It has long been known that the Metropolitan comes here very reluctantly anyway: the Opera House is simply not large enough to allow it to make it worth while from its point of view. It makes more money, indeed, in three or four days in places like Cleveland with larger theaters than it does here in a ten-day stand. On the other hand, I have always been confident that the demand is so great in this area, that it would easily play for a month to sold-out houses.

But the wheels within wheels in connection with the operations of the Metropolitan remain a baffling mystery, even to those fairly close to it, and there appears to be nothing that can be done about it but accept the expensive bones it tosses us and pray that the lottery that distributes mail order tickets will fall our way, like an Irish sweepstakes winner.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAMS

If the ticket situation for the Met is a sort of lottery and the repertoire a bore, the contrary is certainly the case with the forthcoming Music Festival at Tanglewood. This great event, which attracts many more than 100,000 people from the nation over, has been enlarged this season, to such an extent as can only be indicated in the following full announcement of programs, soloists, conductors and events:

Mr. Munch will open the Shed series on Saturday, July 10, with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. On Sunday afternoon, July 11, Pierre Monteux will present a Beethoven program including the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau as soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

Second week (Shed, July 17, 18): Saturday eve. (Pierre Monteux)—Franck program: "Le Chasseur Maudit," "Les Eolides," "Les Djinns" (piano soloist, Vera Franceschi), Symphony in D minor; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto (soloist, Leo Smit); Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony."

Third week (Shed, July 24, 25): Saturday eve. (Jean Morel)—Weber, Overture, "Der Freischutz"; Prokofieff, Sixth Symphony; Strauss, "Don Juan"; Elgar, "Enigma Variations," Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and "Harold in Italy" (viola soloist, William Primrose); Ernst Toch, Symphony No. 2.

Fourth week (Shed, July 31, Aug. 1): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz, "Romeo and Juliet" with Festival Chorus and soloists; Sunday aft. (Richard Burgin) — Prokofieff, "Chout," Dvorak, Violin Concerto (soloist, Ruth Posselt); Sibelius, Symphony No. 2.

Fifth week (Shed, Aug. 7, 8): Saturday eve. (Charles Munch)—Gluck, "Alceste" Overture; Beethoven, Violin Concerto (soloist, Zino Francescatti); Brahms, Symphony No. 2; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch)—Berlioz program: "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture, "The Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum."

Sixth week (Shed, Aug. 14, 15) Saturday eve. (Charles Munch—Wagner, "Lohengrin" Prelude Piston, Fourth Symphony; Ravel Piano Concerto (soloist, Nicol Henriot); Saint-Saens, Organ Symphony; Sunday aft. (Charles Munch) — Berlioz, "Requiem" with Festival Chorus and four auxiliary orchestras.

On the six Friday evenings preceding each Shed concert, except in the final week when it will be given on Thursday, the concerts will be given in the intimate Theater-Concert Hall by an orchestra of chamber proportions. The first two weeks (July 9 and 16) Charles Munch will conduct music of Bach, including in the first the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 3, 2, 6, 5, and in the second, the Cantata No. 93 and Suites Nos. 1 and 4. On July 23, he will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn's "Military" Symphony, No. 100, and Hugh Ross will conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass. On July 30 Mr. Munch will conduct Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist, Mozart's Serenade for 8 Winds in C minor, K. 388, and the same composer's "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. On Aug. 6 Lukas Foss will conduct the complete Stravinsky ballet "Pulcinella," a Piano Concerto by Mozart with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo" with chorus and soloists. At the final concert on Thursday, Aug. 12, Jean Morel as guest will conduct Rossini's Overture to "The Silk Ladder," Mozart's Symphony in B flat, K. 319, and Strauss' "Der Burger als Edelmann."

CHAMBER CONCERTS

The series of concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall on the six Wednesday evenings will be devoted to music of chamber proportions. The first program on July 7 will be shared by Claudio Arrau, piano, and the Bel Arte String Trio. The second on July 14 will have the Albeneri Trio; the third on July 21 the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the fourth on July 28 the Griller String Quartet; the fifth on Aug. 4 will have the Boston Woodwind Quintet and a soloist to be announced; the sixth on Aug. 11 the Kroll Quartet.

LOWELL, MASS.
SUN
JUL 7 - 1954

Opening Concert At Tanglewood

LENOX, July 7 (UP)—The Berkshire music festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood.

The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte string trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist.

During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

BROCKTON, MASS.
ENTERPRISE & TIMES
JUL 7 - 1954

TANGLEWOOD OPENS TONIGHT

LENOX, Mass.—(UP) — The Berkshire Music Festival, which annually attracts thousands of music lovers, opens its 17th season of concerts tonight at Tanglewood. The opening program will be presented by the Bel Arte String Trio, with Claudio Arrau as featured pianist. During the six-week season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other music groups will present a total of 24 concerts.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS
JUN 1 1954

Ticket Sales Rise

Special to The News

BOSTON, Mass. — Subscription sales for the forthcoming Berkshire Festival concerts already has exceeded the number for 1953, the Boston Symphony has announced. Tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

[186]

July 12' 54

BOSTON POST, MO:

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 11—For the final concert in the opening week end of the Berkshire Music Festival, Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony played an all-Beethoven program before an audience of over 10,000.

This might well be called a classical hit-parade, listing as it does the Leonore Overture No. 3, the "Emperor Concerto," and the Fifth Symphony. And it was thrilling. Beethoven, too. Mr. Monteux has never demonstrated keener insight and the orchestra has seldom, if ever, sounded better.

Monteux maintained a suspenseful mood from the very outset in the "Leonora" despite the dramatic fanfares, trumpet calls, and frequent climactic outbursts.

Claudio Arrau deserved every bravo hurled at him for his triumphal performance of the solo part in the concerto. He is the type of pianist who addresses himself to the music and leaves the histrionics to the pianistic prestidigitator.

He obviously broadened the monumental first movement in adaptation to the vast expanses of the shed, but his performance remained a vivid one, creating an almost unbearable tension in the cascading octaves toward the close.

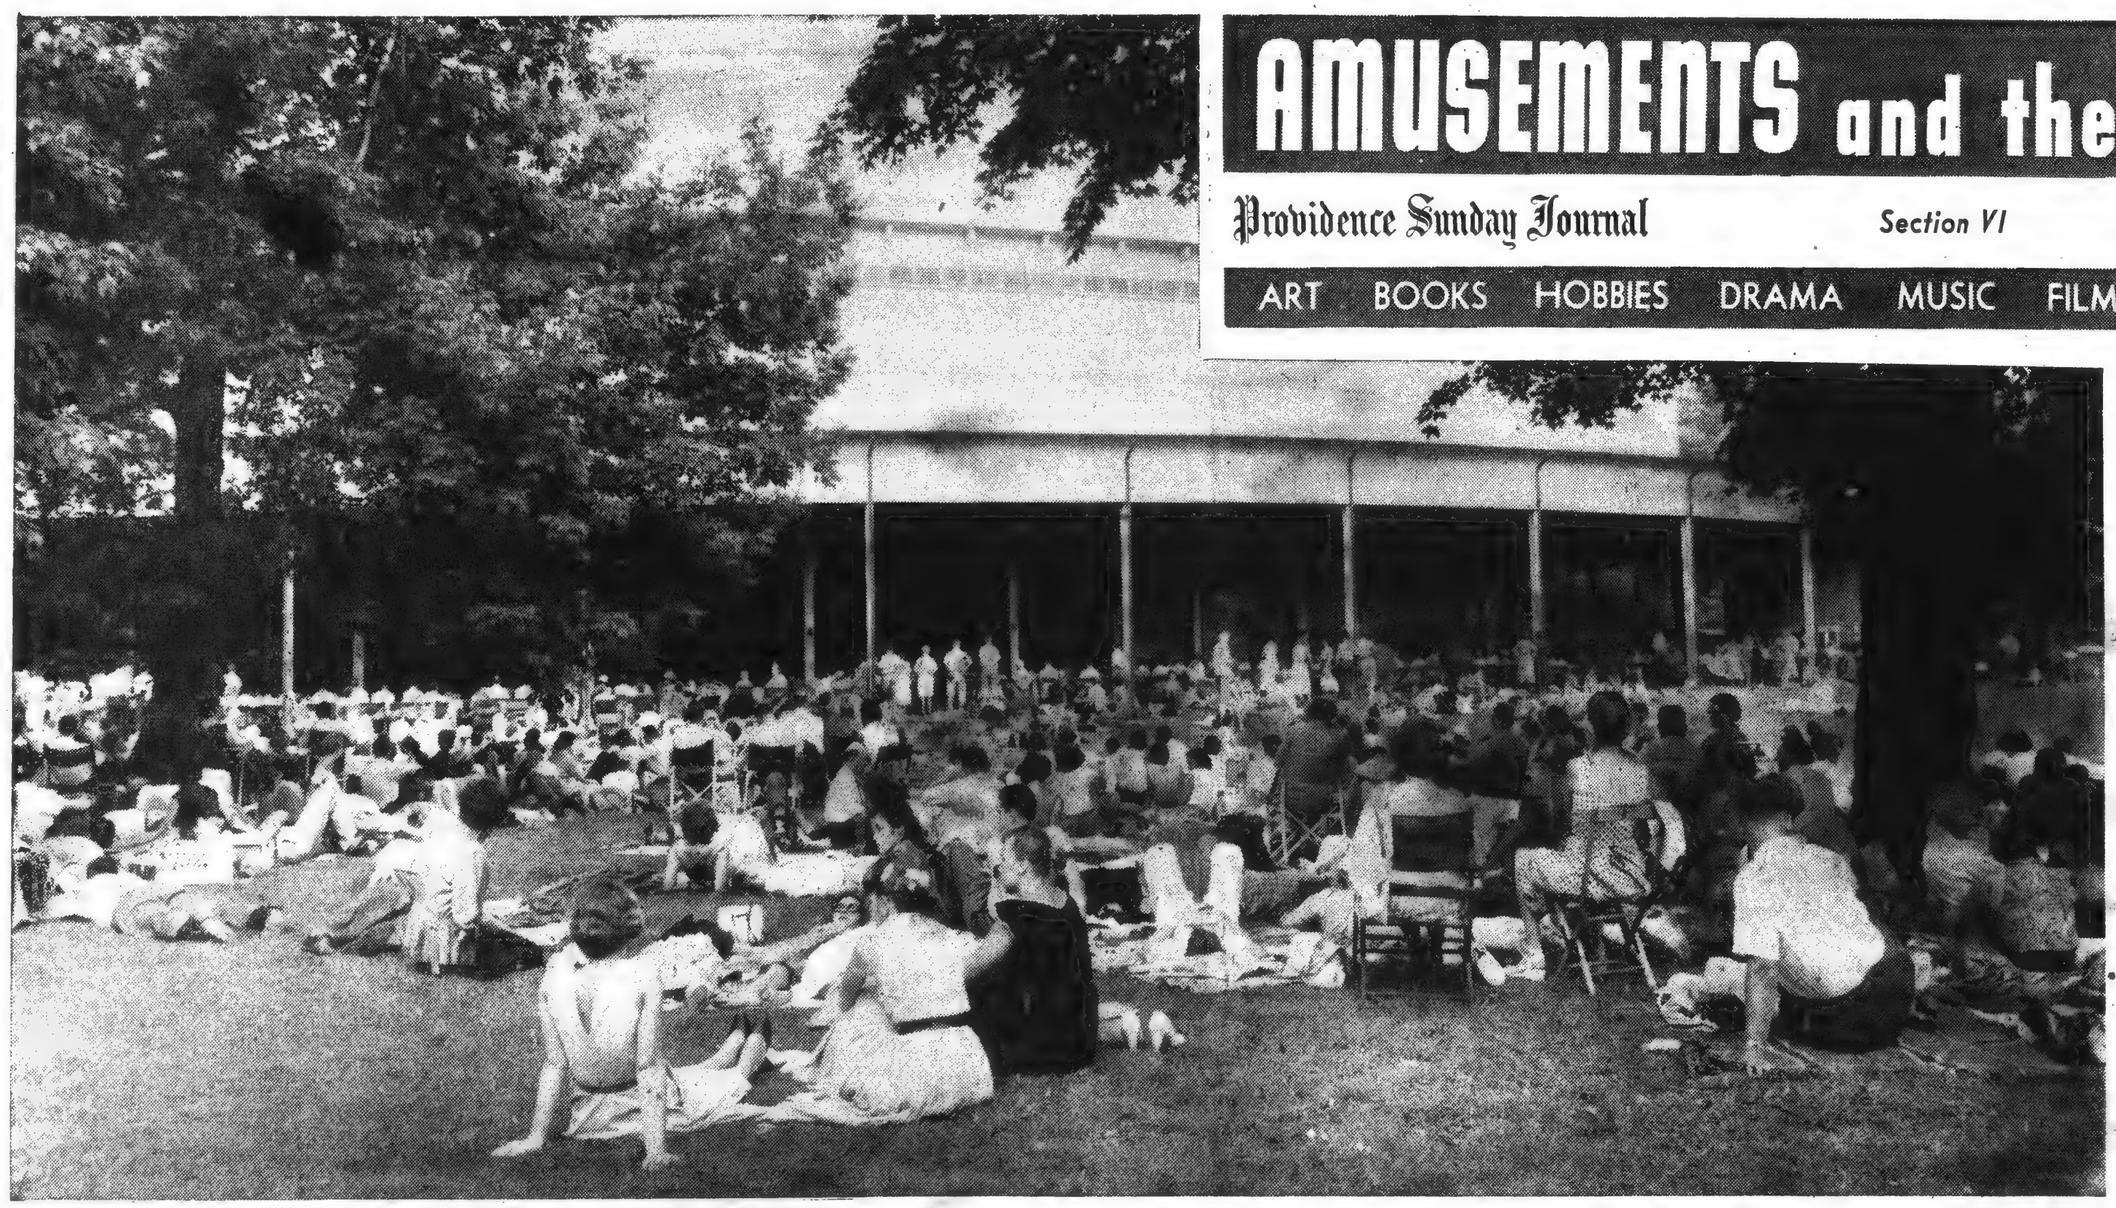
Mr. Monteux drew from the orchestra a gorgeous texture in the eloquent and noble adagio. His phrasing exactly matched the soloist in mood and color. In the final rondo both Arrau and Monteux reached a peak of brilliance I had never dreamed possible in this work.

The concert ended on the highest possible plane with a taut performance of Beethoven's best-known symphony. Instead of interpreting this masterpiece with a capital I, Monteux played it straight, allowing the music to create the fullest possible impact. That it did was evidenced by the breathless hush which the audience hung onto every note and by the thunderous applause at the conclusion.

AMUSEMENTS and the ARTS

Providence Sunday Journal — Section VI — July 4, 1954

ART BOOKS HOBBIES DRAMA MUSIC FILMS RADIO—TV



Audience relaxes on the grass outside huge Music Shed at Tanglewood where Boston Symphony gives weekend concerts.

Pierre Monteux will be the guest conductor on July 11.

Eleanor Steber is soloist on first Saturday evening.

Tanglewood Will Honor Berlioz

IN RESPONSE to the spur and suggestion of record-breaking attendance last season, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will offer an enlarged and revised program at this summer's six-week Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting Wednesday.

The program will have a special distinction in that it will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of the composer's principal works.

This summer's festival will be the 15th in which the Boston Symphony has participated under the leadership of the late Serge Koussevitzky and its present conductor, Charles Munch, who is now in his fifth season.

An indication of the growth of the festival as a national and international music center was last summer's record attendance of 117,950 (total paid admissions, $311,600), from all over the Hoherman. It will be the 30th anniversary of Arrau's first engagement with the orchestra. Subsequent programs in the Wednesday series will be by the Albeneri Trio, Zimbler Sinfonietta, Griller and Kroll string quartets and Zino Francescatti, violinist, donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berlioz will rule in the Shed concerts. Opening Saturday night, Munch will conduct "The Damnation of Faust," with Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. The "Fantastic Symphony" will be performed Sunday, July 18, and the following Sunday the "Beatrice and Benedick" overture and "Harold In Italy," with William Primrose, viola soloist.

Further Berlioz works will be the Dramatic Symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," July 25, with John McCollum, tenor; Nicolai

FILMED AS BOUND

TIGHT BINDING

The concert ended on the highest possible plane with a taut performance of Beethoven's best-known symphony. Instead of interpreting this masterpiece with a capital I, Mr. Munch played

Music in Review

July 11

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 10 — Berlioz' dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust," the first concert to be held in the Music Shed, this season found Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony in their very best form. Anyone who heard the Brandenburg concertos on Friday night and the Berlioz tonight must have been gratified by the swift ascent from the Nadir of the untidy Bach to the Zenith of the inspired Berlioz. The audience tonight was over 3500.

Since "The Damnation" is the composer's masterpiece and Munch is the greatest of Berlioz interpreters, this is undoubtedly the artistic high point of the festival. The Symphony Hall performance last winter, with the same soloists and chorus—Eleanor Steber is the sole exception—was a memorable event but for several reasons. Tonight's performance was a notably better one.

The work is peculiar in structure, being neither a symphony, an opera, nor an oratorio, although it contains elements of each. The soloists need both operatic volume and art-song sensitivity; the orchestra must at once provide programmatic atmosphere and pure musical development of symphonic themes; and the chorus is both participant and commentator.

Eleanor Steber, whose rich and ample soprano filled the shed with glorious sound, makes Marguerite, usually the innocent and somewhat insipid victim of Mephistopheles, an impassioned young girl who counts the world well lost for love.

Interpretative Depth

David Poleri, Faust, has gained interpretative depth and he sang with less nervousness and vocal forcing than in Symphony Hall. Martial Singher's Mephisto, a part he has long sung with success in Europe, insinuates the diabolical nature of his role rather than bluntly stating it. Donald Gramm, a virile brander, has the very manner of the tankard-touching, rollicking student roarer of stein songs.

Making Tanglewood a last step in its first transcontinental tour, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society turned in a sterling traversal of the many choral passages, winning a collective summa cum laude not only for precision, but for immaculate French diction.

Tonight's performance was a stirring event. Mr. Munch, who understands this music better than does any other living conductor, led his forces with a noticeable lessening in physical drive, but at the same time an assurance that they would be with him all the way.

Informality prevails at Tanglewood, where the main thing is to be comfortable and enjoy the beautiful outdoor scenery and the fine music.

Conductor Charles Munch confers with horn-player James Stagliano and Georges Laurent, former first flute, who still plays summer concerts.

six-week Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., starting Wednesday.

The program will have a special distinction in that it will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of the composer's principal works.

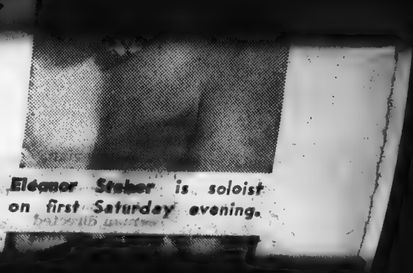
This summer's festival will be the 15th in which the Boston Symphony has participated under the leadership of the late Serge Koussevitzky and its present conductor, Charles Munch, who is now in his fifth season.

An indication of the growth of the festival as a national and international music center was last summer's record attendance

Grieller and Kroll string quartets and Zino Francescatti, violinist, donating their services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berlioz will rule in the Shed concerts. Opening Saturday night, Munch will conduct "The Damnation of Faust," with Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. The "Fantastic Symphony" will be performed Sunday, July 18, and the following Sunday the "Beatrice and Benedick" overture and "Harold In Italy," with William Primrose, viola soloist.

Further Berlioz works will be the Dramatic Symphony,



Eleanor Steber is soloist on first Saturday evening.

Claudio Arrau, pianist, is on Wednesday night program.

sitting on the lawn in the sun or in the shade of pine and pines. Munch will conduct all the Shed series except two by Pierre Monteux and one each by Jean Morel, of the Juilliard Music School, and Concertmaster Richard Burgin.

In the smaller Theater-Concert Hall there will be six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts by visiting artists and six Friday night programs by the orchestra's chamber section. The latter, popularly known as the "Bach-Mozart" series, were formerly given during the first three weekends of the festival.

Since the annual gala "Tanglewood on Parade" is scheduled for Friday, Aug. 13, the Friday chamber concert for that week will take place the night before. Munch, Lukas Foss and Jean Morel will conduct and the soloists will include Foss and Seymour Lipkin, pianists, and Doriot Anthony, flute.

The first Wednesday concert, which will open the festival, will be all-Beethoven, played by Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio—Ruth Posselt, Joseph de Pasquale and Martin violinists.

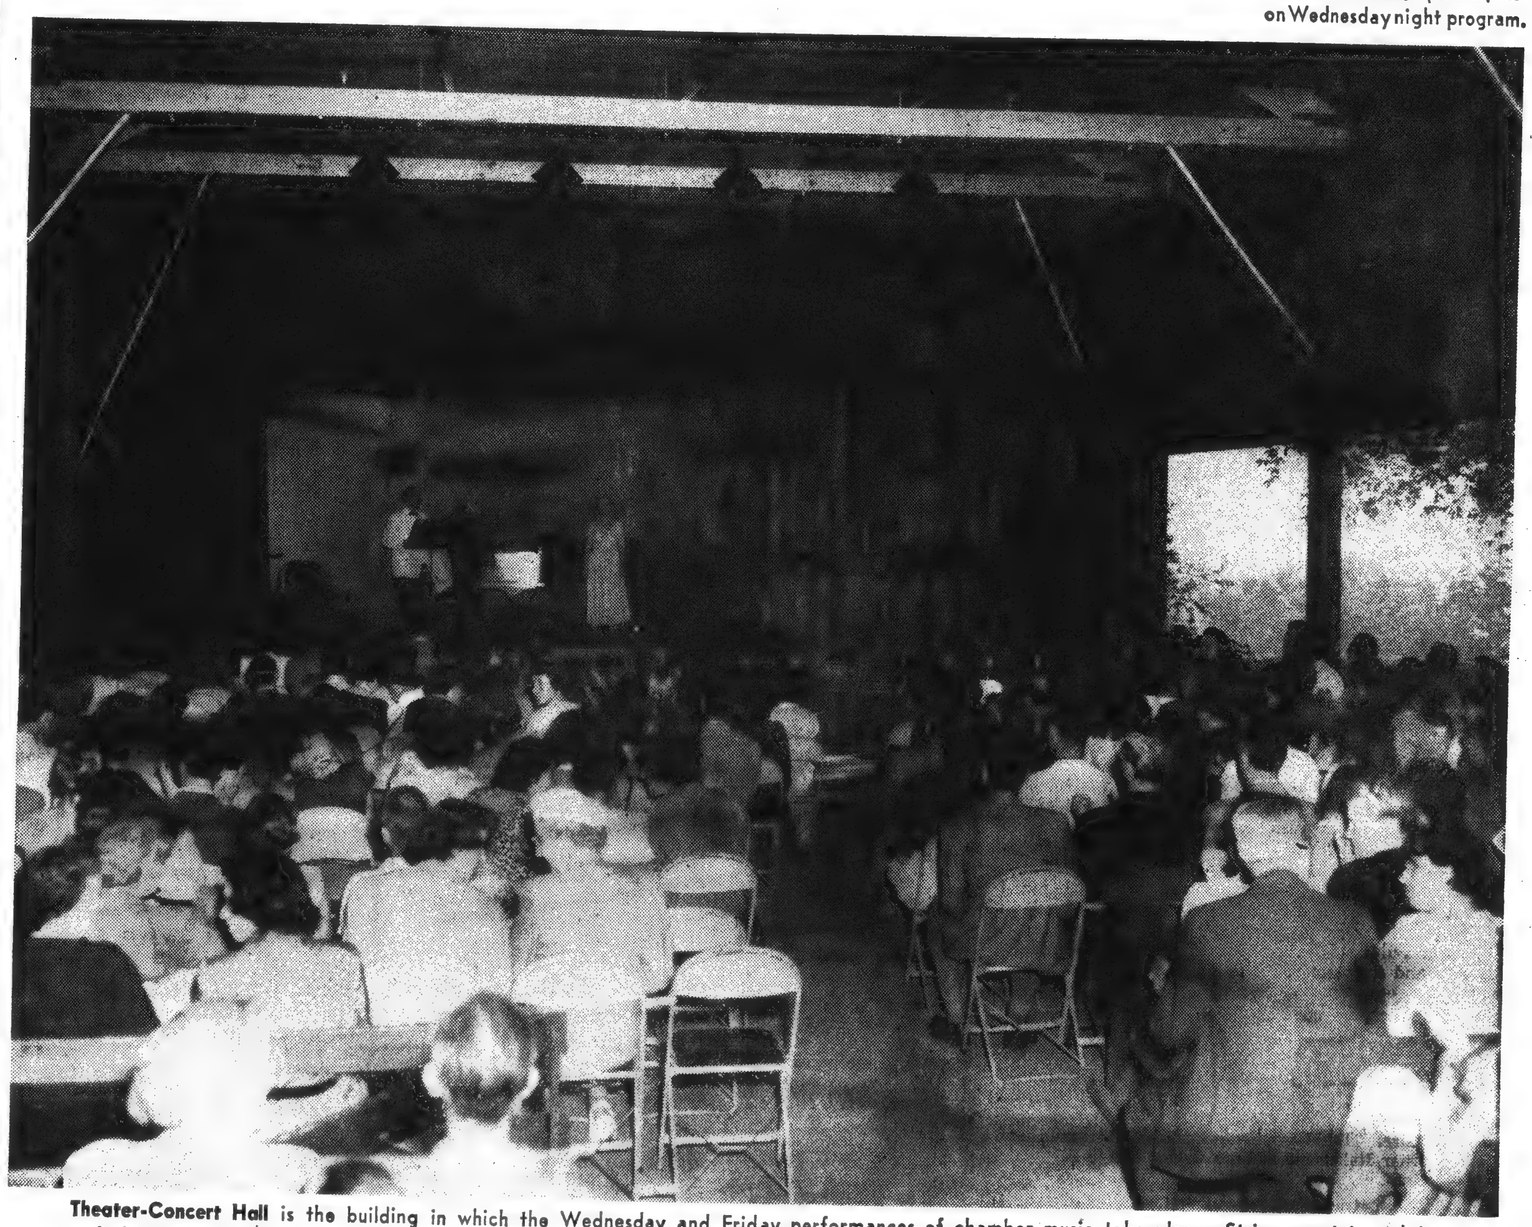
In connection with the festival the Berkshire Music Center will open its 12th season. On the faculty are Jean Morel, acting head of the department of instrumental music during Leonard Bernstein's leave of absence; Richard Burgin, William Kroll and Gregor Piatigorsky (guest), chamber music; Hugh Ross, choral music; Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch, Lukas Foss, composition; Frederic Cohen, opera, from which Boris Goldovsky is on leave of absence; Lukas Foss, Tanglewood Study Group. Programs by students, including opera productions, are given frequently and are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center who contribute to its support.

While the study and enjoyment of fine music come first in meaning and attraction, the festival has certain informal attributes that enhance the occasion—as many former patrons and partakers have found. They include campus-like activities and atmosphere, the pleasures of a picnic or a whole summer vacation.



Theater-Concert Hall is the building in which the Wednesday and Friday performances of chamber music take place. String quartets, soloists and the Berkshire Chamber Orchestra are presented here, the latter offering Friday evening programs of Bach, Handel, Mozart and Haydn.

FILMED AS BOUND
TIGHT BINDING

TIGHT BINDING

Albany Knickerbocker News
July 12, 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens With Berlioz 'Faust'

The Berkshire Festival opened an enlarged series Saturday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood with a tremendous performance under the baton of Charles Munch. The debut of the series, extended this year to six weeks of performances, presented the compelling masterpiece of Berlioz, the dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust."

The full resources of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, Eleanor Steber as Marguerite, David Poleri as Faust, Martial Singher as Mephistopheles, combined to produce a supreme achievement, a musical smash hit for an opening.

For a first performance at Tanglewood the work brought a capacity audience, excitement and enthusiasm quite in contrast with the unseasonably cool weather of the evening. The Goethe classic, compressed by Berlioz into two and a quarter hours of highly colored tableaux, 20 sections with great variety and range of effects vocal and orchestral, proved to be a tour de force of the part of Munch. The score was brilliantly polished, marvelous pacing keeping the clarity and detail of the large forces well balanced and perfectly unified.

At times Munch drove his superb group with frenzied power to keep the drama of the action moving and convincing. Nothing threadbare appeared in the familiar excerpts of the score such as the stirring Hungarian March or the Ballet of the Sylphs, both of which became so very meaningful in the original context. Surely this was a performance such as the work rarely has ever received.

Excellent Chorus

The excellent student chorus, smiling but alert, obviously enjoyed their participation with enthusiasm that undoubtedly contributed to the perfect rendition of this extremely complicated choral writing. A score of this dimension brings the hidden resources of the magnificent Boston Symphony Orchestra into relief, the drama of the music enrobing the whole action.

David Poleri, with ringing brilliance in his beautiful tenor range, proved a good foil for the interpration an characterization of Mephistopheles as sung by Martial Singher. His was the role of the evening, vocally and dramatically, even to the point of an upward bolt from his chair in entries, as if to rise from lower regions. Singher's complete command rightly dominated the action.

Miss Steber Effective

Eleanor Steber was particularly effective in the King of Thule ballad, assisted ably by the solo viola of Josephde Pasquale, and in the Romance in the fourth section. Donald Gramm sang well in the minor bass role of Brander and in the Epilogue solo.

To open the series with Berlioz most effective work in his 150th anniversary year proved a reminder of the colossal skill of this genius. From his literary selections and revisions, the planning of the whole detail through to the musical setting, one realizes the impact of his writing. Since a number of his other compositions will be included in the festival this summer there will be the opportunity to explore his music further.

Concerts by the full orchestra will continue for the next five weeks on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. C. F. S.

registers. Tonight the horn overshot their mark in both in tonation and rhythm.

Special Trumpet

The Second Concerto demand a specially built trumpet whic sounds like a cross between the oboe and the flute. Roger Voisin first trumpeter of the Boston Symphony, scored a persona triumph in this demanding concerto. However, the balance between the concertino and the tutti was completely dominated by this instrument.

In the Fifth Concerto Lukas Foss, a popular figure here at Tanglewood, was the capable soloist.

It is axiomatic that the better the orchestra plays the more expansive the tempo that the conductor can take in this complex polyphonic music. If the music is cleanly played, Bach weaves the most intricate colorful tona fabric, which proves a constant delight.

Pace Quickened

Tonight Mr. Munch, realizing that the orchestra at times was neither with him nor even acting as a unit, quickened his pace to such a point that the lines be came blurred, and lost power to hold interest.

The playing, however, improved as the concert progressed and by the time that Mr. Foss joined the orchestra for the Fifth Concerto the Boston Symphony sounded like the virtuoso

Boston Post - June 10, 1954

Berkshire Music Fete In Debut Before 3000

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 9— Charles Munch and 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the 1954 Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theatre Concert Hall before an audience of nearly 3000. In accordance with Berkshire tradition, the Bach Brandenburg Concertoes, minus the fourth, formed the program. The standard of composition was higher than the standard of performance by the Berkshire Orchestra, an abridged edition of the Boston Symphony made up largely of faculty members at the music centre.

An unusually taxing schedule which began in October of last year has resulted in an obviously fatigued orchestra with considerable energy still but with a noticeable decline in precision. The two concertoes, if B major, with difficult parts for wind instruments, gave the greatest trouble. In the first concerto, the horns are required to play florid passages utilizing harmonics in almost impossible

Continued on Page 2—Col. 2

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 18, 1954

CONCERT TIME AT TANGLEWOOD—THE BERKSHIRE

An evening concert. The bandstand in the Music Shed is illuminated, and the crowd spills over on the lawn. The

Montreal Gazette
Sight & Sound
By Thomas A[illegible]

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

One of the most successful institutions of its kind on this continent is the Berkshire Symphonic Festival given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and assistants in the pleasant Berkshire Hills, about a day's journey from Montreal through Burlington and St. Alban's to Pittsfield where you turn off to that millionaire's paradise known as Lenox. I missed the first festival when the tent blew down and the late Serge Koussevitzky delivered an ultimatum to the summer residents of Lenox that if they wanted the BSO to put on a festival for them they had to provide proper accommodation.

That was in 1937, a year later than the foundation of our own Montreal Festival. Koussevitzky's ultimatum was read, marked and inwardly digested by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and when we arrived in a second-hand Ford in the summer of 1938, the Bethlehem miracle had already been performed. I did hear the broadcast of the concert in 1937 which was sthe cause of this effect. The great Koussevitzky was concentrated with the BSO on a symphony in the [illegible] Jove, in the Disney [illegible] down a thunderbolt in the shape of a cloudburst.

Bethlehem built The Shed which is still the last word in the summer [illegible] against the weatherman. You [illegible] insurance against the [illegible] and it has been tried in [illegible]. But the law of averages [illegible] it.

The Shed at Lenox, as most people know, is a remarkable contrivance. In 1938 (there [illegible] been improvements since) it was, as I recall it, and very vividly too, a solid steel roof supported by girders, open to the air but with shutters to pull down when the weatherman really got ugly.

It cost somewhere up in the hundred thousands, but Bethlehem Steel, a big corporation, absorbed it, no doubt, in its profit and loss account. I shall never forget sitting in The Shed in the [illegible]er of 1938, a year after the [illegible] disaster, when the [illegible]d old Koussevitzky had his [illegible]. A [illegible] storm was bre[illegible] from the [illegible]ginning. [illegible]inal program was [illegible] the [illegible] Symphony, beautifully timed because [illegible] was in the news at the time [illegible] meet her financial obligations. As I recall it, the storm burst just as Koussevitzky led his men into the stirring finale with its ascending theme. It wasn't a bad storm. They didn't even have to pull down the shutters.

Tanglewood, called after the Hawthorne Estate (Scarlet Letter), was a delightful place in those days. In 1938 we motored down in our second-hand Ford, stayed at a convenient tourist home for a dollar each night. What meals we were not invited to, we filled in at a convenient diner half way between Pittsfield and Lenox.

In 1939 we were invited to house ourselves on the estate of the late Mrs. Edwards Spencer. Our mutual friend, Frances Stillman, a distant relative of Mrs. Spencer's, was looking after Mrs. Spencer's menagerie which included horses, dogs, cats and birds. We dined at the mansion at night. Mrs. Spencer, a vigorous widow of some 70-odd years, I remember as the perfect American hostess, a great lady.

Mrs. Spencer introduced us to the distinguished Edward Burlingham [illegible], a quiet man who had much to do with putting music firmly into the Harvard curriculum. In the confusion of Mrs. Spencer's homeric afternoons we managed to get in a few words as two music-lovers. That was the year I was personally introduced to Mr. Koussevitzky himself by Madame Leger, then president of the Ladies Morning Musical Club.

I met Mr. Koussevitzky a second time at Mrs. Spencer's. It was just a handshake. The third time was just before his death when he undertook to conduct, under handicaps that I could only faintly surmise, the tour of the Israel Symphony in Canada and the United States. Fran Robinson, then of CFCF, interviewed him at a press conference in the Ritz-Carlton. He was in great form and, like most conductors, an expert in his public relations and radio timing.

Mr. Koussevitzky's chief assistants in making the Berkshire Festival a going concern were Gertrude Robinson Smith, whose father built The Shed, and George Judd Sr., who still runs the festival as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since Mr. Brennan (whom I [illegible] in 1936.

The Berkshire Festival is still going strong as an embodiment of the idea that people want to enjoy music in summer on their holidays. Charles Munch has taken it over and is following in the footsteps of Mr. Koussevitzky.

A festival, by its name is an outstanding event of the year, meant to give good citizens a resume, as it were, of what talent they have in their own backyard. It is easy, when you have the British Arts Council behind you as the Edinburgh Festival has, it was hard as I saw when I went to millionaire's acres at Tanglewood in 1938 and 1939. But they have done the job.

LYNN, MASS.
ITEM
JUN 18 1954

Social

Miss Betty Ann Faris of 29 Pine Grove Avenue, who was graduated this week from Radcliffe College with a Bachelor of Science Degree, has been honored by being chosen one of four sopranos to sing with the Radcliffe Choral Society and Harvard Glee Club on their transcontinental concert tour, leaving Boston Saturday and returning July 1.

They will sing at [illegible], N. Y., Oxford, O., Denver, Colo., Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Calif., Las Vegas, Nev., Nashville, Tenn., Louisville, Ky., Cleveland, O., and Tanglewood where they will be guests of the Berkshire Festival for two days singing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Violist, Composer, Organist, Conductor

Toch — Primrose — Biggs — Morel

AMONG EMINENT musicians participating or represented in "Tanglewood" concerts this season are William Primrose, violinist; Ernst Toch, whose Second Symphony will be performed July 25; E. Power Biggs, organist, to be heard in recital and Jean Morel to conduct next Saturday night's Boston Symphony concert in The Shed.

Syracuse Herald-Journal
July 18, 1954

[189]

TIGHT BINDING

Albany Knickerbocker News
July 12, 1954

Berkshire Festival Opens With Berlioz 'Faust'

The Berkshire Festival opened an enlarged series Saturday night in the Music Shed at Tanglewood with a tremendous performance under the baton of Charles Munch. The debut of the series, extended this year to six weeks of performances, presented the compelling masterpiece of Berlioz, the dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust."

The full resources of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, Eleanor Steber as Marguerite, David Poleri as Faust, Martial Singher as Mephistopheles, combined to produce a supreme achievement, a musical smash hit for an opening.

For a first performance at Tanglewood the work brought a capacity audience, excitement and enthusiasm quite in contrast with the unseasonably cool weather of the evening. The Goethe classic, compressed by Berlioz into two and a quarter hours of highly colored tableaux, 20 sections with great variety and range of effects vocal and orchestral, proved to be a tour de force of the part of Munch. The score was brilliantly polished, marvelous pacing keeping the clarity and detail of the large forces well balanced and perfectly unified.

At times Munch drove his superb group with frenzied power to keep the drama of the action moving and convincing. Nothing threadbare appeared in the familiar excerpts of the score such as the stirring Hungarian March or the Ballet of the Sylphs, both of which became scenery meaningful in the original context. Surely this was a performance such as the work rarely has ever received.

Student Chorus

The exuberant student chorus, smiling but alert, obviously enjoyed their participation with enthusiasm that undoubtedly contributed to the perfect rendition of this extremely complicated choral writing. A score of this dimension brings the hidden resources of the magnificent Boston Symphony Orchestra into relief, the drama of the music impelling the whole action.

David Poleri, with ringing brilliance in his beautiful tenor range, proved a good foil for the interpration an dcharacterization of Mephistopheles as sung by Martial Singher. His was the role of the evening, vocally and dramatically, even to the point of an upward bolt from his chair in entries, as if to rise from lower regions. Singher's complete command rightly dominated the soloists.

Miss Steber Effective

Eleanor Steber was particularly effective in the King of Thule ballad, assisted ably by the solo viola of Josephde Pasquale, and in the Romance in the fourth section. Donald Gramm sang well in the minor bass role of Brander and in the Epilogue solo.

To open the series with Berlioz' most effective work in his 150th anniversary year proved a reminder of the colossal skill of this genius. From his literary selections and revisions, the planning of the whole detail through to the musical setting, one realizes the impact of his writing. Since a number of his other compositions will be included in the festival this summer there will be the opportunity to explore his music further.

Concerts by the full orchestra will continue for the next five weeks on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon. C. F. S.

registers. Tonight the horn overshot their mark in both in tonation and rhythm.

Special Trumpet

The Second Concerto demand a specially built trumpet which sounds like a cross between the oboe and the flute. Roger Voisin first trumpeter of the Boston Symphony, scored a personal triumph in this demanding concerto. However, the balance between the concertino and the tutti was completely dominated by this instrument.

In the Fifth Concerto Lukas Foss, a popular figure here at Tanglewood, was the capable soloist.

It is axiomatic that the better the orchestra plays the more expansive the tempo that the conductor can take in this complex polyphonic music. If the music is cleanly played, Bach weaves the most intricate colorful tonal fabric, which proves a constant delight.

Pace Quickened

Tonight Mr. Munch, realizing that the orchestra at times was neither with him nor even acting as a unit, quickened his pace to such a point that the lines became blurred, and lost power to hold interest.

The playing, however, improved as the concert progressed and by the time that Mr. Foss joined the orchestra for the Fifth Concerto the Boston Symphony sounded like the virtuoso

Boston Post - June 20, 1954

Berkshire Music Fete In Debut Before 3000

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 9—Charles Munch and 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the 1954 Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theatre Concert Hall before an audience of nearly 3000. In accordance with Berkshire tradition, the Bach Brandenburg Concertoes, minus the fourth, formed the program. The standard of composition was higher than the standard of performance by the Berkshire Orchestra, an abridged edition of the Boston Symphony made up largely of faculty members at the music centre.

An unusually taxing schedule which began in October of last year has resulted in an obviously fatigued orchestra with considerable energy still but with a noticeable decline in precision. The two concertoes in F major, with difficult parts for wind instruments, gave the greatest trouble. In the first concerto, the horns are required to play florid passages utilizing harmonics in almost impossible

Continued on Page 2—Col. 3

THE NEW YORK TIMES, SUNDAY, JULY 18, 1954.

CONCERT TIME AT TANGLEWOOD—THE BERKSHIRE

An evening concert. The bandstand in the Music Shed is illuminated, and the crowd spills over on the lawn. The Bo

Montreal Gazette
Sight & Sound
By Thomas Archer July 8, 1954

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

One of the most successful institutions of its kind on this continent is the Berkshire Symphonic Festival given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and assistants in the pleasant Berkshire Hills, about a day's journey from Montreal through Burlington and St. Alban's to Pittsfield where you turn off to that millionaire's paradise known as Lenox. I missed the first festival when the tent blew down and the late Serge Koussevitzky delivered an ultimatum to the summer residents of Lenox that if they wanted the BSO to put on a festival for them they had to provide proper accommodation.

That was in 1937, a year later than the foundation of our own Montreal Festival. Koussevitzky's ultimatum was read, marked and inwardly digested by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and when we arrived in a second-hand Ford in the summer of 1938, the Bethlehem miracle had already been performed. I did hear the broadcast of the concert in 1937 which wa sthe cause of this effect. The great Koussevitzky was concentrated with the BSO on a symphony in the tent versus Jove, in the Disney tradition, threw down a thunderbolt in the shape of a cloudburst.

Bethlehem built The Shed which is still the last word in the summer fight against the weatherman. You can get insurance against the weatherman, and it has been tried in Montreal But the law of averages is against it.

The Shed at Lenox, as most people know, is a remarkable contrivance. In 1938 (there may have been improvements since) it was, as I recall it, and very vividly too, a solid steel roof supported by girders, open to the air but with shutters to pull down when the weatherman really got ugly.

It cost somewhere up in the hundred thousands, but Bethlehem Steel, a big corporation, absorbed it, no doubt, in its profit and loss account. I shall never forget sitting in The Shed in the summer of 1938, a year after the tent disaster, when the grand old Koussevitzky had his reward. A summer storm was brewing from the very beginning. The final item on the program was the Sibelius Second Symphony, beautifully timed because Finland was in the news at the time as they met her financial obligations. I recall it, the storm burst as Koussevitzky led his men into the stirring finale with its ascending theme. It wasn't a bad storm. They didn't even have to pull down the shutters.

Tanglewood, called after the Hawthorne Estate (Scarlet Letter), was a delightful place in those days. In 1938 we motored down in our second-hand Ford, stayed at a convenient tourist home for a dollar each night. What meals we were not invited to, we filled in at a convenient diner half way between Pittsfield and Lenox.

In 1939 we were invited to house ourselves on the estate of the late Mrs. Edwards Spencer. Our mutual friend, Frances Stillman, a distant relative of Mrs. Spencer's, was looking after Mrs. Spencer's menagerie which included horses, dogs, cats and birds. We dined at the mansion at night. Mrs. Spencer, a vigorous widow of some 70-odd years, I remember as the perfect American hostess, a great lady.

Mrs. Spencer introduced us to the distinguished Edward Burlingham Hill, a quiet man who had much to do with putting music firmly into the Harvard curriculum. In the confusion of Mrs. Spencer's homeric afternoons we managed to get in a few words as two music-lovers. That was the year I was personally introduced to Mr. Koussevitzky himself by Madame Leger, then president of the Ladies Morning Musical Club.

I met Mr. Koussevitzky a second time at Mrs. Spencer's. It was just a handshake. The third time was just before his death when he undertook to conduct, under handicaps that I could only faintly surmise, the tour of the Israel Symphony in Canada and the United States. Fran Robinson, then of CFCF, interviewed him at a press conference in the Ritz-Carlton. He was in great form and, like most conductors, an expert in his public relations and radio timing.

Mr. Koussevitzky's chief assistants in making the Berkshire Festival a going concern were Gertrude Robinson Smith, whose father built The Shed, and George Judd Sc... who still runs the festival as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since Mr. Brennan, whom I met-retired in 1935.

The Berkshire Festival is still going strong as an embodiment of the idea that people want to enjoy music in summer on their holidays. Charles Munch has taken it over and is following in the footsteps of Mr. Koussevitzky.

... festival by its name is an outstanding event of the year. It means to the good citizens a resume, as it were, of what talent they have in their own backyard. When you have the Boston Symphony Council behind you as ... Festival has ... much to do with putting music ... firmly into the Harvard curriculum ... as I saw work ... pupils ... concerts at ... and ... Spencer's homeric afternoons ...

LYNN, MASS.
ITEM
JUN 18 1954

Social

Violist, Composer, Organist, Conductor

Toch Primrose Big... Morel

AMONG EMINENT musicians participating or represented in "Tanglewood" concerts this season are William Primrose, violinist; Ernst Toch, whose Second Symphony ... be performed July 25. ... Power Biggs, organist, ... heard in recital and Jean ... to conduct next Saturday ... Boston Symphony con... The Shed.

Syracuse Herald
July 18 1954

[189]

TIGHT BINDING

NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS

MAR 31 1954

Berkshire's Tanglewood Lists Summer Plans

Three musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernest Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Toch, a native of Austria has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of Opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshires Festival. There will be a six - week session from July 5 to August 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of fifty includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

I — Orchestral conducting: Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra: Jean Morel, conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; chamber music: Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher, 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and Willem Valkenier.

II — Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron.

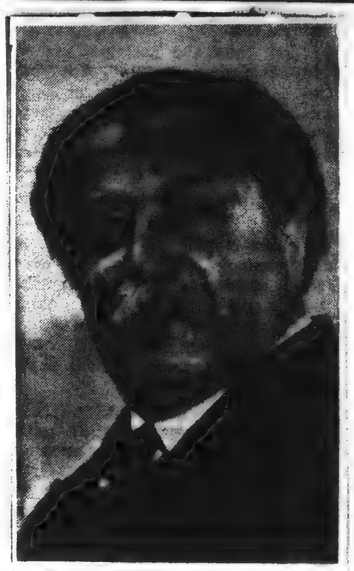
III — Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

IV — Opera; Frederic Cohen, Morton Siegel, stage director; Elsa Kahl, acting; Emanuel Balaban, coaching; John Blankenchip, stage design; Felix Wolfes, coaching; Leo Van Witsen, costume; Frederic Waldman, conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, technical director, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the Associate Division.

V — The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.



PIERRE MONTEUX will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra at the Berkshire Festival.

Chamber Orchestra Concert To Open Tanglewood Series

Claremont Daily Eagle

LENOX, Mass., July 9 — The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood.

Known popularly as" the Bach-Mozart concerts," these increasingly popular programs in 1953 attracted an audience of 26,150, an average attendance of 4360. An innovation this year will find the chamber orchestra concerts given on successive Friday evenings, July 16, July 23, July 30, August 6; the final one, however, will be on a Thursday, August 12, because of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" gala day scheduled for Friday, August 13. In past years these intimate concerts had been concentrated into the first three week ends of the Berkshire festival on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

At tonight's all-Bach concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the podium at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss, composer-conductor-pianist and this ear head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department V for amateur students of music, a soloist.

Music Shed

The music shed at Tanglewood opens its 1954 enlarged series of six Saturday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra in the Berkshire Festival tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

At tomorrow's opening of the shed series, three weeks earlier than in the past, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony, will conduct for the first time at Tanglewood Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust." The Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices directed by G. Wallace Woodworth will participate; and soloists, all making their Tanglewood debuts, are Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm bass.

Although the work, which runs two and a half hours with a single intermission, has never before been presented at a Berkshire festival, Mr. Munch, president of the Berlioz society, conducted it in Boston last winter in a performance that received unanimous critical praise.

"The Damnation of Faust" is the first of a number of Berlioz' works, including the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" (July 31), the "Reuiem" (August 15), the song cycle "Summer Nights" and the "Te Deum" (August 7) and the symphony "Harold in Italy" (July 25) to be given in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer in observance of the 150th season of the birth of the French composer.

Berkshire Music Festival to Open At Lenox July 7

LENOX, Mass., June 24—Subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire festival series by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on six Saturday evenings, July 10 to August 14, and on six Sunday afternoons, July 11 to August 15, in the music shed have surpassed those of the summer of 1953, manager George E. Judd announces.

Prices for the shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, are one-third less this year, since the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate Theatre-Concert hall are being sold separately.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season of the Berkshire Music center starts, the box office will also be open on Sundays. Mail orders for single concerts are also filled on receipt and should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope for return of tickets.

The fifteenth Berkshire festival in which the Boston Symphony orchestra has participated commences on Wednesday, July 7, at 8:30 p. m., with the first of six Wednesday Chamber Music concerts in the Theatre-Concert hall.

Among the season's soloists are Metropolitan opera stars Eleanor Steber, soprano, and Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; David Poleri and John McCollum, tenor; Lukas Foss, Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, Seymour Lipkin and Leo Smit. Violin soloists are Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt. Other assisting artists are Doriot Anthony, flutist; William Primrose, violist, the Harvard Glee club and the Radcliffe Choral society; the Albeneri Trio; the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the Griller String Quartet, and the Kroll String Quartet.

...AY, JULY 18, 195...
...HE BERKSHIR...

...AL IS IN FULL SWING

Clemens Kalischer

...with Charles Munch as music director, is on hand as usual.

...over on the lawn. The ...

...aged to get in a few word... music-lovers. That was... I was personally introdu... Mr. Koussevitzky himself... ame Leger, then presiden... Ladies' Morning Musical C... at Mr. Koussevitzky a se... at Mrs. Spencer's. It ... a handshake. The third ... just before his death, whe... ertook to conduct, under ... ps that I could only fa... nist the tour of the I... phony in Canada and ... ted States. Fran Robin... of CFCF, interviewed hi... ress conference in the ... tion. He was in great ... like most conductors, an... in his public relations ... o timing.

...r. Koussevitzky's chief ... s in making the Berk... tival a going concern ... trude Robinson Smith, ... er built The Shed, and ... d Sr., who still runs th...

...s manager of the Boston ... y Orchestra since Mr. ... (whom I also retired in ... e Berkshire Festival is ... g strong as an embodim... dea that people want to ... c in summer on their ... Charles Munch has ta... and is following in the ... of Mr. Koussevitzky. ... festival, by its name ...

...nding event of the y... t to give good citizens a ... as it were, of what ta... have in their own backy... asy, when you have the ... Arts Council behind you... Edinburgh Festival has. ... hard as I saw when I wen... onaire's acres at Tanglew... 38 and 1939. But they h... the job.

...st, Conductor

Biggs

Morel

...ymphony will be perfor... July 25; E. Power Biggs, ...anist, to be heard in re... nd Jean Morel to conduct ... Saturday night's Boston ... hony concert in The Shed.

...abd - Journ... ...y 18, 1954

Claremont, N.H.
Daily Eagle
Friday, July 2, 1954

Festival At Lenox To Launch Music Festival At Lenox

LENOX, July 2—Charles Munch will give his first concert next Friday with a chamber orchestra of Boston symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the Music shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Stever (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music center in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon, July 4, at 3:30 p. m., and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symhony orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7.

Boston Musicians To Shuttle to Tanglewood

BOSTON, July 7—At the close of tonight's Esplanade concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles river in Boston, 65 members of the Boston Symphony orchestra begin "Operation Shuttle," a weekly commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for week end concerts by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival.

When Conductor Charles Munch conceived the plan, to go into effect at Tanglewood for the first time this week end, of six week ends of music shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony orchestra, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, thereby increasing the number of shed concerts from last season's nine to 12, the problem arose how to solve having many players of the Boston Symphony in two places at once.

In all, the shuttle operation will involve six Thusday trips to Tanglewood and five Monday returns to Boston, or approximately 1650 miles apiece for each of the 65 travelers.

Pianist's Appearance At Tanglewood Changed

LENOX, Mass., July 1—Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony orchestra during the Berkshire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, have been announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of August 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tormbeau de Couperin."

[190]

Change Announced By Berkshire Festival

LENOX, Mass., July 5—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, announces changes in the concert of the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood to be played by the orchestra in the music shed at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, August 1.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture," to be followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," then by the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replaced the previously scheduled "Chous" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak Violin Concerto.

TIGHT BINDING

NEWBURGH, N. Y.
NEWS

MAR 31 1954

Berkshire's Tanglewood Lists Summer Plans

Three musicians will be added to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer: Jean Morel as head of the orchestra and conducting departments, Ernest Toch as teacher of composition, and Frederic Cohen as head of the opera department.

Mr. Morel, the French conductor who is at present the head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, has conducted at the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro and Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Center Opera. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein who will be on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer.

Mr. Toch, a native of Austria has taught at the Hochschule fur Musik in Mannheim, at the New School for Social Research in New York and more recently at the University of Southern California. He will join Aaron Copland as guest teacher in the composition department.

Mr. Cohen is the head of the department of Opera at the Juilliard School in New York and will take the place of Boris Goldovsky, who is to be on leave of absence for the summer. Lukas Foss, who has been teaching at Tanglewood since 1946, will serve as head of the Tanglewood Study Group as well as teaching composition, while Ingolf Dahl is on leave of absence. Mr. Morel and Mr. Foss will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival; Mr. Toch's Second Symphony is scheduled for performance July 25; Mr. Cohen will be in charge of the principal production of the Opera Department.

The Berkshire Music Center is the summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the concerts of the Berkshires Festival. There will be a six - week session from July 5 to August 15, directed by Charles Munch, the music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Aaron Copland, the composer, as assistant director. The faculty of fifty includes many eminent musicians, among them the principals and other members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, 24 in all.

The Berkshire Music Center offers courses in five departments, as follows:

I — Orchestral conducting: Jean Morel and Seymour Lipkin; orchestra: Jean Morel, conductor, assisted by 15 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; chamber music: Richard Burgin and William Kroll; Gregor Piatigorsky, guest teacher, 10 present members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Jean Bedetti, Fernand Gillet, Ruth Posselt and Willem Valkenier.

II — Choral Music: Hugh Ross, James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke deVaron.

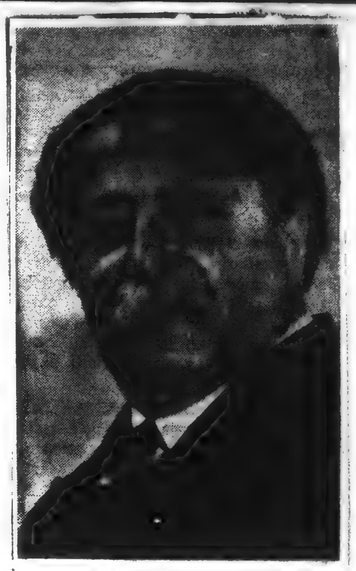
III — Composition: Aaron Copland, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss.

IV — Opera; Frederic Cohen, Morton Siegel, stage director; Elsa Kahl, acting; Emanuel Balaban, coaching; John Blankenchip, stage design; Felix Wolfes, coaching; Leo Van Witsen, costume; Frederic Waldman, conductor; Thomas de Gaetani, technical director, Ludwig and Laura Zirner, the Associate Division.

V — The Tanglewood Study Group: Lukas Foss, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn.

All departments will give concerts at Tanglewood this summer, and these concerts will be open by invitation to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, who are contributors to the support of the school. The chorus of the Berkshire Music Center will take part in the performances of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet," "Requiem" and "Te Deum." The Tanglewood Study Group is especially intended for all who wish to study music simply for its enjoyment. Those who intend to become professional performers are served by the other departments.

Applications for enrollment are now being taken. Information about the school and the catalog can be secured from the Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.



PIERRE MONTEUX will be a guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra at the Berkshire Festival.

Chamber Orchestra Concert To Open Tanglewood Series

Claremont Daily Eagle

LENOX, Mass., July 9 — The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood.

Known popularly as" the Bach-Mozart concerts," these increasingly popular programs in 1953 attracted an audience of 26,150, an average attendance of 4360. An innovation this year will find the chamber orchestra concerts given on successive Friday evenings, July 16, July 23, July 30, August 6; the final one, however, will be on a Thursday, August 12, because of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" gala day scheduled for Friday, August 13. In past years these intimate concerts had been concentrated into the first three week ends of the Berkshire festival on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons.

At tonight's all-Bach concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the podium at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss, composer-conductor-pianist and this ear head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department V for amateur students of music, a soloist.

Music Shed

The music shed at Tanglewood opens its 1954 enlarged series of six Saturday night and six Sunday afternoon concerts by the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra in the Berkshire Festival tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

At tomorrow's opening of the shed series, three weeks earlier than in the past, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony, will conduct for the first time at Tanglewood Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust." The Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices directed by G. Wallace Woodworth will participate; and soloists, all making their Tanglewood debuts, are Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; and Donald Gramm bass.

Although the work, which runs two and a half hours with a single intermission, has never before been presented at a Berkshire festival, Mr. Munch, president of the Berlioz society, conducted it in Boston last winter in a performance that received unanimous critical praise.

"The Damnation of Faust" is the first of a number of Berlioz' works, including the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" (July 31), the "Reuiem" (August 15), the song cycle "Summer Nights" and the "Te Deum" (August 7) and the symphony "Harold in Italy" (July 25) to be given in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer in observance of the 150th season of the birth of the French composer.

Berkshire Music Festival to Open At Lenox July 7

LENOX, Mass., June 24—Subscribers for the 1954 Berkshire festival series by the Boston Symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, for concerts held on six Saturday evenings, July 10 to August 14, and on six Sunday afternoons, July 11 to August 15, in the music shed have surpassed those of the summer of 1953, manager George E. Judd announces.

Prices for the shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony orchestra, which Music Director Charles Munch conducts, with Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin as guest conductors, are one-third less this year, since the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts in the intimate Theatre-Concert hall are being sold separately.

All remaining tickets for the Tanglewood season are now on sale at the box office which is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Commencing July 4, when the 12th season of the Music center [illegible] will [illegible] Mail [illegible] are [illegible] ld [illegible] d, [illegible] tone; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone. Piano soloists are Claudioi Arrau, Lukas Foss, Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, Seymour Lipkin and Leo Smit. Violin soloists are Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt. Other assisting artists are Doriot Anthony, flutist; William Primrose, viiolist, the Harvard Glee club and the Radcliffe Choral society; the Albeneri Trio; the Zimbler Sinfonietta; the Griller String Quartet, and the Kroll String Quartet.

Clemens Kalischer

with Charles Munch as music director, is on hand as usual.

AY, JULY 18, 1954
HE BERKSHIR

AL IS IN FULL SWING

over on the lawn. The aged to get in a few word music-lovers. That was

I was personally introdu
Mr. Koussevitzky himself lame Leger, then presiden
Ladies Morning Musical C et Mr. Koussevitzky a se at Mrs. Spencer's. It a handshake. The third
just before his death, whe ertook to conduct, under ps that I could only fai nise the tour of the I phony in Canada and ted States. Fran Robin of CFCF, interviewed hi ress conference in the ton. He was in great like most conductors, an in his public relations
o timing.
r. Koussevitzky's chief s in making the Berks ival a going concern trude Robinson Smith, w er built The Shed, and d Sr., who still runs the s manager of the Boston

y Orchestra since Mr.
(whom I met) retired in e Berkshire Festival is g strong as an embodime dea that people want to c in summer on their Charles Munch has ta and is following in the
of Mr. Koussevitzky. festival, by its name

nding event of the ye to give good citizens a as it were, of what tal have in their own backya easy, when you have the B
Arts Council behind you
Edinburgh Festival has.
hard as I saw when I went onaire's acres at Tanglew
38 and 1939. But they h
the job.

st, Conductor

Biggs Morel

ymphony will be perfor
uly 25; E. Power Biggs, anist, to be heard in re
nd Jean Morel to conduct aturday night's Boston S
hony concert in The Shed.

Clipped - Journal
July 18, 1954

Clipped by Concert
Claremont, N.H.
Daily Eagle
Friday, July 2, 1954

Festival At Lenox To Launch Music Festival At Lenox

LENOX, July 2—Charles Munch will give his first concert next Friday with a chamber orchestra of Boston symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the Music shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Stever (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music center in the Theatre-Concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon, July 4, at 3:30 p. m., and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symhony orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7.

Boston Musicians To Shuttle to Tanglewood

BOSTON, July 7—At the close of tonight's Esplanade concert which Arthur Fiedler conducts on the embankment of the Charles river in Boston, 65 members of the Boston Symphony orchestra begin "Operation Shuttle," a weekly commuting to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for week end concerts by the Boston Symphony in the Berkshire Festival.

When Conductor Charles Munch conceived the plan, to go into effect at Tanglewood for the first time this week end, of six week ends of music shed concerts by the full 104-man Boston Symphony orchestra, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, thereby increasing the number of shed concerts from last season's nine to 12, the problem arose how to solve having many players of the Boston Symphony in two places at once.

In all, the shuttle operation will involve six Thusday trips to Tanglewood and five Monday returns to Boston, or approximately 1650 miles apiece for each of the 65 travelers.

Pianist's Appearance At Tanglewood Changed

LENOX, Mass., July 1—Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony orchestra during the Berkshire festival in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, have been announced by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of August 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tormbeau de Couperin."

[190]

Change Announced By Berkshire Festival

LENOX, Mass., July 9—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, announces changes in the concert of the Berkshire festival at Tanglewood to be played by the orchestra in the music shed at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, August 1.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture," to be followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," then by the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replaced the previously scheduled "Chous" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak Violin Concerto.

Kansas City Star
July 12, 1954

MUSIC LURE EVER NEW

FESTIVAL AT TANGLEWOOD, NEAR LENOX, MASS., IS ON.

Some Students From Missouri and Kansas Are Attending Advanced School for Musicians.

By Joseph Kaye.

Lenox, Mass., July 11.—Every summer this quiet little town in the Berkshire hills, becomes the music center of America because of Tanglewood, near here, where a 6-week music festival and school for advanced students is conducted by the Boston symphony orchestra.

Both have become world famous. The main concerts are given by the orchestra.

This season, the seventeenth, is dedicated to the French composer, Hector Berlioz, born 150 years ago. His dramatic cantata, "The Damnation of Faust," opened the principal orchestral series last night, following two small events, and was considered the premier of the festival.

Once Home of Hawthorne.

Tanglewood is a beautiful wooded estate on which Nathaniel Hawthorne lived two years and where he planned his "Tanglewood Tales." Hence the name. On the grounds is a replica of the little red house where he stayed. This is used as a studio.

The concerts, known officially as the Berkshire festival, are given in a large shed with a seating capacity of 6,000, and in a smaller music theater. The shed is a unique auditorium designed by the famed Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen. It is open on three sides, and "lying room" is available on the lawns. The acoustics are so wonderful that the music is clearly heard even from the farthest lawn location. The fan-shaped building has a wooden roof somewhat resembling the back of a violin, which acts as a sounding board.

The huge parking lots around Tanglewood are filled with cars bearing license plates from all over the United States. The opening concert in the shed was heard by 8,500, while the second one yesterday afternoon, an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau as the soloist, drew 10,050. The students, chosen through special auditions, this season come from thirty-five states and nine countries, including Japan and Haiti.

"The Damnation of Faust" was conducted by Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston symphony and of the festival. The solists were Eleanor Steber, David Poleri (heard recently in Kansas City's production of "Madam Butterfly"), Martial Singher and Donald Gramm. Two choruses were used, the Harvard Glee club and the Radcliffe Choral society.

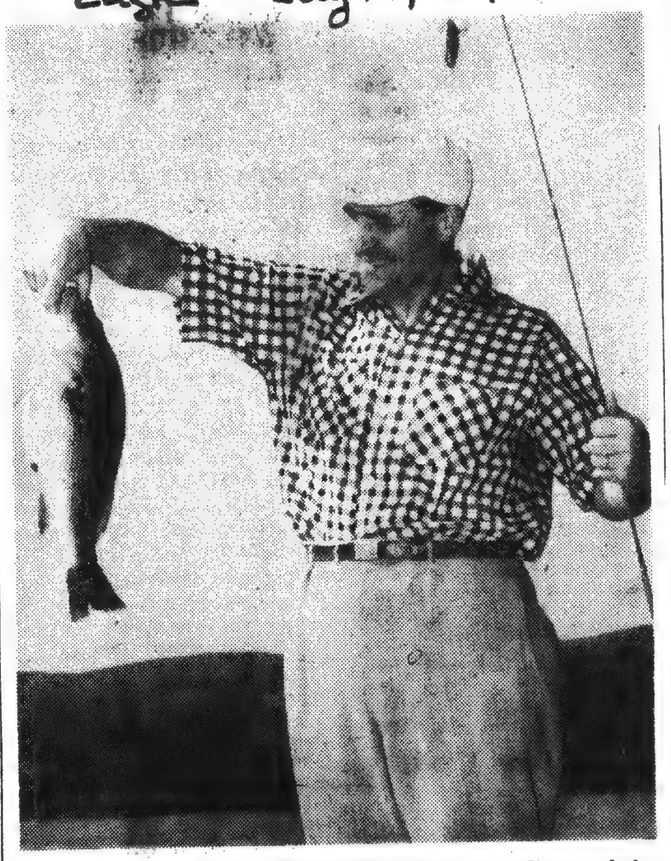
Little of Sweet Music.

This work by a savage, bitter rebel in music was given a performance of grandeur. Berlioz's "Faust" is poles apart from the Gounod opera. It is of a panoramic dramatic quality with little concession to sweet lyricism except in the well known interludes. The chorus is engaged in a commentary—sardonic, compassionate and reflective. The great audience was stirred by magnificent climaxes such as are rarely heard in a concert hall.

During the 6-week season the principal works of Berlioz will be performed, and the concluding event, on the afternoon of Sunday, August 15, will be given over to the "Requiem."

There are eight students at Tanglewood from Missouri and Kansas. From Missouri they are Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg; Mara Hall, Westminster college, Fulton; Richard Benfro, Bethany; Betty Lee Bowen, St. Louis; Mary Dodge, University City. From Kansas: Robert and Rodney Pierce, Wichita, and Eugene Orcutt, Topeka.

Eagle - July 14, 1954



HIGH NOTE FOR TRUMPETER Roger Voisin of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was his snagging of this 5¾-pound largemouth bass Sunday night while plug casting in front of his Stockbridge Bowl cottage. Mr. Voisin said he was more excited about this piscatorial conquest than about the plaudits he received from music critics for his performance with the "small orchestra" in the Bach Brandenburg concertos two evenings before. His lure was a green Jitterbug.

Players and Pipers

Greene County "Examiner-Recorder"
July 15, 1954
By John and Betty Bagley

"The Damnation of Faust," a huge two-hour oratorio, performed last Saturday, was the first of the many compositions by Berlioz to be heard at Tanglewood this season. In this version of the old legend of the man who sells his soul to the devil, Mephistopheles makes his first attack on Faust by taking that learned man to—of all places — a German beer-cellar, complete with sophomoric student songs. Failing to win him with wine and song, Mephisto tries woman, in the person of Marguerite. The latter unintentionally gives her mother an overdose of the sleeping draught supplied by Faust only to keep her mother from discovering Marguerite's nocturnal activities with her lover, Marguerite is jailed for murder. Mephisto promises to save her if Faust will sign a little paper; he does and is promptly whisked off to hell on a black horse, pursued by demons. Marguerite dies, but her crimes are forgiven.

Berlioz could have built a very impressive composition on the old tale, but composing in an age of romantic melodrama and following his predilection for program music, he produced a story to which our synopsis is not unfair. The result is a work which to us seemed theatrical and superficial, rather than dramatic and deep. He wrote with great vividness, sometimes with sweetness and grace, sometimes with deep intensity and passion, always with the skill that earned him the title of father of modern orchestration. Had he omitted some of the incidental passages and cut the work in half, the final effect could be more impressive.

Eleanor Steber, David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles), and Donald Gramm (Brander), sang the solo parts, with the Harvard and Radcliff Glee Clubs doing the choral parts. All vocal work was excellent and the performance of the orchestra, under Mr. Munch, was first-rate as usual.

If you're anxious to hear the "Damnation" you can do so in New York, where it will be presented this fall for the first time in twelve years, Mr. Singher again singing as Mephistopheles.

"I know every note of it," said a woman beside us just before the orchestra began to play Beethoven's Fifth Symphony Sunday afternoon. Many people probably thought the same of that and of Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto, which preceded it. They are old reliable stand-bys that every concerto-goer and record-buyer has heard dozens of times. But conductor Pierre Monteux, almost an octogenarian, and pianist Claudio Arrau breathed new youth and spirit into them. Here was great music, superbly performed. In the half hour of his symphony, Beethoven goes deeper into the human spirit than Berlioz could in two hours. "Build and depend upon your own strength," the composer seems to say, "and you need not fear what the world can do. This is music for the ages."

Two-thirty is the new hour for all Tanglewood Sunday concerts; the change from three o'clock was made recently for broadcasting purposes.

Wednesday, July 14, 8:30 — The Albeneri Trio in Brahms Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu Trio in D minor; Beethoven Trio in B flat, Op. 97.

Friday, July 16, 8:30 — Bach Cantata No. 93 with Hugh Ross conducting. Suites Nos. 1 and 4—Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 17, 8:30 — Debussy, Excerpts "St. Sebastian." Frank, "Les Djinns", for piano and orchestra, soloist Vera Franceschi; Debussy, "La Mer" and Franck Symphony in D. Minor — Pierre Monteux conducting.

Sunday, July 18, 2:30—Debussy "I Sunday, July 18, 2:30 — Debussy "Iberia"; Copeland Piano concerto with Lee Smit as soloist; Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony" — Charles Munch conducting.

MUSIC AWARDS OFFERED

N. Y. Times - July 21

Federation to Give Cash Prizes and Solo Appearances

Three new awards have been offered by the National Federation of Music Clubs for its twenty-first biennial Young Artist Auditions, which will take place next spring. One award, offered in conjunction with Inter-Allied Artists Corporation, is open to an American-born lyric tenor between the ages of 23 and 28. The winner will receive a recording contract and concert, opera and radio appearances in Europe.

Other awards will entitle the winners to solo appearances with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra, and with Thor Johnson and the Cincinnati Symphony.

As in past years, the auditions will present cash prizes of $1,000 to winners in the categories of piano, voice, violin and chamber music, with the option of a debut recital at Town Hall. Full details may be obtained from the federation, 445 West Twenty-third Street.

From Class to Mass-Support In Artistic Enterprises

The point made by Mr. William C. Cox, the personable chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, speaking to the Kiwanians yesterday, on the change in the basis of support for various philanthropic enterprises was well taken. Once upon a time the brunt of the support of the majority of colleges, hospitals, orchestras, museums, and other similar enterprises were supported by a relatively small percentage of the population. They were class enterprises and, in some instances, the clientele was almost as much restricted to those who had exceptional financial and educational advantages as was the nature of its support.

Two factors have been responsible for a revolution in the support and the patronage of artistic enterprises particularly. The rich are still with us, but the income tax and the inheritance tax have restricted them heavily; only a few oil-millionaires can give with the lavishness of the wealthy of 50 years ago. Meanwhile the number of causes of various kinds have multiplied so that the supply of "angels" would be short, anyhow.

Support today must come from those with medium or small incomes—and it does; last year no less than 30 million people contributed to the support of voluntarily supported philanthropic activities. The more equitable distribution of wealth has made popular support necessary, but has impelled the beneficiaries to take on responsibilities once largely monopolized by the very wealthy.

Equally impressive was the debut of William C. Cox, new chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, before the Pittsfield Kiwanis Club yesterday. His philosophy that music is for everybody is likely to win many more friends for the Friends . . . If that was just the edge of a heat wave that boiled the Berkshires yesterday, saints preserve us from being in the middle of one . . .

Eagle - July 15

"Fausts Verdammnis"

Aufbau - July 16
Festspiele in Tanglewood

Seit Koussevitzkys Tod steht Tanglewood bekanntlich unter der Leitung von Charles Muench, der mit Recht als besonderer Kenner französischer Musik gilt. Man hat die im ersten Kammerorchesterkonzert gespielten fünf Brandenburgischen Konzerte im Zusammenspiel schon besser gehört, aber dieser Eindruck war vergessen, sowie das erste Orchesterkonzert mit Berlioz' "Fausts Verdammnis" begann. Das im Grunde so zwiespältige und eigenartige Werk fand hier eine einzigartige und überwältigende Aufführung. Muench verstand es, den besonderen Zauber dieser romantischen Musik so lebendig zu machen, dass man nicht mehr danach fragte, warum Faust plötzlich in Ungarn lebt, Rakoczy Marsch oder warum in die Traurigkeit von Gretchen am Spinnrad ein bewusst gegensätzlicher Studentenchor hereinklingen muss.

Eleonor Steber als Gretchen war zu[illegible]. David Poleri gab Faust die von Berlioz vorgeschriebene Zartheit und Frank Martial Singher's Mephisto [illegible] und dramatischem Ausdruck.

Besonders [illegible] unvergessliche Höhepunkte waren die Orchesterzwischenspiele [illegible] Marsch, Tanz der Sylphen und [illegible] Mephistos Serenade, die Höllenfahrt und wohl ganz besonders die Chöre in Auerbachs Keller.

Der lang anhaltende Beifall galt vor allem Muench, der übrigens das Werk im kommenden Winter in New York zur Aufführung bringen wird.

In dem die erste Woche abschliessenden Beethovenkonzert spielte Claudio Arrau das Emperor Konzert, vielleicht nicht so monumental wie man es gewöhnt ist, dafür aber völlig durchgeistigt und abgeklärt. Wenn auch die technische Durchführung der 5. Symphonie unter Monteux nicht in allen Einzelheiten vollkommen war, so stand man doch vom ersten bis zum letzten Ton im Bann seiner meisterlichen und durchdringenden Gestaltung.

W. St.

Music

Albeneri Trio Ends on Top In Battle With the Weather

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ALBENERI TRIO made a valiant attempt to ignore the weather last night when they gave the second program of the Wednesday evening chamber music series in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood but the rain, although it was slight, and the occasional lightning and rumbling thunder which continued intermittently through the first two of the three trios they had listed probably was a greater distraction to the artists than to their audience whose attention their playing held steadily. Thus it was that while they played with precision and individual brilliance, the audience was more than willing to grant them indulgence if they did not maintain tonal balance nor artistic agreement consistently.

The members of the trio are Erich Itor Kahn, piano, Giorgio Ciompi, violin, and Benar Heifetz, cello. Between the Brahms B major, Opus 8, and the Beethoven B flat major, Opus 97, they played a 1950 trio of Bohuslav Martinu, who was on the composition staff at the Berkshire Music Center in 1946 and whose string sextet was awarded the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge prize in 1932.

The Martinu trio consists of three short movements, a slow one between two swift ones, and is pleasant and ingratiating in the main. It begins with what seems at the outset like a Bach-type D minor violin sonata but it soon becomes apparent that Martinu's keen sense of rhythm intends something quite different. It is metrically fresh and intriguing although its other factors do not present the ears with ponderous problems. The adagio is a lucid narrative placed in the most grateful parts of the strings and with the piano for the moment executing a less important role. The finale is an agitated mosaic of small busy phrases which the artists fitted together with easy accuracy.

* * *

THERE ARE several points of similarity between the two major trios of the evening. Each has four movements in the same sequence. The second movement in each case, a scherzo, starts with an unaccompanied cello phase. The third movement in both trios is the slow one. In the Brahms the piano has decorative triplets after the first theme reappears and the viols answer with a long-drawn tenuous response. The piano here quite obscured the thinly produced string tone. When a similar situation occurs in the first variation of the Beethoven slow movement the piano showed a great deal more awareness and consideration.

Both of these trios are sublime music but the performance never got far off the ground. The Brahms was played in America in 1855 before the composer himself heard it performed in public in Europe. The violinist of the American premiere was Theodore Thomas who, as conductor, appeared in Pittsfield in October of 1885 for what may well have been the first orchestral visit here. Pittsfield at that time had 14,000 people.

ANCIENT MUSIC, ancient vintages. The Pro Musica Antiqua singers, who are not too old themselves, drop in often at the new Avaloch bar in Lenox where they frequently surprise customers by bursting into madrigals over their [illegible]. Avaloch is sponsoring their concerts following the Tanglewood season.

[191]

Leontyne Price, Samuel Barber To Be Heard At South Mountain Saturday Afternoon at 4

Leontyne Price, soprano, and Samuel Barber, pianist, will be presented in the second of a series of six chamber music concerts Saturday at 4 p.m. at South Mountain, it was announced today by Mrs. Willem Willeke, musical director.

Miss Price, who has risen to fame in a little over two years, was a student at Tanglewood in the summer of 1951 where she was awarded a scholarship for advanced work in the opera school. At that time she was acclaimed for her performance of the soprano part in "Ariadne auf Naxo." During the summer of 1953 she was invited to return to the Berkshire Music Festival, this time with William Warfield, to appear in a concert version of Act Two of "Porgy and Bess" with the Boston Symphony under Leonard Bernstein in the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert. Miss Price, who is Mrs. Warfield in private life, previously played one of the two major roles with Mr. Warfield in this opera.

A native of Laurel, Miss., where she completed her high school education, she was graduated from Wilberforce College in Ohio. She had planned to become a teacher but following appearances with the college glee club, she won a scholarship for advanced study at the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

In Student Productions

As a member of the Juilliard School she performed in several student productions including the role of Mistress Ford in Verdi's "Falstaff." Vergil Thomson subsequently engaged her for an important role in the revival of his opera "Four Saints in Three Acts."

Due to the pressure of concert appearances Miss Price temporarily has been unable to make use of her Fulbright and John Hay Whitney Fellowships for further study abroad, having won them in 1952 as a result of her work at Juilliard.

Samuel Barber

Leontyne Price

Samuel Barber, a native of West Chester, Pa., is one of the most frequently performed of all the serious American composers. He studied composition with Rosario Scalero at the Curtis Institute of Music and spent several years in Austria and Italy after winning the Prix de Rome and the Pulitzer Prize. The premiere of his First Symphony was conducted by Molinari in Rome in 1936, its American premiere by Artur Rodzinski in Cleveland, in 1937.

Other of his works include: Adagio for Strings and Essay for Orchestra which were given their world premiere by Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony, a Violin Concerto, School for Scandal Overture, Quartet in D major, A Stopwatch and an Ordnance Map and many others. The Hermit Songs, which are to be performed, for the second time in America, at Saturday's concert, and which were commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation, were first performed by Miss Price and Mr. Barber at the Library of Congress in October of last year and at the Festival of 20th Century Music in Rome, Italy, last April. They will record them for Columbia Records, and Miss Price will introduce them to New York next November at Town Hall.

The most recent composition by Mr. Barber is "Prayers of Kierkegaard" which will be introduced by Munch and the Boston Symphony in Boston and New York next December.

Saturday Program

The program Saturday will be:

Sommi Dei ..... Handel
Bel piacere ..... Handel
An Chloe ..... Mozart
Allelujah ..... Mozart
Sleep Now (from "Chamber Music" by James Joyce) (1936) ..... Barber
The Daisies (James Stephens) (1927) ..... Barber
Nocturne (Frederic Prokoseh) (1940) ..... Barber
Nuvoletta (from "Finnegan's Wake" by James Joyce) (1940) ..... Barber

INTERMISSION

Hermit Songs (to poems translated from anonymous Irish texts of the eighth to thirteenth centuries) (1953) .... Barber
- At Saint Patrick's Purgatory
- Church Bell at Night
- Saint Ita's Vision
- The Heavenly Banquet
- The Crucifixion
- Sea-snatch
- Promiscuity
- The Monk and His Cat
- The Praises of God
- The Desire for Hermitage

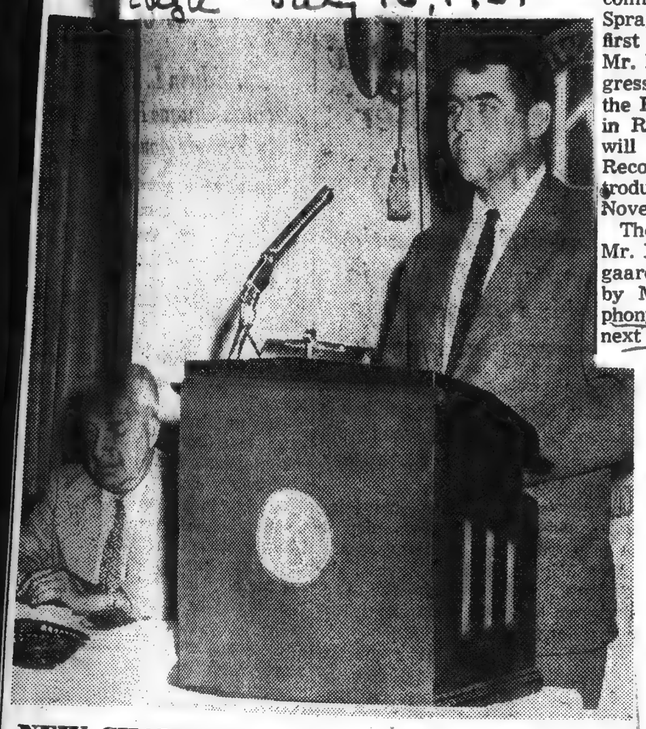
(sung without intermission)

Tu vois le feu du soir (You see the evening light) ..... Poulenc
Main dominee par le coeur (Hand ruled by the heart) ..... Poulenc
Au bord de l'eau (At the water's edge) ..... Fauré
Fleur jetee (Abandoned flower) ... Fauré

Miss Price will conclude the program by singing a group of Negro spirituals, unaccompanied.

Free tickets for the South Mountain Chamber Music concerts are available at England Bros., Mary & Zell, and Sammy Vincent's in Pittsfield; at the Lenox Library and Tanglewood in Lenox. Seats in a reserved section will be held for contributors to the South Mountain Assn.

Eagle - July 16, 1954



NEW CHAIRMAN of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, William C. Cox, tells the Kiwanis Club of Pittsfield that music is no longer a class item for those who can afford the luxury but a mass item for the millions. Seated is Gilbert Smith, secretary of the Kiwanians. Mr. Cox made an appeal for increased support of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center.

If any further evidence were necessary to prove that Tanglewood is considered the nation's top summer music event, it is to be found in the expressed determination of the promoters of the Newport Festival to make it the "Tanglewood for jazz".

Those present at the ceremonies attending the opening of the Tanglewood festival this year may recall the statement of Mr. Lewis Perry that it has been found that 10 per cent of the members of American orchestras have attended the Tanglewood school. It is no surprise therefore to learn that Sergeant Schermerhorn, who has been so instrumental in improving the Army's orchestra, studied at Tanglewood as well as the New England Conservatory of Music. The whole affair is indicative of the development in the United States in the last two or three decades of interest in symphonic music, of which the foundation of the Tanglewood school was one result and to which the school has made so effective a contribution.

Eagle - July 19, 1954

Tanglewood Graduates Put Talents To Use

Berkshire County has a particular interest in the Seventh Army Symphony Orchestra which is now earning new respect for the Army of Occupation in Germany and for American music. The orchestra now three years old and once threatened with dissolution because of terminating enlistments and limited sources of personnel, is now flourishing. Its revival is due partly to the influence of Dimitri Mitropoulos, who urged General William M. Hoge, European Commander, to raise its quality, and partly to the new conductor, Sergeant Kenneth Schermerhorn a native of Schenectady. The orchestra is now touring Western Europe to considerable eclat; it is one of the youngest and claims to be the best lowest-paid symphony orchestra in the world.

As the story is told, the orchestra was established in 1952 because the commanding officer of the Seventh Army, General Manton B. Eddy, grew tired of the digs of German friends on the fact that American Army musicians devoted themselves to producing hill-billy music exclusively. Under the direction of a musical corporal, Samuel Adler, a capable orchestra was formed which toured Germany and even performed at the Passau festival. In the course of time the departure of Mr. Adler and nearly half the members of the group because of terminating enlistments dealt the orchestra a heavy blow and reduced it to a state from which the active efforts of General Hoge have delivered it.

[192]

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

BEING A MANAGER in Boston can have its drawbacks, as witness the efforts of Lou Boudreau to keep his charges out of the American League cellar. But being a manager in Boston can also have its compensations, as witness the efforts of Thomas Doane Perry Jr., who has just taken over a league-leading outfit that breezes to the pennant with a regularity that puts the New York Yankees to shame.

The manager-elect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is a little "awe-struck" at assuming responsibility for such a fabulous organization, but he feels he has been well-schooled by retiring manager George Judd and welcomes the opportunity to live up to the challenge of his predecessors.

Until his association with the Boston Symphony, Thomas Perry had limited his jobs to two-year cycles. He would enter a new assignment with joy and vigor, but at the end of 22 months a certain restlessness would move in and by the full moon of the 24th month, he would be off somewhere else doing something else. This bewitching circumstance was typical until 1946 when he came to the BSO. It took only a few days for him to realize that the spell was broken, the cycle complete. Here was what he was looking for and here he was going to stay. Fate and the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have obviously agreed with his position on the matter.

* * *

THOMAS PERRY was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., the son of a male engineer and a female Latin teacher. He first came East in 1931 when he entered Yale as an English major and his only ambition then was to follow in his mother's footsteps. Upon graduation in 1935, he took a job teaching school near Wilmington, Del., and the first two-year cycle went into effect.

At the end of 24 months the moon went into full phase, and he left his teaching job to take a position with an advertising agency in Philadelphia. He met a girl at a party and a couple of years later they were married. The two-year courting cycle coincided with the two-year working cycle so in September of 1939 he left the advertising agency to take charge of concert and booking activities for the Curtis Institute. Randall Thompson was director of the institute and working with him was a revelation for Perry. It was his first real taste of music and his appetite has been insatiable ever since.

* * *

IN THE SUMMER of 1940 he told Thompson that he wanted to find out more about music, musical people and musical things. Thompson suggested he enroll at the new Tanglewood School which the BSO was running in Lenox, Mass., and it was no sooner said than done. He came up here with his wife and joined the chorus and had the finest time of his life, falling in love with Tanglewood, the Berkshires and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Perry was extremely happy with his job in Philadelphia but before he knew it two years had slipped by and, bingo, he was running two concert halls for the New England Mutual Insurance Co. in Boston. This went on for two years until 1944 when he entered the medical corps of the U.S. Navy. They double-crossed him and kept him for only one year and this action seemed to break the 24-month spell which had been cast over him.

* * *

FOR SHORTLY after his discharge he started with the BSO and it looks as though he is going to be with them for a long, long time. For like the man he is replacing, George Judd, Mr. Perry lives, eats, sleeps and breathes the Boston Symphony Orchestra. His family consists of a wife, a 12-year-old son, a 10-year-old son, 103 male musicians, 2 female musicians and various and assorted personnel who require his personal attention.

The Boston Symphony orchestra is a group organization, a team in which the individual is considered only as part of the whole. It takes the finest cogs to make the finest wheel, but the BSO is great not only because of the calibre of its musicians but also because these musicians have been moulded into a single great instrument capable of surpassing the sum of its parts.

Thomas Perry

* * *

IT IS obvious that Mr. Perry is cognizant of the importance of each of those parts because whether he is speaking about Conductor Charles Munch or one of the bassoon students at the Tanglewood school who is attached to the organization for a short six weeks, there is the same vital concern with the fortunes, welfare and happiness of each. It is no wonder that George Judd is walking the grounds of Tanglewood with such a benign and relaxed look on his face this summer. He knows that the welfare of his beloved organization will receive the same loving care and zeal that he lavished on it for 25 years.

The new manager is quite capable of handling his left-handed cellos, right-handed trombones and heavy-hitting tympani with all the aplomb and skill of the old master. The BSO will walk into its pennant this year and next year and the year after just as easily as it has in the past. And Lou Boudreau will hunch down into his dugout in Fenway Park while the enemy bats will beat out a merry tune on his hapless players. And he will hear the heavenly music of the Boston Symphony. And he will weep.

Additional Berkshire Festival Soloists

5/14/54

Martial Singher, baritone; David Poleri, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass-baritone; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera; and E. Power Biggs, organist, have been added to the roster of soloists for the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. this summer. The six weekends of summer concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts commence with a chamber music concert by Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; and Martin Hoherman, cello) in an all-Beethoven program in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening, July 7. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra in a program of Bach's Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as solist, in the Theater-Concert Hall on Friday, July 9. The Festival continues through Sunday afternoon, August 15.

Mr. Singher, Mr. Poleri, Mr. Gramm and Eleanor Steber, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will be soloists in Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," to be given for the first time at a Berkshire Festival, on Saturday evening, July 10, in the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood, by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch, with the assistance of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth. The choruses from Cambridge, returning from their first transcontinental tour, will make their first visit to Tanglewood for this occasion.

Tonight's Concert

Festival Chorus and Soloists On Tanglewood Bach Program

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will share the spotlight at tonight's all-Bach concert in the theater-concert hall. The performance is scheduled at 8:30.

Dr. Munch will conduct the chamber orchestra of the BSO in Johann Sebastian Bach's Suites No. 1 in C major and 4 in D major; Mr. Ross will conduct the first Tanglewood performance of Bach's Cantata No. 93, "If Thou Wilt Suffer God To Guide Thee."

In the Bach cantata, Mr. Ross will have the assistance of the Festival chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, with Theresa Green, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor, and McHenry Boatwright, bass, as soloists.

Directed Broadway Musical

Head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department since it started, Mr. Ross holds the post of conductor of the Schola Cantorum in New York and of Boston's Cecilia Society. Former head of the music department at Sarah Lawrence College in Bronxville, N.Y., Ross was music director for the current prize-winning Broadway musical, "The Golden Apple."

Soprano soloist Theresa Green was prominent in the Broadway production of "My Darlin' Aida" and has toured extensively in recital. A summer pupil at Tanglewood in opera-dramatics, last year she was heard in the opera department's production of Gretry's "Richard the Lion-Hearted" and with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Mahler second symphony.

Soloists Miss Krebs and Mr. Boatwright are also advanced students in opera-dramatics at Tanglewood. Miss Krebs sings at both New York's Riverside Church and the Central Synagogue and has been soloist in several Manhattan oratorio performances. Mr. Boatwright has already been heard at Tanglewood this season when he sang the role of "A Voice on Earth" with Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" July 10. Mr. Boatwright, a Boston resident, has also sung under Arthur Fiedler, and is the winner of the Chicagoland Music Festival first prize.

Former Student Here

David Lloyd, tenor soloist in the cantata, is one of Tanglewood's famous alumni. A student in the school's early days, Mr. Lloyd is a leading member of the New York City Opera Company. He has been guest artist with the Glyndebourne Opera Festival in England and has accepted an engagement to perform at the Pablo Casals Festival at Prades, France, in 1955. A frequent soloist with the BSO both in Boston and at Tanglewood, Mr. Lloyd has also made several recordings with the orchestra.

Some tickets remain for the all-Bach concert and reservations may be made at the Tanglewood box office at Lenox. General admission, permitting the holders to listen to the program from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the concert.

Tonight

8:30—Chamber Orchestra. Charles Munch and Hugh Ross, conductors. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

SOLOISTS AND CONDUCTOR at tonight's all-Bach concert at the theater-concert hall, Tanglewood, are, back row, left to right, Hugh Ross, who will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony and choral students of the Berkshire Music Center; David Lloyd, tenor; and McHenry Boatwright, bass; front, left, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, and Theresa Green, soprano. The concert is scheduled to start at 8:30. Manos

Chamber Music Concert Has Storm Background

Thunder and Lightning Also Heard at Tanglewood As Albeneri Trio Presents Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 14—History i repeating itself tonight. The Berk shires have cooked up one of th magnificent thunder and light ning storms for which they are fa mous and the trios of Brahms Martinu and Beethoven are being played to the accompaniment of growling thunder and brilliant lighting effects.

This is the second in the series of chamber music concerts being given each Wednesday night during the current Berkshire Music Festival. Tonight that admirable group known as the Albeneri trio is making its festival debut, playing the Brahms "trio in B Major, Op. 8; the Martinu "Trio in D Major" and Bethoven's great "Trio in B Flat Major," familiarly known as the "Archduke" trio. The players are Erichitor Kahn, pianist; Kiorgio Ciompi, violinist and Benar Heifetz, cellist.

This is a group which has had a long association and the performances tonight revealed what such association can accomplish when it comes to balance, phrasing an unanimity of thought. They first played the Brahms "Trio in B Major." This is a robust work and while it may not reveal Brahms at his greatest stature, it is a work which makes for agreeable listening. Brahms favors the cello in this work, opening two movements with cello phrases and offering it a brief but lovely solo passage in the adagio movement. There is more gaity than pathos in this work, with Brahms at his most earthy. Only the adagio is in reflective mood.

Final Offering

The finale is almost rhapsodic in its beauty and breadth. The trio was played with extreme beauty of tone and with a perfect understanding of its content. What might have become a pianistic tour de force in less capable hands than Mr. Kahn's became just what it was, a part of the whole.

Martinu's "Trio in D Major" has three relatively brief movements. Just where they go or if they reach their destination we have never been sure, but the Alberneri trio played the work with conviction and refreshing directness.

The final offering was the magical "Trio in B Flat Major" by Bethoven. Here is what may well be characterized as the greatest work of its kind ever written. It is a trio of astounding strength and beauty. There are definite traces of the "Eroica" symphony and of the second Rousamovsky quartet in it. It is practically useless to attempt to listen to this music from a technical standpoint. Its beauty is sheer magic which carries one along with it. It becomes all things to all listeners, an extremely personal listening experience.

1300 in Attendance

The performance was very fine, well balanced and integrated. I at times it seemed more scholarly than inspired, Beethoven did no suffer for there was an honest forthrightness as well as poetry in the reading of this work which it seems doubtful any performances could fully encompass.

We are told that 1300 people attended this concert and it is one they are not likely to forget because it seldom happens that such music as was played tonight has thunder and lightning to enhance it. As we write, the lights are flickering in the press room and the concert is over, only the elements continue their performances.

Friday night the second in the chamber-orchestra concerts will be held. The Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer Nur Den Lieben Gott Lasst Walten" will be sung by the festival chorus, Hugh Ross conducting. Soloists will be Theresa Green, Beatrice Krebs, David Lloyd and McHenry Boatwright.

Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in the first and fourth suites by Bach.

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT AGAIN OF FIRST RANK

Superb Program Given at Tanglewood by Zimbler Sinfonietta

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 21—There were 1450 people in the audience which heard the Zimbler Sinfonietta give the third in a series of chamber music concerts tonight. Those 1450 people were richly rewarded. They heard performances superbly played by the 21 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and they heard playing of the first rank by George Zazofsky who is concertmaster of the ensemble and who was soloist in Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons."

Fresh, Vital Music

"The Four Seasons" is a group of four concertos for violin and string orchestra. In these concerti one gets a strange mixture of naturalistic painting and musical symbolism—warbling of birds, a thunderstorm, peasants dancing and even a skating episode.

The music is fresh, vital and eminently listenable. Its musical content is indeed unusual and its violinistic demands call for solid musicianship and technical virtuosity. These Mr. Zazofsky has in abundance and it was no surprise that the audience called him back a half dozen times and cheered the players.

It's a long-distance between Vivaldi and Stravinsky, yet the latter's ballet "Apollon Musagete" did not seem out of place following the Vivaldi work. Both composers were innovators; both were daring and the achievements of both were more often than not the result of their realism.

Technically Flawless

The Apollo story is charmingly related by Stravinsky. There are moments of lyric beauty and contrasting dissonance. The work is interesting rhythmically and provocative musically. The performance tonight was a brilliant achievement. It was imaginative polished and technically flawless.

The final work on the program was a "Sonata for violins, cellos and double bass" by Rossini. Lack of time prevented our hearing it all, but what we heard, the first movement, was a sheer delight, abounding in Rossinian melodies.

Friday night the third of the chamber orchestra concerts will be given. The program includes Handel's "Concerto Grosso for string orchestra, OP 6, No. 4; Haydn's "Military" symphony and the same composer's "Mass No. 3 in D Minor" known as the "Nelson." This will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Soloists will be Naomi Farr, soprano, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, Marvin Worden, tenor, and Thomas Steward, bass.

Our Berkshires

Bass Blitz

By Theodore Giddings

BASS FISHING which has been just "so so" since the season's opening, July 1 came into its own over the weekend with several excellent catches reported. The bass—for reasons best known to themselves—suddenly errupted and started hitting plugs, spinning lures, and other offerings served up by never-say-die anglers.

* * *

WHAT CAUSED the bass to go on the prowl is anyone's guess but the weather may have been an important factor. When it gets hot the bass fishing is likely to get torrid, too. The sultry evenings and comfortably cool early mornings find the bass on the feed which means that the fisherman who is willing to adjust his schedule to that of the fish has a fair chance of connecting with them.

Topping the list of recent catches was a 7¼ pound largemouth taken at Onota Lake by Joseph H. Daoust, owner of the boat livery at 463 Peck's Rd., and a 6½-pounder snagged by Steve Flossic of 24 McAllister St. Flossic held the local record for big bass until it was broken in September, 1952 by Samuel J. Roberts the trucker. Sam boated an 8¾-pounder while trolling a spoon near the Onota pumping station. Steve's weighed just three ounces less than Sam's and was caught on a weighted streamer fly.

STEVE FLOSSIC exhibits a 6½-pound bass he caught Sunday night at Onota Lake. The McAllister Street angler nailed an eight-pound, nine-ouncer in July, 1952, which was tops until Samuel J. Roberts, the local trucker, checked in with one in September of that year which was just three ounces heavier.

FIRST LIMIT CATCH to be reported was by former baseball star, Fred Mendell, and his nephew, David Sullivan. The 10 smallmouths they took "somewhere south of Pittsfield" ranged from two pounds to nearly five, from 12 inches to more than 17. David's brother Dan also bagged a brace to make the total for the fishing party of three an even dozen. All were caught on spinning outfits within the space of two hours.

Probably the happiest fisherman of the week was Roger L. Voisin, the personable first trumpeter of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Spin-casting with a green Jitterbug from the dock of his Mah-kee-nac Shores cottage at Stockbridge Bowl Saturday night the musician and teacher of musicians—he's on the faculty of the BSO's school — latched into a 5¾ pound largemouth, 20 inches long and landed the lunker without a net.

"I fish every day before and after my classes at Tanglewood," he smilingly explained, "but never have I caught one as big as this. I'm not going to eat him. I'll have him mounted."

* * *

YOUNGEST ANGLER to share in the bass honors of the week was seven-year-old Frank J. Scago Jr. of 131 Daniels Ave. Fishing at Stockbridge Bowl with John and Joseph Scago, his uncles, Frank hooked a 16-inch largemouth that scaled 2 pounds, 4 ounces. The youngster—he will enter second grade at Tucker School in the fall—made his catch on a nightcrawler. The fish was tagged, and Frank's parents reported the catch to the Phillips Wildlife laboratory in Upton.

* * *

[193]

TIGHT BINDING

Christian Science Monitor — July 17, 1954

Nicole Henriot, French pianist, will be guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening, July 24, in Liszt's E-flat Piano Concerto, conducted by Jean Morel.

J. Abresch

William Primrose, soloist in Berlioz's "Harold in Italy," with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival, Sunday afternoon, July 25.

The Mahaiwe's Golden Age

Eagle - July 17, 1954

By A. G. Rud

GREAT BARRINGTON—Nowadays this town has nothing in the line of entertainment to compete with communities to its north, with their Berkshire Playhouse, Malden Bridge Playhouse, Berkshire Festival and Jacob's Pillow, but there are old-timers around who remember when it outdrew them all.

To their mind South Berkshire hit its cultural zenith in the first decade of the century, when the Mahaiwe Theater was in full flower, and no summer stock company or visiting orchestra of today can recapture the splendor of that time.

* * *

ALMOST BY chance 50 years ago Great Barrington got a new theater suitable for the most elaborate shows, and the town became a regular stop on the Shubert circuit. Because in those days the whole company, stars and all, would stick with a show when it went on the road, this meant that the little community of 6,000 played host to the top-flight Shubert productions. It was the only legitimate theater in the area except for the Colonial Theater in Pittsfield. And even the Colonial offered small competition because it was on the Klaw & Erlanger circuit and ran different shows.

Naturally the Mahaiwe was the place to go when one of the Broadway shows was in town, which was often. Older residents recall that a double ticket line frequently extended halfway around the block, and small boys made good money off out-of-town sports by acting as stand-ins. Prices ranged from $2 down to 50 cents—not hay when you consider what money used to be worth. You could buy a Bissell carpet sweeper for $2.50, a woman's shirtwaist for 98 cents, an ample supply of joss sticks for 15 cents. A salary of $20 a week was enough to raise a family on. Yes it was.

* * *

OH, THEY HAD some grand players at the Mahaiwe then—actors and actresses only the elderly now remember seeing, but whose names crop up always in accounts of the golden years of the theater. There were DeWolf Hopper and Marguerite Clark, who opened the house in 1905 with the musical comedy, "Happy Land"; Louis Mann, the Danny Kaye of his day, and his playwright wife, Clara Lipman, in "Julie Bonbon"; Walter Hampden in "Servant in the House"; Eddie Foy in "The Earl and the Girl"; Jefferson DeAngelis and Julia Sanderson in "Fantana"; Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and her Manhattan company of 60, including George Arliss, in "Leah Kleschna"; Mrs. Lealie Carter in David Belasco's version of "Zaza"; Grace George in "Sauce for the Goose"; Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew in "Billy"; Louise Gunning in "Veronique"; and Mildred Holland in one vehicle after another.

When the movies took hold in World War I, stage shows were still presented, although less frequently. A few of them, including several John Golden productions, had premieres in Great Barrington under the system known somewhat unflatteringly as "trying it out on the dog." Others stopped here in "breaking the jump," i.e., making one-night stands while traveling from one big city to another. A company that lost one of its leads when it closed in New York, for instance, might give the replacement his experience by "breaking the jump" in Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, Great Barrington, Springfield and Worcester before opening in Boston.

Among the shows that played at the Mahaiwe on that basis, before the curtain went down on the last stage play in 1928, were Ed Wynn's "Carnival," May Robson in "Little Bit Old Fashioned" and "The Bat" with its original company.

THE STRUCTURE that attracted such big-city talent to such a small town was built 50 years ago largely through the efforts of John H. C. Church, banker and Monument Mills Inc. executive. In 1904 a syndicate of local businessmen who were building the Mahaiwe block on Main and Castle Sts. asked Mr. Church, a director of the National Mahaiwe Bank, to go in with them. He assented, provided he be allowed to build the theater on the west end of the block.

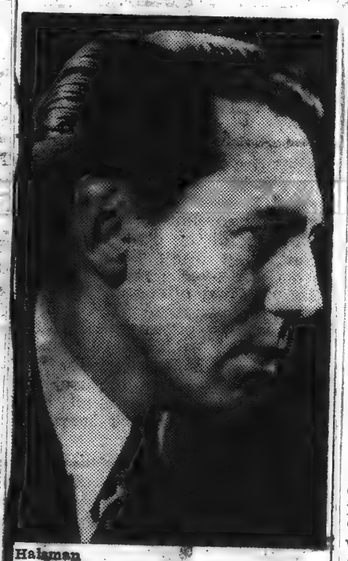
Mr. Church secured the services of his close friend, Architect J. McA. (Joe) Vance of Pittsfield, an amateur actor who the year before had designed the Colonial Theater, and they went ahead full speed. The theater opened Sept. 26, 1905, with the aforementioned DeWolf Hopper show, "Happy Land." It was a triumphant occasion—according to contemporary accounts "the greatest social function in the history of Great Barrington."

Mr. Hopper, the star, and Arthur R. Ryan, assistant theater manager, made speeches between the first and second acts, and Mr. Hopper recited "Casey at the Bat" for good measure. The enthusiasm generated that evening is indicated by the fact that the audience insisted upon one or two encores from each of the 21 musical numbers in the lengthy show.

* * *

NOW THE WIDE stage is devoted to movies, and the elaborate equipment gathers cobwebs. Manager Earl B. Raifstanger, who has been there since 1916, speaks nostalgically of opening-night excitement and the vanished smell of greasepaint, and in so doing betrays the old showman's disdain for entertainment that comes in cans.

But movies and television have taken the play away from such theaters. There's not much left except old playbills and some fine memories: When young fry talk about the Berkshire Playhouse and Malden Bridge, your real old South Berkshirite grunts and recalls the days when the Mahaiwe Theater ran shows the equal of any in the land.



Halsman

Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 24, and Thursday, Aug. 12.

Miss Robinson Smith To Honor Mr. Judd, Thomas D. Perry Jr.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder and president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. will honor George E. Judd and Thomas D. Perry Jr. at a party from 5 to 7:30 Thursday evening at her Stockbridge home.

Mr. Judd is retiring at the end of this year's Festival as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra after 40 years' service. Mr. Perry is assuming Mr. Judd's position.

July 20 DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAM

Boston Orchestra Outstanding In Berlioz Number

Saturday's concert in the big Shed, under the direction of the ever-popular Pierre Monteaux, included a sympathetic playing of Franck's "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra by Vera Franceschi, a brilliant pianist; Debussy's "La Mer," and Cesar Franck's romantic and mystical Symphony in D minor, with its hauntingly beautiful solo theme for English horn popularized some time ago by a radio program.

On Sunday, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony started with Debussy's intoxicating "Iberia—Images—No. 2," one of a three-power pact, including England represented by "Gigues," Spain by "Iberia" and France by "Rondes de Printemps." Although Debussy had spent only a few hours in Spain, his music, as we heard it, and as de Falla felt, is a glowing manifesto to native Spanish composers. It evokes in turn, the lively gaiety of the people in the streets and byways, the languorous spell of Andalusian nights and the joyousness of a festival day.

Mr. Munch, in Aaron's Copland's concerto for piano and orchestra, successfully conjured up the frantic twenties, with the music's syncopated rhythms, saxophone clarinet and muted trumpet solos and the piano expositions which were solidly played by the capable Leo Smit. The audience applauded the composer who took several bows along with the performers.

The concert was brought to a close by an outstanding performance of the immense "Fantastic Symphony" by Hector Berlioz, another glowing tribute to this first and foremost composer of program music. The audience of 7,700 cheered wildly in their appreciation and love of the wonderful music the Berkshire Festival continues to offer to the initiate and mature music-lover.

Daily Hampshire Gazette July 17, 1954

Chamber Series Devoted To Bach At Tanglewood

In spite of the coolness of the evening, 1900 music devotees responded with vigorous enthusiasm to the second concert in the Chamber Orchestra Series of the Berkshire Festival given in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox by the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

A program devoted to Bach, it ended with the joyous suite number four in D major, and the unusual but generous repetition by Mr. Munch and the orchestra of the infectious last movement.

Hugh Ross opened the concert, conducting the Festival Chorus in the inspiring cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den lieben Gott lasst Walten," "if thou wilt suffer God to guide thee," for four solo voices, small orchestra of strings, two oboes and continuo played on harpsichord. Mr. Ross is undoubtedly devoted to his chorus as their performance showed, and is aware of the orchestra, but his gestures to the players lacked directness and command, although the performance gained in integration as it progressed.

There are seven movements in all, six of which are varied elaborations of the chorale which is sung in true Bach simplicity in the seventh. The first employs chorus and orchestra weaving alternate phrases of the chorale. McHenry Boatwright gave a good musical reading of the bass arioso in the second movement. The third, a marked and punctuate aria for tenor, was flawlessly sung by David Lloyd. In the restrained fourth, also known as an organ prelude, a duet for soprano and alto, the heavy contralto of Beatrice Krebs rather overbalanced the delicate soprano of Theresa Green. The fifth, in grave and serious vein, had the tenor and the double basses repeating each other's phrases. The sixth opened with the oboe introducing an aria for soprano, accompanied at times by cello bass and harpsichord, a mellow blending of voice and instruments. The harpsichord at no time was predominant, but a correctly balanced part of the whole. The final movement showed the chorale and chorus at their best, the audience recalling all performers many times.

Having heard the second and third suites last year, we were privileged to hear the first and fourth last evening. Actually the suites are overtures, so-called by Bach, being a sequence of dance movements, with the introductory section modeled on Lully's overture form. They were not played for almost a century, until Mendelssohn recovered and introduced them at the Gewandhaus concerts in 1838. For strings, oboes and bassoon, the first suite, although rather dry, was cleverly handled by Mr. Munch, tempos varying, strings muted and characteristics of each form intensified.

Another oboe, bassoon and three trumpets add to the richness and diversity of the fourth suite, a tremendous favorite, shorter than the first, but each movement a perfection of composition. Mr. Munch led the orchestra through each with a vigor and sureness that delighted everyone. A gay named "Rejouissance," the last movement repeated, as aforementioned, left all in a more vital awareness of the delights in such dedicated music.

Saturday's concert, in the big Shed, with the full symphony, will include Debussy's "Excerpts" from "Le Martyre de Saint Sebastien," Franck's "Les Djinns," for piano and orchestra, with Vera Franceschi, his Symphony in D minor, and Debussy's "La Mer." The performance starts promptly at 8:30.

Martha deB. Beaver.

* * *

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini by The Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a progam of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon.

During the coming week a number of student concerts will be given by departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its twelfth six-week session at Tanglewood.

[194]

TIGHT BINDING

Christian Science Monitor — July 17, 1954

Nicole Henriot, French pianist, will be guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, Mass., on Saturday evening, July 24, in Liszt's E-flat Piano Concerto, conducted by Jean Morel.

J. Abresch

William Primrose, soloist in Berlioz's "Harold in Italy," with the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival, Sunday afternoon, July 25.

The Mahaiwe's Golden Age

Eagle - July 17, 1954

By A. G. Rud

GREAT BARRINGTON—Nowadays this town has nothing in the line of entertainment to compete with communities to its north, with their Berkshire Playhouse, Malden Bridge Playhouse, Berkshire Festival and Jacob's Pillow, but there are old-timers around who remember when it outdrew them all.

To their mind South Berkshire hit its cultural zenith in the first decade of the century, when the Mahaiwe Theater was in full flower, and no summer stock company or visiting orchestra of today can recapture the splendor of that time.

* * *

ALMOST BY chance 50 years ago Great Barrington got a new theater suitable for the most elaborate shows, and the town became a regular stop on the Shubert circuit. Because in those days the whole company, stars and all, would stick with a show when it went on the road, this meant that the little community of 6,000 played host to the top-flight Shubert productions. It was the only legitimate theater in the area except for the Colonial Theater in Pittsfield. And even the Colonial offered small competition because it was on the Klaw & Erlanger circuit and ran different shows.

Naturally the Mahaiwe was the place to go when one of the Broadway shows was in town, which was often. Older residents recall that a double ticket line frequently extended halfway around the block, and small boys made good money off out-of-town sports by acting as stand-ins. Prices ranged from $2 down to 50 cents—not hay when you consider what money used to be worth. You could buy a Bissell carpet sweeper for $2.50, a woman's shirtwaist for 98 cents, an ample supply of joss sticks for 15 cents. A salary of $20 a week was enough to raise a family on. Yes it was.

* * *

OH, THEY HAD some grand players at the Mahaiwe then—actors and actresses only the elderly now remember seeing, but whose names crop up always in accounts of the golden years of the theater. There were DeWolf Hopper and Marguerite Clark, who opened the house in 1905 with the musical comedy, "Happy Land"; Louis Mann, the Danny Kaye of his day, and his playwright wife, Clara Lipman, in "Julie Bonbon"; Walter Hampden in "Servant in the House"; Eddie Foy in "The Earl and the Girl"; Jefferson DeAngelis and Julia Sanderson in "Fantana"; Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and her Manhattan company of 60, including George Arliss, in "Leah Kleschna"; Mrs. Leslie Carter in David Belasco's version of "Zaza"; Grace George in "Sauce for the Goose"; Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew in "Billy"; Louise Gunning in "Veronique"; and Mildred Holland in one vehicle after another.

When the movies took hold in World War I, stage shows were still presented, although less frequently. A few of them, including several John Golden productions, had premieres in Great Barrington under the system known somewhat unflatteringly as "trying it out on the dog." Others stopped here in "breaking the jump," i.e., making one-night stands while traveling from one big city to another. A company that lost one of its leads when it closed in New York, for instance, might give the replacement his experience by "breaking the jump" in Bridgeport, New Haven, Hartford, Great Barrington, Springfield and Worcester before opening in Boston.

Among the shows that played at the Mahaiwe on that basis, before the curtain went down on the last stage play in 1928, were Ed Wynn's "Carnival," May Robson in "Little Bit Old Fashioned" and "The Bat" with its original company.

THE STRUCTURE that attracted such big-city talent to such a small town was built 50 years ago largely through the efforts of John H. C. Church, banker and Monument Mills Inc. executive. In 1904 a syndicate of local businessmen who were building the Mahaiwe block on Main and Castle Sts. asked Mr. Church, a director of the National Mahaiwe Bank, to go in with them. He assented, provided he be allowed to build the theater on the west end of the block.

Mr. Church secured the services of his close friend, Architect J. McA. (Joe) Vance of Pittsfield, an amateur actor who the year before had designed the Colonial Theater, and they went ahead full speed. The theater opened Sept. 26, 1905, with the aforementioned DeWolf Hopper show, "Happy Land." It was a triumphant occasion—according to contemporary accounts "the greatest social function in the history of Great Barrington."

Mr. Hopper, the star, and Arthur R. Ryan, assistant theater manager, made speeches between the first and second acts, and Mr. Hopper recited "Casey at the Bat" for good measure. The enthusiasm generated that evening is indicated by the fact that the audience insisted upon one or two encores from each of the 21 musical numbers in the lengthy show.

* * *

NOW THE WIDE stage is devoted to movies, and the elaborate equipment gathers cobwebs. Manager Earl B. Raifstanger, who has been there since 1916, speaks nostalgically of opening-night excitement and the vanished smell of greasepaint, and in so doing betrays the old showman's disdain for entertainment that comes in cans.

But movies and television have taken the play away from such theaters. There's not much left except old playbills and some fine memories: When young fry talk about the Berkshire Playhouse and Malden Bridge, your real old South Berkshirite grunts and recalls the days when the Mahaiwe Theater ran shows the equal of any in the land.

Halsman

Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 24, and Thursday, Aug. 12.

Miss Robinson Smith To Honor Mr. Judd, Thomas D. Perry Jr.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder and president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. will honor George E. Judd and Thomas D. Perry Jr. at a party from 5 to 7:30 Thursday evening at her Stockbridge home.

Mr. Judd is retiring at the end of this year's Festival as manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra after 40 years' service. Mr. Perry is assuming Mr. Judd's position.

July 20 DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE, NORTHAM

Boston Orchestra Outstanding In Berlioz Number

Saturday's concert in the big Shed, under the direction of the ever-popular Pierre Monteaux, included a sympathetic playing of Franck's "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra by Vera Franceschi, a brilliant pianist; Debussy's "La Mer," and Cesar Franck's romantic and mystical Symphony in D minor, with its hauntingly beautiful solo theme for English horn popularized some time ago by a radio program.

On Sunday, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony started with Debussy's intoxicating "Iberia Images No. 2," one of a three-power pact, including England represented by "Gigues," Spain by "Iberia" and France by "Rondes de Printemps." Although Debussy had spent only a few hours in Spain, his music, as we heard it, and as de Falla felt, is a glowing manifesto to native Spanish composers. It evokes in turn, the lively gaiety of the people in the streets and bywavs, the languorous spell of Andalusian nights and the joyousness of a festival day.

Mr. Munch, in Aaron's Copland's concerto for piano and orchestra, successfully conjured up the frantic twenties, with the music's syncopated rhythms, saxophone clarinet and muted trumpet solos and the piano expositions which were solidly played by the capable Leo Smit. The audience applauded the composer who took several bows along with the performers.

The concert was brought to a close by an outstanding performance of the immense "Fantastic Symphony" by Hector Berlioz, another glowing tribute to this first and foremost composer of program music. The audience of 7,700 cheered wildly in their appreciation and love of the wonderful music the Berkshire Festival continues to offer to the initiate and mature music-lover.

Daily Hampshire Gazette July 17, 1954

Chamber Series Devoted To Bach At Tanglewood

In spite of the coolness of the evening, 1900 music devotees responded with vigorous enthusiasm to the second concert in the Chamber Orchestra Series of the Berkshire Festival given in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox by the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch.

A program devoted to Bach, it ended with the joyous suite number four in D major, and the unusual but generous repetition by Mr. Munch and the orchestra of the infectious last movement.

Hugh Ross opened the concert, conducting the Festival Chorus in the inspiring cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den lieben Gott lasst Walten," "if thou wilt suffer God to guide thee," for four solo voices, small orchestra of strings, two oboes and continuo played on harpsichord. Mr. Ross is undoubtedly devoted to his chorus as their performance showed, and is aware of the orchestra, but his gestures to the players lacked directness and command, although the performance gained in integration as it progressed.

There are seven movements in all, six of which are varied elaborations of the chorale which is sung in true Bach simplicity in the seventh. The first employs chorus and orchestra weaving alternate phrases of the chorale. McHenry Boatwright gave a good musical reading of the bass arioso in the second movement. The third, a marked and punctuate aria for tenor, was flawlessly sung by David Lloyd. In the restrained fourth, also known as an organ prelude, a duet for soprano and alto, the heavy contralto of Beatrice Krebs rather overbalanced the delicate soprano of Theresa Green. The fifth, in grave and serious vein, had the tenor and the double basses repeating each other's phrases. The sixth opened with the oboe introducing an aria for soprano, accompanied at times by cello bass and harpsichord, a mellow blending of voice and instruments. The harpsichord at no time was predominant, but a correctly balanced part of the whole. The final movement showed the chorale and chorus at their best, the audience recalling all performers many times.

Having heard the second and third suites last year, we were privileged to hear the first and fourth last evening. Actually the suites are overtures, so-called by Bach, being a sequence of dance movements, with the introductory section modeled on Lully's overture form. They were not played for almost a century, until Mendelssohn recovered and introduced them at the Gewandhaus concerts in 1838. For strings, oboes and bassoon, the first suite, although rather dry, was cleverly handled by Mr. Munch, tempos varying, strings muted and characteristics of each form intensified.

Another oboe, bassoon and three trumpets add to the richness and diversity of the fourth suite, a tremendous favorite, shorter than the first, but each movement a perfection of composition. Mr. Munch led the orchestra through each with a vigor and sureness that delighted everyone. A[illegible]y named "Rejouissance," the last movement repeated, as aforementioned, left all in a more vital awareness of the delights in such dedicated music.

Saturday's concert, in the big Shed, with the full symphony, will include Debussy's "Excerpts" from "Le Martyre de Saint Sebastien," Franck's "Les Djinns," for piano and orchestra, with Vera Franceschi, his Symphony in D minor, and Debussy's "La Mer." The performance starts promptly at 8:30.

Martha deB. Beaver.

* * *

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini by The Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a progam of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, on Friday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon.

During the coming week a number of student concerts will be given by departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, now in its twelfth six-week session at Tanglewood.

[194]

Tanglewood: How It All Began

By John G. W. Mahanna

This is the first of four articles on the two decades of development that have made the Berkshires into a world capital for summer music. Mr. Mahanna handled some of the first Tanglewood news in The Eagle and as county editor supervises music festival news and feature coverage today.

* * *

THE WORKS of Hector Berlioz, the French composer, whose 150th anniversary is being celebrated at Tanglewood this season, were first introduced at an outdoor concert to Berkshire audiences 20 years ago when the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was established in the horse show ring on the Dan Hanna farm in Interlaken.

Berlioz' "Carnavale Romain" opened the program of the 1934 concert by 65 musicians from the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of Dr. Henry Hadley. His dream to give symphony concerts "under the stars" became a reality after Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, introduced the plan to practically every community in the Berkshires.

* * *

DR. HADLEY had made known his wish to conduct a concert out-of-doors to Miss Robinson Smith early in June, 1934. She became enthusiastic over the idea, but reserved decision about advancing it until she conferred with two friends, Mrs. Owen Johnson of Stockbridge and Mrs. William Felton Barrett of South Egremont.

As a result of this conference, plans were started immediately to enlist the support of music lovers from towns and cities within a 40-mile radius of Stockbridge.

"I am sure you will agree with me that there are few things artistically more enchanting than listening to a beautiful symphony orchestra on a summer evening, out-of-doors under the stars," said the first letter Miss Robinson Smith mailed to representative people in the Berkshire area.

"Such an opportunity is being offered the Berkshires by Dr. Henry Hadley, our own American composer and conductor, provided we can interest the necessary [illegible]," the letter added. [illegible] the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was started June 16, 1934.

* * *

LETTERS went out to each locality in the county; as well as to communities in the neighboring states of Vermont, Connecticut and New York. Invitations were issued to [illegible] to attend a meeting at the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge on June 16 to start the proposal rolling through the county. A temporary organization was formed with Miss Robinson Smith as chairman. Faced with the task of putting the idea across, an executive committee, composed of the officers and all subchairmen, was formed. Scores of letters poured through the mails over the signatures of "local chairmen," seeking support for the Festival.

* * *

WEEKLY REPORT meetings were held to iron out details as they arose. Mrs. Robinson Smith presided at the meetings and Miss Mary Aldis, secretary of the Berkshire Playhouse, acted as secretary. Mrs. Ruth Draper, Miss Blanche Walton and Ted Shawn, director of Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, offered their services.

* * *

SUBSCRIPTION teams covering the area were given until July 30 to show whether the people in Berkshire County wanted to support the venture. They explained every effort was being made "to keep the concerts within the reach of everyone"; that if the necessary enthusiasm was not obtained, the subscribers would be refunded their money.

An account was opened in the Housatonic National Bank.

Aug. 23, 25 and 26 were the dates set for the first Festival concerts. Estimated expenses for the three-day series amounted to $11,420. Subscription prices covering the series ran from $2.75 to $5.50, and a limited number of tickets were offered for reserved seats at $7.50 for the three performances.

* * *

MEANWHILE, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge accepted the honorary chairmanship of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. The Berkshire Evening Eagle in its news columns and editorials enthusiastically promoted the proposal. Other newspapers and radio stations began to push the plan as officials continued to move through the Berkshires addressing groups of civic organizations, garden clubs, Granges, service clubs, taxpayers' associations, and Chambers of Commerce.

* * *

FINALLY the big day arrived —July 30, a day of decision. When the chairman called for reports of the subscription - canvass, gloom fell over the faces of those who attended this all-important session. The drive was $4,400 short of the goal. After considerable discussion, the campaign was extended another week. Seven days later, following an intensive tour of the area, the workers met again and only $500 worth of tickets had been sold.

Faced with the possibility of giving up the whole idea, the committee members were disheartened but the jolt was only temporary. An announcement was made that eight "angels" had volunteered to underwrite the budget to the extent of $500 each to guarantee the success of the Festival.

* * *

THE GUARANTORS were Mrs. C. C. Griswold, Clarke W. Tobin and John R. Hopkins of Stockbridge; Mrs. John Bross Lloyd and Norville H. Busey Jr., of Lee; Mrs. Halstead Lindsley and Mrs. Arthur Frederic Schermerhorn of Lenox and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton.

The generosity of the eight people who volunteered to underwrite the Festival opened the door for great symphony concerts in the Berkshires. Through their public spirit the clouds were broken and success for the venture was assured.

* * *

incorporators and trustees followed later in the day when the bylaws were adopted, officers elected and the papers of incorporation were filed with an application for tax exemption, which soon was approved.

* * *

OFFICERS ELECTED were: Honorary president, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge; president, Miss Robinson Smith; vice presidents, Mrs. deHeredia and Mr. Busey; clerk, Mr. Edman, and treasurer, Walter L. Clark.

Members of the board of trustees were: The officers and William L. Bull, Mrs. Bruce Crane, Mrs. W. Murray Crane, Laurence Connor, Mrs. Henry Francis, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold Owen Johnson, Halstead Lindsley, Mrs. John B. Lloyd, John C. Lynch, Edward S. Rogers, Mrs. Arthur F. Schermerhorn, Albert Spalding, Clarke W. Tobin and Robert K. Wheeler.

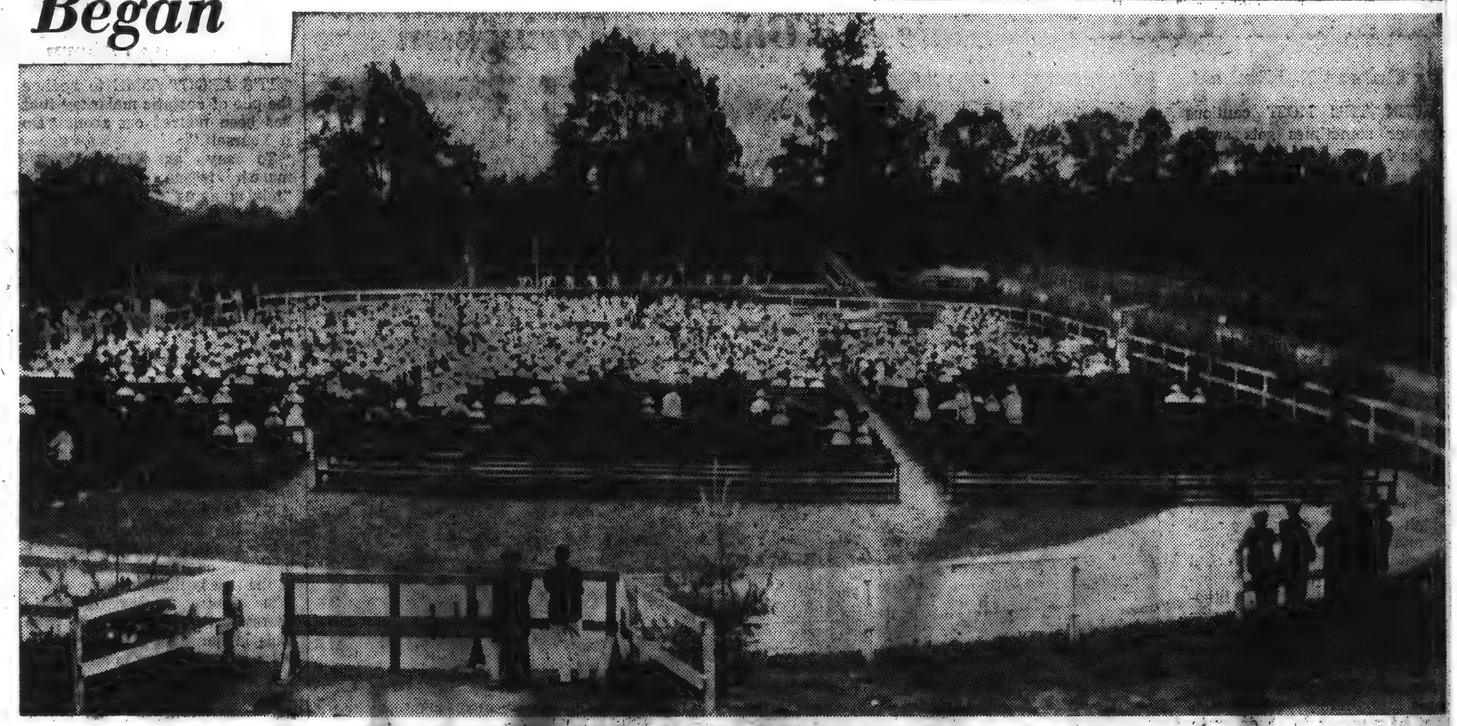
On the advisory committee were the subchairmen of the towns and cities of 25 communities throughout Berkshire County and neighboring states.

* * *

CONCERT DAYS were fast approaching. While Miss Robinson Smith's forces continued the ticket campaign, Owen Johnson used his political influence to obtain assistance from the ERA to provide labor to build a stage for the orchestra and benches for the audience in the horse-show ring at the Hanna Farm. Dr. Hadley scheduled rehearsals for his orchestra at Carnegie Hall in New York before the musicians came in busses to the Berkshires.

Social life in Lenox and Stockbridge, as well as in neighboring communities increased its tempo with a number of pre-concert dinner parties.

Festival officials looked for a crowd of from 2,500 to 3,000 on opening night. Stockbridge police and firemen were on hand to work with state police in handling traffic and policing the grounds. Everyone seemed to chip in to help. Program girls were at the gates; young men ushered and



David Milton Jones

20 YEARS AGO, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was established in this horse-show ring at the Dan Hanna farm where 6,000 music lovers turned out for the first three symphony concerts ever held out-of-doors in the Berkshires.

Berkshire Symphonic Festival on Aug. 26, 1934, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, founder and president of the Festival, congratulates Dr. Henry Hadley, the conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, whose 65 musicians gave the first symphony program at the Hanna farm.

cess.

Governor Ely who was very enthusiastic, said, upon leaving:

"The Festival is destined to become a notable Berkshire institution of far-reaching importance in attracting people to this wonderful section of the country . . . I congratulate the committee in charge."

* * *

CROWDS CONTINUED to take in the remaining concerts on Saturday and Sunday. When the statement was prepared, receipts fell short of disbursements by only $413.30. Consequently, those who agreed to underwrite the budget to the extent of $500, found each share was only $91.67. Determined as ever to keep the Festival plan alive, the eight people who volunteered to underwrite the 1934 event, announced they would do the same again in 1935.

TROY, N. Y.
TIMES RECORD

JUL 8 - 1954

Pianos Shipped 750 Miles For Concerts At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass. (UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 69 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with the pianos and a piano-moving expert, supervised the journey in two and a half days. Loading the pianos took 16 hours at the (Baldwin) factory in which the long trek only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic stops for lunches and unpredictable weather. and 300 heavy double pads, collec- the pianos are wrapped and stacked tively taped [illegible] an inch. They had to be tightly tied down during a series of complicated maneuvers against inevitable jarring

TIGHT BINDING

Newport Builds for Overflow At 'Tanglewood for Jazz'

NEWPORT, R.I. (UP) — Kings of the Cats from sea to sea gathered in this lush playground of the rich today for the first all-star Newport Jazz Festival.

Most of the greatest names in American jazz unpacked their instruments for the two-day program —billed as the biggest jazz festival ever attempted.

Champagne for 'Cats'

Meantime, socialites helped open the toast to American jazz by throwing a series of parties in the palatial homes of this famed resort.

About 6,000 persons from the juke box crowd to the champagne set were expected to crowd the manicured lawns of the famous Newport Casino to hear a panoramic presentation of jazz from Dixieland through be-bop and progressive music.

The festival originally was scheduled to be held in the Casino's Center Court—shrine of American lawn tennis. But an overflow demand for tickets from 30 states forced erection of a band shell on the Casino grounds.

Master of ceremonies Stan Kenton, high priest of progressive music, hailed the festival as "the beginning of a wonderful era for jazz."

"What we are trying to do is attract attention to this music so that it gains recognition for what it really is," he said. "We want to do here for jazz what is being done for classical music all over the world."

"Jazz doesn't belong in the beer joints."

Forum, Roll Call

Among the 60 top jazz musicians who will attempt to launch the Newport Festival as a "Tanglewood for Jazz" are Dizzie Gillespie, Eddie Condon, George Shearing, Billy Holiday, Oscar Peterson, Lee Wiley and Gene Krupa.

Jazz experts and educators will help push "recognition" by conducting a panel discussion tomorrow in the Casino's Center court on the place of Jazz in American culture.

But the biggest attraction was the roll call of American jazz "greats."

"Every phase of jazz is well represented," Kenton said.

Or as one be-bopper put it: "Man, all the cats are here."

Eagle - July 17, 1954

Music

Horns Star in Bach Program

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

CHARLES MUNCH made one of his rare concessions to audience response last night at Tanglewood when he had the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony musicians repeat the final movement, "Rejouissance," of the Bach D major suite. It was also the finale of the program, which had been devoted entirely to Bach, the Cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den lieben Gott lasst walton" and two of the suites, the first, in C major, and, to close, the fourth. Munch had the three trumpeters stand after the encore, as they had certainly added brilliance to the performance. Munch made the tempo full of rejoicing, indeed, and, once the trumpets had tamed the shrillness of their piercing blasts, it was a boisterously happy movement. The trumpet players were Roger Voisin, principal, and Armando Ghitalla and Marcel Lafosse.

* * *

THE WIND instruments had an especially rewarding evening. In the cantata, which Hugh Ross conducted, the opening phrase was beautifully played by oboist Louis Speyer and later in the evening Munch had occasion to signal to the other oboist, Ralph Gomberg, and point him out for distinction.

The strings have the assistance in the first suite only of oboes and bassoons; the fourth adds three oboes, bassoon, tympani and the trumpets. In the cantata, the string choir had only oboes and harpsichord. The soloists were Theresa Green, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and McHenry Boatright, baritone. All were satisfying in their parts although their opportunities varied a great deal. As a matter of fact, we found this cantata less than moving or stirring and the performance quite routine.

* * *

A SURPRISING number of listeners on the lawn adjoining the theater-concert hall braved the chill air to add to the size of an audience that was large (1900) considering the temperature. Mr. Munch was vigorous and definite in the agitated sections of his part of the program, but otherwise was vague. The first bars of several movements were less than translucent. Mr. Ross made the same physical exhortations to his forces in the cantata whether he required them to sing and play dolce or agitato.

Tanglewood Tales

Chamber Music Concert Tomorrow

The second concert of chamber music by members of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center students will be held tomorrow morning at 10 in the chamber music hall. It is open to Friends of the Center.

The program follows:

Trio for Piano, Violin, and Violoncello in C minor, Opus 66 ..... Mendelsohn
Allegro energico e con fuoco
Andante espressivo
Scherzo: Molto allegro quasi presto
Finale: Allegro appassionato
Bira Fenster, violin; Bert Phillips, violoncello; Dolly Haim, piano

Quintet (en forme de choros) . Villa-Lobos
Pollee Slimm, flute; Catherine Dufford, oboe; Rodney Pierce, English horn; Walter Rubin, clarinet; Robert Martenson, bassoon

String Quartet in E-flat major, Opus 74 Beethoven
Poco Adagio: Allegro
Adagio ma non troppo
Presto
Allegretto con Variazioni
William deFasquale, violin; Constance Field, violin; Emdel Kalam, viola; Camilla Heller, violoncello

Informal Concert in Chamber Music Hall

An informal chamber music concert will be given Monday afternoon at 4:30 in the chamber music hall. The program follows:

Suite for Brass Quartet ..... Bergsma
Scherzo
Song
Showpiece
Donald Benedetti, trumpet; John Minkoff, trumpet; Wilbur Kaslick, trombone; Raymond Orcutt, trombone

Sonata in D for Violin and Piano, Opus 11, Number 2 ..... Hindemith
Lebhaft
Ruhib und gemessen
Frisch und stets bewegt
Richard Elias, violin; Gilbert Kalish, piano

Trio for Piano, Violin, and Violoncello in C minor, Opus 1, No. 3 ..... Beethoven
Andante cantabile con Variazioni
Allegro con brio
Miriam Wexler, violin; Louisa Hasen, violoncello; Patricia McGraw, piano

Quintet in E-flat major for Piano, Oboe, Clarinet, Horn, and Bassoon, K. 452 Mozart Adagio: Allegro molto
Larghetto
Rondo: Allegretto
Grace Sarvis, oboe; Mercer Sweeney, clarinet; Isabelle Clore, bassoon; David Allen, horn; Patricia McGraw, piano

Composers' Forum Tomorrow Evening

The program for the composers' forum to be held tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the chamber music hall follows:

Sonatina for violin and piano ..... Irwin Zucker (New York City)
Allegro Vigoroso
Molto Lento e Misterioso
Allegro Scherzando
Stanley Dombrowski, violin; Allyn Ferguson, piano

Poems for Music ..... Jack Gottlieb (New Rochells, N.Y.)
Song Cycle for Woman's Voice
Poems by Bennett Gurian
Birth, Pre-Adolescence, Interlude I, Young Adulthood, Degradation, Interlude II, Death, After-Death.
Jean Kraft—Mezzo-Soprano
Michael Hamilton, flute; John Grande, clarinet; John Minkoff, trumpet; Dorothy Mark, violoncello

Sonatina for viola and piano .... William Keith Rogers (Prince Edward Island, Canada)
Andante con moto
Larghetto
Allegro commodo
Carlos Quian, viola; William Rogers, piano

Sonata for piano (one movement ..... John Kennedy (Huntington, N.Y.)
John Kennedy, piano

Music for solo dance ..... Richard Wernick (Newton)
Dena Samberg, flute; Grace Sarvis, oboe; Antonio Miranda, violin; Dorothy Mark, violoncello; Dolly Haim, piano; Roland Kohloff, percussion
Louis Burko, conductor

Tanglewood Premiere

On Charles Munch's chamber orchestra concert with Boston Symphony Orchestra players, of Friday, July 30, Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds" (K. 388) will have its Tanglewood premiere. The ensemble will be composed of Ralph Gomberg and Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi and Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano and Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt and Ernst Panenka, bassoons.

Samuel Mayes, Cellist, Back at Desk Soon

Samuel Mayes, first cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has been missing from his desk in the BSO this season because of two serious operations, but he is at Tanglewood with his wife and two sons. Mr. Mayes is convalescing at his cottage on Mahkeenac Shores and is expected to resume performances with the BSO soon.

Notables at Festival

Notables at the Berkshire Festival concerts this week included Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees Henry B. Cabot, Judge Jacob J. Kaplan and Edward A. Taft, of Boston; cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, of California; Frederick Blair, of New York, president of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society; violinist Zino Francescatti, who lives in Monterey. Glin Downes, music critic of the N.Y. Times, and Mrs. Downes were guests of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at Lenox, where Mrs. Koussevitzky's mother, Mrs. Alexander Naoumoff is also visiting. Violinist Alexander Schneider also was a guest at the concerts with his bride, Geraldine Page, star of "The Immoralist" on Broadway last season.

Ross Names Soloists For Friday's Concert

Hugh Ross has chosen the following students from the Berkshire Music Center to be soloists in the Berkshire Festival performance of Haydn's "Nelson" Mass, in the chamber orchestra concert of Boston Symphony players to be given at Tanglewood's theater-concert hall on Friday, July 23: Naomi Farr, soprano, who is a professional concert singer, from Salt Lake City; Beatrice Krebs, contralto, New York City, soloist of both the Riverside Church and Central Synagogue there; Marvin Worden, tenor, of New York; and Thomas Stewart, bass, of San Saba, Texas.

Suzanna Bloch, of Wardsboro, Vt., daughter of composer Ernest Bloch, will be a guest of the Berkshire Festival when her father's Fourth String Quartet has its world premiere by the Griller String Quartet on the chamber music series at Tanglewood Wednesday, July 28.

Two Young Pianists At Tanglewood

Waterbury

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 19 —Two programs of 19th century French composers with the Tanglewood debuts of two young pianists were presented before 16,200 music lovers under the batons of Pierre Monteaux and Charles Munch at the Berkshire Music Festival here over the week end.

Mr. Munch's conducting in the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony" yesterday afternoon gave the audience of 7,700 a real treat. It was especially delightful in the waltz for the ball and in the adagio scene in the meadows. The afternoon program had started with Debussy's "Iberia"; "Image" for orchestra which was colorful with its harps, castenets, and tambourine.

The Copeland "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra", the only non-French composition of the week-end, presented Leo Smit, pianist, in his Tanglewood debut to the Sunday afternoon audience. Mr. Smit gave a good performance but the selection was not too happy a one. Perhaps the large number of empty seats in the shed, though the grounds were crowded, was an indication that music lovers felt the same way.

Mr. Munch's conducting in the second half of the concert, however, was a rich reward for any shortcoming in the first half of the program.

Trained In Italy

Saturday night's audience of 8,500 was treated to a beautiful performance of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns", a symphonic poem for piano and orchestra, played by Vera Franceschi, 23-year - old pianist, making her Tanglewood debut. Trained in Italy, Miss Franceschi played at La Scala in Milan when only 14 years old. She studied in Rome on a Fulbright Fellowship, and has played with the Maggio Festival Orchestra in Florence, Italy, as well as in Dublin, Paris, and with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Speaking with Madame Koussevitsky back-stage after the performance, Miss Franceschi recalled that the late Mr. Koussevitsky first heard her play in Phoenix, he told her: "You will play with me at Tanglewood." The audience was warm in its appreciation of her fine playing which took good note of the delicacy of the composition.

Pierre Monteux, conducting with apparent ease, led the Boston in Debussy's "La Mer", which was such a notable change from the "Excerpts from Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien", which showed a lesser Debussy in the opening number. The Bostonian gave a well-liked performance in the Franck "Symphony in D minor" which concluded the Saturday program. There was haunting beauty and delicacy in the performance and finished playing in the second movement.

The third week of concerts beginning Wednesday will present Jean Morel, conductor, with Nicole Henriot, pianist, on Saturday evening and William Primrose, violist, on Sunday.

SM

[196]

CROWDS CONTINUED to take in the remaining concerts on Saturday afternoon and Sunday evening. Attending over the week-end was Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt, who was escorted to her box by Ambassador Davis. Miss Sophie Braslau, contralto soloist, appeared with the orchestra at the afternoon concert and drew laudatory notices from the music critics attending the performance.

The success of the venture gave added strength to the promoters. Two days after the first series, the committee was back at work planning the 1935 season.

The Festival officials were "delighted to be the initiator of the Berkshire's newest music festival," Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, founder and president of the Festival, congratulates Dr. Henry Hadley, the conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, whose 65 musicians gave the first symphony program at the Hanna farm.

Festival officials looked for a crowd of from 2,500 to 3,000 on opening night. Stockbridge police and firemen were on hand to work with state police in handling traffic and policing the grounds. Everyone seemed to chip in to help. Program girls were at the gates; young men ushered and newspapermen helped the box-office staff.

First-night celebrities included Governor and Mrs. Joseph B. Ely and Ambassador-at-Large Norman Davis and Mrs. Davis.

* * *

THE SPONSORS made good their promise of "music under the moon" for the initial concert. Three thousand music lovers sat on paper-covered benches to listen to the first outdoor symphony concert in the Berkshires. Twelve hundred automobiles were in the parking lot.

"The Festival is destined to become a notable Berkshire institution of far-reaching importance in attracting people to this wonderful section of the country . . . I congratulate the committee in charge."

* * *

Governor Ely who was very enthusiastic, said upon leaving:

for his orchestra at Carnegie Hall in New York before the musicians came in busses to the Berkshires.

Social life in Lenox and Stockbridge, as well as in neighboring communities increased its tempo with a number of pre-concert dinner parties.

* * *

THE MUSICIANS arrived the day of the concert. Heaton I. Treadway accommodated 15 men at the Red Lion Inn at Stockbridge and Robert K. Wheeler made arrangements for five others to stay at the Berkshire Inn, Great Barrington. Others were taken care of in Lee, Lenox, Pittsfield and other near-by communities.

LETTERS went out to each locality in the county, as well as to communities in the neighboring states of Vermont, Connecticut and New York, inviting their public spirit, the clouds

STEPS WERE taken to incorporate. The late Milton B. Warner of Pittsfield, offering his legal services as his contribution to the movement, set up a membership non-profit corporation, with its purpose:

"To organize, conduct and support an annual music festival; to provide opportunities for developing musical and artistic talents; to engage in any other activities that will legitimately aid and foster art."

On Aug. 6, 1934, these incorporators were named: Owen Johnson, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, John C. Lynch, Mrs. Carlos M. deHeredia, George W. Edman, Edward S. Rogers and Robert K. Wheeler. Bylaws were drafted and the board of trustees named. Meetings of the WEEKLY REPORT meetings were held to iron out details as groups of men and women went up and down the county, meeting the challenge to interest enough people in advance to assure the success of the concert series.

Encouraging letters began to arrive from personalities in the music world. Other cultural enterprises in the Berkshires began to lend their support. F. Cowles Strickland, then director of the Berkshire Playhouse, and Ted he pianos are wrapped and on trucks without marring ish. They had to be tightl against inevitable jarring the long trek.

Eagle, July 17, 1954

His Thoughts May Be on Tanglewood Music But BSO Clarinetist Misses Bylot Island

Rosario Mazzeo Formed Expedition, Had To Leave

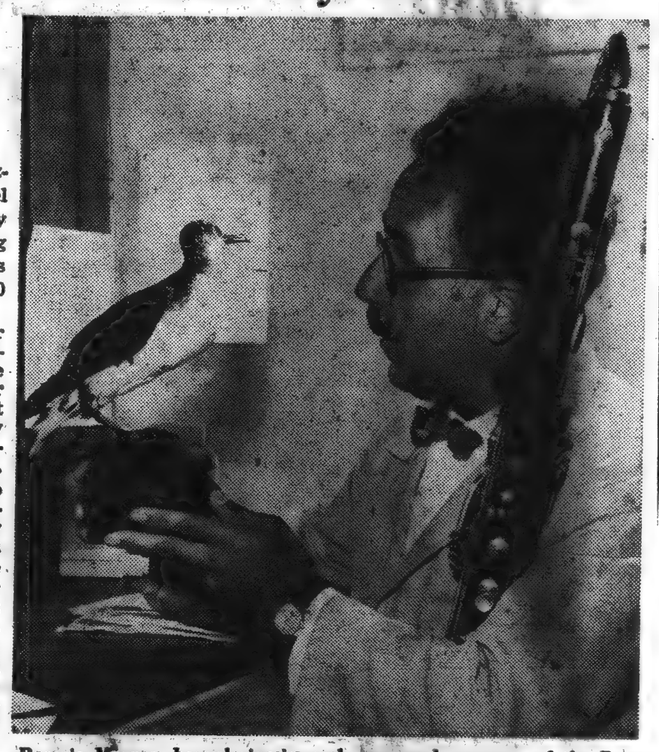
By RICHARD T. TIBBETTS

TANGLEWOOD — Rosario Mazzeo, first clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, may be busy teaching and playing at Tanglewood this summer but his thoughts are 4500 miles away.

Mr. Mazzeo was the organizer and prime mover behind an expedition to Bylot Island, across Eclipse Sound from Baffin Island, not far from Greenland. A party of eight arrived there June 10 and will stay through Aug. 1 doing work in ornithology, botany and mammalogy.

All arrangements for the trip were made by Mr. Mazzeo, who intended to accompany the party until the Tanglewood opening was moved up this year. He flew to the island in early May, to arrange for food, guides, medical equipment and all the items necessary for a two-month stay on the island.

"All the equipment and food needed for the trip had to be on the island with them because the ice breaks around the middle of July and there is no way to get on or off the island," said Mr. Mazzeo. "I had hoped to rejoin them but it is impossible at this time of year."



Rosario Mazzeo, bass-clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and an enthusiastic amateur ornithologist, is shown with his principal interests in life. He is holding a stuffed Manx shearwater, which he obtained on the island of Skokholm in Wales. A member of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, Mr. Mazzeo has taken many bird-watching trips.

Hired Eskimos, Dog Sleds

Mr. Mazzeo had to plan the base camp and trips, hire Eskimos and dog sleds, store 2,000 pounds of food and clear the trip with Canadian authorities.

The 9,000-mile trip started with a flight to Ottawa, where Mr. Mazzeo obtained permits from the Canadian government for the party to operate in the area. He then flew to Churchill, Southampton Island and Pond Inlet at the north tip of Baffin Island.

Lived in Igloos

There he made the acquaintance of some Eskimos and went to the mainland by dogsled. He lived in igloos with the Eskimos and ate raw food, principally narwhal, and some more well-done seal.

"I loved raw narwhal," he said. His trip done, he returned through Canada, particularly enjoying the 1,000-mile train ride from Churchill.

Mr. Mazzeo was a natural choice for manager of the expedition because of his managerial abilities and his great interest in ornithology, photography and mountain climbing.

Accomplished Bird Watcher

Mazzeo's interest in ornithology dates from his youth in the Boy Scouts. A member of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, Mr. Mazzeo has become an accomplished bird watcher.

His most famous work in this field was accomplished when he carried home to Boston with him a pair of Manx shearwaters from the island of Skokholm in Wales. One died on the plane en route, but the other was released from Logan Airport and arrived back on the island of Skokholm in 12½ days, a world's record for a homing flight.

Other birdwatching trips have taken Mr. Mazzeo to the New Mexico - Colorado region, where he lived for a month at an altitude of 13,000 feet; at sea off Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Labrador and California.

Plans Photography Trip

These birdwatching exploits are well known, but little known is Mr. Mazzeo's skill with a camera. He is a close friend of Edward Weston, one of the best American photographers with whom he visited in California last summer. He is planning another trip to California this summer after the Tanglewood season and is looking forward to a mountain-climbing and photography trip to the Sierras with Brett Weston, son of Edward Weston.

Mazzeo uses 4 by 5 and 8 by 10 cameras exclusively, scorning the miniature variety. It makes heavy carrying up mountainsides, but Mazzeo claims it isn't tough for he makes many stops to watch birds and take pictures.

"It takes me a long time to get up and down a mountain," he said. "There are so many things going on."

Mr. Mazzeo has never displayed his photographs in the East and won't until he retires. "I just want people here to remember me as a musician."

Besides work already mentioned, Mr. Mazzeo is cochairman of the woodwind department at the New England Conservatory of Music, an inventor of a new, improved clarinet, a member of seven bird organizations and a collector of rare bird books.

'Perfectly Relaxed'

His schedule is so intensely busy that it would seem natural for his health to suffer, but Mr. Mazzeo scoffs at that suggestion. "My interests are so different that they balance each other and keep me perfectly relaxed," he said. "There is plenty of time if you don't waste it."

Despite this busy schedule, Mr. Mazzeo was pleased to be selected for manager of the expedition. Bylot Island offers everything for him, he claims. There are 50 or 60 peaks there, only one of which has been climbed, according to Mr. Mazzeo.

Also, the island was a "very happy place" from the point of view of birds, explained Mazzeo. "A bird is not conceded to exist until a specimen has been placed in a museum," he said. "Bylot Island has as many as 30 or 40 different species breeding there and only five or six species are listed in the museums of the world."

It was a natural tying together of all Mr. Mazzeo's interests. He expects the members of the party to make some significant contributions in their fields.

Members of Expedition

Members of the party are: Dr. William H. Drury Jr., assistant professor of biology at Harvard University; Mrs. Drury, amateur ornithologist; Dr. Josselyn Van Tyne, professor of ornithology at the University of Michigan; Dr. Richard S. Miller, mammalogist and instructor at Harvard University; Dr. Benjamin Ferris, M.D., assistant professor of physiology at Harvard University; Edward Ames, undergraduate at Harvard and botanist; and Axel and Katherine Rosin, mountain climbers.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 8 - 1954

Guests at Curtis

Claudio Arrau, last night's soloist at Tanglewood, is among the guests staying at the Curtis Hotel here.

A guest next week will be pianist Vera Franceschi. During August, Arthur Fiedler, conduetor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pop Concerts, will be a guest at the Curtis.

Shed Concerts

Eagle, July 17, 1954

Piano Soloists Being Featured At Festival Tonight, Tomorrow

VERA FRANCESCHI
Tonight's Pianist

LEO SMIT
Tomorrow's Soloist

TANGLEWOOD — Two soloists will be heard at the Berkshire Music Festival concerts in the Music Shed tonight and tomorrow afternoon, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the second weekend performances of the 1954 season.

Monteux Conducting

Guest conductor Pierre Monteux will lead the full 104-piece orchestra this evening at 8:30 with Vera Franceschi as piano soloist.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the orchestra when pianist Leo Smit will be the soloist.

Mr. Monteux' program will include two Debussy works; excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer," and two by Franck, "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra, and Symphony in D Minor.

Mr. Munch has chosen the Debussy "Iberia," Aaron Copland's piano concerto and Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" for the matinee tomorrow.

Tanglewood Debuts

This weekend's soloists are both making their first Tanglewood appearances. Born in San Francisco 23 years ago, Miss Franceschi holds the distinction of having received a diploma from the Rome Academy of St. Cecilia at the age of 13—the youngest graduate in its history. She was only 14 when she first played at La Scala in Milan. On returning to this country, Miss Franceschi received her degree from the Manhattan School of Music in New York and then returned to Rome on a Fulbright Scholarship to become the first pianist to earn the doctor of music degree from the St. Cecilia Academy.

Since 1946 Miss Franceschi has made several concert tours of Europe, including appearances with the Maggio Festival Orchestra of Florence, Italy; the Santa Cecilia Orchestra of Rome; the orchestra of La Scala in Milan; the Orchestre National de Paris and the Radio Eireann Symphony of Dublin. A protege of conductor Monteux, Miss Franceschi has performed with the New York Philharmonic and the orchestras of Chicago and San Francisco. In addition to her orchestral appearances, she has given recitals, and has made radio and television appearances; during World War II she was awarded citations from the United States government for her many concerts for American servicemen.

With BSO Before

Although it will be his debut at Tanglewood, Leo Smit has performed the Copland piano concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at Symphony Hall in Boston and at Carnegie Hall in New York. With the composer, who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Rome Radio Orchestra, Mr. Smit has made a recording of the work. He received his musical training in his native Philadelphia at the Curtis Institute of Music where he was a student of Mme. Isabelle Vengereva.

Later he studied with Nicholas Nabobkov and in 1950 he was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship as well as a Guggenheim Fellowship. With these awards Mr. Smit went to the American Academy in Rome for what was originally a two-year period and later extended to three years.

A Composer Too

During this time he composed his "Overture: The Parcae" which was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season. He is now composing a work for chamber orchestra which was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. In addition to his many compositions for piano, chamber groups, voice and orchestra, Mr. Smit is noted for the number of contemporary piano concerti which he has premiered.

n tips are Then the July 21—Times-Union ALBANY, N.

ON THE ROSTRUM—Fred Stolz, right, president of the Kiwanis Club, welcomes yesterday's guest speaker, George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The scene is the Ten Eyck Hotl.
Times-Union Staff Photo by Moore

Symphony Receipts Top Baseball, Kiwanis Told

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

It was very appropos that the speaker for the weekly luncheon yesterday of the Kiwanis Club whose motto is "We Build" should be George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For under his regime it has become one of the great, if not the greatest orchestra in the world. Yeserday's meeing at the Hotel Ten Eyck was probably Mr. Judd's swan song as he retires from active managership this fall after 40 years of service.

Mr. Judd's talk was concerned with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in general and the annual Tanglewood Music Festival in particular. He was born in Stamford, N. Y. and at the end of his career will retire to his farm in Cannonsville, Delaware County, to devote his activities to flouriculture.

The speaker said that the annual budget of the orchestra is $500,000, $200,000 of which was obtained from box office receipts, recordings and broadcasts. No orchestra in the world is self-supporting except those in Europe who receive governmental subsidy. The board of directors of the orchestra make up the defecit, with generous contributions from music lovers of the Boston Area.

[197]

Eagle, July 17, 1954

His Thoughts May Be on Tanglewood Music But BSO Clarinetist Misses Bylot Island

Rosario Mazzeo Formed Expedition, Had To Leave

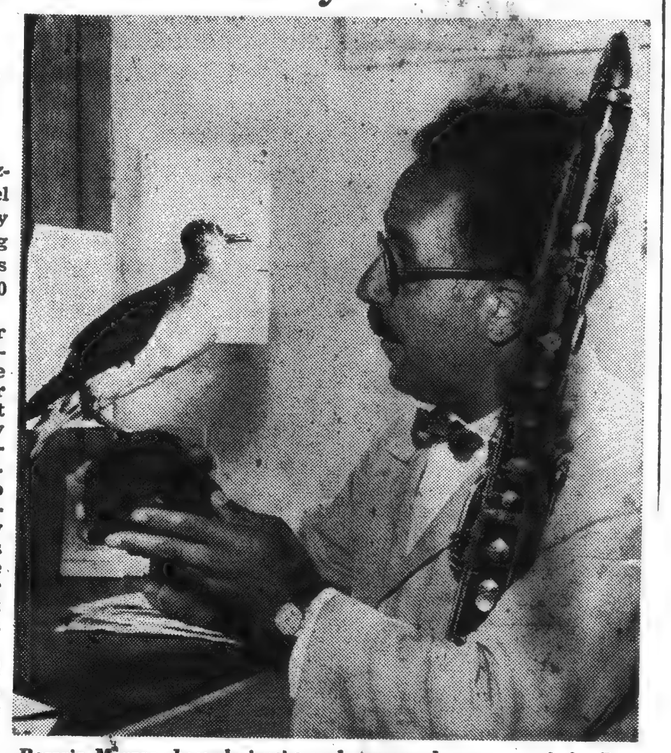
By RICHARD T. TIBBETTS

TANGLEWOOD — Rosario Mazzeo, first clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, may be busy teaching and playing at Tanglewood this summer but his thoughts are 4500 miles away.

Mr. Mazzeo was the organizer and prime mover behind an expedition to Bylot Island, across Eclipse Sound from Baffin Island, not far from Greenland. A party of eight arrived there June 10 and will stay through Aug. 1 doing work in ornithology, botany and mammalogy.

All arrangements for the trip were made by Mr. Mazzeo, who intended to accompany the party until the Tanglewood opening was moved up this year. He flew to the island in early May, to arrange for food, guides, medical equipment and all the items necessary for a two-month stay on the island.

"All the equipment and food needed for the trip had to be on the island with them because the ice breaks around the middle of July and there is no way to get on or off the island," said Mr. Mazzeo. "I had hoped to rejoin them but it is impossible at this time of year."



Rosario Mazzeo, bass-clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and an enthusiastic amateur ornithologist, is shown with his principal interests in life. He is holding a stuffed Manx shearwater, which he obtained on the island of Skokholm in Wales. A member of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, Mr. Mazzeo has taken many bird-watching trips.

Hired Eskimos, Dog Sleds

Mr. Mazzeo had to plan the base camp and trips, hire Eskimos and dog sleds, store 2,000 pounds of food and clear the trip with Canadian authorities.

The 9,000-mile trip started with a flight to Ottawa, where Mr. Mazzeo obtained permits from the Canadian government for the party to operate in the area. He then flew to Churchill, Southampton Island and Pond Inlet at the north tip of Baffin Island.

Lived in Igloos

There he made the acquaintance of some Eskimos and went to the mainland by dogsled. He lived in igloos with the Eskimos and ate raw food, principally narwhal, and some more well-done seal.

"I loved raw narwhal," he said. His trip done, he returned through Canada, particularly enjoying the 1,000-mile train ride from Churchill.

Mr. Mazzeo was a natural choice for manager of the expedition because of his managerial abilities and his great interest in ornithology, photography and mountain climbing.

Accomplished Bird Watcher

Mazzeo's interest in ornithology dates from his youth in the Boy Scouts. A member of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, Mr. Mazzeo has become an accomplished bird watcher.

His most famous work in this field was accomplished when he carried home to Boston with him a pair of Manx shearwaters from the island of Skokholm in Wales. One died on the plane en route, but the other was released from Logan Airport and arrived back on the island of Skokholm in 12½ days, a world's record for a homing flight.

Other birdwatching trips have taken Mr. Mazzeo to the New Mexico - Colorado region, where he lived for a month at an altitude of 13,000 feet; at sea off Cape Sable, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Labrador and California.

Plans Photography Trip

These birdwatching exploits are well known, but little known is Mr. Mazzeo's skill with a camera. He is a close friend of Edward Weston, one of the best American photographers with whom he visited in California last summer. He is planning another trip to California this summer after the Tanglewood season and is looking forward to a mountain-climbing and photography trip to the Sierras with Brett Weston, son of Edward Weston.

Mazzeo uses 4 by 5 and 8 by 10 cameras exclusively, scorning the miniature variety. It makes heavy carrying up mountainsides, but Mazzeo claims it isn't tough for he makes many stops to watch birds and take pictures.

"It takes me a long time to get up and down a mountain," he said. "There are so many things going on."

Mr. Mazzeo has never displayed his photographs in the East and won't until he retires. "I just want people here to remember me as a musician."

Besides work already mentioned, Mr. Mazzeo is cochairman of the woodwind department at the New England Conservatory of Music, an inventor of a new, improved clarinet, a member of seven bird organizations and a collector of rare bird books.

'Perfectly Relaxed'

His schedule is so intensely busy that it would seem natural for his health to suffer, but Mr. Mazzeo scoffs at that suggestion. "My interests are so different that they balance each other and keep me perfectly relaxed," he said. "There is plenty of time if you don't waste it."

Despite this busy schedule, Mr. Mazzeo was pleased to be selected for manager of the expedition. Bylot Island offers everything for him, he claims. There are 50 or 60 peaks there, only one of which has been climbed, according to Mr. Mazzeo.

Also, the island was a "very happy place" from the point of view of birds, explained Mazzeo. "A bird is not conceded to exist until a specimen has been placed in a museum," he said. "Bylot Island has as many as 30 or 40 different species breeding there and only five or six species are listed in the museums of the world."

It was a natural tying together of all Mr. Mazzeo's interests. He expects the members of the party to make some significant contributions in their fields.

Members of Expedition

Members of the party are: Dr. William H. Drury Jr., assistant professor of biology at Harvard University; Mrs. Drury, amateur ornithologist; Dr. Josselyn Van Tyne, professor of ornithology at the University of Michigan; Dr. Richard S. Miller, mammalogist and instructor at Harvard University; Dr. Benjamin Ferris, M.D., assistant professor of physiology at Harvard University; Edward Ames, undergraduate at Harvard and botanist; and Axel and Katherine Rosin, mountain climbers.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 8 - 1954

Guests at Curtis

Claudio Arrau, last night's soloist at Tanglewood, is among the guests staying at the Curtis Hotel here.

A guest next week will be pianist Vera Franceschi. During August, Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pop Concerts, will be a guest at the Curtis.

Then the

July 21—Times-Union ALBANY, N.

ON THE ROSTRUM—Fred Stolz, right, president of the Kiwanis Club, welcomes yesterday's guest speaker, George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The scene is the Ten Eyck Hotl.

Times-Union Staff Photo by Moore

Symphony Receipts Top Baseball, Kiwanis Told

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

It was very appropos that the speaker for the weekly luncheon yesterday of the Kiwanis Club whose motto is "We Build" should be George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For under his regime it has become one of the great, if not the greatest orchestra in the world. Yeserday's meeing at the Hotel Ten Eyck was probably Mr. Judd's swan song as he retires from active managership this fall after 40 years of service.

Mr. Judd's talk was concerned with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in general and the annual Tanglewood Music Festival in particular. He was born in Stamford, N. Y. and at the end of his career will retire to his farm in Cannonsville, Delaware County, to devote his activities to flouriculture.

The speaker said that the annual budget of the orchestra is $500,000, $200,000 of which was obtained from box office receipts, recordings and broadcasts. No orchestra in the world is self-supporting except those in Europe who receive governmental subsidy. The board of directors of the orchestra make up the defecit, with generous contributions from music lovers of the Boston Area.

[197]

Shed Concerts

Eagle, July 17, 1954

Piano Soloists Being Featured At Festival Tonight, Tomorrow

VERA FRANCESCHI
Tonight's Pianist

LEO SMIT
Tomorrow's Soloist

TANGLEWOOD — Two soloists will be heard at the Berkshire Music Festival concerts in the Music Shed tonight and tomorrow afternoon, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the second weekend performances of the 1954 season.

Monteux Conducting

Guest conductor Pierre Monteux will lead the full 104-piece orchestra this evening at 8:30 with Vera Franceschi as piano soloist.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the orchestra when pianist Leo Smit will be the soloist.

Mr. Monteux' program will include two Debussy works; excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer," and two by Franck, "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra, and Symphony in D Minor.

Mr. Munch has chosen the Debussy "Iberia," Aaron Copland's piano concerto and Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" for the matinee tomorrow.

Tanglewood Debuts

This weekend's soloists are both making their first Tanglewood appearances. Born in San Francisco 23 years ago, Miss Franceschi holds the distinction of having received a diploma from the Rome Academy of St. Cecilia at the age of 13—the youngest graduate in its history. She was only 14 when she first played at La Scala in Milan. On returning to this country, Miss Franceschi received her degree from the Manhattan School of Music in New York and then returned to Rome on a Fulbright Scholarship to become the first pianist to earn the doctor of music degree from the St. Cecilia Academy.

Since 1946 Miss Franceschi has made several concert tours of Europe, including appearances with the Maggio Festival Orchestra of Florence, Italy; the Santa Cecilia Orchestra of Rome; the orchestra of La Scala in Milan; the Orchestre National de Paris and the Radio Eireann Symphony of Dublin. A protege of conductor Monteux, Miss Franceschi has performed with the New York Philharmonic and the orchestras of Chicago and San Francisco. In addition to her orchestral appearances, she has given recitals, and has made radio and television appearances; during World War II she was awarded citations from the United States government for her many concerts for American servicemen.

With BSO Before

Although it will be his debut at Tanglewood, Leo Smit has performed the Copland piano concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at Symphony Hall in Boston and at Carnegie Hall in New York. With the composer, who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Rome Radio Orchestra, Mr. Smit has made a recording of the work. He received his musical training in his native Philadelphia at the Curtis Institute of Music where he was a student of Mme. Isabelle Vengereva.

Later he studied with Nicholas Nabobkov and in 1950 he was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship as well as a Guggenheim Fellowship. With these awards Mr. Smit went to the American Academy in Rome for what was originally a two-year period and later extended to three years.

A Composer Too

During this time he composed his "Overture: The Parcae" which was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season. He is now composing a work for chamber orchestra which was commissioned by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. In addition to his many compositions for piano, chamber groups, voice and orchestra, Mr. Smit is noted for the number of contemporary piano concerti which he has premiered.

TIGHT BINDING

Music

Eagle - July 19, 1954

BSO Gives Thrilling Finale To Weekend Festival Concerts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE "FANTASTIC SYMPHONY" of Hector Berlioz was the final work on yesterday afternoon's program in the big Shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch, the director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by his frequent performance and devotion to this previously somewhat neglected symphony has brought it back to public favor and, in a way, made it his own. Certainly the Bostonians play it under his baton with verve and sweep and all stops open. It was a thrilling finale to one of the most satisfying over-all weekends in some time.

The whole afternoon had been consistently interesting and well done. The first half of the program consisted of some less familiar Debussy, "Iberiia," a set of "Images" consisting of three movements: "In the streets and byways," "The fragrance of the night" and "The morning of a festival day." It has been said in a semi-serious way that the best Spanish music has been written by the French and Russians. Debussy seems certainly to have caught the intangible ingredients of Spanish music in this instance. The first and third sections are reflections and impressions of daily activities; in the "fragrance" Munch extracted an intensely poignant delicacy from his orchestra.

* * *

LEO SMIT was the soloist in Aaron Copland's piano concerto, a work written when Copland was less than half his present age and in which he wrote in the lush style of the current popular American manner with jazz rhythms the basic frame. Smit used the few occasions the score provides for the soloist to emerge above the orchestral material to show his excellent mettle but it is essentially orchestral, exuberant in the second half, plaintively lyrical in the beginning. Copland was called from the audience to the stage to share the enthusiastic applause the performance evoked. Copland has been assistant director, since its establishment, of the Berkshire Music Center, the school started in 1940 by Serge Koussevitzky to run concurrently with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Pierre Monteux conducted the second of two programs he had been invited to lead this season. His program, too, like Munch's yesterday afternoon, was chosen from French music: Debussy and Franck, and Franck's symphony occupied the same relative position on his program as had the "Fantastic" on that of Munch. Monteux distilled the Franck of its heavy sentimentality and gave it a fresh and lithe youthfulness. The orchestra played with every hue and nuance their color pots contained to give a fresh and vivid performance.

A mere chronological record of the two composers, Berlioz and Franck, on whom the two weekend concerts were built, hardly gives a proper perspective of their relative importance and influence. While Franck was born less than two decades after Berlioz, his symphony, written when he was 66, came nearly 60 years after the "Fantastic" written when Berlioz was 27. Thus the Fantastic came at about the same time in the life of the generation, for instance, of Schumann that the Franck came in the lives of Debussy, Sibelius and Richard Strauss. Indeed, "Don Juan" is of the same year as the Franck. Thus Franck, born over a decade before Brahms, and much nearer, so far as the records go, to the Mendelssohn era, is, in effect, because his important works were written at the end of his career, a fellow of the composers of the "Petite Suite" for piano duo, of "Tod und Verklarung" and at least sketches of the "Kalevala."

* * *

MONTEUX'S PROGRAM began with Debussy's two excerpts from his incidental music to Gabriel d'Annuzio's mystery play "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien," in the first of which, the prelude: "The Court of the Lilies," the wind sections of the orchestra had a splendid opportunity to show the control and cohesion they can produce. Monteux later played more Debussy: "La Mer," the three symphonic sketches. Monteux is in his 80th year and his early associations in Paris included Debussy in the years in which this music was written. That alone would not give him the security he shows for he is equally authoritative in other composers but he arouses the brilliant colors and the less luminous and contrasting ones with the easy domination of a man humbly confident and master of his program.

* * *

VERA FRANCESCHI was soloist, in "Les Djinns," Franck's symphonic poem for piano and orchestra. Again this was a work in which the orchestra includes the piano as one of its instruments rather than considering it a solo to accompany. Miss Franceschi gave poise and spaciousness to the meagre fragments allotted her, sufficient to show her artistic stature, but it is not a work that is eagerly sought. The title is taken from a poem of Victor Hugo on an ancient Arabian mythological subject concerning legendary creatures who appear in smoke and recede into casks.

TS July 19, 1954 THE NEW YORK TIMES,

COPLAND CONCERTO IS HEARD AT LENOX

Leo Smit Is Piano Soloist as Munch Conducts—Monteux Directs Franck Work

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 18—The second week of Berkshire Festival concerts was completed this afternoon with a performance by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Leo Smit was featured as soloist in the Aaron Copland Piano Concerto.

This brash, breezy, good-humored concerto, written in 1926, sounds a bit dated today. Its concluding section moves to the nervous syncopated beat of what in the Twenties was known as "ragtime." It is real, old-fashioned, barrelhouse jazz. Mr. Munch and the Boston players, however, got the swing of it wonderfully this afternoon and the piece went with immense brio. It is a superb display for the soloist, especially if one has a technique like Mr. Smit's.

This afternoon's concert was brought to a stirring conclusion with a Munch specialty, the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony." Few conductors can make this long, bombastic work come to life as vividly as Mr. Munch and the Bostonians. Although it is not first-rate music, Mr. Munch can make it sound as if it were.

The concert opened with Debussy's "Iberia."

Last night's concert was conducted by Pierre Monteux, with the pianist Vera Franceschi as soloist in Cesar Franck's symphonic poem for piano and orchestra, "Les Djinns." This is a musical evocation of the famous poem of Victor Hugo, "Murs, ville fuse, vaporous music, which did not quite come off last evening despite the high degree of skill brought to bear on it by conductor and soloist.

Mr. Monteux was thoroughly in his element in "La Mer," and the Debussy work was heard in an eloquent performance.

Excerpts from the First Act of Debussy's infrequently heard "Le Martyre de St.-Sebastien," "The Prelude," "Dance of Ecstasy" and "Finale," opened last night's concert, which came to a stately conclusion with the Franck Symphony in D minor.

TAUNTON, MASS. GAZETTE

JUL 6 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Open Wednesday

(Special to The Gazette)

LENOX—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fifteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

On Friday also at 8:30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening weeked, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed.

Tanglewood Tales

Student Council Elects Officers

The students of the Berkshire Music Center have elected the following to the Student Council at Tanglewood this summer: Catherine Duffore and Tiberius Klausner (orchestra); Harry Kruger (conductors); Richard Lockwood and Barbara Stahlman (chorus); Barney Childs (composers); Charlotte Holloman (opera, active group); Harold Johnson (opera, associate group); Ann Heiligman and David Seeley (Tanglewood Study Group). Harry Kruger is president; Barbara Sheaffer, secretary-treasurer.

* * *

Bernstein on Leave Working on Opera

Leonard Bernstein, on leave of absence this summer from his duties as head of Department I (orchestra and orchestra conducting) of the Berkshire Music Center, is spending the summer at Martha's Vineyard, working with dramatist Lillian Hellman on a full-length opera of Voltaire's "Candide," which will have lyrics by John Eatouche. Mr. Bernstein has also completed his first motion picture musical score, for Elia Kazan's new film, "On the Waterfront," from Budd Schulberg's script, starring Marlon Brando, which will be shown at the Venice Festival in September prior to national release.

* * *

Monteux and BSO To Record "La Mer"

Pierre Monteux, who conducted his final Berkshire Festival concert of the summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, in a program which included Debussy's tone poem, "La Mer," journeyed to Boston today to record this work with the Boston Symphony in Symphony Hall, before returning to his summer conducting school in Hancock, Maine. Mr. Monteux is also scheduled to conduct concerts this summer at Ravinia, Lewisohn Stadium, the Hollywood Bowl, and will return to the Metropolitan Opera in New York in November.

* * *

Eleanor Steber Covers Much Ground

Metropolitan Opera soprano Eleanor Steber, who thrilled Berkshire Festival audiences Saturday, July 10, with her Marguerite in Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," is setting some sort of record for fast travel. In late June she was singing Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West" at the Florence Maggio Musicale in Italy, making her entrance on a white horse. Monday night she sang at Ravinia Festival, Chicago; Wednesday at Hollywood Bowl; Friday, in a benefit concert for Lotte Lehmann at Santa Barbara, Calif. Miss Steber returns to Tanglewood Saturday evening, Aug. 7 to sing the Berlioz song cycle, "Summer Nights," with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

Lecture Topics

Last week's "Aspects of Music" lectures for Berkshire Music Center students at Tanglewood were given by Hugh Ross on "Analysis for the Performer," and by Frederic Cohen on "Opera in Tanglewood." Mr. Cohen is acting head of the opera department. Mr. Ross heads the choral department of the summer music school.

* * *

Short Opera Added To Program Next Week

Frederic Cohen has added "Hin and Zuruck" ("There and Return"), a ten-minute opera by Paul Hindemith, to the program of short operas to be given by students of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood on Tuesday evening, July 27. The program, previously announced, consists of Vecchi's 1594 madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso" and Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," composed in 1927, neither previously performed at Tanglewood. Mr. Hindemith was resident composer during the first year of the music school, in 1940, and his musical sketch, Op. 45a, was performed in Baden-Baden in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940. This opera performance, like other student concerts, is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those who make a voluntary contribution to the support of the school, but unlike other student performances, all seats are reserved and may be acquired on application to the Friends' office.

July 19 Springy. Union

Tanglewood Program Presents Three Hits

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 18—There were far too many empty seats in the shed at the music festival here this afternoon. There seemed to be as many people seated outside. The audience was estimated at 7700. Last Sunday 8500 persons were on hand.

Varied Program

It is difficult to understand why more people were not present, for Charles Munch offered one of the greatest symphonies in the orchestral repertoire, the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony." Also programmed was the "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" by Aaron Copland and DeBussy's "Iberia."

It seemed there was something for every taste.

The feature work was the Berlioz symphony. When this work was sprung on an unsuspecting audience in the conservatoire in Paris, it created a furore, and with reason. Beethoven had been dead only a few years and his "Pastorale" symphony was still the final word in descriptive music. Wagner was only 17 years old at the time. What Berlioz had done, perhaps unknowingly, was to start 100 years of program music.

There has been much speculation on the cause for this Berlioz outburst. Some have seen it only as a romantic outpouring; perhaps it was. But it seems more probable that it is some sort of phantasmagoria involving the composer's experiences in love, literature, the stage and other facets in his life.

Lovely, Yet Awesome

Whatever its cause, it remains one of the loveliest, yet awesome, works in the repertory. The performance under the baton of Dr. Munch was clean cut, vital and entrancing in its variety of tonal colors. There can be no doubt of the conductor's devotion to this music; no doubt of his depth of understanding of it and his ability to transmit this understanding to the orchestra and through them to the listener. This was, we believe, the finest individual achievement of the festival to date.

Aaron Copland's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra" probably delights the Basin St. habitues more than the audience this afternoon. It has rhythmic urge and compelling power, little thematic beauty and plenty of barbaric sound—so much so in fact that the piano is often obscured. Leo Smit was the pianist, and he provided as much of the music for the piano as he could through the blare of brass. The concerto's similarity to such works as "St. Louis Blues" and others is easily recognized. Mr. Copland was on hand to share in the applause which followed the performance.

The program opened today with "Iberia" from the "Images" by DeBussy. Here is highly descriptive music ranging from a tour through the streets and byways with their individual sounds and rhythms to the evoking of the atmosphere in the morning of a festival day. In between, Debussy takes one out of an evening to smell its fragrance.

Accented Rhythms

All this is accomplished through some of the most beautiful colorations ever imagined. The two end episodes were performed in a bright, even brilliant manner with the tambourines and castanets providing accented rhythms. The DeBussy of the heavenly colors was heard in the middle episode, "The Fragrance of the Night."

The performance of the three episodes was a tribute to the conductor and the superb Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The third week of the festival opens Wednesday night when the Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard in "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi; Stravinsky's "Appolum Musagete" for string orchestra; and Rossini's "Baroque Concerto."

For Music Lovers

Eagle - July 11

Devotees of classical music will be pleased to know that WGBH-FM has concluded arrangements whereby it will tape record all of the major concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer and present them in delayed broadcasts in the weeks to come.

Many student concerts, lectures and forums to be given during the six weeks of the Berkshire Music Centre summer school of music will be recorded for broadcasting purposes.

Three concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood will be broadcast this month. The first will be heard at 8:30 p. m., on Saturday. It will be Berlioz, The Damnation of Faust. Charles Munch conducts.

simple . . . At Tanglewood saw driver of elderly but elegant Rolls-Royce unscrew familiar radiator cap ornament of lady in flowing garments and lock inside car when he parked. Understand they're silver-plated, and collectors' items. Screwed plain cap in place before he left . . . Speaking of Rolls their "imported car" . . . Just heard from Lenox Congregational Church women; devout, and superb cooks. In step with Tanglewood extended season they, too, are adding to the number of Saturday night suppers in the Chapel; from three to five. Started last week with pot roast. Will follow with turkey, chicken, Swiss steak and again chicken (drool!). Suppers a Lenox institution. Dozens of orchestra people count on them. Everything home-made, and serve 350 each Saturday. Profits go into church fund . . . Guess real estater Izzie

[198]

Berkshire Music Calendar

Plus Nearby Summer Theaters and the Dance

HOW TO GET THERE: Tanglewood, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); South Mountain, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; Music Mountain, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; Berkshire Playhouse, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; Malden Bridge Playhouse, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany road (Route 20); Jacob's Pillow, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

This Week At Tanglewood

New Lebanon, N.Y. "Echo"

NICOLE HENRIOT, young French pianist, is guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening, July 24, (8:30 p. m., Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel, in Liszt's E flat Piano Concerto.

TUESDAY: tonight July 20
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Concert of Chorus and Opera
(Free to Friends)
WEDNESDAY, July 21:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Zimbler Sinfonietta
THURSDAY, July 22:
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Dept. I Orchestra
(Free to Friends)
FRIDAY, July 23:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Handel and Haydn program
by the Chamber Orchestra
SATURDAY, July 24:
10:00 a. m. in the Shed
Boston Symphony Rehearsal
3:00 p. m. in the Shed
Organ Recital, E. Power Biggs
(Free to Friends)
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Jean Morel, conducting
SUNDAY, July 25:
10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
Chamber Music, Dept. 1
(Free to Friends)
2:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Charles Munch, Conducting
8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
Composer's Forum
(Free to Friends)

Tomorrow

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends
Trio for piano, violin and cello in C minor, Op. 66 Mendelssohn
Quintet Villa Lobos
String Quartet in E-flat Major Beethoven
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor Charles Munch; soloist, Leo Smit.
"Iberia" Debussy
Piano Concerto Copland
"Fantastic Symphony" Berlioz
Composers' Forum, Dept. III, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
Assisting artists, Walter Bricht, piano; Keith Wilson, clarinet.
Opus 18 No. 2 Beethoven
Trio for Clarinet, Piano and Cello Brahms Clarinet Quintet Mozart

Sunday, July 25

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, William Primrose.
Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" Berlioz
"Harold in Italy", Symphony (with Viola Solo) Berlioz
Symphony No. 2 Toch
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Sunday, August 1

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Richard Burgin; soloist, Ruth Posselt.
American Festival Overture William Schuman
Fantasia on a theme by Tallis Vaughan Williams
Concerto for Violin Khachaturian
Symphony No. 2 Sibelius
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Sunday, August 8

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Zino Francescatti.
Overture to "Alceste" Gluck
Violin Concerto Beethoven
Symphony No. 2 Brahms
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Sunday, August 15

Tanglewood

Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Charles Munch, conductor. In memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
"Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloist Berlioz

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Sunday, August 22

South Mountain

Chamber Music Festival, Coolidge Series, 4:00 p.m. Chamber Orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Rudolf Serkin and Alexander Schneider.

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 1:30 p.m. Music of the Spanish Renaissance.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Sunday, August 29

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 1:30 p.m. Vocal and instrumental works of Salamone Rossi, Hebreo (Mantua 1587-1628).

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Monday, July 19

Berkshire Playhouse

"The Ghost Train"

Tanglewood

Informal chamber music concert. 4:30 p.m. Chamber Music Hall.
Works by Bergsma, Hindemith, Beethoven, Mozart

Monday, July 26

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Gaye Jordan and William Roerick in
"Madam, Will You Walk?"

Monday, August 2

Berkshire Playhouse

"Traveler's Joy"

Tanglewood

Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program; special tickets required.
"The Tender Land" Copland

Monday, August 9

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Carol Stone in
"The Iron Gate"

Monday, August 16

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. William Roerick in
"Charlie's Aunt"

Monday, August 23

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Betty Field in
"Ethan Frome"

Monday, August 30

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Tuesday, July 20

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"My Three Angels"
(Second week)

Tanglewood

Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.
Works by Bach, Bassler, Richard Strauss, Perotinus, Milhaud, Poulenc, Dello Joio

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Irwin (Lord) Burgess, Calypso singer.
"Songs From the Caribbean Islands"

Tuesday, July 27

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"The Country Girl"

Tanglewood

Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program, special tickets required.
"L'Amfiparnasso" Vecchi
"The Princess and the Pea" Toch

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Suzy Sann, continental singer, and Irmgard Carle, guitar-recorder.
"From the Plains of the Pusta to the Borders of the Seine"

Tuesday, August 3

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"The Silver Whistle"

Tanglewood

Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program with special ticket required.
"The Tender Land" Copland

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Richard Dyer-Bennet, tenor-guitarist.
"20th Century Troubadour"

Tuesday, August 10

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"The Love of Four Colonels"

Tanglewood

Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Betty MacDonald, soprano; Jerry Silverman, singer-guitarist.
"From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."

Tuesday, August 17

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"The Moon Is Blue"

Tuesday, August 24

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"The Moon Is Blue"
(Second week)

Tuesday, August 31

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"Ladies in Retirement"

Pleasant Valley Sanctuary

Off Route 7 between Lenox and Pittsfield. Watch for signs. Trailside Museum open 1-5 p.m. every day; Red Barn Tea Room, noon to 7 p.m. every day; grounds open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day.

Berkshire Garden Center

At junction of Routes 183 and 102, west of Stockbridge. Open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2-6 p.m. Horticulturist in attendance.

Bartholomew's Cobble

Sanctuary featuring native ferns and flowers, unusual limestone outcropping along Housatonic River. Off Route 7 at Ashley Falls. Watch for signs. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. Warden in attendance. Guided tours and picnic facilities.

"The Four Seasons" (String Orchestra) Vivaldi
"Apollon Musagete" (String Orchestra) Stravinsky
"Baroque Concerto" Rossini

Quartet in E flat, K. 428 Mozart
Quartet No. 4 (first performance) Bloch
Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 Beethoven

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.

("The Lark") Haydn
Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 Hindemith
Quartet in F Ravel

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m. Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

Violin Sonata in A major Brahms
Suite in C (Violin unaccompanied) Bach
Violin Sonata in D Minor Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m. Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.

History, Art and Movies

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours, Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.; closed Mondays. Exhibitions, through July, paintings by Lawrence R. McCoy; through August, paintings by Ellen Emmet Rand; through both months, photographs by Clemens Kalischer, miniatures

TIGHT BINDING

FILMED AS BOUND

8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Jean Morel, conducting

SUNDAY, July 25:

10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
Chamber Music, Dept. 1
(Free to Friends)

2:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Charles Munch, Conducting

8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
Composer's Forum
(Free to Friends)

Concert
Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.
Works by Bach, Hässler, Richard Strauss, Perotinus, Milhaud, Poulenc, Della Joio

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Irwin (Lord) Burgess, Calypso singer.
"Songs From the Caribbean Islands"

Departments II and IV. Friends program, special tickets required.
"L'Amfiparnasso" Vecchi
"The Princess and the Pea" Tock

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Suzy Sann, continental singer, and Irmgard Carle, guitar-recorder.
"From the Plains of the Puata to the Borders of the Seine" program with special ticket required.

"The Tender Land" Copland

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Richard Dyer-Bennet, tenor-guitarist.
"20th Century Troubadour"

p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Betty MacDonald, soprano; Jerry Silverman, singer-guitarist.
"From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."

from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day; grounds open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day.

Berkshire Garden Center

At junction of Routes 183 and 102, west of Stockbridge. Open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2-6 p.m. Horticulturist in attendance.

Bartholomew's Cobble

Sanctuary featuring native ferns and flowers, unusual limestone outcropping along Housatonic River. Off Route 7 at Ashley Falls. Watch for signs. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. Warden in attendance. Guided tours and picnic facilities.

Sinfonietta
"The Four Seasons" (String Orchestra) Vivaldi
"Apollon Musagete" (String Orchestra) Stravinsky
"Baroque Concerto" Rossini

String Quartet.
Quartet in E flat, K. 428 Mozart
Quartet No. 4 (first performance) Bloch
Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 Beethoven

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

Quartet in D, Op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark") Haydn
Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 Hindemith
Quartet in F Ravel

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

...pianist; Artur Balsam, pianist
Violin Sonata in A major Brahms
Suite in C (Violin unaccompanied) Bach
Violin Sonata in D Minor Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

English music of the Renaissance and Baroque.

...val and Elizabethan carols.

History, Art and Movies

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours, Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.; closed Mondays. Exhibitions, through July, paintings by Lawrence R. McCoy; through August, paintings by Ellen Emmet Rand; through both months, photographs by Clemens Kalischer, miniature rooms by Andrew Zenorini, sculpture by Franc Epping, Wilsson collection of etchings, engravings and lithographs of famous composers (in cooperation with the Boston Symphony Orchestra); Aug. 3-31, Civil War photographs by Mathew Brady.

Little Cinema (Evenings at 8:15; Saturdays, continuous from 7): July 7-13, "The Final Test," with Robert Morley, plus "The Tell Tale Heart" and "The White Continent"; July 14-17, Anton Walbrook, Paula Wessely in "Masquerade in Vienna" and James Mason in "The Secret Sharer"; July 21-27, "Genevieve," with Dinah Sheridan, John Gregson; July 28-31, Jack Hawkins in "Crash of Silence"; Aug. 4-10, Ann Magnani in "The Golden Coach" (in English); Aug. 11-14, "Spice of Life" and "The White Tower"; Aug. 18-24, "Fan Fan the Tulip," with Gina Lollobrigida; Aug. 25-28, to be announced.

Mission House

On Route 7 in the center of Stockbridge. Built in 1739 for John Sergeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Moved and restored by Miss Mabel Choate as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate. Open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12:30, 2-6; Sunday, 2-6.

Thursday, July 22

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for three days. Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
The Lester Horton Dance Theater of California.

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Friends program.
Works by Saint-Saens, Brahms, Chausson, Rimsky-Korsakov

Thursday, July 29

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Friends program.

Thursday, August 5

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Friends program.

Thursday, August 12

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Jean Morel.
Overture to "Scala di Seta" Rossini
Symphony in B flat K.319 Mozart
"Mother Goose" Suite Ravel
"Der Burger als Edelmann" Strauss

Thursday, September 2

Friday, July 23

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductors, Charles Munch and Hugh Ross.
Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4 Handel
Symphony No. 100, "Military" Haydn
"Nelson" Mass Haydn

Friday, July 30

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Doriot Anthony.
"The Spider's Feast" Roussel
Flute Concerto Ibert
Serenade for Eight Winds K.388 Mozart
"Paris" Symphony K.297 Mozart

Friday, August 6

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Lukas Foss; soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
"Pulcinella" (complete) Stravinsky
Piano Concerto in B flat, K.450 Mozart
"Idomeneo" (excerpts) with chorus and soloists Mozart

Friday, August 13

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

(Program to be announced)

Friday, August 20

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m., Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Negro Dance Theater.
Grace and Kurt Graff.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

Friday, August 27

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Yurek Lazowski, character ballet.
Pearl Lang and Co.
Lotte Goslar.

Friday, September 3

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evening at 9 p.m.
Andre Eglovsky and partner, ballet.
Harriet Ann Gray and company.
The American Mime Theater.

Saturday, July 24

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Organ Recital, Shed, 3 p.m. E. Power Biggs, organist. Friends program.
Works by Handel, Couperin, Byrd, Purcell, Franck, Vivaldi

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Jean Morel, soloist, Nicole Henriot.
"Don Juan" Strauss
Symphony No. 6 Prokofieff
E Flat Piano Concerto Liszt
"Enigma" Variations Elgar

South Mountain

Chamber Music. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam.
Beethoven Sonatas for violin and piano Nos. 8, 4, 6, 3

Saturday, July 31

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony with Festival Chorus and soloists Berlioz

South Mountain

Trio—horn, violin, piano. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam, John Barrows.
Trio for Horn, Violin and Piano Hugo Kauder
Sonata di Camera Ben Weber
(Commissioned by Fromm Music Foundation)

Saturday, August 7

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Organ recital, Shed, 3 p.m. E. Power Biggs, organist. Friends
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Eleanor Steber. Berlioz program:
Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"
"Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"
"Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra
"Te Deum" with Festival Chorus and soloist

South Mountain

Chamber Music. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam.
Beethoven Sonatas for violin and piano Nos. 5, 2, 9

Saturday, August 14

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3 p.m. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Tragic Overture" Brahms
Symphony No. 4 Piston
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" Ravel
Symphony No. 3 (with organ) Saint-Saens

South Mountain

Juilliard Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
String Quartet No. 2 William Denny
Quartet in G, Op. 54, No. 2 Haydn
String Quartet No. 1 Benjamin Lees
Quartet in F major Ravel

Saturday, August 21

South Mountain

Chamber Music Festival, Coolidge Series, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Kroll Quartet, Chamber Orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Court and chapel music of Henry V-Henry VIII.

Saturday, August 28

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Music of the German Renaissance and Baroque.

Saturday, September 4

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS

JUL 11 1954

More to a Piano Than Just Playing

Lenox, Mass., July 10 (UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here, 69 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 760 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo made the journey in 2¼ days. Since the drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre, Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised the packing of 4 concert, upright and 4 piano-moving experts at the factory.

Eagle - July 21

Public Events

Tonight
8:30—The Zimbler Sinfonietta, with Josef Zimbler, conducting, Tanglewood Theater-concert hall, Lenox.
8:45—"The Ghost Train," starring Rex O'Malley, Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.
8:45—"My Three Angels." Malden Bridge (N.Y.) Playhouse.

Tomorrow
4:00 p.m.—Dance Festival, featuring Carmelita Maracci and the Lester Horton Dance Theater. Jacob's Pillow, Lee.

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood Gained Fame in 2 Decades

5,000 Music Lovers at First Concerts, 118,000 Attended Festival Last Year

By C. R. ROSEBERRY
Times-Union Staff Writer

Twenty years ago this summer, benches were arranged in the horse paddock of one of those pretentious private estates bordering Stockbridge Bowl, the poetic Berkshire Lake which older denizens and road maps still call by its Indian name of Lake Mahkeenac. Three open air symphony concerts were played to a total audience of 5,000 people by 65 musicians recruited from the New York Philharmonic.

That was the acorn from which has grown the oak of the Boston Symphony's annual music festival, known far and wide simply as "Tanglewood." In the two decades since a committee of music-conscious dwellers of the Berkshires got up the spontaneous affair at the summer home of Daniel R. Hanna, the Cleveland publisher, the Berkshire Festival has become the foremost event of its kind in America.

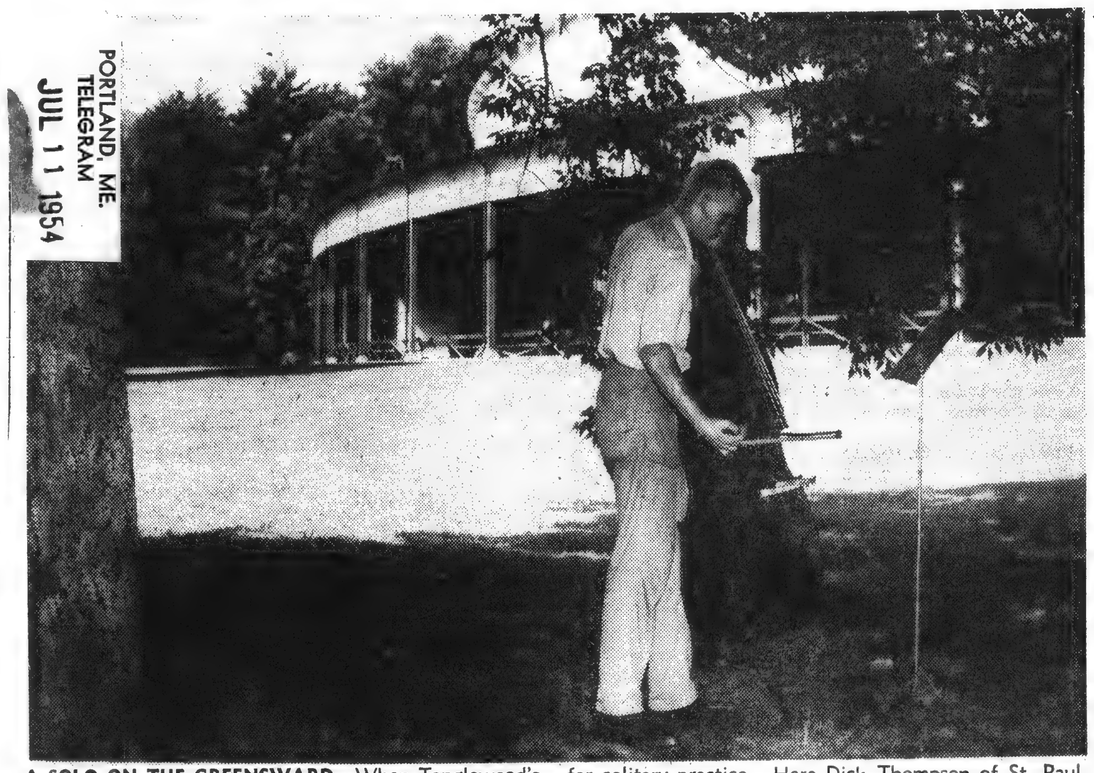
BANNER SEASON

Once again the Tanglewood season is at its height on the magnificent grounds of the erstwhile Tappan estate—to which the pen of Nathaniel Hawthorne bequeathed its name—on the outskirts of Lenox, Mass. With an augmented schedule of concerts, the festival promises to break its own total 1953 attendance record of 118,000. The average audience for last year's main concerts under the great Music Shed, overflowing onto the lawns around, was 10,200, and music lovers ponied up $311,600 for the privilege.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, with Pierre Monteux and others as guest conductors, the "big series" is dedicated this year to Hector Berlioz on the 150th anniversary of his birth. The final concert on Aug. 15 will consist of that composer's mighty "Requiem" as a gesture in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, longtime conductor of the Tanglewood concerts, who died in 1951.

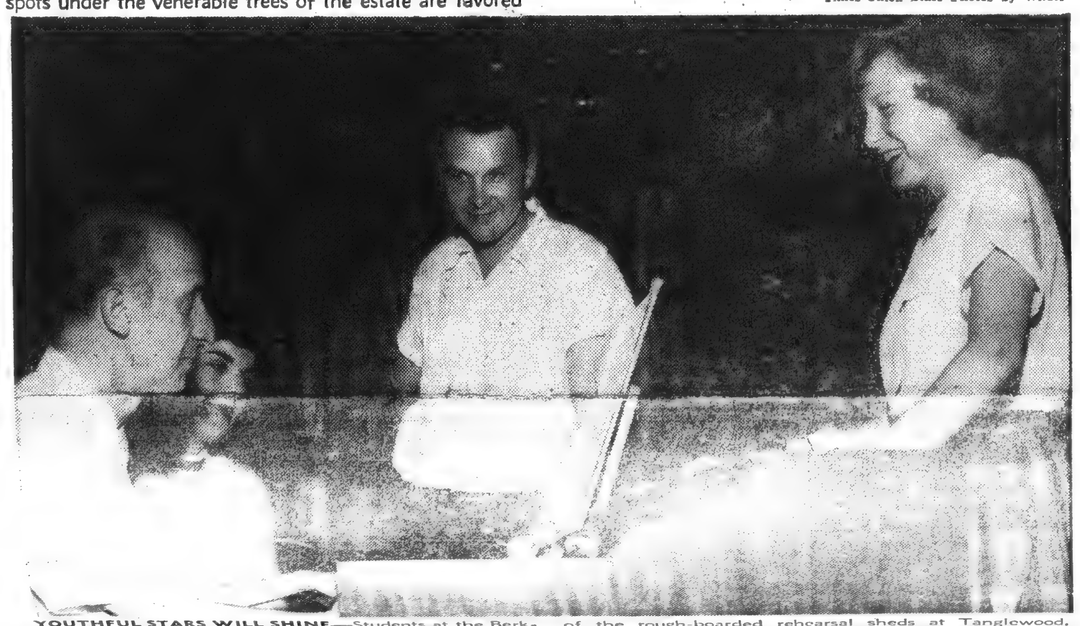
The viola soloist with Berlioz' symphony "Harold in Italy", on July 25, will be William Primrose. It is a fair coincidence that Hawthorne adopted the name Primrose for one of the rough-boarded rehearsal sheds at Tanglewood, coached by Frederic Waldman (left). They are (standing) Jeff Morris, of Lima, Ohio, and Phyllis Murphy, of Lenox, Mass. Miss Murphy is a pupil of Aaron Copland, who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center. Morris is a student at Juilliard School of Music.

NOTED COMPOSER WITH STUDENTS — Aaron Copland (standing left) chats on the lawn with a few of his pupils in advanced composition. Copland, one of America's foremost composers, has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since its inception. The students are a cosmopolitan group. The bearded chap next



A SOLO ON THE GREENSWARD—When Tanglewood's velvety lawns are not overflowed by rapt concert listeners, the summer students hold undisputed sway. The shady spots under the venerable trees of the estate are favored for solitary practice. Here Dick Thompson of St. Paul, Minn., strives for the perfect tone from his bull-fiddle, with the vast empty Music Shed for background.

Times-Union Staff Photos by Wilder



YOUTHFUL STARS WILL SHINE—Students at the Berkshire Music Center will perform Aaron Copland's opera, PORTLAND, ME.

TELEGRAM
JUL 11 1954

Prof. Re Receives Grant At Berkshire

WATERVILLE, July 10—Prof. Peter Re of the Colby College music department has received a grant to do choral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass., where he is director of both the Colby glee club and the Colby choir.

The award was made to Re by RCA-Victor and covers a six weeks period at Tanglewood which began Monday.

Albany Times-Union - July 18, 1954

TIGHT BINDING

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood Fame Has Become Worldwide Within 2 Decades

18,000 Heard Concerts in '53

(Continued from Page D-1)

...ented as the audience for his ...lly fictitious Williams ...ge student, Eustace ... spinning fantastic ...rns on Tanglewood Porch ...r the "Wonder Book."

When Eustace was listing ...r the authors, in one be...reen-stories interlude, who ...re to be found in that year ...1851 within a small area of ...e Berkshires, Primrose ...ed up "Have we not an ...thor for our next neighbor? ...at silent man, who lives in ...e old red house, near ...ndenwood Avenue."

Primrose was referring to ...thorne himself, who led ...secluded and rather un...l life on those very ...ds, and who did not ...w he was creating the ...s for a world-renowned ...d festival when he coined ...e name Tanglewood.

DISLIKED AREA

...e Hawthorne connection ...s been exploited aplenty in ...ring the festival, but ...h all its aspects. The fact ...t the author's sojourn ...Lenox was a brief one ... 18 months in 1850-51), ...at he didn't like it very ... He referred to the cot...e where he lived as "the ...ler little old red farm...se you ever saw"; com...ned that it was drafty and ...f leaked; and wrote to ...Fond, in a particular fit of ...ression:

"...m sick to death of Berk...s and hate to think of ...ding another winter here ...e air and the climate do ...gree with my health at ..., I have felt languid ...dispirited during almost ...r residence here."

...t it was a productive ...r him. He wrote "The ...se of Seven Gables" while ...Lenox; put together his ..."Tanglewood Tales" from ...ning manuscripts; dashed ...f the "Wonder Book" for ...m, and probably out...d his sequel, "Tanglewood ...s."

...E TOWN IN UPROAR

...he age of 46, Haw...e had come to the part...the ways with his na...wn of Salem, Mass. For ...ding, he had lost his ... job with the Salem ...s House, and needed ... For another, "The ...t Letter" had just been ...ished, and "caused the ...st uproar that has hap...here since witch-times". ...e wrote to a friend, "If I ...e from town without be...rred and feathered, I ...consider it good luck." ...ded, "I wish they would ...d feather me; it would ...uch an entirely novel ... of distinction for a ...ary man."

...sing around for a new ...e in which to write, he ...sight of the Berkshires ...ere he had visited years ...ier—but which he was to ...d had turned fashionable ...ce then, the farms being ...ed over by monied Boston...s. As luck would have it, ...childhood friend of his wife's, ...Caroline Sturgis, had married ...ich Boston merchant, Wil...am Aspinwall Tappan; and ...the Tappans had been develop...g a splendid summer estate ...n the Berkshires since 1849, ...with a tenant farmhouse on ...

'FROZEN MUSIC,' ALSO—Sculpture and painting are exhibited on the Tanglewood grounds. Here, in a corner of the hedged formal garden, is a wooden sculpture carved from California redwood by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge, Mass. He calls it "Early Spring," and it symbolizes a plant unfolding. It is being admired by Jill Bengelsdorf of Newark, N. J., a harp student at Juilliard who is summering at the Berkshire Music Center.

MOVED TO LENOX

The tenant cottage being vacant, Mrs. Tappan proposed to Sophia Hawthorne that they come to Lenox and occupy the cottage rent-free, as an ideal place for her husband to write. With stiff pride, Hawthorne insisted he would accept no charity, and that they would pay at least a nominal rent. (There is no record that he ever paid it).

The Hawthornes, with their two children, Una and Julian, moved out to Lenox in the Spring of 1850. Sophia seems to have liked the place at once. In a letter, she described it: "We seem to have such a large house inside, though outside the little red thing looks like the smallest of 10-feet houses. Mr. Hawthorne says it looks like the Scarlet Letter".

Biographers agree that Hawthorne was in one of his "periodic retreats from reality" when he went to Lenox. He had begun to age. While "The Scarlet Letter" had just made him an overnight celebrity and started bringing in money, he recoiled from the social contacts it engendered.

RETREAT FROM LIFE

The first thing he did at Lenox was go to bed for several days, ostensibly with a bad cold, but more likely in hiding with a fit of low spirits. Mr. Tappan brought two men over to plow a field for him as he lay upstairs, and commented he was glad to hear it was a cold, because it proved Hawthorne was human.

In the Berkshires, Hawthorne found one kindred soul—Herman Melville. The deep and ardent friendship that flared up between these two authors, with Melville visiting frequently at the little red cottage while he was writing "Moby Dick" at nearby Arrowhead, is one facet of the Hawthorne legend which has been all but ignored in Tanglewood publicity. The stimulus of that friendship between two men who were in retreat from the world, and who shared a tragic vision of human life, helped Melville write a book greater than any Hawthorne ever did.

LEFT BENEFACTORS

Instead of mingling with his other cultured neighbors, Hawthorne raised chickens and climbed mountains and walked with his children. His third child, Rose, was born in the cottage. There are hints of some ill feeling between Hawthorne and his benefactors, the Tappans, in the neighboring big house. A question arose over the ownership of the apples from a certain tree. The Hawthornes moved out in November, 1851, and took a house in Concord, where he proceeded to give the name of Tanglewood further prestige with the book, "Tanglewood Tales".

It is not clear at just what juncture the Tappans adopted the name, Tanglewood, for the estate where Hawthorne had briefly been a tenant. The red cottage was destroyed by fire in 1890.

In 1947, the "little red house" was rebuilt on the site by the National Federation of Music Clubs as a gift to the Berkshire Festival. It was restored from old pictures, and is considerably idealized in its fresh neatness.

"Tanglewood" remained in the possession of the Tappan family until they gave it to the Boston Symphony in 1937. Its 210 acres centered about the fine big house facing down upon Lake Mahkeenac, which was completed in 1865 and is now used as administrative headquarters of the Berkshire Music Center.

Getting back to that original festival of 1934 on the Dan Hanna estate. A second festival was held on the same location in 1935, this time under a tent. The idea was catching hold. In 1936, the same tent and wooden orchestra-shell were used again, but this time in Stockbridge, at Hollywood, the estate of Mrs. Margaret Emerson. And a new orchestra did the playing. The festival committee had approached Serge Koussexiltzky with an invitation for the Boston Symphony, of which he was conductor, to play the three concerts. Attendance leaped to 15,000 for the three.

ESTATE A GIFT

In February, 1937, the gift of the "Tanglewood" estate was made to the Boston Symphony by Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan, (a daughter of the original William A. Tappan), and her niece, Mrs. Gorham Brooks (later Mrs. Andrew Hepburn), of Boston.

A move was set afoot to raise funds by subscription for a permanent structure in which to give the concerts. Before it had made headway, the 1937 concert series was played again under a tent. The story has been told many times of that wild night of Aug. 12 when a violent thunderstorm broke upon an all-Wagner program, drowning out the music and drenching the audience. Koussevitzy stopped his orchestra more than once to wait for the storm to abate. When it refused to do so, he brought on the loudest of Wagnerian music—including the "Ride of the Valkyries"—and played in competition with the elements. A New York critic wrote: "No stage director had ever lavished such a setting on this wild music."

Next day, Koussevitzky announced there would be no future festivals without a permanent shelter. The storm lent impetus to the subscription drive, and the open-sided Music Shed was built and dedicated the following year.

With the exception of the war years, when gas rationing forced suspension of the concerts, Tanglewood's drawing power has grown steadily, and its programs have been accordingly augmented. This year, the "big concerts" in the Music Shed will total 12, as against last year's nine; and a new plan intersperses the so-called Bach-Mozart concerts (in the smaller theatre-concert hall), as well as a chamber music series, with them over the entire six weeks.

One of Koussevitzky's dreams when he became the Maestro of Tanglewood was to found a school in affiliation with it, where exceptionally talented young people could come and benefit from contact with music at its best. The dream was realized when the Berkshire Music Center was instituted in 1940. Today it has 400 pupils, who must meet rigid entrance requirements, and many of whom choose this way of spending their summer vacations from conservatories and colleges.

Amid the beauties of Tanglewood, they pass these enchanted weeks in an atmosphere supercharged with fine music and with great musical personalities. Among their teachers this summer, for instance, are Aaron Copland, the composer, who is assistant director of the Music Center (under Munch); Ernst Toch, another famous composer, who is guest-composer for 1954 (among past guest-composers, a new one each year, have been such as Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud).

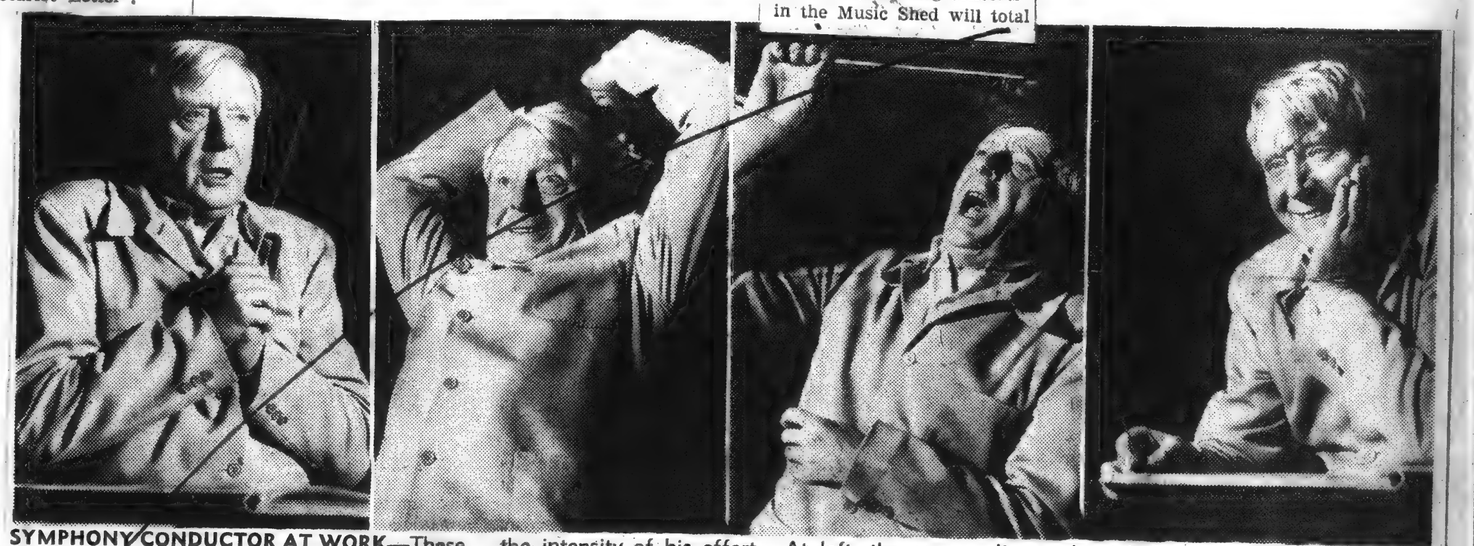
The operatic division is headed by Dr. Frederic Cohen, a goateed genius who is regularly in charge of the opera department of the Juilliard School. At present he is preparing his students to perform two modern operas, by the two illustrious composers now in residence at Tanglewood: "The Tender Land," by Aaron Copland; and "The Princess and the Pea," by Ernst Toch.

THE THIRD WEEK of the Berkshire Festival Concerts starts Wednesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall at "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., when three rarely-heard selections by Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini will be played by the Zimbler Sinfonietta. The performing group, founded by Joseph Zimbler, cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, consists of 21 players under Zimbler's direction.

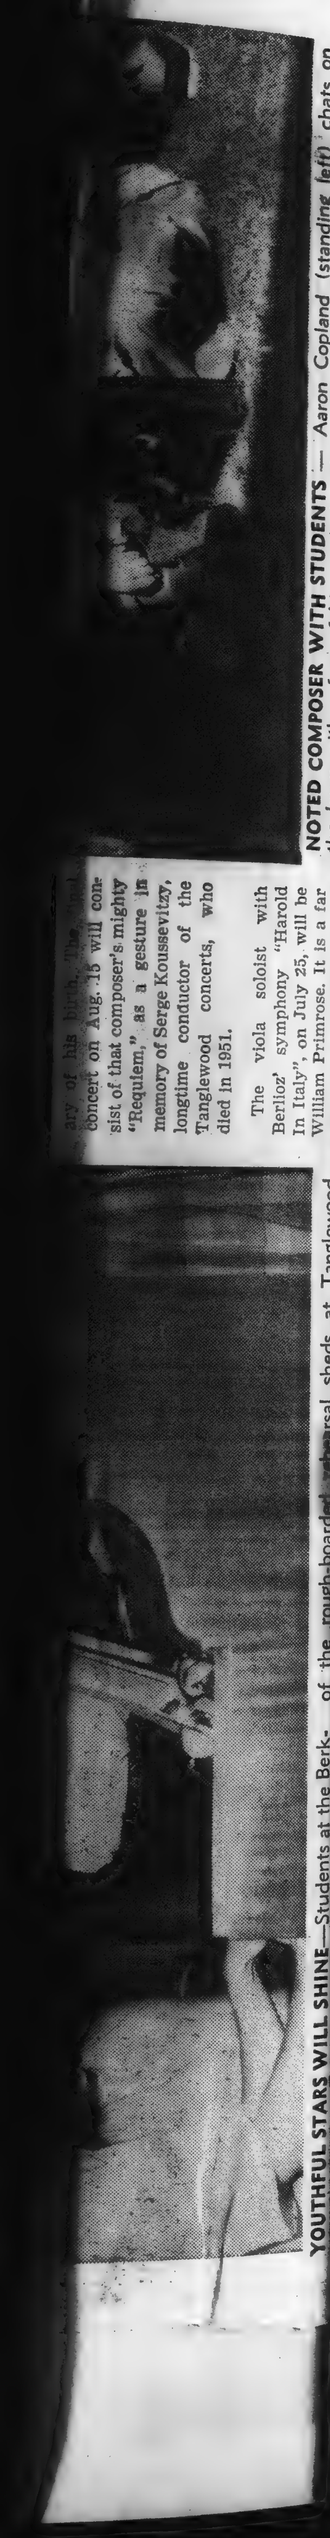
MUSIC DIRECTOR Charles Munch of the Festival will conduct a program of Handel and Haydn, including the Haydn Mass, led by Hugh Ross, choral director, in the Theater-Concert Hall Friday night, when chamber orchestra members of the Boston symphony participate. Next Saturday night, in the Music Shed, Guest Conductor Jean Morel will lead the full 104-piece orchestra with Nicole Henriot, piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 25, the concert program in the Music Shed will comprise Berlioz and Toch with William Primrose, internationally known violist, as soloist.

This afternoon's Music Shed symphonic concert, by the Boston Symphony, will have Leo Smit as piano soloist in the Copland Piano Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony" and Debussy's "Iberia." Last night, Pianist Vera Francheschi, was soloist with the Symphony, led by Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. The program comprised excerpts from Debussy's "St. Sebastian;" Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns,' for piano and Orchestra and the same composer's D Minor Symphony, and Debussy's "La Mar."

Nicole Henriot, young French pianist, will play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra next Saturday night in The Shed, "Tanglewood." Her selection the Liszt E Flat Concerto, Jean Morel conducting.



SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR AT WORK—These revealing candid-camera shots of Charles Munch rehearsing his Boston Orchestra for its Tanglewood concert series register graphically the intensity of his effort. At left, the conductor concentrates on a quiet passage of music. In next panel, he strives for a crescendo. Next, he fairly shouts for a crashing chord at the climax. At right, he smiles in obvious satisfaction at the result his great orchestra has given him. Munch has been regular conductor of the Tanglewood concerts since the death of Serge Koussevitzky in 1951.



YOUTHFUL STARS WILL SHINE—Students at the Berk- of the rough-boarded rehearsal sheds at Tanglewood.

NOTED COMPOSER WITH STUDENTS — Aaron Copland (standing left) chats on the lawn with a few of his pupils in advanced composition. Copland, one of Ameri-

...ary of his birth. The ... concert on Aug. 15 will consist of that composer's mighty "Requiem," as a gesture in memory of Serge Koussevitzy, longtime conductor of the Tanglewood concerts, who died in 1951.

The viola soloist with Berlioz' symphony "Harold In Italy", on July 25, will be William Primrose. It is a far coincidence that Hawthorne

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood Fame Has Become Worldwide Within 2 Decades

18,000 Heard Concerts in '53

(Continued from Page D-1)

...ence as the audience for his ... Lennox Williams ... student. Eustace ... spinning fantastic ... Tanglewood Poets ... the "Wonder Book."

When Eustace was listing ... the authors, in one be... ...ies interlude, who ... to be found in that year ... within a small area of ... Berkshires. Primrose ... "Have we not an ... for our next neighbor? ... man, who lives in ... red house, near ... Avenue."

... was referring to ... himself, who led ... and rather un... life on those very ... and who did not ... he was creating the ... a world-renowned ... festival when he coined ... Tanglewood.

DISLIKED AREA

... Hawthorne connection ... been exploited aplenty in ... the festival, but ... its aspects. The fact ... the author's sojourn ... was a brief one ... 18 months in 1850-51), ... he didn't like it very ... He referred to the cot... ...where he lived as "the ... little old red farm... ...you ever saw"; com... ...that it was drafty and ... leaked; and wrote to ... in a particular fit of ...sion:

"I am sick to death of Berk... ...and hate to think of ...ing another winter here ... air and the climate do ...ree with my health at ..., I have felt languid ...spirited during almost ... residence here."

... it was a productive ...for him. He wrote "The ... of Seven Gables" while ...nox; put together his ...-Told Tales" from ... manuscripts; dashed ... "Wonder Book" for ..., and probably out... ...as sequel, "Tanglewood ...

...E TOWN IN UPROAR

...he age of 46, Haw... ...had come to the part... ...the ways with his na... ...wn of Salem, Mass. For ...ung, he had lost his ... job with the Salem ...s House, and needed ... For another, "The ... Letter" had just been ...ed, and "caused the ...t uproar that has han... ...ere since." ...wrote to a friend, "If I ...e from town without be... ...ared and feathered, ... consider it good luck." ...ed, "I wish they would ... feather enough would ...ch an entirely new ... of distinction for a ...y man."

...ing around for a ... in which to write, ...ast of the Berkshire... ...he had visited years ... —but which ... ...ed turned out ... ...chen, the farm ... ...ew by genteel Boston ... ...ch would soon ... ...neighborhood of his ... ...ge. Soon ... ...Boston ... ...Tappan ... ...ed ... ...ge ... ...ere ... ...ere ... ...since 1849.

'FROZEN MUSIC,' ALSO—Sculpture and painting are exhibited on the Tanglewood grounds. Here, in a corner of the hedged formal garden, is a wooden sculpture carved from California redwood by Homer Gunn of West Stockbridge, Mass. He calls it "Early Spring," and it symbolizes a plant unfolding. It is being admired by Jill Bengelsdorf of Newark, N. J., a harp student at Juilliard who is summering at the Berkshire Music Center.

MOVED TO LENOX

The tenant cottage being vacant, Mrs. Tappan proposed to Sophia Hawthorne that they come to Lenox and occupy the cottage rent-free, as an ideal place for her husband to write. With stiff pride, Hawthorne insisted he would accept no charity, and that they would pay at least a nominal rent. (There is no record that he ever paid it).

The Hawthornes, with their two children, Una and Julian, moved out to Lenox in the Spring of 1850. Sophia seems to have liked the place at once. In a letter, she described it: "We seem to have such a large house inside, though outside the little red thing looks like the smallest of 10-feet houses. Mr. Hawthorne says it looks like the Scarlet Letter".

Biographers agree that Hawthorne was in one of his "periodic retreats from reality" when he went to Lenox. He had begun to age. While "The Scarlet Letter" had just made him an overnight celebrity and started bringing in money, he recoiled from the social contacts it engendered.

RETREAT FROM LIFE

The first thing he did at Lenox was go to bed for several days, ostensibly with a bad cold, but more likely in hiding with a fit of low spirits. Mr. Tappan brought two men over to plow a field for him as he lay upstairs, and commented he was glad to hear it was a cold, because it proved Hawthorne was human.

In the Berkshires, Hawthorne found one kindred soul—Herman Melville. The deep and ardent friendship that flared up between these two authors, with Melville visiting frequently at the little red cottage while he was writing "Moby Dick" at nearby Arrowhead, is one facet of the Hawthorne legend which has been all but ignored in Tanglewood publicity. The stimulus of that friendship between two men who were in retreat from the world, and who shared a tragic vision of human life, helped Melville write a book greater than any Hawthorne ever did.

LEFT BENEFACTORS

Instead of mingling with his other cultured neighbors, Hawthorne raised chickens and climbed mountains and walked with his children. His third child, Rose, was born in the cottage. There are hints of some ill feeling between Hawthorne and his benefactors, the Tappans, in the neighboring big house. A question arose over the ownership of the apples from a certain tree. The Hawthornes moved out in November, 1851, and took a house in Concord, where he proceeded to give the name of Tanglewood further prestige with the book, "Tanglewood Tales".

It is not clear at just what juncture the Tappans adopted the name, Tanglewood, for the estate where Hawthorne had briefly been a tenant. The red cottage was destroyed by fire in 1890.

In 1947, the "little red house" was rebuilt on the site by the National Federation of Music Clubs as a gift to the Berkshire Festival. It was restored from old pictures, and is considerably idealized in its fresh neatness.

"Tanglewood" remained in the possession of the Tappan family until they gave it to the Boston Symphony in 1937. Its 210 acres centered about the fine big house facing down upon Lake Mahkeenac, which was completed in 1865 and is now used as administrative headquarters of the Berkshire Music Center.

Getting back to that original festival of 1934 on the Dan Hanna estate. A second festival was held on the same location in 1935, this time under a tent. The idea was catching hold. In 1936, the same tent and wooden orchestra-shell were used again, but this time in Stockbridge, at Hollywood, the estate of Mrs. Margaret Emerson. And a new orchestra did the playing. The festival committee had approached Serge Koussevitzky with an invitation for the Boston Symphony, of which he was conductor, to play the three concerts. Attendance leaped to 15,000 for the three.

ESTATE A GIFT

In February, 1937, the gift of the "Tanglewood" estate was made to the Boston Symphony by Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan, (a daughter of the original William A. Tappan), and her niece, Mrs. Gorham Brooks (later Mrs. Andrew Hepburn), of Boston.

A move was set afoot to raise funds by subscription for a permanent structure in which to give the concerts. Before it had made headway, the 1937 concert series was played again under a tent. The story has been told many times of that wild night of Aug. 12 when a violent thunderstorm broke upon an all-Wagner program, drowning out the music and drenching the audience. Koussevitzky stopped his orchestra more than once to wait for the storm to abate. When it refused to do so, he brought on the loudest of Wagnerian music—including the "Ride of the Valkyries"—and played in competition with the elements. A New York critic wrote: "No stage director had ever lavished such a setting on this wild music."

Next day, Koussevitzky announced there would be no future festivals without a permanent shelter. The storm lent impetus to the subscription drive, and the open-sided Music Shed was built and dedicated the following year.

With the exception of the war years, when gas rationing forced suspension of the concerts, Tanglewood's drawing power has grown steadily, and its programs have been accordingly augmented. This year, the "big concerts" in the Music Shed will total 12, as against last yeay's nine; and a new plan intersperses the so-called Bach-Mozart concerts (in the smaller theatre-concert hall), as well as a chamber music series, with them over the entire six weeks.

One of Koussevitzky's dreams when he became the Maestro of Tanglewood was to found a school in affiliation with it, where exceptionally talented young people could come and benefit from contact with music at its best. The dream was realized when the Berkshire Music Center was instituted in 1940. Today it has 400 pupils, who must meet rigid entrance requirements, and many of whom choose this way of spending their summer vacations from conservatories and colleges.

Amid the beauties of Tanglewood, they pass these enchanted weeks in an atmosphere supercharged with fine music and with great musical personalities. Among their teachers this summer, for instance, are Aaron Copland, the composer, who is assistant director of the Music Center (under Munch); Ernst Toch, another famous composer, who is guest-composer for 1954 (among past guest-composers, a new one each year, have been such as Samuel Barber and Darius Milhaud).

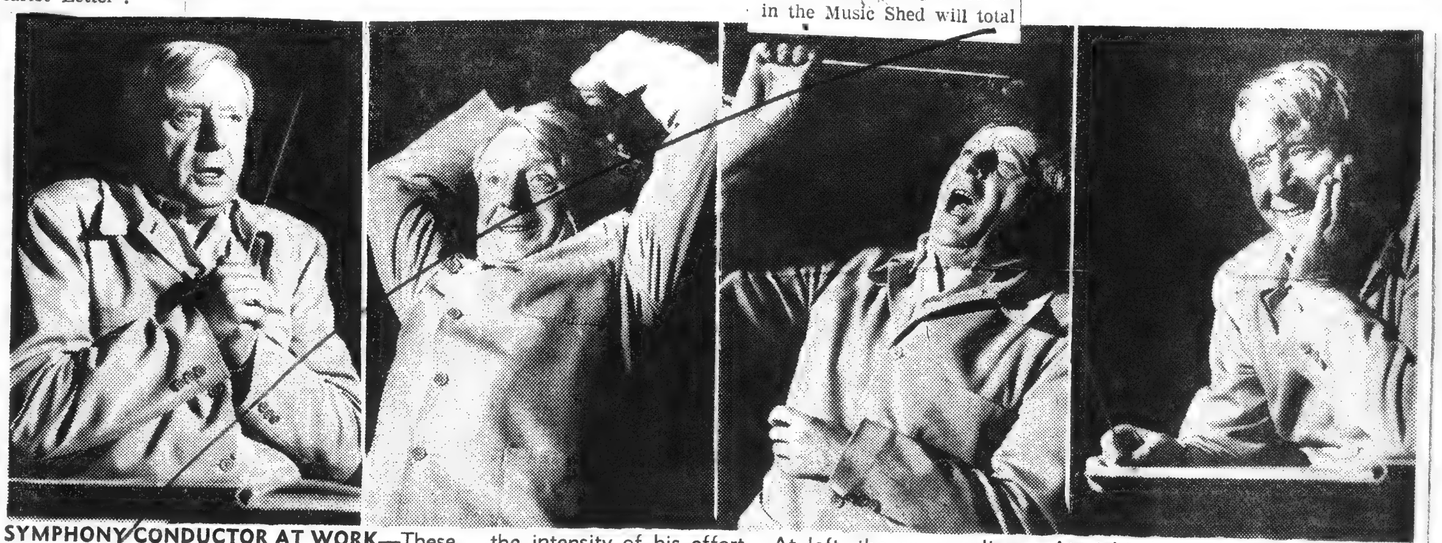
The operatic division is headed by Dr. Frederic Cohen, a goateed genius who is regularly in charge of the opera department of the Juilliard School. At present he is preparing his students to perform two modern operas, by the two illustrious composers now in residence at Tanglewood: "The Tender Land," by Aaron Copland; and "The Princess and the Pea," by Ernst Toch.

THE THIRD WEEK of the Berkshire Festival Concerts starts Wednesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. when three rarely-heard selections by Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini will be played by the Zimbler Sinfonietta. The performing group, founded by Joseph Zimbler, cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, consists of 21 players under Zimbler's direction.

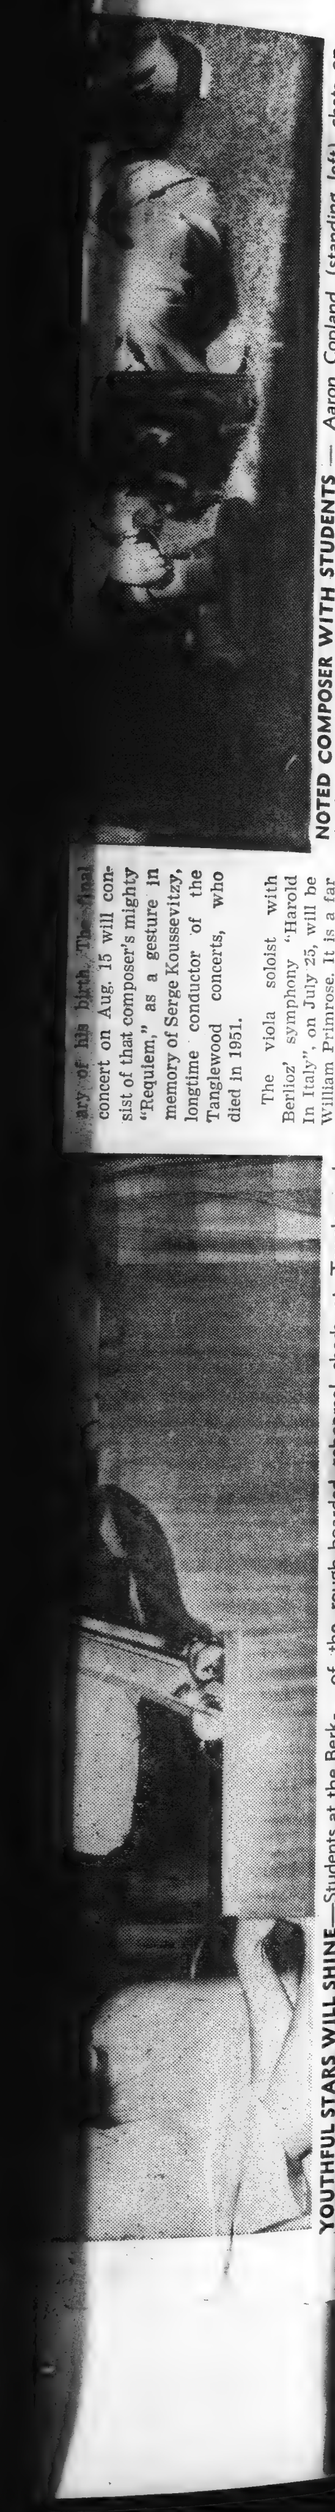
MUSIC DIRECTOR Charles Munch of the Festival will conduct a program of Handel and Haydn, including the Haydn Mass, led by Hugh Ross, choral director, in the Theater-Concert Hall Friday night, when chamber orchestra members of the Boston symphony participate. Next Saturday night, in the Music Shed, Guest Conductor Jean Morel will lead the full 104-piece orchestra with Nicole Henriot, piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, July 25, the concert program in the Music Shed will comprise Berlioz and Toch with William Primrose internationally known violist, as soloist.

This afternoon's Music Shed symphonic concert, by the Boston Symphony, will have Leo Smit as piano soloist in the Copland Piano Concerto. Charles Munch will conduct the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony" and Debussy's "Iberia." Last night, Pianist Vera Francheschi, was soloist with the Symphony, led by Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. The program comprised excerpts from Debussy's "St. Sebastian;" Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns,' for piano and Orchestra and the same composer's D Minor Symphony, and Debussy's "La Mar."

Nicole Henriot, young French pianist, will play with the Boston Symphony Orchestra next Saturday night in The Shed, "Tanglewood." Her selection the Liszt E Flat Concerto, Jean Morel conducting.



SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR AT WORK—These revealing candid-camera shots of Charles Munch rehearsing his Boston Orchestra for its Tanglewood concert series register graphically the intensity of his effort. At left, the conductor concentrates on a quiet passage of music. In next panel, he strives for a crescendo. Next, he fairly shouts for a crashing chord at the climax. At right, he smiles in obvious satisfaction at the result his great orchestra has given him. Munch has been regular conductor of the Tanglewood concerts since the death of Serge Koussevitzky in 1951.



YOUTHFUL STARS WILL SHINE—Students at the Berk- of the rough-boarded rehearsal sheds at Tanglewood, shire Music Center will present Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land", on Aug. 2 and 3. The camera caught Jeff Morris, of Lima, Ohio, a Princeton junior, and Beth Clement, 19, of Fremont, Ohio, a Smith sophomore, in a scene from left, is Eve Queler, 18, of Seattle, second from left, is Eve Queler, 18, of Seattle, Wash.

NOTED COMPOSER WITH STUDENTS — Aaron Copland (standing left) chats on the lawn with a few of his pupils in advanced composition. Copland, one of Ameri... ...is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center ... ...ary of his birth. The final ... concert on Aug. 15 will con... ...sist of that composer's mighty "Requiem," as a gesture in memory of Serge Koussevitzy, longtime conductor of the Tanglewood concerts, who died in 1951.

The viola soloist with Berlioz' symphony "Harold In Italy", on July 25, will be William Primrose. It is a far coincidence that Hawthorne ...

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood: Mecca for Music Lovers

July 19/54
Philadelphia Bulletin

By Max de Schauensee

ONE of the most characteristic traits of human nature is to become absorbed in that which immediately surrounds us, and to become unaware of things that are taking place just beyond the horizons we have unwittingly established.

It was with this thought in mind that your reported journeyed last weekend from the Robin Hood Dell and the chic little figure of Lily Pons to arrive at the Berkshire Festival, which takes place each summer at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Festival was the dreamchild of the late Serge Koussevitzky, then conductor of the redoubtable Boston Symphony, and while Mr. Koussevitzky has departed from our midst, it is still the Boston Symphony (now conducted by Charles Munch), which forms the nucleus and the backbone of what is without doubt the most important and distinguished of America's summer music festivals.

Lest Dell enthusiasts immediately raise a cry of protest, let it be firmly stated that the Dell concerts, like the stadium concerts in New York, and the Hollywood Bowl concerts in Hollywood, do not constitute a music festival, for which new works are commissioned, and where the approach is creative and intellectual.

Furthermore, this serious approach in contrast to one of pure enjoyment is further emphasized by the six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Munch is the director of the Music Center, surrounded by an impressive faculty headed by the distinguished American composer, Aaron Copland.

AT MUSIC FESTIVAL in Massachusetts. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in full summer dress, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

THE Tanglewood grounds in which the festival takes place provide a setting of great natural beauty with the ridges of the Berkshires stretching beyond a row of sable pine trees, while on the other side the New England countryside levels off through blue distances to Great Barrington and its evocative lake.

The grounds, with their hedge-bordered gardens, are generally studded with people — students eager to learn and absorb, college professors and their families up for a blending of intellectual pleasure and pure relaxation, figures of distinction and importance in the music world, and the trippers, whose chief reason for coming to Tanglewood is probably curiosity. However, this latter element is decidedly in the minority, for while enjoyment is a great and inevitable feature of the Tanglewood setup, make no mistake about it, most of the people up there are dead serious about music.

There are two outdoor but covered auditoriums, where the music is heard, the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall for more intimate programs, and the far larger Shed for the massive, big-scale occasions. There is generally an overflow from these buildings, and you will always find many people sitting or lying on blankets, devoutly following the music, from the many and spacious lawns of Tanglewood grounds.

Not only are the performers dedicated to an unusual degree, but so are the listeners, avid for knowledge, musical learning and solace.

IT was a pleasure to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on one of its home territories. Friday night the Theater-Concert Hall housed an all-Bach program, featuring five of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Brandenburg Concertos." It is unusual to hear five of these on one program.

Charles Munch was the conductor, displaying great vitality and a vigorous onward surge, which admitted of little variety of shading. In fact, the admired conductor could be charged with being heavy-handed at times.

Continued on Page 8, Col. 3

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 7

This was especially true of the third concerto in G Major, which seemed unnecessarily hard pressed. However, the peak of the evening was reached in a superb account of the final Concerto No. 5 in D Major, which featured Lukas Foss, the greatly gifted young pianist and composer, who is a familiar figure in Tanglewood events. Mr. Foss and Mr. Munch gave an enormously vital and contagiously spirited performance of this wonderful concerto. The enthusiasm of the audience was unbridled, doubtless generated by the unquestioned gratitude it felt.

SATURDAY night's music was transferred to the Shed, where a capacity audience, among whom I spied Pierre Monteux, Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, Aaron Copland, Jean Paul Morel and other distinguished musicians, gathered to hear Charles Munch conduct a complete performance of Hector Berlioz' tremendous oratorio-opera, "La Damnation de Faust."

This huge work, which calls for fullest orchestra, chorus, and four soloists of superior caliber, is all too rarely heard in America, though it is considered one of Berlioz's supreme achievements in France, where it is still a very vital part of the repertoire of the Paris Opera.

Where Mr. Munch was found occasionally wanting on the preceding night, in "La Damnation," which takes two hours and forty-five minutes to unravel, the French conductor found himself on the surest ground. His enthusiasm and sympathy for the score transformed what might have been an ordinary occasion into an event, an experience.

The Boston Symphony played in virtuoso fashion and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, found itself right on its mettle.

The role of Faust is the longest of the four and the most demanding. David Poleri, young Philadelphia tenor, sang the music most beautifully with a firm and flowing tone that was good to hear, and a French style not often found in Italian singers.

ELEANOR STEBER, regal in a white mink stole, has never sounded better than in Marguerite's two extended arias. Berlioz came much closer to Goethe than either Gounod or Boito in his musical depiction of the sorely-tried maiden.

Miss Steber sang her "Chanson Gothique" and her "D'amour, l'ardente flamme" with superb tone quality and just the right touch of dreamy listlessness and detachment.

Martial Singher was a capital Mephisto with the best, or rather the most authentic, style and diction of the evening. Berlioz penned some fascinating passages for Mephisto, including his cries of "Hop! . . . Hop!" during the lurid ride to Hell. Mr. Singher made the most of these striking moments.

Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander showed a fine and resonant voice and an impressive understanding of the French idiom.

Utterly arresting was the final chorus in which the damned sing in syllables said to have been invented by Swedenborg as a language used by demons in pandemonium—"Tradioun marexil firtrudinxe burrudixe . . . Has! Has! Satan! Has! Has! Belphegor!"

The enthusiasm of the huge audience seemed to know no bounds, as it brought Mr. Munch and his soloists out, again and again, and obliged Mr. Woodworth and his chorus to arise to their feet repeatedly.

Philadelphians would do well to investigate Tanglewood. A visit there will enrich their musical experience and broaden their horizons, even to the greater enjoyment of their own concerts here.

Tanglewood Influence Adds To 'Phone Calls

Pittsfield, July 19—The influences of the Tanglewood music festival are far-reaching. Guests, students and musicians with a desire to communicate with far-away homes have directly affected employees and activities of the telephone company.

Miss Marion Hickey, who as chief operator, bears primary responsibility for the handling of long-distance calls through Pittsfield, said this week that musicians and patrons at Tanglewood raise the volume of calls by more than 1000 a day. This is a jump of more than 12 per cent, she said.

"Eight girls have been temporarily transferred from North Adams and Greenfield," she reported, "and more are coming."

An additional move to handle the increased traffic has been the inauguration of a six-day week for more than 50 per cent of the regular staff.

"They're all volunteers," she said. "It's a lark for them. The company puts them up at the Sheraton and they're still close enough to their homes to visit on days off.

Statistics illustrated the difference in the operators' work load. In mid-October last year the daily average of long-distance calls was 500-700, Miss Hickey said. On Thursday and Friday of last week there were more than 8100 calls each day.

If it weren't for the slowing of industrial and commercial telephone traffic during mid-summer the company would have to expand its force of operators even more, Miss Hickey indicated.

"The busy hours," she aded," are from 9 to 11 in the morning and during the concert hours at night, with the flow especially heavy right after the concert."

NE, MONDAY, JULY 19, 1954

Berlioz Work Draws 7,700 At the Berkshire Festival

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., July 18.—The second week end of the Berkshire Festival brought the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch. A refreshing but partly cloudy afternoon attracted an audience of 7,700 and encouraged the management to believe that its new plan for this season is a wise and viable one.

Instead of three weeks of smaller ensemble concerts in the theater concert hall followed by three weeks of the entire orchestra playing in the Music Shed, there are Wednesday and Friday evenings in the concert hall and two concerts each of the six week ends in the Shed. Last night an audience of 8,500, including at least 3,000 on the adjacent grass on blankets, rugs and folding chairs in spite of the chill air, proved the wisdom of the new schedule.

Poignant Tone

Mr. Munch drew exquisitely poignant tone from his virtuoso orchestra in the "Parfums de La Nuit" from the Debussy Iberia. The surrounding movements were properly boisterous and gross so that the contrast of the central movement was all the more entrancing. In the Copland early Concerto for Piano the soloist was Leo Smit. He contributed to the general triumph of the performance, although the composer has given him scant oportunity to emerge above the tremendous orchestra for which he has written.

Mr. Copland, who is assistant dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by Koussevitzky in 1940 in connection with the festival concerts, was present in the audience and after the soloist and conductor had been recalled several times, the composer was called to the stage to share the enthusiasm the performance had excited. The slow lyric first part is luscious Hollywood. The second and more rhythmic section which follows without interruption, is pure and unalloyed jazz and Messrs. Smit and Munch caught its spirit and conveyed the infection to the large audience to its complete delight.

Monteux in Second Appearance

Last night Pierre Monteux, making the second of two guest appearances with the orchestra, brought fresh spirit and vitality to the Franck Symphony. He avoided pitfalls by picking up the tempo at a buoyant pace. He led with easy security and the orchestra played for him with its full palette of colors. He began his program with excerpts from Debussy's incidental music to Gabriele D'Annunzio's "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien" and after the Franck symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," again returned to Debussy, this time to "La Mer." For the Franck poem the piano soloist was Vera Franceschi who made the most of a not too rewarding assignment. She played with poise and eloquence and did not attempt to make more of the solo than it provided.

The wind sections of the orchestra played with admirable cohesion and tonal balance for Monteux in the "Saint-Sebastien," especially in the prelude to the first act in which the strings have only a minor part.

Two Give Song Recital

Yesterday afternoon a remarkable song recital by Leontyne Price and Samuel Barber at the piano was given in the Temple of Music on South Mountain in Pittsfield. Two of the four groups of songs were devoted to music of Mr. Barber, including his "Hermit Songs," commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and dedicated to Mrs. Coolidge. This concert, sponsored by the Coolidge foundation, was especially fitting fitting in the hall which "the lady bountiful of chamber music" had built at the time of the establishment of her famous Pittsfield music colony in 1918.

Miss Price sang an opening group of Handel and Mozart with majesty and with grace and tenderness.

Wide Range of Speculators

In addition to people who really need cars for themselves, there are a whole range of speculators.

"Certain comrades, apparently, intend to stay in the queue for the rest of their days. To do this they renew their name on the waiting list from time to time. Having got one car, these potential buyers then drive off in it, to put their name on the next waiting list."

What lies behind it, of course, is the shortage of cars. According to Leningrad Pravda, people will pay the new price for an old car that has done tens of thousands of miles and needs a radical overhaul. And for many the temptation of the situation has, as in less enlightened countries, proved too great.

Like "Capitalist Devils"

In the words of the newspaper: "The chance of driving into the pocket of one's neighbor and grabbing a few thousand rubles, or transferring to his account the cost of repairing a worn-out car without risk, has aroused in the hearts of certain people all the devils of the capitalist world."

The newspaper does not specify how the racket is managed, but it seems to be better organized than most things in the Soviet Union. The lack of risk seems to have caught the attention of the officials.

"The risk is indeed very small.

We were unable to attend opening exercises of the Music Center at Tanglewood last Sunday, in spite of many delightful associations we have enjoyed in the past with that annual event. Neither are we permitted to attend the opening concert in the Theater-Concert Hall this coming Sunday, when the Berkshire Festival season gets under way. However, it will not be until the Saturday, July 17 and the following Sunday that the Tanglewood season really gets into full swing with big concerts in the Music Shed.

It makes us restless to miss activities at Tanglewood, for until one year ago, we had hardly been absent from a single concert during its entire existence—our first associations with the project dating back to the days when concerts were held in a tent. It especially irked us to be absent on Sunday,

'HE PEARL,' sculpture of Carrara marble by Peter Abate is exhibit at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood. It has n placed to the south of the theater-concert hall entrance and will be shown throughout the season.

Eagle - July 17, 1954
[203]

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 8 - 1954

when he plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program. Incidentally, his appearance, with Monteux conducting will mark the 30th anniversary of his first appearance as a youth with that conductor.

The Bel Arte Trio began the evening's performance with an excellent performance of Beethoven's "String Trio in G major." Ruth Posselt was the violinist, Joseph De Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoherman, cellist.

The Friday night program will present the Brandenburg Concertos in an all-Bach program with Lukas Foss as the pianist and Charles Munch conducting.

S. K.

Arrau Gives Inspired Performance

(Special To The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 8 —The annual trek of thousands of music lovers from all parts of the country to Tanglewood, that delightful musical mecca in the Berkshires, began last night when an overflow audience of 1,500 gathered in the theater-concert hall to hear one of the most rewarding piano performances it has been our pleasure to experience.

The bravos that greeted Claudio Arrau at the conclusion of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata were justly deserved. Mr. Arrau had given an inspired performance in which he made the piano perform as we have seldom heard it with the possible exception of Artur Rubenstein. He performed with the utmost of vigor and delicacy. He drew from the instrument such sounds as we had almost forgotten it was capable of producing.

And this Claudio Arrau did after two equally brilliant performances in the Beethoven sonatas, "F sharp major," and "A Flat major", played during the first half of the program. He has improved considerably since we heard him here last. Tanglewood audiences on Sunday afternoon will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Arrau again

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood: Mecca for Music Lovers

July 18/54 Philadelphia Bulletin

By Max de Schauensee

ONE of the most characteristic traits of human nature is to become absorbed in that which immediately surrounds us, and to become unaware of things that are taking place just beyond the horizons we have unwittingly established.

It was with this thought in mind that your reported journeyed last weekend from the Robin Hood Dell and the chic little figure of Lily Pons to arrive at the Berkshire Festival, which takes place each summer at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Festival was the dreamchild of the late Serge Koussevitzky, then conductor of the redoubtable Boston Symphony, and while Mr. Koussevitzky has departed from our midst, it is still the Boston Symphony (now conducted by Charles Munch), which forms the nucleus and the backbone of what is without doubt the most important and distinguished of America's summer music festivals.

Lest Dell enthusiasts immediately raise a cry of protest, let it be firmly stated that the Dell concerts, like the stadium concerts in New York, and the Hollywood Bowl concerts in Hollywood, do not constitute a music festival, for which new works are commissioned, and where the approach is creative and intellectual.

Furthermore, this serious approach in contrast to one of pure enjoyment is further emphasized by the six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Munch is the director of the Music Center, surrounded by an impressive faculty headed by the distinguished American composer, Aaron Copland.

AT MUSIC FESTIVAL in Massachusetts. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in full summer dress, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

THE Tanglewood grounds in which the festival takes place provide a setting of great natural beauty with the ridges of the Berkshires stretching beyond a row of sable pine trees, while on the other side the New England countryside levels off through blue distances to Great Barrington and its evocative lake.

The grounds, with their hedge-bordered gardens, are generally studded with people — students eager to learn and absorb, college professors and their families up for a blending of intellectual pleasure and pure relaxation, figures of distinction and importance in the music world, and the trippers, whose chief reason for coming to Tanglewood is probably curiosity. However, this latter element is decidedly in the minority, for while enjoyment is a great and inevitable feature of the Tanglewood setup, make no mistake about it, most of the people up there are dead serious about music.

There are two outdoor but covered auditoriums, where the music is heard, the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall for more intimate programs, and the far larger Shed for the massive, big-scale occasions. There is generally an overflow from these buildings, and you will always find many people sitting or lying on blankets, devoutly following the music, from the many and spacious lawns of Tanglewood grounds.

Not only are the performers dedicated to an unusual degree, but so are the listeners, avid for knowledge, musical learning and solace.

IT was a pleasure to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on one of its home territories. Friday night the Theater-Concert Hall housed an all-Bach program, featuring five of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Brandenburg Concertos." It is unusual to hear five of these on one program.

Charles Munch was the conductor, displaying great vitality and a vigorous onward surge, which admitted of little variety of shading. In fact, the admired conductor could be charged with being heavy-handed at times.

Continued on Page 8, Col. 3

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 7

This was especially true of the third concerto in G Major, which seemed unnecessarily hard pressed. However, the peak of the evening was reached in a superb account of the final Concerto No. 5 in D Major, which featured Lukas Foss, the greatly gifted young pianist and composer, who is a familiar figure in Tanglewood events. Mr. Foss and Mr. Munch gave an enormously vital and contagiously spirited performance of this wonderful concerto. The enthusiasm of the audience was unbridled, doubtless generated by the unquestioned gratitude it felt.

SATURDAY night's music was transferred to the Shed, where a capacity audience, among whom I spied Pierre Monteux, Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, Aaron Copland, Jean Paul Morel and other distinguished musicians, gathered to hear Charles Munch conduct a complete performance of Hector Berlioz' tremendous oratorio-opera, "La Damnation de Faust."

This huge work, which calls for fullest orchestra, chorus, and four soloists of superior caliber, is all too rarely heard in America, though it is considered one of Berlioz's supreme achievements in France, where it is still a very vital part of the repertoire of the Paris Opera.

Where Mr. Munch was found occasionally wanting on the preceding night, in "La Damnation," which takes two hours and forty-five minutes to unravel, the French conductor found himself on the surest ground. His enthusiasm and sympathy for the score transformed what might have been an ordinary occasion into an event, an experience.

The Boston Symphony played in virtuoso fashion and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, found itself right on its mettle.

The role of Faust is the longest of the four and the most demanding. David Poleri, young Philadelphia tenor, sang the music most beautifully with a firm and flowing tone that was good to hear, and a French style not often found in Italian singers.

ELEANOR STEBER, regal in a white mink stole, has never sounded better than in Marguerite's two extended arias. Berlioz came much closer to Goethe than either Gounod or Boito in his musical depiction of the sorely-tried maiden.

Miss Steber sang her "Chanson Gothique" and her "D'amour, l'ardente flamme" with superb tone quality and just the right touch of dreamy listlessness and detachment.

Martial Singher was a capital Mephisto with the best, or rather the most authentic, style and diction of the evening. Berlioz penned some fascinating passages for Mephisto, including his cries of "Hop! . . . Hop!" during the lurid ride to Hell. Mr. Singher made the most of these striking moments.

Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander showed a fine and resonant voice and an impressive understanding of the French idiom.

Utterly arresting was the final chorus in which the damned sing in syllables said to have been invented by Swedenborg as a language used by demons in pandemonium—"Tradioun marexil firtrudinxe burrudixe . . . Has! Has! Satan! Has! Has! Belphegor!"

The enthusiasm of the huge audience seemed to know no bounds, as it brought Mr. Munch and his soloists out, again and again, and obliged Mr. Woodworth and his chorus to arise to their feet repeatedly.

Philadelphians would do well to investigate Tanglewood. A visit there will enrich their musical experience and broaden their horizons, even to the greater enjoyment of their own concerts here.

Tanglewood Influence Adds To 'Phone Calls

Pittsfield, July 19 The influences of the Tanglewood music festival are far-reaching. Guests, students and musicians with a desire to communicate with far-away homes have directly affected employees and activities of the telephone company.

Miss Marion Hickey, who as chief operator, bears primary responsibility for the handling of long-distance calls through Pittsfield, said this week that musicians and patrons at Tanglewood raise the volume of calls by more than 1000 a day. This is a jump of more than 12 per cent, she said.

"Eight girls have been temporarily transferred from North Adams and Greenfield," she reported, "and more are coming."

An additional move to handle the increased traffic has been the inauguration of a six-day week for more than 50 per cent of the regular staff.

"They're all volunteers," she said. "It's a lark for them. The company puts them up at the Sheraton and they're still close enough to their homes to visit on days off.

Statistics illustrated the difference in the operators' work load. In mid-October last year the daily average of long-distance calls was 500-700, Miss Hickey said. On Thursday and Friday of last week there were more than 8100 calls each day.

If it weren't for the slowing of industrial and commercial telephone traffic during mid-summer the company would have to expand its force of operators even more, Miss Hickey indicated.

"The busy hours," she added, are from 9 to 11 in the morning and during the concert hours at night, with the flow especially heavy right after the concert."

NE, MONDAY, JULY 19, 1954

Berlioz Work Draws 7,700 At the Berkshire Festival

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., July 18.—The second week end of the Berkshire Festival brought the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch. A refreshing but partly cloudy afternoon attracted an audience of 7,700 and encouraged the management to believe that its new plan for this season is a wise and viable one.

Instead of three weeks of smaller ensemble concerts in the theater concert hall followed by three weeks of the entire orchestra playing in the Music Shed, there are Wednesday and Friday evenings in the concert hall and two concerts each of the six week ends in the Shed. Last night an audience of 8,500, including at least 3,000 on the adjacent grass on blankets, rugs and folding chairs in spite of the chill air, proved the wisdom of the new schedule.

Poignant Tone

Mr. Munch drew exquisitely poignant tone from his virtuoso orchestra in the "Parfums de La Nuit" from the Debussy Iberia. The surrounding movements were properly boisterous and gross so that the contrast of the central movement was all the more entrancing. In the Copland early Concerto for Piano the soloist was Leo Smit. He contributed to the general triumph of the performance, although the composer has given him scant oportunity to emerge above the tremendous orchestra for which he has written.

Mr. Copland, who is assistant dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by Koussevitzky in 1940 in connection with the festival concerts, was present in the audience and after the soloist and conductor had been recalled several times, the composer was called to the stage to share the enthusiasm the performance had excited. The slow lyric first part is luscious Hollywood. The second and more rhythmic section which follows without interruption, is pure and unalloyed jazz and Messrs. Smit and Munch caught its spirit and conveyed the infection to the large audience to its complete delight.

Monteux in Second Appearance

Last night Pierre Monteux, making the second of two guest appearances with the orchestra, brought fresh spirit and vitality to the Franck Symphony. He avoided pitfalls by picking up the tempo at a buoyant pace. He led with easy security and the orchestra played for him with its full palette of colors. He began his program with excerpts from Debussy's incidental music to Gabriele D'Annunzio's "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien" and after the Franck symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," again returned to Debussy, this time to "La Mer." For the Franck poem the piano soloist was Vera Franceschi who made the most of a not too rewarding assignment. She played with poise and eloquence and did not attempt to make more of the solo than it provided.

The wind sections of the orchestra played with admirable cohesion and tonal balance for Monteux in the "Saint-Sebastien," especially in the prelude to the first act in which the strings have only a minor part.

Two Give Song Recital

Yesterday afternoon a remarkable song recital by Leontyne Price and Samuel Barber at the piano was given in the Temple of Music on South Mountain in Pittsfield. Two of the four groups of songs were devoted to music of Mr. Barber, including his "Hermit Songs," commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and dedicated to Mrs. Coolidge. This concert, sponsored by the Coolidge foundation, was especially fitting fitting in the hall which "the lady bountiful of chamber music" had built at the time of the establishment of her famous Pittsfield music colony in 1918.

Miss Price sang an opening group of Handel and Mozart with majesty and with grace and tenderness.

WATERBURY, CONN. AMERICAN

JUL 8 - 1954

Arrau Gives Inspired Performance

(Special To The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 8 —The annual trek of thousands of music lovers from all parts of the country to Tanglewood, that delightful musical mecca in the Berkshires, began last night when an overflow audience of 1,500 gathered in the theater-concert hall to hear one of the most rewarding piano performances it has been our pleasure to experience.

The bravos that greeted Claudio Arrau at the conclusion of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata were justly deserved. Mr. Arrau had given an inspired performance in which he made the piano perform as we have seldom heard it with the possible exception of Artur Rubenstein. He performed with the utmost of vigor and delicacy. He drew from the instrument such sounds as we had almost forgotten it was capable of producing.

And this Claudio Arrau did after two equally brilliant performances in the Beethoven sonatas, "F sharp major," and "A Flat major", played during the first half of the program. He has improved considerably since we heard him here last. Tanglewood audiences on Sunday afternoon will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Arrau again when he plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program. Incidentally, his appearance, with Monteux conducting will mark the 30th anniversary of his first appearance as a youth with that conductor.

The Bel Arte Trio began the evening's performance with an excellent performance of Beethoven's "String Trio in G major." Ruth Posselt was the violinist, Joseph De Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoberman, cellist.

The Friday night program will present the Brandenburg Concertos in an all-Bach program with Lukas Foss as the pianist and Charles Munch conducting.

S. M.

Wide Range of Speculators

In addition to people who really need cars for themselves, there are a whole range of speculators.

"Certain comrades, apparently, intend to stay in the queue for the rest of their days. To do this they renew their name on the waiting list from time to time. Having got one car, these vocational buyers then drive off in it, to put their name on the next waiting list."

What lies behind it, of course, is the shortage of cars. According to Leningrad Pravda, people will pay the new price for an old car that has done tens of thousands of miles and needs a radical overhaul. And for many the temptation of the situation has, as in less enlightened countries, proved too great.

Like 'Capitalist Devils'

In the words of the newspaper: "The chance of driving into the pocket of one's neighbor and grabbing a few thousand rubles, or transferring to his account the cost of repairing a worn-out car without risk, has aroused in the hearts of certain people all the devils of the capitalist world."

The newspaper does not specify how the racket is managed, but it seems to be better organized than most things in the Soviet Union. The lack of risk seems to have caught the attention of the officials.

"The risk is indeed very small.

We were unable to attend opening exercises of the Music Center at Tanglewood last Sunday, in spite of many delightful associations we have enjoyed in the past with that annual event. Neither are we permitted to attend the opening concert in the Theater-Concert Hall this coming Sunday, when the Berkshire Festival season gets under w[illegible]ever, it will not be until the Saturday, July 17 and the following Sunday that the Tanglewood season really gets into full swing with big concerts in the Music Shed.

It makes us restless to miss activities at Tanglewood, for until one year ago, we had hardly been absent from a single concert during its entire existence—our first associations with the project dating back to the days when concerts were held in a tent. It especially irked us to be absent on Sunday,

HE PEARL,' sculpture of Carrara marble by Peter Abate is exhibit at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood. It has n placed to the south of the theater-concert hall entrance and will be shown throughout the season.

Eagle - July 17, 1954

[203]

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood: Mecca for Music Lovers

July 18/54
Philadelphia Bulletin

By Max de Schauensee

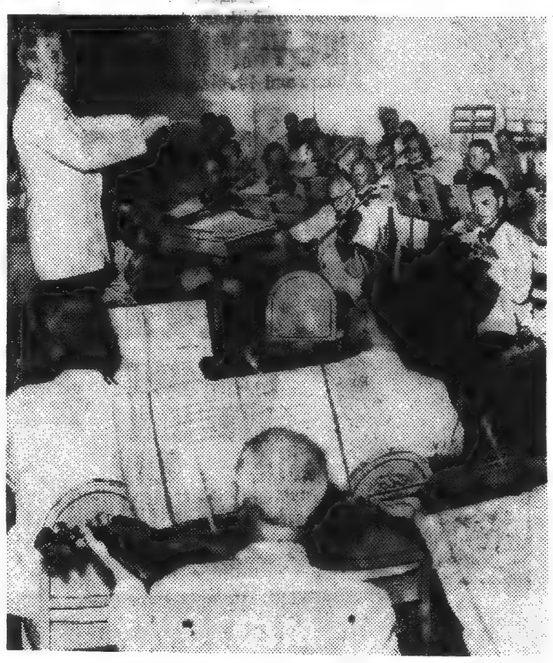
ONE of the most characteristic traits of human nature is to become absorbed in that which immediately surrounds us, and to become unaware of things that are taking place just beyond the horizons we have unwittingly established.

It was with this thought in mind that your reported journeyed last weekend from the Robin Hood Dell and the chic little figure of Lily Pons to arrive at the Berkshire Festival, which takes place each summer at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Festival was the dreamchild of the late Serge Koussevitzky, then conductor of the redoubtable Boston Symphony, and while Mr. Koussevitzky has departed from our midst, it is still the Boston Symphony (now conducted by Charles Munch), which forms the nucleus and the backbone of what is without doubt the most important and distinguished of America's summer music festivals.

Lest Dell enthusiasts immediately raise a cry of protest, let it be firmly stated that the Dell concerts, like the stadium concerts in New York, and the Hollywood Bowl concerts in Hollywood, do not constitute a music festival, for which new works are commissioned, and where the approach is creative and intellectual.

Furthermore, this serious approach in contrast to one of pure enjoyment is further emphasized by the six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Festival concerts. Mr. Munch is the director of the Music Center, surrounded by an impressive faculty headed by the distinguished American composer, Aaron Copland.



AT MUSIC FESTIVAL in Massachusetts, Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in full summer dress, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

THE Tanglewood grounds in which the festival takes place provide a setting of great natural beauty with the ridges of the Berkshires stretching beyond a row of sable pine trees, while on the other side the New England countryside levels off through blue distances to Great Barrington and its evocative lake.

The grounds, with their hedge-bordered gardens, are generally studded with people — students eager to learn and absorb, college professors and their families up for a blending of intellectual pleasure and pure relaxation, figures of distinction and importance in the music world, and the trippers, whose chief reason for coming to Tanglewood is probably curiosity. However, this latter element is decidedly in the minority, for while enjoyment is a great and inevitable feature of the Tanglewood setup, make no mistake about it, most of the people up there are dead serious about music.

There are two outdoor but covered auditoriums, where the music is heard, the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall for more intimate programs, and the far larger Shed for the massive, big-scale occasions. There is generally an overflow from these buildings, and you will always find many people sitting or lying on blankets, devoutly following the music, from the many and spacious lawns of Tanglewood grounds.

Not only are the performers dedicated to an unusual degree, but so are the listeners, avid for knowledge, musical learning and solace.

IT was a pleasure to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra on one of its home territories. Friday night the Theater-Concert Hall housed an all-Bach program, featuring five of Johann Sebastian Bach's "Brandenburg Concertos." It is unusual to hear five of these on one program.

Charles Munch was the conductor, displaying great vitality and a vigorous onward surge, which admitted of little variety of shading. In fact, the admired conductor could be charged with being heavy-handed at times.

Continued on Page 8, Col. 3

Tanglewood

Continued From Page 1

This was especially true of the third concerto in G Major, which seemed unnecessarily hard pressed. However, the peak of the evening was reached in a superb account of the final Concerto No. 5 in D Major, which featured Lukas Foss, the greatly gifted young pianist and composer, who is a familiar figure in Tanglewood events. Mr. Foss and Mr. Munch gave an enormously vital and contagiously spirited performance of this wonderful concerto. The enthusiasm of the audience was unbridled, doubtless generated by the unquestioned gratitude it felt.

SATURDAY night's music was transferred to the Shed, where a capacity audience, among whom I spied Pierre Monteux, Claudio Arrau, Lukas Foss, Gregor Piatigorsky, Aaron Copland, Jean Paul Morel and other distinguished musicians, gathered to hear Charles Munch conduct a complete performance of Hector Berlioz' tremendous oratorio-opera, "La Damnation de Faust."

This huge work, which calls for fullest orchestra, chorus, and four soloists of superior caliber, is all too rarely heard in America, though it is considered one of Berlioz's supreme achievements in France, where it is still a very vital part of the repertoire of the Paris Opera.

Where Mr. Munch was found occasionally wanting on the preceding night, in "La Damnation," which takes two hours and forty-five minutes to unravel, the French conductor found himself on the surest ground. His enthusiasm and sympathy for the score transformed what might have been an ordinary occasion into an event, an experience.

The Boston Symphony played in virtuoso fashion and the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, found itself right on its mettle.

The role of Faust is the longest of the four and the most demanding. David Poleri, young Philadelphia tenor, sang the music most beautifully with a firm and flowing tone that was good to hear, and a French style not often found in Italian singers.

ELEANOR STEBER, regal in a white mink stole, has never sounded better than in Marguerite's two extended arias. Berlioz came much closer to Goethe than either Gounod or Boito in his musical depiction of the sorely-tried maiden.

Miss Steber sang her "Chanson Gothique" and her "D'amour, l'ardente flamme" with superb tone quality and just the right touch of dreamy listlessness and detachment.

Martial Singher was a capital Mephisto with the best, or rather the most authentic, style and diction of the evening. Berlioz penned some fascinating passages for Mephisto, including his cries of "Hop! . . . Hop!" during the lurid ride to Hell. Mr. Singher made the most of these striking moments.

Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander showed a fine and resonant voice and an impressive understanding of the French idiom.

Utterly arresting was the final chorus in which the damned sing in syllables said to have been invented by Swedenborg as a language used by demons in pandemonium—"Tradioun marexil firtrudinxe burrudixe . . . Has! Has! Satan! Has! Has! Belphegor!"

The enthusiasm of the huge audience seemed to know no bounds, as it brought Mr. Munch and his soloists out, again and again, and obliged Mr. Woodworth and his chorus to arise to their feet repeatedly.

Philadelphians would do well to investigate Tanglewood. A visit there will enrich their musical experience and broaden their horizons, even to the greater enjoyment of their own concerts here.

Tanglewood Influence Adds To 'Phone Calls

Pittsfield, July 19 The influences of the Tanglewood music festival are far-reaching. Guests, students and musicians with a desire to communicate with far-away homes have directly affected employees and activities of the telephone company.

Miss Marion Hickey, who as chief operator, bears primary responsibility for the handling of long-distance calls through Pittsfield, said this week that musicians and patrons at Tanglewood raise the volume of calls by more than 1000 a day. This is a jump of more than 12 per cent, she said.

"Eight girls have been temporarily transferred from North Adams and Greenfield," she reported, "and more are coming."

An additional move to handle the increased traffic has been the inauguration of a six-day week for more than 50 per cent of the regular staff.

"They're all volunteers," she said. "It's a lark for them. The company puts them up at the Sheraton and they're still close enough to their homes to visit on days off.

Statistics illustrated the difference in the operators' work load. In mid-October last year the daily average of long-distance calls was 500-700, Miss Hickey said. On Thursday and Friday of last week there were more than 8100 calls each day.

If it weren't for the slowing of industrial and commercial telephone traffic during mid-summer the company would have to expand its force of operators even more, Miss Hickey indicated.

"The busy hours," she added, are from 9 to 11 in the morning and during the concert hours at night, with the flow especially heavy right after the concert."

NE, MONDAY, JULY 19, 1954

Berlioz Work Draws 7,700 At the Berkshire Festival

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., July 18.—The second week end of the Berkshire Festival brought the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch. A refreshing but partly cloudy afternoon attracted an audience of 7,700 and encouraged the management to believe that its new plan for this season is a wise and viable one.

Instead of three weeks of smaller ensemble concerts in the theater concert hall followed by three weeks of the entire orchestra playing in the Music Shed, there are Wednesday and Friday evenings in the concert hall and two concerts each of the six week ends in the Shed. Last night an audience of 8,500, including at least 3,000 on the adjacent grass on blankets, rugs and folding chairs in spite of the chill air, proved the wisdom of the new schedule.

Poignant Tone

Mr. Munch drew exquisitely poignant tone from his virtuoso orchestra in the "Parfums de La Nuit" from the Debussy Iberia. The surrounding movements were properly boisterous and gross so that the contrast of the central movement was all the more entrancing. In the Copland early Concerto for Piano the soloist was Leo Smit. He contributed to the general triumph of the performance, although the composer has given him scant oportunity to emerge above the tremendous orchestra for which he has written.

Mr. Copland, who is assistant dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by Koussevitzky in 1940 in connection with the festival concerts, was present in the audience and after the soloist and conductor had been recalled several times, the composer was called to the stage to share the enthusiasm the performance had excited. The slow lyric first part is luscious Hollywood. The second and more rhythmic section which follows without interruption, is pure and unalloyed jazz and Messrs. Smit and Munch caught its spirit and conveyed the infection to the large audience to its complete delight.

Monteux in Second Appearance

Last night Pierre Monteux, making the second of two guest appearances with the orchestra, brought fresh spirit and vitality to the Franck Symphony. He avoided pitfalls by picking up the tempo at a buoyant pace. He led with easy security and the orchestra played for him with its full palette of colors. He began his program with excerpts from Debussy's incidental music to Gabriele D'Annunzio's "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien" and after the Franck symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," again returned to Debussy, this time to "La Mer." For the Franck poem the piano soloist was Vera Franceschi who made the most of a not too rewarding assignment. She played with poise and eloquence and did not attempt to make more of the solo than it provided.

The wind sections of the orchestra played with admirable cohesion and tonal balance for Monteux in the "Saint-Sebastien," especially in the prelude to the first act in which the strings have only a minor part.

Two Give Song Recital

Yesterday afternoon a remarkable song recital by Leontyne Price and Samuel Barber at the piano was given in the Temple of Music on South Mountain in Pittsfield. Two of the four groups of songs were devoted to music of Mr. Barber, including his "Hermit Songs," commissioned by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and dedicated to Mrs. Coolidge. This concert, sponsored by the Coolidge foundation, was especially fitting fitting in the hall which "the lady bountiful of chamber music" had built at the time of the establishment of her famous Pittsfield music colony in 1918.

Miss Price sang an opening group of Handel and Mozart with majesty and with grace and tenderness.

'THE PEARL,' sculpture of Carrara marble by Peter Abate is on exhibit at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood. It has been placed to the south of the theater-concert hall entrance and will be shown throughout the season.

Eagle - July 17, 1954
[203]

Wide Range of Speculators

In addition to people who really need cars for themselves, there are a whole range of speculators.

"Certain comrades, apparently, intend to stay in the queue for the rest of their days. To do this they renew their name on the waiting list from time to time. Having got one car, these vocational buyers then drive off in it, to put their name on the next waiting list."

What lies behind it, of course, is the shortage of cars. According to Leningrad Pravda, people will pay the new price for an old car that has done tens of thousands of miles and needs a radical overhaul. And for many the temptation of the situation has, as in less enlightened countries, proved too great.

Like "Capitalist Devils"

In the words of the newspaper: "The chance of driving into the pocket of one's neighbor and [illegible] ing a few thousand rub[illegible] transferring to his accou[illegible] of repairing a worn-o[illegible] ever] risk, has aroused [illegible] certain people [illegible] capitalist w[illegible] The n[illegible] how t[illegible] seems [illegible] most thi[illegible] The lack [illegible] aught the [illegible] als.

"The risk is [illegible]

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 8 - 1954

Arrau Gives Inspired Performance

(Special To The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 8 —The annual trek of thousands of music lovers from all parts of the country to Tanglewood, that delightful musical mecca in the Berkshires, began last night when an overflow audience of 1,500 gathered in the theater-concert hall to hear one of the most rewarding piano performances it has been our pleasure to experience.

The bravos that greeted Claudio Arrau at the conclusion of Beethoven's "Appassionata" sonata were justly deserved. Mr. Arrau had given an inspired performance in which he made the piano perform as we have seldom heard it with the possible exception of Artur Rubenstein. He performed with the utmost of vigor and delicacy. He drew from the instrument such sounds as we had almost forgotten it was capable of producing.

And this Claudio Arrau did after two equally brilliant performances in the Beethoven sonatas, "F sharp major," and "A Flat major", played during the first half of the program. He has improved considerably since we heard him here last. Tanglewood audiences on Sunday afternoon will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Arrau again when he plays with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Beethoven program. Incidentally, his appearance, with Monteux conducting will mark the 30th anniversary of his first appearance as a youth with that conductor.

The Bel Arte Trio began the evening's performance with an excellent performance of Beethoven's "String Trio in G major." Ruth Posselt was the violinist, Joseph De Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoberman, cellist.

The Friday night program will present the Brandenburg Concertos in an all-Bach program with Lukas Foss as the pianist and Charles Munch conducting.

S. M.

We were unable to attend opening exercises of the Music Center a Tanglewood last Sunday, in spite of many delightful associations we have enjoyed in the past with that annual event. Neither are we permitted to attend the opening concert in the Theater-Concert Hall this coming Sunday, when the Berkshire Festival season gets under w[illegible] However, it will not be until the Saturday, July 17 and the following Sunday that the Tanglewood season really gets into full swing with big concerts in the Music Shed.

It makes us restless to miss activities at Tanglewood, for until one year ago, we had hardly been absent from a single concert during its entire existence—our first associations with the project dating back to the days when concerts were held in a tent. It especially irked us to be absent on Sunday,

INFORMATION OBSCURED

Silence in Musical Audiences Must Be Developed, Says Foss

LENOX—One way to develop better listening audiences for music is to give the public more silence, Lukas Foss, composer, conductor and pianist at Tanglewood, told a group here last night.

Mr. Foss made the observation in agreement with Allyn Ferguson, a Tanglewood student-composer, in a forum discussion held at Sedgwick Hall of the Lenox Library. Subject of the discussion was "How can we develop an alert musical public."

Aaron Copland, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, was moderator of the forum, one of a series held annually at the library. An estimated 275 attended. Besides Mr. Foss and Mr. Ferguson, other speakers were Karl Kohn of the Tanglewood faculty and Richard Maxfield, student-composer.

One reason for non-alert music audiences, Mr. Foss noted, is that people are virtually taught nowday how not to listen to music. Background music has become almost standard equipment in restaurants, hotels and other public places, he said.

Must Rediscover Silence

"We must rediscover the silence out of which music is born. Silence is to music what the earth is to flowers and trees."

Mr. Foss also spoke of the need for more general culture in the listening public and more convincing and imaginative performances by musicians to increase audience alertness.

He minimized the value of what he called "surface teaching" of music to more people as a way to make them better listeners.

"Surface teaching breeds half knowledge, he observed, "like that of critics." People with a little knowledge of harmony might think it is the harmony they like in a performance when it's really the orchestration that they enjoy—or vice versa.

Or is learning about the lives of composers likely to make better listeners, Mr. Foss said.

"Sometimes the less you know about a person the better. Some people have told me they liked my music better before an acquaintance with me got in the way."

Alert Listening Important

Mr. Ferguson, first speaker on the panel to recommend more silence, also observed that people would be better listeners if they were more willing to "stick their necks out" and criticize music. In order to do this, he said, they would have to listen more alertly.

Another reason for inattentive audiences, according to Mr. Ferguson, is the fashion of being bored. It is not fashionable anymore to be emotional about music, so people are either bored by it or listen with passive resistance. As a result, he said, a composer or performer never knows whether his audience likes him or not. There is not enough response to music — good or bad.

Mr. Kohn spoke on the value of making more people performers in music—thus making them more alert listeners. The teaching of music should begin with the very young, he said, as that is when it is easiest to learn.

Mr. Maxfield observed that people would be better listeners if music did not encourage them to sit back and day dream. He said composers should get away from emotional verbiage in music and get back to music of simplicity and economy of means.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM

JUL 11 1954

Festival Concerts Begin This Weekend

THIS WEEKEND the world-famous Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood begins its series of concerts in the huge Music Shed. During its 15th season the Festival will pay tribute to the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz in performing several of his major works. Many other noteworthy musical events are scheduled in the six-week season, and a visit to the Festival is a must for many local music-lovers.

Tanglewood is located between Stockbridge and Lenox in the lovely Berkshire country of Western Massachusetts. It makes an ideal setting for Summer music, and the concert season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood has a picturesque location that adds to the pleasure of attending the Festival.

The concert series comprise six Wednesday evening concerts by famous chamber music ensembles; six Friday evening concerts of music by Bach and Mozart performed by the chamber section of the orchestra; and six pairs of weekend concerts by the full orchestra in the Music Shed on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons. Charles Munch will conduct, with two concerts led by Pierre Monteux, one by Richard Burgin, concert-master of the orchestra, and one by Jean Morel, head of the orchestra department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Eagle-July 20 City Edition

Zimbler To Lead Sinfonietta At Festival Tomorrow Night

TANGLEWOOD — Twenty-one Boston Symphony Orchestra members, playing historical stringed instruments valued at $90,000, make up the Zimbler Sinfonietta scheduled to appear at the third of the new chamber music concert series here tomorrow night at 8:30. The Berkshire Festival concert will be given in the theater-concert hall with Josef Zimbler, founder and music director of the Sinfonietta conducting.

Josef Zimbler

A member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's cello section, Mr. Zimbler came to America from Czechoslovakia to join the orchestra in 1934. He first organized the Zimbler String Quartet and in 1945 expanded his group into the Sinfonietta in order to commission and perform new and seldom-heard works written for chamber orchestra.

Zazofsky Concertmaster

George Zazofsky, graduate of Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music and member of the Boston Symphony since 1941, is concertmaster of the Sinfonietta, with Emil Kornsand as assistant concertmaster. Mr. Kornsand joined the BSO in 1939 after playing under Toscanini in the NBC orchestra and 15 years as a member of the Berlin State Opera orchestra. Two first-chair men of the Boston Symphony also play in the Sinonietta, principal violist, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes, the first cellist.

For the past five seasons the Sinfonietta has given an annual series of three concerts with prominent soloists in Boston's Jordan Hall. Other concert invitations, including a request to perform at the Berliner Festwochen in West Berlin, are constantly coming to the group but must be declined because of the heavy schedule of Boston Symphony concerts.

Tanglewood Debut

Although this will be their Tanglewood debut they have played in previous summers at the South Mountain Festival for the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. The group has commissioned several works to be written for them including compositions by Irving Fine and Gardner Read. For their first New York concert, at Town Hall next November, they will premiere a work by Allen Shulman for viola, strings and harp. Their program here at the Berkshire Festival—all first performances at Tanglewood—will consist of "The Four Seasons" by Vivildi, Stravinsky's "Appollon Musagete" and the Rossini Sonata for violins, cellos and double bass.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE

JUL 1 - 1954

Selectmen Grant Four Licenses, Deny One Permit

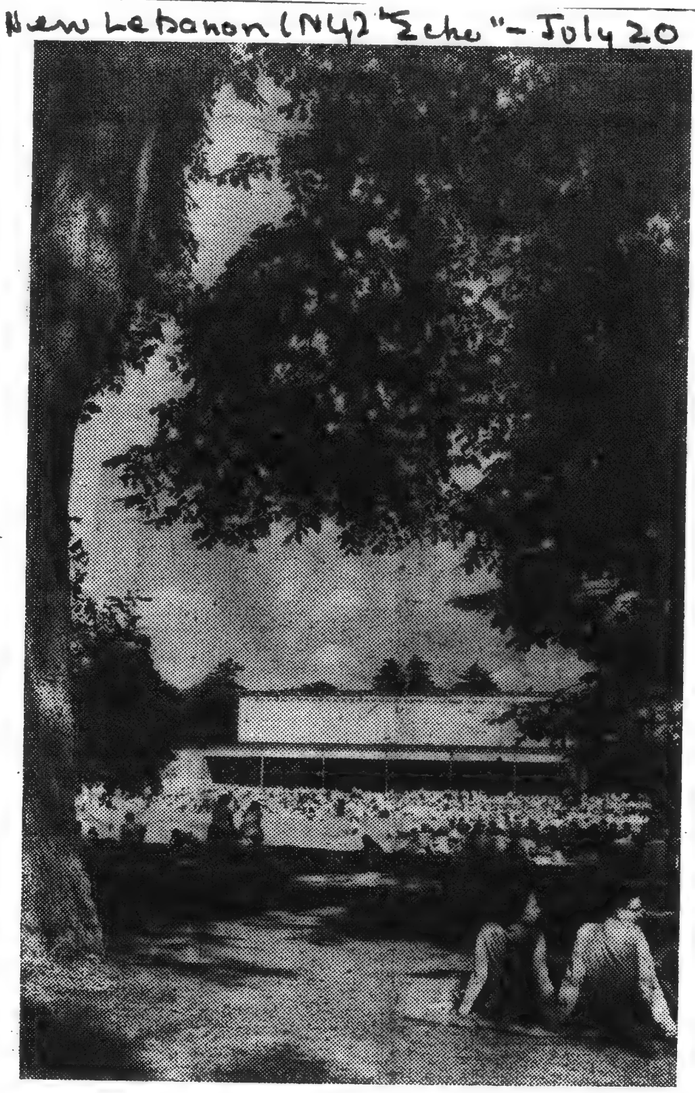
STOCKBRIDGE—At their weekly meeting, the Selectmen granted guest house licenses to Mrs. Frank Dellea and Mrs. Clarence J. Ketter; an innholder's license to A. Hayes Warner for Whitman Manor, and a victualler's license to the Boston Symphony Orchestra for Tanglewood cafeteria and for Wheatleigh.

At the meeting, Walter Wilson asked for a building permit for a prospective buyer of a piece of property on the lake shore at the outlet. The board denied this permit as it was felt it would have to be a sub-division and should consequently be taken up with the Planning Board. The Selectmen advised Mr. Wilson to meet with the Planning Board and make arrangements with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Foot met with the Selectmen and complained that the barn at Indian Hill was being altered for dormitories. The Board of Selectmen turned the matter over to Building Inspector Harold L. Williams.

Samuel H. Sprott and Murray E. Haskins were appointed special policemen by the Selectmen.

New Lebanon (N.Y.) "Echo" - July 20



THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is now well underway in the hills of western Massachusette, the 15th in which the orchestra has participated. The six-week festival, enlarged in scope this season, will last through August 15. Last year Festival concerts attracted a record-breaking total attendance of music-lovers of 117,950, an average of 4,360 in its chamber concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall and an averagee of 10,200 in its huge Music Shed.

The Lenox Advocate, Berkshire

BACH AND BERLIOZ WORKS OPEN TANGLEWOOD SERIES

July 15

By MARTIN BOOKSPAN

Rarely before has the Jekyll-Hyde musical personality of Charles Munch been on more vivid display than at the Tanglewood concerts last Friday and Saturday evenings. On Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall, at the opening concert of the chamber orchestra series, Mr. Munch conducted five of Bach's six Brandenburg Concertos, omitting only the Fourth. The various instrumental solos were performed by the first-chair players of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, including Richard Burgin, violin; Doriot Anthony, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Roger Voisin, trumpet; James Stagliano, horn; and to perform the keyboard solos in the Fifth Concerto, Lukas Foss.

From the start it was evident that this was to be a trying evening. Throughout, the performances were afflicted with a kind of metronomic strangulation: every bar line was for Mr. Munch a road-block in the way of a natural, spontaneous and free-flowing expression of the music. The performances were lugubrious in their heaviness.

Moreover, there was present an incomprehensible contradiction in stylistic approach; for example, in the Second Concerto Mr. Munch had Mr. Voisin play the fiendishly difficult trumpet part on a small B Flat trumpet which lacked the brilliance of tone of present-day instruments but which certainly was a closer approximation of the sound Bach conceived—yet at the same time the continuo parts in all the Concertos were performed not on a clavier, or harpsichord as Bach had intended, but on the piano, an instrument for which Bach never composed and which did not come into vogue until several years after his death!

The evening was saved from total disaster by the performance of Mr. Foss in the Fifth Concerto. Here, too, one might take exception to the piano on musicological grounds, but so brilliant was Mr. Foss' contribution that all other considerations were relegated to insignificance.

On Saturday evening, in the Shed, Mr. Munch opened the series of concerts by the full orchestra with a performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." Assisting were the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society (singing at Tanglewood for the first time en masse), and Eleanor Steber, soprano; Martial Singher, baritone; David Poleri, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. With the exception of Miss Steber these same forces performed the work in Boston last February and recorded it soon thereafter.

The performance last February was well-chronicled in the Boston press and brilliantly treated in this paper at the time by my colleague, Mr. Berlin. Last Saturday evening's performance was much like the earlier one: Mr. Munch coaxed a thrilling presentation out of the assembled choral and instrumental forces, and all the soloists were excellent.

There is no question that Mr. Munch has a special way with the music of Berlioz, and the "Damnation" continues to impress your reviewer as one of the composer's most consistently fine creations.

A special word of commendation must go to the Harvard and Radcliffe choruses and their conductor, G. Wallace Woodworth: only the day previously had they arrived at Tanglewood after a transcontinental tour of several weeks. They must have been tired and overworked, and many of them had inadequate sleeping quarters in Festival-boom Lenox, yet they sang with a vitality and responsiveness which were wonderful to hear.

The performance, incidentally, was the first in the Berlioz Cycle which Mr. Munch is conducting this summer at Tanglewood in observance of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth; before the end of the summer all of Berlioz' major works will have been heard at Tanglewood.

[204]

Union July 21

THE SPRINGFIEL

ONE-ACT OPERAS AT TANGLEWOOD PLAYED TUESDAY

'L'Amfiparnaso,' 'Princess And Pea,' 'There and Back' Are Rarely Heard

Three rarely heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch, will be performed by students of Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, on the 27th at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

"L'Amfiparnaso" of 1594

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February, 1933.

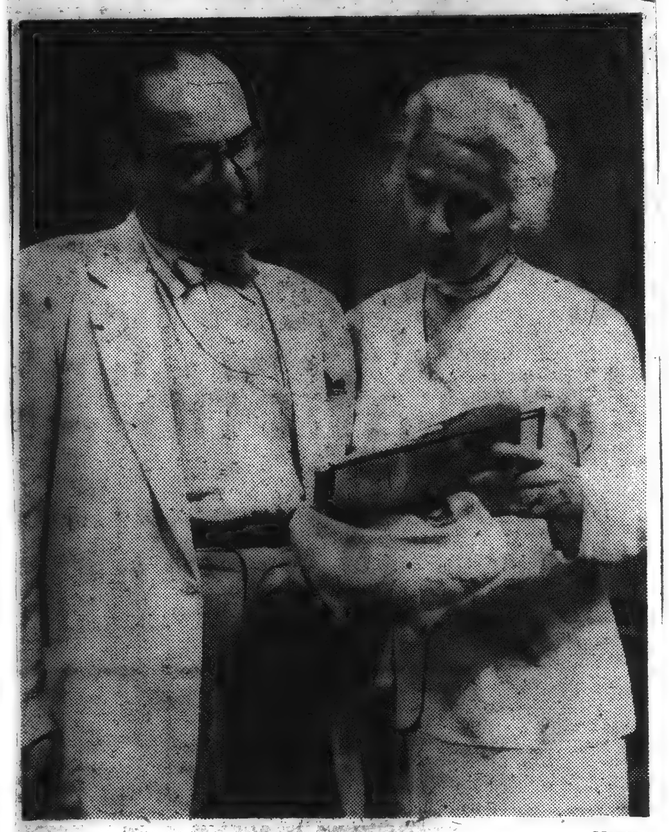
"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer; it will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, book by Benno Elkan, English version by Marion Farquhar. It was first performed in Baden-Baden in 1927; by the WPA-Federal Theater, New York, in 1936; it will have its first Tanglewood performance at Tanglewood next Tuesday.

The three one-act operas are produced by Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department. "L'Amfiparnaso" and "The Princess and the Pea" are staged by Mr. Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl; "There and Back" by Morton Siegel. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenchip; costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen. Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct "L'Amfiparnaso." Samuel Krachmalnick will conduct an orchestra of the school's Department I students for "There and Back"; Paul Vermel will lead the student orchestra for "The Princess and the Pea."

Aug. 2 and 3 the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the New England premiere, and the first Tanglewood performances, of Aaron Copland's full-length opera on an American theme, "The Tender Land," newly revised by the composer who has been assistant director of the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding in 1940.

TIGHT BINDING



Manos

DISCUSSING OPERAS to be given this season at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood are Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department of the Music Center, and his wife, Elsa Kahl, who teaches opera dramatics. They are preparing three one-act operas to be performed by students at Tanglewood Tuesday evening at 8:30.

More People Coming Here But Visits Are Shorter

LENOX—With two weeks of the new extended Tanglewood season gone by, a survey of local guest houses and resorts shows that more people are coming to Lenox, but not staying as long.

Guest house operators with few exceptions agree that there are more people around on weekends—particularly Saturday night—but that much of the all-week business of former years is gone. Mrs. John M. O'Brien, director of the Kiwanis information service, reports that her records corroborate this trend.

More people are seeking advance reservations for one or two nights only. Most guest houses and resorts refuse these reservations as they can fill their houses on weekend nights with business that comes off the road.

Reports from Eastover show that the busier weekends and slower weekdays are not confined to the Tanglewood trade, however. Raymond Glascock, reservations manager at Eastover, which is independent of Tanglewood business, reports that the current season has brought "substantially more requests for shorter stays" than in previous years.

More guests staying fewer days at the resort has resulted in a guest-day count slightly ahead of last year. The recent weekend at the resort was the second largest non-holiday weekend on record at Eastover. There were 415 guests. Yesterday, however, Eastover had slightly fewer guests than the same middle-of-the-week period last year.

Tanglewood Tales

Programs Released For Organ Recitals

The programs for the organ recitals to be given by E. Power Biggs in the Music Shed Saturday, July 24, and Saturday, Aug. 7, have been announced.

They follow:

SATURDAY, JULY 24

Concerto No. 2 in B-flat, George Frederick Handel
The Trophy ..... Francois Couperin
Pavane, The Earle of Salisbury, William Byrd
A Trumpet Voluntary ..... Henry Purcell
Prelude, Fugue and Variation, Cesar Franck
Concerto in A-minor .... Antonio Vivaldi

SATURDAY, AUG. 7

Double Concerto No. 1 in G major, Antonio Soler
Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Johann Sebastian Bach
Three Noels with Variations, Louis Claude Daquin
Two Pastels ..... Anthony Donato
Litanies ..... Jehan Alain

Student Concert Tomorrow Night

The program for the concert tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Department 1 orchestra follows:

Phaeton, Symphonic Poem, Opus 39, Saint-Saens
Henry Janiec, Conductor.

Symphony No. 3, in F major, Opus 90, Brahms
Allegro con brio.
Andante.
Poco Allegretto.
Allegro.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.

Intermission.

Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 25, Chausson
Tiberius Kinasner, Soloist.
Paul Vermel, Conductor.

Suite from the Opera, Tsar Saltan, Opus 57 ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Allegretto alla marcia.
Introducton to Act II.
Introduction to last scene.
Richard Burgin, Conductor.
Baldwin Piano.

Tanglewood on Parade Aug. 13

TANGLEWOOD — Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, cochairmen of Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center on Friday, Aug. 13, today announced their committees.

Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Minneapolis, Minn., are vice chairmen. Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Mrs. Sanborn heads the door prize committee; Miss Robinson Smith and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., of Stockbridge are in charge of the committee handling the sale of boxes.

Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of an opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m. Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department, will announce his program and cast soon. At 6 p.m. all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, opera choral, and study group—will give simultaneous demonstrations. During dinner a choir concert will be given on the steps on the Berkshire Music Center's administration building.

The program for the evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists will be announced shortly. At the close of the concert door prizes will be drawn. Dancing on the lawn will end the festivities.

as fast . . . Overheard at Tanglewood. First musician, "What is the difference between a French and an English horn?" Second musician, "About $30" . . . Add to

28 Sat. Review July 24/54

MUSIC TO MY EARS

Berlioz and Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Under Munch

Charles Munch directing his Tanglewood orchestra—"momentum and eloquence."

LENOX, MASS.

OF THE well-known musical works based on the "Faust" legend—the Wagner overture, the Liszt symphony, Boïto's "Mefistofele," and Gounod's opera—Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" is not only the least accessible but also the most imaginative. That was the happy revelation of the season-opening performance by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in the Berkshires under Charles Munch. How many of the other 8,500 auditors (an amazing total for such a work) shared the sense of revelation is difficult to say; but the work's impact was evident in the close attention and solid applause with which the several sections were followed.

The oddity is, of course, that Berlioz was one of the first musicians to approach the subject (Schumann's little-known effort dates from the middle 1840's, Spohr's from the next decade)—yet he sensed more of its dramatic possibilities and special kind of atmosphere than most of those who followed. Indeed, his evocation of devilish powers in the "Minuet of the Will-o-the-Wisps" and "Dance of the Sylphs," his "Song of the Flea" for Mephistopheles and love music for Faust, not to mention the inspired measures of Marguerite's "D'Amour l'ardente flamme," have more of the mature sorcery inherent in Goethe's writing (or this part of it) than most of the music written afterwards.

One can only regret the chain of circumstances which, in the wake of the failure of his "Benvenuto Cellini" at the Opéra, inclined Berlioz to conceive his treatment of Goethe as a "dramatic legend" for concert use, rather than as a stage spectacle. For there is certainly enough of spectacle implied, in what he wrote, as well as of dramatic effect conveyed, to convince one that the stage was the natural habitat of this effort. Any other outcome was fortuitous, unwanted, equivocal.

Needless to say, there have been numerous efforts to habituate the "Damnation" to the theatre, including a relatively successful one launched by Raoul Gunsbourg at Monte Carlo in 1894, and reprised in several French theatres, as well as at the Metropolitan nearly fifty years ago. However, Berlioz, who tended to be more dramatic in his non-theatrical works than in those designed for the purpose, omitted too much to tell a really consecutive story. Dipping back into the past of that Metropolitan production one discovers an eyewitness, W. J. Henderson of the Sun, reporting as much in his review of the event: "The work is deficient in action and its pictures have no valid connection."

This returns us, then, to the question of just what Berlioz wrote and how it made its effect at this most recent hearing. It is, surely, a kind of glorified tone poem (though the term was not known at the time), in which the orchestra carries the main discourse and does most of the dramatic commentary, for all the prominence of the vocal parts allotted to singers representing the two lovers, as well as to Mephistopheles, Brander, and the choral-public. It is to the instrumental group that we owe the performance of the celebrated "excerpts," and it is its function to summarize at the end of each section.

In all respects, the Boston musicians were equal to the responsibilities put upon them, whether it was the dark foreboding that hovers in Faust's first appearance, the clangor of the "Rakoczy March" (surely one of the most contrived and gloriously evocative episodes in dramatic music), the viola solo by Joseph di Pasquale supplementing Marguerite's "Roi de Thule," or Louis Speyer's English horn poignantly echoing "D'Amour l'ardente flamme." Munch's enthusiasm for the work was clearly communicated to the players and singers, not to mention the zealots of the chorus from Radcliffe and Harvard.

At the same time, watching, as well as listening to, the work from various vantage points, one could not help feeling that the substance of the performance derived from arduous preparation for the spring performance in Boston and the subsequent recording sessions, rather than from Munch's communication of the emotions as they occurred. Indeed, it would have required mental telepathy to persuade a player or a section just where an entrance was indicated or a cue to be followed, so vague was his beat, so non-conclusive his directions. The outcome was a performance of much momentum and eloquence, though subtleties of texture were frequently absent in a concentration on top and bottom outline.

The solo singing was provided by Martial Singher, a Mephistopheles of style if little vocal suavity, and David Poleri, a Faust of much vocal power if no particular style, and Eleanor Steber, a Marguerite of some style and indefinite vocal suitability. The various imbalances suggested were rarely resolved, though Miss Steber sang her third-act scene with much conviction (if with no real power at the bottom) and Poleri often charmed the ear while repelling the senses with his apostrophes to "Margerita" (or more of the Italian-sounding equivalent than the French).

In most ways, however, this was one of the notable events in the long Tanglewood sequence, and one which should be brought back at sufficiently suitable intervals to foster an audience appreciation of the work while permitting the participants to better their mastery of the problems involved. Both considerations represent a challenge, and it would be a service decidedly in the public interest for the Berkshire Festival to assume them as a special phase of its activity.

—IRVING KOLODIN.

MILLERTON, N.Y NEWS 7/3/54

SHARON, CONN NEWS 7/8/54

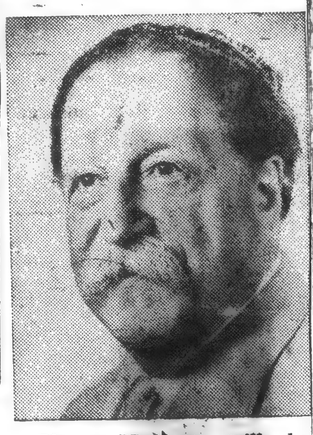
HARTFORD, CONN. COURANT JUL 11 1954

BOSTON, MASS. MORNING GLOBE JUL 11 1954

GUEST CONDUCTOR

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GUEST CONDUCTOR



Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Pierre Monteux Guest Conductor At Tanglewood

Four concerts make up the Berkshire Music Festival program at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Wednesday night at 8:30 the Albeneri Trio will be heard in trios by Brahms (Opus 8), Martinu (D Minor) and Beethoven (Archduke).

Friday evening at 8:30 the Bach-Mozart series will continue with the Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", and Suites nos. 1 and 4, all by Bach. Hugh Ross will conduct the cantata, Charles Munch the suites.

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night at 8:30 in the shed concert. The program will include excerpts from Debussy's "St. Sebastien" and "La Mer" by the same composer, and Franck's "es Djinns", with Vera Franceschi as pianist, and Franck's symphony.

Charles Munch will lead the BSO in "Iberia", Debussy; the piano Concerto of Aaron Copland, Leo Smit, soloist; and Berlioz's "Fantastic" Symphony, Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Berkshire Festival Programs This Week

The programs for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, will be as follows:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting, Beethoven: Overture, "Leonore," No. 3; Emperor" Piano Concerto (Claudio Arrau, soloist); Fifth Symphony.

Wednesday at 8:30, Chamber-Concert Hall, The Albeneri Trio (Erich Lor[illegible], violin; Kahn, piano; Gregor[illegible], cello; Brahms: Trio in Benar Heifetz, cello; Brahms: Trio in D major, Op 8; Martinu: Trio in D minor, Beethoven: Trio in B-flat (Archduke).

Friday at 8:30, Tanglewood, Concert Hall, Chamber orchestra [illegible] Symphony Players, Hugh Ross, conducting—Bach: Cantata No. [illegible] den lieben Gott; Suites [illegible] conducting—Bach: [illegible]

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux, conducting—Debussy: Excerpts from "St. Sebastien" and "La Mer"; Franck: "es Djinns" (Vera Franceschi, piano soloist); Debussy: "La Mer"; Franck, Symphony in D minor.

Sunday, July 18, at 2:30, Music Shed, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting—Debussy: Iberia; Copland, Piano Concerto (Leo Smit, soloist); Berlioz: "Fantastic" Symphony.

. . . We trust that the wise words of Mr. Lukas Foss anent the need for more silence in music listening will be spread widely enough to reach the television and radio moguls . . .

TIGHT BINDING

28 Lit. Review July 24/54

Manos

DISCUSSING OPERAS to be given this season at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood are Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department of the Music Center, and his wife, Elsa Kahl, who teaches opera dramatics. They are preparing three one-act operas to be performed by students at Tanglewood Tuesday evening at 8:30.

More People Coming Here But Visits Are Shorter

LENOX—With two weeks of the new extended Tanglewood season gone by, a survey of local guest houses and resorts shows that more people are coming to Lenox, but not staying as long.

Guest house operators with few exceptions agree that there are more people around on weekends—particularly Saturday night—but that much of the all-week business of former years is gone. Mrs. John M. O'Brien, director of the Kiwanis information service, reports that her records corroborate this trend.

More people are seeking advance reservations for one or two nights only. Most guest houses and resorts refuse these reservations as they can fill their houses on weekend nights with business that comes off the road.

Reports from Eastover show that the busier weekends and slower weekdays are not confined to the Tanglewood trade, however. Raymond Glascock, reservations manager at Eastover, which is independent of Tanglewood business, reports that the current season has brought "substantially more requests for shorter stays" than in previous years.

More guests staying fewer days at the resort has resulted in a guest-day count slightly ahead of last year. The recent weekend at the resort was the second largest non-holiday weekend on record at Eastover. There were 415 guests. Yesterday, however, Eastover had slightly fewer guests than the same middle-of-the-week period last year.

Tanglewood Tales

Programs Released For Organ Recitals

The programs for the organ recitals to be given by E. Power Biggs in the Music Shed Saturday, July 24, and Saturday, Aug. 7, have been announced.

They follow:

SATURDAY, JULY 24

Concerto No. 2 in B-flat, George Frederick Handel
The Trophy ..... Francois Couperin
Pavane, The Earle of Salisbury, William Byrd
A Trumpet Voluntary ..... Henry Purcell
Prelude, Fugue and Variation, Cesar Franck
Concerto in A-minor .... Antonio Vivaldi

SATURDAY, AUG. 7

Double Concerto No. 3, in G major, Antonio Soler
Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Johann Sebastian Bach
Three Noels with Variations, Louis Claude Daquin
Two Pastels ..... Anthony Donato
Litanies ..... Jehan Alain

Student Concert Tomorrow Night

The program for the concert tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Department 1 orchestra follows;

Phaeton, Symphonic Poem, Opus 39, Saint-Saens
Henry Janiec, Conductor.

Symphony No. 3, in F major, Opus 90, Brahms
Allegro con brio.
Andante.
Poco Allegretto.
Allegro.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.

Intermission.

Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 25, Chaulsson
Tiberius Klauaner, Soloist.
Paul Vermel, Conductor.

Suite from the Opera, Tsar Saltan, Opus 57 ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Allegretto alla marcia.
Introducton to Act II.
Introduction to last scene.
Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Baldwin Piano.

Tanglewood on Parade Aug. 13

TANGLEWOOD — Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, cochairmen of Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center on Friday, Aug. 13, today announced their committees.

Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Minneapolis, Minn., are vice chairmen. Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Mrs. Sanborn heads the door prize committee; Miss Robinson Smith and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., of Stockbridge are in charge of the committee handling the sale of boxes.

Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of an opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m. Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department, will announce his program and cast soon. At 6 p.m. all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, opera choral, and study group—will give simultaneous demonstrations. During dinner a choir concert will be given on the steps on the Berkshire Music Center's administration building.

The program for the evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists will be announced shortly. At the close of the concert door prizes will be drawn. Dancing on the lawn will end the festivities.

as fast . . . Overheard at Tanglewood. First musician, "What is the difference between a French and an English horn?" Second musician, "About $30" . . . Add to

MUSIC TO MY EARS

Berlioz and Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Under Munch

Charles Munch directing his Tanglewood orchestra—"momentum and eloquence."

LENOX, MASS.

OF THE well-known musical works based on the "Faust" legend—the Wagner overture, the Liszt symphony, Boito's "Mefistofele," and Gounod's opera—Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" is not only the least accessible but also the most imaginative. That was the happy revelation of the season-opening performance by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in the Berkshires under Charles Munch. How many of the other 8,500 auditors (an amazing total for such a work) shared the sense of revelation is difficult to say; but the work's impact was evident in the close attention and solid applause with which the several sections were followed.

The oddity is, of course, that Berlioz was one of the first musicians to approach the subject (Schumann's little-known effort dates from the middle 1840's, Spohr's from the next decade)—yet he sensed more of its dramatic possibilities and special kind of atmosphere than most of those who followed. Indeed, his evocation of devilish powers in the "Minuet of the Will-o-the-Wisps" and "Dance of the Sylphs," his "Song of the Flea" for Mephistopheles and love music for Faust, not to mention the inspired measures of Marguerite's "D'Amour l'ardente flamme," have more of the mature sorcery inherent in Goethe's writing (or this part of it) than most of the music written afterwards.

One can only regret the chain of circumstances which, in the wake of the failure of his "Benvenuto Cellini" at the Opéra, inclined Berlioz to conceive his treatment of Goethe as a "dramatic legend" for concert use, rather than as a stage spectacle. For there is certainly enough of spectacle implied, in what he wrote, as well as of dramatic effect conveyed, to convince one that the stage was the natural habitat of this effort. Any other outcome was fortuitous, unwanted, equivocal.

Needless to say, there have been numerous efforts to habituate the "Damnation" to the theatre, including a relatively successful one launched by Raoul Gunsbourg at Monte Carlo in 1894, and reprised in several French theatres, as well as at the Metropolitan nearly fifty years ago. However, Berlioz, who tended to be more dramatic in his non-theatrical works than in those designed for the purpose, omitted too much to tell a really consecutive story. Dipping back into the past of that Metropolitan production one discovers an eyewitness, W. J. Henderson of the Sun, reporting as much in his review of the event: "The work is deficient in action and its pictures have no valid connection."

This returns us, then, to the question of just what Berlioz wrote and how it made its effect at this most recent hearing. It is, surely, a kind of glorified tone poem (though the term was not known at the time), in which the orchestra carries the main discourse and does most of the dramatic commentary, for all the prominence of the vocal parts allotted to singers representing the two lovers, as well as to Mephistopheles, Brander, and the choral-public. It is to the instrumental group that we owe the performance of the celebrated "excerpts," and it is its function to summarize at the end of each section.

In all respects, the Boston musicians were equal to the responsibilities put upon them, whether it was the dark foreboding that hovers in Faust's first appearance, the clangor of the "Rakoczy March" (surely one of the most contrived and gloriously evocative episodes in dramatic music), the viola solo by Joseph di Pasquale supplementing Marguerite's "Roi de Thule," or Louis Speyer's English horn poignantly echoing "D'Amour l'ardente flamme." Munch's enthusiasm for the work was clearly communicated to the players and singers, not to mention the zealots of the chorus from Radcliffe and Harvard.

At the same time, watching, as well as listening to, the work from various vantage points, one could not help feeling that the substance of the performance derived from arduous preparation for the spring performance in Boston and the subsequent recording sessions, rather than from Munch's communication of the emotions as they occurred. Indeed, it would have required mental telepathy to persuade a player or a section just where an entrance was indicated or a cue to be followed, so vague was his beat, so non-conclusive his directions. The outcome was a performance of much momentum and eloquence, though subtleties of texture were frequently absent in a concentration on top and bottom outline.

The solo singing was provided by Martial Singher, a Mephistopheles of style if little vocal suavity, and David Poleri, a Faust of much vocal power if no particular style, and Eleanor Steber, a Marguerite of some style and indefinite vocal suitability. The various imbalances suggested were rarely resolved, though Miss Steber sang her third-act scene with much conviction (if with no real power at the bottom) and Poleri often charmed the ear while repelling the senses with his apostrophes to "Margerita" (or more of the Italian-sounding equivalent than the French).

In most ways, however, this was one of the notable events in the long Tanglewood sequence, and one which should be brought back at sufficiently suitable intervals to foster an audience appreciation of the work while permitting the participants to better their mastery of the problems involved. Both considerations represent a challenge, and it would be a service decidedly in the public interest for the Berkshire Festival to assume them as a special phase of its activity.

—IRVING KOLODIN.

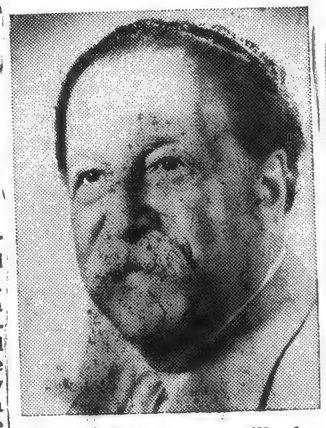
MILLERTON, N.Y. NEWS 7/8/54

SHARON, CONN 7/8/54

HARTFORD, CONN. COURANT JUL 11 1954

BOSTON, MASS. MORNING GLOBE JUL 11 1954

GUEST CONDUCTOR



Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

GUEST CONDUCTOR

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Pierre Monteux Guest Conductor At Tanglewood

Four concerts make up the Berkshire Music Festival program at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Wednesday night at 8:30 the Albeneri Trio will be heard in trios by Brahms (Opus 8), Martinu (D Minor) and Beethoven (Archduke).

Friday evening at 8:30 the Bach-Mozart series will continue with the Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", and Suites nos. 1 and 4, all by Bach. Hugh Ross will conduct the cantata, Charles Munch the suites.

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night at 8:30 in the shed concert. The program will include excerpts from Debussy's "St. Sebastien" and "La Mer" by the same composer, and Franck's "es Djinns", with Vera Franceschi as pianist, and Franck's symphony.

Charles Munch will lead the BSO in "Iberia", Debussy; the piano Concerto of Aaron Copland, Leo Smit, soloist; and Berlioz's "Fantastic" Symphony, Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Berkshire Festival Programs This Week

The programs for the second week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will be as

Thursday 2 ... The Boston Symphony ... Overture, ... Piano ... st); Fifth

... Concert ... rich Itor ... violin; ... Trio in ... Trio in D ... in B-flat

... oncert Hall, ... Symphony ... ns—Bach; ... den lieben ... ducting—

... shed. The ... Pierre ... Ex- ... of St. ... is" (Vera ... ssy: "La ... D minor.

... Music Shed ... Orchestra, ... Debussy; ... Concerto ... Fantastic

. . . We trust that the wise words of Mr. Lukas Foss anent the need for more silence in music listening will be spread widely enough to reach the television and radio moguls . . .

[205]

Manos

DISCUSSING OPERAS to be given this season at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood are Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department of the Music Center, and his wife, Elsa Kahl, who teaches opera dramatics. They are preparing three one-act operas to be performed by students at Tanglewood Tuesday evening at 8:30.

More People Coming Here But Visits Are Shorter

LENOX—With two weeks of the new extended Tanglewood season gone by, a survey of local guest houses and resorts shows that more people are coming to Lenox, but not staying as long.

Guest house operators with few exceptions agree that there are more people around on weekends—particularly Saturday night—but that much of the all-week business of former years is gone. Mrs. John M. O'Brien, director of the Kiwanis information service, reports that her records corroborate this trend.

More people are seeking advance reservations for one or two nights only. Most guest houses and resorts refuse these reservations as they can fill their houses on week-end nights with business that comes off the road.

Reports from Eastover show that the busier weekends and slower weekdays are not confined to the Tanglewood trade, however. Raymond Glascock, reservations manager at Eastover, which is independent of Tanglewood business, reports that the current season has brought "substantially more requests for shorter stays" than in previous years.

More guests staying fewer days at the resort has resulted in a guest-day count slightly ahead of last year. The recent weekend at the resort was the second largest non-holiday weekend on record at Eastover. There were 415 guests. Yesterday, however, Eastover had slightly fewer guests than the same middle-of-the-week period last year.

Tanglewood Tales

Programs Released For Organ Recitals

The programs for the organ recitals to be given by E. Power Biggs in the Music Shed Saturday, July 24, and Saturday, Aug. 7, have been announced.

They follow:

SATURDAY, JULY 24

Concerto No. 2 in B-flat, George Frederick Handel
The Trophy ..... Francois Couperin
Pavane, The Earle of Salisbury, William Byrd
A Trumpet Voluntary ..... Henry Purcell
Prelude, Fugue and Variation, Cesar Franck
Concerto in A-minor ..... Antonio Vivaldi

SATURDAY, AUG. 7

Double Concerto No. 3 in G major, Antonio Soler
Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Johann Sebastian Bach
Three Noels with Variations, Louis Claude Daquin
Two Pastels ..... Anthony Donato
Litanies ..... Jehan Alain

Student Concert Tomorrow Night

The program for the concert tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Department 1 orchestra follows:

Phaeton, Symphonic Poem, Opus 39, Saint-Saens
Henry Janiec, Conductor.

Symphony No. 3, in F major, Opus 90, Brahms
Allegro con brio.
Andante.
Poco Allegretto.
Allegro.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.

Intermission.

Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 25, Chaulsson
Tiberius Kinasner, Soloist.
Paul Vermel, Conductor.

Suite from the Opera, Tsar Saltan, Opus 57 ..... Rimsky-Korsakov
Allegretto alla marcia.
Introducton to Act II.
Introduction to last scene.
Richard Burgin, Conductor.

Baldwin Piano.

Tanglewood on Parade Aug. 13

TANGLEWOOD — Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Lenox and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, cochairmen of Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center on Friday, Aug. 13, today announced their committees.

Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Minneapolis, Minn., are vice chairmen. Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Mrs. Sanborn heads the door prize committee; Miss Robinson Smith and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., of Stockbridge are in charge of the committee handling the sale of boxes.

Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of an opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m. Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department, will announce his program and cast soon. At 6 p.m. all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, opera choral, and study group—will give simultaneous demonstrations. During dinner a choir concert will be given on the steps on the Berkshire Music Center's administration building.

The program for the evening concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists will be announced shortly. At the close of the concert door prizes will be drawn. Dancing on the lawn will end the festivities.

as fast . . . Overheard at Tanglewood. First musician, "What is the difference between a French and an English horn?" Second musician, "About $30" . . . Add to

28 Sat. Review July 24/54

MUSIC TO MY EARS

Berlioz and Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Under Munch

Charles Munch directing his Tanglewood orchestra—"momentum and eloquence."

LENOX, MASS.

OF THE well-known musical works based on the "Faust" legend—the Wagner overture, the Liszt symphony, Boïto's "Mefistofele," and Gounod's opera—Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" is not only the least accessible but also the most imaginative. That was the happy revelation of the season-opening performance by the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in the Berkshires under Charles Munch. How many of the other 8,500 auditors (an amazing total for such a work) shared the sense of revelation is difficult to say; but the work's impact was evident in the close attention and solid applause with which the several sections were followed.

The oddity is, of course, that Berlioz was one of the first musicians to approach the subject (Schumann's little-known effort dates from the middle 1840's, Spohr's from the next decade)—yet he sensed more of its dramatic possibilities and special kind of atmosphere than most of those who followed. Indeed, his evocation of devilish powers in the "Minuet of the Will-o-the-Wisps" and "Dance of the Sylphs," his "Song of the Flea" for Mephistopheles and love music for Faust, not to mention the inspired measures of Marguerite's "D'Amour l'ardente flamme," have more of the mature sorcery inherent in Goethe's writing (or this part of it) than most of the music written afterwards.

One can only regret the chain of circumstances which, in the wake of the failure of his "Benvenuto Cellini" at the Opéra, inclined Berlioz to conceive his treatment of Goethe as a "dramatic legend" for concert use, rather than as a stage spectacle. For there is certainly enough of spectacle implied, in what he wrote, as well as of dramatic effect conveyed, to convince one that the stage was the natural habitat of this effort. Any other outcome was fortuitous, unwanted, equivocal.

Needless to say, there have been numerous efforts to habituate the "Damnation" to the theatre, including a relatively successful one launched by Raoul Gunsbourg at Monte Carlo in 1894, and reprised in several French theatres, as well as at the Metropolitan nearly fifty years ago. However, Berlioz, who tended to be more dramatic in his non-theatrical works than in those designed for the purpose, omitted too much to tell a really consecutive story. Dipping back into the past of that Metropolitan production one discovers an eyewitness, W. J. Henderson of the Sun, reporting as much in his review of the event: "The work is deficient in action and its pictures have no valid connection."

This returns us, then, to the question of just what Berlioz wrote and how it made its effect at this most recent hearing. It is, surely, a kind of glorified tone poem (though the term was not known at the time), in which carries the main dis- the dramatic to Mephistopheles, Brander, and the choral-public. It is to the instrumental group that we owe the performance of the celebrated "[illegible]," and it is its function to sum[illegible] at the end of each section.

In all respects, the Boston musicians were equal to the responsibilities put upon them, whether it was the dark foreboding that hovers in Faust's first appearance, the clangor of the "Rakoczy March" (surely one of the most contrived and gloriously evocative episodes in dramatic music), the viola solo by Joseph di Pasqualis supplementing Marguerite's "Roi de Thule," or Louis Speyer's English horn poignantly echoing "D'Amour l'ardente flamme." Munch's enthusiasm for the work was clearly communicated to the players and singers, not to mention the zealots of the chorus from Radcliffe and Harvard.

At the same time, watching, as well as listening to, the work from various vantage points, one could not help feeling that the substance of the performance derived from arduous preparation for the spring performance in Boston and the subsequent recording sessions, rather than from Munch's communication of the emotions as they occurred. Indeed, it would have required mental telepathy to persuade a player or a section just where an entrance was indicated or a cue to be followed, so vague was his beat, so non-conclusive his directions. The outcome was a performance of much momentum and eloquence, though subtleties of texture were frequently absent in a concentration on top and bottom outline.

The solo singing was provided by Martial Singher, a Mephistopheles of style if little vocal suavity, and David Poleri, a Faust of much vocal power if no particular style, and Eleanor Steber, a Marguerite of some style and indefinite vocal suitability. The various imbalances suggested were rarely resolved, though Miss Steber sang her third-act scene with much conviction (if with no real power at the bottom) and Poleri often charmed the ear while repelling the senses with his apostrophes to "Margerita" (or more of the Italian-sounding equivalent than the French).

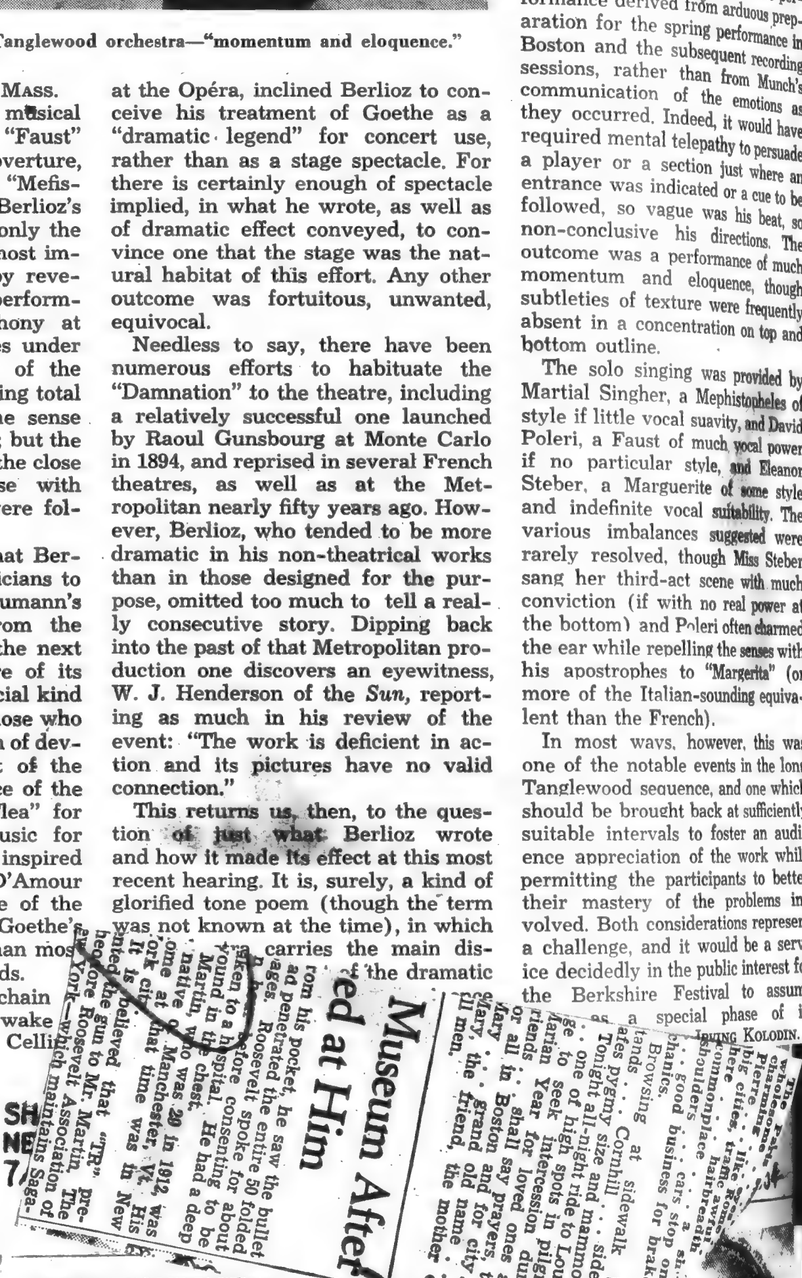
In most ways, however, this was one of the notable events in the long Tanglewood sequence, and one which should be brought back at sufficiently suitable intervals to foster an audience appreciation of the work while permitting the participants to better their mastery of the problems involved. Both considerations represent a challenge, and it would be a service decidedly in the public interest for the Berkshire Festival to assume as a special phase of its

IRVING KOLODIN.

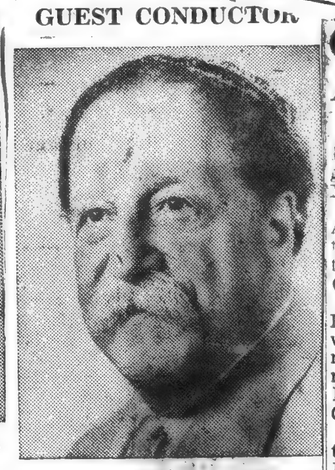
MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
7/3/54

GUEST CONDUCTOR

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.



GUEST CONDUCTOR



Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival Concerts on Sunday, July 11, at 2:30 p.m. (an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau, pianist, as soloist), and Saturday evening, July 17, at 8:30 p.m., (an all-French program, with piano soloist Vera Franceschi) at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Guest Conductor At Tanglewood

Four concerts make up the Berkshire Music Festival program at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

Wednesday night at 8:30 the Albeneri Trio will be heard in trios by Brahms (Opus 8), Martinu (D Minor) and Beethoven (Archduke).

Friday evening at 8:30 the Bach-Mozart series will continue with the Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", and Suites nos. 1 and 4, all by Bach. Hugh Ross will conduct the cantata, Charles Munch the suites.

Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night at 8:30 in the shed concert. The program will include excerpts from Debussy's "St. Sebastien" and "La Mer" by the same composer, and Franck's "es Djinns", with Vera Franceschi as pianist, and Franck's symphony.

Charles Munch will lead the BSO in "Iberia", Debussy; the piano Concerto of Aaron Copland, Leo Smit, soloist; and Berlioz's "Fantastic" Symphony, Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

ERRE MONTEUX is guest nductor today of the Boston mphony Orchestra at the Ber-re Festival concert at Tangle-od, Lenox.

[205]

TIGHT BINDING

MUSIC

Berlioz Under the Trees

Each warm July in the high, green hills of western Massachusetts, for the past fifteen years, the jumble of practicing musical instruments, the scrambled search for sheltering inns, and the concatenation of cars at unfamiliar intersections has suggested the beginning of the Berkshire Festival. Each year, despite the inconveniences of travelers, the summer music season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, calling its disciples ever onward to the clipped boxwood groves of the Tanglewood estate, near Lenox, Mass., has been a considerable success. The standard of the playing has rarely been of uniform height, and listeners, released from the sweltering bondage of the concert hall, have been justly able to hold that the works of Beethoven, Bach, or Berlioz take on an added dimension when one can see a weaving stand of evergreens over the shoulders of the string section.

Program: Last week the 1954 season of the festival was off to a crashing good start. As usual, the week-end concerts of the full orchestra, given in the large Music Shed, were supplemented by the Friday-night performances of the chamber orchestra, and periodic orchestral productions given by the more gifted of the 400 musicians attending the summer school of music. Ernst Toch, the Austro-American composer, heads the festival's informal teaching staff this year and with him, besides the members of the Boston Symphony, were such figures as Jean Morel and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Charles Münch, now heading into his sixth season as the Boston Symphony's conductor, is the principal helmsman for the "formal shed concerts" spelled by Pierre Monteux, the 79-year-old veteran of the San Francisco Symphony, who ran the Boston orchestra himself 30 years ago and Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster. For their bill of fare this year, besides well-tasted masterpieces like Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 and Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, they heaped an extra portion of that old Parisian music master Hector Berlioz. The occasion: The 150th anniversary of Berlioz's birth.

Forte: As a day-in, day-out conductor, Münch has a long way to go before he will approach the lofty style and flair of his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitszky. But playing Berlioz, an old favorite of his, he was on his strongest possible ground. As a crashing introduction to this season's series, he led the orchestra, assisted by soloists Eleanor Steber, Martial Singher, David Poleri, and the combined talents of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society in Berlioz's Opus 24, the Damnation of Faust, the "Dramatic Legend" that marked Berlioz's great attempt to make music convey the drama of an old story.

Berlioz, in fact, seemed to fit Tanglewood a good bit better than Mozart, Haydn, or Bach. There is more than a suspicion that a disciplined German Kapellmeister would have been initially uncomfortable performing symphonies or oratorios to an audience largely sprawled on blankets on the greensward around the Music Shed, an audience that traditionally combines the hearing of music with the intake of food and drink, the admonition of restive children, and the rapid conversation that occurs among new-found acquaintances.

Interchange: After a brief indoctrination period, however, Mozart, Haydn, or almost any composer could have warmed to a Tanglewood audience. There are few concert halls where the hearers are more appreciative, or more discerning. The festival, a generous and well-run institution, has a way of making its guests feel at home, and they do their best to reciprocate.

On Münch's first night of conducting, soloists, orchestra, and chorus turned out one of the finest performances that could be extracted from the "Damnation," a very good piece of music. It was hard to believe, looking at the mobile and dedicated faces of the chorus and the quietly concentrating expressions of the audience at the finale, that these excellent voices, backed by one of the world's finest orchestras, were singing nothing more than the words which Berlioz, after consulting the works of the theologian Emanuel Swedenborg insisted was the language of the damned:

Diff! diff! Astaroth! Belzébuth! Belphégor!
Astaroth! Méphistol Sat, sat rayk irkimour.
Has! has! Méphisto! Irimiru karabrao!

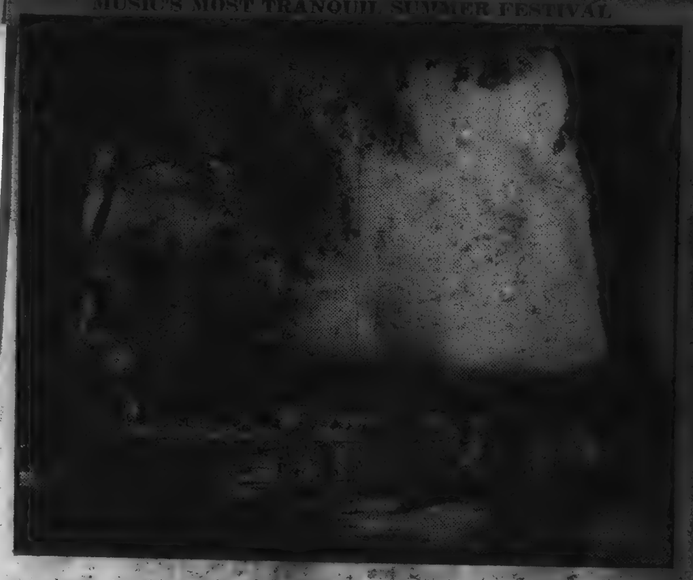
With the informality of Tanglewood audiences went discerning appreciation of such conductors as Münch

Gervin Robinson — Howard S. Babbitt Jr.

Newsweek

70

MUSIC'S MOST TRANQUIL SUMMER FESTIVAL



In Lenox, Mass., the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch is giving the nation its annual great music conclave of the century until Aug. 15. From all over the nation music-lovers come to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, picnic before concerts on its beautiful lawns.

N. Y. Sunday Mirror-August

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS
JUL 11

Berkshire Events

The [illegible] week of four Berkshire [illegible] concerts, at Tanglewood, Mass., opens with an ev[illegible] chamber music by the Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, cello) on Wednesday in the Theater - Concert Hall. An all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will occur on Friday in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Leo Smit

Works of Debussy and Franck, performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, is listed for Saturday in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, give a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain, the Wednesday and Friday

BOSTON MASS
POST
JUL 11 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 10 — Berlioz' dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust," the first concert to be held in the Music Shed, this season found Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony in their very best form. Anyone who heard the Brandenburg concertos on Friday night and the Berlioz tonight must have been gratified by the swift ascent from the Nadir of the untidy Bach to the Zenith of the inspired Berlioz. The audience tonight was over 8500.

Since "The Damnation" is the composer's masterpiece and Munch is the greatest of Berlioz interpreters, this is undoubtedly the artistic high point of the festival. The Symphony Hall performance last winter, with the same soloists and chorus—Eleanor Steber is the sole exception—was a memorable event but for several reasons. Tonight's performance was a notably better one.

The work is peculiar in structure, being neither a symphony, an opera, nor an oratorio, although it contains elements of each. The soloists need both operatic volume and art-song sensitivity; the orchestra must at once provide programmatic atmosphere and pure musical development of symphonic themes; and the chorus is both participant and commentator.

Eleanor Steber, whose rich and ample soprano filled the shed with glorious sound, makes Marguerite, usually the innocent and somewhat insipid victim of Mephistopheles, an impassioned young girl who counts the world well lost for love.

Interpretative Depth

David Poleri, Faust, has gained interpretative depth and he sang with less nervousness and vocal forcing than in Symphony Hall. Martial Singher's Mephisto, a part he has long sung with success in Europe, insinuates the diabolical nature of his role rather than bluntly stating it. Donald Gramm, a virile brander, has the very manner of the tankard-touching, rollicking student roarer of stein songs.

Making Tanglewood a last step in its first transcontinental tour, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society turned in a sterling traversal of the many choral passages, winning a collective summa cum laude not only for precision, but for immaculate French diction.

Tonight's performance was a stirring event. Mr. Munch, who understands this music better than does any other living conductor, led his forces with a noticeable lessening in physical drive, but at the same time an assurance that they would be with him all the way.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER-JOURNAL
JUL 6 - 1954

SURPRISE GREETINGS . . . Newlyweds Joan and Philip Bevington, members of the Harvard-Radcliffe College chorus that will sing at Gardencourt tonight, are greeted at the train station by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Avery, of Highland Park, Ill.

Courier-Journal Photo

53 Is A Crowd, but Newlyweds Prefer Tour With Harvard-Radcliffe Singers

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bevington figure they will really have something to tell their grandchildren some day.

For the past three weeks they have been honeymooning coast to coast by train with 53 other singers of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe College Choral Society.

The singers arrived in Louisville last night for a concert at 8:30 p.m. today at Gardencourt.

A big surprise awaited the newlyweds at the train station. Mrs. Bevington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Avery, had driven from Highland Park, Ill., to meet them and attend tonight's concert.

It's not hard to see why Philip and his bride, Joan, decided to honeymoon with the touring chorus.

Their entire romance has been wrapped up in the singing group. They met as freshman members of the group and sang in it together throughout college. (Both were graduated this year.)

In addition, Joan is president of the Radcliffe society and Philip is vice-president of the Harvard group.

Philip is from Durham, N. C. He and Joan plan to make their home there when the tour ends. Both will do graduate work at Duke University there. She will study physics, she education.

Their honeymoon "has been simply wonderful," Joan said, "and so unique and quite appropriate, don't you think?"

Philip and Joan were married at Cambridge, Mass., June 19, spent a weekend at Cape Cod, then joined the singers in Buffalo, N. Y.

The group then headed west. They gave concerts in 10 other cities, including Las Vegas, Los Angeles, and Seattle. It was the chorus's first tour west of the Mississippi.

The singers will join the Boston Symphony for a concert Saturday at Tanglewood, Mass., home of the Berkshire Festival. Earlier this season they sang with the Boston Symphony in Boston, Washington, and New York.

Professor G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor of the Harvard Glee Club, will direct the combined chorus in tonight's concert. It is sponsored by the Harvard Club of Louisville.

[206]

TIGHT BINDING

MUSIC

Berlioz Under the Trees

Each warm July in the high, green hills of western Massachusetts, for the past fifteen years, the jumble of practicing musical instruments, the scrambled search for sheltering inns, and the concatenation of cars at unfamiliar intersections has suggested the beginning of the Berkshire Festival. Each year, despite the inconveniences of travelers, the summer music season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, calling its disciples ever onward to the clipped boxwood groves of the Tanglewood estate, near Lenox, Mass., has been a considerable success. The standard of the playing has rarely been of uniform height, and listeners, released from the sweltering bondage of the concert hall, have been justly able to hold that the works of Beethoven, Bach, or Berlioz take on an added dimension when one can see a weaving stand of evergreens over the shoulders of the string section.

Program: Last week the 1954 season of the festival was off to a crashing good start. As usual, the week-end concerts of the full orchestra, given in the large Music Shed, were supplemented by the Friday-night performances of the chamber orchestra, and periodic orchestral productions given by the more gifted of the 400 musicians attending the summer school of music. Ernst Toch, the Austro-American composer, heads the festival's informal teaching staff this year and with him, besides the members of the Boston Symphony, were such figures as Jean Morel and Gregor Piatigorsky.

Charles Münch, now heading into his sixth season as the Boston Symphony's conductor, is the principal helmsman for the formal shed concerts, spelled by Pierre Monteux, the 79-year-old veteran of the San Francisco Symphony, who ran the Boston orchestra himself 30 years ago and Richard Burgin, the Boston orchestra's concertmaster. For their bill of fare this year, besides well-tasted masterpieces like Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 and Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 1, they heaped an extra portion of that old Parisian music master Hector Berlioz. The occasion: The 150th anniversary of Berlioz's birth.

Forte: As a day-in, day-out conductor, Münch has a long way to go before he will approach the lofty style and flair of his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitszky. But playing Berlioz, an old favorite of his, he was on his strongest possible ground. As a crashing introduction to this season's series, he led the orchestra, assisted by soloists Eleanor Steber, Martial Singher, David Poleri, and the combined talents of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society in Berlioz's Opus 24, the Damnation of Faust, the "Dramatic Legend" that marked Berlioz's great attempt to make music convey the drama of an old story.

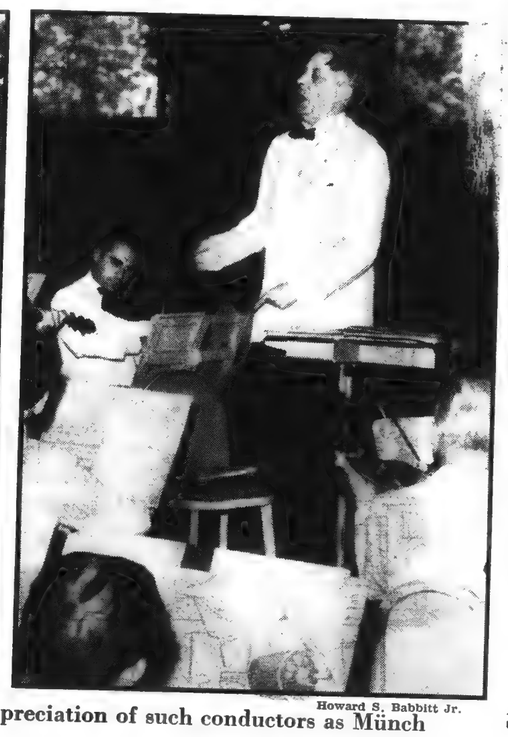
Berlioz, in fact, seemed to fit Tanglewood a good bit better than Mozart, Haydn, or Bach. There is more than a suspicion that a disciplined German Kapellmeister would have been initially uncomfortable performing symphonies or oratorios to an audience largely sprawled on blankets on the greensward around the Music Shed, an audience that traditionally combines the hearing of music with the intake of food and drink, the admonition of restive children, and the rapid conversation that occurs among new-found acquaintances.

Interchange: After a brief indoctrination period, however, Mozart, Haydn, or almost any composer could have warmed to a Tanglewood audience. There are few concert halls where the hearers are more appreciative, or more discerning. The festival, a generous and well-run institution, has a way of making its guests feel at home, and they do their best to reciprocate.

On Münch's first night of conducting, soloists, orchestra, and chorus turned out one of the finest performances that could be extracted from the "Damnation," a very good piece of music. It was hard to believe, looking at the mobile and dedicated faces of the chorus and the quietly concentrating expressions of the audience at the finale, that these excellent voices, backed by one of the world's finest orchestras, were singing nothing more than the words which Berlioz, after consulting the works of the theologian Emanuel Swedenborg insisted was the language of the damned:

Diff! diff! Astaroth! Belzébuth! Belphégor!
Astaroth! Méphistol Sat, sat rayk irkimour.
Has! has! Méphisto! Irimiru karabrac!

Cervin Robinson



Howard S. Babbitt Jr.

With the informality of Tanglewood audiences went discerning appreciation of such conductors as Münch

Newsweek

70

MUSIC'S MOST TRANQUIL SUMMER FESTIVAL

In Lenox, Mass., the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch is giving the nation its annual great music conclave of the century until Aug. 15. From all over the nation music-lovers come to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, picnic before concerts on its beautiful lawns.

N. Y. Sunday Mirror-August

BUFFALO, N. Y.
COURIER-EXPRESS
JUL 11 1954

Berkshire Events

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., opens with an evening of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, cello) on Wednesday in the Theater - Concert Hall. An all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will occur on Friday in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Leo Smit

Works of Debussy and Franck, performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, is listed for Saturday in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, give a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain, the Wednesday and Friday

BOSTON MASS POST
JUL 11 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 10 — Berlioz' dramatic legend "The Damnation of Faust," the first concert to be held in the Music Shed, this season found Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony in their very best form. Anyone who heard the Brandenburg concertos on Friday night and the Berlioz tonight must have been gratified by the swift ascent from the Nadir of the untidy Bach to the Zenith of the inspired Berlioz. The audience tonight was over 8500.

Since "The Damnation" is the composer's masterpiece and Munch is the greatest of Berlioz interpreters, this is undoubtedly the artistic high point of the festival. The Symphony Hall performance last winter, with the same soloists and chorus—Eleanor Steber is the sole exception—was a memorable event but for several reasons. Tonight's performance was a notably better one.

The work is peculiar in structure, being neither a symphony, an opera, nor an oratorio, although it contains elements of each. The soloists need both operatic volume and art-song sensitivity; the orchestra must at once provide programmatic atmosphere and pure musical development of symphonic themes; and the chorus is both participant and commentator.

Eleanor Steber, whose rich and ample soprano filled the shed with glorious sound, makes Marguerite, usually the innocent and somewhat insipid victim of Mephistopheles, an impassioned young girl who counts the world well lost for love.

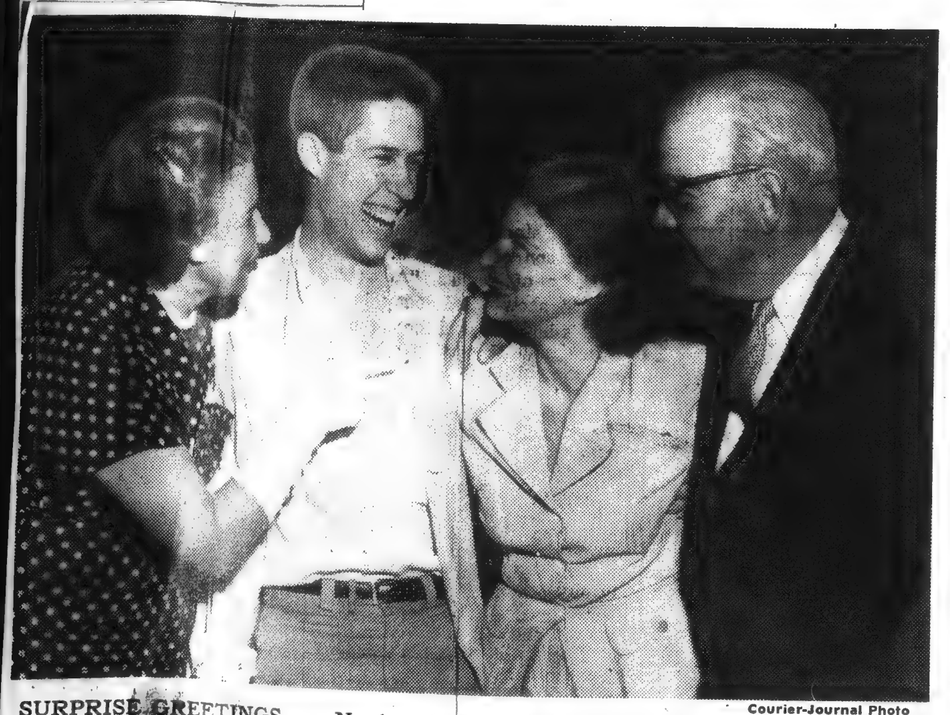
Interpretative Depth

David Poleri, Faust, has gained interpretative depth and he sang with less nervousness and vocal forcing than in Symphony Hall. Martial Singher's Mephisto, a part he has long sung with success in Europe, insinuates the diabolical nature of his role rather than bluntly stating it. Donald Gramm, a virile brander, has the very manner of the tankard-touching, rollicking student roarer of stein songs.

Making Tanglewood a last step in its first transcontinental tour, the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society turned in a sterling traversal of the many choral passages, winning a collective summa cum laude not only for precision, but for immaculate French diction.

Tonight's performance was a stirring event. Mr. Munch, who understands this music better than does any other living conductor, led his forces with a noticeable lessening in physical drive, but at the same time an assurance that they would be with him all the way.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER-JOURNAL
JUL 6 - 1954



Courier-Journal Photo

SURPRISE GREETINGS . . . Newlyweds Joan and Philip Bevington, members of the Harvard-Radcliffe College chorus that will sing at Gardencourt tonight, are greeted at the train station by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Avery, of Highland Park, Ill.

53 Is A Crowd, but Newlyweds Prefer Tour With Harvard-Radcliffe Singers

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bevington figure they will really have something to tell their grandchildren some day.

For the past three weeks they have been honeymooning coast to coast by train with 53 other singers of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe College Choral Society.

The singers arrived in Louisville last night for a concert at 8:30 p.m. today at Gardencourt.

A big surprise awaited the newlyweds at the train station. Mrs. Bevington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Avery, had driven from Highland Park, Ill., to meet them and attend tonight's concert.

It's not hard to see why Philip and his bride, Joan, decided to honeymoon with the touring chorus.

Their entire romance has been wrapped up in the singing group. They met as freshman members of the group and sang in it together throughout college. (Both were graduated this year.)

In addition, Joan is president of the Radcliffe society and Philip is vice-president of the Harvard group.

Philip is from Durham, N. C. He and Joan plan to make their home there when the tour ends. Both will do graduate work at Duke University there. He will study physics, she education.

The honeymoon "has been simply wonderful," Joan said. "And so unique and quite appropriate, don't you think?"

Philip and Joan were married at Cambridge, Mass., June 18, spent a weekend at Cape Cod, then joined the singers in Buffalo, N. Y.

The group then headed west. They gave concerts in 10 other cities, including Las Vegas, Los Angeles, and Seattle. It was the chorus's first tour west of the Mississippi.

The singers will join the Boston Symphony for a concert Saturday at Tanglewood, Mass., home of the Berkshire Festival. Earlier this season they sang with the Boston Symphony in Boston, Washington, and New York.

Professor G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor of the Harvard Glee Club, will direct the combined chorus in tonight's concert. It is sponsored by the Harvard Club of Louisville.

[206]

MILLERTON, N.Y.
NEWS
7/3/54

Evening Of Chamber Music On July 14 At Berkshire Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16 in the Theatre- Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 17, at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", with soloists and students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting (July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aarron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
JUL 8 - 1954

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
7/8/54

Evening Of Chamber Music On July 14 At Berkshire Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16 in the Theatre- Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 17, at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", with soloists and students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting (July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aarron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

... Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Saint-Seans: Symphony No. 3 (with organ).

The Hous
July 12, 1954
NORWALK, CONN.

3 ONE-ACT OPERAS AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Tuesday at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1954, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February of 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer; it will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS
JUL 18 1954

Berkshire Boys In Third Week

Four more concerts turn up in this, the third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, playing rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Rossini and Stravinsky, leads off on Wednesday night in the Theatre-Concert Hall. On Friday night, Hugh Ross conducts a chamber group, made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel and Haydn, again in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The full 104-piece Boston Symphony gets into the act Saturday night and the following afternoon in the Music Shed. Jean Morel leads the evening concert, made up of Prokofiev, Liszt, R. Strauss and Elgar music. Charles Munch takes over the baton for the daytime affair, presenting a program of Berlioz and Toch pieces and featuring violist William Primrose.

[207]

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Will Open Tonight

The Bel Arte string trio and pianist, Claudio Arrau will open the 17th Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This is the first of a series of six concerts of chamber music by noted ensembles and soloists. In the past a number of similar programs were generously donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge in aid of the Berkshire Music center and were patronized in such growing numbers—last year's attendance at the three Coolidge concerts averaged 1200 persons each—that Berkshire Festival Director, Charles Munch, conceived the idea this year of incorporating them into the framework of the Festival.

Tonight's all-Beethoven program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the first Tanglewood performance of the Trio, which consists of Ruth Posselt, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, violist; and Martin Hoherman, violoncellist. Although the ensemble was formed a few years ago, each of the artists is intimately connected with the Berkshire Music Center.

Miss Posselt, who is married to Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made many appearances, not only with the Boston orchestra, under the late Serge L. Koussevitzky, and under its present music director, Charles Munch, but also with the New York Philharmonic, and with Chicago, Detroit, Washington, Cincinnati, Cleveland and St. Louis symphonies. She is a Chamber Music department faculty member at the Berkshire Music center.

Mr. de Pasquale took his post as head of the Boston Symphony orchestra's viola section at the age of 27, at that time making him the youngest first violist of any major symphony orchestra in the United States.

Mr. Hoherman, cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, began his studies at seven at the Warsaw Conservatory of Music in his native Poland. He was with the Warsaw Radio Symphony orchestra for many years, as first cellist, and later as conductor.

Mr. Arrau, who will play three Beethoven piano Sonatas at this opening program, is donating his services to the Berkshire Music Center for the night. He has appeared at Tanglewood in previous Festivals as soloist with the Boston Symphony and will perform again with the full 104-piece orchestra on Sunday at 2:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed, in the Beethoven "Emperor," Piano Concerto with Pierre Monteux, as guest conductor of the orchestra.

Handel Tonight, Organ Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, conduct the chamber orchestra in Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony o nthis program. Mr. Ross will lead the orchestra, Festival Chorus and solists in the Haydn "Nelson" mass.

All students of the Berkshire Music Center, the soloists in the Hayden Mass will be Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto Marvin Worden, tenor; and Thomas Stewart, bass. Miss Farr, native of Salt Lake City, is a professional concert artist at Tanglewood for advanced opera - dramatics study with Frederic Cohen. She performs also in the opera department's July 27 evening of three one-act operas. Miss Krebs was soloist with the orchestra on July 16 in the Bach cantata performance and will be heard again on July 31 with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting.

Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, gives the first of two recitals on the organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed in Lenox, tomorrow at 3 p. m., as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, Aug. 7, at the same time.

Mr. Briggs, who is coming to Tanglewood on the heels of a two-month tour which included concerts in Bermuda, Iceland, Scandinavia and England, will play Vivaldi and Handel organ concertos, the Cesar Franck "Prelude, Fuge and Variation" and works by Couperin, Byrd and Purcell on his July 24 program.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 3 - 1954

Tanglewood Schedule Enlarged

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio.

Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening week end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's 9; Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening, and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 2 - 1954

ANTONIO GIARDINO

Ex-City Singer To Perform at Berkshire Fest

A native of Rochester, now a voice teacher in New York City, has been chosen to sing leading roles in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., which opens Monday.

He is Antonio Giardino, son of Nicholas Giardino of 225 Wimbledon Rd., formerly a student at old Washington High and later an East Evening High graduate.

Giardino received his early musical education at Hochstein School and at Eastman School of Music, attending both on scholarships. After leaving Eastman he won a scholarship at Chatham Square Music School in New York, a non-profit school devoted to training a limited number of highly talented students for the concert and opera stage.

He won the Berkshire Festival appointment in auditions that brought 500 singers to Carnegie Hall to try for the job.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 1 - 1954

Munch To Arrive From France For Concert Series

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York July 2 from Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Mass., tomorrow, to his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert July 9 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p.m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the music shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to advance knowledge of Berlioz and his works.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire ... center in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon (July 4) at 3:30, and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a.m., July 10, preceding the first music shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for a nominal admission, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
JUL 12 1954

Monteux Conducts Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 12 (HTNS)—The fourth Berkshire Festival program was conducted by Pierre Monteux in the shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3, and the Fifth Symphony by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The program drew 10,050 persons, bringing the total festival count to 22,750 since its opening Wednesday.

On Saturday night, an audience of 8,500 heard Charles Munch conduct the third Berkshire Festival program. The complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust." Participating was the full Boston Symphony, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles, and Donald Gramm, bass, as Brander.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY MIRROR
JUL 18 1954

Weekend Tours to Music Festival

SARATOGA SPRINGS and the Berkshire Music Festival form the chief ingredients of a new weekend tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each weekend through Aug. 14. The tour rate includes first-class hotel accommodations with private bath at the Henry Hudson Troy, round-trip ... admission to ... concerts and Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, and a visit to Saratoga Springs.

The tours leave New York at 9 a. m. every Saturday and return Sunday evening.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
7/8/54

Evening Of Chamber Music On July 14 At Berkshire Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16 in the Theatre- Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 17, at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", with soloists and students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting (July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aarron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

JUL 18 1954

Berkshire Boys In Third Week

Four more concerts turn up in this, the third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, playing rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Rossini and Stravinsky, leads off on Wednesday night in the Theatre-Concert Hall. On Friday night, Hugh Ross conducts a chamber group made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel and Haydn, again in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The full 104-piece Boston Symphony gets into the act Saturday night and the following afternoon in the Music Shed. Jean Morel leads the evening concert, made up of Prokofiev, Liszt, R. Strauss and Elgar music. Charles Munch takes over the baton for the daytime affair, presenting a program of Berlioz and Toch pieces and featuring violist William Primrose.

[207]

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL

JUL 8 - 1954

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
7/8/54 S

Evening Of Chamber Music On July 14 At Berkshire Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16 in the Theatre- Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 17, at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", with soloists and students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting (July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aarron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

...Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Saint-Seans: Symphony No. 3 (with organ).

The Hous
July 12, 1954
NORWALK, CONN.— W

3 ONE-ACT OPERAS AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Tuesday at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1954, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February of 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer; it will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER

JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Will Open Tonight

The Bel Arte string trio and pianist, Claudio Arrau will open the 17th Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This is the first of a series of six concerts of chamber music by noted ensembles and soloists. In the past a number of similar programs were generously donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge in aid of the Berkshire Music center and were patronized in such growing numbers—last year's attendance at the three Coolidge concerts averaged 1200 persons each—that Berkshire Festival Director, Charles Munch, conceived the idea this year of incorporating them into the framework of the Festival.

Tonight's all-Beethoven program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the first Tanglewood performance of the Trio, which consists of Ruth Posselt, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, violist; and Martin Hoherman, violoncellist. Although the ensemble was formed a few years ago, each of the artists is intimately connected with the Berkshire Music Center.

Miss Posselt, who is married to Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made many appearances, not only with the Boston orchestra, under the late Serge L. Koussevitzky, and under its present music director, Charles Munch, but also with the New York Philharmonic, and with Chicago, Detroit, Washington, Cincinnati, Cleveland and St. Louis symphonies. She is a Chamber Music department faculty member at the Berkshire Music center.

Mr. de Pasquale took his post as head of the Boston Symphony orchestra's viola section at the age of 27, at that time making him the youngest first violist of any major symphony orchestra in the United States.

Mr. Hoherman, cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, began his studies at seven at the Warsaw Conservatory of Music in his native Poland. He was with the Warsaw Radio Symphony orchestra for many years, as first cellist, and later as conductor.

Mr. Arrau, who will play three Beethoven piano Sonatas at this opening program, is donating his services to the Berkshire Music Center for the night. He has appeared at Tanglewood, in previous Festivals, as soloist with the Boston Symphony and will perform again with the full 104-piece orchestra on Sunday at 2:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed, in the Beethoven "Emperor," Piano Concerto with Pierre Monteux, as guest conductor of the orchestra.

Handel Tonight, Organ Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, conduct the chamber orchestra in Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony o ninis program. Mr. Ross will lead the orchestra, Festival Chorus and solists in the Haydn "Nelson" mass.

All students of the Berkshire Music Center, the soloists in the Haydn Mass will be Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto Marvin Worden, tenor; and Thomas Stewart, bass. Miss Farr, native of Salt Lake City, is a professional concert artist, at Tanglewood for advanced opera - dramatics study with Frederic Cohen. She performs also in the opera department's July 27 evening of three one-act operas. Miss Krebs was soloist with the orchestra on July 16 in the Bach cantata performance and will be heard again on July 31 with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor.

Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, gives the first of two recitals on the organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed in Lenox, tomorrow at 3 p. m., as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, Aug. 7, at the same time.

Mr. Briggs, who is coming to Tanglewood on the heels of a two-month tour which included concerts in Bermuda, Iceland, Scandinavia and England, will play Vivaldi and Handel organ concertos, the Cesar Franck "Prelude, Fuge and Variation" and works by Couperin, Byrd and Purcell on his July 24 program.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 3 - 1954

Tanglewood Schedule Enlarged

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio.

Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening week end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's 9; Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening, and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION

JUL 2 - 1954

ANTONIO GIARDINO

Ex-City Singer To Perform at Berkshire Fest

A native of Rochester, now a voice teacher in New York City, has been chosen to sing leading roles in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., which opens Monday.

He is Antonio Giardino, son of Nicholas Giardino of 225 Wimbledon Rd., formerly a student at old Washington High and later an East Evening High graduate.

Giardino received his early musical education at Hochstein School and at Eastman School of Music, attending both on scholarships. After leaving Eastman he won a scholarship at Chatham Square Music School in New York, a non-profit school devoted to training a limited number of highly talented students for the concert and opera stage.

He won the Berkshire Festival appointment in auditions that brought 500 singers to Carnegie Hall to try for the job.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 1 - 1954

Munch To Arrive From France For Concert Series

Charles Munch ... Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York ... Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Mass., tomorrow ... his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties ... conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer ... as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as Director ... of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert July 9 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p.m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the music shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Dammation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to advance knowledge of Berlioz and his works.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire ... concert in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon (July 4) at 3:30, and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a.m., July 10, preceding the first music shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for a nominal admission, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

JUL 12 1954

Monteux Conducts Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 12 (HTNS)—The fourth Berkshire Festival program was conducted by Pierre Monteux in the shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3, and the Fifth Symphony by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The program drew 10,050 persons, bringing the total festival count to 22,750 since its opening Wednesday.

On Saturday night, an audience of 8,500 heard Charles Munch conduct the third Berkshire Festival program. The complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust." Participating were the full Boston Symphony, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles, and Donald Gramm, bass, as Brander.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY MIRROR

JUL 18 1954

Weekend Tours to Music Festival

SARATOGA SPRINGS and the Berkshire Music Festival form the chief ingredients of a new weekend tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each week-end through Aug. 14. The tour rate includes first-class hotel accommodations with private bath at the Hotel ... Troy round ... visits ... Tanglewood, and a visit to Saratoga Springs.

The tours leave New York at 9 a. m. every Saturday and return Sunday evening.

MILLERTON, N. Y.
NEWS
7/3/54

Evening Of Chamber Music On July 14 At Berkshire Festival

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises an evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening July 14, in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening, July 16 in the Theatre- Concert Hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening, July 17, in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon, July 18, in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 17, at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", with soloists and students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting (July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aarron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

JUL 18 1954

Berkshire Boys In Third Week

Four more concerts turn up in this, the third week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, playing rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Rossini and Stravinsky, leads off on Wednesday night in the Theatre-Concert Hall. On Friday night, Hugh Ross conducts a chamber group made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Handel and Haydn, again in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The full 104-piece Boston Symphony gets into the act Saturday night and the following afternoon in the Music Shed. Jean Morel leads the evening concert, made up of Prokofiev, Liszt, R. Strauss and Elgar music. Charles Munch takes over the baton for the daytime affair, presenting a program of Berlioz and Toch pieces and featuring violist William Primrose.

[207]

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL

JUL 8 - 1954

Munch Announces Berkshire Festival Program Changes

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra announces changes in the concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., to be played by the orchestra in the Music Shed at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 1.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of of the Boston Symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture," to be followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," then by the Khatchaturian violin concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replace the previously scheduled "Chout ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak violin concerto.

Changes in the Berkshire Festival programs previously announced involve the concert of Aug. 14, in place of Miss Henriot's piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" in place of the Prelude to "Lohengrin" by Wagner. Pierre Monteux's originally planned all-Franck concert of July 17 has had Debussy's Excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer" substituted for Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides."

Revised programs are listed below:

Saturday evening July 17—Pierre Monteux, conductor:; Debussy: Excerpts, "St. Sebastian"; Franck: "Les Djinns," for Piano and Orchestra; soloist, Vera Franceschi; Debussy: "La Mer"; Franck: Symphony in D Minor.

Saturday evening July 24 —Jean Morel, conductor:; Prokofieff: Symphony No. 6; Liszt: E flat Piano Concerto; soloist, Nicole Henriot; Strauss: "Don Juan"; Elgar: "Enigma" Variations.

Sunday afternoon Aug. 1—Richard Burgin, conductor:; Wm. Schuman: "An American Festival Overture"; Vaughan Williams: "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis"; Khatchaturian: Violin Concerto; soloist, Ruth Posselt; Sibelius: Symphony No. 2.

Saturday evening Aug. 14—Charles Munch, conductor:; Brahms: "Tragic Overture"; Piston: Symphony No. 4; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Saint-Seans: Symphony No. 3 (with organ).

The Hour
July 12, 1954
NORWALK, CONN.—W

3 ONE-ACT OPERAS AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Tuesday at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1954, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February of 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer; it will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER

JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Will Open Tonight

The Bel Arte string trio and pianist, Claudio Arrau will open the 17th Berkshire Festival tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This is the first of a series of six concerts of chamber music by noted ensembles and soloists. In the past a number of similar programs were generously donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge in aid of the Berkshire Music center and were patronized in such growing numbers—last year's attendance at the three Coolidge concerts averaged 1200 persons each—that Berkshire Festival Director, Charles Munch, conceived the idea this year of incorporating them into the framework of the Festival.

Tonight's all-Beethoven program of chamber music in the Theater-Concert Hall will mark the first Tanglewood performance of the Trio, which consists of Ruth Posselt, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, violist; and Martin Hoherman, violoncellist. Although the ensemble was formed a few years ago, each of the artists is intimately connected with the Berkshire Music Center.

Miss Posselt, who is married to Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony orchestra, has made many appearances, not only with the Boston orchestra, under the late Serge L. Koussevitzky, and under its present music director, Charles Munch, but also with the New York Philharmonic, and with Chicago, Detroit, Washington, Cincinnati, Cleveland and St. Louis symphonies. She is a Chamber Music department faculty member at the Berkshire Music center.

Mr. de Pasquale took his post as head of the Boston Symphony orchestra's viola section at the age of 27, at that time making him the youngest first violist of any major symphony orchestra in the United States.

Mr. Hoherman, cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, began his studies at seven at the Warsaw Conservatory of Music in his native Poland. He was with the Warsaw Radio Symphony orchestra for many years, as first cellist, and later as conductor.

Mr. Arrau, who will play three Beethoven piano Sonatas at this opening program, is donating his services to the Berkshire Music Center for the night. He has appeared at Tanglewood in previous Festivals as soloist with the Boston Symphony and will perform again with the full 104-piece orchestra on Sunday at 2:30 o'clock, in the Music Shed, in the Beethoven "Emperor," Piano Concerto with Pierre Monteux, as guest conductor of the orchestra.

Handel Tonight, Organ Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, conduct the chamber orchestra in Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.30 p. m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

Mr. Munch will conduct Handel's Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony o ninis program. Mr. Ross will lead the orchestra, Festival Chorus and solists in the Haydn "Nelson" mass.

All students of the Berkshire Music Center, the soloists in the Haydn Mass will be Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto Marvin Worden, tenor; and Thomas Stewart, bass. Miss Farr, native of Salt Lake City, is a professional concert artist, at Tanglewood for advanced opera - dramatics study with Frederic Cohen. She performs also in the opera department's July 27 evening of three one-act operas. Miss Krebs was soloist with the orchestra on July 16 in the Bach cantata performance and will be heard again on July 31 with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting.

Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, gives the first of two recitals on the organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed in Lenox, tomorrow at 3 p. m., as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, Aug. 7, at the same time.

Mr. Briggs, who is coming to Tanglewood on the heels of a two-month tour which included concerts in Bermuda, Iceland, Scandinavia and England, will play Vivaldi and Handel organ concertos, the Cesar Franck "Prelude, Fuge and Variation" and works by Couperin, Byrd and Purcell on his July 24 program.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN

JUL 3 - 1954

Tanglewood Schedule Enlarged

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string trio.

Friday at 8:30 p. m. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening week end, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's 9; Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the festival's first three week ends this year are to be held each Friday evening, and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION

JUL 2 - 1954

ANTONIO GIARDINO

Ex-City Singer To Perform at Berkshire Fest

A native of Rochester, now a voice teacher in New York City, has been chosen to sing leading roles in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., which opens Monday.

He is Antonio Giardino, son of Nicholas Giardino of 225 Wimbledon Rd., formerly a student at old Washington High and later an East Evening High graduate.

Giardino received his early musical education at Hochstein School and at Eastman School of Music, attending both on scholarships. After leaving Eastman he won a scholarship at Chatham Square Music School in New York, a non-profit school devoted to training a limited number of highly talented students for the concert and opera stage.

He won the Berkshire Festival appointment in auditions that brought 500 singers to Carnegie Hall to try for the job.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 1 - 1954

Munch To Arrive From France For Concert Series

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrives in New York July 2 from Paris, and will drive to Lenox Mass., tomorrow, to his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as Director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert July 9 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p.m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following night he inaugurates the music shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Dammation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to advance knowledge of Berlioz and his works.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire concert in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon (July 4) at 3:30, and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a.m., July 10, preceding the first music shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for a nominal admission, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

JUL 12 1954

Monteux Conducts Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 12 (HTNS)—The fourth Berkshire Festival program was conducted by Pierre Monteux in the shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3, and the Fifth Symphony by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

The program drew 10,050 persons, bringing the total festival count to 22,750 since its opening Wednesday.

On Saturday night, an audience of 8,500 heard Charles Munch conduct the third Berkshire Festival program. The complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust." Participating was the full Boston Symphony, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles, and Donald Gramm, bass, as Brander.

Weekend Tours to Music Festival

SARATOGA SPRINGS and the Berkshire Music Festival form the latest ingredients of a new weekend tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each weekend through Aug. 14. The tour rate includes first-class hotel accommodations with private bath at the Hen[illegible] Hill, Troy, round-trip [illegible] admission to [illegible] concerts at Tanglewood, and a visit to Saratoga Springs.

The tours leave New York at 9 a. m. every Saturday and return Sunday evening.

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 17—With the single exception of Aaron Copland's early piano concerto scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, the programs in the music shed at Tanglewood this week end are devoted to the French composers, Debussy, Franck and Berlioz. Tonight, Pierre Monteux moved the 8500 listeners to cheers with the most stunning performance of Debussy's "La Mer" I have ever heard. It was a reading which dazzled the ears with every shade of color in the orchestral spectrum, touched the heart with warm emotion and stirred the pulse with its irresistible movement.

In "La Mer" Debussy employs the limitless timbres of the orchestra as a vast tonal palette in evoking the elusive moods of the sea. While seldom attempting a literal musical painting, he has set forth for his players a virtuoso exercise in recreating the everchanging colors, the mysterious impressions and the unfathomable tempers of the sea.

This work even when performed in a humdrum fashion is interesting; but when it is played as Monteux and the Boston Symphony did tonight, "La Mer" becomes an overwhelming experience. Monteux illuminates every bar with a phosphorescent glow, keeping the hearer on seat's edge with sheer opulent beauty of luminous sound. What is even more praiseworthy, the performance was unmarred by any personal idiosyncrasies by the conductor nor by a single blemish from any player in the band.

On Monday in Symphony Hall, these musicians will record this masterpiece; in all probability it will stand as the definitive performance.

Two excerpts from Debussy's incidental music for "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebestieen," somewhat pointless when wrenched from context, opened the concert. Though each short piece was pleasant, they only served to warm the orchestra for the more important "La Mer."

Caesar Franck's ambling symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," based on the Arabian Nights, introduced pianist Vera Franceschi to the Berkshire Festival. Since the composer has given the soloist little to do, an evaluation of Miss Franceschi's capabilities must wait until she can be heard in a more demanding assignment. However, she is very pretty and successfully diverted my mind from this time bleached opus.

The concert closed with a sturdy rendition of Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM
JUL 11 1954

More To Piano Than Just Playing

LENOX, Mass., July 10 (UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 69 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

Eagle - July 22

Tanglewood Students To Present Three One-Act Operas Tuesday

TANGLEWOOD — Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performanee here, on Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the theater-concert hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the United States. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February of 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer. It will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

Ernst Toch

Guest Teacher of Composition

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a story by Christian Andersen. It was first performed in Baden-Baden in 1927; by the WPA-Federal Theater, New York, in 1936; it will have its first Tanglewood performance here next Tuesday.

The three one-act operas are produced by Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department. "L'Amfiparnaso" and "The Princess and the Pea", are staged by Mr. Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl; "There and Back" by Morton Siegel. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenehip; costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct "L'Amfiparnaso." Samuel Krachmalnick will conduct an orchestra of the school's Department I students for "There and Back"; Paul Vermel will lead the student orchestra for "The Princess and the Pea."

Music in Review

Boston POST July 18

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 18—Charles Munch makes Debussy's brightly-hued "Iberia," the opening work on this afternoon's Berkshire festival program at Tanglewood, a personal triumph in much the same way Koussevitzky used to dazzle the listeners with Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, by bringing to the score an unrelenting drive and a decidedly personal approach to the music. Accelerating the tempo does give excitement galore, and no one can deny that today's "Iberia" had excitement.

However, tempo alone is not all that was praiseworthy in Mr. Munch's interpretation. Sharply accented Spanish rhythms, Kleig-lighted isolated orchestral effects, and original podium choreography played their parts. Normally, I heartily dislike the wiry, dry string tone the conductor favors, but in both "Les Parfums De La Nuit" and "Par Les Rues Et Par Les Chemins," it is precisely the right timbre.

When Aaron Copland's piano concerto was first played in 1926, press and listener reacted violently to the strong (and I might add self-conscious) dissonant idioms based on the jazz of the 20s. Yet, the startingly misplaced notes and tonalities of that era have become commonplace in 1954. When Mr. Munch revived the concerto last winter in Symphony Hall, the work was received with considerable admiration. This afternoon the score proved great fun with the conductor, soloist Leo Smit, and the Boston Symphony throwing themselves into the music with understanding and fervor. I am not saying that it was a cool reading because the hot licks of the score preclude that.

However, it is to be pitied that Mr. Copland, who directs the music school here each summer, was not asked for a new piece, something more representative of the Copland style.

The concert closed with Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," a composition giving Mr. Munch an opportunity to display his ability as a master of orchestral effects.

Biggs to Play at Berkshire Festival

Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, gives the first of two recitals on the great organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass., tomorrow at 3:00 p.m., as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, August 7, at the same time.

Tanglewood Tales

1,450 in Audience For Zimbler Concert

Last night's chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall attracted an audience of 1,450. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, made up of 21 musicians from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, presented the program, under Josef Zimbler, conductor.

* * *

Munch Picks Soloist For Berlioz Symphony

Beatrice Krebs, who is spending her second summer at the Berkshire Music Center as a student in opera dramatics, has been selected by Charles Munch to sing the contralto role in the Berlioz symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," with the BSO in the Shed concert here Saturday, July 31. Jennie Tourel sang the role last year.

Miss Krebs has sung with the New York City Opera Company, the Little Orchestra, the New York Oratorio Society, and has been on tour with Robert Shaw's Chorale. Last summer she sang under Hugh Ross' direction in Haydn's "Theresa" Mass on a Festival chamber orchestra program, and in the Gluck opera "L'Yvrogne Corrige" for the opera department. This summer she has sung Bach's Cantata No. 93 and Haydn's Nelson Mass on Festival chamber orchestra programs, and sings the contralto role of the mother in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land" on Tuesday, Aug. 3.

* * *

Miss Green To Sing At Bynden Wood

Another popular Tanglewood soloist, Theresa Green, takes temporary leave of the Berkshire Music Center campus to sing at the Bynden Wood Festival, Wernersville, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, next Tuesday evening. Miss Green will be a soloist in the chamber orchestra program Lukas Foss will conduct Friday, Aug. 6.

Young Bowl Visitor To Make Stage Debut

Eva Rubin, a nine-year-old Buffalo girl, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Michell I. Rubin, who summers at Stockbridge Bowl, will make her stage debut in both performances of "The Tender Land." Young Miss Rubin, who attends Campus School of New York State Teachers College, was "drafted" for the role of Beth, the younger daughter of a Kansas farm woman by neighbor Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, and recommended to Mr. Cohen.

Judd Speaks in Albany Honored by Glee Club

George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, addressed the Kiwanis Club of Albany, N.Y. Tuesday, on the subject of Tanglewood. Mr. Judd was also this week made an honorary member of the Harvard Glee Club, following the choristers' appearance at Tanglewood in "The Damnation of Faust," and presented with a handsome illuminated scroll by G. Wallace Woodworth, the glee club director.

Smit Composes Madrigals To Be Heard on Aug. 10

For the next concert of the choral department, Berkshire Music Center, Tuesday, Aug. 10, Hugh Ross will include "Seven Madrigals for a Roman Lady," for small chorus a capella, based on poems by Catullus, composed by Leo Smit, young pianist, who was featured in the Aaron Copland Piano Concerto in last Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert. Mr. Smit composed the madrigals in February, 1953.

Student Orchestra In Shed Tonight

The student orchestra of Department 1 at the Berkshire Music Center will give a concert tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the final portion of the program. Other conductors to appear during the evening are Henry Janiec, Samual Krachmalnick and Paul Vermel. Tiberius Klausner will be violin soloist with the orchestra, playing Chausson's "Poéme for Violin and Orchestra."

The program for the Friends concert follows:

Phaeton, Symphonic Poem, Opus 39, Saint-Saens
Henry Janiec, Conductor.

Symphony No. 3 in F major, Opus 90, Brahms
Allegro con brio.
Andante.
Poco allegretto.
Allegro.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.

Intermission.

Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 25, Chausson
Tiberius Klausner, Soloist.
Paul Vermel, Conductor.

Three Pictures from the Opera, Tsar Sultan, after Pushkin's Tale, Opus 57, Rimsky-Korsakov
Allegretto alla marcia.
Introduction to Act II: Maestro.
The Three Wonders.
Richard Burgin, Conductor.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 11 1954

W. Hartford Violinist Has Tanglewood Post

Miss Adrienne Rosenbaum, of 59 Maplewood Avenue, West Hartford, who was graduated from William H. Hall High School this year, has received a scholarship at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. Miss Rosenbaum, a violinist, will continue for six weeks at Tanglewood and then will attend the New England Conservatory of Music.

TANGLEWOOD PARADE plans are being discussed at the first committee meeting this week by, left to right, Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, secretary; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, vice chairman; Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman; and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield, vice chairman. A press release published last night erroneously stated Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, was cochairman of the Tanglewood on Parade committee. Miss Robinson Smith accepted the chairmanship of the box section committee rather than cochairman of the over-all group. The event is Aug. 13 for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Eagle - July 21

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Eagles' Band Concert, officially opening the 54th annual Mardi gras, Park Square.

8:30—Student concert by Department I orchestra. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

[208]

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 17—With the single exception of Aaron Copland's early piano concerto scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, the programs in the music shed at Tanglewood this week end are devoted to the French composers, Debussy, Franck and Berlioz. Tonight, Pierre Monteux moved the 8500 listeners to cheers with the most stunning performance of Debussy's "La Mer" I have ever heard. It was a reading which dazzled the ears with every shade of color in the orchestral spectrum, touched the heart with warm emotion and stirred the pulse with its irresistible movement.

In "La Mer" Debussy employs the limitless timbres of the orchestra as a vast tonal palette in evoking the elusive moods of the sea. While seldom attempting a literal musical painting, he has set forth for his players a virtuoso exercise in recreating the everchanging colors, the mysterious impressions and the unfathomable tempers of the sea.

This work even when performed in a humdrum fashion is interesting; but when it is played as Monteux and the Boston Symphony did tonight, "La Mer" becomes an overwhelming experience. Monteux illuminates every bar with a phosphorescent glow, keeping the hearer on seat's edge with sheer opulent beauty of luminous sound. What is even more praiseworthy, the performance was unmarred by any personal idiosyncrasies by the conductor nor by a single blemish from any player in the band.

On Monday in Symphony Hall, these musicians will record this masterpiece; in all probability it will stand as the definitive performance.

Two excerpts from Debussy's incidental music for "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebestieen," somewhat pointless when wrenched from context, opened the concert. Though each short piece was pleasant, they only served to warm the orchestra for the more important "La Mer."

Caesar Franck's ambling symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," based on the Arabian Nights, introduced pianist Vera Franceschi to the Berkshire Festival. Since the composer has given the soloist little to do, an evaluation of Miss Franceschi's capabilities must wait until she can be heard in a more demanding assignment. However, she is very pretty and successfully diverted my mind from this time bleached opus.

The concert closed with a sturdy rendition of Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

PORTLAND, ME.
TELEGRAM
JUL 11 1954

More To Piano Than Just Playing

LENOX, Mass., July 10 (UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 65 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

Tanglewood Students To Present Three One-Act Operas Tuesday

TANGLEWOOD — Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance here, on Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the theater-concert hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the United States. It was given its first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February of 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer. It will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

Guest Teacher of Composition

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale. It was first performed in Baden-Baden in 1927; by the WPA-Federal Theater, New York, in 1936; it will have its first Tanglewood performance here next Tuesday.

Ernst Toch

The three one-act operas are produced by Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department. "L'Amfiparnaso" and "The Princess and the Pea" are staged by Mr. Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl; "There and Back" by Morton Siegel. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenchip; costumes and make-up by Leo Van Witsen. Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct "L'Amfiparnaso." Samuel Krachmalnick will conduct an orchestra of the school's Department I students for "There and Back"; Paul Vermel will lead the student orchestra for "The Princess and the Pea."

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 18—Charles Munch makes Debussy's brightly-hued "Iberia," the opening work on this afternoon's Berkshire festival program at Tanglewood, a personal triumph in much the same way Koussevitzky used to dazzle the listeners with Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, by bringing to the score an unrelenting drive and a decidedly personal approach to the music. Accelerating the tempo does give excitement galore, and no one can deny that today's "Iberia" had excitement.

However, tempo alone is not all that was praiseworthy in Mr. Munch's interpretation. Sharply accented Spanish rhythms, Kleig-lighted isolated orchestral effects, and original podium choreography played their parts. Normally, I heartily dislike the wiry, dry string tone the conductor favors, but in both "Les Parfums De La Nuit" and "Par Les Rues Et Par Les Chemins," it is precisely the right timbre.

When Aaron Copland's piano concerto was first played in 1926, press and listener reacted violently to the strong (and I might add self-conscious) dissonant idioms based on the jazz of the 20s. Yet, the startingly misplaced notes and tonalities of that era have become commonplace in 1954. When Mr. Munch revived the concerto last winter in Symphony Hall, the work was received with considerable admiration. This afternoon the score proved great fun with the conductor, soloist Leo Smit, and the Boston Symphony throwing themselves into the music with understanding and fervor. I am not saying that it was a cool reading because the hot licks of the score preclude that.

However, it is to be pitied that Mr. Copland, who directs the music school here each summer, was not asked for a new piece, something more representative of the Copland style.

The concert closed with Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," a composition giving Mr. Munch an opportunity to display his ability as a master of orchestral effects.

Biggs to Play at Berkshire Festival

Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, gives the first of two recitals on the great organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass., tomorrow at 3:00 p.m., as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, August 7, at the same time.

Tanglewood Tales

1,450 in Audience For Zimbler Concert

Last night's chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall attracted an audience of 1,450. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, made up of 21 musicians from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, presented the program, under Josef Zimbler, conductor.

* * *

Munch Picks Soloist For Berlioz Symphony

Beatrice Krebs, who is spending her second summer at the Berkshire Music Center as a student in opera dramatics, has been selected by Charles Munch to sing the contralto role in the Berlioz symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," with the BSO in the Shed concert here Saturday, July 31. Jennie Tourel sang the role last year.

Miss Krebs has sung with the New York City Opera Company, the Little Orchestra, the New York Oratorio Society, and has been on tour with Robert Shaw's Chorale. Last summer she sang under Hugh Ross' direction in Haydn's "Theresa" Mass on a Festival chamber orchestra program, and in the Gluck opera "L'Yvrogne Corrige" for the opera department. This summer she has sung Bach's Cantata No. 93 and Haydn's Nelson Mass on Festival chamber orchestra programs, and sings the contralto role of the mother in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land" on Tuesday, Aug. 3.

* * *

Miss Green To Sing At Bynden Wood

Another popular Tanglewood soloist, Theresa Green, takes temporary leave of the Berkshire Music Center campus to sing at the Bynden Wood Festival, Wernersville, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia, next Tuesday evening. Miss Green will be a soloist in the chamber orchestra program Lukas Foss will conduct Friday, Aug. 6.

Young Bowl Visitor To Make Stage Debut

Eva Rubin, a nine-year-old Buffalo girl, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Michell I. Rubin, who summers at Stockbridge Bowl, will make her stage debut in both performances of "The Tender Land." Young Miss Rubin, who attends Campus School of New York State Teachers College, was "drafted" for the role of Beth, the younger daughter of a Kansas farm woman by neighbor Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, and recommended to Mr. Cohen.

Judd Speaks in Albany Honored by Glee Club

George E. Judd, retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, addressed the Kiwanis Club of Albany, N.Y. Tuesday, on the subject of Tanglewood. Mr. Judd was also this week made an honorary member of the Harvard Glee Club, following the choristers' appearance at Tanglewood in "The Damnation of Faust," and presented with a handsome illuminated scroll by G. Wallace Woodworth, the glee club director.

Smit Composes Madrigals To Be Heard on Aug. 10

For the next concert of the choral department, Berkshire Music Center, Tuesday, Aug. 10, Hugh Ross will include "Seven Madrigals for a Roman Lady," for small chorus a capella, based on poems by Catullus, composed by Leo Smit, young pianist, who was featured in the Aaron Copland Piano Concerto in last Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert. Mr. Smit composed the madrigals in February, 1953.

Student Orchestra In Shed Tonight

The student orchestra of Department 1 at the Berkshire Music Center will give a concert tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the final portion of the program. Other conductors to appear during the evening are Henry Janiec, Samual Krachmalnick and Paul Vermel. Tiberius Klausner will be violin soloist with the orchestra, playing Chausson's "Poéme for Violin and Orchestra."

The program for the Friends concert follows:

Phaeton, Symphonic Poem, Opus 39, Saint-Saens
Henry Janiec, Conductor.

Symphony No. 3 in F major, Opus 90, Brahms
Allegro con brio.
Andante.
Poco allegretto.
Allegro.
Samuel Krachmalnick, Conductor.

Intermission.

Poeme for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 25, Chausson
Tiberius Klausner, Soloist.
Paul Vermel, Conductor.

Three Pictures from the Opera, Tsar Sultan, after Pushkin's Tale, Opus 57, Rimsky-Korsakov
Allegretto alla marcia.
Introduction to Act II: Maestro.
The Three Wonders.
Richard Burgin, Conductor.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 11 1954

W. Hartford Violinist Has Tanglewood Post

Miss Adrienne Rosenbaum, of 59 Maplewood Avenue, West Hartford, who was graduated from William H. Hall High School this year, has received a scholarship at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass. Miss Rosenbaum, a violinist, will continue for six weeks at Tanglewood and then will attend the New England Conservatory of Music.

TANGLEWOOD PARADE plans are being discussed at the first committee meeting this week by, left to right, Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield, secretary; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, vice chairman; Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, chairman; and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield, vice chairman. A press release published last night erroneously stated Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, was cochairman of the Tanglewood on Parade committee. Miss Robinson Smith accepted the chairmanship of the box section committee rather than cochairman of the over-all group. The event is Aug. 13 for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Eagles' Band Concert, officially opening the 39th annual Mardi gras, Park Square.

8:30—Student concert by Department I orchestra. Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox.

[208]

Eagle - July 22 City Edition

Music

Zimbler Sinfonietta Scores In Chamber Music Series

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

The third of the new chamber music series of the Berkshire Festival was played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, a group of 19 Boston Symphony Orchestra men organized into a small ensemble by Josef Zimbler, a member of the cello section of the orchestra. Their program was most happily chosen, consisting of three works rarely heard and all of them full of contrasting interest and delight.

* * *

THE CENTRAL portion of the program was the "Apollon Musagete," a ballet in two scenes by Igor Stravinsky. In 1927 he was commissioned by the great Pittsfield patroness of music, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, to write a work with only two qualifications: that it should take about a half-hour and require only a few players. His was the choice of subject. It gave him a chance to put into affect an idea that had long tempted him, the theme of Apollo, the god of the arts and music, the leader of the Muses. It was finished in 1928 and firstp layed in Washington with choreography of Adolph Bolm. Stravinsky himself directed it for its first Paris performance with the Diaghilef ballet and Georges Balanchine as master of ballet and Danilova in the company.

* * *

WITHOUT SCENERY and dancing it is still highly enjoyable music, transporting, indeed, as it was played last night. The Zimblers play without a conductor, but George Zazofsky, whose evening it was essentially, directs from his seat as leader and concertmaster. The ensemble even achieved its best sonority here, too, thanks not a little to Mr. Stravinsky, who divides the celli into two parts, thus, with the double bass, making the work a sextet. There was imaginative lilt and grace to the performance and the popular rhythms and harmonics were extremely appealing.

Mr. Zazofsky was the soloist in the opening concerto for string orchestra, "The Four Seasons" of Vivaldi. Here the ensemble had the assistance of Fernando Valenti, harpsichord, and Emil Kornsand took over the concertmaster's duties. There are four acts, one for each of the seasons, not sufficiently differentiated to warrant their complete reading, but nevertheless quite remarkable as evidence of Vivaldi's creative faculties.

* * *

HE ATTEMPTED to make his musical ideas correspond with the sentiments of several poems. Birds of spring are easily discernible in the beginning. Thunder and lightning are easily depicted and so on. Mr. Zazofsky took full advantage of the opportunities that Vivaldi, himself a violin virtuoso, created, and who was accused of excessive striving after display. The soloist played the florid passages with complete mastery, clear and clean.

The final number, a sonata for violins, cellos and double bass by Rossini, was the gayest, most light-hearted music in a long time. He treats the instruments as vocalists and immediately after a short introduction, gives the mezzo soprano, the second violins, a lovely aria, in which they have a chance to ascend to some reaches of their E string that they never ordinarily explore.

Then comes the turn of the bass viol. Here Henry Portnoi executed his air for basso profundo with the ease and facility of a player of a viol de braccia. Then the principal cellist, Mr. Zimbler himself, who retiringly never took an individual bow, has an ingratiating solo. Rossini portrays the romantic hero, and his villain makes one shudder. Concertmasters Zazofsky and Kornsand each had coloratura episodes, all of which contributed to a bombastic but hilarious finale.

Newsweek Features Tanglewood Story, Bishop-Elect Stokes

Two Berkshire County achievements—the 15th Tanglewood season and the appointment of Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr. as bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts—are reported in the current issue of Newsweek.

In commenting on the music season at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Newsweek spoke favorably of the performance of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

"As a day-in, day-out conductor, Munch has a long way to go before he will approach the lofty style and flair of his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky," said the Newsweek article. "But playing Berlioz, an old favorite of his, he was on his strongest possible ground."

Compliments Audiences

Newsweek also complimented Tanglewood audiences: "After a brief introduction period, Mozart, Haydn or almost any composer could have warmed to a Tanglewood audience. There are few concert halls where the hearers are more appreciative or more discerning. The Festival, a generous and well-run institution, has a way of making its guests feel at home, and they do their best to reciprocate."

In the story of Dr. Stokes, Newsweek cited the long family record of religious service. It said in part, "The Stokes family's record of religious and philanthropic service in America is a long and distinguished one."

The article also pointed out his association with Berkshire County through his early years here and through his father, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes of Lenox, as well as his wife, the former Hope Procter of Stockbridge.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. GAZETTE

JUL 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Music Season Opens Tomorrow Evening

The gala opening of the 1954 season at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, three weeks earlier than in other seasons.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices assisting the orchestra. Soloists, all making their Tanglewood debuts, are Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

THE WORK, which runs for two and a half hours with a single intermission, has never before been presented at a Berkshire festival but Munch conducted it in Boston last winter.

A program made up of five of the Brandenburg concertos will be played tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert hall on the Tanglewood grounds with Munch conducting.

The first afternoon Music Shed concert will be held Sunday at 2:30 o'clock with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor in an all-Beethoven program, including the "Overture to 'Lenora' No. 3"; "Piano Concerto No. 5, 'Emperor'," and the "Symphony No. 5."

* * *

CLAUDIO ARRAU, the eminent Chilean pianist, who will be the soloist, first appeared with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Feb. 4, 1924, under the direction of Monteux. His return to Tanglewood Sunday marks the 30th anniversary of his association with the Boston Symphony, with which he has played many times in his career.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Berkshire festival concerts and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before each performance.

ALBANY, N. Y. TIMES-UNION

JUL 10 1954

MUSIC UNDER THE SKY—More than 15,000 music lovers are expected to attend the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this year. Tonight Charles Munch will conduct "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, and Pierre Monteux will conduct an all Beethoven program tomorrow afternoon.

HARTFORD, CONN. TIMES

JUL 10 1954

Brandenburg Concerti Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — The annual celebration dedicated to the glorification of both music and the tourist trade and known as the Berkshire Music Festival opened here last night with all the appropriate fanfare and all but one of the six Brandenburg Concerti of Bach.

It is not unusual, shall we say, for Tanglewood to open with one or more of the Brandenburg Concerti. These eminently worthy compositions have become something of a ritual with this festival. Indeed, it might be possible to imagine that Bach wrote nothing else beyond these six concerti, since they have been performed here for the past three years without a single lapse or variation.

* * *

ONLY ONCE BEFORE, I believe, have Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra made such a marathon of it and performed five of them on one evening. Towards the end of the concert it became a contest as to who would succumb first, Mr. Munch, the orchestra, the audience or Bach.

All this is not to say that the music was not ably, even exquisitely, performed. Each piece this year was turned out with even more bite and vivacity than ever before, although if memory serves, some lots of tonal shimmer was sacrificed for the added energy. Only the Fourth Concerto was omitted this year.

The high point of the Brandenburgs was, as it always has been, the unsurpassable performance of Lukas Foss in the Fifth. Mr. Foss has made the piano rendition of this piece something that is very much his own, and I doubt if there is a pianist in the land who can give the brilliant cadenza in the first movement so much rich expressiveness.

* * *

AFTER MR. FOSS' unbeatable cadenza might come the delicate interplay of Doriot Anthony on the flute and Ralph Gomberg on the oboe in the Second Even Roger Voisin, who seems to be able to play a very mean trumpet except in this super-human trumpet part, excelled himself and did a creditable job.

Dr. Munch, who seems to have a great affinity as well as an inordinate fondness for these works, conducted throughout the arduous evening with lavish attention to detail and nuance without once allowing the broad sweep and power of the music to escape him.

Some 2,300 music admirers seated themselves in the Theater Concert Hall and sprawled themselves on the grass outside to hear the music. The night itself was cool and most conducive to a pleasant evening of listening. Only Bach, I fear, might have had cause to swelter a bit. He must now and then wonder why the inexhaustible splendor and richness of the vast amount of music he created must remain unheard by Tanglewood ears.

Public Events

July 23 Eagle

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Farm Square Dance. School campus, Canaan, N.Y.

8:30—Concert by chamber orchestra, Charles Munch and Hugh [illegible] conductors. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

WATERBURY, CONN. REPUBLICAN

JUL 11 1954

Tanglewood To Feature Bach Program

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteu will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, are placed on sale on the day of performance and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the orchestra Saturday at 10 a. m. A fee of $1 will be charged for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of the Choral and Opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center; of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Debussy and "Les Djinns," by Franck; of Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto. Pianists Franceschi and Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

July 25 NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JU

Tanglewood Opera, Stadium Concert

Emelina De Vita and John Hornor as the Queen and King in Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," to be produced in triple opera bill Tuesday night at Tanglewood.

[209]

Eagle - July 22 City Edition

Music

Zimbler Sinfonietta Scores In Chamber Music Series

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

The third of the new chamber music series of the Berkshire Festival was played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, a group of 19 Boston Symphony Orchestra men organized into a small ensemble by Josef Zimbler, a member of the cello section of the orchestra. Their program was most happily chosen, consisting of three works rarely heard and all of them full of contrasting interest and delight.

* * *

THE CENTRAL portion of the program was the "Apollon Musagete," a ballet in two scenes by Igor Stravinsky. In 1927 he was commissioned by the great Pittsfield patroness of music, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, to write a work with only two qualifications: that it should take about a half-hour and require only a few players. His was the choice of subject. It gave him a chance to put into affect an idea that had long tempted him, the theme of Apollo, the god of the arts and music, the leader of the Muses. It was finished in 1928 and firstp layed in Washington with choreography of Adolph Bolm. Stravinsky himself directed it for its first Paris performance with the Diaghilef ballet and Georges Balanchine as master of ballet and Danilova in the company.

* * *

WITHOUT SCENERY and dancing it is still highly enjoyable music, transporting, indeed, as it was played last night. The Zimblers play without a conductor, but George Zazofsky, whose evening it was essentially, directs from his seat as leader and concertmaster. The ensemble even achieved its best sonority here, too, thanks not a little to Mr. Stravinsky, who divides the celli into two parts, thus, with the double bass, making the work a sextet. There was imaginative lilt and grace to the performance and the popular rhythms and harmonics were extremely appealing.

Mr. Zazofsky was the soloist in the opening concerto for string orchestra, "The Four Seasons" of Vivaldi. Here the ensemble had the assistance of Fernando Valenti, harpsichord, and Emil Kornsand took over the concertmaster's duties. There are four acts, one for each of the seasons, not sufficiently differentiated to warrant their complete reading, but nevertheless quite remarkable as evidence of Vivaldi's creative faculties.

* * *

HE ATTEMPTED to make his musical ideas correspond with the sentiments of several poems. Birds of spring are easily discernible in the beginning. Thunder and lightning are easily depicted and so on. Mr. Zazofsky took full advantage of the opportunities that Vivaldi, himself a violin virtuoso, created, and who was accused of excessive striving after display. The soloist played the fiorid passages with complete mastery, clear and clean.

The final number, a sonata for violins, cellos and double bass by Rossini, was the gayest, most light-hearted music in a long time. He treats the instruments as vocalists and immediately after a short introduction, gives the mezzo soprano, the second violins, a lovely aria, in which they have a chance to ascend to some reaches of their E string that they never ordinarily explore.

Then comes the turn of the bass viol. Here Henry Portnoi executed his air for basso profundo with the ease and facility of a player of a viol de braccia. Then the principal cellist, Mr. Zimbler himself, who retiringly never took an individual bow, has an ingratiating solo. Rossini portrays the romantic hero, and his villain makes one shudder. Concertmasters Zazofsky and Kornsand each had coloratura episodes, all of which contributed to a bombastic but hilarious finale.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 10 1954

Newsweek Features Tanglewood Story, Bishop-Elect Stokes

Two Berkshire County achievements—the 15th Tanglewood season and the appointment of Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr. as bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts—are reported in the current issue of Newsweek.

In commenting on the music season at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Newsweek spoke favorably of the performance of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

"As a day-in, day-out conductor, Munch has a long way to go before he will approach the lofty style and flair of his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky," said the Newsweek article. "But playing Berlioz, an old favorite of his, he was on his strongest possible ground."

Compliment Audiences

Newsweek also complimented Tanglewood audiences: "After a brief introduction period, Mozart, Haydn or almost any composer could have warmed to a Tanglewood audience. There are few concert halls where the hearers are more appreciative or more discerning. The Festival, a generous and well-run institution, has a way of making its guests feel at home, and they do their best to reciprocate."

In the story of Dr. Stokes, Newsweek cited the long family record of religious service. It said in part, "The Stokes family's record of religious and philanthropic service in America is a long and distinguished one."

The article also pointed out his association with Berkshire County through his early years here and through his father, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes of Lenox, as well as his wife, the former Hope Procter of Stockbridge.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Music Season Opens Tomorrow Evening

The gala opening of the 1954 season at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, three weeks earlier than in other seasons.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices assisting the orchestra. Soloists, all making their Tanglewood debuts, are Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

THE WORK, which runs for two and a half hours with a single intermission, has never before been presented at a Berkshire festival but Munch conducted it in Boston last winter.

A program made up of five of the Brandenburg concertos will be played tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert hall on the Tanglewood grounds with Munch conducting.

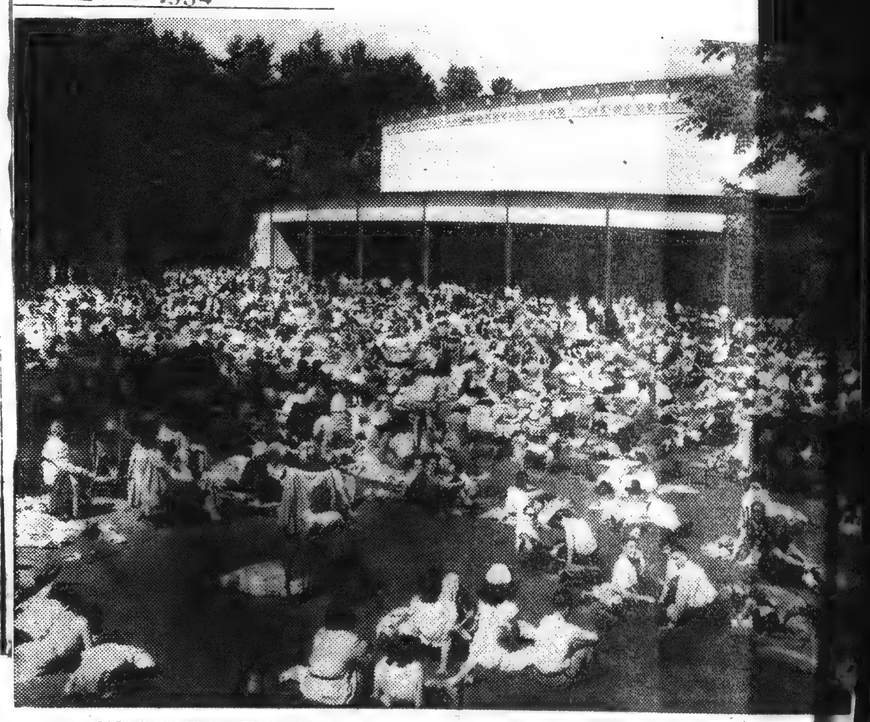
The first afternoon Music Shed concert will be held Sunday at 2:30 o'clock with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor in an all-Beethoven program, including the "Overture to 'Lenore' No. 3"; "Piano Concerto No. 5, 'Emperor'," and the "Symphony No. 5."

* * *

CLAUDIO ARRAU, the eminent Chilean pianist, who will be the soloist, first appeared with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Feb. 4, 1924, under the direction of Monteux. His return to Tanglewood Sunday marks the 30th anniversary of his association with the Boston Symphony, with which he has played many times in his career.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Berkshire festival concerts and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before each performance.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 10 1954



MUSIC UNDER THE SKY—More than 15,000 music lovers are expected to attend the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this year. Tonight Charles Munch will conduct "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, and Pierre Monteux will conduct an all Beethoven program tomorrow afternoon.

Brandenburg Concerti Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — The annual celebration dedicated to the glorification of both music and the tourist trade and known as the Berkshire Music Festival opened here last night with all the appropriate fanfare and all but one of the six Brandenburg Concerti of Bach.

It is not unusual, shall we say, for Tanglewood to open with one or more of the Brandenburg Concerti. These eminently worthy compositions have become something of a ritual with this festival. Indeed, it might be possible to imagine that Bach wrote nothing else beyond these six concerti, since they have been performed here for the past three years without a single lapse or variation.

* * *

ONLY ONCE BEFORE, I believe, have Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra made such a marathon of it and performed five of them on one evening. Towards the end of the concert it became a contest as to who would succumb first, Mr. Munch, the orchestra, the audience or Bach.

All this is not to say that the music was not ably, even exquisitely, performed. Each piece this year was turned out with even more bite and vivacity than ever before, although if memory serves, some lota of tonal shimmer was sacrificed for the added energy. Only the Fourth Concerto was omitted this year.

The high point of the Brandenburgs was, as it always has been, the unsurpassable performance of Lukas Foss in the Fifth. Mr. Foss has made the piano rendition of this piece something that is very much his own, and I doubt if there is a pianist in the land who can give the brilliant cadenza in the first movement so much rich expressiveness.

* * *

AFTER MR. FOSS' unbeatable cadenza might come the delicate interplay of Doriot Anthony on the flute and Ralph Gomberg on the oboe in the Second Even Roger Voisin, who seems to be able to play a very mean trumpet except in this super-human trumpet part, excelled himself and did a creditable job.

Dr. Munch, who seems to have a great affinity as well as an inordinate fondness for these works, conducted throughout the arduous evening with lavish attention to detail and nuance without once allowing the broad sweep and power of the music to escape him.

Some 2,300 music admirers seated themselves in the Theater Concert Hall and sprawled themselves on the grass outside to hear the music. The night itself was cool and most conducive to a pleasant evening of listening. Only Bach, I fear, might have had cause to swelter a bit. He must now and then wonder why the inexhaustible splendor and richness of the vast amount of music he created must remain unheard by Tanglewood ears.

Public Events

July 23

Tonight

8:30—Berkshire Farm Square Dance. School campus, Canaan, N.Y.

8:30—Concert by chamber orchestra, Charles Munch and Hugh [illegible], conductors. Theater Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 11 1954

Tanglewood To Feature Bach Program

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra. A Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteu will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, are placed on sale on the day of performance and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the orchestra Saturday at 10 a. m. A fee of $1 will be charged for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of the Choral and Opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center; of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Debussy and "Les Djinns," by Franck; of Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto. Pianists Franceschi and Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts

July 25 NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JU

Tanglewood Opera, Stadium Concert

Emelina De Vita and John Hornor as the Queen and King in Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," to be produced in triple opera bill Tuesday [illegible] at Tanglewood.

[209]

TIGHT BINDING

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION

JUL 10 1954

Social Whirl:

Miss Traver Hostess to Latham BPW Leaders

By JEANNE ARNOLD
Times-Union Society Editor

Newly appointed committee chairmen of the Latham Business and Professional Women's Club, and officers were guests at a recent planning meeting at the home of the vice president, Miss Lenore Traver, 16 Southern Dr., Latham. The national BPW theme, "Adventure and Achievement," was the topic of discussion.

Committee heads for the coming year are: Mrs. Dorothy Postver, education and vocations; Mrs. Leona McCullough, health and safety; Mrs. Leona Linen, membership; Mrs. Isabel Moore, international relations; Miss Naomi Dawley, public affairs; Mrs. Alice Trendell, finance; Mrs. Marjorie Robinson, bylaws; Mrs. Lee Tabner, legislation; Mrs. Carmen Campbell, Civil Defense; Mrs. Mary Dilley, hospitality; Mrs. Joan Robinson, news service; Miss Dawley, library; and Mrs. Miriam Root, music.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thornton will be club parliamentarian.

YOUNG ADULT LEAGUE PLANS SOCIAL EVENTS

Among several social events being planned by the newly organized Catholic Young Adult League will be an all-day picnic at Lake George today. Members will meet, rain or shine, at 8 A.M. at the State Office Building. Miss Mary Ryan and Miss Regina Schwartz head the committee preparing food and arranging for soft drinks for the outing.

Another event will be group attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 17. They will leave the Albany Plaza by car at 5:30 P.M. Though the group will not have time for dinner before the concert, there will be an opportunity to look around the grounds at Tanglewood. Reservetions for this trip are being taken until Wednesday by Miss Mary Confrey and Miss Mary Lasch.

The League's executive committee is to meet at 7:30 P.M. Thursdays, July 15 and 22, to plan activities for the month of August. The meetings will be at Knights of Columbus Hall, North Pearl St.

NOTEBOOK JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE

Mrs. Edward Stoeffels, president of the Monday Musical Club, announces members will attend the orchestra rehearsal at Tanglewood at 10 A.M. Saturday, July 17, and will have their annual picnic afterward. The rehearsal will be in the music shed.

. . . Miss Mina M. Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Bishop, 597 Hudson Ave., has accepted a position as medical technician at St. Peter's Hospital. She was graduated this June from Albany College of Pharmacy with a bachelor of science degree in medical technology.

. . . Miss M. Marjorie Taber has returned to her home at 49 South Hawk St. after visits with Mrs. C. D. Morrison of Cobleskill and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wade of Worcester.

N Y Times

DAY, JULY 24, 1954. A

U. N. SAMPLE M MUSIC IN U. S.

mployes to Be Guests achusetts Residents, d Tanglewood Fete pecial to The New York Times.

TED NATIONS, N. Y., 3—Abuzz with expectation, United Nations employes a rendezvous late this afternoon in the lobby of the Secretariat Building. Within an hour were on their way from Grand Central Station to Pittsfield, Massachusetts, to sample a forty-eight-hour interlude of American culture and hospitality. The excursion was the fifth annual visit of United Nations personnel to the Massachusetts community, which offers open house for the week-end. to let the employes become acquainted with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and home life in the United States. All it costs the participants is the train fare and meals during the journey. Not a bit enviously, yet-veterans of previous years who had failed to sneak into the excursion watched them depart. This experience is a one-time affair — repeaters are not nd hostesses in Pittsfield the use of their homes. Guests are assigned at the discretion of the Nations Volunteer Service on the basis of similarity of languages spoken and cultural and recreational interests.

an Originated Idea for the expeditions is with the Workshop for Understanding, founded by Mr. Paluev, who left his homeland after the overthrow of the last Czar and has for many years an American citizen. He is an engineer for the General Electric Company and lives in Pittsfield. Mr. Paluev arranges for a different organization to sponsor the Tanglewood visit. This time the Rotary Club of Pittsfield will give a luncheon for the guests on Sunday. Women of the Methodist Church congregation will prepare and serve the meal.

Tickets for two concerts by the Boston Symphony—one on Saturday evening and one Sunday afternoon—are donated by the Tanglewood Association. Individual hosts will take care of amusement for their guests during the remaining hours, with swimming parties, tennis and walks through the countryside especially favored.

Twenty-three nationalities are represented among this year's fifty visitors, one of whom is stateless. The others come from Australia, Austria, Britain, China, Denmark, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Egypt, France, India, Indonesia, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Switzerland, Thailand and Turkey.

Eagle - July 24

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Jean Morel, soloist, Nicole Henriot. Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:45—Final performance of "The Ghost Train," starring Rex O'Malley. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

9:00—Claude Thornhill's orchestra, feature attraction of Old Home Week celebration. Dalton Community House.

9:00—Dance Festival, starring Carmelita Maracci and Lester Horton Dance Theater. Jacobs Pillow, Lee.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch conductor; William Primrose, soloist. Tanglewood, Lenox.

4:00 p.m.—Concert by Berkshire Quartet. Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.

Woodstock Townsman - July 21

Tanglewood Is Attraction For Woodstock Fans

Over in Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., the numerous instrumental, choral and operatic performances of the 1954 Berkshire Festival are in full swing. The drive from Woodstock to Tanglewood is not so far and not so strenuous that some of you might not be interested in spending an evening or even a weekend there.

In the event you'd like to amble over (we certainly plan to do so), we offer you the program coming up for the next week. Look it over and take your pick. It's a nice music supplement to our own Sunday Maverick Concerts.

Tonight, Wednesday, July 21—The Zimbler Sinfonietta—Vivaldi "The Four Seasons" (String Orchestra), Rossini "Baroque Concerto."

Friday evening, July 23 — Handel Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn Symphony No. 100, "Military," Haydn "Nelson" Mass (Hugh Ross conducting).

Saturday evening, July 24 — Prokofieff Symphony No. 1, Liszt Piano Concerto in E Flat (Soloist: Nicole Henriot), Strauss "Don Juan," Elgar "Enigman" Variations (Jean Morel conducting).

Sunday afternoon, July 25 — Berlioz Overture to 'Beatrice and Benedict' and "Harold in Italy," Symphony (with viola solo; soloist: William Primrose), Toch Symphony (Charles Munch conducting).

Wednesday evening, July 28—The Griller String Quartet — Mozart Quartet in E Flat, K. 428, Bloch Quartet No. 4 (first performance), Beethoven Quartet in G Major Op. 18, No. 2.

Woodstockers can get tickets in advance by writing: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or telephoning Lenox 600. Or, buy them at the gate if you decide on a last minute trip.

Organ Recital In Music Shed Tomorrow

E. Power Biggs To Give Afternoon Concert

TANGLEWOOD—Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, will give the first of two recitals on the organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed tomorrow at 3 p.m. as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, Aug. 7, at the same time.

An American citizen since 1937, Mr. Biggs was born in England. After graduation from the Royal

E. Power Biggs

Academy of Music with highest honors, he played at London's Queens Hall and in many of the historic cathedrals of England. Soon his concert activities brought him to the United States where his Sunday morning broadcasts over CBS-Radio are now in their 12th consecutive year.

Mr. Biggs, who is coming to Tanglewood after a two-month tour which included concerts in Bermuda, Iceland, Scandinavia and England, will play Vivaldi and Handel organ concertos, the Cesar Franck "Prelude, Fugue and Variation," and works by Couperin, Byrd and Purcell on tomorrow's program. The Aug. 7 recital program is: Antonio Soler's Double Concerto No. 3; Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor; Louis Claude Daquin; Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Dorato: two pastels, and Jehan Alain: Litanies.

Tickets will not be sold to the E. Power Biggs recitals, but the programs are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Festival patrons may join the Friends my making a voluntary contribution toward the support of the Berkshire Music Center.

THIRD CHAMBER CONCERT GIVEN AT TANGLEWOOD

Charles Munch Conducts Most Rewarding Performance to Date

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 23—The third of the chamber orchestra concerts held tonight in the theater-shed drew an audience of 2250 people and proved the most rewarding of these concerts to date. It was an exciting musical evening with Charles Munch and the orchestra in top form.

Brilliant Performance

The concert opened with a delectable performance of Handel's "Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra Opus No. 6, No. 4." The marvellous strings of the Boston Symphony Orchestra sang their way through this delightful work with a beauty of tone that must be heard to be believed. Handel, writing these concerti 20 years after Bach had written his Brandenburg Concerti, did not follow the tight plan adopted by Bach, namely two fast movements enclosing a slow movement, but he let his thoughts go as they would and if it took four or six movements to say what he wanted, he used the four or six movements. He has invested these concerti with rare imagination and brilliant melodic material.

Haydn's "Symphony in G Major" is popularly known as the "Military" symphony, but a less martial symphony has seldom been written. Except in the Allegretto movement when cymbals, drums and triangle are used with considerable impact resulting, this symphony is one of high humor, that earthy humor which is almost a trade mark of this composer. This is the kind of music Mr. Munch seems most successful with. Its texture is pot, silken and a little roughing of it does not hurt. The result was an exciting perusal of the music.

Ross Conducts

Hugh Ross conducted Haydn's "Nelson Mass No. 10 in D Minor." This is sturdy music, often vehement and it revealed what a fine group the festival chorus is turning out to be. There was much finer singing than was heard in the Bach Cantata last week. Florid passages were sung cleanly and climaxes were intense.

The student soloists were uniformly excellent with a young basso named Thomas Stewart, one of the finest student soloists we have heard here in recent years. The voice is large, resonant and expressive. Naomi Farr revealed a bright, flexible soprano voice, well projected and of exciting quality at the top. The lovely voice of Beatrice Krebs and her fine interpretive gifts were advantageously used. The tenor was Marvin Worden. He sang with a pleasant tone and awareness of text.

The mass is, as has been mentioned, a vigorous work. There are moments of great beauty and considerable power. The orchestration is solid.

Tomorrow night Jean Morel makes his initial bow as conductor of a major concert. He will conduct a program which will include Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 6 in E-Flat Minor." Strauss's "Don Juan" and Elgart's "Enigma" variations on an original theme.

Nicole Henriot will be the soloist in Liszt's "Concerto for piano in E-Flat Major, No. 1."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 17 1954

THESE DAYS:

To the Right of Caesar's Ghost

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

I WAS sitting in the theatre at Tanglewood in the Berkshires—listening to Bach's Brandenburg concertos, five of the six of them. When I listen to Bach, I cannot think of Right or Left, or Left of Center, or any of the silly distinctions which those who are unmoved by the eternities enjoy as an exercise in adolescent intellectualism. Surely it matters little how excited one becomes about the ephemera of personalities. Hitler, Roosevelt and Stalin are dead, but history knows no end.

From behind me, I heard a pleasant feminine voice say, "there is George Sokolsky." I felt that fame had at last come to me and that I was as great even as Adolphe Menjou with whom one cannot walk a sidewalk without becoming a neon sign. However, my pride was soon dissipated, for a strident, masculine voice spoke up to say:

"Now my evening is spoiled. He is to the Right of Caesar's ghost."

Spoiled His Own Evening

My mind went back to Bach and I never even looked at the woman with the pleasant voice nor at the man with the strident voice. Afterwards, when all the Brandenburgs were over, I thought that I might have asked him whether he wanted to take the Fifth Amendment but it was unnecessary. It was sufficiently tough for him to see one who was to the Right of Caesar's ghost. It so spoiled his evening that he forgot Bach and remembered only Sokolsky. How horrible!

Personally, I have had no acquaintance with Caesar's ghost and know nothing about his politics or sociology. Perhaps in Heaven or Hell, Caesar has learned more than his ghost is willing to talk about. In Shakespeare's version, the ghost is not very impressive and I had forgotten him.

Nevertheless, I could not help wondering how right one can be when he is to the Right of Caesar's ghost. What does such a person believe to be true? For after all, what was the truth about man in the days of Julius Caesar is true today. The Natural Law is timeless, unchanging, permanent, and holds for Greek as well as Hebrew as St. Paul so wisely said it. I should imagine, although I would not know, that the essential difference between Julius Caesar and mine adversary is that Caesar wore his head bald.

Julius Caesar was a Roman politician who was scheming to turn Rome from a Republic into an Empire with himself upon a regal seat. Thrice he refused the crown, but he undoubtedly was fixing to get it at the right time and in the right way. There was a skinny fellow by the name of Cassius who was conspiring to undo Caesar's conspiracy. He undoubtedly involved the innocent Brutus in this deal, so that Brutus assassinated Caesar who was his close friend. This kind of a double double-cross has not been unusual in history, although nobody ever can tell us why Brutus would not have done more for Rome as Caesar's Prime Minister.

Politician Took Chance

Shakespeare has Brutus say: "...Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him..." It sounds like the United States Senate.

Anyhow, there was a politician called Mark Antony who saw his chance and took it. He delivered a speech which would have been a credit to William Jennings Bryan, which is not surprising as my version was ghost-written by William Shakespeare who knew the business. Mark Antony got into trouble because of a dame in Egypt, and he was not the first to do that.

What I am trying to discover is how all this puts me to the Right of Caesar's ghost. If the strident gentleman had said that I was a muddy thinker, as someone did in Denver, because I believe that Karl Marx's postulates on sociology, biology and history cannot be substantiated, I might have asked him to a pot of tea, to discuss the isms, but when he involves me with Caesar's ghost, I must decline to admit guilt by association. I never met the ghastly gentleman and cannot give testimony concerning him.

[210]

Eagle - July 22 City Edition

Music

Zimbler Sinfonietta Scores In Chamber Music Series

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

The third of the new chamber music series of the Berkshire Festival was played in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, a group of 19 Boston Symphony Orchestra men organized into a small ensemble by Josef Zimbler, a member of the cello section of the orchestra. Their program was most happily chosen, consisting of three works rarely heard and all of them full of contrasting interest and delight.

* * *

THE CENTRAL portion of the program was the "Apollon Musagete," a ballet in two scenes by Igor Stravinsky. In 1927 he was commissioned by the great Pittsfield patroness of music, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, to write a work with only two qualifications: that it should take about a half-hour and require only a few players. His was the choice of subject. It gave him a chance to put into affect an idea that had long tempted him, the theme of Apollo, the god of the arts and music, the leader of the Muses. It was finished in 1928 and firstp layed in Washington with choreography of Adolph Bolm. Stravinsky himself directed it for its first Paris performance with the Diaghilef ballet and Georges Balanchine as master of ballet and Danilova in the company.

* * *

WITHOUT SCENERY and dancing it is still highly enjoyable music, transporting, indeed, as it was played last night. The Zimblers play without a conductor, but George Zazofsky, whose evening it was essentially, directs from his seat as leader and concertmaster. The ensemble even achieved its best sonority here, too, thanks not a little to Mr. Stravinsky, who divides the celli into two parts, thus, with the double bass, making the work a sextet. There was imaginative lilt and grace to the performance and the popular rhythms and harmonics were extremely appealing.

Mr. Zazofsky was the soloist in the opening concerto for string orchestra, "The Four Seasons" of Vivaldi. Here the ensemble had the assistance of Fernando Valenti, harpsichord, and Emil Kornsand took over the concertmaster's duties. There are four acts, one for each of the seasons, not sufficiently differentiated to warrant their complete reading, but nevertheless quite remarkable as evidence of Vivaldi's creative faculties.

* * *

HE ATTEMPTED to make his musical ideas correspond with the sentiments of several poems. Birds of spring are easily discernible in the beginning. Thunder and lightning are easily depicted and so on. Mr. Zazofsky took full advantage of the opportunities that Vivaldi, himself a violin virtuoso, created, and who was accused of excessive striving after display. The soloist played the florid passages with complete mastery, clear and clean.

The final number, a sonata for violins, cellos and double bass by Rossini, was the gayest, most light-hearted music in a long time. He treats the instruments as vocalists and immediately after a short introduction, gives the mezzo soprano, the second violins, a lovely aria, in which they have a chance to ascend to some reaches of their E string that they never ordinarily explore.

Then comes the turn of the bass viol. Here Henry Portnoi executed his air for basso profundo with the ease and facility of a player of a viol de braccia. Then the principal cellist, Mr. Zimbler himself, who retiringly never took an individual bow, has an ingratiating solo. Rossini portrays the romantic hero, and his villain makes one shudder. Concertmasters Zazofsky and Kornsand each had coloratura episodes, all of which contributed to a bombastic but hilarious finale.

Newsweek Features Tanglewood Story, Bishop-Elect Stokes

Two Berkshire County achievements—the 15th Tanglewood season and the appointment of Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes Jr. as bishop coadjutor of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts—are reported in the current issue of Newsweek.

In commenting on the music season at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Newsweek spoke favorably of the performance of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust."

"As a day-in, day-out conductor, Munch has a long way to go before he will approach the lofty style and flair of his predecessor, the late Serge Koussevitzky," said the Newsweek article. "But playing Berlioz, an old favorite of his, he was on his strongest possible ground."

Compliment Audiences

Newsweek also complimented Tanglewood audiences: "After a brief introduction period, Mozart, Haydn or almost any composer could have warmed to a Tanglewood audience. There are few concert halls where the hearers are more appreciative or more discerning. The Festival, a generous and well-run institution, has a way of making its guests feel at home, and they do their best to reciprocate."

In the story of Dr. Stokes, Newsweek cited the long family record of religious service. It said in part, "The Stokes family's record of religious and philanthropic service in America is a long and distinguished one."

The article also pointed out his association with Berkshire County through his early years here and through his father, the Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes of Lenox, as well as his wife, the former Hope Procter of Stockbridge.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. GAZETTE
JUL 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Music Season Opens Tomorrow Evening

The gala opening of the 1954 season at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, three weeks earlier than in other seasons.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices assisting the orchestra. Soloists, all making their Tanglewood debuts, are Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

* * *

THE WORK, which runs for two and a half hours with a single intermission, has never before been presented at a Berkshire festival but Munch conducted it in Boston last winter.

A program made up of five of the Brandenburg concertos will be played tonight at 8:30 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert hall on the Tanglewood grounds with Munch conducting.

The first afternoon Music Shed concert will be held Sunday at 2:30 o'clock with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor in an all-Beethoven program, including the "Overture to 'Lenore' No. 3"; "Piano Concerto No. 5, 'Emperor'," and the "Symphony No. 5."

* * *

CLAUDIO ARRAU, the eminent Chilean pianist, who will be the soloist, first appeared with the Boston Symphony orchestra on Feb. 1, 1924, under the direction of Monteux. His return to Tanglewood Sunday marks the 30th anniversary of his association with the Boston Symphony, with which he has played many times in his career.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Berkshire festival concerts and reservations may be made by telephone to Lenox, Mass. Tickets of general admission, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before each performance.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 10 1954

MUSIC UNDER THE SKY—More than 15,000 music lovers are expected to attend the annual Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this year. Tonight Charles Munch will conduct "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, and Pierre Monteux will conduct an all Beethoven program tomorrow afternoon.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 10 1954

Brandenburg Concerti Opens Berkshire Music Festival

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — The annual celebration dedicated to the glorification of both music and the tourist trade and known as the Berkshire Music Festival opened here last night with all the appropriate fanfare and all but one of the six Brandenburg Concerti of Bach.

It is not unusual, shall we say, for Tanglewood to open with one or more of the Brandenburg Concerti. These eminently worthy compositions have become something of a ritual with this festival. Indeed, it might be possible to imagine that Bach wrote nothing else beyond these six concerti, since they have been performed here for the past three years without a single lapse or variation.

* * *

ONLY ONCE BEFORE, I believe, have Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra made such a marathon of it and performed five of them on one evening. Towards the end of the concert it became a contest as to who would succumb first, Mr. Munch, the orchestra, the audience or Bach.

All this is not to say that the music was not ably, even exquisitely, performed. Each piece this year was turned out with even more bite and vivacity than ever before, although if memory serves, some iota of tonal shimmer was sacrificed for the added energy. Only the Fourth Concerto was omitted this year.

The high point of the Brandenburgs was, as it always has been, the unsurpassable performance of Lukas Foss in the Fifth. Mr. Foss has made the piano rendition of this piece something that is very much his own, and I doubt if there is a pianist in the land who can give the brilliant cadenza in the first movement so much rich expressiveness.

* * *

AFTER MR. FOSS' unbeatable cadenza might come the delicate interplay of Doriot Anthony on the flute and Ralph Gomberg on the oboe in the Second. Even Roger Voisin, who seems to be able to play a very mean trumpet except in this super-human trumpet part, excelled himself and did a creditable job.

Dr. Munch, who seems to have a great affinity as well as an intimate fondness for these works, conducted throughout this arduous evening with lavish attention to detail and nuance without once allowing the broad sweep and power of the music to escape him.

Some 2,300 music admirers seated themselves in the Theater Concert Hall and sprawled themselves on the grass outside to hear the music. The night itself was cool and most conducive to a pleasant evening of listening. Only Bach, I fear, might have had cause to swelter a bit. He must now and then wonder why the inexhaustible splendor and richness of the vast amount of music he created must remain unheard by Tanglewood ears.

Public Events

Tonight July 23 Eagle

8:30—Berkshire Farm Square Dance. School campus, Canaan, N.Y.

8:30—Concert by chamber orchestra, Charles Munch and Hugh [illegible], directors. Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood, Lenox.

July 25 NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JU

Tanglewood Opera, Stadium Concert

Emelina De Vita and John Hornor as the Queen and King in Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," to be produced in triple opera bill Tuesday night at Tanglewood.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 11 1954

Tanglewood To Feature Bach Program

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra. Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteu will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, are placed on sale on the day of performance and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the orchestra Saturday at 10 a. m. A fee of $1 will be charged for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 99, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of the Choral and Opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center; of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Debussy and "Les Djinns," by Franck; of Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto. Pianists Franceschi and Smit will also make their Tanglewood debuts.

[209]

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION

JUL 10 1954

Social Whirl:

Miss Traver Hostess to Latham BPW Leaders

By JEANNE ARNOLD
Times-Union Society Editor

Newly appointed committee chairmen of the Latham Business and Professional Women's Club, and officers were guests at a recent planning meeting at the home of the vice president, Miss Lenore Traver, 16 Southern Dr., Latham. The national BPW theme, "Adventure and Achievement," was the topic of discussion.

Committee heads for the coming year are: Mrs. Dorothy Postver, education and vocations; Mrs. Leona McCullough, health and safety; Mrs. Leona Linen, membership; Mrs. Isabel Moore, international relations; Miss Naomi Dawley, public affairs; Mrs. Alice Trendell, finance; Mrs. Marjorie Robinson, bylaws; Mrs. Lee Tabner, legislation; Mrs. Carmen Campbell, Civil Defense; Mrs. Mary Gidley, hospitality; Mrs. Joan Robinson, news service; Miss Dawley, library; and Mrs. Miriam Root, music.

Mrs. Elizabeth Thornton will be club parliamentarian.

YOUNG ADULT LEAGUE PLANS SOCIAL EVENTS

Among several social events being planned by the newly organized Catholic Young Adult League will be an all-day picnic at Lake George today. Members will meet, rain or shine, at 8 A.M. at the State Office Building. Miss Mary Ryan and Miss Regina Schwartz head the committee preparing food and arranging for soft drinks for the outing.

Another event will be group attendance at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 17. Tour will leave the Albany Plaza by car at 5:30 P.M. Though the group will not have time for dinner before the concert, there will be an opportunity to look around the grounds at Tanglewood. Reservetions for this trip are being taken until Wednesday by Miss Mary Confrey and Miss Mary Lasch.

The League's executive committee is to meet at 7:30 P.M. Thursdays, July 15 and 22, to plan activities for the month of August. The meetings will be at Knights of Columbus Hall, North Pearl St.

NOTEBOOK JOTTINGS HERE AND THERE

Mrs. Edward Stoeffels, president of the Monday Musical Club, announces members will attend the orchestra rehearsal at Tanglewood at 10 A.M. Saturday, July 17, and will have their annual picnic afterward. The rehearsal will be in the music shed.

. . . Miss Mina M. Bishop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Bishop, 597 Hudson Ave., has accepted a position as medical technician at St. Peter's Hospital. She was graduated this June from Albany College of Pharmacy with a bachelor of science degree in medical technology.

. . . Miss M. Marjorie Taber has returned to her home at 49 South Hawk St. after visits with Mrs. C. D. Morrison of Cobleskill and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wade of Worcester.

N Y Times

SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1954. A

50 AT U. N. SAMPLE LIFE, MUSIC IN U. S.

World Employes to Be Guests of Massachusetts Residents, Attend Tanglewood Fete

Special to The New York Times.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., July 23—Abuzz with expectation, fifty United Nations employes kept a rendezvous late this afternoon in the lobby of the Secretariat Building. Within an hour they were on their way from Grand Central Station to Pittsfield, Massachusetts, to sample in a forty-eight-hour interlude American culture and hospitality.

The excursion was the fifth annual visit of United Nations personnel to the Massachusetts community, which offers open house for the week-end, to let staff members become acquainted with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood and home life in the United States. All it costs the participants is the train fare and two meals during the journey.

More than a bit enviously, veterans of previous years who had tried vainly to sneak into the expedition watched them depart. This experience is a one-time adventure — repeaters are not allowed.

Hosts and hostesses in Pittsfield volunteer the use of their guest rooms. Guests are assigned to each at the discretion of the United Nations Volunteer Services on the basis of similarity of ages, languages spoken and cultural or recreational interests.

Ex-Russian Originated Idea

The idea for the expeditions originated with the Workshop for World Understanding, founded by Konstantin Paluev, who left his Russian homeland after the overthrow of the last Czar and has been for many years an American citizen. He is an engineer for the General Electric Company and now lives in Pittsfield.

Each year Mr. Paluev arranges for a different organization to sponsor the Tanglewood visit. This time the Rotary Club of Pittsfield will give a luncheon for the guests on Sunday. Women of the Methodist Church congregation will prepare and serve the meal.

Tickets for two concerts by the Boston Symphony—one on Saturday evening and one Sunday afternoon—are donated by the Tanglewood Association. Individual hosts will take care of amusement for their guests during the remaining hours, with swimming parties, tennis and walks through the countryside especially favored.

Twenty-three nationalities are represented among this year's fifty visitors, one of whom is stateless. The others come from Australia, Austria, Britain, China, Denmark, Ecuador, Ethiopia, Egypt, France, India, Indonesia, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Switzerland, Thailand and Turkey.

Eagle - July 24

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Jean Morel, soloist, Nicole Henriot. Tanglewood, Lenox.

8:45—Final performance of "The Ghost Train," starring Rex O'Malley. Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge.

9:00—Claude Thornhill's orchestra, feature attraction of Old Home Week celebration. Dance, Community House.

9:00—Dance Festival, starring Carmelita Maracci and Lester Horton Dance Theater. Jacobs Pillow, Lee.

Tomorrow

2:30 p.m.—Concert by Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch, conductor; William Primrose, soloist. Tanglewood, Lenox.

4:00 p.m.—Concert by Berkshire Quartet. Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn.

Woodstock Townsman - July 21

Tanglewood Is Attraction For Woodstock Fans

Over in Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass., the numerous instrumental, choral and operatic performances of the 1954 Berkshire Festival are in full swing. The drive from Woodstock to Tanglewood is not so far and not so strenuous that some of you might not be interested in spending an evening or even a weekend there.

In the event you'd like to amble over (we certainly plan to do so), we offer you the program coming up for the next week. Look it over and take your pick. It's a nice music supplement to our own Sunday Maverick Concerts.

Tonight, Wednesday, July 21—The Zimbler Sinfonietta—Vivaldi "The Four Seasons" (String Orchestra), Rossini "Baroque Concerto."

Friday evening, July 23 — Handel Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4, Haydn Symphony No. 100, "Military," Haydn "Nelson" Mass (Hugh Ross conducting).

Saturday evening, July 24 — Prokofieff Symphony No. 6, Liszt Piano Concerto in E Flat (Soloist: Nicole Henriot), Strauss "Don Juan," Elgar "Enigman" Variations (Jean Morel conducting).

Sunday afternoon, July 25 — Berlioz Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" and "Harold in Italy," Symphony with viola solo; soloist: William Primrose), Toch Symphony (Charles Munch conducting).

Wednesday evening, July 28—The Cooper String Quartet — Mozart Quartet in E Flat, K. 428, Bloch Quartet No. 4 (first performance), Beethoven Quartet in G Major Op. 18, No. 2.

Woodstockers can get tickets in advance by writing: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., or telephoning Lenox 600. Or, buy them at the gate if you decide on a last minute trip.

Organ Recital In Music Shed Tomorrow

E. Power Biggs To Give Afternoon Concert

TANGLEWOOD—Famed American concert organist, E. Power Biggs, will give the first of two recitals on the organ in the Tanglewood Music Shed tomorrow at 3 p.m. as an added attraction for Berkshire Festival patrons. The second recital is Saturday, Aug. 7, at the same time.

An American citizen since 1937, Mr. Biggs was born in England. After graduation from the Royal

E. Power Biggs

Academy of Music with highest honors, he played at London's Queens Hall and in many of the historic cathedrals of England. Soon his concert activities brought him to the United States where his Sunday morning broadcasts over CBS-Radio are now in their 12th consecutive year.

Mr. Biggs, who is coming to Tanglewood after a two-month tour which included concerts in Bermuda, Iceland, Scandinavia and England, will play Vivaldi and Handel organ concertos, the Cesar Franck "Prelude, Fugue and Variation," and works by Couperin, Byrd and Purcell on tomorrow's program. The Aug. 7 recital program is: Antonio Soler's Double Concerto No. 3; Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor; Louis Claude Daquin; Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Dorato: two pastels, and Jehan Alain: [illegible].

Tickets will not be sold to the E. Power Biggs [illegible] the programs [illegible] members of the Friends of Music Center. Festival patrons may join the Friends by making a voluntary contribution toward the support of the Berkshire Music Center.

THIRD CHAMBER CONCERT GIVEN AT TANGLEWOOD

Charles Munch Conducts Most Rewarding Performance to Date

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 22—The third of the chamber orchestra concerts held tonight in the theater-shed drew an audience of 2250 people and proved the most rewarding of these concerts to date. It was an exciting musical evening with Charles Munch and the orchestra in top form.

Brilliant Performance

The concert opened with a delectable performance of Handel's "Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra Opus No. 6, No. 1." The marvellous strings of the Boston Symphony Orchestra sang their way through this delightful work with a beauty of tone that must be heard to be believed. Handel, writing these concerti 20 years after Bach had written his Brandenburg Concerti, did not follow the tight plan adopted by Bach, namely two fast movements enclosing a slow movement, but he let his thoughts go as they would and if it took four or six movements to say what he wanted, he used the four or six movements. He has invested these concerti with rare imagination and brilliant melodic material.

Haydn's "Symphony in G Major" is popularly known as the "Military" symphony, but a less martial symphony has seldom been written. Except in the Allegretto movement when cymbals, drums and triangle are used with considerable impact resulting, this symphony is one of high humor, that earthy humor which is almost a trade mark of this composer. This is the kind of music Mr. Munch seems most successful with. Its texture is not silken and a little roughing of it does not hurt. The result was an exciting perusal of the music.

Ross Conducts

Hugh Ross conducted Haydn's "Nelson Mass No. 10 in D Minor." This is sturdy music, often vehement and it revealed what a fine group the festival chorus is turning out to be. There was much finer singing than was heard in the Bach Cantata last week. Florid passages were sung cleanly and climaxes were intense.

The student soloists were uniformly excellent with a young basso named Thomas Stewart, one of the finest student soloists we have heard here in recent years. The voice is large, mature and expressive. Naomi Farr revealed a bright, flexible soprano voice, well projected and of exciting quality at the top. The lovely voice of Beatrice Krebs and her fine interpretive gifts were advantageously used. The tenor was Marvin Worden. He sang with a pleasant tone and awareness of text.

The mass is, as has been mentioned, a vigorous work. There are moments of great beauty and considerable power. The orchestration is solid.

Tomorrow night Jean Morel makes his initial bow as conductor of a major concert. He will conduct a program which will include Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 6 in E-Flat Minor." Strauss's "Don Juan" and Elgart's "Enigma" variations on an original theme.

Nicole Henriot will be the soloist in Liszt's "Concerto for piano in E-Flat Major, No. 1."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 17 1954

THESE DAYS:

To the Right of Caesar's Ghost

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

I WAS sitting in the theatre at Tanglewood in the Berkshires listening to Bach's Brandenburg concertos, five of the six of them. When I listen to Bach, I cannot think of Right or Left, or Left of Center, or any of the silly distinctions which those who are unmoved by the eternities enjoy as an exercise in adolescent intellectualism. Surely it matters little how excited one becomes about the ephemera of personalities. Hitler, Roosevelt and Stalin are dead, but history knows no end.

From behind me, I heard a pleasant feminine voice say, "there is George Sokolsky." I felt that fame had at last come to me and that I was as great even as Adolphe Menjou with whom one cannot walk a sidewalk without becoming a neon sign. However, my pride was soon dissipated, for a strident, masculine voice spoke up to say:

"Now my evening is spoiled. He is to the Right of Caesar's ghost."

Spoiled His Own Evening

My mind went back to Bach and I never even looked at the woman with the pleasant voice nor at the man with the strident voice. Afterwards, when all the Brandenburgs were over, I thought that I might have asked him whether he wanted to take the Fifth Amendment but it was unnecessary. It was sufficiently tough for him to see one who was to the Right of Caesar's ghost. It so spoiled his evening that he forgot Bach and remembered only Sokolsky. How horrible!

Personally, I have had no acquaintance with Caesar's ghost and know nothing about his politics or sociology. Perhaps in Heaven or Hell, Caesar has learned more than his ghost is willing to talk about. In Shakespeare's version, the ghost is not very impressive and I had forgotten him.

Nevertheless, I could not help wondering how right one can be when he is to the Right of Caesar's ghost. What does such a person believe to be true? For after all, what was the truth about man in the days of Julius Caesar is true today. The Natural Law is timeless, unchanging, permanent, and holds for Greek as well as Hebrew as St. Paul so wisely said it, I should imagine, although I would not know, that the essential difference between Julius Caesar and mine adversary is that Caesar wore his head bald.

Julius Caesar was a Roman politician who was scheming to turn Rome from a Republic into an Empire with himself upon a regal seat. Thrice he refused the crown, but he undoubtedly was fixing to get it at the right time and in the right way. There was a skinny fellow by the name of Cassius who was conspiring to undo Caesar's conspiracy. He undoubtedly involved the innocent Brutus in this deal, so that Brutus assassinated Caesar who was his close friend. This kind of a double double-cross has not been unusual in history, although nobody ever can tell us why Brutus would not have done more for Rome as Caesar's Prime Minister.

Politician Took Chance

Shakespeare has Brutus say: "...Not that I loved Caesar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Caesar were living, and die all slaves, than that Caesar were dead, to live all free men? As Caesar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him..." It sounds like the United States Senate.

Anyhow, there was a politician called Mark Antony who saw his chance and took it. He delivered a speech which would have been a credit to William Jennings Bryan, which is not surprising as my version was ghost-written by William Shakespeare who knew the business. Mark Antony got into trouble because of a dame in Egypt, and he was not the first to do that.

What I am trying to discover is how all this puts me to the Right of Caesar's ghost. If the strident gentleman had said that I was a muddy thinker, as someone did in Denver, because I believe that Karl Marx's postulates on sociology, biology and history cannot be substantiated, I might have asked him to a pot of tea, to discuss the isms, but when he involves me with Caesar's ghost, I must decline to admit guilt by association. I never met the ghastly gentleman and cannot give testimony concerning him.

[210]

The Courier-Journal SOCIETY and WOMEN'S NEWS SECTION 4
JULY 11, 1954

SOCIETY, pp. 2, 3, 12, 13 • FURNITURE NEWS, p. 4 • YOUR BABY AND MINE, p. 5 • MEET THE CLUBS, p. 6 • NEW SHOES FOR FALL, p. 8 • BRIDGE, p. 9 • BETTY BEALE, p. 11

The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, a combination of 50 voices, gave its concert here Tuesday on the porch of Gardencourt, the U. of L. School of Music. Prof. G. Wallace Woodworth conducts the groups.

Harvard-Radcliffe Singers Pay A Call To Louisville

Fifty singers of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, who this summer have been singing their way across country, last week made Louisville one of their stops. Their outdoor concert at Gardencourt—a place that awed them with its beauty—was the group's first appearance here. It was sponsored by the Harvard Club of Kentucky. From here the students went to the Berkshire Music Festival to wind up their tour in a concert with the Boston Symphony. The group is led by the students swam, played tennis, croquet, badminton and sang.

COURIER-JOURNAL PHOTOS BY JIM HARLAN

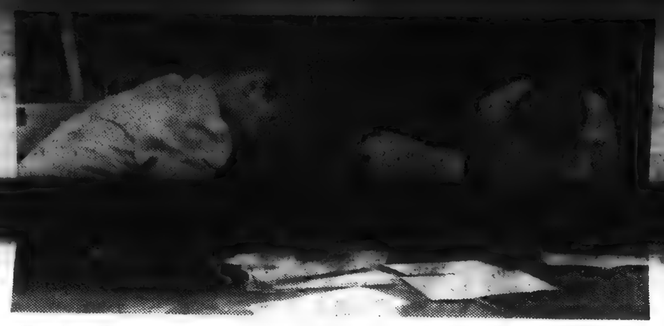
Before the concert, the first one the Harvard-Radcliffe singers have presented here, a party was given for the singers by Mr. and Mrs. Barry Bingham at their home in Glenview. There the students sang in appreciation to them. At right foreground is director, Professor Woodworth.

To the floor went Jonathan Sternberg, New York City, library

Choral Society, who this summer have been singing their way across country, last week made Louisville one of their stops. Their outdoor concert at Gardencourt—a place that awed them with its beauty—was the group's first appearance here. It was sponsored by the Harvard Club of Kentucky. From here the students went to the Berkshire Music Festival to wind up their

the students swam, played tennis, croquet, badminton—and sang.

COURIER-JOURNAL PHOTOS BY JIM HARLAN



To the floor went Jonathan Steinberg, New York City, librarian; Betty Faus, center, Lynn, Mass.; Noelle Blackmer, Andover, Mass., to arrange their music before Gardencourt concert.

A Louisville student at Radcliffe, Lee Jeffries, left, wasn't on the tour, but joined the other Choral Society members for concert here. With her are Joe Scheirich, Louisville, who's in the Purdue Glee Club; Lura Hutchinson, Providence, R. I., and Betty Faus, right, Lynn, Mass.

Mail call was sounded just before supper at the Binghams'. Here is Jean Dunn, Cambridge, who will be a senior this fall. The singers came here from a Western tour that included Las Vegas.

Harry Kraut, right, Brooklyn, '54 graduate of Harvard and baritone in the Glee Club, is manager of the tour, which ends this weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival. In thanks to Harry, the students give him a wristwatch at the party. At left is Roger Gelde, Los Angeles, assistant musical conductor.

Tennis was part of the fun at the Binghams' for Lorna Sagendorph, Dublin, N. H., who will lead choral society next year. The students have had a round-robin tennis tournament on their tour; ended it in a tie here. The four winners—Lorna wasn't one of them—were too tired to untie tie so they drew for their prizes, champagne. The Harvard Club of Kentucky sponsored the group's concert here.

[212]

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood Concerts in Lenox Supply Music-Filled Weekends

Since 1938 when the 6000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U.S. and Canada until last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

The Music Shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust", a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the Symphony "Harold in Italy", with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini", "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans", the song cycle "Summer Nights" with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 15).

Dividends for Festival patrons are two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs in August; and six Saturday morning rehearsals — for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund at $1.00 admission — by the full Symphony Orchestra.

Festival tickets are always available at the box-office since the capacity of the sprawling lawn, shown here, is practically infinite. Bus and train connections are easily available to Pittsfield and Lenox. By car, proceed to Wellesley, take route 9 to Springfield and follow the Pittsfield sings until you hit the turnoff at Lenox.

The Berkshire Music Center, established by the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, is in its twelfth season. Annually a student body of 400 is chosen from some 1,500 applicants. Last year the student enrollment was composed of 292 full-time students from 41 states and seven foreign countries, 86 of whom were former students returning.

Edmund Wilson described the workings of the Berkshire Music Center in The New Yorker magazine (September 4, 1948): "No student of evident ability is refused because he cannot pay; if necessary, lodging and food are provided free of charge. The music that is played and sung is derived from a great variety of nationalities and schools and periods: European and North and South American. The teaching of composition is conducted by the American Aaron Copland, with whom is associated every year some other distinguished composer. The visiting instructors have included Hindemith, Samuel Barber, Honegger, Milhaud, Dallapiccola, Carlos Chavez (this year noted Austro-American composer Ernst Toch will be present).

Tanglewood Program Raises Some Questions on Policy

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE THIRD of the small orchestral classical programs in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night was devoted to Handel and Haydn. The major work of the evening came after intermission when Hugh Ross conducted the Haydn Mass No. 3 in D minor, sometimes called the "Nelson" Mass, for fairly flimsy reasons, although it has acquired other equally inapplicable appellations in other centers. It is amazingly operatic in spirit and the soprano, Naomi Farr, soloist, had coloratura arias and phrases of a most secular nature.

* * *

Mr. Ross kept the orchestra and the festival chorus under brisk control and his enthusiasm prompted him to ask for full-throated response a good share of the time. He did achieve a few quieter effects and, in the Sanctus, some very impressive and well-balanced, sustained repose.

* * *

MISS Farr had some startlingly florid passages after a very few bars of the "Kyrie eleison," which she sang with ease and flexibility. The entire quartet of soloists which also included Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor; and Thomas Stewart, bass — had effectual contrasts in the ensuing "Gloria" and the bass and contralto were vocally very satisfying and musically complementary.

Charles Munch was the conductor in the first half of the program, in which they played the Handel concerto grosso, Opus 6, No. 4, for string orchestra and, then adding the winds, the Haydn G "Military" symphony. Trumpeter Roger Voisin did a gentle fanfare in its unexpected entrance, but Conductor Munch was excessive in his demands in most other of the more violent areas, especially on the bass drum in the finale when he completely obliterated the brilliantly bouncing bows of his string sections. The whole symphony, however, is just lovely music and is pure pleasure every time.

* * *

The Handel concerto is a permanent delight also. Munch asked the principals of the first and second violins, leader of the cello section, Richard Burgin, Clarence Knudson and Alfred Zighera respectively, to stand after the performance for recognition of the fine playing they had done in the various portions that fall to their lot. There is one of the rare instances here where a second violin leader has such a conspicuous role. The duo and interplay between Burgin and Knudson as well as its later repetition by Zighera in the cello, highlighted an otherwise disorderly reading.

It might be a moot question whether the new schedule being tried this summer at Tanglewood is within the human limits of the members of the Boston Symphony. The number and variety of programs require preparation and rehearsals that some performances obviously show have been insufficient. A few flubbed notes are no disgrace, nor is a fleeting erring of a single bar or even a single beat reason for condemnation. After all, such a magnificent body of players can do very little wrong, but in an excess of zeal for "beat-last-year" figures more usually found in commercial counting houses, has the factor of artistic standards been lost sight of?

* * *

A DEFTLY or deftly prepared program by the Boston Symphony Orchestra can still give much pleasure to their hosts of admirers, but should we countenance the alloy of symphony and "pops"? What were the original ideals in establishing the Berkshire Festival and Tanglewood? Was it not a unique venture where, in all of the United States, an orchestra retained all its principal players and its main musical director for programs of as serious a nature in the summer as in the winter schedule in their home concert hall?

Copland Opera at Tanglewood Aug. 2, 3

On Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the New England premiere, and the first Tanglewood performances, of Aaron Copland's full-length opera [illegible] American theme, "The Tender Land," recently revised by the composer, who has been Assistant Director of the summer school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

South Berkshire Weekly

A Dash of 'Darshan'

By A. G. Rud

LENOX — In these days of super-high fidelity phonographs and longer-playing records, it is a little surprising to find people still flocking to concerts. At first thought, at least, it seems remarkable that the owners of all those glossy Chryslers and Cadillacs in the Tanglewood parking lot do not see fit to buy themselves Hi Fi sets and settle down at home with exactly the music they want to hear.

Why do people come to the Berkshire Festival when they can listen to records in comfort, anyway? Force of habit? Fashion? Mob instinct? Or what?

* * *

PART OF THE answer was furnished by Lukas Foss, the brilliant young composer-pianist, when he spoke at a composers' forum here this week. Among other witty things, Mr. Foss said some concertgoers apparently were moved by an emotion for which he did not have an English word but which the modern Indians called "darshan."

According to Mr. Foss, "darshan" is a form of happiness people experience in the presence of some great manifestation—even though they don't understand it. As a case in point, he cited a recent speech by Pandit Nehru in India. The loud speaker system failed but some 400,000 Indians sat through a 1½-hour talk they could not hear, in complete silence and evident satisfaction. Mr. Foss believes more than a dash of "darshan" is demonstrated by listeners on the outer fringes of the Tanglewood lawn.

Besides "darshan," fashion undoubtedly plays a part. It is fashionable for a New Yorker to attend two or three concerts at Tanglewood, but not very chic to say she's spent the weekend with a phonograph.

* * *

RECOGNIZING, then, that other people go to the festival out of ignoble motives, what can we say about ourselves, the true music lovers? Since we don't care about being fashionable or building a reputation for high culture, why don't we just stay home and listen to records?

A nettling question. Happily, it can be answered by authorities. Probably no one within a radius of 100 miles is more enthusiastic about recorded music than the editors and staff engineers of High Fidelity magazine in Great Barrington. They not only make a living from it; they care for music for its own sake and have extensive record collections for their custom machines. Yet they go to Tanglewood every chance they get!

One of the reasons for their faithful attendance is that it helps them in their work. In their capacities as record critics they need a criterion, a norm for purposes of comparison. This, of course, is the live performance: "High Fidelity" means faithfulness to the sound as it was originally produced. Going regularly to concerts has the effect of impressing the live performance upon their minds so they have a standard by which to judge recordings.

* * *

THAT IS NOT the whole story, though, as High Fidelity staffers cheerfully admit. They go to Tanglewood because they enjoy concerts more than recordings and get more out of them.

This, despite certain obvious advantages of records. The recorded performance, for instance, is almost always better than the concert performance because movements or sections have been repeated again and again until they satisfied the conductor. Then too, records are far more convenient. You can play just what you want to hear, just when you want it and just as loudly as you want it. And not least of all for a music lover, records are much less expensive than concerts in the long run. An LP record will give perhaps 50 performances for the price of two concert tickets.

But all these undeniable advantages are outweighed, even in the minds of hi fi fanatics, by the advantages of live performances. For the dynamic range of a full orchestra cannot be captured and reproduced perfectly with even the best and most expensive instruments, available now. The sound is affected by the media through which it passes from the time it leaves the instruments to the time it reaches the listener's ear.

* * *

RECORDS COME in second in the matter of atmosphere and acoustics, too. While chamber music sounds natural enough in a living room—it was written to be played in a "chamber," after all—there is something a little unnatural, a little overpowering, about a symphony orchestra blaring away fortissimo through that screen under the book case. You can turn down the volume, of course, and in good sets you will still be able to hear all the instruments, but then it will no longer be a faithful reproduction of how the orchestra sounds to a listener sitting in front of it.

A concert has the additional advantage of enabling the listener to see the performers and identify the instruments with their sounds. Along this line, it also enables the listener to watch the conductor at work, an illuminating sight when he subordinates himself to the music and eschews the interpretive dance. High fidelity people, who don't like to be distracted from their listening, feel strongly on this last point.

* * *

DESPITE THE strides made by the recording industry in the last five years, then, records are not likely to crowd out live performances, in the opinion of some people who should know. From the standpoint of the music alone, concerts and records are complementary rather than mutually exclusive.

As for other standpoints, well, the live concert has advantages there, too. After all, who can summon up "darshan" by himself? Who can reproduce a panorama of Stockbridge Bowl and the mountains, green grass and trees, a cooling breeze and hundreds of beautiful women—all in his own living room?

ay, July 21, 1954 Syracuse Herald-Journal

The Griller String Quartet will play Bloch's Fourth Quartet, a premiere performance, in the fourth of a series of Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concerts in "Tanglewood," Wednesday night, July 28. The Quartet: Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola; Colin Hampton, cello.

[213]

Tanglewood Concerts in Lenox Supply Music-Filled Weekends

Since 1938 when the 6000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U.S. and Canada until last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

The Music Shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust", a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the Symphony "Harold in Italy", with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini", "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans", the song cycle "Summer Nights" with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 15).

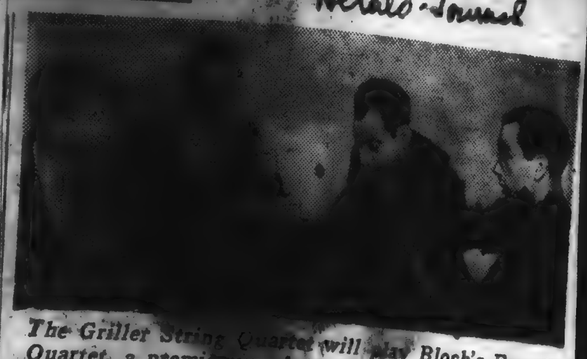
Dividends for Festival patrons are two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs in August; and six Saturday morning rehearsals — for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund at $1.00 admission — by the full Symphony Orchestra.

Tanglewood tickets are always available at the box-office since the capacity of the sprawling lawn, shown here, is practically infinite. Bus and train connections are easily available to Pittsfield and Lenox. By car, proceed to Wellesley, take route 9 to Springfield and follow the Pittsfield signs until you hit the turnoff at Lenox.

The Berkshire Music Center, established by the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, is in its twelfth season. Annually a student body of 400 is chosen from some 1,500 applicants. Last year the student enrollment was composed of 292 full-time students from 41 states and seven foreign countries, 86 of whom were former students returning.

Edmund Wilson described the workings of the Berkshire Music Center in The New Yorker magazine (September 4, 1948): "No student of evident ability is refused because he cannot pay; if necessary, lodging and food are provided free of charge. The music that is played and sung is derived from a great variety of nationalities and schools and periods: European and North and South American. The teaching of composition is conducted by the American Aaron Copland, with whom is associated every year some other distinguished composer. The visiting instructors have included Hindemith, Samuel Barber, Honegger, Milhaud, Dallapiccola, Carlos Chavez (this year noted Austro-American composer Ernst Toch will be present)

Syracuse Herald-Journal
...y, July 21, 1954



The Griller String Quartet will play Bloch's Fourth Quartet, a premiere performance, in the fourth of a series of Berkshire Festival Chamber Music concerts in "Tanglewood," Wednesday night, July 28. The Quartet: Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola; Colin Hampton, cello.

Tanglewood Program Raises Some Questions on Policy

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE T... small orchestra ...rams in the ... at Tanglewo... de-voted to Ha... The major work of the evening came after intermission when Hugh Ross conducted the Haydn Mass No. 3 in D minor, sometimes called the "Nelson" Mass, for fairly flimsy reasons, although it has acquired other equally inapplicable appellations in other centers. It is amazingly operatic in spirit and the soprano, Naomi Farry, soloist, had coloratura arias and phrases of a most secular nature.

Mr. Ross kept the orchestra and the festival chorus under brisk control and his enthusiasm prompted him to ask for full-throated response a good share of the time. He did achieve a few quieter effects and, in the Sanctus, some very impressive and well-balanced, sustained repose.

MISS Far... some startlingly florid pas... after a very few bars of the "Kyrie eleison," which she ... with ease and flexibility. ... entire quartet of soloists ... also included Beatrice ... contralto; Marvin Worden, ... and Thomas Stewart, bass — had effectual contrasts in the ensuing "Gloria" and the bass and contralto were vocally ... satisfying and musically ... fragmentary.

Charles Munch was the conductor in the first half of the program, in which they played the Handel concerto grosso, Opus 6, No. 4, for string orchestra and, then adding the winds, the Haydn G "Military" symphony. Trumpeter Roger Voisin did a gentle fanfare in his ... entrance, but C... Munch was excessive in ... demands in most other of the ... violent areas, especially on the bass drum in the finale when he completely obliterated the brilliantly bouncing bows of his string sections. The whole symphony, however, is just lovely music and is pure pleasure every time.

The Handel concerto is a permanent delight when ... Munch asked the principal ... first and second violi... the cello section; Ro... in, Clarence Knudson ... ured Zighera respectively, to stand after the performance for recognition of the fine playing they had done in the various portions that fall to their lot. There is one of the rare instances here where a second violin leader has such a conspicuous role. The duo and interplay between Burgin and Knudson as well as its later repetition by Zighera in the cello, highlighted an otherwise disorderly reading.

It might be a moot question whether the new schedule being tried this summer at Tanglewood is within the human limits of the members of the Boston Symphony. The number and variety of programs require preparation and rehearsals that some performances obviously show have been insufficient. A few flubbed notes are no disgrace, nor is a fleeting erring of a single bar or even a single beat reason for condemnation. After all, such a magnificent body of players can do very little wrong, but in an excess of zeal for "beat-last-year" figures more usually found in commercial counting houses, has the factor of artistic standards been lost sight of?

A ... LY ... of Seattle ... parent ... from the Boston Sym... can still give ... sure to their hosts of ... but should we countenance ... alloy of symphony and ... What were the original ... in establishing the Berkshire Festival and Tanglewood? Was it not a unique venture where, in all of the United States, an orchestra retained all its principal players and its main musical director for programs of as serious a nature in the summer as in the winter schedule in their home concert hall?

South Berkshire Weekly

A Dash of 'Darshan'

By A. C. Rud

LENOX — In these days of super-high fidelity phonographs and longer-playing records, it is a little surprising to find people still flocking to concerts. At first thought, at least, it seems remarkable that the owners of all those glossy Chryslers and Cadillacs in the Tanglewood parking lot do not see fit to buy themselves Hi Fi sets and settle down at home with exactly the music they want to hear.

Why do people come to the Berkshire Festival when they can listen to records in comfort, anyway? Force of habit? Fashion? Mob instinct? Or what?

* * *

PART OF THE answer was furnished by Lukas Foss, the brilliant young composer-pianist, when he spoke at a composers' forum here this week. Among other witty things, Mr. Foss said some concertgoers apparently were moved by an emotion for which he did not have an English word but which the modern Indians called "darshan."

According to Mr. Foss, "darshan" is a form of happiness people experience in the presence of some great manifestation—even though they don't understand it. As a case in point, he cited a recent speech by Pandit Nehru in India. The loud speaker system failed but some 400,000 Indians sat through a 1½-hour talk they could not hear, in complete silence and evident satisfaction. Mr. Foss believes more than a dash of "darshan" is demonstrated by ... on the outer fringes of the ... wood lawn.

Besides "darshan," ... doubtedly plays a part. It is fashionable for a New Yorker to attend two or three concerts at Tanglewood, but not very chic to say she's spent the weekend with a phonograph.

* * *

RECOGNIZING, then, that other people go to the festival out of ignoble motives, what can we say about ourselves, the true music lovers? Since we don't care about being fashionable or building a reputation for high culture, why don't we just stay home and listen to records?

A ... question. ... it can be answered by ... ties. Probably no one ... a radius of 100 miles is more enthusiastic about recorded music than the editors and staff engineers of High Fidelity magazine in Great Barrington. They not only make a living from it, they care for music for its own sake and have extensive record collections for their custom machines. Yet they go to Tanglewood every chance they get!

One of the reasons for their faithful attendance is that it helps them in their work. In their capacities as record critics they need a criterion, a norm for purposes of comparison. This, of course, is the ... performances. "High Fidelity" means faithfulness to the sound ... originally produced. ... regularly to concerts has the ... of impressing the live ... performance upon their minds so ... they have a standard by which to judge recordings.

* * *

THAT IS NOT the whole story, though, as Hi-Fi Fidelity staffers cheerfully admit. They go to Tanglewood because they enjoy concerts more than recordings and get more out of them.

This, despite certain obvious advantages of records. The recorded performance, for instance, is almost always better than the concert performance because movements or sections have been repeated again and again until they satisfied the conductor. Then too, records are far more convenient. You can ... just what you want to hear, ... when you want it and just as loudly as you want it. And not least of all for a music lover, records are much less expensive than concerts in the long run. An L.P. record will give perhaps 50 performances for the price of two concert tickets.

But all these undeniable advantages are outweighed, even in the minds of hi fi fanatics, by the advantages of live performances. For the dynamic range of a full orchestra cannot be captured and reproduced perfectly with even the best and most expensive instruments available now. The sound is distorted by the media through which it passes from the time it leaves the instruments to the time it reaches the listener's ear.

* * *

RECORDS COME in second in the matter of atmosphere and acoustics, too. While chamber music sounds natural enough in a living room—it was written to be played in a "chamber," after all—there is something a little unnatural, a little overpowering, about a symphony orchestra blaring away fortissimo through that screen under the book case. You can turn down the volume, of course, and in good sets you will still be able to hear all the instruments, but then it will no longer be a faithful reproduction of how the orchestra sounds to a listener sitting in front of it.

A concert has the additional advantage of enabling the listener to see the performers and identify the instruments with their sounds. Along this line, it also enables the listener to watch the conductor at work, an illuminating sight when he subordinates himself to the music and eschews the interpretive dance. High fidelity people, who don't like to be distracted from their listening, feel strongly on this last point.

* * *

DESPITE THE strides made by the recording industry in the last five years, then, records are not likely to crowd out live performances, in the opinion of some people who should know. From the standpoint of the music alone, concerts and records are complementary rather than mutually exclusive.

As for other standpoints, well, the live concert has advantages there, too. After all, who can summon up "darshan" by himself? Who can reproduce a panorama of Stockbridge Bowl and the mountains, green grass and trees, a cooling breeze and hundreds of beautiful women—all in his own living room?

Copland Opera at Tanglewood Aug. 2, 3

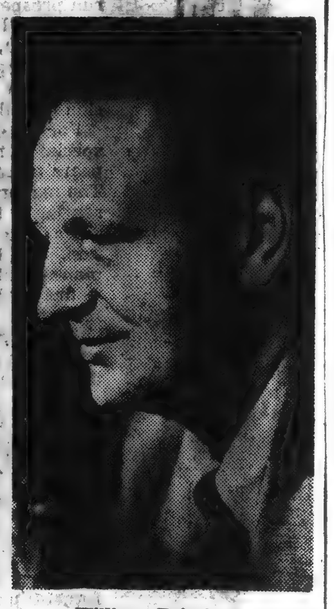
On Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the New England premiere ... the first Tanglewood ... of Aaron Copland's ... opera ... "The T... ed by th... an Assis... of ... summer school ... of ... Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

[213]

Jean Morel, French Conductor, Directs BSO in Shed Tonight

Nicole Henriot, French Pianist, Soloist This Evening—William Primrose, Violist, Returns to Tanglewood Tomorrow

Nicole Henriot
Pianist



William Primrose
Violist

TANGLEWOOD — Jean Morel, the distinguished French conductor, who is acting head of instrumental music and conductor of the student symphony orchestra at the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood tonight at 8:30.

He will have as soloist, Nicole Henriot, who made her American debut as a pianist in 1948 with Charles Munch conducting the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra.

Tonight's program will include Prokofieff's Symphony No. 6, the Liszt Piano Concerto in E flat, Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan" and the Edward Elgar "Enigma" variations.

Tomorrow's Program

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30, Mr. Munch will conduct a program of Berlioz Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick," the same composer's "Harold in Italy," in which violist William Primrose will be the soloist, and the first Tanglewood performance of Symphony No. 2 by Ernest Toch, who is guest teacher of composition this year at the Berkshire Music Center.

As acting head of instrumental music and conductor of the student symphony orchestra, Jean Morel is the third person to head this department at the Berkshire Music Center since the school's establishment in 1940. Mr. Morel is head of the orchestra department and director of conducting classes at New York's Juilliard School of Music. Born in France, he began his musical studies with Isidor Philipp. His debut on the podium was made in a Diaghilev production of Stravinsky's ballet "Les Noces" in Paris. At 33 he succeeded Pierre Monteux as musical director and permanent conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris.

Coming to the United States by way of South America where he is a perennial favorite, Jean Morel joined the New York City Opera Company's conducting staff in 1944 and the Juilliard faculty in 1948.

'Little Miss Horowitz'

Christened the "Little Miss Horowitz" by the Boston Herald and "Frail Thunderer" by Time magazine, Miss Henriot has appeared many times with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston, on tour and at Tanglewood since her American debut in 1948 with Mr. Munch. Born in Paris and studying at the Paris Conservatoire at the age of seven, Miss Henriot made her debut with the Pasdeloup Orchestra. Active in the resistance movement after the fall of France, Miss Henriot was able to continue her career and was the first French pianist heard in England after the Armistice.

William Primrose, tomorrow's soloist, was a member of the chamber music faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947. Coming to Tanglewood directly from the Aspen Institute of Music in Aspen, Colo., where he is teaching this summer, Mr. Primrose has played with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on several occasions as well as having recorded with it. Born in Glasgow, Scotland, and educated at the Guildhall School of Music in London, his career began as a member of the London String Quartet.

In 1937 the new NBC Symphony Orchestra was being formed in New York for Toscanini and Mr. Primrose was asked to head the viola section which he did until 1942 when he left the orchestra to devote his time to solo engagements. Since that time he has toured most of the world, has been soloist with every major orchestra in this country, and was the only musician included on the honors list of the late King George VI when the Commander of the Order of the British Empire was bestowed upon him. Mr. Primrose's recording of the Berlioz' "Harold in Italy"—which he plays at Tanglewood Sunday—was the best-selling classical record of 1953.

HEMIDEMISEMIQUAVERS: The Berkshire Music Festival is transferring its Friday night chamber orchestra concerts to the Shed, if it rains. Thus listeners who buy admission to the lawns will have shelter in case of a downpour. . . . Ernst von Doh-

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.
Today, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, William Primrose, violist. Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick"; Symphony No. 2 ("Harold in Italy," Berlioz. Symphony No. 2, Op. 16, Bartok. Tuesday, 8 p.m., Op. 73, Toch. Theatre-Concert Hall, Music Center Opera Department. There are three one-act operas: "Amelia Goes to the Ball" (Vecchi); "The Princess and the Pea" (Hindemith), and "The Juggler of Our Lady" (Toch). Wednesday, 8:30 p.m., Theatre-Concert Hall, Tanglewood String Quartet. Quartet in B flat ("Hunt"), K. 458, Mozart. Quartet No. 4 (first performance in United States), Bloch. Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2, Beethoven. Friday, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Boston Symphony Chamber Players, Charles Munch, conductor, Doriot Anthony, flutist. "The Spider's Feast," Roussel; Flute Concerto, Ibert; Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388, Mozart; "Paris" Symphony, K. 297, Mozart. Saturday, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students and soloists, Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone. Sunday, Aug. 1, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting; soloist, Ruth Posselt, violinist. American Festival Overture, Schuman; Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, Vaughan Williams; Violin Concerto, Khatchaturian; Symphony No. 2, Sibelius.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch; William Primrose, violist.
Overture to Beatrice and Benedict: Berlioz
Harold in Italy ..... Berlioz
Symphony No. 2 ..... Toch
TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Students of the Berkshire Music Center.
Three one-act operas: Vecchi's L'Amfiparnaso; Hindemith's Hin und Zurueck; Toch's The Princess and the Pea.
WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, The Gallet String Quartet.
Quartet in B flat (K. 458) ..... Mozart
Quartet No. 4 (U. S. premiere) .. Bloch
Quartet in G, Op. 18, No. 2 .. Beethoven
FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M., Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra conducted by Munch; Doriot Anthony, flutist.
The Spider's Feast ..... Roussel
Flute Concerto ..... Ibert
Serenade for Eight Winds (K. 388); Paris Symphony (K. 297) ..... Mozart
SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Munch; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone and Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students.
Romeo and Juliet ..... Berlioz
NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin; Ruth Posselt, violinist.
American Festival Overture .... Schuman
Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis ..... Vaughan Williams
Violin Concerto ..... Khachaturian
Symphony No. 2 ..... Sibelius

U. S. Premiere Given During Fourth Week at Tanglewood

The fourth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, compromises a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U. S. performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, on the 28th in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart will be performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on the 30th in the Theatre-Concert Hall. Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be on the 31st in the Music Shed.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, will present a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Aug. 1 in the Music Shed.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, July 28, 8.30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: MOZART: Quartet in B flat ("Hunt"), K. 458; BLOCH: Quartet No. 4 (United States premiere); BEETHOVEN: Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2—THE GRILLER STRING QUARTET (Sidney Griller, Jack O'Brien, violins; Phillip Burton, viola; Colin Hampton, 'cello).

Friday, July 30, 8.30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: ROUSSEL: "The Spider's Feast;" IBERT: Flute Concerto—with Doriot Anthony as soloist; MOZART: Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388—with Ralph Gomberg, Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi, Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano, Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt, Ernst Panenka, bassoons; MOZART: "Paris" Symphony, K. 297.

Charles Munch, conductor Saturday, July 31, 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: BERLIOZ: "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, and soloists Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone.

Charles Munch, conductor Sunday, Aug. 1, 2.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: SCHUMAN: American Festival Overture; VAUGHN WILLIAMS: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; KHATCHATURIAN: Violin Concerto—with Ruth Posselt as soloists; SIBELIUS: Symphony No. 2.

Richard Burgin, conductor

This week end's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday: Prokofieff: Symphony No. 6; Liszt: Piano Concerto in E flat—with Nicole Henriot as soloist; Strauss: "Don Juan;" Elgar: "Enigma" Variations—Jean Morel, guest conductor.

Sunday Berlioz: Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick;" Berlioz: "Harold in Italy" symphony—with William Primrose as viola soloist; Toch: Symphony No. 2—Charles Munch conductor.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

50 From U. N. Arrive On 5th Annual Visit

Fifty United Nations representatives from 21 foreign lands were enjoying their second day in the country today as guests on the fifth annual weekend visit to Berkshire County, courtesy of Pittsfield's Workshop of World Understandng.

The group, bringing to more than 300 the number of U.N. people similarly entertained here since 1950, arrived in the city last night, and today and tomorrow they will be guests at Tanglewood for the Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts.

There are no repeaters—that is, all the guests are making the tour for the first time. They are staying in 24 private dwellings, and five cooperative houses. Their visit is strictly social, with no business meetings scheduled.

From 21 Nations

The visitors, mostly "white collar" U.N. employes, come from the following countries: India, Ecuador, Australia, Norway, England, France, Yugoslavia, China, Mexico, Denmark, Netherlands, Egypt, Indonesia, Ethiopia, Thailand, Scotland, Switzerland, Peru, Great Britain, Turkey and Czechoslavakia.

The entire group, guests and hosts, will attend a picnic at Tanglewood tomorrow. Arrangements for the program were made by Mrs. Frederick M. Myers, chairman of the hospitality committee, assisted by Mrs. Jack R. Meador, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Mack, and Mrs. Donald McKenzie. The Workshop organized the visit, and was helped by the WSCS of the First Methodist Church, and the Pittsfield Rotary Club.

The majority of the U.N. visitors are experts in social and international matters. Many lasting friendships have been formed on past trips, and it is hoped the same thing will hold true this time.

Hosts Listed

Berkshire persons who have provided housing space for the visitors are: P. W. Neurath, James E. Breslin, Harold H. Burkart, Nathan C. Horwitt, Richard B. Kaufman, David Keeney, Donald R. Mack, Jack Meador, William Ringlee, Fred M. Myers, Mrs. L. G. Robbins, David Sklar, John B. Skole, Modestino Criscitiello, George H. Halsey, Henry Whiting, Mrs. Brace W. Paddock, George M. Shipton and Mrs. Edward D. Renouf. People are also staying at the Castle, 66 Club, Variety House, Judy-Ann, and the 81 Club.

The visit will terminate tomorrow evening when the guests board a train at Stockbridge for the return trip to New York.

"THE PRINCESS AND THE PEA" AT TANGLEWOOD

The K[illegible] (Falk)

A scene from Ernst Toch's one-act opera, which will be part of a triple-bill on Tuesday night.

N.Y. Times July 25, 1954

A MASS BY HAYDN HEARD AT LENOX

Little Known 'Nelson' Work Is Sung at Berkshire Festival by Chorus, Solo Quartet

By OLIN DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 23—The tenth program of the Berkshire Festival given on Friday night in the concert theatre, Tanglewood, began with a Handel Concerto Grosso and the Haydn "Military" Symphony. Haydn, conducted very effectively by Charles Munch. It ended with a work little known and a performance little less than sensational of the Haydn "Nelson" Mass, performed by the Festival Chorus, with an admirable solo quartet magnificently conducted by the choral director of the Festival, Hugh Ross.

This work was, to many of us, a revelation of a side of Haydn's genius that is little known as his Masses are seldom performed at public concerts. Perhaps the 'Nelson" Mass has a special power because of the event that appears to have inspired it. This was Nelson's victory of the Battle of the Nile. The music bears strong witness to Haydn's feelings when he composed it.

His admiration of England and Nelson's prowess is well known. The Mass is a militant declaration of the faith. The music floods from the composer's pen, and is of unfailing strength and exuberance from beginning to end.

Rejoicing of Multitudes

It is the rejoicing of multitudes. It makes such a constant employment of the chorus that the voice parts, brilliant and significant as occasionally they are in themselves, have almost the character of an obligato to the great choral current of the music. They are interwoven with the chorus and seldom appear in contrast to its declaration.

It might well prove that in the passages of profound pathos, such as the Incarnatus, the depths of sorrow and lamentation are not touched; it sweeps forward, with hardly time for pathos. The whole picture is one of power and affirmation.

The orchestral part is extremely significant in its coloring and dramatic accentuation as well as in the sonorous support of the voice. The whole work has a unity that makes its progress irresistible. This is no gentle "Papa Haydn" that we hear in this music; it is a singer of battles.

Miss Farr Meets Tests

The performance was conspicuous equally for its finish and clarity, its tonal resonance and fine shading and its power. The soloists were Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor, and Thomas Stewart, bass.

The solo soprano has to sing brilliant and difficult coloratura passages, as well as those of more declamatory nature, covering a wide range and necessitating exceptional variety of style. Miss Farr met these tests with technical brilliancy and exciting emotion. In many solo passages she seemed to lead the chorus as one who advanced before the hosts.

The fine intelligence and feeling that Mr. Stewart manifested were companioned by Miss Krebs' highly competent performance and by the few solo passages of Mr. Worden.

But at the base of all this was Mr. Ross' superb authority, control, fire and imagination in his direction of singers and orchestra and the flaming enthusiasm with which he unified the entire interpretation into one of the most brilliant and authoritative choral performances that we have heard in a long time.

[a14]

The Eagle Saturday Features

Tanglewood: Struggling for Survival

By John G. W. Mahanna

This is the second of four articles on the early history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, taken from the official records of the organization that established the famed symphony concerts in the Berkshires 20 years ago.

* * *

THE PEOPLE of Berkshire County were made the judge and jury for the future success of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival after the introduction here of symphony concerts "under the moon" in 1934.

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, who spearheaded the drive in the spring and early summer of 1934 to bring outdoor concerts to the county, made it clear that only "team work" among Berkshire residents would make the Festival idea, proposed by Dr. Henry Hadley, a success.

Encouraged with only a deficit of $413.30 after the first year's concerts, the board of trustees, leaning on the generosity of the Festival underwriters, were determined more than ever to make the Berkshires another Salzburg.

* * *

ALSO ENCOURAGING to the Festival workers planning the 1935 event was the report, late in 1934, that the government had granted tax exemptions on all concert tickets. It proved to be a good selling point. Although the word was late in arriving from government officials, the nearly 6,000 persons who attended the first year's concerts were promptly notified of the action. Only 31 persons asked for a return of the tax. It totaled $29.10.

* * *

REVIEWING the 1934 season at a round-up meeting of the Festival board, Dr. Hadley, the conductor of the 65 men of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, informed the group that any criticism of the first year's program was not to be leveled at him.

Dr. Hadley made it clear that the first programs were "not altogether an index of my taste and whatever skill I possess in program building," but rather "a temporary yielding to the popular suggestions of the first patrons of the Berkshire Festival."

August nights, especially late in the month, Miss Robinson Smith approached Mrs. Charles Guggenheimer, the chairman of the Stadium concerts in New York, with a suggestion that perhaps the New York musicians would be able to come earlier to the Berkshires in 1935. It was a good try, but Mrs. Guggenheimer found it impossible to advance the Stadium concerts to suit the Berkshire audiences.

The estimated budget for the 1935 Festival was set at $14,637.50, an increase of about $3,000 over the first year. Officials hoped to obtain $7,500 from patrons, $5,000 from sustaining members, $1,000 from program advertising and $500 from the food concession.

The Festival went into high gear by Christmas of 1934. A total of 1,500 announcements were mailed from Stockbridge; oil companies offered to include the Festival site on road maps; the Berkshire Hills Conference continued plugging the concerts and tour books were prepared for visitors to the county.

* * *

FOR SOME of the Festival officials, the Berkshires were no longer just a place to spend the summer. There was work to be done. Regular meetings were held in the Berkshires throughout the fall and winter. A few were held in New York.

During the winter, the board employed a New York newspaperman, Elmore Leffingwell, who was engaged to handle national publicity. He agreed to write two releases a week for 250 metropolitan newspapers and contribute special articles to magazines.

* * *

ON TOP OF THIS, a Festival stamp, showing a pine tree at one side, with the Berkshire Hills in the background and the moon above, gave the concerts more publicity. The Festival ordered a half-million stamps at a cost of $230. They sold for 10 cents a sheet.

New faces started to appear on the Festival scene. William Miles took over as director of the Berkshire Playhouse, succeeding F. Cowles Strickland. Mr. Miles offered to assist in many ways, particularly in bringing to the Playhouse a name star for Festival week. He engaged Ethel Barrymore to appear in "Déclassée." Ted Shawn promised an attractive program at his Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival; the South Mountain Quartet in Pittsfield and the Gordon String Quartet in Falls Village, Conn., scheduled afternoon concerts before the evening Festival programs.

came with the announcement that a huge tent had been rented instead of taking out rain insurance. The tent was capable of seating 3,000 people. It was to be used only in case of rain, because the officials wanted to keep to the original plan—to hold concerts out-of-doors "under the moon."

* * *

PLANS WERE progressing pretty smoothly until mid-July when the Festival felt its first serious blow. Miss Robinson Smith had been called suddenly to Europe to be with her mother after the death in France of her uncle, Count Vincent de Wierzbicki, a French Army officer, who had lectured frequently in the United States.

* * *

UNDAUNTED by the sudden turn of events, the Festival president methodically put her house in order for the period covering her absence from the Berkshires. She appointed the vice-president, Mrs. Carlos M. deHeredia, to assume the duties of acting president, and named George W. Edman to be chairman of a co-ordinating committee to continue the Festival plans. Before sailing from New York, she left detailed instructions for the officers and committees to follow.

The show went on. Invitations were extended to the six New England governors to attend the opening concert but only two accepted—Governor James Michael Curley of Massachusetts and Governor Theodore Green of Rhode Island.

ETHEL BARRYMORE, who starred in "Déclassée" at the Berkshire Playhouse in Stockbridge during Festival week in 1935, attended an afternoon concert at the Hanna farm with the Playhouse director, William Miles, who was spending his first summer in the Berkshires, after succeeding F. Cowles Strickland.

MOVING INDOORS after listening to concerts in the center of a horse show ring at the Hanna farm at Interlaken for two years, this audience enjoyed the first concert by the BSO, with Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducting, in a huge tent erected on the grounds of Mrs. Margaret Emerson's Lenox estate, Holmwood, in 1936.

Smith sent letters to all of them stating:

"Within a few days you will receive either a telegram or telephone call, asking you to come to a meeting of great importance."

The letter also explained Dr. Hadley's resignation and prepared the "local chairmen" for the "hurry call" to attend a meeting in Stockbridge.

* * *

THEN THE announcement came, telling the world that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Koussevitzky conducting, would be at the 1936 Festival on Aug. 13, 15, and 16. Lenox immediately strung a banner with the dates across its Main Street.

Festival could be held at her estate, Holmwood, located between Lenox and Stockbridge. Mrs. Emerson offered the entire property to the Festival and plans went forward.

In a few days, Joseph Franz started moving equipment from the Hanna farm to Holmwood. A huge tent, measuring 120 by 230 feet, arrived on the grounds to shelter the audience and orchestra for the 1936 series. The tent accommodated 3,500 people and cost $750 to rent.

Dr. Koussevitzky registered complete satisfaction with the new Festival site upon his arrival in the Berkshires. He was the guest during the concert series of Miss Robinson Smith, along

---

JUNE 15 was the deadline set to enroll 1,500 sustaining members. The pressure was on once again. After the winter months there were only 440 sustaining members on the books of the Festival and only 26 patrons.

When the deadline date rolled around, the membership drive fell short of its goal. Only $5,000 and Ted Shawn and his men dancers were booked to appear at the Festival grounds on the morning of Aug. 10. ("Artistically, the two performances were successful," the Festival records revealed, "but financially, they were not so good.")

Hanna farm in 1935. The portable structure was moved the following year to Holmwood for the third annual concerts of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. At left is the late John C. Lynch of Stockbridge, first treasurer of the Festival, and in the center, talking with an unidentified man, is Henry W. Dwight, president of Housatonic National Bank, Stockbridge, a member of board of trustees.

for renewals of memberships. The immediate response was gratifying. On Feb. 13, 1936, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees entered into their first agreement.

sessions.

The parking areas at Holmwood were a great improvement over the facilities at the Hanna farm. Sheriff J. Bruce McIntyre succeeded Captain Fred Todd in handling the [illegible]

Dr. Hadley made it clear that the first programs were "not altogether an index of my taste and whatever skill I possess in program building," but rather "a temporary yielding to the popular suggestions of the first patrons of the Berkshire Festival."

He likewise explained that the pear in "Déclassée." Ted Shawn promised an attractive program, at his Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival; the South Mountain Quartet in Pittsfield and the Gordon String Quartet in Falls Village, Conn., scheduled afternoon concerts before the evening Festival programs.

Owen Johnson was unable to instructions to the ushers and committees to follow.

The show went on. Invitations were extended to the six New England governors to attend the opening concert but only two accepted—Governor James Michael Curley of Massachusetts and Governor Theodore Green of Rhode Island.

Added to

THEN THE announcement came, telling the world that the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Koussevitzky conducting, would be at the 1936 Festival on Aug. 13, 15, and 16. Lenox immediately strung a banner with the dates across its Main Street.

In order to give the Festival

Conductor for the July series. The tent accommodated 3,500 people and cost $750 to rent.

Dr. Koussevitzky registered complete satisfaction with the new Festival site upon his arrival in the Berkshires. He was the guest during the concert series of Miss Robinson Smith, along with Ernest Dane, BSO pianist gram, he added, "completely vindicated my judgment and convinced me that only the greatest works of the masters should be presented on these programs."

* * *

IN CONCLUSION, the conductor informed the Festival board that while he welcomed suggestions for the 1935 concert programs, he wanted a free hand in selecting the works to be given by the "bigger and better orchestra."

After hearing from the man who dreamed up the Festival idea, the board members went ahead with plans to place the Festival on a business basis. Their first move was to set up an office in the Stockbridge Associates' building in Stockbridge, and to hire a full-time executive secretary, Miss Elizabeth Downing. Her first function was to increase the mailing lists.

* * *

HAVING IN mind the cool

JUNE 15 was the deadline set to enroll 1,500 sustaining members. The pressure was on once again. After the winter months there were only 440 sustaining members on the books of the Festival and only 26 patrons.

When the deadline date rolled around, the membership drive fell short of its goal. Only $6,000 of the $14,657 budget had been raised. In the meantime, the Junior League of Pittsfield came into the picture, offering to take over the food concessions with the agreement that 50 per cent of the net proceeds would go to the Festival. The proposition was accepted.

Renewing her efforts to reach the goal of 1,500 sustaining members, Miss Robinson Smith ordered "full steam ahead" in a letter to her co-workers. Within a few days, the drive chairmen were notified that the concerts would be held "rain or shine" on Aug. 8, 10 and 11, a decision that an violinist at South Mountain; and Ted Shawn and his men dancers were booked to appear at the Festival grounds on the morning of Aug. 10. ("Artistically, the two performances were successful," the Festival records revealed, "but financially, they were not so good.")

* * *

NEWSPAPERS and radio stations made much of the fact that two New England governors were to attend the opening concerts. The two chief executives, accompanied by staff members and friends, occupied adjoining boxes.

At intermission, Dr. Hadley invited the two governors to the stage where he introduced them to the audience. Governor Green expressed his appreciation for the arts and congratulated the Festival on the concert plan being developed in the Berkshires.

* * *

GOVERNOR CURLEY was in his glory. He was so taken with the plan, he told the audience, that upon his return to the State House he would "direct the proper authorities to allocate $5,000 to help aid the Berkshire Festival." (The $5,000 was never forthcoming, but the governor's message was given widespread publicity.)

The Massachusetts governor, in formal evening attire, was thoroughly enjoying the spotlight. After drawing thunderous applause from the audience after his offer of monetary assistance, Governor Curley read to the crowd greetings from "Salzburg in the Old World" to "Salzburg in the New," sent by Max Reinhardt in Austria.

* * *

THE BERKSHIRE Musical Assn. chorus of 200 voices appeared in the opening concert, singing Beethoven's "Eroica," under the direction of Horace Hunt of Dalton.

At the next concert, Richard Hale, popular actor at the Berkshire Playhouse, sang the baritone solo in the coronation scene from "Boris Goudonoff." As soon as he finished, Mr. Hale was whisked away to the Playhouse in time for his entrance in Ethel Barrymore's starring vehicle, "Déclassée."

Headlining the final concert was pianist Rudolph Ganz, who played Tchaikovsky's Concerto in B Flat Minor.

* * *

ATTENDANCE at the opening concert broke all records, but the coordinating committee felt that Dr. Hadley's program was not up to his usual standard. Because of this, the committee

A FAR CRY from the box office at Tanglewood today is this box office on the grounds of the Hanna farm in 1935. The portable structure was moved the following year to Holmwood for the third annual concerts of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. At left is the late John C. Lynch of Stockbridge, first treasurer of the Festival, and in the center, talking with an unidentified man, is Henry W. Dwight, president of Housatonic National Bank, Stockbridge, a member of board of trustees.

claimed the gate receipts suffered materially at the two remaining concerts.

The Festival officials also began to hear other complaints. The plumbing fixtures didn't function too well at the Hanna farm the second year; someone made off with two cases of beer from the Junior League concession and rain on the final night caused many motorists some anxious moments in trying to drive out of the muddy parking lot.

When the curtain was drawn on the second Festival season, the publicity agent was among the first to utter "constructive criticisms" for the board to consider before going ahead with plans for a third season.

* * *

MR. LEFFINGWELL, who handled all of the press relations, gathered from the music critics who came here for the concerts, that the programs "might have been better selected" and that "the leadership could have been improved upon."

He observed that the music-loving public had reached a point in America where it likes "leavened programs" or "balanced selections." The public, he reported, demands various interspersed numbers representing the best in "modern American music."

Supporting Mr. Leffingwell's criticism of the 1935 series, Mr. Edman, reporting for the co-ordinating committee, said that if the Festival is to maintain its position and standards, it must another year secure, if possible, an outstanding orchestral unit like the Detroit, Boston or Cleveland Symphony.

A few days later on Sept. 23, 1935, Dr. Hadley in a letter to Mr. Edman, clerk of the board, submitted his resignation to the Festival board. "I have made other plans which will preclude my being with you in 1936," he wrote.

* * *

THREE DAYS before his resignation was received, the board of trustees had voted to engage "either an established orchestra, or part thereof."

* * *

OVERTURES were made to the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra by Mrs. Elisabeth C. T. Miller, who owned the Hanna farm. Mrs. Miller, who lived in Ohio for many years, made an attempt to engage the 80 musicians of the Cleveland orchestra with Artur Rodzinski conducting.

However, she was unable to come to an understanding about the price for a series of concerts here until sometime later when the Cleveland board was scheduled to meet.

In the meantime, the clerk of the Festival board, Mr. Edman, contacted George E. Judd, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and a meeting was arranged between them, John C. Lynch, treasurer of the Festival and Miss Robinson Smith at the Dugway in Stockbridge.

Following a long discussion, Mr. Judd made arrangements in Boston for Miss Robinson Smith to confer with the musical director of the BSO, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, about the Festival plans.

* * *

IN A FEW DAYS the Festival was off for Boston to talk with the maestro. Her appointment was for 15 minutes, but they conferred for nearly two hours.

Beaming with enthusiasm over the success of her initial visit with Dr. Koussevitzky, Miss Robinson Smith returned to Stockbridge, called a meeting of the board and reported that Dr. Koussevitzky was interested in conducting in the Berkshires and that the BSO trustees were interested in considering the proposal to have their musicians play at the Festival.

Many details had to be worked out. The fee for the conductor and orchestra to appear at three concerts over a four-day period would be $9,000. The Festival had to meet the expenses for board and lodging for the musicians, and the cost of transportation from the hotel to the Hanna farm and return. Dr. Koussevitzky had expressed the wish to the Festival president that the concerts would be held in an auditorium, but he was willing to conduct temporarily in a tent. The Festival officials were faced with a big task, but their enthusiasm never faltered.

THE WHOLE PLAN was scheduled to be presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees on Oct. 9. A tentative budget of $16,037.50 was drawn up. On Oct. 10, Mr. Judd informed the Festival that the BSO trustees had approved the proposal. Public announcement was delayed until the musicians were told of the plan.

Careful not to reveal the BSO contract to even the advisory board members, who were scattered within a 50-mile radius of Stockbridge, Miss Robinson for another concentrated drive for renewals of membarships. The immediate response was gratifying. On Feb. 13, 1936, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., and the Boston Symphony Orchestra's trustees entered into their first agreement.

By May 4, 1936, 50 per cent of the budget was raised through the sale of tickets.

* * *

A CHANGE in the ownership of the Hanna farm, scene of the first two series, precipitated a change in the location of the 1936 Festival. Mr. Edman contacted Mrs. Margaret Emerson, the former Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, with the hope that the Church for individual practice sessions.

The parking areas at Holmwood were a great improvement over the facilities at the Hanna farm. Sheriff J. Bruce McIntyre succeeded Captain Fred Todd in handling the heavy traffic and policing of the grounds. He was assisted by members of the American Legion posts in the area.

A record-breaking crowd of 4,500 music lovers gave a thunderous welcome to Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra that first weekend. It began to look as though the Festival would soon get out of the red and into the black.

RUTH POSSELT, celebrated Boston violinist, who will play in the Khachaturian Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed in Tanglewood, Lenox, on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 1.

Berkshire Festival:

Haydn Music Special Treat

By MILES KASTENDIECK.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24.—Rediscovering Haydn turned out to be the special treat of the opening concert of the third weekend of the Berkshire festival in the theatre-concert hall last night.

Hearing his "military" symphony (No. 1000) and his "Nelson" Mass on this occasion was nothing short of a revelation, especially since neither is too well known.

The symphony is a gay, almost exotic work. The music suggests that war could hardly be taken seriously when cheerfulness is always breaking in.

Since Charles Munch conducted the score with a lustiness equaled only by the music, the effect on the audience was electrifying. Trumpets and drums may have contributed, to say nothing of cymbals and the triangle, but the vitality lay within the score itself.

Spirited Living

The Mass gave the impression of burning faith last night. Part of this arose from the crisp performance it received under the direction of Hugh Ross. Part came from the spirited singing of the soloists and chorus.

The festival chorus thoroughly distinguished itself in point of attack and freshness of voice.

As the chief soloist the soprano Naomi Farr caught attention for agility of voice in negotiating difficult passages and for attention to style.

She was most ably supported by Beatrice Krebs, contralto, Marvin Worden, tenor and Thomas Stewart, bass. All concerned had been admirably prepared.

The concert began with Handel's Concerto Grosso for strings, opus 6, No. 4, conducted by Munch. The performance could have had less virtuosity and more precision. If the full sweep of the music did not come through, its solid grandeur did.

'Nelson' Mass of Haydn Is Featured at Tanglewood

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 24.—The mutual fervor that washes over the emcies and Agnus Dei, the first concert of the Berkshire mass as a whole tends to labor Music Festival's third week end the more aggressive elements of of music-making activities, held expressivity to the point where last night in Tanglewood's the law of diminishing returns theater-concert hall, emerged as begins to take its toll.

something of a salute to Franz For the occasion, Mr. Ross Josef Haydn. Featured were the had selected from the student Austrian composer's "Nelson" ranks of Tanglewood the solo-mass in D Minor and his ists, Naomi Farr, soprano; "military" symphony, No. 100, Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marin G Major, the former con- vin Worden, tenor, and Thomas ducted by Hugh Ross, the latter Stewart, bass. He had also with Charles Munch in charge brought together his Festival of the Boston Symphony forces. Chorus, which in common with Georg Frideric Handel's Con- most student units, worked with certo Grosso Op. 6, No. 4, in A out the ultimate in refinement Minor, played before an audi- or sophistication. Indeed, the ence of some 2,250, was the entire performance was no program's opening number. model of perfection, though it Haydn's "Nelson" mass, partly did provide some ringing and inspired by the English sea- lustrous choral singing, and hero's victory at the Nile, is a the featured male solo- stirring, broad-scaled and prob- ists, at least, a host of lovely lematic work. Its canvas is a and colored phrases.

large one, its sentiments grand Boston Symphony and sweeping. Nowhere is it Previously, Mr. Munch and the petty or coyly religious; nowhere orchestra had offered a snappy does it bleat or make weak reading of the "Military" sym- sounds. Not a note of it, in fact, phony and a rather sodden one is less than vital. And not a mo- of the Handel Concerto Grosso. ment of its score could have been The conductor has obviously set down by a citizen less rugged come to the realization that the than Haydn himself. former work's so-called Turkish

Too Supercharged effects—consisting of thumped

Despite these several and sig- bass drum, cymbals and triangle nificant virtues, however, I found —are pleasantly hilarious to the piece (and its performance) modern ears, and he is thus somewhat short of engrossing. lavish in their proclamation. Ad- In all, the "Nelson" mass is too ditionally, he hears the sym- consistently supercharged, too phony as a bouncy one, as a re- blatantly militant to effect a sult of which some of the work's really touching rendering of the themes fairly jiggle off the Latin text. It is undone by its own stage. It was, in sum, a brand unyielding power, which makes of hearty fun and a contrast each new episode distressingly ideal to the calm and balmy similar to its preceding com- concerto.

panion. And while there is no denying the poignancy and

N.Y. Herald-Tribune

[27]

The Eagle Saturday Features

SUNDAY MORNING spectators at the chamber-music concerts given by Berkshire Music Center students are just as informal as other Tanglewood audiences. Here photographer Clemens Kalischer shows intent pair.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON chamber music concerts long have been a [illegible]

PITTSFIELD STUDENTS at the Community Music School played for Kalischer the shepherd's pipes they made under the direction of their teacher, Miss Martha Poncy of Lenox. At left is Kay Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Smith, 90 Westchester Ave., Pontoosuc Lake. Her fellow piper is Priscilla Fleeman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Fleeman of 64 Commonwealth Ave.

Kalischer by Tanna

SUNDAY AFTERNOON chamber music concerts long have been a Pittsfield feature at South Mountain. Part of a typical audience is framed here in arches of Music Temple. At left, Mrs. William Willeke, director.

MUSICAL VIGOR is shown by Emanuel Balaban, head of coaching and repertoire in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, as he reads a score written by Julia Perry. Miss Perry, at the piano, studied composing three consecutive years at Tanglewood.

Photos by Kalischer

SEVEN YEARS ago a young Bavarian who had fled Hitler got a job in the New York City offices of the French Press Agency. He was an all-round helper, reporter and translator of French into export cablese.

Clemens Kalischer, then in his mid-twenties, had learned English and gone to night school after arriving in the United States at the end of 1942 with his parents. He also studied art at Cooper Union.

* * *

ONE DAY, the news agency needed a newsman to do a full-fledged photo report. In the emergency, the boss remembered hearing that Kalischer had been fiddling with a box camera and had shown a few samples of photos to co-workers. He got the rush assignment, did it well and was so excited he quit his job and on the spot became a free-lance photographer.

* * *

LIVING IN Stockbridge the past three years, fulfilling a long desire to leave cities behind, Kalischer has snapped out a national reputation. Newspapers and magazines print his photographs from coast to coast. He maintains studio and darkroom space in New York, but shuns it in the summer.

The four large photographs here are part of Kalischer's July-August exhibition at the Berkshire Museum on the theme "Music in the Berkshires." There are 70 prints in all. No fussy technician or gadgeteer, Kalischer uses a Rolleiflex, keeps his only other camera (a Leica) on the shelf most of the time.—R.B.K.

PITTSFIELD STUDENTS at the Community Music School played for Kalischer the shepherd's pipes they made under the direction of their teacher, Miss Martha Poney of Lenox. At left is Kay Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Smith, 90 Westchester Ave., Pontoosuc Lake. Her fellow piper is Priscilla Fiorman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. L. H. Fiorman of 64 Commonwealth Ave.

Kalischer by Tanai

SUNDAY AFTERNOON chamber music concerts long have been a Pittsfield feature at South Mountain. Part of a typical audience is framed here in arches of Music Temple. At left, Mrs. William Willeke, director.

MUSICAL VIGOR is shown by Emanuel Balaban, head of coaching and repertoire in the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, as he reads a score written by Julia Perry. Miss Perry, at the piano, studied composing three consecutive years at Tanglewood.

Photos by Kalischer

SEVEN YEARS ago a young Bavarian who had fled Hitler got a job in the New York City offices of the French Press Agency. He was an all-round helper, reporter and translator of French into export cablese.

Clemens Kalischer, then in his mid-twenties, had learned English and gone to night school after arriving in the United States at the end of 1942 with his parents. He also studied art at Cooper Union.

* * *

ONE DAY, the news agency needed a newsman to do a full-fledged photo report. In the emergency, the boss remembered hearing that Kalischer had been fiddling with a box camera and had shown a few samples of photos to co-workers. He got the rush assignment, did it well and was so excited he quit his job and on the spot became a free-lance photographer.

* * *

LIVING IN Stockbridge the past three years, fulfilling a long desire to leave cities behind, Kalischer has snapped out a national reputation. Newspapers and magazines print his photographs from coast to coast. He maintains studio and darkroom space in New York, but shuns it in the summer.

The four large photographs here are part of Kalischer's July-August exhibition at the Berkshire Museum on the theme "Music in the Berkshires." There are 70 prints in all. No fussy technician or gadgeteer, Kalischer uses a Rolleiflex, keeps his only other camera (a Leica) on the shelf most of the time.—R.B.K.

TIGHT BINDING

HOW TO GET THERE: Tanglewood, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 7) and Lenox (via Routes 7 and 20 center of town); South Mountain, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; Music Mountain, off Route 7 in Falls village; Berkshire Playhouse, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; Malden Bridge Playhouse, on Route 43 between Hudson and Pittsfield-Albany road (Route 20); Jacob's Pillow, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20, the village of Lee

Berkshire Music Calendar

Summer Theaters and the Dance

Plus Festival of Contemporary Arts

—The Berkshire Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass., July 24, 1954

Tomorrow	Sunday, August 1	Sunday, August 8
Tanglewood Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, William Primrose. Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" Berlioz "Harold in Italy", Symphony (with Viola Solo) Berlioz Symphony No. 2 Toch Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.	Tanglewood Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Richard Burgin; soloist, Ruth Posselt. American Festival Overture William Schuman Fantasia on a theme by Tallis Vaughan Williams Concerto for Violin Khachaturian Symphony No. 2 Sibelius Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.	Tanglewood Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Zino Francescatti. Overture to "Alceste" Gluck Violin Concerto Beethoven Symphony No. 4 Brahms Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.
Music Mountain Berkshire Quartet, 4 p.m. Guest artist, Ward Davenny. Quartet in C Minor, Opus 51 Brahms No. 1 Piano Quartet in E Flat Mozart Quartet in F Major, Opus 135 Beethoven	Music Mountain Berkshire Quartet 4:00 p.m. (Program to be announced)	Music Mountain Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m. (Program to be announced)
Monday, July 26 Berkshire Playhouse Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Gaye Jordan and William Roerick in "Madam, Will You Walk"	Monday, August 2 Berkshire Playhouse "Traveler's Joy" Tanglewood Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program; special ticket required. "The Tender Land" Copland	Monday, August 9 Berkshire Playhouse Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Carol Stone in "The Iron Gate"
Tuesday, July 27 Malden Bridge Playhouse Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m. "The Country Girl" Tanglewood Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program. There and Back Hindemith "L'Amfiparnasso" Vecchi "The Princess and the Pea" Toch Folk-Music Workshop Festival concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Suzy Mann, continental singer, and Irmgard Carle, guitar-recorder. "From the Plains of the Pusta to the Highlands of the Seine"	Tuesday, August 3 Malden Bridge Playhouse Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 except Sunday at 7 p.m. "The Silver Whistle" Tanglewood Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program with special ticket required. "The Tender Land" Copland Folk-Music Workshop Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Richard Dyer-Bennet, tenor-guitarist. "20th Century Troubadour"	Tuesday, August 10 Malden Bridge Playhouse Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m. "The Love of Four Colonels" Tanglewood Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program. Folk-Music Workshop Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Betty MacDonald, soprano; Jerry Silverman, singer-guitarist. "From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."
		Tuesday, August 31 Malden Bridge Playhouse "Ladies in Retirement"

Pleasant Valley Sanctuary
Off Route 7 between Lenox and Pittsfield. Watch for signs. Trailside Museum open 1-5 p.m. every day; Red Barn Tea Room, noon to 7 p.m. every day; grounds open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day.

Berkshire Garden Center
At junction of Routes 183 and 102, west of Stockbridge. Open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2-6 p.m. Horticulturist in attendance.

Bartholomew's Cobble
Sanctuary featuring native ferns and flowers, unusual limestone outcropping along Housatonic River. Off Route 7 at Ashley Falls. Watch for signs. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. picnic facilities.

NORWALK, CONN.
HOUR
JUL 10 1954

Violist Primrose Thrills 7200 at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 25 — Outside this press room I can hear the applause of a great ovation from an audience estimated at 7200 people. It is a sincere gesture of appreciation for the magnificent playing of violist William Primrose and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but primarily we think it is a tribute to the remarkable symphony with viola solo which Hector Berlioz wrote and entitled "Harold in Italy."

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, continued the cycle of Berlioz performances, commemorating the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth, with two works, the overture to "Beatrice Et Benedict" and "Harold in Italy." Attracting almost as much attention as the music was Fritz Kreisler, the eminent violinist who was seated in a box. His hearty applause revealed how much he had enjoyed the symphony.

"Harold in Italy," a symphony in four movements with viola solo, is an intensely dramatic and lyric work. In Berlioz' own words his purpose was to write, "for the orchestra a series of scenes in which the solo viola should fit as a more or less active personage of constantly preserved individuality." Each movement bears a descriptive title as follows: "Harold In the Mountains," "March Of the Pilgrims Singing their Evening Hymn," "Serenade of a Mountainer of the Abruzzi to his Mistress" and "Orgy of the Brigands."

Rich In Contrasts

Today Mr. Munch was conducting performances of music for which he has a real affection. "Harold in Italy" was given a spacious reading, rich in contrasts and poetry. Mr. Primrose's viola sang soulfully, passionately, its voice many-faced. Rapport between soloist and conductor was complete. It was a memorable listening experience.

The overture to "Beatrice Et Benedict" gives as much of the charming score with which Berlioz invested his idea of a comedy based on Shakespeare's comedy "Much Ado About Nothing." It is music of interesting melodic content, sprightly, yet solid.

The concluding work on the program was Ernst Toch's "Symphony No. 2, OP. 73." Written in 1951, the composer tells us that it had a two-fold inspiration for its writing. The first was the eminent Bach authority, organist and missionary, Albert Schweitzer; the second a biblical text, "I Will Not Let Thee Go Except Thou Bless Me."

Ernst Toch was born in Vienna in 1885. He came to this country to teach composition in 1935. He is currently professor of composition at the University of California and has become an American citizen.

Work of Solid Worth

Whatever motivated the composer to write this symphony, whatever its inspiration, the fact remains that it is a work of solid worth; a deeply felt, skilfully wrought piece of music. The opening movement, titled "Like An Oath," opens with a brilliant fanfare and contains strong climaxes. There is considerable lyrical melody in the second movement, more so than in the surrounding movements. The adagio is relatively brief, working up to a tense climax and then subduing and closing with the voice of the solo violin. The final is strong, solid and the full orchestra and organ join in a mighty pean.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided a brilliant performance meaningful and quite revelatory. Mr. Toch, who is on the faculty of the Berkshire Music School this summer, was on hand to hear the performance and to acknowledge the applause. It does not seem that this is a symphony of wide appeal, but it is a solid contribution to the orchestral repertory.

Soloist

Eleanor Steber is soprano soloist in Saturday's performance of Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting, will perform at 8:30 P. M. with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society; Martial Singher, baritone; David Poleri, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This is the first shed concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival.

[219]

Festival concert. ... Library, 8:30 p.m. Sup... ann, continental singer, ... Irmgard Carle, guitar-recorder.

"From the Plains of the Pusta to the Meadows of the Seine"

"From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."

Sanctuary featuring native ferns and flowers, unusual limestone outcropping along Housatonic River. Off Route 7 at Ashley Falls. Watch for signs. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. Warden in attendance. Guided tours and picnic facilities.

Quartet in E flat, K. 428 Mozart
Quartet No. 4 (first performance) Bloch
Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 Beethoven

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

"The Lark" Haydn
Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 Hindemith
Quartet in F Ravel

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

pianist.
Sonata in A major Brahms
Suite in C (Violin unaccompanied) Bach
Violin Sonata in D Minor Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

dance and Baroque.

History, Art and Movies

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours, Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.; closed Mondays. Exhibitions, through July, paintings by Lawrence R. McCoy; through August, paintings by Ellen Emmet Rand; through both months, photographs by Clemens Kalischer, miniature rooms by Andrew Zenzirini, sculpture by Franc Epping, Wilsson collection of etchings, engravings and lithographs of famous composers (in cooperation with the Boston Symphony Orchestra); Aug. 3-31, Civil War photographs by Mathew Brady.

Little Cinema (Evenings at 8:15; Saturdays, continuous from 7): Through July 27, "Genevieve," with Dinah Sheridan, John Gregson; July 28-31, Jack Hawkins in "Crash of Silence"; Aug. 4-10, Ann Magnani in "The Golden Coach" (in English); Aug. 11-14, "Spice of Life" and "The White Tower"; Aug. 18-24, "Fan Fan the Tulip," with Gina Lollobrigida; Aug. 25-28, to be announced.

Mission House

On Route 7 in the center of Stockbridge. Built in 1739 for John Sergeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Moved and restored by Miss Mabel Choate as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate. Open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12:30, 2-6; Sunday, 2-6.

Thursday, July 29

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3:30 p.m. Friends program.
Adagio for Strings (conducted by Henry Janiec) Barber
Excerpts from Act 3 of "Die Meistersinger" (conducted by Samuel Krachmalnick) Wagner
Suite from "Pelleas and Melisande" (conducted by Charles Munch) Faure
Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" (conducted by Paul Vermel) Beethoven

Thursday, August 5

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3:30 p.m. Friends program.

Thursday, August 12

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Jean Morel.
Overture to "Scala di Seta" Rossini
Symphony in B flat K.319 Mozart
"Mother Goose" Suite Ravel
"Der Burger als Edelmann" Strauss

Thursday, September 3

Friday, July 30

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Doriot Anthony.
"The Spider's Feast" Roussel
Flute Concerto Ibert
Serenades for Eight Winds K.388 Mozart
"Paris" Symphony K.297 Mozart

Friday, August 6

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Lukas Foss; soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
"Pulcinella" (complete) Stravinsky
Piano Concerto in B flat, K.450 Mozart
"Idomeneo" (excerpts) with chorus and soloists Mozart

Friday, August 13

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.

(Program to be announced)

Friday, August 20

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m., Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Negro Dance Theater.
Grace and Kurt Graff.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

Friday, August 27

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Yurek Lazowski, character ballet.
Pearl Lang and Co.
Lotte Goslar.

Friday, September 3

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evening at 9 p.m.
Andre Eglovsky and partner, ballet.
Harriet Ann Gray and company.
The American Mime Theater.

Saturday, July 31

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony with Festival Chorus and soloists Berlioz

South Mountain

Trio—horn, violin, piano. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam, John Barrows.
Trio for Horn, Violin and Piano Hugo Kauder
Sonata di Camera Ben Weber
(Commissioned by Fromm Music Foundation)

Saturday, August 7

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Organ recital, Shed, 3 p.m. E. Power Biggs, organist. Friends
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Eleanor Steber. Berlioz program:
Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"
"Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"
"Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra
"Te Deum" with Festival Chorus and soloist

South Mountain

Chamber Music. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam.
Beethoven. Sonatas for violin and piano Nos. 5, 2, 9

Saturday, August 14

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3 p.m. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Tragic Overture" Brahms
Symphony No. 4 Piston
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" Ravel
Symphony No. 3 (with organ) Saint-Saens

South Mountain

Juilliard Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
String Quartet No. 2 William Denny
Quartet in G, Op. 54, No. 2 Haydn
String Quartet No. 1 Benjamin Lees
Quartet in F major Ravel

Saturday, August 21

South Mountain

Chamber Music Festival, Coolidge Series, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Kroll Quartet, Chamber Orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Court and chapel music of Henry V-Henry VIII.

Saturday, August 28

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Music of the German Renaissance and Baroque.

Saturday, September 4

MUNCH CONDUCTS BERLIOZ PROGRAM

Gives Masterly Readings at Berkshire Festival—Morel Leads Prokofieff Opus

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 25—Two years, again of exceptional ... ended the third week ... the six-week Berkshire Festival this afternoon and last night in the Music Shed. Shall we be guilty of the majesté when we say that even in a program mainly devoted to Berlioz, the great distinction of this Sunday afternoon was not so much the mastery of Charles Munch? these places as they stand. They become, under his baton, so integral a part of the whole that they are inseparable from it. The architecture is perfect.

The overture has the comedy spirit and at least two fine themes derived from the opera it introduced, the subject of which is lightfully, with the warmest color, vibrant tone and handsome sentiment; that Berlioz orchestrates most ingeniously and considerately for the solo viola. Primrose played this melody delightfully, with the warmest tone, and what Mr. Munch realized from this romantic overture-fantasy and spirited, and does not squ... pose or attempt the portentous.

On the other hand, there is ... better Shakespeare music and ... there are better Shakespeare ... overtures than this, and ... becomes repetitious for lack of ... resourceful development.

Munch's Intent Communicated

The "Harold" symphony is of course far more important. It is ... autobiographical in essence and ... it is highly imaginative tone-painting. In fact, there are elements of the commonplace, if certain measures are taken at face value. But Mr. Munch knows better than merely to sound these places as they stand. They become, under his baton, so integral a part of the whole that they are inseparable from it. The architecture is perfect.

There is a fat part for solo viola. Need it be said that Mr. Primrose played this melody delightfully, with the warmest tone and handsome sentiment; that Berlioz orchestrates most ingeniously and considerately for the solo viola, and that Mr. Munch realized to the full all that is romantic and spirited in the overture-fantasy and does not squ... the portentous.

Symphony, which ... later half of the program, could hardly have been more eloquently presented. It is no trifling symphony. The composer's ideality of purpose are on a ... The architecture is perfect. The music and the relations ... movements also are impressive. There is drama ... which prowess, ... abundantly evident. ... It is to be ... fleffs that we know. ... The conductor caught ... nuance, every accent, every mood of the work, and coordinated its ... every element. The clarity of ... was in itself an ... This was crowned by the eloquent communication of the symphony's spirit.

Prokofieff Work Played

Morel conducted the ... cert of Saturday evening, ... proved to be one of the outsta... ing events thus far of the ... tival. ... program comprised ... the Sixth ... Symphony of Prokofieff, ... little-known ... heretofore ... understood ... Concerto ... Piano Concerto ... Juan" ... Liszt's concerto was not as successfully delivered, either by such as those of the second love episode, and the fine "comma" for the harmonic suspension that immediately follows, the declamation of the mighty theme for the unison horns and the subtlety of understatement in the final measures — ... blazing climax, the grey aftermath, the lacrimae ... Strauss echoes the Swinburnian refrain, "this ... man's desire." ... The ... Variations were given the ... and orchestral effects and, what is even more important and exceptional ... poetry and romanticism ... are there for him who has ... perception to find them.

Mr. Morel had conducted a program that demanded exceptional versatility of style, delivery and comprehension, with qualities of musicianship, kindling temperament and artistic integrity that won the allegiance of orchestra and audience alike.

The performance of "Don Juan" brought back gloriously the pristine color and flame of the thrice familiar score. And Mr. Morel did more than ride triumphantly the storm and stress of the Don's ... music. His profound sense ... ful nuances and accentuations,

Where Culture Is Cooler

It is the time of the festival, and across the United States and Canada music, the drama and the dance are on show in places where the scenery complements and competes with art. A good many of these festivals are distinguished by the highest standards. They venture into exciting new [illegible] forms of entertainment. And they play to an audience drawn not only from the large cities but also from the small communities where living performances are not always available. On these pages are pictures of some of the summer's major festivals. —HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD—The Boston Symphony Orchestra draws thousands to the graceful curve of the Music Shed in the Berkshires for weekends of orchestral music from July 9 to Aug. 15. Tanglewood also has chamber ensemble concerts, operatic performances and the Berkshire Music Center, where a post-graduate course in practical music-making is concentrated into six arduous weeks for about 400 young men and women from all over the United States and abroad. The center was started in 1940 by Sergei Koussevitsky, late conductor of the Boston Symphony, as part of his efforts to encourage young musicians.

DANCE IN CONNECTICUT—At New London's Connecticut College for Women, an annual summer dance school features outstanding figures in the modern dance. José Limon (above with Pauline Koner) will create a new work for this year's festival—the seventh—which will run from Aug. 19 to 22.

DANCE IN MASSACHUSETTS—At the Ted Shawn Theatre at Jacob's Pillow near Lee, Mass., nearly every aspect of the dance is represented. Above is an exponent of the modern style. This year the season runs from July 2 to Sept. 4 with performances on Fridays and Saturdays, matinees and evenings

CHARLOTTE, N. C.
OBSERVER
JUL 11 1954

BETTY ALLEN

Betty Allen Is To Sing On Wednesday

Betty Allen, mezzo-soprano, will be heard in a recital Wednesday at noon in Johnson C. Smith University. The public is invited.

In only two years, Miss Allen has appeared in Europe and has sung on several occasions with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch's direction. At New York's Lewisohn Stadium she will sing this summer in Virgil Thomson's "Four Saints in Three Acts." She will do the role of St. Teresa II. Mr. Thomson selected Miss Allen from 200 competitors for the production which originally ran both in New York and at the Theatre des Champs Elysees in Paris. Her repertory includes such divergent works as Honegger's "King David" and "La Danse des Morts" which she performed in Carnegie Hall with the Boston Symphony.

During the 1951 and 1952 seasons at Tanglewood, Miss Allen was soloist in Leonard Bernstein's "Jeremiah Symphony" and in the two Honegger choral works, with the Yale Glee Club. In 1952, she won the Marian Anderson Scholarship Fund award and in April 1953, she was soloist in Monteverdi's "Vespers" and "Magnificat" with the famed Dessoff Choirs in Carnegie Hall.

Next year, Miss Allen is scheduled to tour France and North Africa.

THE NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE

ONE-ACT OPERAS ARE PRESENTED AT TANGLEWOOD

Provide Much Humor for Audience That Fills Theater Shed

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 27 — Three rarely heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Tock were performed by the opera department tonight and provided high humor for the audience which filled the theater-shed. This performance was open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

First in U. S.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso" is a Madrigal opera written in 1549. As a five-part unaccompanied choral setting it was performed in concert form by the Dessoff Choir in New York in 1933. The performance tonight was the first stage performance in the United States.

The setting of the Cecchio work is the lower slopes of Parnassus, the mountain of the immortal poets. This area is inhabited by figures of the Comedia Dell'Arte, the ephemeral art of theatrical improvisation. The chorus, embracing all members of the opera department was conducted by Hugh Ross, suitably costumed. The players mimed the stories sung by the chorus. So broad and contagious was the humor of the miming that much of the truly fine singing of beautiful music was completely lost. Costuming and staging was colorful, imaginative and functional.

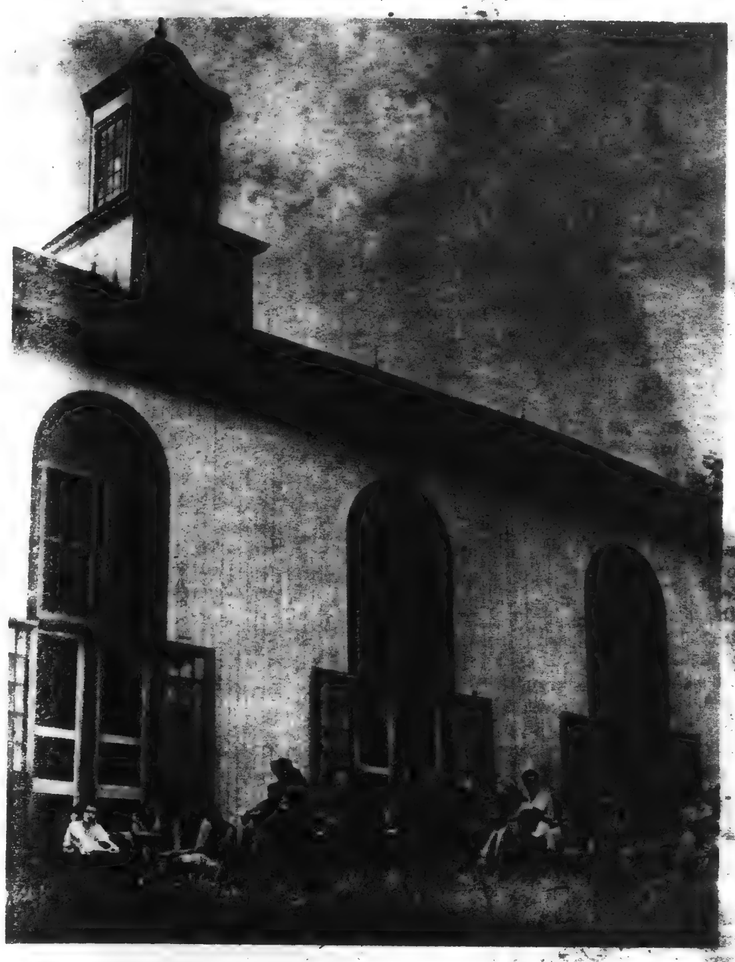
Hindemith's "There and Back" was sung here while Hindemith was composer in residence. That was in 1940. This is a humorous sketch to music. It is first given in straightforward manner and then completely reversed. The time is 1927 and the costumes are of that period. The music is brittle, rhythmic and most of the time so loud the English translation couldn't be heard. The singers were: Bernard Barr, Ann Tierney, Helen Zimbler, Antonion Giardino, Thomas Stewart, Emelina Devita and Marvin Worden. Samuel Krachmalnick conducted and Lowell Farr, Eve Queler and Leonard Sarason were at the pianos.

Final Presentation

The final work was "The Princess and the Pea" by Ernest Toch, now on the music school faculty. His symphony was played last Sunday. This work has to do with the old tale of the princess who could feel the pea placed under five mattresses on which she was lying.

Mr. Toch's music had the virtue of permitting the singers to be heard. It was music buoyant in spirit and tantalizing in its complexities. There were some good stalwart voices. Members of the cast were John Horner, Emelina Devita, Robert Simpson, Nicholas Maxymuk and Regina Sarfaty. Evelyn Lear was the lovely princess, both visually and vocally. Paul Vermel conducted.

It is probable that the members of the opera department get a deal of experience learning such operas as were sung tonight. It also provides opportunity for those interested in contemporary music, if 1927 can still be called contemporary, to learn what has been and is being done by present-day composers. There were those tonight who did not remain through the three operas.



MUSIC IN THE EAST—On South Mountain near Pittsfield, Mass., the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, a devotee of chamber music, built this modest temple to the art. In it every Saturday afternoon through July and August the classics and moderns are played to audiences which overflow the building.

MUSIC IN THE WEST—In the old mining town of Aspen, Col., revived by the music festival, there are symphonic, chamber music and operatic performances from June 30 to Sept. 5. This is Aspen's sixth year, and, as in the past, concerts take place under an open tent. In the photo above, an orchestra and chorus combine to perform a major work.

SHAKESPEARE IN CANADA—Stratford, Ontario, holds its second theatre festival from June 28 to Aug. 21. Shakespearean comedy is alternating with Greek tragedy this year: "Measure for Measure" (seen above with James Mason), "The Taming of the Shrew" and Sophocles' classic "Oedipus Rex."

SHAKESPEARE IN OHIO—Antioch College, Yellow Springs, sponsors a festival of plays from June 30 to Sept. 12. Nancy Marchand is seen as Kate in "The Taming of the Shrew." Other plays include "Romeo and Juliet," "Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "The Tempest," "Two Gentlemen of Verona" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

BLOCH'S WORK GIVEN FIRST U. S. PERFORMANCE

'Quartet No. 4' Featured in Concert by Griller Group At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 28—The first American performance of Ernest Bloch's "Quartet No. 4" featured the concert by the Griller String Quartet in the theater-shed tonight. There were 1300 people on hand to hear it. Bloch wrote this quartet in 1953 and 10 days ago in London, the Griller Quartet gave it its first public performance.

Opens With Mozart

The program opened with Mozart's delectable "Quartet in B Flat Major" familiarly known as the "Hunt." The opening movement did not go too well. There were rhythmic uncertainties and some trouble with intonation, the latter due no doubt to the distressing atmospheric conditions. Once warmed up, the quartet played brilliantly and if the ensemble tone was a bit rough in texture it was more than made up for by the beatuy of the lyrical passages.

It is manifestly both impertinent and unfair to appraise such a work as this quartet by Bloch on first hearing. This eminent composer has given the world some truly great music even though it has taken a deal of time for general understanding. We believe the same amount of time must be taken for full understanding of the fourth quartet.

There are moments, fragments of charming melody, particularly for the darker strings; there are other vehement moments which are argumentative and shrilly unpleasant to the ear. With the exception of the andante, each movement is divided into three phases of tempi and mood. The Grillers are most rewarding to the ear when they play lyrically. In moments demanding intensity there is apt to be a roughness discernible in the ensemble.

Friday Soloist

The program concluded with a charming performance of Beethoven's "Quartet in G Major, Op. 19, No. 2." In these early quartets the composer revelled in melody and there is a freshness and beauty in each which always delights the ear.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be the soloist Friday night when the Chamber-Orchestra concert is given. She will be heard in a "concerto for flute and orchestra" by Ibert. Other works to be played will be Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Mozart's "Serenade in C Major" and his "Symphony in D Major," "Aris." Charles Munch will conduct.

[221]

[222]

Philadelphia Tribune
July 23

...ion.

Eva Jessye, conductor, and her husband, mortician Alexander Sheperd and baritone Fred Thomas were Tangelwood visitors over the weekend. Some 400 enrolled in the Center.

Wednesday evening, the opening of Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which will continue through Aug. 15, drew thousands of music lovers to this picturesque spot in the Berkshire Mountains. This 20th festival will include six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings, six chamber orchestra concerts by the Boston Symphony musicians on Friday nights (except for the last on Thursday, Aug. 12) and 12 concerts by the complete Boston Symphony under Charles Munch, Pierre Monteaux, Jean Morrel and Richard Burgin on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. The symphony concerts will take place in the Shed. The first of these will be this coming Sunday with Charles Munch conducting.

Rensselaer County Review
(Rensselaer, N.Y.)
Friday, July 9, 1954

MUSIC IN THE EAST—On South Mountain near Pittsfield, Mass., the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, a devotee of chamber music, built this modest temple to the art. In it every Saturday afternoon through July and August the classics and moderns are played to audiences which overflow the building.

MUSIC IN THE WEST—In the old mining town of Aspen, Col., revived by the music festival there are symphonic, chamber music and operatic performances from June 30 to Sept. 5. This is Aspen's sixth year, and, as in the past, concerts take place under an open tent. In the photo above, an orchestra and chorus combine to perform a major work.

SHAKESPEARE IN CANADA—Stratford, Ontario, holds its second theatre festival from June 28 to Aug. 21. Shakespearean comedy is alternating with Greek tragedy this year: "Measure for Measure" (seen above with James Mason), "The Taming of the Shrew" and Sophocles' classic "Oedipus Rex."

SHAKESPEARE IN OHIO—Antioch College, Yellow Springs, sponsors a festival of plays from June 30 to Sept. 12. Nancy Marchand is seen as Kate in "The Taming of the Shrew." Other plays include "Romeo and Juliet," "Merchant of Venice," "Othello," "The Tempest," "Two Gentlemen of Verona" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Philadelphia Tribune
July 23

Mrs. Noel Gosselin

Mrs. Lisa (Ostiguy) Gosselin of 110 Hood St. died Wednesday at Mercy Hospital. Born in Canada, she had lived in Salem, Mass., before coming to Pittsfield 40 years ago. She was a member of the Ladies of St. Anne's Society and the Ladies of St. Joseph's Society. Survivors include her husband, Noel Gosselin; a daughter, Mrs. Jeanne Wakefield; a son, Joseph Gosselin, and a brother, Joseph Ostiguy, both of Pittsfield. Funeral family [illegible]

Concert by Griller Quartet At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 28—The first American performance of Ernest Bloch's "Quartet No. 4" featured the concert by the Griller String Quartet in the theater-shed tonight. There were 1300 people on hand to hear it. Bloch wrote this quartet in 1953, and 10 days ago in London, the Griller Quartet gave it its first public performance.

Opens With Mozart

The program opened with Mozart's delectable "Quartet in B Flat Major" familiarly known as the "Hunt." The opening movement did not go too well. There were rhythmic uncertainties and some trouble with intonation, the latter due no doubt to the distressing atmospheric conditions. Once warmed up, the quartet played brilliantly and if the ensemble tone was a bit rough in texture it was more than made up for by the beatuy of the lyrical passages.

It is manifestly both impertinent and unfair to appraise such a work as this quartet by Bloch on first hearing. This eminent composer has given the world some truly great music even though it has taken a deal of time for general understanding. We believe the same amount of time must be taken for full understanding of the fourth quartet.

There are moments, fragments of charming melody, particularly for the darker strings; there are other vehement moments which are argumentative and shrilly unpleasant to the ear. With the exception of the andante, each movement is divided into three phases of tempi and mood. The Grillers are most rewarding to the ear when they play lyrically. In moments demanding intensity there is apt to be a roughness discernible in the ensemble.

Friday Soloist

The program concluded with a charming performance of Beethoven's "Quartet in G Major, Op. 19, No. 2." In these early quartets the composer revelled in melody and there is a freshness and beauty in each which always delights the ear.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be the soloist Friday night when the Chamber-Orchestra concert is given. She will be heard in a "concerto for flute and orchestra" by Ibert. Other works to be played will be Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," Mozart's "Serenade in C Major" and his "Symphony in D Major," "Aria." Charles Munch will conduct.

[222]

tion.

Eva Jessye, conductor, and her husband, mortician Alexander Sheperd and baritone Fred Thomas were Tangelwood visitors over the weekend. Some 400 enrolled in the Center.

Wednesday evening, the opening of Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which will continue through Aug. 15, drew thousands of music lovers to this picturesque spot in the Berkshire Mountains. This 20th festival will include six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings, six chamber orchestra concerts by the Boston Symphony musicians on Friday nights (except for the last on Thursday, Aug. 12) and 12 concerts by the complete Boston Symphony under Charles Munch, Pierre Monteaux, Jean Morrel and Richard Burgin on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. The symphony concerts will take place in the Shed. The first of these will be this coming Sunday with Charles Munch conducting.

Rensslaer County Review
Rensslaer, N.Y.
Friday, July 9, 1954

N.Y. Herald Tribune - July 26

Munch, Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Music Shed

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 25.—Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Berlioz and Ernst Toch brought to an end the third week end of musical festivities in the Berkshires this afternoon in Tanglewood's vast Music Shed. Berlioz' "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist, and Ernst Toch's second symphony were the plums of the occasion, and for good measure, the conductor began his concert with the renowned Frenchman's overture to the opera "Beatrice and Benedict."

As is his way with Berlioz, Mr. Munch conducted like a demon. Sonorities raged, themes flew, the shed shook. It is Mr. Munch's contention—to judge by his performance of the day—that much of Berlioz is meant to rouse the listener from his seat, to lift him high with the full vigor of a composer who knew neither timidity nor fear. To accomplish this end, when the propitious moment hoves into hearing, Mr. Munch and his orchestra let loose with orchestral sounds and textures that are duplicated rarely, if ever.

Modern Harold

He is not, however, compulsive about storming the arena with tonal barrages, and neither, for that matter, is William Primrose. Indeed, a good part of their performance — notably "Harold's" second movement — would not have been inappropriate played in church. And that is as it should be. In its central sections, the work builds its sonorous steeples with a sustained calm that, in expressivity, is diametrically opposed to the more orgiastic Berlioz methods.

For his part, Mr. Primrose played the obbligato viola passages with overwhelming assurance and elan. His conception of the piece changes slightly with every performance, a feat which accounts for the vibrancy he instills in phrase after phrase. Because of it, he has become a kind of modern Harold telling his tale freshly to all with a desire to hear.

Toch's Second

Mr. Toch's second symphony, which was played last season in New York, is a brave and heroic number that fails to jell for any of several reasons. Its formal outlines are unclear, and its harmonies are unoriginal and not distinctive. These facts alone explain the symphony's tendency to wander, to lose its course and idle in filigree and figuration. In addition, despite the work's abundant craft and inventiveness, the symphony as a whole frequently compromises with the obvious and makes its points through orchestral devices that have by now given up their pungency.

Last night's concert, an event of major significance, was led by Jean Morel, director of the Juilliard School of Music's Orchestral Department, and present chief of Tanglewood's tribe of budding conductors. For his program, presented before an audience of 7,750, Mr. Morel had chosen Prokofiev's Symphony No. 6 in E flat minor, Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Nicole Henriot as soloist, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Morel Lauded

At the end of the performance there was no doubt, I imagine, that Mr. Morel's place as a conductor is firmly fixed. He is, his work of the evening trumpeted, both a masterful musician and a wielder of the baton to whom wizardry is second nature. Beginning with the Prokofiev symphony, the French-born maestro immediately proclaimed his high seriousness of purpose, his fidelity to a composer's stated intentions and his ability to draw from an orchestra not his own the very best it has to offer.

The symphony itself is a great one—a dark and massive panorama of despair. Save for its final movement, a stinging vivace, the work is slow, and feeds on veiled and tortured sentiments. It is ever brooding and somber and sardonic, with the lower strings and brasses hacking away violently while its main themes whistle chillingly through the air.

Boundless Power

All of these features Mr. Morel drew forth with boundless power. It is no light chore to keep constantly in motion two long movements which unfold leisurely without short cuts of any kind. But the conductor did just that, as did he also probe to the symphony's core, revealing its spirit, finally, for all to grasp and feel.

At last night's concert, an event no less dashing and inspired was his reading of the Elgar "Enigma" and Strauss' "Don Juan." The variations lean heavily on the element of contrast, thereby insuring that each new episode will do more than merely mirror and repeat what has gone before. In Mr. Morel's performance these contrasts were luminously sketched. Thematic contours were kept skin-tight, and inner details were throughout made to lock snugly into the work's over-all design.

"Don Juan" Soared

And "Don Juan" also soared. From first to last it was properly turbulent and amorous, though the usual procedure of allowing its wrenching love ties to linger endlessly was not followed. Clean-cut describes the score's rendition—clean-cut and surging. That, I take it, is what the work is meant to be.

Less satisfactory in every way was Miss Henriot's performance of the Liszt concerto. The young and delicate pianist was simply not able to swashbuckle as the work demands, and while she produced a ringing and resonant tone, she did not, in essence, bring to the piece the verve and virtuosity necessary to its success. It was, in fact, a lukewarm Liszt we heard. And, truly, a luke-warm Liszt is no Liszt at all.

Hartford Times - 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta Performs Chamber Music at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The third in a series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts at Tanglewood featured the Zimbler Sinfonietta, an ensemble of string players from the Boston Symphony, in a varied and unusual program at the Theater-Concert Hall.

Those who imagine that program music originated with Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony were probably taken aback by the explicit depiction of nature in Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," which was performed last night. For the four concerti grossi of the composer's Opus 8 which bear this subtitle contain literal representations of such things as the twitterings of birds, thunder and lightning storms, and even the chatter of teeth in the winter cold.

Quite aside from such effects, this music has an antique charm that continues to beguile the ear.

* * *

VIVALDI was a celebrated string virtuoso in his day and throughout the concerti grossi his practical mastery of this medium is always apparent. The Zimbler Sinfonietta and its soloists, George Zazofsky, violinist, and Fernando Valenti, harpsichordist, admirably preserved the spirit of this typically 18th century music.

As a modern counterpart to the Vivaldi, there was Stravinsky's ballet suite, "Apollon Musagete," which has been called "pallid" by at least one critic. Compared to the tonal flamboyance of Petrouchka or Le Sacre it may indeed be tame, but one must remember the intent of the composer, which was a neo-classical evocation of the style of Lully.

* * *

ALEXANDER TANSMAN has spoken of the "serene tenderness" of this work and it does have a lyric warmth unusual for Stravinsky. The emphasis, however, is on the linear and melodic content and not on tonal coloration or driving rhythms, which have become the musical signature of this composer.

The concluding work was the little known Sonata for Violins, Cellos, and Double Bass by Rossini, which afforded the Sinfonietta's first desk men an opportunity to display their dexterity in numerous solo passages, if nothing else.

[223]

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE

JUL 4 - 1954

All-Beethoven Program First

Special to The Blade

LENOX, Mass., July 3—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of western Massachusetts in 1934, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

On Friday, also at 8:30 p.m., in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

* * *

FOR THE FIRST time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given in the opening weekend, July 10 at 8:30 and July 11 at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra, then under Mr. Monteux.

* * *

SINCE 1938, when the 6,000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over the eastern United States and Canada. Last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

The 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its 6-week framework: 12 shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts, concentrated last summer in the festival's first three weekends, this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated, six Wednesday evening chamber-music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

On Saturday morning (July 10) at 10 a.m. the Boston Symphony will hold the first of six weekly open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, to which the public is invited for a nominal admission.

THE MUSIC SHED concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust," a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the symphony for viola, "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," in its complete form, with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscona as soloists (July 31); the overture to "Benvenuto Cellini;" "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans;" the song cycle, "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 15).

INTERMISSION SCENE AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Crowds from afar bring picnic blankets, even a wheel chair or two

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Changes Announced

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchesta, announces changes in the concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., to be played by the orchestra in the music shed at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, August 1.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture", to be followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis", then by the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replace the previously scheduled "Chout" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak Violin Concerto.

Changes in the Berkshire Festival programs previously announced involve the advancement to July 24 of Nicole Henriot, French pianist, as soloist, playing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto on that program, replacing Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz." On the concert of August 14, in place of Miss Henriot's piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin", and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" in place of the Prelude to "Lohengrin" by Wagner. Pierre Monteux's originally planned all-Franck concert of July 17 has had Debussy's Excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer" substituted for Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides."

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 6 - 1954

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Opens 12th Season

The Berkshire Festival opened its 12th season at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday with a special ceremony in the theater-concert hall, Dr. Lewis D. Perry, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra introduced many celebrities in the musical world and paid tribute to Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, famous patroness of music and especially of the Festival.

Dr. Perry announced gifts of $30,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., to be received over a Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with the Festival. The Center also opened Sunday, with more than 400 students registered They were gretted by Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Center and conductor of the Boston Symphony.

A chorus of students directed by Hugh Ross presented Randall Thompson's Allelujah, following which there was a reception and tea for everyone in the gardens of Tanglewood.

It has been announced that William J. Cox, secretary of the Phillips Academy at Exeter, is chairman of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, thru which funds are contributed for the support of the summer school. Last year membership in the organization rose to 5,472, with donations totalling $27,637. Membership entitles contributions to admittance to all students concerts at the Center.

The first concert of the season will be given in the theatre-concert hall Wednesday, July 7, at 8.30. Claudio Arrau, pianist, will appear with the Bel Arte Trio in a Beethoven program. The first student concert is Thursday evening, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students will play in the Music Shed. Sunday morning there will be a student chamber music concert, and that evening there will be a composer's forum.

Other Festival Concerts this week will be the chamber music concert conducted by Charles Munch in the Theatre-Concert Hall Friday night, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist in an all-Bach program, and the presentation of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in the Music Shed Saturday night under the baton of Dr. Munch with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society joining with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in a Beethoven program in the Music Shed with Claudio Arrau as soloist.

N.Y. Herald Tribune - July 3

Munch, Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Music Shed

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 25.—Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Berlioz and Ernst Toch brought to an end the third week end of musical festivities in the Berkshires this afternoon in Tanglewood's vast Music Shed. Berlioz' "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist, and Ernst Toch's second symphony were the plums of the occasion, and for good measure, the conductor began his concert with the renowned Frenchman's overture to the opera "Beatrice and Benedict."

As is his way with Berlioz, Mr. Munch conducted like a demon. Sonorities raged, themes flew, the shed shook. It is Mr. Munch's contention—to judge by his performance of the day—that much of Berlioz is meant to rouse the listener from his seat, to lift him high with the full vigor of a composer who knew neither timidity nor fear. To accomplish this end, when the propitious moment moves into hearing, Mr. Munch and his orchestra let loose with orchestral sounds and textures that are duplicated rarely, if ever.

Modern Harold

He is not, however, compulsive about storming the arena with tonal barrages, and neither, for that matter, is William Primrose. Indeed, a good part of their performance — notably "Harold's" second movement — would not have been inappropriate played in church. And that is as it should be. In its central sections, the work builds its sonorous steeples with a sustained calm that, in expressivity, is diametrically opposed to the more orgiastic Berlioz methods.

For his part, Mr. Primrose played the obbligato viola passages with overwhelming assurance and elan. His conception of the piece changes slightly with every performance, a feat which accounts for the vibrancy he instills in phrase after phrase. Because of it, he has become a kind of modern Harold telling his tale freshly to all with a desire to hear.

Toch's Second

Mr. Toch's second symphony, which was played last season in New York, is a brave and heroic number that fails to jell for any of several reasons. Its formal outlines are unclear, and its harmonies are unoriginal and not distinctive. These facts alone explain the symphony's tendency to wander, to lose its course and idle in filigree and figuration. In addition, despite the work's abundant craft and inventiveness, the symphony as a whole frequently compromises with the obvious and makes its points through orchestral devices that have by now given up their pungency.

Last night's concert, an event of major significance, was led by Jean Morel, director of the Juilliard School of Music's Orchestral Department, and present chief of Tanglewood's tribe of budding conductors. For his program, presented before an audience of 7,[illegible], Mr. Morel had chosen Prokofiev's Symphony No. 6 in E flat minor, Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Nicole Henriot as soloist, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Morel Lauded

At the end of the performance there was no doubt, I imagine, that Mr. Morel's place as a conductor is firmly fixed. He is, his work of the evening competed, both a masterful musician and a wielder of the baton to whom wizardry is second nature. Beginning with the Prokofiev symphony, the French-born maestro immediately proclaimed his high seriousness of purpose, his fidelity to a composer's stated intentions and his ability to draw from an orchestra not his own the very best it has to offer.

The symphony itself is a great one—a dark and massive panorama of despair. Save for its final movement, a stinging vivace, the work is slow, and feeds on veiled and tortured sentiments. It is ever brooding and somber and sardonic, with the lower strings and brasses hacking away violently while its main themes whistle chillingly through the air.

Boundless Power

All of these features Mr. Morel drew forth with boundless power. It is no light chore to keep constantly in motion two long movements which unfold leisurely without short cuts of any kind. But the conductor did just that, as did he also probe to the symphony's core, revealing its spirit, finally, for all to grasp and feel.

At last night's concert, an event no less dashing and inspired was his reading of the Elgar "Enigma" and Strauss' "Don Juan." The variations lean heavily on the element of contrast, thereby insuring that each new episode will do more than merely mirror and repeat what has gone before. In Mr. Morel's performance, these contraste were luminously sketched. Thematic contours were kept skin-tight, and inner details were throughout made to lock snugly into the work's over-all design.

"Don Juan" Soared

And "Don Juan" also soared. From first to last it was properly turbulent and amorous, though the usual procedure of allowing its wrenching love ties to linger endlessly was not followed. Clean-cut describes the score's rendition—clean-cut and surging. That, I take it, is what the work is meant to be.

Less satisfactory in every way was Miss Henriot's performance of the Liszt concerto. The young and delicate pianist was simply not able to swashbuckle as the work demands, and while she produced a ringing and resonant tone, she did not, in essence, bring to the piece the verve and virtuosity necessary to its success. It was, in fact, a lukewarm Liszt we heard. And truly, a luke-warm Liszt is no Liszt at all.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
JUL 4 - 1954

All-Beethoven Program First

Special to The Blade

LENOX, Mass., July 3.—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of western Massachusetts in 1934, the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte String Trio.

On Friday, also at 8:30 p.m., in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

★ ★ ★

FOR THE FIRST time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given in the opening weekend, July 10 at 8:30 and July 11 at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

On Sunday afternoon, Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra, then under Mr. Monteux.

★ ★ ★

SINCE 1938, when the 6,000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over the eastern United States and Canada. Last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

The 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its 6-week framework: 12 shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts, concentrated last summer in the festival's first three weekends, this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated, six Wednesday evening chamber-music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all.

On Saturday morning (July 10) at 10 a.m. the Boston Symphony will hold the first of six weekly open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, to which the public is invited for a nominal admission.

THE MUSIC SHED concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiere of "The Damnation of Faust," a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the "Fantastic Symphony" (July 18); the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the symphony for viola, "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," in its complete form, with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscona as soloists (July 31); the overture to "Benvenuto Cellini;" "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans;" the song cycle, "Summer Nights," with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 7); concluding the Festival with the "Requiem" in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (Aug. 15).

INTERMISSION SCENE AT BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

Crowds from afar bring picnic blankets, even a wheel chair or two

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 6 - 1954

Berkshire Festival At Tanglewood Opens 12th Season

The Berkshire Festival opened its 12th season at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday with a special ceremony in the theater-concert hall, Dr. Lewis D. Perry, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra introduced many celebrities in the musical world and paid tribute to Mrs. Gertrude Robinson Smith, famous patroness of music and especially of the Festival.

Dr. Perry announced gifts of $30,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., to be received over a Berkshire Music Center, the school connected with the Festival. The Center also opened Sunday, with more than 400 students registered. They were greeted by Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Center and conductor of the Boston Symphony.

A chorus of students directed by Hugh Ross presented Randall Thompson's Allelujah, following which there was a reception and tea for everyone in the gardens of Tanglewood.

It has been announced that William J. Cox, secretary of the Phillips Academy at Exeter, is chairman of the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, thru which funds are contributed for the support of the summer school. Last year membership in the organization rose to 5,472, with donations totalling $27,637. Membership entitles contributions to admittance to all students concerts at the Center.

The first concert of the season will be given in the theatre-concert hall Wednesday, July 7, at 8.30. Claudio Arrau, pianist, will appear with the Bel Arte Trio in a Beethoven program. The first student concert is Thursday evening, when the symphony orchestra of 100 students will play in the Music Shed. Sunday morning there will be a student chamber music concert, and that evening there will be a composer's forum.

Other Festival Concerts this week will be the chamber music concert conducted by Charles Munch in the Theatre-Concert Hall Friday night, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist in an all-Bach program, and the presentation of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in the Music Shed Saturday night under the baton of Dr. Munch with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society joining with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Sunday afternoon Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in a Beethoven program in the Music Shed with Claudio Arrau as soloist.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 7 - 1954

Berkshire Festival Changes Announced

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchersta, announces changes in the concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., to be played by the orchestra in the music shed at 2:30 p. m. on Sunday afternoon, August 1.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon, with his wife, Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, has scheduled the program to commence with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture", to be followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis", then by the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replace the previously scheduled "Chout" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak Violin Concerto.

Changes in the Berkshire Festival programs previously announced involve the advancement to July 24 of Nicole Henriot, French pianist, as soloist, playing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto on that program, replacing Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz." On the concert of August 14, in place of Miss Henriot's piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin", and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" in place of the Prelude to "Lohengrin" by Wagner. Pierre Monteux's originally planned all-Franck concert of July 17 has had Debussy's excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer" substituted for Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides."

Zimbler Sinfonietta Performs Chamber Music at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The third in a series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts at Tanglewood featured the Zimbler Sinfonietta, an ensemble of string players from the Boston Symphony, in a varied and unusual program at the Theater-Concert Hall.

Those who imagine that program music originated with Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony were promptly taken aback by the explicit depiction of nature in Vivaldi's "Four Seasons," which [illegible] last night. For [illegible] certi grossi of [illegible] Opus 8 which bear this subtitle contain literal representations of such things as the twitterings of birds, thunder and lightning storms, and even the chatter of teeth in the winter cold.

[illegible] from such ef- [illegible] as an antique [illegible] ues to beguile [illegible]

[illegible] was a celebrated [illegible] o in his day and [illegible] the concerti grossi his [illegible] mastery of this me- [illegible] dium [illegible] apparent. The Zimbl[illegible]ietta and its so- loists [illegible]sky, violinist, and [illegible] Valenti, harpsi- chordist, admirably preserved the spirit of this typically 18th century music.

[illegible] the modern counterpart to [illegible] there was Stra- vinsky's ballet suite, "Apollon Musagete," which has been called "pallid" by at least one critic. Compared to the tonal flamboyance of Petrouchka or Le Sacre it may indeed be tame, but one must remember the intent of the composer, which was a neo-classical evocation of the style of Lully.

ALEXANDER TANSMAN has spoken of the "sonata tenderness" of this [illegible] it does have a lyric [illegible] for Stravinsky. [illegible] however, is on [illegible] melodic cont[illegible]onal coloration [illegible]ms, which have [illegible]ical signature of [illegible].

The concluding work was the little known Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass by Rossini, which afforded the Sinfonietta's first desk men an opportunity to display their dexterity in numerous solo passages, if nothing else.

[223]

PITTSFIELD, MASS.
BERKSHIRE EAGLE
JUL 6 - 1954

PRESIDING at Sunday's formal opening of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Lewis Perry, member of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and honorary chairman of the Friends of the Center, introduced Aaron Copland, assistant director, who in turn introduced members of the faculty to the students. Manos

Hawthorne's Birthday Noted At Opening of Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD — Dr. Lewis D. Perry, presiding at the 12th annual opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon noted the day commemorated the anniversary of the birth 150 years ago of Nathaniel Hawthorne, from one of whose famous books the estate takes its name.

Dr. Perry, a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and honorary chairman of the Berkshire Music Center's Friends Society, greeted the students of the Center, who were seated in the front of the auditorium, the members of the faculty, who were seated on the stage with him, and a large number of interested spectators who filled the rest of the theater.

$30,000 Gift

Dr. Perry has presided at these annual events with his own easy grace and dignity for many years. He reminded his audience, however, that his main function as chairman of the Friends is to raise money and in that connection he announced the gift to the school by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., of $15,000 for this year, $10,000 for next, and $5,000 for the third year.

Dr. Perry further greeted in the audience Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who was the main force in organizing the Berkshire Festival in 1934 and Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, whose late husband came to Tanglewood at the head of the Boston orchestra in 1936 and who in 1940 established the school in connection with the orchestral concerts which was to make Tanglewood in its inclusive aspects the most important summer musical center of the whole world.

Munch Addresses Students

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and director of the Berkshire Music Center, gave a short address to the students in which he stressed the wonderful conditions granted them for their work and the individual opportunities for personal development and elevation in this short concentrated session.

Aaron Copland, the assistant director of the school, in introducing the faculty of the school to the students, stated with a proper self-consciousness, in presenting the members of the opera department, that he had a "tender" interest in their work, an obvious reference to his new opera "The Tender Land" which that part of the school is to prepare and present during the term.

The exercises closed with the now traditional singing by the day-old student body of the "Alleluiah," which Randall Thompson composed specifically for the occasion of the inauguration of the school.

* * *

The fourth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U.S. performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, on Wednesday evening (July 28) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program a Rousel, Ibert and Mozart, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening (July 30) in the Theater-Concert Hall; Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on Saturday evening (July 31), in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughn Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Sunday afternoon.

Hanover (Pa.)
SUN
July 24, 1954

'Tanglewood On Parade' Planned

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 26.—The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held here from 5:45 until after 11 p. m. on Friday, Aug. 13. As before, the principal feature will be a concert in Tanglewood's Music Shed at 8:15 p. m., with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene of Richard Strauss' "Salome," in which Brenda Lewis will sing the title role. Arthur Fiedler will then conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra, composed of Boston Symphony musicians, in a program of the type which it gives in its Boston spring series.

The festivities open with a fanfare and address of welcome; the Berkshire Music Center will then demonstrate its activities with simultaneous programs of orchestral works, one-act operas and chamber music in the Music Shed, Theater-Concert Hall and Chamber Music Hall. A student chorus will sing during the lawn party and picnic supper before the evening concert. The day's program will close with drawing for door prizes at 11 p. m. and waltzing on the lawn at 11:15.

Purchasers of box seats at $5 and reserve seats at $3 and $4 in the Shed will be entitled to attend an opera performance in Tanglewood's formal gardens at 4 p. m. Unreserved seats will cost $2.50. Reservations may be made by telephone (Lenox 600). All ticket holders are entitled to attend the demonstrations and the day's later events. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee, with Mrs. Bruce Sanborn and Mrs. John H. Rice as vice-chairmen and Miss Margo Miller as secretary.

BOSTON, MASS.
AMERICAN
JUL 8 - 1954

New Festival Schedule For Berkshire Concerts

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given, commencing this opening weekend on Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and on Sunday at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed.

Tomorrow night at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday night in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, participating, and soloists Eleanor Stever (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

On Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six-week framework: 12 Shed concerts instead of last year's nine, on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons; the popular Bach-Mozart concerts which last summer were concentrated in the Festival's first three weekends this year are to be held each Friday evening; and a new series has been inaugurated of six Wednesday evening chamber music programs, a total of 24 concerts in all. On Saturday morning at 10 a. m. the Boston Symphony will hold the first of six weekly open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund, to which the public is invited for the nominal admission of $1.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
JUL 19 1954

Munch in Top Form In Berlioz Program

By HARRIETT JOHNSON

Lenox, Mass., July 19—The debatable sky here yesterday, with low-hanging clouds hovering over the Massachusetts hills, was no augury of the thrilling event which took place in the 6,000-seat music shed of Tanglewood, home of the Berkshire Festival.

Charles Munch, in top form, conducted the Boston Symphony in a concert which obviously inspired him to give of his best, a state which can be very exciting indeed.

Munch closed the concert with a performance of the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony;" and there is no doubt that the mercurial Frenchman makes this piece sound more significant than it really is. The audience was rampant with enthusiasm at its conclusion, and it was right.

The "Fantastic Symphony," aptly wedded to its title, has everything in it from an engaging waltz entitled "A Ball," to the final, "Dream of a Witches' Sabbath," dramatizing the song of death, the "Dies Irae." Munch gifted with both imagination and dynamism, was like a stage director of genius making the Greeks or Shakespeare live with all the vividness which is inherently theirs.

Copland's Piano Concerto

Aaron Copland's piano concerto, with the solo portion brilliantly played by Leo Smit, was performed prior to the intermission along with a remarkably sensitive performance of Debussy's suite, "Iberia." The Copland work, in one movement divided into two sections, slow and fast, was written in 1926. Beginning with a romantically inclined adagio, the concerto moves into a jolly, rollicking ragtime that jazzes away for several moments and ends up with a proper bang after having been preceded by plenty of noise.

This is far from being the Copland of "Appalachian Spring" but it provides a satisfactory outdoor piece for a Sunday afternoon, especially when played by a trio like Munch, Smit and the Bostonians.

DORIOT ANTONY, flautist, the first woman ever to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is the soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto, which will be performed by the Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, in the Friday evening concert, July 30 (8:30 p. m.), the fourth in the series of chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

TUESDAY: to-night July 27
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Three One-Act Operas
(Free to Friends)
WEDNESDAY, July 28:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Griller String Quartet
THURSDAY, JULY 29:
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Dept. I Orchestra
(Free to Friends)
FRIDAY, JULY 30:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Chamber Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting
SATURDAY, JULY 31:
10:00 a. m. in the Shed
Boston Symphony Rehearsal
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
Berlioz - "Romeo and Juliet"
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting
SUNDAY, AUG. 1:
10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
Chamber Music, Dept. 1
(Free to Friends)
2:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Richard Burgin, conducting
8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
Composer's Forum
(Free to Friends)
MONDAY, AUG. 2:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Opera in 3 acts
"The Tender Land" - Copland

Lebanon
"Echo"
July 27, 1954

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Morel to Conduct at Tanglewood

The Berkshire Festival, featuring the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., moves into its third week-end tomorrow night with a program which features Handel and Haydn. Charles Munch and Hugh Ross will divide the concert podium-wise as follows: Handel Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn Symphony in G Major, "Military," No. 100, to be conducted by Munch. The Mass No. 2 in D Minor, the "Nelson" Mass by Haydn, will be led by Ross.

Jean Morel, French conductor of the Juilliard Orchestra, and formerly with the N. Y. City Opera, will be guest maestro Saturday night, with Nicole Henriot, pianist, as soloist in the Lizts Piano Concerto in E Flat. Elgar's "Enigma" Variations, Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony and Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan," complete the program.

Munch returns Sunday at 2:30 to conduct a concert which features the Berlioz' "Harold in Italy", with William Primsore, violist, as soloist. Toch's Second Symphony will also be heard.

Tomorrow's concert will be in the Theater-Concert Hall; Saturday's and Sunday's events in the 6,000-seat Music Shed. Seats are always available on the grass outside and Tanglewood is only four hours by train or car from New York.

OSSINING, N. Y.
CITIZEN-REGISTER
JUL 9 - 1954

That attractive brunet with the lovely voice, Mary Judd, heard to good advantage this week on the Arthur Godfrey Talent Scouts TV program, is a Peekskill resident, the mother of two young daughters. Mrs. Judd commutes daily to sing with the pop-Opera Company which started giving cut versions of opera in English at Long Beach three weeks ago. She has sung with other small opera companies and recently won auditions for the Tanglewood Berkshire Festival in the opera group.

[224]

Second Thoughts on Music

Messrs. Munch, Monteux Share Conducting Honors

French Music Predominates in Shed Concerts at Tanglewood; Festival Chorus and Soloists Heard In Bach Cantata; Albeneri Trio Excels

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood and the Berkshire Music Festival really got under way during the second week. The second chamber music concert served to introduce the admirable Albeneri Trio and the second concert of those devoted to Bach-Mozart, primarily, introduced the Festival chorus and some excellent student soloists. The concerts in the Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra were, with one exception, devoted to French music with Pierre Monteux and Charles Munch sharing conducting honors.

Audiences have been smaller than expected. Perhaps this was due to the cool weather; perhaps to the fact that too much French music was offered and perhaps to the fact that the six-week season is either too long or too exepensive.

Albeneri Trio

However, those who have attended these concerts have heard some brilliant performances. The Albeneri Trio, consists of Erich Itor Kahn, pianist; Georgio Ciompi, violin, and Benas Heifitz, cellist. They played the Brahms Trio in B major; Martinu's Trio in D minor and the "Archduke" Trio by Beethoven. Long association and superb musicianship have moulded these players into a splendid unity. There was a fine tonal blend and mutual appreciation and insight into all the music performed.

The Festival Chorus, a picked group, made its first appearance in the second of the Bach-Mozart concerts. Under the inspired direction of Hugh Ross, surely one of the greatest choral conductors in this country, the chorus gave admirable account of itself in the Bach Cantata No. 93, titled "Wer nur den lieben Gott Lasst walten." We noted in the tenor section of the chorus, Prof. Vikkers of Springfield College, head of its music department.

There were excellent soloists. The Negro bass-baritone McHenry Boatwright has a voice worth further notice and the Negro soprano Theresa Green, who appeared in Palmer last season on the Community Concerts program, is in her second season at Tanglewood, singing beautifully. Then there was Beatrice Krebs, contral, to, who has sung with the Springfield Symphony orchestra. Her fine voice and musicianship did honor to Bach. The tenor was David Lloyd. His singing was that of a fine artist well versed in the music of Bach. He towered over his colleagues particularly in enunciation and knowledge of the correct recitative style.

On the same program the Boston Symphony players, directed by Charles Munch, offered two of the Bach Suites, Suite No. 1 in C major and Suite No. 4 in D major. Both were performed in the style with which we have become accustomed

DR. ERNST TOCH GUEST TEACHER OF COMPOSITION

His Symphony and Opera to Be Given This Week At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 24—Guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer is the celebrated Austrian-American composer, Dr. Ernst Toch. Dr. Toch is associated with American composers Aaron Copland, assistant director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music operated in connection with the Berkshire Festival and with Lukas Foss.

ERNST TOCH

The presence of Dr. Toch, who makes his home in California and who has recently been professor of music at the University of Oregon, continues the tradition of having an outstanding contemporary composer in residence each season; his predecessors include Carlos Chavez, Luigi Dallapiccola, Jacques Ibert, Darius Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Bohuslav Martinu, Paul Hindemith and Olivier Messiaen.

Dr. Toch will be honored tomorrow by a performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, of his Symphony No. 2, which Mr. Munch performed with the Boston Symphony in Boston on Dec. 12, 1952. It will have its Tanglewood premiere in the Berk-

[see]

Among This Week's Headliners at Tanglewood

BEATRICE KREBS

DORIOT ANTHONY

WILLIAM PRIMROSE

CHAMBER MUSIC AT NORFOLK, CONN.

Norfolk, Conn., July 24 — The Norfolk Music School of Yale University will present the fifth concert in its 1954 summer series at Battell House here Wednesday afternoon at 3.30. It will be a program of chamber music featuring Howard Boatwright, violin; Arthur Hague, piano; Bruce Simonds, piano, and Keith Wilson, clarinet.

Boatwright is concertmaster of the New Haven Symphony and conductor of the Yale University Orchestra; he is currently recording with Overtone Records. Hague is assistant professor of piano playing at Yale University and has made many concert appearances, especially in New England.

Simonds, director of the Norfolk Music School and head of the piano department at Yale School of Music, has performed in many concerts in this country and abroad. Wilson, who is head of the wind instrument department at Yale and director of the Yale University Band, has been recording recently for Contemporary Records.

The program will include Schubert's Sonata in A major for violin and piano, Opus 162; Brahms' Sonata for clarinet and piano; Ives' Largo; and a trio by Milhaud for violin, clarinet and piano.

RECORD ROUNDUP

Classical

"Sinfonia Antarctica." The seventh, and last, of large orchestral works by Ralph Vaughan Williams, issued in connection with a complete edition directed by Sir Adrian Boult. It is an enlargement of a movie score dealing with the Polar explorations of Scott. Sir John Gielgud is the commentator. (London.)

"Songbirds of America." An entertaining resume of text and recordings dealing with two dozen common song birds. Both are comprehensive. (Cornell University.)

"La Boîte a Joujoux." One of the lesser works of Debussy, directed with understanding and affection by Jonel Perles. Each of the material scenes [illegible]

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, July 24—Aaron Copland is one of Tanglewood's busiest personalities this summer. Between his composition classes, his supervision of Sunday night student composers' forums and the public forums he moderates Monday nights in Sedgwick Hall, Lenox, the composer, who is assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, has found time to make revisions of his first full-length opera, "The Tender Land," which is now in preparation by Frederic Cohen and his students of the opera department for its New England premiere at Tanglewood on Monday and Tuesday nights, Aug. 2 and 3. Mr. Copland's revisions are "an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." The Tanglewood production is in three acts, with three added scenes; its period has been set back from the 1930's to the spring of 1910.

* * *

"The Tender Land" will be the first contemporary full-length opera offered by the Berkshire Music Center since Benjamin Britten's "Peter Grimes" had its U. S. premiere by the opera department of the Boston Symphony's summer music school in 1946 and the same composer's "Albert Herring" was given for the first time in this country at Tanglewood in 1949.

* * *

Eva Rubin, a nine-year-old Buffalo girl, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell I. Rubin, who summer at Stockbridge Bowl, will make her stage debut in both performances of "The Tender Land." Young Miss Rubin, who attends Campus School of New York State Teachers' College, was "drafted" for the role of Beth, the younger of the two daughters of a Kansas farm woman, by neighbor Ralph Berger, [illegible] piano [illegible] in last Sunday's Berkshire Festival concert. Mr. Smit composed the madrigals in February, 1953.

* * *

An important honor has gone to Beatrice Krebs, spending her second summer at the Berkshire Music Center as a student in opera dramatics. Charles Munch has selected her to sing the contralto role that Jennie Tourel sang last year when the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" is performed in the Berkshire Festival's Shed concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, July 31. Miss Krebs has sung with the New York City Opera Company, the Little Orchestra, the New York Oratorio Society, and on tour with Robert Shaw's Chorale. Last summer she sang under Hugh Ross's direction in Haydn's "Theresa" Mass on a Festival chamber orchestra program, and in the Gluck opera "L'Yvrogne Corrige" for the opera department. This summer she has sung Bach's Cantata No. 93 and Haydn's Nelson Mass on Festival chamber orchestra programs, and sings the contralto roie of the mother in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land" on Tuesday, August 3.

* * *

The Tanglewood concert of Sunday afternoon, Aug. 1, will mark the first appearance on a Berkshire Festival program, as a team, of Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt. It is Mr. Burgin's first Festival concert, although he has led student orchestra programs here and conducted a portion of a "Tanglewood on Parade" concert. Miss Posselt's performance of the Hindemith violin concerto several summers ago under Leonard Bein-

ONE-ACT OPERAS BOOKED TUESDAY

Lenox, July 24 — Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood, Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the United States. It was given in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting, in New York in February, 1933.

"There and Back" (Hin and Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928 at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center. The text is by Marcellus Schiffer; it will be sung in the English translation of Marion Farquhar.

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, book by Benno Elkan, English version by Marion Farquhar. It was first performed in Baden-Baden in 1927; by the WPA-Federal Theater, New York, in 1936; it will have its first Tanglewood performance at Tanglewood next Tuesday.

The three one-act operas are produced by Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department.

APPLAUSE TAKES NUMEROUS FORMS

Audience applause must be as old as performance itself. An article in the August issue of Good Housekeeping magazine states that clapping is not the only means of approval.

During the 18th century gentlemen struck their walking sticks

Two Berlioz Compositions On Program This Afternoon

'Harold in Italy' With William Primrose as Soloist And Overture to 'Beatrice and Benedick' Listed; Symphony No. 2 by Ernst Toch to Be Heard

Lenox, July 24—Two compositions by Hector Berlioz will be heard on tomorrow afternoon's Music Shed program at Tanglewood, the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and "Harold in Italy," the latter a symphony with viola solo. The solo part will be played by William Primrose, one of the foremost artists on that instrument, and an instructor in the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center here in 1947.

Also to be heard in tomorrow's concert, which starts at 2.30, is Symphony No. 2, Op. 73 by Ernst Toch. Dr. Toch is guest teacher of composition at Tanglewood this summer. The symphony, which Charles Munch introduced in this country two seasons ago, will have its Tanglewood premiere tomorrow, when Mr. Munch will again conduct. The work is dedicated to Albert Schweitzer.

Coming Features

There will be a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first United States performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, on Wednesday evening at 8.30 in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Boussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, also conducted by Mr. Munch, on Saturday evening, in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, will present a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed.

The Griller String Quartet (Sidney Griller, Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola; Colin Hampton, 'cello) will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular Wednesday evening chamber music series. The chamber orchestra program on Friday evening will offer three selections new on Festival programs: Albert Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Flute Concerto of Jacques Ibert, featuring Miss Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony; and Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds (K. 388).

Miss Krebs in Debut

"Romeo and Juliet," performed in its complete form by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston (1952-53), Tanglewood (1953), New York and Washington, D. C. (1953-54), and recorded, is being repeated this summer as one of several of Berlioz' rarely-performed full-length Spider's Feast"; Ibert: Flute Concerto —with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart: Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388—with Ralph Gomberg, Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi, Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano, Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt, Ernst Panenka, bassoons; Mozart: "Paris" Symphony, K. 297. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "Romeo and Juliet," dramatic symphony, with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, and soloists Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nichola Moscona, bass-baritone. Charles Munch, conductor.

STUDENT GROUPS TO DEMONSTRATE

'Tanglewood On Parade' On Program Aug. 13

Lenox, July 24—"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's summer school at Tanglewood, will be held this year on Friday, Aug. 13. Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky of Lenox and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge have announced their committees.

Student Groups

Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Minneapolis, Minn., and Lenox, are vice-chairmen with Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield as secretary. Mrs. Sanborn heads the door prize committee, and Miss Robinson Smith and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., of Hingham and Stockbridge, are in charge of the committee for the sale of books.

Holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of an opera in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p. m. Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department, will announce his program and cast soon. At 6 p. m. all five departments of the Berkshire Music Center—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, opera, choral and study group—will give simultaneous demonstrations. During dinner a choir concert will be given on the steps of the Berkshire Music Center's administration building.

The program for the evening concert at 8:30 p. m. in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists will be announced shortly. At the close of the concert door prizes will be drawn. Dancing on the lawn will end the festivities.

STUDENT CONCERTS BOOKED AT LENOX

Lenox, July 24 Four concerts will be given during the coming week by students of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra now in its 15th eleventh season and [illegible]

TIGHT BINDING

TIGHT BINDING

Residents of Western Mass. Students at Music Center

Springfield, Holyoke, Lenox, Pittsfield, North Adams And Ashfield Represented in Classes Studying This Summer at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 24—The Berkshire Music Center, now in its 12th season at Tanglewood, has numbered among its [illegible] students 10 Western Massachusetts residents. The Connecticut Valley and Berkshire County [illegible] well represented, along with [illegible] and 12 foreign countries. [illegible] students of music gain invaluable knowledge and experience while studying under some of the greatest musicians in the world.

Two From Holyoke

Only school of its kind, conducted by the internationally famous Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Charles Munch as director, the Berkshire Music Center has graduated musicians who now comprise over 10 per cent of the membership of all major symphony orchestras in the United States.

Furthermore the Metropolitan Opera Co. includes former student Rosalind Elias, a pupil at the Center here in 1953 who was withdrawn from further competition in the Opera auditions and made a member of the company after one hearing.

Perhaps most widely known of the illustrious graduates of the Berkshire Music Center is the North Adams miss, Christina Cardillo, who starred in operas at the Theater-Concert Hall in recent seasons and who last spring won the coveted Metropolitan Auditions of the Air. She is now at Central City, Col., and listed for some 24 solos this summer.

This year, Holyoke is represented by two students. Catherine Dower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence F. Dower of 215 Essex St., Holyoke, and a supervisor of music in the Holyoke public schools, is studying under Hugh Ross in the choral group. Holder of a B. A. degree from Hamline University in Minnesota, a diploma from the Pius X Liturgical Music School in New York, and the University of Insbuck in Austria, Miss Dower is enjoying her first term of instruction from the masters of the Tanglewood faculty.

Jonelle Stickel, of 64 Waldo St., Holyoke, a graduate of the public schools, Mt. Holyoke College and the New England Conservatory of Music is a teacher of vocal music in the John J. Lynch Junior High School in her native city. Here at the Berkshire Music Center for the first time she is studying choral conducting and is a soprano in the small Tanglewood choir. She also is working with the opera group.

Three From Springfield

Here from Springfield is Gilbert Vickers of 27 Surrey Rd., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Vickers of 60 Palmyra St. Holder of a masters degree from the University of Music he has been director of music at Springfield College since 1950. He also directs the choir of Faith Congregational Church in Springfield. At Tanglewood, he is studying under Hugh Ross in the choral dept.

Also from this City of Homes is Jane O'Keefe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald E. O'Keefe of 100 Roosevelt Ave. A graduate of Classical High School, she is a student at the New England Conservatory of Music. At the Music Center, she is taking up choral conducting. She is also an alto in the opera group. In the past she has been with the Young People's Symphony of Springfield and is studying now for student music education.

Another Springfield student is Faith Ginsburg, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David Ginsburg of 5 Eton St. A graduate of Classical High School, she is studying voice under Vincent Spolzino, and will graduate from Leslie College in Cambridge in 1957. A soprano, she is in the chorus at Tanglewood and participating in the study group.

From Central Berkshire are Monica and Keith MacGaffey, the brother-sister enrollees from Lenox, and Marjorie Kember of Pittsfield.

From North Adams

Down from North Adams is Louis Garenani. He's the third Tunnel City student. Previously Pasquale Cardillo came down to Tanglewood, and after a successful tryout joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Later it was his sister, Christina, who started her rise to stardom at Tanglewood's Music Center.

Garenani is a graduate of Drury High School and the New England Conservatory of Music, as were his predecessors. Supervisor of instrumental music at Brewster Academy in Wolfboro, N. H., he is attending classes at Tanglewood for the second summer. He is in the choral department under Hugh Ross. A bass, he also sings in the Festival chorus and is working towards further degrees in conducting.

From the hills of Ashfield has come Connie Field. A graduate of Sanderson Academy, she is now a senior at Oberlin Conservatory in Ohio. A violinist, she is here for the first time and is a member of the student orchestra at Tanglewood and is heard every Thursday night. Previously she was with the Young People's Symphony in Springfield and is featured with the orchestra at Oberlin.

Western Mass. Students at Music Center

Students from Western Massachusetts communities who [illegible] at the Berkshire Music Center located on the grounds of the internationally famous Tanglewood. Front row, left to right: Gilbert Vickers of Springfield College; Louis Garenani of North Adams. Back row, same order: Faith Ginsburg of Springfield; Connie Field of Ashfield; Jane O'Keefe of Springfield; Catherine Dower of Holyoke, and Jonelle Stickel of Holyoke.

MOREL BRILLIANT AT TANGLEWOOD

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 24 — A powerful performance of Prokofieff's sixth symphony and a brilliant performance of Liszt's "Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 1" thrilled an audience of 7760 persons tonight.

Under the direction of Jean Morel, the young French conductor who is a member of the faculty of the Berkshire Music School this year, the Boston Symphony players offered as arresting a concert as has been heard this season.

Came to U. S. in 1939

Morel came to this country first in 1939 to conduct the New York City Symphony. Since then he has conducted the New York City Center opera and two NBC orchestra concerts. In 1948 he became head of the orchestra department of the Juilliard School of Music.

Prokofieff wrote his "Symphony No. 6 in E-flat Minor in 1947. Like the majority of his works, this symphony is melodically fulsome and skilfully contrived. The opening movement has several contrasting characteristics. It is agitated, lyrical and austere. The second movement an andante, is complex, though lighter in vein than the first movement. Of the three movements, it is the most melodic. The final movement has great charm and Prokofieff carries into it fragments from the earlier "classical" symphony.

Mr. Morel provided a powerful reading. It was concise, clear in outline and finely integrated. There were grand sonorities and enchanting lyricism.

Provides Thrilling Performance

The last time Nicole Henriot played at Tanglewood she offered the Ravel Concerto. Tonight she proved a bravura performance of Liszt's first piano concerto. It was a performance of great power, breadth and insight. Miss Henriot, slight in stature, has strong and nimble fingers and a pianistic thrust that cut through the strongest orchestral passages. It was the finest performance of this concerto we have heard from a woman pianist.

When Strauss decided to do a tone poem on Don Juan he chose the Don Juan of Nikolaus Lenau, thus abandoning the sensualist of the Byronic epic and substituting instead a man filled with longing to find a woman who is to him incarnate of all womanhood. Because he does not find her, although he reels from one to another, disgust siezes him and he allows himself to be killed. The finale is catastrophic.

There are a few finer descriptive pieces than this. It was evident that Mr. Morel had delved deeply into both the text and the score. The performance was rich in detail, compelling in its force and powerful without becoming [illegible] was the epic [illegible] love

The [illegible] who are still seach[illegible] for a solution for the "enig[illegible] in the "variations on an original theme" which Elgar titled "Enigma." One wonders if they would be happier if they found it. Elgar has titled each variation with the initials of his friends, musical and otherwise.

If one does not search for the solution to the "Enigma" one can listen with pleasure to a deft and imaginative set of variations. One loses the original theme before the work is over, but it is handled in a [illegible] manner.

Mr. Morel and the orchestra provided a stunning performance, clean cut, precise and technically impeccable.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 2 - 1954

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL MAKES PROGRAM CHANGES

Changes involving two Saturday evening programs by the Boston Symphony orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, are announced by Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony. Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, on Saturday evening, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert of Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin".

At Tanglewood there has been added to the [illegible] sculptures by [illegible] on display in the form[illegible] carving in Carrara [illegible] Abate entitled "[illegible] work was begun [illegible] Abate was studying [illegible] as [illegible] winner of a Prix [illegible] Fulbright Grant and [illegible] at Boston where he is an instructor at the Boston Museum School.

This work is a new version of the mother-child theme with the artist treating the mother figure as a crescent surrounding the nestling child. The texture of the surface of the work is [illegible] to give emphasis to the [illegible] burlesque treatment of the [illegible] face and arms and of the [illegible]

Abate is a native of Salem and the son of a monument carver, and as a result of scholarships has studied at the Boston Museum School, in Mexico and in Europe. He has exhibited three times in Rome and since [illegible] this country his work has been shown at the Metropolitan Museum in New York, the exhibition of ecclesiastical [illegible] in New York, and at the [illegible] Gallery. Last year Abate designed and executed the memorial [illegible] Serge Koussevitsky in Lenox.

The weekly exhibitions in the reception hall at Tanglewood opened with the group of sculptures by Franc Epping of Lenox which are being exhibited at the Berkshire Museum this month and which have already been reviewed. This past week the exhibition was comprised of a group of prints by Bengtz, many of which are also included at the Tryingham Galleries. Next week additional sculpture by Gunn as well as paintings by him are to be shown.

Dr. Toch will be honored tomorrow by a performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, of his Symphony No. 2, which Mr. Munch performed with the Boston Symphony in Boston on Dec. 12, 1952. It will have its birth. Mr. Munch provided a stimulating, deeply probing reading of the "Fantastic Symphony." This is a work which lends itself to more than one interpretation. Mr. Munch emphasized its lyrical aspects without lessening the impact of the more bombastic moments. This was a strong, sane reading of the great works in the orchestra repertoire.

Copland Concerto

Aaron Copland is teaching at the Berkshire Center this summer and, as usual, one of his works was played, as a compliment to him, we presume. The work was his Concerto for Piano and Orchestra. Leo Smit was the pianist. This work leans heavily on the jazz rhythms and it is probable that a Basin Street habitue would find it rewarding. Most of it was very loud, quite drowning out the piano, but in those rare passages where the pianist could be heard Mr. Smit played with a keen rhythmic sense and vital sensitivity.

Debussy [illegible] is tailor-made for the Boston Symphony orchestra. It has everything the work demands, brilliance, a myriad tonal colorations and provocative rhythms. This was one of the brightest, clearest and most knowingly spontaneous performances the orchestra has given to date.

Those who intend to hear concerts of chamber music or orchestra during the next four weeks can be assured to getting their money's worth. The high standard set by Mr. Munch in the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" continues, and some of the finest ensembles in the world will be heard during the chamber music series.

[226]

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 10 1954

NBC Symphony Seeks a Future

By IRVING KOLODIN

NEW YORK is moving into its dog days of summer at a somewhat accelerated pace, with most musical activity in a state of suspension. You'd never suspect it, however, from the activity going on out of public sight for preservation, as an ensemble, of the many-manned membership of the NBC Symphony. Don Gillis, composer-producer, is one active propagandist, Alan Schulman, of the cello section, another.

This being an age of slogans, it is a happy circumstance that the players have termed themselves "the orchestra that refuses to die." In a kind of not-too-subtle way this implies that somebody or something is concerned with trying to put it out of the way, if not to commit outright homicide. Thus the public sympathy for the underdog has become powerfully involved in this active struggle for survival.

Right now meetings and conferences abound, with legal problems being aired and questions of jurisdiction being debated. At issue is the fundamental consideration whether NBC can, or will, reserve to itself title to the words NBC Symphony, even when qualified by such a formula as "Former Members of . . ." There is some quid pro quo involved, in the way of employment possibilities for the future engagements of the orchestra in collaboration with Toscanini for recordings, or with others.

However, the attitude of the players is that they have a more-than-sentimental interest in the name under which they were so long combined, and are not inclined to barter that right away for a promise of an occasional job.

* * *

THE LARGER FACT (whether that issue is resolved or not) is that New York has long been in want of the kind of activity this group can provide. The boarding-house formulae on which the New York Philharmonic-Symphony services its several subscription audiences, or the Philadelphia and Boston orchestras do their less numerous ones, has long sacrificed the interests of the volitional music lovers who do not want to commit themselves months in advance to programs unpublished. Thus the way is open for an organization providing provocative programs under vigorous leadership in a nonformularized pattern.

This would merely provide for New York what the Vienna Philharmonic has long offered in that city or the London Philharmonic or the several free-lance organizations in Paris.

Already, we hear, offers of management have been tendered from several sources, and the City Center direction is pondering a concrete proposition. Anyone inclined to proffer material encouragement will certainly b given a hero's welcome. Loca 802, New York, is as good mail address as any.

DON GILLIS

* * *

BIGGEST CONCERT "date in an American artist's life the invitation to appear at musicale in the White Hous Among those to enjoy th honor this year were Gladj Swarthout, Patrice Munsel (at dinner for Emperor Hai Selassie) and Morton Downe (at a dinner for the Speaker the House). Eleanor Steber w scheduled to appear on the o casion of the dinner for t president of Turkey in Januar but she became ill on the d of the dinner, and Fra Guarrera, Metropolitan ten tone, appeared in her place.

* * *

BUSY STATISTICIANS engaged in tabulating the enrollees at the Berkshire School of Music conducted concurrently with the Boston Symphony season at Tanglewood, Mass., report that students this Summer include a mother and son, three husband-wife duos, and as many heads of college music departments.

The mother is Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of the Island Radio Broadcasting Company of Charlottestown, Prince Edward Island, Canada. Her son, William Keith Rogers, is a musical director of Station CFCY, operated by the Island Radio B. C.

* * *

SIXTH RECORDING session of the Louisville, Ky., orchestra took place late in June under the direction of Robert Whitney. Among scores recorded for release in subsequent months were Castelnuovo-Tedesco's "Much Ado About Nothing" Overture, Paul Creston"s "Invocation and Dance," the Third Symphony of Henry Cowell, and Darius Milhaud's "Overture Mediterranene."

Subscriptions at the rate of $65 for the year's series of 12 discs are invited, with orders to be sent to the Louisville Philharmonic Society at 830 Fourth St., Louisville 3, Ky.

(Copyright 5R)

Eagle - July 26, 1954

Manos

RARE OLD VIOLA played by William Primrose at yesterday afternoon's concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood is examined by Charles Munch, right, as Mr. Primrose relates its history to the musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

TANGLEWOOD THRIVES AS MONUMENT TO FAMED BOSTON MAESTRO.

One of New Graves at Lenox, Mass., Is That of Serge Koussevitzky, Who Developed Celebrated Music Festival.

By JOSEPH KAYE.

LENOX MASS., July 17.—I am staying in the Birchwood inn, an old house which is opposite the old Church on the Hill. In the churchyard is a new grave. It is that of Serge Koussevitzky, the famed conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and developer of the most celebrated music festival in the United States, the one at Tanglewood, a mile and a half from here, which is held every summer.

When Koussevitzky died three years ago it was thought that Tanglewood would suffer, for Koussevitzky was not only a conductor, but the mainspring of the Berkshire music festival, as this gathering of the Orpheus clans is officially known. Koussevitzky was a man of broad musical vision, and he wanted the festival to be also a means for improving the art he served. Therefore he established a school in conjunction with the concerts at Tanglewood, which is named the Berkshire music center. Here advanced students from all over America, and from many parts of the world, come for the 6-week term—the duration of the festival—to be inspired by noted artist teachers and given training in actual performance and composition.

When such a man passed out of this little musical empire it is understandable that fears should be expressed for its future. Yet today, Tanglewood draws great crowds and the festival and school function on the highest levels.

An Attractive Setting.

The Berkshire festival and music center is located on a beautiful estate of 210 acres that was deeded to the Boston Symphony, which directs this institution, now in its seventeenth season. On these grounds Nathaniel Hawthorne lived, and here he planned his "Tanglewood Tales," assembled the material for "The House of Seven Gables," and wrote "The Wonder Book." The cottage he stayed in burned down, and a replica of it was erected on the same site by the National Federation of Music clubs. It is used as a studio.

The festival was started by the late Henry Hadley, composer and conductor, with members of the New York Philharmonic. First only several concerts were given, in the open air, and on a different location. Two years later it was reorganized and Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony took over. The following year the Tanglewood estate was offered for the concerts.

The festival opened some days ago with a performance by the student orchestra and a chamber music concert. But the official opening took place last Saturday night and on the following Sunday afternoon, when the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch on Saturday, and Pierre Monteux on Sunday, gave two concerts in the Shed. This is a great auditorium designed by the Finnish architect, Eliel Saarinen, and engineered for acoustics by Prof. Richard D. Fay, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The sound-carrying qualities of this hall are superb. The building is open on three sides, and thousands of listeners spread out on the lawns to listen (at "lying room" prices).

Music Comes Through.

Even though parts of these locations are a considerable distance from the stage, the music is heard perfectly. Much of this excellence in acoustics is due to the wooden roof, which is shaped roughly like the back of a violin and acts in the manner of a huge sounding board.

This season the festival is observing the 150th birth of Hector Berlioz, and his principal works are being performed. The inaugural concert in the Shed was of his dramatic cantata, "The Damnation of Faust." The orchestra was joined by two large choruses, the Harvard Glee club and the Radcliffe Choral society. The singers were Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust)—he sang in Kansas City's "Butterfly" last season—Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"Le Damnation" was given in its entirety, and was a magnificent performance. The climaxes that Munch achieved were galvanic. The singing of Miss Steber and Mr. Poleri were of a purity and thoughtfulness and poignancy that held the hearts of the big audience quite as much as their minds.

Superb on the Devil.

Singher, as the devil, was a superb actor as well as a finished vocalist. Even though this was a concert, with the performers in summer dress clothes, there was no mistaking the Mephistopheles on the stage. When Mrs. Singher's cue came up he jumped from his chair and the listeners suddenly saw him there, on his feet, as though he had materialized from nowhere. All through his performances his body and his hands were engaged in a subtle gesturing that seemed to bring out all the sardonic qualities in the character he was portraying. Equally sincere and effective was Mr. Gramm in the limited share of music allotted to him.

Sunday's concert in the Shed was all Beethoven. Monteux conducted the Lenore Overture No. 3, the Fifth Symphony and the Fifth piano concerto, with Claudio Arrau as the soloist. The orchestra produced magnificences, especially in the symphony, which roused the audience to excited enthusiasm. Arrau made himself somewhat less favored. The softer passages were beautiful; at other times he was less effective. Perhaps his hunched position over the piano, the playing seemingly from the shoulder, caused an artificial handicap to full appreciation.

More Berlioz Music.

The Berkshire Festival will continue until August 15 (Sunday afternoon), when the Berlioz "Requiem" will be given. In between, many of the French composer's works will be heard, among them the Fantastic Symphony, the Romeo and Juliet Symphony and "Harold in Italy."

Studying at the school are 375 eager young artists from thirty-five states and nine foreign countries. Eight are from Missouri and Kansas. From Missouri are Emma Lou Diemer, Warrensburg (composition), Mara Hall, Westminster college, Fulton (violin); Richard Benfro, Bethany (voice); Betty Lee Bowen, St. Louis (voice); Mary Dodge, University City (viola). From Kansas are Robert and Rodney Pierce, Wichita (Robert: French horn, Rodney: oboe); Eugene Orcutt, Topeka (trombone).

Miss Diemer participated in a "composers forum" on Sunday night in which six students in the composition department, headed by Aaron Coplan, Ernst Toch and Lukas Foss, had their works performed— and later criticized by an audience mainly of students. Miss Diemer's composition was a suite for violin and piano. She is a gifted writer of music. Like the work of all the student composers heard, it was totally in the contemporary spirit and fled from melody even of an unconventional character.

LEISURELY LISTENING TO GREAT MUSIC is the treat for thousands at the Berkshire music festival now in session and will continue through August 15 at the 210-acre site near Lenox, Mass. The Shed is an acoustically perfect setting for the festival programs. Listeners spread out on the lawns and fill the auditorium which is open on three sides to welcome the summer zephyrs.

LOCKPORT, N. Y.
UNION-SUN & JOURNAL
JUN 17 195

Summer Is Music Festival Time All Over World

BY W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK (AP)— In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—travel.

So do the thoughts of the middle-aged and old men, indeed, of both men and women. That's particularly true of people interested in books and the arts.

A trip to Europe used to be something to figure out months in advance, and getting there was such a hardship you maybe made one trip that lasted half a year and never afterward stirred out of your back yard.

Now thousands go over for two weeks more easily than you used to jog along by horse and wagon to the cottage on the lake.

It's worth it. It doesn't much matter where you land, it's apt to be in the neighborhood of a music festival, art exhibition or dance program. They are dotted all over the map of England, France, Austria, Germany, Italy.

To be sure, you run into them right at home. At Tanglewood in the Berkshires there's music, courtesy of the Boston Symphony, from July 7 to Aug. 15. Newport offers special music in August. New Yorkers can get to music by bus and subway—in Central Park, the Guggenheim Memorial Concerts start June 18 and at Lewisohn Stadium the Stadium Concerts open June 21. There are special summer programs at Aspen, Colo., in Ogden, Utah, and in many city parks across the country with the local orchestra and visiting soloists officiating. There's dance at Jacob's Pillow, also in the Berkshires, from July 25 on.

Major events in Europe are, as usual, Salzburg, July 25-Aug. 30; Bayreuth, July 22-Aug. 22; Glyndbourne, June 10-July 27; May Music Festival in Florence, beginning in May and running through most of June.

Other European centers where special music activities are scheduled are Aix-en-Provence and Prades, in France; several cities in Holland, which also draws the Sadler's Wells Ballet; Aldeburgh in England and Llangollen in Wales; Venice, Vienna, Berlin, Stockholm. There are architectural displays in France's chateau country.

Many musicians who figure in the festivals are Americans, or well known to American music-lovers. Among them are Conductors Mitropoulos, Ormandy, Szell, Sargent; stage manager Graf; pianists Arrau, Rubinstein, Curzon; Bernstein, Erede, Ansermet and violinist Stern; tenor Vinay.

Other music-makers who will join music lovers abroad are Marian Anderson, in South America Jennie Tourel, in Europe and South Africa; Roland Hayes, in Europe.

[227]

Kansas City Times - July 22, 1954 THE KA

MUSIC IN THE WOODS

MISSOURI AND KANSAS STUDENTS AT MASSACHUSETTS CAMP.

Talented Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg Is One of Group Whose Future Is Promising, a Writer Says.

By Joseph Kaye.

Lenox, Mass., July 21. — The midday sun made the beautiful lawns of Tanglewood glow. The music of an orchestral rehearsal came out of the big shed at the end, the voices from a practicing choral group was heard from a small concert barn, and the sounds of a violin and oboe floated down from the windows of studios on the borders of the lawns.

On the stump of a big tree sat this correspondent, and around him were gathered several students at Tanglewood who came from Missouri and Kansas.

A Little World of Music.

No better place for the introduction of highly talented beginning artists could be chosen, for Tanglewood is all music, a little world where nothing else matters much except the service of music.

One of the Missourians was a slight blond girl with wistful features. She is Emma Lou Diemer, a student in composition. She is from Warrensburg, Mo. Her father, Dr. George W. Diemer, is president of the Central Missouri State college here. Miss Diemer, in her early 20s, was graduated from Yale and has been to Belgium on a Fulbright scholarship. Yet she looks like a little girl, shy and hesitant, and in no way gives the impression that she is a brilliant person who already has written a symphony, among other works of large scope, and has had a movement from it performed last year by the Seattle Symphony orchestra. A week ago Miss Diemer's suite for violin and piano was played at a student concert in Tanglewood, and proved a substantial work. Little Miss Diemer is to be watched.

Father a College Head.

Another Missourian is Mara Hall, from Fulton. She is blond and pretty and her father, too, is a college president, Dr. William W. Hall of Westminster college. Miss Hall is a violinist, a pupil of Ruth Posselt, concert violinist, and is still a student at Wellesley college. She comes by her music perhaps through her mother, who is a pianist, organist and coach. After she is graduated Miss Hall will determine whether she will make fiddling her career, although her being in Tanglewood would justify that choice.

The stocky young man in rough sports clothes is Sam Krachmalnick. He is from St. Louis. Krachmalnick is one of the most favored of Tanglewood students. He is in the conducting class, and one of only two active student conductors of the student orchestra.

An active student conductor means one who actually leads the orchestra in rehearsals, sharing the work with the faculty conductors, led by Jean Morel.

Some Professional Experience.

The other conducting students are auditors, who listen and watch. Sam has had some professional experience, notably assisting Morel in directing last season's N.B.C. television performance of Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande." He also plays the French horn and piano. This young man has some refreshing ideas. Asked his opinion on the never-ending Tanglewood discussions of melody in modern compositions (or lack of melody), he said tartly:

"Those that can write melody do; those that can't try tricks." He believes only in music that is good — any kind of music that is good, and adds, "The good music isn't likely to be written in twelve tones." Although of course, he realizes that is getting out on a limb that may snap. You would enjoy talking to Sam.

Richard Renfro, a serious young man who is in the choral section, is from Bethany, Mo. Others in his position would be content to have done with school study, since he already is teaching piano and theory at Western Carolina State college in Cullowhee, N. C. But Renfro is seeking more musical knowledge and uses up his vacation time to get it.

Identical Twins From Wichita.

Two handsome twins with the intellectual features are Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita. They are identical twins, and both chose music for a career, but the similarity of choice stopped with their mediums: Robert plays the French horn and his brother the oboe. They picked these instruments simply because they liked them. They are the sons of O. J. Pierce, mathematics teacher in a Wichita public school. Both are students at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston in the winter, and have two more years to go. Then they intend to become professionals. A third brother, James, teaches piano at the Conservatory of Music of Kansas City.

A charming blonde, Betsy Lee Bowen, soprano, is from St. Louis. She is rather unusual in that she says she wants to settle down in marriage instead of making voice her career. She was music librarian of station WEW in St. Louis, with side chores as program arranger. She also helped to form the St. Louis Madrigal society, now broken up because its leader, Hewitt Pantaleone, left the city.

Goals as Fine Amateurs.

Her term in Tanglewood is to give her futrher knowledge of and experience in choral singing. She loves being a fine amateur—which is certainly a rare distinction.

And finally, there is Mary Dodge of University City, Mo., a most attractive brunette. She is a violist, and says she wouldn't trade that instrument for any other, although she started with the violin. Miss Dodge is still a student at Washington university. She will be graduated next year, and this event will be followed by marriage. She, too, may elect to accept fine amateurism as a career.

Another student from Kansas was unable to join the coming-out party. He is Eugene Orcutt of Topeka, trombonist, who had to do some special rehearsing at the time.

Four Missouri Students at the Tanglewood Camp Near Lenox, Mass., Who Represent as Many Types of Music, Are, Left to Right, Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg, Composition; Sam Krachmalnick of St. Louis, Conducting; Mara Hall of Fulton, Violin, and Betsy Lee Bowen of St. Louis, Choral.

One-Act Operas July 29 in Tanglewood Concert Hall; 'Wizard of Oz' in Lyric

July 25 1954

This date in music: 1788, Mozart finished his Symphony No. 40 in G Minor K 550 composed in a month; 1937, Aaron Copland's "Music for Radio" is broadcast, a first performance over Columbia Network.

Syracuse Herald-Am

By E. V. W.

THREE RARELY-HEARD one-act operas will be presented Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival. Opera students of the Berkshire Music Center will participate.

"L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594 by Orazio Becchi, will have its first staged performance in the United States. In New York City in the winter of 1933 it was given a first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting. Hugh Ross will conduct this five-part unaccompanied choral setting.

"THERE AND BACK," a musical sketch by Paul Hindemith, first was performed in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927 and was given in Philadelphia a year later. When the composer was guest teacher on composition in the Berkshire Music Center in 1940, the composition was given in "Tanglewood." The text is by Marcellus Schiffer. It will be sung in the English translation by Marion Farquhar. Samuel Krachmalnik will conduct an orchestra of the Music Center's Department I students.

THE THIRD in the trio of offerings is "The Princess and the Pea," a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher this summer in the Berkshire Center. It is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, book by Benno Elkan, English version by Marion Farquhar. Paul Vermel will lead the student orchestra. The three operas are produced by Fredric Cohen, acting head of the opera department.

THIS AFTERNOON'S concert in The Shed by the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch. Guest soloist will be William Primrose, violinist. Jean Morel conducted last night's concert in The Shed. Next Wednesday night, the Griller String Quartet will present a chamber music concert of Mozart, Bloch and Beethoven works in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Violinist Ruth Posselt, above, will be soloist in the Khachaturian Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood" next Sunday afternoon. Richard Burgin, husband of the soloist and Symphony concertmaster, will conduct the program.

JOURNAL AND GUIDE
NORFOLK, VA.

JUN 26 1954

Betty Allen Eyes Europe

NEW YORK — It has been announced here that the gifted young American mezzo - soprano Betty Allen, will be exchange artist abroad next season in the fourth annual interchange project between our country and France. She will sail next January for Paris concerts and a tour of North Africa.

Betty Allen has been heard in Paris before. Two seasons ago she starred there at the Theatre des Champs Elysees in the A. N. T. A. production of the Gertrude Stein - Virgil Thomson opera "Four Saints in Three Acts," presented by the Committee for Cultural Freedom as part of the International Exposition of the Arts.

• • •

PREVIOUSLY Miss Allen has been appearing in the Broadway run of this opera, and she sings at Lewisohn Stadium this summer during July.

As Carnegie Hall soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, as leading mezzo at the Tanglewood Music Festival, as a Marian Anderson Award winner and a John Hay Whitney fellow, and as an outstanding recitalist throughout the South and East this young mezzo has repeatedly been acknowledged as one of our great new musical talents.

Now a New York resident Miss Allen was born in Ohio and attended Wilberforce college there.

Hartford Times - July 24 1954

Handel, Haydn Give Tanglewood Brilliant Evening

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

Lenox, Mass. — The balancing off of intimate classics against the big shed symphonic glamor is working out to everyone's satisfaction at Tanglewood. More people are hearing more music; the festival is making more money — which it needs — incontestable virtues both.

So Friday nights you hear Bach and Mozart or, as last evening, Handel and Haydn.

You can talk about the string tone of an orchestra and look for homogeniety, richness, surface sheen or a fine edge. Any one or all of these attributes are discoverable in the Boston Orchestra's violin choir at one time or another and then you say it's the best there is. But last night I felt that it was subtlety of speech that distinguished this great orchestra.

• • •

IN HANDEL's Fourth Concerto Grosso the quiet beginning was irresistably transporting. There were utterances of such grace and persuasion as you will not hear this side of kingdom come. Of course Handel has to write them in the first place, but it takes interpretive artists to rediscover and to give them voice. The two chords which closed the last movement but one were like a benediction.

Haydn's G Major Symphony—the one called the "Military"—and his D Minor Mass, the "Nelson" so-called, were as brilliant music as the ear is willing to accept. This represented virtuosity of a high order and a certain artistic tension. The trouble is Haydn didn't write brilliant music, and I hold Charles Munch, in the first half of the program, and Hugh Ross, who conducted the mass, accountable, mainly for overtrying.

The composer did, of course, enlist a bass drum, cymbals and triangle in this smart and high-stepping symphony, but I don't think he intended to make a don of it. Possibly Mr. Munch's dedication to Berlioz for this festival made him overzealous. As a matter of fact he covered some of the niceties with which he has worked out his blithe interpretation.

• • •

THERE IS SO MUCH bad choir and chorus singing in the world that it is a truly edifying experience to hear a crowd of schooled musicians lift up their voices in tune, in ensemble and in understanding of what they are doing. These eager disciples of Hugh Ross at Tanglewood give you just that kind of thrilling experience.

It gets into Mr. Ross' blood too, because he drives them at full speed, full tens on and full power at the time. Everything is loud, loud and fast, fast. Once in the ex-resurrexit he called for a pianissimo and it was like shutting off the sound switch on your TV set. You saw the lips move and heard just about nothing.

This is not good for Haydn and it wasn't good for the soloists either and that was too bad because the four, Soprano Naomi Farr, Contralto Beatrice Krebs, Tenor Marvin Worden and Bass Thomas Stewart, all new to Tanglwood, were about the best so far heard there. Stewart delivered up a wonderful Tui Tollis; Miss Farr etched out the curlicues of Haydn's Fioriture beautifully; and Miss Krebs authored the most relaxed singing of the evening.

Ross has a slashing beat and almost no nuance—but how he can make people sing!

It was a brilliant evening. For my Handel, though, and especially Haydn, I like a little more elegance and natural breathing.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL

JUL 11 1954

On The Records

By RUTH TRIPP

ENTHUSIASM for music of Berlioz has blazed intermittently for years in this country.

Any student of orchestration will remember his introduction to the imposing "Traite d'Instrumentation" by Berlioz. (Mine came from the lively teaching of the late Stuart Mason.)

One's introduction to his music can also be an exciting event, In the days when the supervision of WPA Symphony programs was a part of my work with the Federal Music Project, we had guest conductors at intervals. A budding young conductor, eager to try out his knowledge of Berlioz, came to Providence for a guest appearance. He found the orchestra well prepared and our Sunday evening concert of music by Berlioz with Robert Lawrence of New York on the podium, was a high spot of the season.

The revival of Berlioz has received special impetus recently from the organization of the Berlioz Society. Charles Munch is its president. It's secretary-treasurer is W. Ernest Gillespie, 10 Wheelwright Ave., Exeter, N.H. Many imposing names have been enrolled on the list of members. Dues of $2 yearly, ($1 for students) may be sent to Mr. Gillespie.

Columbia Records has seen fit to honor the society by issuing a beautiful recording of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The performance of this triptych on the sacred theme "The Infant Christ" is conducted by Thomas Scherman. Mary Davenport, contralto; Martial Singher, baritone; Leopold Simoneau, tenor, and Donald Grimm, bass, join forces with Mr. Scherman's Little Orchestra Society and the Choral Art Society, of which William Johnson is director.

The ensemble is fine and special mention goes to Mr. Singher's aria, as Herod, "Toujours ce reve." The choral ensemble is effective in the shepherd's farewell to the Holy Family. The orchestral writing is a rare example of the modernism of Berlioz which, in this instance, is exactly 101 years old.

WESTMINSTER Records have added their fine tribute to the Berlioz revival. (Henry L. Gage, vice president of Westminster, is a member of the advisory board of the Berlioz Society.)

Hermann Scherchen conducts the Londn Symphony Orchestra in a delicately sensitive interpretation of Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, Op. 14. Its five movements, titled Reveries and Passions, Valse Allegra, Scene in the Country, March to the Scaffold, and Dream of a Witch's Sabbath, are elegantly expressive program music, depicting the composer's love for the Irish actress Henrietta Smithson.

Other Westminster recordings which deserve mention are interesting orchestral performances of the Philharmonic Promenade Orchestra, conducted by Sir Adrian Boult. The first, "The Planets" by Gustav Holst, brings back pleasant recollections of Boult's appearance here years ago, as a guest conductor with the Boston Symphony. If recollection serves, there was no choral complement for the last section of the work, "Neptune." However, Westminster, true to its tradition of thoroughness, has included the choral section, sung by the London Philharmonic Choir.

The second Westminster selection, again by an English composer, is "The Wasps" by R. Vaughan Williams. A ballet suite, really incidental music for the play by Aristophanes, it is coupled with another ballet, "Old King Cole," and the two sides make pleasant listening.

Dennis Noble, baritone, sings the solo portions of William Walton's composition "Belshazzar's Feast." This work uses the London Philharmonic Choir also. The words of the text, by Sir Osbert Sitwell, are dramatically set forth.

RCA VICTOR takes notice of Arthur Fiedler's 25th anniversary by combining a nice selection of the music which, year after year, has been most requested at the famous Boston "Pops."

Such things as "Pomp and Circumstance," "None but the Lonely Heart," and "Fledermaus Polka" make this a pleasant diversion, both because it is good music to listen to and because it is a vivid reminder of the many good evenings one has had at the "Pops."

[228]

Kansas City Times - July 22, 1954 THE K

MUSIC IN THE WOODS

MISSOURI AND KANSAS STUDENTS AT MASSACHUSETTS CAMP.

Talented Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg Is One of Group Whose Future Is Promising, a Writer Says.

By Joseph Kaye.

Lenox, Mass., July 21. — The midday sun made the beautiful lawns of Tanglewood glow. The music of an orchestral rehearsal came out of the big shed at the end, the voices from a practicing choral group was heard from a small concert barn, and the sounds of a violin and oboe floated down from the windows of studios on the borders of the lawns.

On the stump of a big tree sat this correspondent, and around him were gathered several students at Tanglewood who came from Missouri and Kansas.

Four Missouri Students at the Tanglewood Camp Near Lenox, Mass., Who Represent as Many Types of Music, Are, Left to Right, Emma Lou Diemer of Warrensburg, Composition; Sam Krachmalnick of St. Louis, Conducting; Mara Hall of Fulton, Violin, and Betsy Lee Bowen of St. Louis, Choral.

A Little World of Music.

No better place for the introduction of highly talented beginning artists could be chosen, for Tanglewood is all music, a little world where nothing else matters much except the service of music.

One of the Missourians was a slight blond girl with wistful features. She is Emma Lou Diemer, a student in composition. She is from Warrensburg, Mo. Her father, Dr. George W. Diemer, is president of the Central Missouri State college there. Miss Diemer, in her early 20s, was graduated from Yale and has been to Belgium on a Fulbright scholarship. Yet she looks like a little girl, shy and hesitant, and in no way gives the impression that she is a brilliant person who already has written a symphony, among other works of large scope, and has had a movement from it performed last year by the Seattle Symphony orchestra. A week ago Miss Diemer's suite for violin and piano was played at a student concert in Tanglewood, and proved a substantial work. Little Miss Diemer is to be watched.

Father a College Head.

Another Missourian is Mara Hall, from Fulton. She is blond and pretty and her father, too, is a college president, Dr. William W. Hall of Westminster college. Miss Hall is a violinist, a pupil of Ruth Posselt, concert violinist, and is still a student at Wellesley college. She comes by her music perhaps through her mother, who is a pianist, organist and coach. After she is graduated Miss Hall will determine whether she will make fiddling her career, although her being in Tanglewood would justify that choice.

The stocky young man in rough sports clothes is Sam Krachmalnick. He is from St. Louis. Krachmalnick is one of the most favored of Tanglewood students. He is in the conducting class, and one of only two active student conductors of the student orchestra.

An active student conductor means one who actually leads the orchestra in rehearsals, sharing the work with the faculty conductors, led by Jean Morel.

Some Professional Experience.

The other conducting students are auditors, who listen and watch. Sam has had some professional experience, notably assisting Morel in directing last season's N.B.C. television performance of Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande." He also plays the French horn and piano. This young man has some refreshing ideas. Asked his opinion on the never-ending Tanglewood discussions of melody in modern compositions (or lack of melody), he said tartly:

"Those that can write melody do; those that can't try tricks." He believes only in music that is good — any kind of music that is good, and adds, "The good music isn't likely to be written in twelve tones." Although of course, he realizes that is getting out on a limb that may snap. You would enjoy talking to Sam.

Richard Renfro, a serious young man who is in the choral section, is from Bethany, Mo. Others in his position would be content to have done with school study, since he already is teaching piano and theory at Western Carolina State college in Cullowhee, N. C. But Renfro is seeking more musical knowledge and uses up his vacation time to get it.

Musical Twins From Wichita.

Two handsome twins with the intellectual features are Robert and Rodney Pierce of Wichita. They are identical twins, and both chose music for a career, but the similarity of choice stopped with their mediums: Robert plays the French horn and his brother the oboe. They picked these instruments simply because they liked them. They are the sons of O. J. Pierce, mathematics teacher in a Wichita public school. Both are students at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston in the winter, and have two more years to go. Then they intend to become professionals. A third brother, James, teaches piano at the Conservatory of Music of Kansas City.

A charming blonde, Betsy Lee Bowen, soprano, is from St. Louis. She is rather unusual in that she says she wants to settle down in marriage instead of making voice her career. She was music librarian of station WEW in St. Louis, with side chores as program arranger. She also helped to form the St. Louis Madrigal society, now broken up because its leader, Hewitt Pantaleone, left the city.

Goals as Fine Amateurs.

Her term in Tanglewood is to give her further knowledge of and experience in choral singing. She loves being a fine amateur—which is certainly a rare distinction.

And finally, there is Mary Dodge of University City, Mo., a most attractive brunette. She is a violist, and says she wouldn't trade that instrument for any other, although she started with the violin. Miss Dodge is still a student at Washington university. She will be graduated next year, and this event will be followed by marriage. She, too, may elect to accept fine amateurism as a career.

Another student from Kansas was unable to join the coming-out party. He is Eugene Orcutt of Topeka, trombonist, who had to do some special rehearsing at the time.

One-Act Operas July 29 in Tanglewood Concert Hall; 'Wizard of Oz' in Lyric

July 25, 1954

This date in music: 1788, Mozart finished his Symphony No. 40 in G Minor K 550 composed in a month; 1937, Aaron Copland's "Music for Radio" is broadcast, a first performance over Columbia Network.

Syracuse Herald-Am

By E. V. W.

THREE RARELY-HEARD one-act operas will be presented Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival. Opera students of the Berkshire Music Center will participate.

"L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1594 by Orazio Vecchi, will have its first staged performance in the United States in New York City in the winter of 1933-it was given a first performance on this continent, in concert form, by the Dessoff Choir, Paul Boepple conducting. Hugh Ross will conduct this five-part unaccompanied choral setting.

"THERE AND BACK," a musical sketch by Paul Hindemith, first was performed in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927 and was given in Philadelphia a year later. When the composer was guest teacher on composition in the Berkshire Music Center in 1940, the composition was given in "Tanglewood." The text is by Marcellus Schiffer. It will be sung in the English translation by Marion Farquhar. Samuel Krachmalnik will conduct an orchestra of the Music Center's Department I students.

THE THIRD in the trio of offerings is "The Princess and the Pea," a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher this summer in the Berkshire Center. It is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale, book by Benno Elkan, English version by Marion Farquhar. Paul Vermel will lead the student orchestra. The three operas are produced by Fredric Cohen, acting head of the opera department.

THIS AFTERNOON'S concert in The Shed by the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Charles Munch. Guest soloist will be William Primrose, violinist. Jean Morel conducted last night's concert in The Shed. Next Wednesday night, the Griller String Quartet will present a chamber music concert of Mozart, Bloch and Beethoven works in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Violinist Ruth Posselt, above, will be soloist in the Khachaturian Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood" next Sunday afternoon. Richard Burgin, husband of the soloist and Symphony concertmaster, will conduct the program.

JOURNAL AND GUIDE
NORFOLK, VA.
JUN 26 1954

Betty Allen Eyes Europe

NEW YORK — It has been announced here that the gifted young American mezzo - soprano Betty Allen, will be exchange artist abroad next season in the fourth annual interchange project between our country and France. She will sail next January for Paris concerts and a tour of North Africa.

Betty Allen has been heard in Paris before. Two seasons ago she starred there at the Theatre des Champs Elysees in the A. N. T. A. production of the Gertrude Stein - Virgil Thomson opera "Four Saints in Three Acts," presented by the Committee for Cultural Freedom as part of the International Exposition of the Arts.

• • •

PREVIOUSLY Miss Allen had been appearing in the Broadway run of this opera, and she sings at Lewisohn Stadium this summer during July.

As Carnegie Hall soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, as leading mezzo at the Tanglewood Music Festival, as a Marian Anderson Award winner and a John Hay Whitney fellow, and as an outstanding recitalist throughout the South and East this young mezzo has repeatedly been acknowledged as one of our great new musical talents.

Now a New York resident Miss Allen was born in Ohio and attended Wilberforce college there.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.
JOURNAL
JUL 11 1954

On The Records

By RUTH TRIPP

ENTHUSIASM for music of Berlioz has blazed intermittently for years in this country.

Any student of orchestration will remember his introduction to the imposing "Traite d'Instrumentation" by Berlioz. (Mine came from the lively teaching of the late Stuart Mason.)

One's introduction to his music can also be an exciting event. In the days when the supervision of WPA Symphony programs was a part of my work with the Federal Music Project, we had guest conductors at intervals. A budding young conductor, eager to try out his knowledge of Berlioz, came to Providence for a guest appearance. He found the orchestra well prepared and our Sunday evening concert of music by Berlioz with Robert Lawrence of New York on the podium, was a high spot of the season.

The revival of Berlioz has received special impetus recently from the organization of the Berlioz Society. Charles Munch is its president. It's secretary-treasurer is W. Ernest Gillespie, 10 Wheelwright Ave., Exeter, N.H. Many imposing names have been enrolled on the list of members. Dues of $2 yearly, ($1 for students) may be sent to Mr. Gillespie.

Columbia Records has seen fit to honor the society by issuing a beautiful recording of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ." The performance of this triptych on the sacred theme "The Infant Christ" is conducted by Thomas Scherman. Mary Davenport, contralto; Martial Singher, baritone; Leopold Simoneau, tenor, and Donald Grimm, bass, join forces with Mr. Scherman's Little Orchestra Society and the Choral Art Society, of which William Johnson is director.

The ensemble is fine and special mention goes to Mr. Singher's aria, as Herod, "Toujours ce reve." The choral ensemble is effective in the shepherd's farewell to the Holy Family. The orchestral writing is a rare example of the modernism of Berlioz which, in this instance, is exactly 101 years old.

WESTMINSTER Records have added their fine tribute to the Berlioz revival. (Henry L. Gage, vice president of Westminster, is a member of the advisory board of the Berlioz Society.)

Hermann Scherchen conducts the London Symphony Orchestra in a delicately sensitive interpretation of Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, Op. 14. Its five movements, titled Reveries and Passions, Valse Allegra; Scene in the Country, March to the Scaffold, and Dream of a Witch's Sabbath, are elegantly expressive program music, depicting the composer's love for the Irish actress Henrietta Smithson.

Other Westminster recordings which deserve mention are interesting orchestral performances of the Philharmonic Promenade Orchestra, conducted by Sir Adrian Boult. The first, "The Planets" by Gustav Holst, brings back pleasant recollections of Boult's appearance here years ago, as a guest conductor with the Boston Symphony. If recollection serves, there was no choral complement for the last section of the work, "Neptune." However, Westminster, true to its tradition of thoroughness, has included the choral section, sung by the London Philharmonic Choir.

The second Westminster selection, again by an English composer, is "The Wasps" by R. Vaughan Williams. A ballet suite, really incidental music for the play by Aristophanes, it is coupled with another ballet, "Old King Cole," and the two sides make pleasant listening.

Dennis Noble, baritone, sings the solo portions of William Walton's composition "Belshazzar's Feast." This work uses the London Philharmonic Choir also. The words of the text, by Sir Osbert Sitwell, are dramatically set forth.

RCA VICTOR takes notice of Arthur Fiedler's 25th anniversary by combining a nice selection of the music which, year after year, has been most requested at the famous Boston "Pops."

Such things as "Pomp and Circumstance," "None but the Lonely Heart," and "Fledermaus Polka" make this a pleasant diversion, both because it is good music to listen to and because it is a vivid reminder of the many good evenings one has had at the "Pops."

Hartford Times - July 27, 1954

Handel, Haydn Give Tanglewood Brilliant Evening

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

Lenox, Mass. — The balancing off of intimate classics against the big shed symphonic glamor is working out to everyone's satisfaction at Tanglewood. More people are hearing more music; the festival is making more money — which it needs — incontestable virtues both.

So Friday nights you hear Bach and Mozart or, as last evening, Handel and Haydn.

You can talk about the string tone of an orchestra and look for homogeniety, richness, surface sheen or a fine edge. Any one or all of these attributes are discoverable in the Boston Orchestra's violin choir at one time or another and then you say it's the best there is. But last night I felt that it was subtlety of speech that distinguished this great orchestra.

* * *

IN HANDEL's Fourth Concerto Grosso the quiet beginning was irresistably transporting. There were utterances of such grace and persussion as you will not hear this side of kingdom come. Of course Handel has to write them in the first place, but it takes interpretive artists to rediscover and to give them voice. The two chords which closed the last movement but one were like a benediction.

Haydn's G Major Symphony—the one called the "Military"—and his D Minor Mass, the "Nelson"—so-called, were as brilliant music as the ear is willing to accept. This represented virtuosity of a high order and a certain artistic tension. The trouble is Haydn didn't write brilliant music, and I hold Charles Munch, in the first half of the program, and Hugh Ross, who conducted the mass, accountable, mainly for overtrying.

The composer did, of course, enlist a bass drum, cymbals and triangle in this smart and high-stepping symphony, but I don't think he intended to make a don of it. Possibly, Mr. Munch's dedication to Berlioz for this festival made him overzealous. As a matter of fact he covered some of the niceties with which he has worked out his blithe interpretation.

* * *

THERE IS SO MUCH bad choir and chorus singing in the world that it is a truly edifying experience to hear a crowd of schooled musicians lift up their voices in tune, in ensemble and in understanding of what they are doing. These eager disciples of Hugh Ross at Tanglewood give you just that kind of thrilling experience.

It gets into Mr. Ross' blood too, because he drives them at full speed, full tens on and full power at the time. Everything is loud, loud and fast, fast. Once in the ex-resurrexit he called for a pianissimo and it was like shutting off the sound switch on your TV set. You saw the lips move and heard just about nothing.

This is not good for Haydn and it wasn't good for the soloists either and that was too bad because the four, Soprano Naomi Farr, Contralto Beatrice Krebs, Tenor Marvin Worden and Bass Thomas Stewart, all new to Tanglwood, were about the best so far heard there. Stewart delivered up a wonderful Tui Tollis; Miss Farr etched out the curlicues of Haydn's Fioriture beautifully; and Miss Krebs authored the most relaxed singing of the evening.

Ross has a slashing beat and almost no nuance—but how he can make people sing!

It was a brilliant evening. For me Handel, though, and especially Haydn, I like a little more elegance and natural breathing.

[228]

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, JULY 24, 1954

Musical Weekends In New England's Hills Attract Throngs

Canadians at Music Centre

AMONG THE TWELVE Canadian students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.—the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival—are (left to right): Pierrette Senay, 2977 Cote St. Catherine Road, Outremont; Louis Burko, 846 Dollard Ave., Outremont; William K. Rogers, 3 Grafton St., Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Anthony Ginter, 1704 Albert Road, Windsor, Ontario; and Mrs. Keith Rogers of Charlottetown.

Tanglewood Tale

Continued from Page 13

and innocent eyes of a child dazzled by the lights of a Christmas tree."

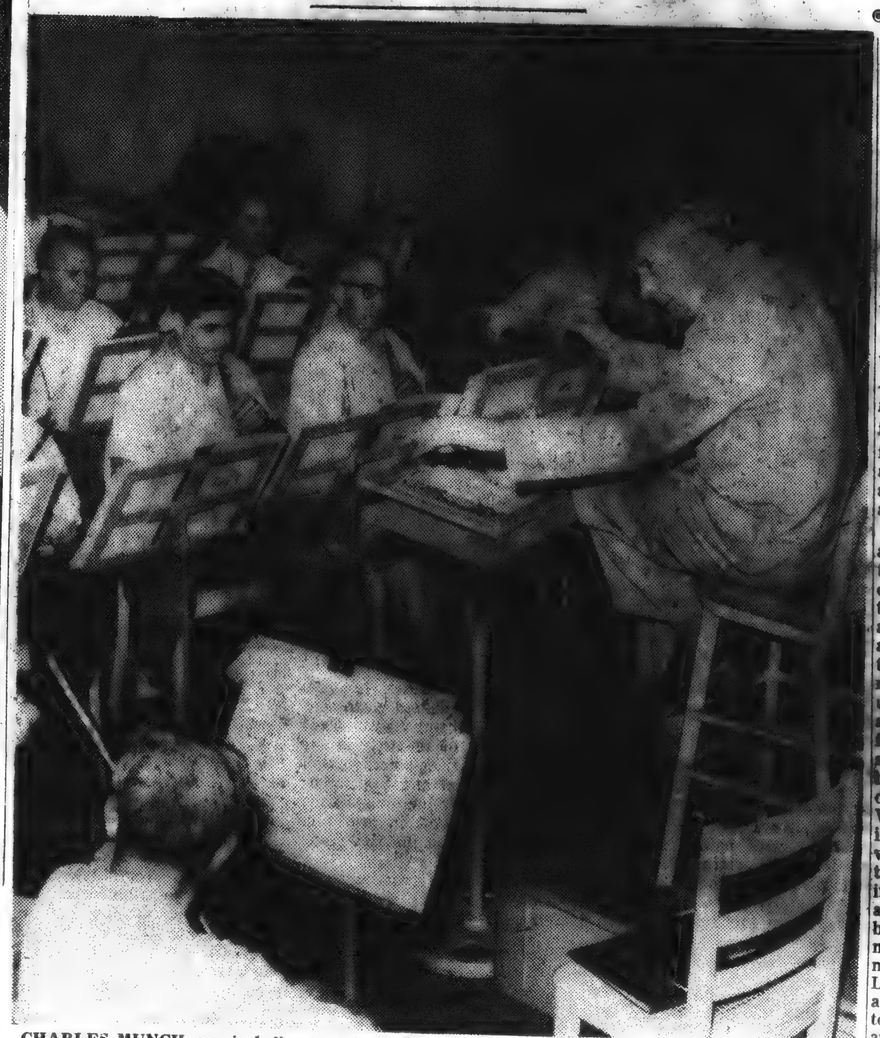
TWELVE STUDENTS FROM CANADA

The students come from 41 states and seven foreign countries, including 12 from Canada. Louis Burko, a youthful Montrealer who directs his own choir at home, is planning to become an orchestral conductor, under the tutorship of the same teachers who once taught Leonard Bernstein, a Tanglewood graduate. Charlottetown is represented by a mother-son team—Mrs. Keith Rogers, organist and president of a radio broadcasting company, and William, who is studying composition under a Canadian Government scholarship.

At noon, when classes adjourn, the students converge from all parts of the campus to have a meal in the row of tents that stand near Tanglewood's main entrance. Here other visitors can order a salad or sandwich and eavesdrop on spirited conversation about the morning's rehearsal or the program scheduled for the evening. When dusk falls, 10,000 voyagers start moving toward the music shed, where men and women of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in white jackets and gowns, tune up for their concert under the stars. Some people prefer to sit in the shelter of the shed, but a couple of thousand spread blankets on the grass and have the music blown to them on the cool evening breeze. When the concert is over, the thousands of cars inch from the parking lots—some of them driven by chauffeurs, others, of 1934 vintage, carrying an overload of teen-agers.

Jerry Clark's New York

Tanglewood Tale—or Debussy Under the Pines



CHARLES MUNCH, musical director of the Boston Symphony, is caught here waving a remonstrative finger at the members of the orchestra during a Tanglewood Music Festival rehearsal. Munch will be one of the guest conductors of the Orchestra of Les Concerts Symphoniques de Montreal during the coming winter season. (Other picture on page 15)

NEW YORK, July 24 — Every Sunday a special train leaves New York at 8.20 a.m., carrying hundreds of people who want a day's outing in the Berkshire hills, where they can relax under elms and tall pines and listen to some of the continent's finest musicians.

These are but a few of the mass of excursionists who have been moving toward Lenox, Mass., by train, car and bus, and will continue to do so until August 15, when the huge, annual operation Tanglewood ends its 15th season. The people come from all parts of eastern Canada and the US, the total figure, in a six-week period, running to about 130,000.

The Berkshire Festival offers a variety of attractions during the week, but it is on the weekend, when the full 104-man Boston Symphony Orchestra is in attendance for Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts, that the bulk of music lovers make their pilgrimage. I drove up last weekend and parked alongside cars with licence plates from Ohio and Ontario, Minnesota and New Brunswick, Quebec and Virginia. For a radius of 40 miles the countryside of Western Massachusetts bears the imprint of gypsies, in streamlined vehicles, scurrying to find shelter and food, with the one object in mind—to have as much time as possible on Tanglewood's beautifully kept grounds. It is nearly impossible to get last-minute accommodation near Lenox, the centre of activity, and many of the travellers have to seek a temporary home as far away as Albany, driving the hour or so to each concert. But, inconvenience or not, they revive through Tanglewood's rich diet.

WHERE HAWTHORNE WALKED AND WROTE

On a Saturday morning you can wander over expanses of lawn and meadow, covering 210 acres, on the same estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne walked a century ago and wrote his "Tanglewood Tales" and "The House of Seven Gables." The use of the grounds is yours during the day, for the price of $1, and you can sit in the tremendous pie-shaped music shed, listening to the Boston Symphony rehearse Debussy's "La Mer" for the evening program, or if you want to you can still hear the music and loll on the grass outside and take in the sun. Here you see 10-year-olds, in rapt attention, or 80-year-olds, some reading, some knitting, but always with an ear turned in the direction of the music. A few yards off, under an elm, a girl in jeans has an easel beside her. She paints the scene, pausing every once in a while to close her eyes and listen to the crash of waves and the rustle of the wind as interpreted by the musicians.

THE sound of music comes from other nearby buildings, where students, privileged to study at the Berkshire Music Centre, are engaged in advanced courses that emphasize group performance. A chamber music class is playing Beethoven's "String Quartet in E-flat Major, Opus 74". The sound carries to the next building, in which the student choir is singing a Bach Motet. In a barn, down the hill and near Hawthorne's restored "Little Red House," the student symphony orchestra is going through Prokofieff's Symphony No. 6, under the direction of a 24-year-old conductor. About half of the members of the orchestra are girls, and ages run from 16 to 27.

The music centre was established by the late Serge Koussevitsky in 1940, as part of the regular festival, and annually a student body of 400 is chosen from among 1,500 applicants. Most of these students have already had fundamental training in conservatories and intend to continue as professionals. But some of them, enrolled in the study group, are simply amateurs who wish to spend their vacations in an atmosphere of music. Among the ranks are housewives, social workers, foremen, attorneys, architects, bookkeepers and artists.

What is the attraction of music? The student hears an answer from Charles Munch, the director of their centre. "In the history of humanity," says Munch, "spiritual values are the most precious gift that is passed on from generation to generation. It is only by protecting and supporting spiritual values that we find the road to salvation. Never forget that the aim of music is above all to elevate us beyond our miserable human condition. Music will reward us a hundredfold if we try to hear its message with our hearts and to listen to it with a kind of wonder reflected in the clear

Music

Weekend Concerts at Festival Feature Toch Work, Soloists

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE CONCERT in the great Shed at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch marked the completion of half of the season's schedule. The program ended with Ernest Toch's second symphony. Mr. Toch is this year's guest in the composition class of the Berkshire Music Center, the school which is conducted in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts. He was in Pittsfield in 1938 as pianist in his own quintet which he played with the Roth quartet at the 10th Coolidge festival on South Mountain.

Mr. Toch has explained that the inspiration for this symphony, written in 1951, came to him through his respect and reverance for Albert Schweitzer, Mr. Munch's brother-in-law. The first movement is marked "allegro fanatico." The beginning by the brass is an intense frenzy of near hysterical urgency but it soon quiets comparatively and the many-fibred contrapuntal strands remain remarkably unravelled and lucid, considering the busy weaving given to each and every instrument in the large orchestra for which he writes. It is rhapsodic in nature, yet the lyric line is long and sustained and the harmonic structure while involved and polytonal sounds reasonable and logical.

* * *

THE PLACING of certain tone effects in definite productive sources is especially successful. Munch gave it a remarkably well integrated performance. Toch ends each of the first three movements on a diminishing and receding tonal device and the fourth one has a tympani solo of several bars to give an unmistakable final curtain to the majestic devotion of the symphony. The conductor called the composer to the stage from his seat in the audience and he was enthusiastically recognized and applauded. This is inspired and fresh musical thinking of an erudite musician, in remarkable possession of all the resources of the orchestra.

Before intermission William Primrose was the soloist in Berlioz' symphony with viola solo, "Harold in Italy." It was a performance in the grand manner. The first statement by the solo viola, after the very long orchestral introduction, was played with serene poise and noble spaciousness. The answer then was played with a distant and faint echo which a lesser artist would not have dared. Several very minor details of intonation and execution prevented the performance from being absolutely impeccable but the magnitude of the conception was large and broad, and very much in the spirit of the poetic child of Byron which was the inspiration of Berlioz. The concert had started with Berlioz' overture to "Beatrice and Benedict," an obvious favorite of Munch and which he conducted with the amicable familiarity of cordial intimacy.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Jean Morel, head of the conducting department of the Music Center, was the conductor in a program of generally pleasing and romantic music: Prokofieff's sixth symphony, the Liszt E flat piano concerto with Nicole Henriot as soloist, and, after intermission, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's Enigma variations.

The Prokofieff was played on the same platform three years ago with Mr. Munch conducting. The main two themes are played with muted strings giving a character, in spite of frequent more violent contrasts, of a quiet mood in the first movement. The muted violins announce the first theme; the second is given to the violas coupled with the English horn, an especially effective device. The slow movement, largo, is the most telling in sonority yet, paradoxically, in opposition to the swifter moving but restrained first movement, it is strong and bolder.

* * *

MISS HENRIOT cavorted in the Liszt concerto like a colt let out to pasture. In the happily exposed solo her steel fingers and wrists flew over the keyboard with a nonchalant security and infectious devil-may-care attitude that carried her audience to a high pitch of happy excitement. Morel gave her good two-way support, letting his own soloists emerge when the piano had the decorative figures and subduing the orchestra when the piano should have its entire spotlight. The Liszt is in great contrast to the solo opportunities which Franck and Copland afforded last week's piano soloists. There the piano was more another instrument of the ensemble whereas Liszt puts his soloist, so to speak, in Times Square at midnight while those of the others of last week leave them in darkest Africa.

* * *

THE LAST HALF of Morel's program was vaguely within similar limits, episodic and fragmentary in the writing. The conductor gave them a proper continuity and the various shades of agitation and repose that the scores contain. The pleasure of a new conductor is usually enhanced by the choice of program he brings. Each man has his preferences and is a partisan of certain schools of music. The Elgar variations were new to Tanglewood and were especially welcome under Morel's understanding baton, even when it flew from his hand.

Manos

TANGLEWOOD PREMIERE was given yesterday afternoon in the Music Shed of Dr. Ernest Toch's Symphony No. 2, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. The Austrian-American composer, in residence this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, at left, follows the score while Mr. Munch rehearses the BSO Saturday for the Sunday afternoon performance. Dr. Toch dedicated the symphony to Mr. Munch's brother-in-law, Albert Schweitzer.

Bowl Assn. To Raise $1,500 For Symphony Work by Foss

Young Composer Accepts Commission To Write Composition Based on Biblical Citation—Benefit Slated Aug. 5

Lukas Foss, Tanglewood composer, conductor and pianist, has accepted a commission from the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. to write a composition on the theme, "I will lift up my eyes unto the hills."

The Biblical citation from the 121st Psalm is the one selected by the association to appear on its awards, including the plaques to be presented to the recent winners of the "House Beautiful" contest conducted among Stockbridge Bowl cottagers.

According to Nathan G. Horwitt, immediate past president of the association and chairman of events, the commission to be paid Mr. Foss is a goal of $1,500 to be raised in part at a concert scheduled Aug. 5 on the grounds at Wheatleigh. This will be the second annual concert sponsored by the association.

Listed on the program are informal performances by well-known singers, instrumentalists and composers. Tickets are on sale at the Lenox Library and Whitestone Photo in Lenox and the full program will be released later this week.

In announcing the commission, Mr. Horwitt explained that it was conceived as a concrete way in which the association can encourage the creation of good music. At the same time, he said, the psalm will symbolize the function of the association in preserving the beauty of the Stockbridge Bowl area—an area which has become associated with the performance of good music, he added.

Mr. Horwitt noted the possibility of the composition being of sufficient stature to have its premiere at Tanglewood. It is hoped that through its dedication, the work may become known as the Stockbridge psalm, he said, and become significant in the world of music.

Fiedler, Boston Pops Orchestra Will Lead Tanglewood Parade

Brenda Lewis

Thomas Schippers

TANGLEWOOD — The Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting will highlight the Tanglewood on Parade program Friday, Aug. 13, it was announced today.

Mr. Fiedler, who is celebrating his 25th year as conductor of the Pops orchestra, is bringing the celebrated group of musicians to Tanglewood for the first time. He is now conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for Tanglewood on Parade, and return to the West Coast immediately.

Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanada concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

Benefits Music Center

The Tanglewood on Parade program annually benefits the Berkshire Music Center. Last summer 8,500 attended. Festivities, from 6 to 11 p.m. include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early 20s, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim when, at the age of 19, he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul." Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with equal distinction during several seasons with the New York Opera Company, including the world premier on April 1 last of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," which will have its New England premiere by Tanglewood's opera department Aug. 2 and 3. Mr. Schippers has also conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras.

Opera, Musical Comedy Star

Soloist on Mr. Schippers half of Tanglewood on Parade concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome." When she sang this role with the New York City Opera Company, critic Olin Downes of the New York Times wrote: "She held the audience breathless. Her interpretation was distinguished throughout by remarkable intelligence, dramatic intensity and taste. Masterly."

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme," and did a coast-to-coast tour with the Met's production of Johann

Welcome to Tanglewood, during a picnic before the Sunday concert, is extended by Gail Rector, right, assistant to Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager-elect of the Boston Symphony. Left to right, front row, is: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Girard (France), Miss Nid Tongootai (Thailand). Left to right, rear: Miss Betty Thomas (Australia), S. Selleke (Ethiopia), Miss Nilufer Tulea (Turkey), Miss Luz Arias, Lima, Peru.

[230]

N.Y. Herald Trib July 26

Munch, Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Music Shed

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 25.—Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Berlioz and Ernst Toch brought to an end the third week end of musical festivities in the Berkshires this afternoon in Tanglewood's vast Music Shed. Berlioz' "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist, and Ernst Toch's second symphony were the plums of the occasion, and for good measure, the conductor began his concert with the renowned Frenchman's overture to the opera "Beatrice and Benedict."

As is his way with Berlioz, Mr. Munch conducted like a demon. Sonorities raged, themes flew, the shed shook. It is Mr. Munch's contention—to judge by his performance of the day—that much of Berlioz is meant to rouse the listener from his seat, to lift him high with the full vigor of a composer who knew neither timidity nor fear. To accomplish this end, when the propitious moment hoves into hearing, Mr. Munch and his orchestra let loose with orchestral sounds and textures that are duplicated rarely, if ever.

Modern Harold

He is not, however, compulsive about storming the arena with tonal barrages, and neither, for that matter, is William Primrose. Indeed, a good part of their performance — notably "Harold's" second movement — would not have been inappropriate played in church. And that is as it should be. In its central sections, the work builds its sonorous steeples with a sustained calm that, in expressivity, is diametrically opposed to the more orgiastic Berlioz methods.

For his part, Mr. Primrose played the obbligato viola passages with overwhelming assurance and elan. His conception of the piece changes slightly with every performance, a feat which accounts for the vibrancy he instills in phrase after phrase. Because of it, he has become a kind of modern Harold telling his tale freshly to all with a desire to hear.

Toch's Second

Mr. Toch's second symphony, which was played last season in New York, is a brave and heroic number that fails to jell for any of several reasons. Its formal outlines are unclear, and its harmonies are unoriginal and not distinctive. These facts alone explain the symphony's tendency to wander, to lose its course and idle in filigree and figuration. In addition, despite the work's abundant craft and inventiveness, the symphony as a whole frequently compromises with the obvious and makes its points through orchestral devices that have by now given up their pungency.

Last night's concert, an event of major significance, was led by Jean Morel, director of the Juilliard School of Music's Orchestral Department, and present chief of Tanglewood's tribe of budding conductors. For his program, presented before an audience of 7,750, Mr. Morel had chosen Prokofiev's Symphony No. 6 in E flat minor, Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Nicole Henriot as soloist, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Morel Lauded

At the end of the performance there was no doubt, I imagine, that Mr. Morel's place as a conductor is firmly fixed. He is, his work of the evening trumpeted, both a masterful musician and a wielder of the baton to whom wizardry is second nature. Beginning with the Prokofiev symphony, the French-born maestro immediately proclaimed his high seriousness of purpose, his fidelity to a composer's stated intentions and his ability to draw from an orchestra not his own the very best it has to offer.

The symphony itself is a great one—a dark and massive panorama of despair. Save for its final movement, a stinging vivace, the work is slow, and feeds on veiled and tortured sentiments. It is ever brooding and somber and sardonic, with the lower strings and brasses hacking away violently while its main themes whistle chillingly through the air.

Boundless Power

All of these features Mr. Morel drew forth with boundless power. It is no light chore to keep constantly in motion two long movements which unfold leisurely without short cuts of any kind. But the conductor did just that, as did he also probe to the symphony's core, revealing its spirit, finally, for all to grasp and feel.

At last night's concert, an event no less dashing and inspired was his reading of the Elgar "Enigma" and Strauss' "Don Juan." The variations lean heavily on the element of contrast, thereby insuring that each new episode will do more than merely mirror and repeat what has gone before. In Mr. Morel's performance, these contrasts were luminously sketched. Thematic contours were kept skin-tight, and inner details were throughout made to lock snugly into the work's over-all design.

"Don Juan" Soared

And "Don Juan" also soared. From first to last it was properly turbulent and amorous, though the usual procedure of allowing its wrenching love ties to linger endlessly was not followed. Clean-cut describes the score's rendition—clean-cut and surging. That, I take it, is what the work is meant to be.

Less satisfactory in every way was Miss Henriot's performance of the Liszt concerto. The young and delicate pianist was simply not able to swashbuckle as the work demands, and while she produced a ringing and resonant tone, she did not, in essence, bring to the piece the verve and virtuosity necessary to its success. It was, in fact, a lukewarm Liszt we heard. And, truly, a luke-warm Liszt is no Liszt at all.

Boston Symphony Brilliant In Two Weekend Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra presented two concerts this weekend in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, both of them superb, brilliant highlights of the third week of musical activities at the Berkshire music festival.

Yesterday afternoon the inspired baton of Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra music director, swept his musical charges through a lilting performance of Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture, an eloquent and integrated reading of the same composer's "Harold in Italy," with viola solo taken by William Primrose, and a violent and dramatic presentation of Toch's Second Symphony.

The overture to Berlioz' last opera, based on the Shakespeare comedy "Much Ado About Nothing," introduced two fine themes, both lovely and charming. It admittedly is not the greatest Shakespearean overture ever written, it is eminently listenable. Mr. Munch made the most of the gaiety and spirit contained in the score.

Such coordination in interpretation and tempi, such rapport flowed between conductor-soloist in the Berlioz "Harold in Italy" symphony that a more integrated, thoughtful performance of the work is difficult to imagine.

William Primrose, viola soloist, played with lush liquid tone that melted and blended with the colorings of the ensemble. His is an intelligent conception of the piece, embodying to the fullest degree the autobiographical personification of the lyrical line.

Mr. Munch seemed specifically interested in two aspects of the Berlioz—the rousing, unintimidated composer in his wilder moments and the more pensive aspects that he incorporates in the audio- picture. The conductor blended the two facets lovingly and carefully, soaring with the wild and gliding with the mild. The whole performance was a memorable musical experience.

Toch's second symphony, which received the full dramatic treatment at the talented hands of Mr. Munch, is a musical achievement of high order. The composer has attempted a serious presentation and sound-ification of an ideal, and the ideal is almost achieved.

The work abounds in craft and euphonious cacophonies, if such a paradoxical juxaposition is permitted, a powerful and surging expression of meaning which Mr. Munch made strikingly evident.

Jean Morel was guest conductor at Saturday evening's concert in the big Shed. While his movements did seem at times extraneous and unnecessarily frenetic, it was indisputably clear that his conceptions were sound and comprehensive.

The little-heard Prokofieff Sixth Symphony opened the program. The work, composed in 1947, is a great and powerful depiction of despair. Somber and magnificent the stately first three movements unfold their tragic themes, concluded by a bitter Vivace in the last movement. The deep-hued and tortured reminiscences of the first movement cloud the tonal horizons of the scherzo-like last section. The work is brooding, somber, dark, a magnificent masterful revelation.

Mr. Morel understood fully the composer's stated intensions. All the subtle nuances and modulations were there, as well as all the intense vibrancy inherent in the score. It was an exciting achievement.

Nicole Henriot was the piano soloist in Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1, performing in the grand manner all the pianistic flashes and cadenzas that are highlights of the piece. The concerto itself is unrewarding, but Miss Henriot was breathtaking. Skillfully executed passages, thrilling and resonant, soared above the orchestra. Unfortunately, purple patches are not the desired artistic effect, but spottiness is inherent in the work, rather than a characteristic of the performer. In spite of it, however, she was marvelous.

A series of inspired melodies, ranging from the rapid-fire to the languidly amorous, characterized the Strauss' "Don Juan." Mr. Morel, for the most part, let the sensual music speak for itself, producing however, some lovely modulations and accentuations, especially in the second love episode. It was a glorious performance of a glorious work.

Elgar's "Enigma" Variations was a study in contrasts. Mr. Morel realized to the full the romantic and sentimental content of each of the fragments, and highlighted the over-all thematic construction of the piece. It was a lovely and delightful thing to hear.

A total of more than 15,000 people were on hand this Saturday and Sunday to hear the concerts. As usual, the performances were of such calibre that even the most fastidious could not complain. Both programs received top quality treatment from Mr. Munch, Mr. Morel, et al. — B. D.

Mlle. Henriot Wins Plaudits At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lee, Mass., July 26 —Nichole Henriot, young pianist heard with the Mattatuck Musical Art series in Waterbury Women's Club auditorium last fall, gave the Saturday night audience in the Music Shed at Tanglewood a vigorous and delicate performance of the Liszt "Concerto for Piano, in E-Flat Major," which made many wonder how so slight a young woman could pack such power into her playing.

Called back to the platform again and again by the audience of 7,750, Miss Henriot had played the Liszt colorfully. Her program gave much more opportunity for solo piano performance than had been the case last week end when two other young pianists had performed.

Jean Morel, appearing as guest conductor, gave a fine program in the Strauss "Don Juan" and the Boston Symphony Orchestra had responded so well to his leadership that it was called upon to take two bows at intermission. Prokofieff's "Symphony No. 6" opened the program and the orchestra was particularly fine in the lovely vivace.

Elgar's "Variations on an Original Theme" with its 14 variations, including drums, cymbals, and organ concluded the program.

Despite a light shower before the performance started, there were thousands of music lovers on the grass and the lawns.

The Sunday program presented William Primrose as soloist and the music of Berlioz and Toch.

The Festival will continue with a full program this week.

S. M.

ND SUN, MONDAY, JULY 26, 1954.

Music

NY World Tel + Sun

15,000 Cheer Tanglewood Bills

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26.—The last two concerts—Saturday evening and yesterday afternoon — of the Tanglewood weekend were devoted to the louder sonorities, you might say. The Boston Symphony has not, in my experience, been called on to blow and scrape and pound so much during any other two consecutive days up here.

Most of this business was necessary, for the simple reason that it is called for by the various scores concerned. Yet I can't help feeling that some of it may have been due to an excess of enthusiasm by conductors as well as musicians concerned.

Morel Debut.

Apart from all that, there were some rather good things. The Tanglewood debut of Jean Morel, for example. Mr. Morel took the podium Saturday night and did a right notable job of leading the orchestra through four works, none of which is a sinecure. Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony started off proceedings. Although the opening phrases were a bit confusing to your reporter, the rest of it went with such animation as to stir the listeners into giving him a grand ovation at the end.

Then came the Liszt Piano Concerto in E-Flat Major, which claimed Nicole Henriot as soloist. There Mr. Morel did a beautiful job of accompanying, while the young woman gave a man-sized version of the louder piano music. Contrariwise, the softer passages—the more feminine ones if anything—did not get so brilliant a treatment. The Strauss "Don Juan" and the Elgar "Enigma" variations were the other Saturday items. These, too, Mr. Morel conducted with much authority, though as I suggested previously the loud places in all these works were just too loud.

Berlioz and Toch.

Yesterday's concert, led by Charles Munch, offered the Berlioz "Harold in Italy" symphony and the Ernst Toch Second Symphony as major fare. Berlioz's "Beatrice and Benedict" overture opened proceedings.

Viola soloist in the "Harold" was William Primrose, who has taken an undisputed monopoly on its interpretation, and, believe me, none can play it better. Warm, gentle, refined, highly communicative, his performance was a joy.

The Toch symphony is dedicated to that eminent man of music, medicine, philosophy, the humanities — Albert Schweitzer. The score is something of a cathedral erected in his honor, a place where all may praise his greatness in the most stentorian terms. Trouble is, though, that the music, while impressive as to ideas and might of sound, is not really interesting, much as one may admire the composer's clever manipulation of some details.

Anyway, the two concerts drew some 15,000 persons. They were simply wild about everything.

July 29/54

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFI

Opera at Tanglewood

Copland's 'The Tender Land' In N. E. Premiere Next Week

"The Tender Land," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, newly revised by its composer who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center, will have its second production anywhere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be given by the students of the opera department in the Theater-Concert Hall, at 8.30 p. m. next Monday, and Tuesday.

All Seats Reserved

Application for seats — all seats are reserved for both performances —may be made to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society through voluntary contributions that supports the summer school. Address is the Friends' Office, Tanglewood, or telephone Lenox 600.

Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department, had planned "The Tender Land" for Tanglewood this year before the opera was given its premiere by the New York City Opera Company at City Center, New York, on April 1. Cohen's production will be an entirely different one from that in New York, in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

"I have revised the opera," Copland states, "in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." The Tanglewood production is in three acts, with three added scenes, and its period is the spring of 1910.

"The Tender Land," finished in March, was written on a commission from the League of Composers, from a grant by Richard Rodgers Hammerstein, 2d.

Libretto by Everett

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Walker Evans in a book about Southern tenant farmers in the 1930's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," by James Agee. It tells the story of Laurie, the elder of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the eve of her graduation to work out her own life beyond the horizon of the farm.

Frederic Cohen will be assisted in the staging of the Berkshire Music Center production by Elsa Kahl. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenchip, costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen. Thomas De Gaetani is technical director, Thomas Garrett master electrician. The orchestra of Department 1 students will be conducted by Frederic Waldman. Two different casts of opera department students will sing the work.

BOSTON MAS
POST

JUL 10 1954

Berkshire Music Fete In Debut Before 3000

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 9—Charles Munch and 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the 1954 Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theatre Concert Hall before an audience of nearly 3000. In accordance with Berkshire tradition, the Bach Brandenburg Concertoes, minus the fourth, formed the program. The standard of composition was higher than the standard of performance by the Berkshire Orchestra, an abridged edition of the Boston Symphony made up largely of faculty members at the music centre.

An unusually taxing schedule which began in October of last year has resulted in an obviously fatigued orchestra with considerable energy still but with a noticeable decline in precision. The two concertoes if F major, with difficult parts for wind instruments, gave the greatest trouble. In the first concerto, the horns are required to play florid passages utilizing harmonics in almost impossible registers. Tonight the horns overshot their mark in both intonation and rhythm.

Special Trumpet

The Second Concerto demands a specially built trumpet which sounds like a cross between the oboe and the flute. Roger Voisin, first trumpeter of the Boston Symphony, scored a personal triumph in this demanding concerto. However, the balance between the concertino and the tutti was completely dominated by this instrument.

In the Fifth Concerto Lukas Foss, a popular figure here at Tanglewood, was the capable soloist.

It is axiomatic that the better the orchestra plays the more expansive the tempo that the conductor can take in this complex polyphonic music. If the music is cleanly played, Bach weaves the most intricate colorful tonal fabric, which proves a constant delight.

Pace Quickened

Tonight Mr. Munch, realizing that the orchestra at times was neither with him nor even acting as a unit, quickened his pace to such a point that the lines became blurred, and lost power to hold interest.

The playing, however, improved as the concert progressed and by the time that Mr. Foss joined the orchestra for the Fifth Concerto the Boston Symphony sounded like the virtuoso instrument which it is.

Daily Hampshire Gazette, N
July 26

[231]

ENACTING A SCENE from the 1594 madrigal opera, "L'Amfiparnaso," by Orazio Vecchi, one of three operas on the program tonight in the theater concert hall at Tanglewood, are these students of the Berkshire Music Center, Lorenzo Malfatti, on floor, Antonio Giardino, Naomi Farr and Thomas Stuart. On the same program are two 1927 comic operas, "There and Back" by Paul Hindemith, and "The Princess and the Pea" by Ernest Toch. The operas are open to Friends of the Music Center.

Manos

Notes and Footnotes

ON ALL COUNTS, the most heavily traveled part of the Berkshires is not Route 20. It is the Tanglewood lawn, during a concert, and on foot. The ebb and flow is steady and unaffected by the music, be it fast or slow. Probably like many another, we had assumed the tide was composed of the same people, wandering to and fro, moved by who knows what mystic current emanating from the orchestra. Sunday we took it upon ourselves to follow a few to discover what orbits they followed, what moved them, and perchance learn if we weren't missing something by sitting placidly on the grass.

Well, surprise. Fully 90 per cent of those we tailed were honestly moving to another part of the lawn, and there flopped down and stayed. But as they went down, others rose, also moved elsewhere and sat, the net result being a steady movement of mostly different listeners. What they gained by moving we cannot say, since the music sounds the same from all parts of the lawn. Maybe the grass looked greener and softer over yonder.

But the odd 10 per cent; there is a patron of a different gait. Some wandered aimlessly, in a brown study, avoiding recumbent forms as by instinct. Many carried camera cases slung over their shoulders, but if they contained a Kodak, or whatever is doubtful. None was ever unlimbered in our sight. Professional photographers of course moved unobtrusively everywhere, hearing nothing, seeing everything, snapping their shutters and silently moving on. Mixed through this traffic was the arrival of late-comers who charged through the gates right up to the final number. Either they were connoisseurs interested in only part of the program, or thought it was continuous, like a movie.

At this point, our survey ended. Seated folks were giving us hard looks, and we overheard a lady reasonably enough mutter, "Why doesn't he sit down!" We did. The Berlioz sounded just as good as when standing. We hadn't been missing a thing.

Manos

STAGE DEBUT of nine-year-old Eve Rubin, who is summering at Stockbridge Bowl, will be made when she plays the role of Beth in Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," which has its New England premiere Aug. 2-3 at Tanglewood. Chatting with Eve, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell I. Rubin of Buffalo, N.Y., is Frederic Cohen, who will produce and stage the opera.

Arthur Fiedler, who has long since staked a firm claim to the broad territory between jazz and "serious" music, was a natural for a major role in this year's "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities . . . At $6 a head, and with Mayor

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

WHEN AARON Copland's first full-length opera, "The Tender Land," had its premiere performance in New York last April, the critical reception could best be described as politely lukewarm. Although Mr. Copland's music came in for lavish praise by many of the reviewers, the libretto was found to be lacking in several respects. The actions of the characters were considered unbelievable and unlifelike, and one critic advised the audience to ignore the happenings and just listen to the music.

As might be expected, librettist Horace Everett was upset by remarks like this and started brooding about ways and means to strengthen the dramatic motivation. Mr. Copland had left for Europe three days after the premiere (this had absolutely nothing to do with the critical reception to his opera), and the librettist sent him long letters outlining the new sections. "He cogitated and cogitated," says Mr. Copland, "and he finally decided on a final form."

* * *

UPON HIS RETURN from Europe, the composer settled down at his barn-studio in Richmond to write the music for the new sections of the work. None of the music has been changed in the new version. The libretto has been revised and three new scenes added so Mr. Copland's main task was to write new music for the extra portions. "We revised the opera," said Mr. Copland, "in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had been sketched in only lightly."

Mr. Copland and his librettist had taken for the basic theme of their opera what they assumed was a basic theme—"all young people want to leave home." They had also assumed that the audience would recognize this basic theme, but they were basically wrong in this. "When you add music to a text, you lose emphasis on many points," said Mr. Copland. "We hope to have rectified this in the present version."

* * *

MR. COPLAND first tried his hand in the operatic medium about 15 years ago when he composed a children's piece called "The Second Hurricane." He had long thought of doing an opera with a bucolic theme and when he had enough music in his notebooks, he approached Mr. Everett, a painter and poet, about doing the libretto. He gave Everett a book by James Agee called "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," in which Agee and photographer Edward Weston had described the plight of the Alabaman farmers during the lean depression years. Mr. Copland had hoped that Everett would fashion a plot out of the visit of two Northerners to a Southern middle-class farm family.

But Everett was captivated by a picture of a mother and daughter in the book and never even bothered to read the text. He told the composer that he could do nothing with the original idea but that a frame could be laid from the pictures generated by this picture. The scene was shifted from the South to the Midwest and the photographer and writer became two ordinary drifters. The plot deals with the graduation of a young farm girl from high school and its effect on her family, none of whom had ever achieved that great distinction. There is a brief love affair with one of the drifters (which involves a 12-minute duet), a moment of high tragedy and then a final decision by the girl to leave the farm and her family and seek her destiny on her own.

* * *

SOMEHOW the narrative and the music did not jell and hardly any of the dramatic poignancy, hovering tragedy or final exultation registered with the desired impact. The authors hope to have overcome any and all deficiencies in the present version. At the suggestion of Gian-Carlo Menotti, they have added scenes and changed the structure from two to three acts. The period is now the spring of 1910 rather than the grim mid-1930s.

It is an expensive affair to revise an opera because of the changes that have to be made in the printed librettos, scores and orchestral parts and the lean, genial composer hopes that he and his collaborator have achieved their purpose this time around. The present production is being handled by Frederic Cohen, acting head of the opera department at Tanglewood, and his staging will be closer to Mr. Copland's original intention than was the one put on in New York. The composer wrote this work to be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups and he feels that the small, intimate theater shed at Tanglewood will offer the perfect medium to project what he and his partner had visualized.

Aaron Copland

* * *

BE THAT AS it may, next Monday night will tell the story. Unlike the first time, Mr. Copland has no European trip lined up and he will stay and face the music no matter what the critics have to say. They will undoubtedly be enthusiastic because the new music for the revision was composed in Richmond and everybody knows that Richmond bucolic music is the finest in the world. The only trouble is that no girl has ever left the farm in Richmond and once again Mr. Copland and Mr. Everett might find that the plot can not be reconciled with the music. The tender land is a lot tougher than most people realize.

Junior Carnival Will Benefit Tanglewood Fund

After an interval of five years, the Williams Street Carnival is being revived for the benefit of the Tanglewood scholarship fund.

Thursday from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. there will be available at 500 Williams St. pony rides, penny pitching, BB gun matches, croquet tournaments, balloon darts and various other thrilling games and events to delight the public. There will be refreshments and ice cold drinks.

A 16-mm. movie camera will be given as a door prize.

Twelve-year-old Michael G. Miller, whose sister and brother started the carnival five years ago, is chairman. He will be assisted by Gary W. Tucker, manager, and Norman C. McClintock, assistant manager.

The public is implored to attend.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 9 - 1954

Personals

The Misses Jonelle Stickel of Waldo St. and Catherine Dower of Essex St. are attending the summer music school at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, for six weeks. Both are teachers of music with the Holyoke public school system.

[232]

Springfield UNION - July 27

'Tanglewood On Parade' Set for Night of Aug. 13

Berkshire Music Center Benefit to Feature Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops, Brenda Lewis, Thomas Schippers

Tanglewood will be "On Parade" Friday, Aug. 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 8500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival.

Festivities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., will include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Fiedler in 25th Year

For the first time in the great Tanglewood Music Shed, The Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now conducting the Art Commission Pop Concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires for "Tanglewood on Parade" and return to California immediately.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early 20's, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim when, at the age of 19, he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul." Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with equal distinction during several seasons with the New York City Opera Co., including the world premiere last April 1 of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," which will have its New England premiere by Tanglewood's opera department on Aug. 2 and 3. Mr. Schippers has also conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras.

Scene From Salome

Soloist on Mr. Schippers' half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome." When she sang this taxing role with the New York City Opera Co., critic Olin Downes of The New York Times wrote: "She held the audience breathless. Her interpretation was distinguished throughout by remarkable intelligence, dramatic intensity and taste. Masterly."

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme," and did a coast-to-coast tour with the Met's production of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." She created the role of Birdie in the original Broadway production of Marc Blitzstein's opera "Regina," and sang the title role in the New York City Opera Company's revival last year. On Broadway she has starred in "The Merry Widow," "The Gypsy Baron" and last season in the musical comedy, "The Girl in Pink Tights."

Tickets Available

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox 600. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats, at $5 and front sections (reserved) of the Music Shed, at $4 and $3 is a performance of opera at 4 p. m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the shed's rear sections. All ticket-holders are invited to attend demonstrations, at 6 p. m., by the Berkshire Music Center's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield are vice chairmen; Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale is chairman of the committee for the sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., as vice chairman. Mrs. Sanborn is also heading the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to lucky ticket holders after the concert.

The program is as follows:

4 p. m.—Opera scenes (students of Department IV), formal gardens (for box-holders and reserved seat patrons only).

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare; welcome address, steps of Administration Building.

6 p. m.—Simultaneous demonstrations by each department, Berkshire Music Center: Music Shed—Short symphonic works, orchestra (Department I students). Theater-Concert Hall—One-act operas (Department IV students). Chamber Music Hall — Chamber music program (Department I students).

7.15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic supper, concert by chorus (Department II students), steps of Administration Building.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed—gala concert: Boston Symphony Orchestra—Thomas Schippers, conductor: Bizet, Symphony in C; Strauss, "Salome" (final scene); Brenda Lewis, soprano, soloist; Boston Pops Orchestra—Arthur Fiedler, conductor, in a typical pops program.

11 p. m.—Drawing for door prizes.

11.15 p. m.—Waltzing on the lawn.

DALLAS, TEX.
TIMES-HERALD

JUL 7 1954

Munch, Monteux To Lead Berlioz Fest at Berkshire

Special to The Times Herald

Tanglewood, Mass., July 7.—Charles Munch, conducting the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, will inaugurate the 17th Annual Berkshire Festival Saturday. The shed concerts in the hills of western Massachusetts, which last year drew a record 118,000 music-lovers, this season will honor the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions o the Frenchman's principa works.

Guest conductors for the series will be Pierre Monteux, Jean Morel and Richard Burgin Among the soloists will be Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; pianists Claudio Arrau, Vera Franceschi, Nicole Henriot, and Leo Smit; violinists Zino Francescatti and Ruth Posselt; and violist William Primrose. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will also be heard.

The Festival offers also six Friday evening chamber concerts, between Friday and Aug. 12, by Charles Munch and the chamber section of the Boston Symphony, with Lucas Foss, Jean Morel and Hugh Ross as guest conductors, and with Foss and Seymour Lipkin, pianists, and Doriot Anthony, flutist, as soloists.

New this summer will be a series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts, between today and Aug. 11, featuring such artists as Arrau and Francescatti, the Bel Arte Trio, the Albeneri Trio, the Zimbler Sinfonietta, the Griller String Quarter, and the Kroll String Quartet.

DUNKIRK, N. Y.
OBSERVER

JUL 9 - 1954

'HERE'S MORE TO A 'IANO THAN PLAYING

LENOX, Mass.—(AP)— To provide pianos for the famous musicians singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 69 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulations, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an our average desipte occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE

Munch, Boston Symphony At Tanglewood Music Shed

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 25.—Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Berlioz and Ernst Toch brought to an end the third week end of musical festivities in the Berkshires Sunday afternoon in Tanglewood's vast Music Shed. Berlioz' "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist, and Ernst Toch's second symphony were the plums of the occasion, and for good measure, the conductor began his concert with the renowned Frenchman's overture to the opera "Beatrice and Benedict."

As is his way with Berlioz, Mr. Munch conducted like a demon. Sonorities raged, themes flew, the shed shook. It is Mr. Munch's contention—to judge by his performance of the day—that much of Berlioz is meant to rouse the listener from his seat, to lift him high with the full vigor of a composer who knew neither timidity nor fear. To accomplish this end, when the propitious moment hoves into hearing, Mr. Munch and his orchestra let loose with orchestral sounds and textures that are duplicated rarely, if ever.

Modern Harold

He is not, however, compulsive about storming the arena with tonal barrages, and neither, for that matter, is William Primrose. Indeed, a good part of their performance — notably "Harold's" second movement — would not have been inappropriate played in church And that is as it should be. In its central sections, the work builds its sonorous steeples with a sustained calm that, in expressivity, is diametrically opposed to the more orgiastic Berlioz methods.

For his part, Mr. Primrose played the obbligato viola passages with overwhelming assurance and elan. His conception of the piece changes slightly with every performance, a feat which accounts for the vibrancy he instills in phrase after phrase. Because of it, he has become a kind of modern Harold telling his tale freshly to all with a desire to hear.

Toch's Second

Mr. Toch's second symphony, which was played last season in New York, is a brave and heroic number that fails to jell for any of several reasons. Its formal outlines are unclear, and its harmonies are unoriginal and not distinctive. These facts alone explain the symphony's tendency to wander, to lose its course and idle in filigree and figuration. In addition; despite the work's abundant craft and inventiveness, the symphony as a whole frequently compromises with the obvious and makes its points through orchestral devices that have by now given up their pungency.

Last night's concert, an event of major significance, was led by Jean Morel, director of the Juilliard School of Music's Orchestral Department, and present chief of Tanglewood's tribe of budding conductors. For his program, presented before an audience of 7,750, Mr. Morel had chosen Prokofiev's Symphony No. 6 in E flat minor, Lisst's Piano Concerto No. 1, with Nicole Henriot as soloist, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Morel Lauded

At the end of the performance there was no doubt, I imagine, that Mr. Morel's place as a conductor is firmly fixed. He is, his work of the evening trumpeted, both a masterful musician and a wielder of the baton to whom wizardry is second nature. Beginning with the Prokofiev symphony, the French-born maestro immediately proclaimed his high seriousness of purpose, his fidelity to a composer's stated intentions and his ability to draw from an orchestra not his own the very best it has to offer.

The symphony itself is a great one—a dark and massive panorama of despair. Save for its final movement, a stinging vivace, the work is slow, and feeds on veiled and tortured sentiments. It is ever brooding and somber and sardonic, with the lower strings and brasses hacking away violently while its main themes whistle chillingly through the air.

Boundless Power

All of these features Mr. Morel drew forth with boundless power. It is no light chore to keep constantly in motion two long movements which unfold leisurely without short cuts of any kind. But the conductor did just that, as did he also probe to the symphony's core, revealing its spirit, finally, for all to grasp and feel.

At Saturday night's concert an event no less dashing and inspired was his reading of the Elgar "Enigma" and Strauss' "Don Juan." The variations lean heavily on the element of contrast, thereby insuring that each new episode will do more than merely mirror and repeat what has gone before. In Mr. Morel's performance, these contrasts were luminously sketched. Thematic contours were kept skin-tight, and inner details were throughout made to lock snugly into the work's over-all design.

"Don Juan" Soared

And "Don Juan" also soared. From first to last it was properly turbulent and amorous, though the usual procedure of allowing its wrenching love ties to linger endlessly was not followed. Clean-cut describes the score's rendition—clean-cut and surging. That, I take it, is what the work is meant to be.

Less satisfactory in every way was Miss Henriot's performance of the Liszt concerto. The young and delicate pianist was simply not able to swashbuckle as the work demands, and while she produced a ringing and resonant tone, she did not, in essence, bring to the piece the verve and virtuosity necessary to its success. It was, in fact, a lukewarm Liszt we heard. And, truly, a luke-warm Liszt is no Liszt at all.

SPOKANE, WASH.
CHRONICLE

JUL 9 1954

GRAMM WILL SING ON EWCE CAMPUS

Donald Gramm, bass-baritone of the New York City Center Opera company, will appear in recital Wednesday evening at 8 in Showalter auditorium on the Eastern Washington College of Education campus.

A native of Milwaukee, he has appeared with many of the nation's leading symphony orchestras and is scheduled to take part in the Berkshire (Mass.) music festival this summer.

His program at Cheney will include an opening group of classic airs; a selection of serenades; a number of gypsy songs, and a concluding group of mountain ballads.

DALLAS, TEX.
NEWS

JUL 8 1954

Tanglewood Pupil

Special to The News

OVERTON, Texas.—Ann Heiligman, piano pupil of Dr. Silvio Scionti, left over the week end for Tanglewood, Mass., where she will participate in the Berkshire Music Festival. She is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. Heiligman of Overton.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS

JUL 8 - 1954

CHAMBER MUSIC OPENS SEASON AT TANGLEWOOD

Bel Arte Trio, Claudio Arrau, Pianist, in All-Beethoven Program

Beethoven chamber music enthusiasts thronged to the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last evening for the first of six concerts of this metier, and to inaugurate the Berkshire Music Festival for 1954.

In content, this was a highly selective program; in performance and scope, its boundaries were limitless. The late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, one of the foremost patrons of chamber music in America, left a rich legacy of beneficence and achievement in this particular art form, and the proceeds of these chamber concerts are being devoted to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Last evening's music was everything that both the craftsman and the listener could hope for, with The Bel Arte Trio and Claudio Arrau, pianist, participating in a program that was judiciously chosen, and tastefully presented.

It has been said that the listener, if he hears enough music, and over a sufficiently long period, eventually "graduates" to chamber music. This may, or may not be so, but it certainly is a vital corollary to the purely solo, or full orchestral forms. Performed well, it can be a listening experience that will provide the extreme in delicate pleasure. Last evening was one of those times.

Bel Arte Trio

The Bel Arte Trio, with Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoberman, cello, opened the evening with the Beethoven String Trio in G Minor, Opus 9, No. 1, with a performance that had both brilliance of individual technique and tone, plus that extra something that exists when professional musicians who have been together for several seasons are heard in concert.

They play as a highly-sensitive, well-integrated unit and the net result is generally readily discernible. They deserved an enthusiastic reception last evening, and they received something that was no more than their just due.

Claudio Arrau

Claudio Arrau is both a musician's and a patron's musician. His performances are always dependable; his tone clean-cut and his touch sure. Last evening, he opened his group with the charming Opus 78, continued with an expressive delineation of the A-flat Major, Opus 110, and concluded, after intermission, with a grand-style performance of the Opus 57, more popularly known as the "Appassionata."

Mr. Arrau, one of the world's foremost Beethoven interpreters, will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon in the "Emperor" Concerto, Pierre Monteux conducting. It should be something to hear.

Tomorrow will be "Bach night" in the theater-concert hall, with a presentation of five Brandenburg concerti by Lukas Foss, Richard Burgin and Doriot Anthony. Saturday night will see the opening of the Shed concerts, with the orchestra, Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm combining their talents for the Berlioz dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust." W. H. R.

RUTLAND, VT.
HERALD

JUL 9 - 1954

Artist M'Coy to Exhibit At Berkshire Festiva

(Special to The Herald)

LENOX, Mass., July 8.—Lawrence R. McCoy, vice president of the Southern Vermont Art Center, is among the artists whose work will be shown in the Berkshire Festival season here.

The exhibits will be housed in the reception hall at Tanglewood in Lenox, arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

McCoy's paintings will be on display Aug. 9-15.

[233]

N.Y Journal-American July 26

At Tanglewood:

Morel in Triumph

Prokofieff's Fifth Highlight of Program

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26.—Jean Morel scored a personal triumph in his local debut conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra here on Saturday night. He had arranged an attractive program that showed off well his superior attainments. His performance marked him as a conductor whose star is definitely rising.

By far his most important contribution came as he courageously began the concert with a contemporary work: Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony. Still in the appraisal stage, this opus acquired much more meaning under Morel's direction than heretofore. He increased its stature as a work as well as his own as its interpreter.

In substance this music may not stand side by side with Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, but it records the personal tragedy of his life in a manner not inglorious. Morel made the listener want to hear it again, as was not the case after its premiere in New York.

Nicole Cheered

The program included a performance of the Liszt E-Flat piano concerto with Nicole Henriot as soloist. She gave a clean-cut, technically adroit account of the music without conveying much either of its romantic spirit or its dashing brilliance. The audience respected her efficiency and applauded her admirable dispatch of the notes.

Strauss's "On Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations rounded out the evening. Though inclined to play up the fortissimo elements of both scores, Morel revealed a sensitive awareness of their musical values. He sought for too much effectiveness at times and occasionally either missed out or overdid.

In responding to the beauties of the Elgar, he gave due recognition to the ingenious interplay and melodies and instruments. His good taste natural skill and imagination helped him fashion a fine performance.

Not Up to Par

Charles Munch continued his one-man Berlioz festival with the B. S. O. by presenting the overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" and the "Harold in Italy" symphony in the Sunday afternoon program. Neither came quite up to the standard he has set for these familiar works.

He allowed the orchestra to play a bit too casually; it needed more preciseness in phrasing. William Primrose was the almost inevitable soloist in "Harold in Italy," playing it with finesse and authority characteristic of him.

Munch took special pains with the performance of Ernest Toch's Symphony No. 2, presented in tribute to the composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer. He could not save the work from the disintegration which appears to set in after a brilliantly proclamative first movement.

The composition shows enormous skill in writing, especially in the handling of the brass, but its materials do not sound consistently provocative.

The attendance for this third Berkshire Festival weekend totaled 17,200 people, dividing fairly equally at over 7,000 each for these concerts in the music shed. Weather conditions were the most unpredictable since the Festival began.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX. EXPRESS

JUL 1 1954

July 24 PLEASANTVILLE GIRL AT TANGLEWOOD

Atlantic County News -

THERE ARE A TOTAL of 20 students from the New Jersey State area at Tenglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the world-famous Tanglewood festival. Among these is Alice Adams of 10 E. Decatur Ave., Pleasantville, who is working in the opera department which is presenting the premiere of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land." Shown above are, left to right, Roberta Lynne Hartman, violinist, of Trenton; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony; Juliana Cuyler, member of choral department, and Miss Adams.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1954

3 OPERAS STAGED AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Works of Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch Heard at Lenox —Ross Leads First Score

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—Three operas, two of them little known, one a work nearly four centuries old, and given a stage presentation for the first time in the United States, were presented Tuesday night by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre Concert Hall as the first operatic offering of the present season of the Berkshire Festival.

The ancient novelty was Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso," given with scenery and seventeenth century Venetian costumes, and pantomime, while the chorus sang, in Commedia dell'Arte style.

Stylized scenery was moved off and on the stage as required, while the "first and second madrigal groups," as they were designated on the program, interpreted the delightful music. They interpreted it very well, under the direction of Hugh Ross, who also was costumed extravagantly as a choir leader of the period.

"L'Amfiparnasso, cast in the form of fourteen unaccompanied madrigals, is certainly a forerunner of opera. It saw the light before opera per se was fairly started. But it was not designed as opera. It was intended as a madrigalian version of a play in the Commedia dell' Arte spirit, but apparently without the stage, though this is still a moot point with the musicologists.

And this evening curtain carried a sign quoting Vecchi that the opera is to be heard "as it enters the mind by the ears, not the eyes." But Frederick Cohen, director of Berkshire's Opera Department, illustrated the music that the chorus was singing in Italian by a pantomime quite atrociously incongruous with the music and of a cheap buffoonery that was good neither for text nor score.

The audience, quite innocent of what the singers were saying in the Italian tongue, was delighted with the tumbling and the buffoonery, but of this more anon. The second performance was of Hindemith's amusing ten-minute operetta, done in English under the title of "There and Back" ("Hin und Zurueck"). The action goes forward and then backward, the story being of the husband who shot his wife and committed suicide, then the spectacle in reverse, ending with the grandmother sneezing as the curtain falls.

It is music indelibly bearing the stamp of Germany of the Nineteen Twenties, discordant, sardonic, purposefully rhythmic, jazzy and cacaphonous. The piece was admirably done, with Bernard Barr, Ann Tierney, and Helen Zimbler in principal parts.

More subtly drawn, and witty, is Ernest Toch's opera after the story of Hans Christian Andersen, "The Princess and the Pea." As it happens, both this and Hindemith's work, seen by the writer at the time, were given their premières in Baden-Baden in 1927. They hold well, if allowance is made for the style and spirit of thatt day in Central Europe. They are sardonic, rather than lyrical.

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT TO BE HELD AUG. 13

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual performance for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., on Aug. 13.

The festivities, beginning at 6 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the Berkshire Music Center, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, will be heard in the second half of the evening concert. For the opening half of the concert, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene of "Salome." Brenda Lewis will be the soprano soloist in the latter work.

Demonstrations will be given at 6 o'clock in the music shed and theatre-concert and chamber music halls by students of the orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, Mass., and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield, Mass., are vice chairmen and Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary.

Foss Work Commissioned

Lukas Foss has received a $1,500 commission from the Stockbridge Bowl Association to compose a musical setting for Psalm 121, which begins, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

On the Aisle

Is Mexico the Most Beautiful Country in the World

By GERALD ASHFORD

Since travel comes under the head of amusement, perhaps this column may be forgiven for raising a question in the travel category. Here is the quesion:

Is Mexico the most beautiful country in the world?

TO ANYONE who has seen Mexico—especially the central part—and has at least seen pictures of most of the other countries in the world, it seems certain that there are few if any lands which can equal Mexico in its attractiveness to the eye, both with regard to scenery and man-made embellishments such as buildings, cultivated fields, and even the human element itself, for a typical Mexican can hardly stand waiting for a bus without making a picture to delight an artist.

The United States is certainly out of the running as the most beautiful country to the eye, though it appeals to something deep in our hearts.

Our scenery is either too tame—in the East—or too rugged—in the West. Our architecture, except in a few dying neighborhoods on the East Coast, is not very picturesque, and our people (men, at least) are not especially decorative.

Possible contenders for the honor of being the most beautiful country might be Italy, France, Germany and Japan—hardly any others besides Mexico. And none of these four has Mexico's almost unlimited variety of topography and climate, making an endless series of pictures which can never grow monotonous. Neither do they have Mexico's range of variety in the works of man, from the most primitive to the most civilized.

IT WOULD BE interesting to hear from the public on this question. No doubt some countries other than those mentioned will find their advocates, and the debate might prove to be highly interesting.

★ ★ ★

(Bill Reddell, writer for Billboard, is on vacation. Other columns will occupy the regular Billboard space until he returns.)

★ ★ ★

The San Antonio Municipal Opera Company will give another benefit recital at 8 p.m. this Friday in the Arneson River Theater. Vittorio Palombi, the production manager, promises a wide variety of singing, ballet and other entertainment features by some of San Antonio's most talented young people.

PURPOSE OF the variety shows is to raise money for costumes and odds and ends for opera productions later in the summer.

This is the group that successfully produced 'Cavalleria Rusticana" at the Sunken Garden in May. Incidentally, Palombi invites the conventioning Texas lawyers to attend the Friday show.

The Arts Theater on Friday opens a San Antonio premiere of a new French film, "Beauties of the Night," directed by Rene Clair. The Motion Picture Herald predicts that this is "certain to be one of the top grossing imports of the year. Stars are Gerard Philipe, Martine Carol and Gina Lollobrigida. Philipe plays a young music teacher who lives in a world of dreams. In 1900 he's a brilliant young opera composer; in 1840 a dashing French officer conquering Algeria, and in the 1790's a revolutionary hero.

Information filtering through from the Big Town indicates that current Broadway stage hits are playing at top ticket prices ranging from $4.40 to $7.15, but mostly from $5.50 to $6.60 for the best seats, with a minimum of $1.10 to $2.20 way up there in the gallery. This ought to muffle some of the occasional complaints heard as to the price of stage show tickets in little old San Antonio.

IN SPITE OF high box-office prices, no new theaters have been built in New York for many years, and from time to time a playhouse is torn down to make way for a parking lot. It seems a theater, alone, is not an economical thing to build on high-priced Manhattan real estate, and the fire laws make it difficult to combine theaters with hotels and office buildings. Now they're talking seriously about building combination theaters and parking garages.

St. Louis Municipal Opera is opening "The Mikado" Monday night (July 5). . . "Gone With the Wind," which has raked in $38 million since is release in 1939, pulled $250,000 in the first three weeks of its current fifth revival on Broadway. It's coming to the Majestic in July. . . Edmund Purdom, just introduced here in "The Student Prince," will play Eddie Duchin in a film based on the life of the popular pianist and band leader . . . The 17th annual Berkshire Festival concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts will start Wednesday evening (July 7). First of the 21 events will be a full perforamance of Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust, with the Boston Symphony, Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe choral, and Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm as soloists.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra, with Doriot Anthony, flute. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 31, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing the Boston Symphony in Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 1, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: The Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Lukas Foss directing a Stravinsky-Mozart program, with Seymour Lipkin, piano; a chorus; and vocal soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing the Boston Symphony in an all-Berlioz program, with Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; and several choruses. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 15.)

[234]

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y. TIMES-HERALD

JUL 9 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Present Steber In Berlioz' 'Faust'

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow. The production will feature the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, as well as soloists Eleanor Steber, (Marguerite), David Poleri, (Faust), Martial Singher, (Mephistopheles) and Donald Bramm, (Brander).

Sunday at 2:30 p. m., there will be an all-Beethoven program, with Pierre Monteux acting as guest conductor. Among the features of the program will be the overture to "Leonore", No. Three; Piano Concerto No. Five ("Emperor"); and Symphony No. Five. Claudio Arrau is soloist in the piano concerto.

Monday and Tuesday will be taken up with various presentations by the five departments of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission will be by voluntary contribution.

The second week of the concerts will begin with an evening of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio on Wednesday evening July 14. Friday evening, July 16, in the theatre-concert hall there will be an all-Bach program conducted by music director Charles Munch.

Full Orchestra Featured

The following evening a program of Debussy and Franck will be featured. The performance will be by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch again conducting, will present a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz on Sunday, July 18, at 2:30 in the music shed. Leo Smit will be the piano soloist.

General admissions to the grounds are placed on sale the day of performance, and festival patrons may attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday, July 17, at 10 a. m.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone. Programs and a calendar of the more than 20 events at the Berkshire Music Center will be mailed on request.

N.Y. Journal-American July 26

At Tanglewood:

Morel in Triumph

Prokofieff's Fifth Highlight of Program

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 26.—Jean Morel scored a personal triumph in his local debut conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra here on Saturday night. He had arranged an attractive program that showed off well his superior attainments. His performance marked him as a conductor whose star is definitely rising.

By far his most important contribution came as he courageously began the concert with a contemporary work: Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony. Still in the appraisal stage, this opus acquired much more meaning under Morel's direction than heretofore. He increased its stature as a work as well as his own as its interpreter.

In substance this music may not stand side by side with Prokofieff's Fifth Symphony, but it records the personal tragedy of his life in a manner not inglorious. Morel made the listener want to hear it again, as was not the case after its premiere in New York.

Nicole Cheered

The program included a performance of the Liszt E-Flat piano concerto with Nicole Henriot as soloist. She gave a clean-cut, technically adroit account of the music without conveying much either of its romantic spirit or its dashing brilliance. The audience respected her efficiency and applauded her admirable dispatch of the notes.

Strauss's "On Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations rounded out the evening. Though inclined to play up the fortissimo elements of both scores, Morel revealed a sensitive awareness of their musical values. He sought for too much effectiveness at times and occasionally either missed out or overdid.

In responding to the beauties of the Elgar, he gave due recognition to the ingenious interplay and melodies and instruments. His good taste natural skill and imagination helped him fashion a fine performance.

Not Up to Par

Charles Munch continued his one-man Berlioz festival with the B. S. O. by presenting the overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" and the "Harold in Italy" symphony in the Sunday afternoon program. Neither came quite up to the standard he has set for these familiar works.

He allowed the orchestra to play a bit too casually; it needed more preciseness in phrasing. William Primrose was the almost inevitable soloist in "Harold in Italy," playing it with finesse and authority characteristic of him.

Munch took special pains with the performance of Ernest Toch's Symphony No. 2, presented in tribute to the composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center this Summer. He could not save the work from the disintegration which appears to set in after a brilliantly proclamative first movement.

The composition shows enormous skill in writing, especially in the handling of the brass, but its materials do not sound consistently provocative.

The attendance for this third Berkshire Festival weekend totaled 17,200 people, dividing fairly equally at over 7,000 each for these concerts in the music shed. Weather conditions were the most unpredictable since the Festival began.

July 24 PLEASANTVILLE GIRL AT TANGLEWOOD
Atlantic County News

THERE ARE A TOTAL of 20 students from the New Jersey State area at Tenglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the world-famous Tanglewood festival. Among these is Alice Adams of 10 E. Decatur Ave., Pleasantville, who is working in the opera department which is presenting the premiere of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land." Shown above are, left to right, Roberta Lynne Hartman, violinist, of Trenton; Richard Burgin, associate conductor of the Boston Symphony; Juliana Cuyler, member of choral department, and Miss Adams.

SAN ANTONIO, TEX. EXPRESS

JUL 1 1954

On the Aisle

Is Mexico the Most Beautiful Country in the World

By GERALD ASHFORD

Since travel comes under the head of amusement, perhaps this column may be forgiven for raising a question in the travel category. Here is the quesion:

Is Mexico the most beautiful country in the world?

TO ANYONE who has seen Mexico—especially the central part—and has at least seen pictures of most of the other countries in the world, it seems certain that there are few if any lands which can equal Mexico in its attractiveness to the eye, both with regard to scenery and man-made embellishments such as buildings, cultivated fields, and even the human element itself, for a typical Mexican can hardly stand waiting for a bus without making a picture to delight an artist.

The United States is certainly out of the running as the most beautiful country to the eye, though it appeals to something deep in our hearts.

Our scenery is either too tame—in the East—or too rugged—in the West. Our architecture, except in a few dying neighborhoods on the East Coast, is not very picturesque, and our people (men, at least) are not especially decorative.

Possible contenders for the honor of being the most beautiful country might be Italy, France, Germany and Japan—hardly any others besides Mexico. And none of these four has Mexico's almost unlimited variety of topography and climate, making an endless series of pictures which can never grow monotonous. Neither do they have Mexico's range of variety in the works of man, from the most primitive to the most civilized.

IT WOULD BE interesting to hear from the public on this question. No doubt some countries other than those mentioned will find their advocates, and the debate might prove to be highly interesting.

★ ★ ★

(Bill Reddell, writer for Billboard, is on vacation. Other columns will occupy the regular Billboard space until he returns.)

★ ★ ★

The San Antonio Municipal Opera Company will give another benefit recital at 8 p.m. this Friday in the Arneson River Theater. Vittorio Palombi, the production manager, promises a wide variety of singing, ballet and other entertainment features by some of San Antonio's most talented young people.

PURPOSE OF the variety shows is to raise money for costumes and odds and ends for opera productions later in the summer.

This is the group that successfully produced "Cavalleria Rusticana" at the Sunken Garden in May. Incidentally, Palombi invites the conventioning Texas lawyers to attend the Friday show.

—

The Arts Theater on Friday opens a San Antonio premiere of a new French film, "Beauties of the Night," directed by Rene Clair. The Motion Picture Herald predicts that this is "certain to be one of the top grossing imports of the year. Stars are Gerard Philipe, Martine Carol and Gina Lollobrigida. Philipe plays a young music teacher who lives in a world of dreams. In 1900 he's a brilliant young opera composer; in 1840 a dashing French officer conquering Algeria, and in the 1790's a revolutionary hero.

—

Information filtering through from the Big Town indicates that current Broadway stage hits are playing at top ticket prices ranging from $4.40 to $7.15, but mostly from $5.50 to $6.60 for the best seats, with a minimum of $1.10 to $2.20 way up there in the gallery. This ought to muffle some of the occasional complaints heard as to the price of stage show tickets in little old San Antonio.

—

IN SPITE OF high box-office prices, no new theaters have been built in New York for many years, and from time to time a playhouse is torn down to make way for a parking lot. It seems a theater, alone, is not an economical thing to build on high-priced Manhattan real estate, and the fire laws make it difficult to combine theaters with hotels and office buildings. Now they're talking seriously about building combination theaters and parking garages.

—

St. Louis Municipal Opera is opening "The Mikado" Monday night (July 5). . . "Gone With the Wind," which has raked in $38 million since its release in 1939, pulled $250,000 in the first three weeks of its current fifth revival on Broadway. It's coming to the Majestic in July. . . Edmund Purdom, just introduced here in "The Student Prince," will play Eddie Duchin in a film based on the life of the popular pianist and band leader . . . The 17th annual Berkshire Festival concerts in the hills of Western Massachusetts will start Wednesday evening (July 7). First of the 24 events will be a full perforamance of Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust, with the Boston Symphony, Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe choral, and Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm as soloists.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, JULY 29,

3 OPERAS STAGED AT BERKSHIRE FETE

Works of Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch Heard at Lenox —Ross Leads First Score

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 27—Three operas, two of them little known, one a work nearly four centuries old, and given a stage presentation for the first time in the United States, were presented Tuesday night by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre Concert Hall as the first operatic offering of the present season of the Berkshire Festival.

The ancient novelty was Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnasso," given with scenery and seventeenth century Venetian costumes, and pantomime, while the chorus sang, in Commedia dell'Arte style.

Stylized scenery was moved off and on the stage as required, while the "first and second madrigal groups," as they were designated on the program, interpreted the delightful music. They interpreted it very well, under the direction of Hugh Ross, who also was costumed extravagantly as a choir leader of the period.

"L'Amfiparnasso, cast in the form of fourteen unaccompanied madrigals, is certainly a forerunner of opera. It saw the light before opera per se was fairly started. But it was not designed as opera. It was intended as a madrigalian version of a play in the Commedia dell' Arte spirit, but apparently without the stage, though this is still a moot point with the musicologists.

And this evening curtain carried a sign quoting Vecchi that the opera is to be heard "as it enters the mind by the ears, not the eyes." But Frederick Cohen, director of Berkshire's Opera Department, illustrated the music that the chorus was singing in Italian by a pantomime quite atrociously incongruous with the music and of a cheap buffoonery that was good neither for text nor score.

The audience, quite innocent of what the singers were saying in the Italian tongue, was delighted with the tumbling and the buffoonery, but of this more anon. The second performance was of Hindemith's amusing ten-minute operetta, done in English under the title of "There and Back" ("Hin und Zurueck"). The action goes forward and then backward, the story being of the husband who shot his wife and committed suicide, then the spectacle in reverse, ending with the grandmother sneezing as the curtain falls.

It is music indelibly bearing the stamp of Germany of the Nineteen Twenties, discordant, sardonic, purposefully rhythmic, jazzy and cacaphonous. The piece was admirably done, with Bernard Barr, Ann Tierney, and Helen Zimbler in principal parts.

More subtly drawn, and witty, is Ernest Toch's opera after the story of Hans Christian Andersen, "The Princess and the Pea." As it happens, both this and Hindemith's work, seen by the writer at the time, were given their premières in Baden-Baden in 1927. They hold well, if allowance is made for the style and spirit of thatt day in Central Europe. They are sardonic, rather than lyrical.

BERKSHIRE BENEFIT TO BE HELD AUG. 13

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit performance for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held at Tanglewood, Mass., on Aug. 13.

The festivities, beginning at 6 P. M. and ending at 11, will include demonstrations by every department of the Berkshire Music Center, a dawn supper, a gala evening concert, the drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

The Boston "Pops" Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, will be heard in the second half of the evening concert. For the opening half of the concert, Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene of "Salome." Brenda Lewis will be the soprano soloist in the latter work.

Demonstrations will be given at 6 o'clock in the music shed and theatre-concert and chamber music halls by students of the orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee. Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox, Mass., and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield, Mass., are vice chairmen and Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary.

Foss Work Commissioned

Lukas Foss has received a $1,500 commission from the Stockbridge Bowl Association to compose a musical setting for Psalm 121, which begins, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

[234]

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y. TIMES-HERALD

JUL 9 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Present Steber In Berlioz' 'Faust'

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will present Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow. The production will feature the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, as well as soloists Eleanor Steber, (Marguerite), David Poleri, (Faust), Martial Singher, (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, (Brander).

Sunday at 2:30 p. m. there will be an all-Beethoven program, with Pierre Monteux acting as guest conductor. Among the features of the program will be the overture to "Leonore", No. Three; Piano Concerto No. Five ("Emperor"); and Symphony No. Five. Claudio Arrau is soloist in the piano concerto.

Monday and Tuesday will be taken up with various presentations by the five departments of the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Admission will be by voluntary contribution.

The second week of the concerts will begin with an evening of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio on Wednesday evening July 14. Friday evening, July 16, in the theatre-concert hall there will be an all-Bach program conducted by music director Charles Munch.

Full Orchestra Featured

The following evening a program of Debussy and Franck will be featured. The performance will be by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Mr. Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch again conducting, will present a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz on Sunday, July 18, at 2:30 in the music shed. Leo Smit will be the piano soloist.

General admissions to the grounds are placed on sale the day of performance, and festival patrons may attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday, July 17, at 10 a. m.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all festival concerts, and reservations may be made by telephone. Programs and a calendar of the more than 24 events at the Berkshire Music Center will be mailed on request.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, July 30, at 8:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra, with Doriot Anthony, flute. . . . ¶ Saturday, July 31, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing the Boston Symphony in Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone; and a chorus. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 1, at 2:30: Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Symphony, with Ruth Posselt, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 4, at 8:30: The Kroll String Quartet. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Lukas Foss directing a Stravinsky-Mozart program, with Seymour Lipkin, piano; a chorus; and vocal soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing the Boston Symphony in an all-Berlioz program, with Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; and several choruses. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 15.)

News 7/1 July 31

Copland Opera Commissioned By Rodgers and Hammerstein

TANGLEWOOD — Aaron Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," newly revised by its composer, will have its second production anywhere as the major project this summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by the students of the opera department in the theater-concert hall Monday and Tuesday evenings at 8:30.

All seats are reserved for both performances. Applications for seats may be made to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, the society through which those interested in student activities at Tanglewood may support the school by voluntary contributions.

Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department this sumer, had planned "The Tender Land" for Tanglewood this year before the opera was given its premiere by the New York City Opera Company, at City Center, New York, on April 1. Mr. Cohen's production will be an entirely different one from that given in New York, in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups.

In Three Acts

"I have revised the opera," Mr. Copland states, "in an attempt to give stronger emphasis to those dramatic motives which formerly had only lightly been sketched in." The Tanglewood production is in three acts, with three added scenes, and its period is now the spring of 1910.

Composer of many symphonies, ballets, chamber, theater and film music, Aaron Copland explored the opera medium only once before, when he wrote "The Second Hurricane," a children's piece more than 15 years ago. "The Tender Land," finished in March of this year, was written on a commission from the League of Composers, from a grant by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Inspired by Photograph

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Walker Evans in a book about Southern tenant farmers in the 1930s "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," by James Agee. It tells the story of Laurie, the elder of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the even of her graduation to work out her own life beyond the horizon of the farm.

Frederic Cohen will be assisted in the staging of the Berkshire Music Center production by Elsa Kahl. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenchip, costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen. Thomas De Gaetani is technical director, Thomas Garrett is master electrician. The orchestra of Department I students will be conducted by Frederic Waldman. Two different casts of opera department students will sing the work.

The cast in order of their appearance:

MONDAY, AUG. 2

Beth ..... Eva Rubin
Ma Moss ..... Mary MacKenzie
Mr. Splinters ..... Robert Simpson
Laurie Moss ..... Rosemary Carlos Top) ..... John Horner
) Drifters.
Martin) ..... Jefferson Morris
Grandpa Moss ..... Thomas Stewart
Mr. Jenks ..... Nicholas Maxymuk
Mrs. Splinters ..... Regina Sarfaty
Mrs. Jenks ..... Esther Schatzow

TUESDAY, AUG. 3

Beth ..... Eva Rubin
Ma Moss ..... Beatrice Krebs
Mr. Splinters ..... Alvin Edmonson
Laurie Moss ..... Phyllis Murphy
Top) ..... Lorenzo Malfatti
) Drifters.
Martin) ..... Jefferson Morris
Grandpa Moss ..... Malcolm Bernstein
Mr. Jenks ..... Nicholas Maxymuk
Mrs. Splinters ..... Regina Sarfaty
Mrs. Jenks ..... Esther Schatzow

Guests at the party:

Rina Basin, Gloria Carl, Marjorie Kember, Joanne Anderson, Peggy Ann Hoover, Harold Johnson, Herbert Gibson, Donald Miller, Raphael Edgar.

Act I. The day before graduation—late afternoon.
Act II. That evening.
Act III. Just before sunrise.

TONIGHT'S ARTISTS at the chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall will be these members of the Griller String Quartet, left to right, Sidney Griller, first violin; Colin Hampton, cello; Philip Burton, viola; Jack O'Brien, second violin. The quartet will give Bloch's Quartet No. 4 its premier tonight at 8:30 in the fourth of a series of chamber concerts at Tanglewood.

TAKING TIME OUT from his busy life as a conductor, Arthur Fiedler, leader of the Boston Pops Orchestra, who will bring the orchestra here for the Tanglewood on Parade program, Aug. 13, joins his children in playing with miniature fire equipment as Mrs. Fiedler looks on. Mr. Fiedler, like the late Mayor La Guardia of New York, pops up at many fires around Boston and likes to collect miniature pieces of fire fighting equipment for himself as well as his children. Mr. Fiedler and the Pops will share a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Thomas Schippers with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist, when the benefit parade program is given at Tanglewood.

One-Act Operas Presented By Students at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE OPERA department of the Berkshire Music Center took an audience which filled the theater-concert hall to overflowing last night on an interesting tour of the operatic museum. Three one-act exhibits of far different and contrasting subjects were brought forward, played and sung by the students under the splendid direction of Frederic Cohen, head of the department, with the assistance of many members of his able staff.

* * *

"L'Amfiparnaso" of Orazio Vecchi was given its first staged performance in the United States. Written at Modena in 1594 and published in Venice three years later, it is an attempt to translate into music as the first example of a real opera, the characteristic figures which were to be seen at every village fair in Northern Italy in the 16th century. It is a series of madrigals never planned to be acted and the direction of the work made sure that it would be so understood by having conspicuously placed in duplicate on the stage huge banners stating it is clearly intended to appeal to the ear and not to the eye.

* * *

A GROUP of singers appears on the stage in gay, bold-colored costumes followed by their director, Hugh Ross, also in corresponding attire. The madrigals are sung seriously while a company of buffoons mime and mock with the blunt subtlety of Punch and Judy. Playing jesters and clowns with ridiculous and exaggerated antics they executed and improvised a commedia dell'arts, an Italian comedy of the day which had but distant relationship, if any, to the simple and serious music Vecchi wrote. The curtains were open as the audience entered and a handsome diamond patterned lattice hung front stage. It was hoisted by two pages as the chorus took their places in a crescent somewhat mid-stage. Several suggestive frames and technical references to Venice were carried on stage of the proper moments and later removed. The progress of the stage action was indicated by beautiful silken placards designed by Laura Zirner and carried on stage by handmaidens.

* * *

PAUL HINDEMITH'S "There and Back" and Ernst Toch's "The Princess and the Pea," which were the other works on the program, are both of 1927. The English version in both cases Hindemith's sketch is a jazz caricature of the flapper days. By distorting the foibles of the day, the story attempts to give an exaggerated picture of Prohibition and its accompanying era in the style of the movies produced at the time in Germany. A short tragic domestic episode is quickly told; a sage then appears, well sung by Marvin Worden, speaks of the consequences of folly, and, movie-style, the reel is run backward to end where they began. Black and silver stage settings, suggestive lighting effects by John Blankenship, black and white macabre makeup by Leo Van Witsen, and direction in the pit of Samuel Krachmalnick, contributed to the spirit of the performance. Ann Tierney and Bernard Barr as husband and wife sang and acted with spirit and vitality.

* * *

THESE TWO exhibits fulfill the function of the Center by giving a complete picture of operatic progress over the centuries. The final offering deserves consideration on a different basis. Like the others, it, too, is a comedy but one built on an Andersen fairy tale and one's credulity is willingly granted in advance. Mr. Toch was called to the stage at the end of the evening as Mr. Cohen and his colleagues came to share the applause with the performers. The princess, Evelyn Lear, has the nearest approach to a conventional lyric aria and she acquitted herself brilliantly. The various other characters have more assertive roles, but the orchestra challenges them at every progression. Paul Vermel, in the direction of the orchestra, insisted too little on providing background for the voices and thereby made the competition taxing if not unequal.

* * *

THE SETTING of the royal throne with the devices intimating a classic palace was attractive and imaginative. We would have lowered the lights a trifle when the Princess retired so that the ingenious lighting from the base of the wire pillars could have been more effective. The whole performance proceeded with dispatch and excellent integration and Mr. Cohen and his staff can not be given enough commendation for the way the operas were prepared and presented. No concessions nor compromises were necessary in the assay of the evening and a special decoration is in order for the choice of composers and their works.

Tanglewood Tales

Michael T. Kelleher, trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, attended the Tanglewood Berkshire Festival concerts last weekend. Guests at next weekend's concerts will include G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor, Harvard Glee Club, and the Celtic Ballet of Scotland performing this week at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee.

* * *

Forum Monday

The regular Sunday evening Composers' Forum by students of Department III of the Berkshire Music Center was not held this week, but will be given in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood on Monday at 4:30 p.mm.

* * *

Lecture Friday

This week's "Aspects of Music" lecture, open to visitors to Tanglewood will be held Friday on the subject "The Survival of the Cantus Firmus Idea" by Karl Kohn, of Pomona College, Calif., assistant to Lukas Foss in the Tanglewood Study Group. The lecture, followed by general discussion, will be in the Chamber Music Hall at 3:15 p.m.

* * *

France Strikes Medal Of Conductor Munch

The Government of France, Bureau of Money and Medals, has also singularly honored Mr. Munch by striking a bronze medal, made by engraver Revol, bearing his portrait in profile and his signature, the first copy of which he has received and presented to BSO manager George Judd.

Work Performed 3 Days After It Was Written

At Sunday's composers forum at Tanglewood the audience was treated to the performance of a work composed only three days previously. Four composers Michael Sahl (New York City) Richard Maxfield (Bellevue Wash.), Donald Harris (St. Paul Minn.), and Barney Childs (Reno Nev.) had finished their movement of Suite for Violin and Piano, respectively entitled first movement adagio, scherzo, and epilog, Thursday afternoon, and the wo was immediately accepted for pe formance by Aaron Copland, wh heads the Berkshire Music Center composition department and wh moderates the forums. It was r hearsed that afternoon with Tibe ius Klausner, student violinist, wh was to perform the work, before l left for New York on weekend bus ness. The work was given Sunda with each composer accompanyin Mr. Klausner at the piano in th movement he composed.

* * *

Attendance Holds Up At Halfway Mark

With the Berkshire Festival the half-way mark this season, total attendance at 12 concerts the first three weeks of 60,750 pe sons has been registered, whi compares favorably with the 117,9 persons who attend the Festival six weeks in the summer of 19 Attendance at 12 of the schedul 25 student concerts this seas totaled 16,025.

Premiere of Quartet Tonight

LENOX—A program of chamber usic, including the first U.S. performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, will be presented this evening in the theater-concert hall.

The Griller String Quartet, comprising Sidney Griller and Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola; and Colin Hampton, cello, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood.

Tonight's chamber music concert is part of the fourth week of Berkshire Festival concerts. It will be followed Friday evening by a program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch and with flute soloist Doriot Anthony, in the theater-concert hall; and two concerts, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, by the full orchestra in the Music Shed.

Mr. Munch's chamber orchestra program Friday evening will offer three selections new to Tanglewood; Albert Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; the Flute Concerto of Jacques Ibert, and Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds.

Copland Extends Thanks For $5,000 Scholarship

At intermission at Thursday's concert by the symphony orchestra of students of Department I of the Berkshire Music Center, attended by 2,900 persons, composer Aaron Copland extended "grateful thanks" to residents of Berkshire County who have raised more than $5,000 to establish a scholarship for a student conductor in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky who founded the school. The scholarship value now is $250, which Mr. Copland hopes may be raised to $400. Mr. Copland invited those enjoying the work of student conductors at the popular student symphony programs to contribute to the Koussevitzky Memorial Trust, either by contacting the Berkshire Music Center, Mrs. John H. Rice, Pittsfield, or Mrs. Shaun Kelly, or Mrs. William Crane, of Richmond. The 1954 award will be announced at the season's final student symphony concert, Saturday afternoon Aug. 14 in the Music Shed.

* * *

Mrs. Koussevitzky Entertains Tomorrow

The 21 foreign students studying at Tanglewood will be guests of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at tea in the Hawthorne cottage tomorrow at 4 p.m. Students from abroad include 12 from Canada, others from France, Israel, Haiti, Japan, Korea, South Africa.

Hi Fi Phonograph To Be Awarded at Tanglewood Fete

LENOX—A high fidelity console phonograph and two season tickets for the 1955 Berkshire Festival will be among the door prizes to be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade Aug. 13.

The drawing will take place after a concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Thomas Schippers and the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler. Mac Morgan of Stockbridge, well-known baritone, will be master of Other prizes to be awarded at Tanglewood on Parade, which is for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, will include recordings of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" and "Romeo and Juliet" and a "gastronomical tour" of Berkshire County. The tour includes dinner for two at the 1896 House, Williamstown; the Crane Inn, Dalton; Chet Karl's and Elm Court, Lenox; the Egremont Tavern, North Egremont; and the Pyreness, Canaan, N.Y.

More door prizes will be announced later. Mrs Bruce Sanborn of Lenox is chairman of the door prize committee.

Heitzelman Making Munch's Portrait

Arthur W. Heintzelman, of M blehead, "keeper of prints" at t Boston Public Library, and in nationally renowned as an etch is doing a portrait of Char Munch, music director of the B ton Symphony Orchestra. His w is in the permanent collections museums and libraries here a abroad.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
CITIZEN
JUL 4 - 1954

Little Symphony Schedule Set

PLAZA DE TOROS is the setting for one of the many colorful scenes in "Carmen," to be produced Thursday, July 8, and Saturday, July 10, at the Cincinnati Zoo by the Cincinnati Summer Opera Association.

George Haddad Sets Recital At OSU

The Columbus Little Symphony Orchestra this week announced its concert schedule for the 1954-55 season. The schedule is:

FIRST CONCERT—Tuesday, Oct. 19, 1954. Soloist Chester Barris will play Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 4 in G Major."

SECOND CONCERT — Wednesday, Nov. 24, 1954. Soloist Bernard Greenhouse will play Saint-Saen's "Cello Concerto in A Minor."

THIRD CONCERT—Monday, Jan. 17, 1955. Soloist Claude Monteaux, flutist, will play the world premiere performance of "Concerto Antoniano," by Nicholas Flagello. This concert will be conducted by the composer.

FOURTH CONCERT — Wednesday, March 9, 1955. Soloists Minna Buchsbaum, violin; Patricia Winold, cello, and Gertrude Kuehfus, piano, will play Beethoven's "Triple Concerto." Soloist Jean Harriman, harpist, will play Ravel's "Introduction and Allegro."

FIFTH CONCERT — Wednesday, April 13, 1955. Soloist Margaret Wilson, contralto, and the Chapel Choir of Capital University will perform a short number by George Brant (first performance) and Brahm's "Alto Rhapsody."

All concerts will be given in Mees Hall, Capital University, at 8:30 p. m.

GEORGE HADDAD, concert pianist and instructor in piano at Ohio State University's School of Music, will appear in a faculty recital in Hughes Hall Auditorium, Wednesday, July 7.

Haddad, Canadian-born artist who has appeared on concert stages since the age of eight, studied in New York with the late Olga Samaroff-Stokowski and in Paris with Margurite Long.

Last season he won the Prix De Canada, highest honor awarded by the Canadian government to a musician. He plans to go abroad in December for a series of eight concerts in Europe as well as appearances in Lebanon and Egypt.

His program for the faculty recital will include "Two Sonatas," by Cimarosa, "Sonata in B Minor, Opus 58," by Chopin and twelve preludes by Debussy.

MRS. BARBARA KEARNEY, pianist, will appear today at 5 p. m. in the Columbus Park of Roses as the sixth attraction in the park's summer concert series. Mrs. Kearney's program will include "Toccata and Fugue in D Major," by Bach, "Sonata No. 3, Opus 31," by Beethoven, "Rhapsody and Intermezzo," by Brahms, two selections by Chopin and one modern work by Tcherepnine.

Mrs. Kearney, who received her musical training at Capital University, also is accompanist for the Columbus Girlchoir.

17TH ANNUAL Berkshire Festival opens Wednesday, July 7, in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. A six-week program including 24 concerts has been planned. Music is under the direction of Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The Music Shed Concerts this season will honor the 150th anniversary of the birth of composer Hector Berlioz. One concert will feature a full-length performance of Berlioz's seldom heard "Damnation of Faust" with soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

RCA VICTOR'S recording of Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Munch has been awarded the Grand Prix of the French Academie for vocal ensemble with orchestra.

The recording, released in September, 1953, was made in Symphony Hall, Boston, in February, 1953. Soloists were Margaret Roggerio, contralto; Leslie Chambray, tenor, and Yi Kwei-Sze, bass. Also heard were choral groups from Harvard and Radcliffe colleges.

The work will be performed again by Munch and the Boston Symphony at the Berkshire Festival.

CLEVELAND "POPS" concerts will resume with an All-Gershwin program Thursday evening, July 8, in the Public Auditorium. The Cleveland Summer Orchestra will be under the direction of Dr. Frank Black. Soloist Earl Wild will play Gershwin's "Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra" and "Rhapsody in Blue."

Violinist Micha Elman will be soloist at another concert Saturday evening, July 10.

ALPHONSE CINCIONE, veteran bandmaster, will appear as guest conductor at the summer band concert Sunday, July 4, at 8 p. m. in Schiller Park. Walter Lynas, flutist, will be soloist.

Mr. Cicione received his musical training in his native Italy. After moving to the United States he played with the Neddermeyer Band of Columbus and toured chautauqua circuits with the Sand's Band. During World War I he served with the 166th Infantry Band of the Rainbow Division. He presently is in retirement.

VOCALISTS from the Margaret Perry Hast and the Margurite Brickman studios will perform at the first of the summer concert series sponsored by the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts. The concert will be given Friday, July 9, at 8 p. m. The concert series will continue every Friday evening through July and August.

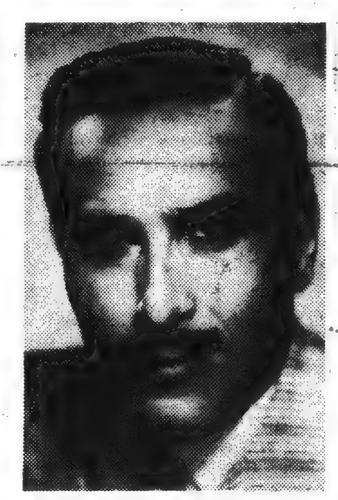
RIGOLETTO will be performed this evening at the Cincinnati Zoo by the Cincinnati Summer Opera Association. Delores Wilson, American-born singer who won acclaim in Europe, will make her debut. Baritone Frank Guarrera, David Poleri and William Wilderman also will appear.

"The Masked Ball," seldom produced musical drama by Verdi, will be performed Tuesday, July 6, and Friday, July 9. Herva Nelli, Clramae Turner, Jan Peerce and Cesare Bardelli will sing the leading roles.

Brenda Lewis will sing the title role in "Carmen" on Thursday, July 8, and Saturday, July 10. Charles Kullman will perform in the role of Don Jose and Frank Guarrera will take the part of the toreador.

Tickets for all performances may be purchased in Columbus at Heaton's.

BRENDA LEWIS will sing the title role in the Cincinnati Summer Opera production of Bizet's "Carmen."



PIANIST George Haddad will give a faculty recital Wednesday, July 7, at OSU's Hughes Hall Auditorium.

DR. IZADOR Cabakoff will sing in the first summer concert of the season at the Art Gallery Friday, July 9.

ROBERT GRABILL, baritone, also will take part in the Art Gallery concert starting at 8 p. m.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 10 1954

List Programs For Next Week At Tanglewood

The second week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, in Lenox, comprises an evening of chamber music by the Alberneri trio (Erich Itod Kahn ,piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) on Wednesday evening (July 14) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening (July 16) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Debussey and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Saturday evening (July 17), in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon (July 18), in the Music Shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain, the Wednesday and Friday concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the cocnerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance, and Festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10 a. m., for the nominal charge of $1, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The complete programs are:

July 14—Brahms: Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu: Trio in D minor; Beethoven: Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") — The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgi Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello).

July 16—Bach:' Cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den Lieben Gott"—Hugh Ross, conductor. Suites Nos. 1 and 4—Charles Munch, conductor.

July 17 — Debussy: Excerpts, "St. Sebastian"; Franck, "Les Djinns," for Piano and Orchestra—with Vera Franceschi as soloist; Debussy: "La Mer"; Franck: Sympony in D Minor—Pierre Monteux, conductor.

July 18 — Debussy: "Iberia"; Copland: Piano Concerto — with Leo Smit as soloist; Berlioz: "Fantastic Symphony"—Charles Munch, conductor.

MERIDEN, CONN.
JOURNAL
JUL 9 - 1954

There's More To A Piano Than Playing

LENOX, Mass — (UP) —To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, [illegible] massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tieups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the Baldwin factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on truck without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 9 - 1954

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman

BERKSHIRE MUSICAL PRACTICE

MUSIC

In a summer swing around the Eastern Coast this observer of the Theatre, Music and Dance departments, all closely related each to the other, paused in the quiet countryside of Lennox Mass. to note the preparations attendant upon the oncoming Berkshire Festival, which tees odd with a chamber orchestra of symphony players this evening.

* * *

Since we haven't anything quite of the same kind, the Berkshire Festival is as important to be aware of musically as, let us say, the Shakespeare season at Stratford, Ontario. The latter Festival of plays which aroused considerable excitement last year is digging deeper and more experimentally into seldom done plays and is paying court to a far greater number of attendees than ever before.

* * *

But back to Berkshire, where the towns are beautifully laid out and the highways planned for swarming traffic. This is the fourth season that Charles Munch lifts his baton as conductor of much of the orchestra's presentations and head of the musical activities, which includes besides the chamber and full Boston Symphony orchestras, the music school, as well. An all-Bach program of Brandenberg Concerto, with Lukas Foss as Piano soloist is tonight's offering and, tomorrow the Music Shed will be inaugurated with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth.

* * *

Mr. Munch, who addressed the opening exercises of the Center last Sunday and had his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, is expecting this to be the most active of the many Berkshire seasons, now seventeen in number. There will be six weeks of music and particular note will be taken of this, the 150th anniversary of the composer Berlioz The Saturday morning rehearsal will be open to the public with proceeds for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 9 - 1954

SITTING IN WITH TED ASHBY

The Flying Maestro

MONTEUX

THE DISTINGUISHED-LOOKING MAN with jet black hair and flowing white mustache sat quietly reading a book in the Mohawk Airlines lobby at Logan International Airport. "Pierre Monteux?" Al Alabiso, public relations director at the airport, inquired. Mr. Monteux, 79, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, nodded assent. Without referring to a single note, the fabulous Mr. Monteux described a year's itinerary.

★ ★ ★

FOR A MAN who retired several years ago it is a pretty ambitious program. "I am going to Tanglewood" said the toast of Boston and San Francisco society, "for concerts July 11 and 17. Between those dates, I go to New York for two Stadium concerts. Then I come back to Boston for a recording date with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra July 19 at Symphony Hall.

* * *

"THE FOLLOWING MONDAY at 5 p. m. I fly to Chicago for six Ravigna concerts (open air) with the Chicago Symphony. July 30 I fly by way of Boston to Hancock, Me., where I live, to conduct classes in conducting during the month of August. At the end of August, I'm off for Hollywood and two concerts at the Hollywood Bowl. After that I fly back to Boston, and soon take a plane for San Francisco to conduct opera two months.

* * *

"IN NOVEMBER I fly to New York to conduct two months with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Then back to Boston for three weeks with the Boston Symphony. After that, back to New York for another week-and-a-half with the Metropolitan. Next I go to Montreal for two concerts, back to the Metropolitan, and back to Montreal for two more concerts. Back again to the Met, and back again to Montreal for still another two appearances.

"THAT TAKES ME, roughly, to the end of next April, when I fly to London to conduct the Philharmonic Orchestra. From London I fly to Amsterdam to conduct the Concertgebrouw Orchestra at the Holland Festival. From Holland I go to Italy to conduct. From Italy I go to Brussels, Belgium. Finally, I fly back to America for my Summer concerts. That, briefly, answers your question as to where I'm going."

* * *

MEANWHILE, the celebrated conductor will be back here to observe his 80th birthday. The day before, April 3, he will be honored by the Boston Symphony, which will proceed with him to Bangor, Me., to perform under his direction during ceremonies dedicating a new concert hall there. Mr. Monteux, whose 14 grandchildren delight him, is the only living former conductor of the Boston Symphony.

* * *

PIERRE MONTEUX led the Boston Symphony five years before going to Amsterdam in 1924 and remaining there 10 years. He then went to San Francisco, where he conducted the Symphony for 17 years, following which he supposedly retired. Mr. Monteux, sensing that something was to be written about him, made only two requests, to wit: "Do not spell my name with an 'a,' and do not say that I dye my hair, which, you can see, I do not."

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 12 1954

Bach Program Planned At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain, the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed.

Oak n' Spruce Enjoying Busiest Season in History

LEE — Oak n' Spruce in South Lee is in the midst of its busiest season since the resort opened seven years ago, Frank Prinz, owner-manager, reports.

The guest total is running at a capacity of 120, with about 20 of these farmed out in local homes, he said. Because the resort is at capacity all week, reservations are not accepted for weekends.

Biggest guest total in the history of the resort was 172 over the 4th of July weekend. This total cannot be equalled in midseason, Mr. Prinz pointed out, as guest houses in which the extra people were placed over the holiday are now saving their space for the Tanglewood weekenders.

For at least the next two weeks, business is expected to continue about the same. Oak n' Spruce has not yet set a closing date.

Asked what his guests like most to do when they leave the grounds, Mr. Prinz reported that last week they asked for 40 reservations to the Berkshire Playhouse, 30 to Jacob's Pillow and 9 to Tanglewood.

THE BOSTON HERALD, TU

Tanglewood Pops Program Announced

Arthur Fiedler has announced the program the Boston Pops Orchestra will play when the organization makes its first appearance at Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of "Tanglewood on Parade," a day-long event for the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Fiedler has scheduled Sousas "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's "Bolero," the Hayman arrangement of video commercials called "TViana," and Merrick-Bennett's "Look Sharp, Be Sharp."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

At Tanglewood Tonight

Chamber Orchestra Series To Open; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30.

4360 Average '53 Draw

Known popularly as "the Bach-Mozart concerts," these popular programs in 1953 attracted an audience of 26,150, an average attendance of 4360. An innovation will find the chamber orchestra concerts given on successive Friday evenings, July 16, July 23, July 30, Aug. 6; the final one, however, will be on a Thursday, Aug. 12, because of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, Aug. 13.

At tonight's all-Bach concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the podium at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss, composer-conductor-pianist and this year head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department V for amateur students of music. as soloist.

Foss was born in Berlin in 1922 and studied at the Paris Conservatoire from the time he was 11 until he was 15. On coming to the U. S. in 1937, he studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia with Randall Thompson, Fritz Reiner and Paul Hindemith, then became a conductor-pupil of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood, and was appointed to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1946.

Teaches at California

He is professor of music at the University of California. He has won Pulitzer, Guggenheim and Fulbright fellowships, the Horblit Award of the Boston Symphony, the Prix de Rome, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," a cantata.

His compositions include "Ode For Orchestra," "Symphony in G," a ballet "The Gift of the Magi," and three works done at Tanglewood, "The Song of Songs" in 1950, "Piano Concerto" and the cantata "A Parable of Death" performed last summer. On Aug. 6 he will conduct the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Stravinsky and Mozart.

Miss Doriot Anthony, flutist, and Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, will be soloists in the second and fifth Brandenburg concertos. In the second, Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, also will play solos.

Burgin made his first public appearance at the age of 11 as violin soloist with the Warsaw Philharmonic Society. He has been concertmaster and soloist of the Leningrad, Helsinki, Christiania and Stockholm Orchestras, serving under Nikisch, Fiedler, Richard Strauss, Schneevoigt and Sibelius. He became concertmaster of the Boston Symphony in 1920 and heads the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center. Recently he was named conductor of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

In Debut Last Summer

Miss Anthony returns to Tanglewood where she made her debut in the same solo last summer. Before joining the Boston Symphony she played in the National Symphony, Washington, D. C., the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the NBC Standard (Los Angeles) and Hollywood Bowl symphony orchestras.

Gomberg, a native Bostonian, was first oboe for Stokowski's All-American Youth, the Baltimore Symphony and the Mutual Broadcasting orchestras, and has soloed for the New York City Center Symphony under Leonard Bernstein. He is a graduate of Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. A native of Avigers, France, Voisin learned to play the trumpet from his father, whom he succeeded with the Boston Symphony. He teaches solfege at Tanglewood.

The identical program of five of the six Brandenburg concertos, (which Johann Sebastian Bach presented to the Margraf of Brandenburg in 1721) with the same soloists, attracted a record-breaking attendance of 4200 at the opening of the Berkshire Festival's chamber orchestra concerts last summer. Prior to this never more than two of the concerti were ever played on the same program at Tanglewood.

Tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 15, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which also will seat the lawn audience.

EAGLE

Music

U.S. Premiere of Bloch Work Highlights Quartet Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A FIRST performance in America of a new composition by the eminent Swiss-American Ernest Bloch was the high light of the concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Griller String Quartet. The same ensemble had played the new work for its premiere only 10 days ago in London, whence they had flown last week for this engagement.

Bloch first came to the United States in 1916 during which visit he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his "Trois Poemes Juifs." In 1919, his suite for viola and piano won the Coolidge prize at the second chamber music festival on South Mountain in Pittsfield. His new quartet, his fourth, shows, the same individual characteristics which distinguish all his other works—a warm sincerity, a mastery of instrumental writing, a rhapsodical nature without rapt attention to form, and unlimited imaginative material.

* * *

THERE ARE more sections which are quiet and poetic than there are in a more agitated spirit, regardless of the markings of the four movements. In many instances there is discernible the fervid passion and turbulent sorrow which some authorities consider Bloch's Jewish racial impulsion. There is no implication of any of the superficial melody or harmonic idioms commonly attributed to Hebrew sources and which, anyway, are probably not at all authentic. Bloch has often expressed himself on Jewish themes but in a personal way.

There are few restrictive elements in this quartet. There are frequent contrasting sequences, moving from violence to serenity and back within the same movement, using harmonic devices which would be hard on the ear if they did not pass so swiftly. The playing by the Grillers was graphic and ardent, and their warm reception by the audience which filled the hall was richly deserved. The composer's daughter, Suzanne, was in the audience. The composer, himself, has not yet heard his own quartet performed.

* * *

THE MEMBERS of the quartet are Sidney Griller, first violin; Jack O'Brien, second violin; Philip Burton, viola; and Colin Hampton, cello. The "Hunt" of Mozart and the Opus 18, No. 2 of Beethoven completed their program. In these familiar choices of the classics they afforded pleasure if not unforgettable memories.

Their general approach was removed from the conventional. The slow movements were played slower than is usually heard, and they did not hestiate to linger on certain phrases and even single notes if it pleased them to stay and savor the lusciousness of some fragment that pleased them. The individual competency was not equal in all four corners of the ensemble although the musical cohesion was excellent and, certainly within their rights, valid.

[237]

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 9 - 1954

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman

BERKSHIRE MUSICAL PRACTICE

MUSIC

In a summer swing around the Eastern Coast this observer of the Theatre, Music and Dance departments, all closely related each to the other, paused in the quiet countryside of Lennox Mass. to note the preparations attendant upon the oncoming Berkshire Festival, which tees odd with a chamber orchestra of symphony players this evening.

* * *

Since we haven't anything quite of the same kind, the Berkshire Festival is as important to be aware of musically as, let us say, the Shakespeare season at Stratford, Ontario. The latter Festival of plays which aroused considerable excitement last year is digging deeper and more experimentally into seldom done plays and is paying court to a far greater number of attendees than ever before.

* * *

But back to Berkshire, where the towns are beautifully laid out and the highways planned for swarming traffic. This is the fourth season that Charles Munch lifts his baton as conductor of much of the orchestra's presentations and head of the musical activities, which includes besides the chamber and full Boston Symphony orchestras, the music school, as well. An all-Bach program of Brandenberg Concerto, with Lukas Foss as Piano soloist is tonight's offering and, tomorrow the Music Shed will be inaugurated with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth.

* * *

Mr. Munch, who addressed the opening exercises of the Center last Sunday and had his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, is expecting this to be the most active of the many Berkshire seasons, now seventeen in number. There will be six weeks of music and particular note will be taken of this, the 150th anniversary of the composer Berlioz. The Saturday morning rehearsal will be open to the public with proceeds for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 9 - 1954

SITTING IN WITH TED ASHBY

The Flying Maestro

MONTEUX

THE DISTINGUISHED-LOOKING MAN with jet black hair and flowing white mustache sat quietly reading a book in the Mohawk Airlines lobby at Logan International Airport. "Pierre Monteux?" Al Alabiso, public relations director at the airport, inquired. Mr. Monteux, 79, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, nodded assent. Without referring to a single note, the fabulous Mr. Monteux described a year's itinerary.

★ ★ ★

FOR A MAN who retired several years ago it is a pretty ambitious program. "I am going to Tanglewood" said the toast of Boston and San Francisco society, "for concerts July 11 and 17. Between those dates, I go to New York for two Stadium concerts. Then I come back to Boston for a recording date with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra July 19 at Symphony Hall.

* * *

"THE FOLLOWING MONDAY at 5 p. m. I fly to Chicago for six Ravigna concerts (open air) with the Chicago Symphony. July 30 I fly by way of Boston to Hancock, Me., where I live, to conduct classes in conducting during the month of August. At the end of August, I'm off for Hollywood and two concerts at the Hollywood Bowl. After that I fly back to Boston, and soon take a plane for San Francisco to conduct opera two months.

* * *

"IN NOVEMBER I fly to New York to conduct two months with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Then back to Boston for three weeks with the Boston Symphony. After that, back to New York for another week-and-a-half with the Metropolitan. Next I go to Montreal for two concerts, back to the Metropolitan, and back to Montreal for two more concerts. Back again to the Met, and back again to Montreal for still another two appearances.

"THAT TAKES ME, roughly, to the end of next April, when I fly to London to conduct the Philharmonic Orchestra. From London I fly to Amsterdam to conduct the Concertgebrouw Orchestra at the Holland Festival. From Holland I go to Italy to conduct. From Italy I go to Brussels, Belgium. Finally, I fly back to America for my Summer concerts. That, briefly, answers your question as to where I'm going."

* * *

MEANWHILE, the celebrated conductor will be back here to observe his 80th birthday. The day before, April 3, he will be honored by the Boston Symphony, which will proceed with him to Bangor, Me., to perform under his direction during ceremonies dedicating a new concert hall there. Mr. Monteux, whose 14 grandchildren delight him, is the only living former conductor of the Boston Symphony.

* * *

PIERRE MONTEUX led the Boston Symphony five years before going to Amsterdam in 1924 and remaining there 10 years. He then went to San Francisco, where he conducted the Symphony for 17 years, following which he supposedly retired. Mr. Monteux, sensing that something was to be written about him, made only two requests, to wit: "Do not spell my name with an 'a,' and do not say that I dye my hair, which, you can see, I do not."

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 12 1954

Bach Program Planned At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain, the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed.

Oak n' Spruce Enjoying Busiest Season in History

LEE — Oak n' Spruce in South Lee is in the midst of its busiest season since the resort opened seven years ago, Frank Prinz, owner-manager, reports.

The guest total is running at a capacity of 120, with about 20 of these farmed out in local homes, he said. Because the resort is at capacity all week, reservations are not accepted for weekends.

Biggest guest total in the history of the resort was 172 over the 4th of July weekend. This total cannot be equalled in midseason, Mr. Prinz pointed out, as guest houses in which the extra people were placed over the holiday are now saving their space for the Tanglewood weekenders.

For at least the next two weeks, business is expected to continue about the same. Oak n' Spruce has not yet set a closing date.

Asked what his guests like most to do when they leave the grounds, Mr. Prinz reported that last week they asked for 40 reservations to the Berkshire Playhouse, 30 to Jacob's Pillow and 9 to Tanglewood.

THE BOSTON HERALD, TU

Tanglewood Pops Program Announced

Arthur Fiedler has announced the program the Boston Pops Orchestra will play when the organization makes its first appearance at Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of "Tanglewood on Parade," a day[illegible] for the Berkshire Music [illegible].

Mr. Fiedler has scheduled Sousas "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's "Bolero," the Hayman arrangement of video commercials called "TViana," and Merrick-Bennett's "Look Sharp, Be Sharp."

"Piano Concerto" and the cantata "A Parable of Death" performed last summer. On Aug. 6 he will conduct the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Stravinsky and Mozart.

Miss Doriot Anthony, flutist, and Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, will be soloists in the second and fifth Brandenburg concertos. In the second, Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, also will play solos.

Burgin made his first public appearance at the age of 11 as violin soloist with the Warsaw Philharmonic Society. He has been concertmaster and soloist of the Leningrad, Helsinki, Christiania and Stockholm Orchestras, serving under Nikisch, Fiedler, Richard Strauss, Schneevoigt and Sibelius. He became concertmaster of the Boston Symphony in 1920 and heads the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center. Recently he was named conductor of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

In Debut Last Summer

Miss Anthony returns to Tanglewood where she made her debut in the same solo last summer. Before joining the Boston Symphony she played in the National Symphony, Washington, D. C., the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the NBC Standard (Los Angeles) and Hollywood Bowl symphony orchestras.

Gomberg, a native Bostonian, was first oboe for Stokowski's All-American Youth, the Baltimore Symphony and the Mutual Broadcasting orchestras, and has soloed for the New York City Center Symphony under Leonard Bernstein. He is a graduate of Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. A native of Algers, France, Voisin learned to play the trumpet from his father, whom he succeeded with the Boston Symphony. He teaches solfege at Tanglewood.

The identical program of five of the six Brandenburg concertos, (which Johann Sebastian Bach presented to the Margraf of Brandenburg in 1721) with the same soloists, attracted a record-breaking attendance of 4200 at the opening of the Berkshire Festival's chamber orchestra concerts last summer. Prior to this never more than two of the concerti were ever played on the same program at Tanglewood.

Tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 15, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which also will seat the lawn audience.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

At Tanglewood Tonight

Chamber Orchestra Series To Open; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30.

4360 Average '53 Draw

Known popularly as "the Bach-Mozart concerts," these popular programs in 1953 attracted an audience of 26,150, an average attendance of 4360. An innovation will find the chamber orchestra concerts given on successive Friday evenings, July 16, July 23, July 30, Aug. 6; the final one, however, will be on a Thursday, Aug. 12, because of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, Aug. 13.

At tonight's all-Bach concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the podium at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss, composer-conductor-pianist and this year head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department V for amateur students of music, as soloist.

Foss was born in Berlin in 1922 and studied at the Paris Conservatoire from the time he was 11 until he was 15. On coming to the U. S. in 1937, he studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia with Randall Thompson, Fritz Reiner and Paul Hindemith, then became a conductor-pupil of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood, and was appointed to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1946.

Teaches at California

He is professor of music at the University of California. He has won Pulitzer, Guggenheim and Fulbright fellowships, the Horblit Award of the Boston Symphony, the Prix de Rome, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," a cantata.

His compositions include "Ode For Orchestra," "Symphony in G," a ballet "The Gift of the Magi," and three works done at Tanglewood, "The Song of Songs" in 1950,

EAGLE

Music

U.S. Premiere of Bloch Work Highlights Quartet Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A FIRST performance in America of a new composition by the eminent Swiss-American Ernest Bloch was the high light of the concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Griller String Quartet. The same ensemble had played the new work for its premiere only 10 days ago in London, whence they had flown last week for this engagement.

Bloch first came to the United States in 1916 during which visit he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his "Trois Poemes Juifs." In 1919, his suite for viola and piano won the Coolidge prize at the second chamber music festival on South Mountain in Pittsfield. His new quartet, his fourth, shows, the same individual characteristics which distinguish all his other works—a warm sincerity, a mastery of instrumental writing, a rhapsodical nature without rapt attention to form, and unlimited imaginative material.

* * *

THERE ARE more sections which are quiet and poetic than there are in a more agitated spirit, regardless of the markings of the four movements. In many instances there is discernible the fervid passion and turbulent sorrow which some authorities consider Bloch's Jewish racial impulsion. There is no implication of any of the superficial melody or harmonic idioms commonly attributed to Hebrew sources and which, anyway, are probably not at all authentic. Bloch has often expressed himself on Jewish themes but in a personal way.

There are few restrictive elements in this quartet. There are frequent contrasting sequences, moving from violence to serenity and back within the same movement, using harmonic devices which would be hard on the ear if they did not pass so swiftly. The playing by the Grillers was graphic and ardent, and their warm reception by the audience which filled the hall was richly deserved. The composer's daughter, Suzanne, was in the audience. The composer, himself, has not yet heard his own quartet performed.

* * *

THE MEMBERS of the quartet are Sidney Griller, first violin; Jack O'Brien, second violin; Philip Burton, viola; and Colin Hampton, cello. The "Hunt" of Mozart and the Opus 18, No. 2 of Beethoven completed their program. In these familiar choices of the classics they afforded pleasure if not unforgettable memories.

Their general approach was removed from the conventional. The slow movements were played slower than is usually heard, and they did not hestiate to linger on certain phrases and even single notes if it pleased them to stay and savor the lusciousness of some fragment that pleased them. The individual competency was not equal in all four corners of the ensemble although the musical cohesion was excellent and, certainly within their rights, valid.

[237]

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
JUL 10 1954

Send Your Questions To . . .

The Counselor

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Question: We are planning to drive up to the Berkshires to the Music Festival. Will you tell us when these concerts are scheduled and how to get there? Can we drive it from here and back the same evening, and still go to work next day?

Miss ADG

Answer: The concerts started last Wednesday and will continue through Aug. 15. Two routes that are fast are the Taconic Parkway to U. S. 44 just west of Millbrook; east on 44 to Route 7, north on 7 at Canaan to Lenox, Mass., where the concerts are held at Tanglewood, or Route 7 all the way from Norwalk. You may want to try Route 22, which is good in the evenings. The trip takes at least three and a half hours one way, but musical devotees think nothing of driving up and back for the evening's exaltation. You don't reach Westchester until 2 A. M., however.

DOMINION DAY

Question: Just what is meant by the Canadian holiday, "Dominion Day"? W. H.

Answer: The Canadian legal holiday, July 1, Dominion Day, commemorates the formation of the separate provinces of Canada into the dominion in 1867.

SWIMS FOR PARALYZED

Question: We want all polio victims in Westchester to know about the pools that have been opened for their use this Summer. The Polio Parents Club of Westchester announces that four pools have been donated on four week days for the use of handicapped persons. If you are physically handicapped and wish to join this swim program, write to Mrs. William H. Bender Jr., Alger Court, Bronxville. These pools are in Scarsdale and Yonkers, and arrangements will be made for instruction, and transportation. Swim periods fall on Monday and Tuesday mornings, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

MRS. WALTER T. LAHEY
Polio Parents Club, Pres.

Answer: The cool splashing in hot July and August is less than half of the benefit this supervised swimming gives polio victims. By the end of the Summer, muscles are strengthened by underwater exercise and when the fun is forgotten the new health continues. Any volunteer who wants to join in the fun, who can teach swimming, drive participants back and forth from home to pools, or help in the dressing rooms, get in touch with the Volunteer Service Bureau, WH 8-4742.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Question: We are thinking of retiring in Florida and cannot move all the household goods we have accumulated for 40 odd years. How can we get an honest appraisal on our furniture and pictures before we put them up for sale? P. O. B.

Answer: Since the market fluctuates from week to week, the best answer is one of our reliable warehouses, auction rooms or used furniture dealers. If you know your pictures and furniture have value as antiques, call in a dealer whose reputation is established. Auction rooms will give you an over-all appraisal free if you are selling through them; art dealers usually are competent appraisers of paintings.

WESTCHESTER GOLF

Question: Would you please tell me what golf courses in Westchester are open to the public? Are any private golf courses open to the public on certain days? Do they give service men special reductions on fees?

M. D. S.

Answer: There are County owned golf courses in four parks —Sprain Lake, Mohansic, Maple Moor and Saxon Woods. Courses that may be opened to the public are the Nannahagen Golf Course in Pleasantville, Green Valley Country Club in Port Chester, and the Somers course near Somers. The public is not allowed to play on private club links. Service men pay the regular greens fees.

INDIVIDUAL ANSWERS

To Mr. Z.: Yes, if the hair cell was not injured.

To P.P.: He should see his dealer. This is a legal matter.

To F.K.: No. Only the family saw it.

To J.A.: Jeanne is right.

To Mrs. A.J.: Long Beach is a city of 250,000 people. Write the Chamber of Commerce there for details about the city.

TO INSURE a reply, please enclose a stamped envelope with your return address on it.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 15 1954

Library Offers Recordings of Classic Music

Now that the Berkshire symphonic festival at Tanglewood is in full swing, the Schenectady county public library offers to interested listeners recordings of many of the selections which will be played this season.

* * *

THOSE AVAILABLE for the July performances are: July 18, Debussy, Iberia, Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique; July 23, Handel, Concerto Grosso No. 4, Haydn, Military Symphony, Haydn, Nelson Mass; July 24, Weber, Freischutz Overture, Strauss, Don Juan; July 25, Berlioz, Beatrice and Benedict Overture, Berlioz, Harold in Italy; July 30, Mozart, Serenade; July 31 Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet. Records by Claudio Arrau, playing on July 7; the Zimbler String Sinfonietta on July 21; the Griller string quartet, July 28, also may be borrowed.

* * *

FOR NEWCOMERS to the area or seasoned Tanglewood goers who wish to know something about the locale of the festival and the people taking part in it, the library has available the following book titles: "The Berkshires Through the Camera of Arthur Palme" by Arthur Palme; "The Berkshires," edited by Roderick Peattie; "The Tales of Tanglewood," by M. A. de W. Howe; a biography of the current director, Charles Munch, in "Dictators of the Baton" by David Ewen.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 14 1954

There's More To Piano Than Playing

Lenox, Mass., July 14—(UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 65 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos were wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
JUL 14 1954

The Berkshire Festival

Berlioz 'Faust' Is Feature Of Opening at Tanglewood

By THEODORE M. STRONGIN

LENOX, Mass., July 14 — (Special to The Star and N.Y. Herald Tribune) — The fifth Berkshire Festival program will be conducted in the Shed at Tanglewood here tonight when the Albeneri Trio is heard in numbers by Brahms, Martinu and Beethoven. A capacity audience is expected again.

The trio, composed of Erich Itor Kahn, pianist; Giorgi Ciompi violinist; and Benar Hefitz, cellist, will play trio in B, Op. 8 by Brahms; trio in D minor by Martinu, and trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") by Beethoven.

The festival opened last Wednesday night with a chamber music concert featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoherman, cello) in a Beethoven program including the trio for strings in G, Op. 9, No. 1, and three piano sonatas.

ON Friday the chamber orchestra concert, the second event on this year's program, proved again for an audience of 2,800 (1,200 in the theatre-concert hall, 1,600 outside) that Bach's Brandenburg concerti are wonderful to hear, whether the conductor helps or not.

Unfortunately, Charles Munch, who officiated, did not help often enough. These concerti need the most forthright of accents and steadiest pacing. Mr. Munch changed speed constantly and sometimes played down vigor in favor of a nervous approach rather than a staunch one. Five of the concerti were given; No. 4 was omitted. Only in a few solo portions of Nos. 2 and 5 was anything in evidence like the powerful joyful old Bach most of us expected to hear in these works.

For this small happy residue, the principals were responsible. They were, in concerto No. 2, Doriot Anthony, flute; Ralph Gomburg, oboe; Richard Burgin, violin; and Richard Voisin, trumpet; in No. 5, Miss Anthony, Mr. Burgin, and Lukas Foss, pianist. All were splendid even though at times Mr. Voisin's specially built high trumpet penetrated through the orchestra too strongly—but Mr. Munch did not raise the orchestra up to meet the trumpet's shrill demands.

AN audience of 8,500 at the Tanglewood Shed on Saturday heard Mr. Munch conduct the complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. For soloists there were Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Bander.

Mr. Munch's "Damnation" was remarkable; no single soloist or group stood out, because all levels were so high that there was nothing to stand out from. The many separate virtues of each singer, and they had lovely voices, all of them, were much less notable that the perfect service each one gave to the moving work.

Soloists, chorus, orchestra, conductor, all contributed to a human experience, not a mere experience in notes. Theirs was the highest type of musicianship.

THE fourth festival program was conducted Sunday afternoon by Pierre Monteux with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3; and the fifth symphony. Some 10,050 persons heard the concert.

Mr. Arrau, Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra first played together February 4, 1924. Thirty years gives time for a lot of polish to be applied and Mr. Arrau gave a scintillating, gleaming performance. Brilliant it was, thoughtful it was not, although a little warmth crept into the second movement. Brilliance, however, is a perfectly legitimate facet of this piece.

Mr. Monteux and the orchestra filled the rest of the afternoon with perfect Beethoven, strong, rich and solid as a rock — a rousing conclusion to the Festival's first big week-end.

PROMENADE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL - 1954

The festival trail leads out and away again this month, with music ringing from Central Park to Steamboat Springs to Santa Barbara. The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. gets under way July 7, and offers visitors six weekends of concerts with Berlioz, played by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, as the main dish. Also tucked into the Berkshire hills near Lenox are festivals at Jacob's Pillow (dance), Stockbridge (opera), Falls Village, Conn. (chamber music), and—a bit further north—Pike, N. H. (all seven never-livelier arts).

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 6 - 1954

Center at Tanglewood Opens On Hawthorne's Anniversary

The opening exercises of the 12th season of the Berkshire Music center were held Sunday afternoon in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Hawthorne Anniversary

Dr. Lewis D. Perry, a native of Williamstown and a trustee of the Boston Symphony orchestra, acted as master of ceremonies for the program. The event was held on the 150th anniversary of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne, who wrote Tanglewood Tales.

As the retiring chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Perry announced gifts totaling $30,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The center is to receive from the Rockefeller foundation $15,000 this year, $10,000 next year and $5,000 three years from now in order to maintain its world-renowned school, the only one conducted by an orchestra anywhere.

Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music center and conductor of the Boston Symphony and was introduced by Dr. praised for his tremendous leadership and belief in youth.

400-Member Student Body

Dr Munch in turn welcomed the 400-member student body, whose members come not only from far-flung parts of this country but distant lands as well. The famed conductor said, "Music, more than any other art, contributes to the happiness of human beings. Its power lies in the fact that it reveals to us beauties that we cannot find in any other sphere."

Among the many noted guests at the affair was Gertrude Robinson Smith, "godmother" of the Berkshire Festival, who only recently returned from Paris. She was one of the originators of the festival, which she saw launched at the Dan Hanna farm under a huge tent.

Concluding the program was the singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia by the chorus, made up of the student body of the center, under the direction of Hugh Ross. Following that, there was a reception and tea for guests, faculty members and students in the formal gardens, adjacent to the theater-hall.

Missourians at Music Camp

Two Missouri girls who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. Talking with GEORGE E. JUDD, orchestra manager, are MARA HALL, center, violinist from Fulton, and EMMA LOU DIEMER, music composition student from Warrensburg.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch
July 27, 1954

[238]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

YWCA Sponsoring Bus to Tanglewood

To Leave at 11.30 Sunday For Afternoon Concert

The Young Women's Christian Association in Howard St., is sponsoring a special bus to Lenox on Sunday for the afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The bus will leave the YW at 11.30. It is suggested that those planning to take the trip, take along picnic lunches, as there will be time to partake of them and also to roam about the grounds before the concert begins. Snacks also may be purchased there.

Sunday's program will include the overture to "Lenore" No. 3, and Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"), by Beethoven, with Claudio Arrau, soloist, and Symphony No. 5 by the same composer.

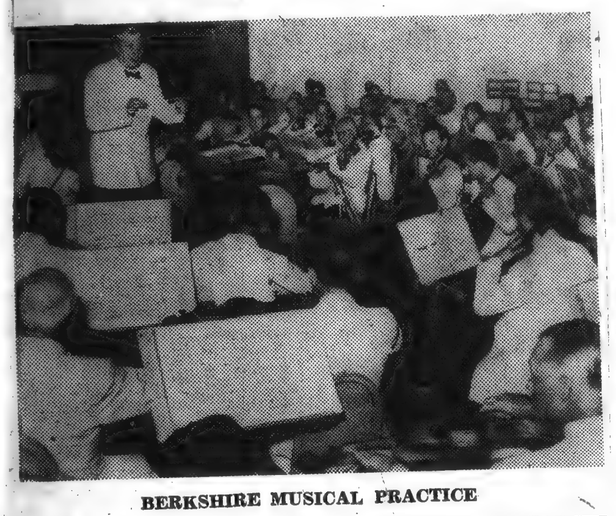
The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor.

Reservations for bus seats are now open and further information may be obtained by calling the Young Women's Christian Association.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER-DISPATCH
JUL 9 - 1954

at the NEW YORK THEATRES

by Charles K. Freeman



BERKSHIRE MUSICAL PRACTICE

MUSIC

In a summer swing around the Eastern Coast this observer of the Theatre, Music and Dance departments, all closely related each to the other, paused in the quiet countryside of Lennox Mass. to note the preparations attendant upon the oncoming Berkshire Festival, which tees odd with a chamber orchestra of symphony players this evening.

* * *

Since we haven't anything quite of the same kind, the Berkshire Festival is as important to be aware of musically as, let us say, the Shakespeare season at Stratford, Ontario. The latter Festival of plays which aroused considerable excitement last year is digging deeper and more experimentally into seldom done plays and is paying court to a far greater number of attendees than ever before.

* * *

But back to Berkshire, where the towns are beautifully laid out and the highways planned for swarming traffic. This is the fourth season that Charles Munch lifts his baton as conductor of much of the orchestra's presentations and head of the musical activities, which includes besides the chamber and full Boston Symphony orchestras, the [illegible] school, as well. An all-Bach program of Brandenberg Concerto, with Lukas Foss as Piano soloist is tonight's offering and, tomorrow the Music Shed will be inaugurated with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth.

* * *

Mr. Munch, who addressed the opening exercises of the Center last Sunday and had his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday, is expecting this to be the most active of the many Berkshire seasons, now seventeen in number. There will be six weeks of music and particular note will be taken of this, the 150th anniversary of the composer Berlioz. The Saturday morning rehearsal will be open to the public with proceeds for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund.

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 9 - 1954

SITTING IN WITH TED ASHBY

The Flying Maestro

MONTEUX

THE DISTINGUISHED-LOOKING MAN with jet black hair and flowing white mustache sat quietly reading a book in the Mohawk Airlines lobby at Logan International Airport. "Pierre Monteux?" Al Alabiso, public relations director at the airport, inquired. Mr. Monteux, 79, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, nodded assent. Without referring to a single note, the fabulous Mr. Monteux described a year's itinerary.

★ ★ ★

FOR A MAN who retired several years ago it is a pretty ambitious program. "I am going to Tanglewood" said the toast of Boston and San Francisco society, "for concerts July 11 and 17. Between those dates, I go to New York for two Stadium concerts. Then I come back to Boston for a recording date with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra July 19 at Symphony Hall.

* * *

"THE FOLLOWING MONDAY at 5 p. m. I fly to Chicago for six Ravigna concerts (open air) with the Chicago Symphony. July 30 I fly by way of Boston to Hancock, Me., where I live, to conduct classes in conducting during the month of August. At the end of August, I'm off for Hollywood and two concerts at the Hollywood Bowl. After that I fly back to Boston, and soon take a plane for San Francisco to conduct opera two months.

* * *

"IN NOVEMBER I fly to New York to conduct two months with the Metropolitan Opera Company. Then back to Boston for three weeks with the Boston Symphony. After that, back to New York for another week-and-a-half with the Metropolitan. Next I go to Montreal for two concerts, back to the Metropolitan, and back to Montreal for two more concerts. Back again to the Met, and back again to Montreal for still another two appearances.

"THAT TAKES ME, roughly, to the end of next April, when I fly to London to conduct the Philharmonic Orchestra. From London I fly to Amsterdam to conduct the Concertgebrouw Orchestra at the Holland Festival. From Holland I go to Italy to conduct. From Italy I go to Brussels, Belgium. Finally, I fly back to America for my Summer concerts. That, briefly, answers your question as to where I'm going."

* * *

MEANWHILE, the celebrated conductor will be back here to observe his 80th birthday. The day before, April 3, he will be honored by the Boston Symphony, which will proceed with him to Bangor, Me., to perform under his direction during ceremonies dedicating a new concert hall there. Mr. Monteux, whose 14 grandchildren delight him, is the only living former conductor of the Boston Symphony.

* * *

PIERRE MONTEUX led the Boston Symphony five years before going to Amsterdam in 1924 and remaining there 10 years. He then went to San Francisco, where he conducted the Symphony for 17 years, following which he supposedly retired. Mr. Monteux, sensing that something was to be written about him, made only two requests, to wit: "Do not spell my name with an 'a,' and do not say that I dye my hair, which, you can see, I do not."

[illegible]BURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 12 1954

Bach Program Planned At Tanglewood

An all-Bach program will highlight this week's Berkshire Festival Concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. They will be heard Wednesday, Friday, Saturday, and next Sunday.

An evening of chamber music by The Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello; comprises the program to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall Wednesday. The all-Bach program will be conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, Friday in the hall with two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. A cantata will be conducted by Hugh Ross. Music of Debussy and Franck will be performed Saturday in the Music Shed, with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor and Vera Franceschi piano soloist. On Sunday afternoon, Munch will conduct the symphony orchestra and Leo Smit will be pianist in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m. and the Sunday concert is at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain, the evening concerts will be held in the Music Shed.

Oak n' Spruce Enjoying Busiest Season in History

LEE — Oak n' Spruce in South Lee is in the midst of its busiest season since the resort opened seven years ago, Frank Prinz, owner-manager, reports.

The guest total is running at a capacity of 120, with about 20 of these farmed out in local homes, he said. Because the resort is at capacity all week, reservations are not accepted for weekends.

Biggest guest total in the history of the resort was 172 over the 4th of July weekend. This total cannot be equalled in midseason, Mr. Prinz pointed out, as guest houses in which the extra people were placed over the holiday are now saving their space for the Tanglewood weekenders.

For at least the next two weeks, business is expected to continue about the same. Oak n' Spruce has not yet set a closing date.

Asked what his guests like most to do when they leave the grounds, Mr. Prinz reported that last week they asked for 40 reservations to the Berkshire Playhouse, 30 to Jacob's Pillow and 9 to Tanglewood.

August 2

THE BOSTON HERALD, TU

Tanglewood Pops Program Announced

Arthur Fiedler has announced the program the Boston Pops Orchestra will play when the organization makes its first appearance at Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of "Tanglewood on Parade," a day[illegible] benefit for the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Fiedler has scheduled Sousas "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, a suite from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," Ravel's "Bolero," the Hayman arrangement of video commercials called "TViana," and Merrick-Bennett's "Look Sharp, Be Sharp."

"Piano Concerto" and the cantata "A Parable of Death" performed last summer. On Aug. 6 he will conduct the Chamber Orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Stravinsky and Mozart.

Miss Doriot Anthony, flutist, and Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, will be soloists in the second and fifth Brandenburg concertos. In the second, Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Ralph Gomberg, oboe, also will play solos.

Burgin made his first public appearance at the age of 11 as violin soloist with the Warsaw Philharmonic Society. He has been concertmaster and soloist of the Leningrad, Helsinki, Christiania and Stockholm Orchestras, serving under Nikisch, Fiedler, Richard Strauss, Schneevoigt and Sibelius. He became concertmaster of the Boston Symphony in 1920 and heads the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center. Recently he was named conductor of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston.

In Debut Last Summer

Miss Anthony returns to Tanglewood where she made her debut in the same solo last summer. Before joining the Boston Symphony she played in the National Symphony, Washington, D. C., the Los Angeles Philharmonic, the NBC Standard (Los Angeles) and Hollywood Bowl symphony orchestras.

Gomberg, a native Bostonian, was first oboe for Stokowski's All-American Youth, the Baltimore Symphony and the Mutual Broadcasting orchestras, and has soloed for the New York City Center Symphony under Leonard Bernstein. He is a graduate of Curtis Institute, Philadelphia. A native of Avignon, France, Voisin learned to play the trumpet from his father, whom he succeeded with the Boston Symphony. He teaches solfege at Tanglewood.

The identical program of five of the six Brandenburg concertos, (which Johann Sebastian Bach presented to the Margraf of Brandenburg in 1721) with the same soloists, attracted a record-breaking attendance of 4200 at the opening of the Berkshire Festival's chamber orchestra concerts last summer. Prior to this never more than two of the concerti were ever played on the same program at Tanglewood.

Tickets for tonight's concert and the succeeding ones by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Festival, which concludes Aug. 15, may be obtained at the Tanglewood box office, and telephone reservations are accepted —Lenox 600. Admission for listening from the lawn will be available on the day of each concert. In case of rain the programs will be held in the Music Shed, which also will seat the lawn audience.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

At Tanglewood Tonight

Chamber Orchestra Series To Open; Munch to Conduct

The first of six chamber orchestra programs by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, will be given at the Berkshire Festival tonight in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30.

4360 Average '53 Draw

Known popularly as "the Bach-Mozart concerts," these popular programs in 1953 attracted an audience of 26,150, an average attendance of 4360. An innovation will find the chamber orchestra concerts given on successive Friday evenings, July 16, July 23, July 30, Aug. 6; the final one, however, will be on a Thursday, Aug. 12, because of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, Aug. 13.

At tonight's all-Bach concert, Mr. Munch, in his first appearance on the podium at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6, with Lukas Foss, composer-conductor-pianist and this year head of the Berkshire Music Center's Department V for amateur students of music, as soloist.

Foss was born in Berlin in 1922 and studied at the Paris Conservatoire from the time he was 11 until he was 15. On coming to the U. S. in 1937, he studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia with Randall Thompson, Fritz Reiner and Paul Hindemith, then became a conductor-pupil of Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood, and was appointed to the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1946.

Teaches at California

He is professor of music at the University of California. He has won Pulitzer, Guggenheim and Fulbright fellowships, the Horblit Award of the Boston Symphony, the Prix de Rome, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," a cantata.

His compositions include "Ode For Orchestra," "Symphony in G," a ballet "The Gift of the Magi," and three works done at Tanglewood, "The Song of Songs" in 1950,

EAGLE

Music

U.S. Premiere of Bloch Work Highlights Quartet Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A FIRST performance in America of a new composition by the eminent Swiss-American Ernest Bloch was the high light of the concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the Griller String Quartet. The same ensemble had played the new work for its premiere only 10 days ago in London, whence they had flown last week for this engagement.

Bloch first came to the United States in 1916 during which visit he conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his "Trois Poemes Juifs." In 1919, his suite for viola and piano won the Coolidge prize at the second chamber music festival on South Mountain in Pittsfield. His new quartet, his fourth, shows, the same individual characteristics which distinguish all his other works—a warm sincerity, a mastery of instrumental writing, a rhapsodical nature without rapt attention to form, and unlimited imaginative material.

* * *

THERE ARE more sections which are quiet and poetic than there are in a more agitated spirit, regardless of the markings of the four movements. In many instances there is discernible the fervid passion and turbulent sorrow which some authorities consider Bloch's Jewish racial impulsion. There is no implication of any of the superficial melody or harmonic idioms commonly attributed to Hebrew sources and which, anyway, are probably not at all authentic. Bloch has often expressed himself on Jewish themes but in a personal way.

There are few restrictive elements in this quartet. There are frequent contrasting sequences, moving from violence to serenity and back within the same movement, using harmonic devices which would be hard on the ear if they did not pass so swiftly. The playing by the Grillers was graphic and ardent, and their warm reception by the audience which filled the hall was richly deserved. The composer's daughter, Suzanne, was in the audience. The composer, himself, has not yet heard his own quartet performed.

* * *

THE MEMBERS of the quartet are Sidney Griller, first violin; Jack O'Brien, second violin; Philip Burton, viola; and Colin Hampton, cello. The "Hunt" of Mozart and the Opus 18, No. 2 of Beethoven completed their program. In these familiar choices of the classics they afforded pleasure if not unforgettable memories.

Their general approach was removed from the conventional. The slow movements were played slower than is usually heard, and they did not hestiate to linger on certain phrases and even single notes if it pleased them to stay and savor the lusciousness of some fragment that pleased them. The individual competency was not equal in all four corners of the ensemble although the musical cohesion was excellent and, certainly within their rights, valid.

[237]

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
JUL 10 1954

Send Your Questions To . . .

The Counselor

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Question: We are planning to drive up to the Berkshires to the Music Festival. Will you tell us when these concerts are scheduled and how to get there? Can we drive it from here and back the same evening, and still go to work next day?

Miss ADG

Answer: The concerts started last Wednesday and will continue through Aug. 15. Two routes that are fast are the Taconic Parkway to U. S. 44 just west of Millbrook; east on 44 to Route 7, north on 7 at Canaan to Lenox, Mass., where the concerts are held at Tanglewood, or Route 7 all the way from Norwalk. You may want to try Route 22, which is good in the evenings. The trip takes at least three and a half hours one way, but musical devotees think nothing of driving up and back for the evening's exaltation. You don't reach Westchester until 2 A. M., however.

DOMINION DAY

Question: Just what is meant by the Canadian holiday, "Dominion Day"? W. H.

Answer: The Canadian legal holiday, July 1, Dominion Day, commemorates the formation of the separate provinces of Canada into the dominion in 1867.

SWIMS FOR PARALYZED

Question: We want all polio victims in Westchester to know about the pools that have been opened for their use this Summer. The Polio Parents Club of Westchester announces that four pools have been donated on four week days for the use of handicapped persons. If you are physically handicapped and wish to join this swim program, write to Mrs. William H. Bender Jr., Alger Court, Bronxville. These pools are in Scarsdale and Yonkers, and arrangements will be made for instruction, and transportation. Swim periods fall on Monday and Tuesday mornings, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

MRS. WALTER T. LAHEY
Polio Parents Club, Pres.

Answer: The cool splashing in hot July and August is less than half of the benefit this supervised swimming gives polio victims. By the end of the Summer, muscles are strengthened by underwater exercise and when the fun is forgotten the new health continues. Any volunteer who wants to join in the fun, who can teach swimming, drive participants back and forth from home to pools, or help in the dressing rooms, get in touch with the Volunteer Service Bureau, WH 8-4742.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Question: We are thinking of retiring in Florida and cannot move all the household goods we have accumulated for 40 odd years. How can we get an honest appraisal on our furniture and pictures before we put them up for sale? P. O. B.

Answer: Since the market fluctuates from week to week, the best answer is one of our reliable warehouses, auction rooms or used furniture dealers. If you know your pictures and furniture have value as antiques, call in a dealer whose reputation is established. Auction rooms will give you an over-all appraisal free if you are selling through them; art dealers usually are competent appraisers of paintings.

WESTCHESTER GOLF

Question: Would you please tell me what golf courses in Westchester are open to the public? Are any private golf courses open to the public on certain days? Do they give service men special reductions on fees?

M. D. S.

Answer: There are County owned golf courses in four parks —Sprain Lake, Mohansic, Maple Moor and Saxon Woods. Courses that may be opened to the public are the Nannahagen Golf Course in Pleasantville, Green Valley Country Club in Port Chester, and the Somers course near Somers. The public is not allowed to play on private club links. Service men pay the regular greens fees.

INDIVIDUAL ANSWERS

To Mr. Z.: Yes, if the hair cell was not injured.

To P.P.: He should see his dealer. This is a legal matter.

To F.K.: No. Only the family saw it.

To J.A.: Jeanne is right.

To Mrs. A.J.: Long Beach is a city of 250,000 people. Write the Chamber of Commerce there for details about the city.

TO INSURE a reply, please enclose a stamped envelope with your return address on it.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 15 1954

Library Offers Recordings of Classic Music

Now that the Berkshire symphonic festival at Tanglewood is in full swing, the Schenectady county public library offers to interested listeners recordings of many of the selections which will be played this season.

* * *

THOSE AVAILABLE for the July performances are: July 18, Debussy, Iberia, Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique; July 23, Handel, Concerto Grosso No. 4, Haydn, Military Symphony, Haydn, Nelson Mass; July 24, Weber, Freischutz Overture, Strauss, Don Juan; July 25, Berlioz, Beatrice and Benedict Overture, Berlioz, Harold in Italy; July 30, Mozart, Serenade; July 31 Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet. Records by Claudio Arrau, playing on July 7; the Zimbler String Sinfonietta on July 21; the Griller string quartet, July 28, also may be borrowed.

* * *

FOR NEWCOMERS to the area or seasoned Tanglewood goers who wish to know something about the locale of the festival and the people taking part in it, the library has available the following book titles: "The Berkshires Through the Camera of Arthur Palme" by Arthur Palme; "The Berkshires," edited by Roderick Peattie; "The Tales of Tanglewood," by M. A. de W. Howe; a biography of the current director, Charles Munch, in "Dictators of the Baton" by David Ewen.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 14 1954

There's More To Piano Than Playing

Lenox, Mass., July 14—(UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 65 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos were wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
JUL 14 1954

The Berkshire Festival

Berlioz 'Faust' Is Feature Of Opening at Tanglewood

By THEODORE M. STRONGIN

LENOX, Mass., July 14 — (Special to The Star and N.Y. Herald Tribune) — The fifth Berkshire Festival program will be conducted in the Shed at Tanglewood here tonight when the Albeneri Trio is heard in numbers by Brahms, Martinu and Beethoven. A capacity audience is expected again.

The trio, composed of Erich Itor Kahn, pianist; Giorgi Ciompi violinist; and Benar Hefitz, cellist, will play trio in B, Op. 8 by Brahms; trio in D minor by Martinu, and trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archdukę") by Beethoven.

The festival opened last Wednesday night with a chamber music concert featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoherman, cello) in a Beethoven program including the trio for strings in G, Op. 9, No. 1, and three piano sonatas.

ON Friday the chamber orchestra concert, the second event on this year's program, proved again for an audience of 2,800 (1,200 in the theatre-concert hall, 1,600 outside) that Bach's Brandenburg concerti are wonderful to hear, whether the conductor helps or not.

Unfortunately, Charles Munch, who officiated, did not help often enough. These concerti need the most forthright of accents and steadiest pacing. Mr. Munch changed speed constantly and sometimes played down vigor in favor of a nervous approach rather than a staunch one. Five of the concerti were given; No. 4 was omitted. Only in a few solo portions of Nos. 2 and 5 was anything in evidence like the powerful joyful old Bach most of us expected to hear in these works.

For this small happy residue, the principals were responsible. They were, in concerto No. 2, Doriot Anthony, flute; Ralph Gomburg, oboe; Richard Burgin, violin; and Richard Voisin, trumpet; in No. 5, Miss Anthony, Mr. Burgin, and Lukas Foss, pianist. All were splendid even though at times Mr. Voisin's specially built high trumpet penetrated through the orchestra too strongly—but Mr. Munch did not raise the orchestra up to meet the trumpet's shrill demands.

AN audience of 8,500 at the Tanglewood Shed on Saturday heard Mr. Munch conduct the complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. For soloists there were Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Bander.

Mr. Munch's "Damnation" was remarkable; no single soloist or group stood out, because all levels were so high that there was nothing to stand out from. The many separate virtues of each singer, and they had lovely voices, all of them, were much less notable that the perfect service each one gave to the moving work.

Soloists, chorus, orchestra, conductor, all contributed to a human experience, not a mere experience in notes. Theirs was the highest type of musicianship.

THE fourth festival program was conducted Sunday afternoon by Pierre Monteux with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3; and the fifth symphony. Some 10,050 persons heard the concert.

Mr. Arrau, Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra first played together February 4, 1924. Thirty years gives time for a lot of polish to be applied and Mr. Arrau gave a scintillating, gleaming performance. Brilliant it was, thoughtful it was not, although a little warmth crept into the second movement. Brilliance, however, is a perfectly legitimate facet of this piece.

Mr. Monteux and the orchestra filled the rest of the afternoon with perfect Beethoven, strong, rich and solid as a rock — a rousing conclusion to the Festival's first big week-end.

PROMENADE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL - 1954

The festival trail leads out and away again this month, with music ringing from Central Park to Steamboat Springs to Santa Barbara. The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. gets under way July 7, and offers visitors six weekends of concerts with Berlioz, played by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, as the main dish. Also tucked into the Berkshire hills near Lenox are festivals at Jacob's Pillow (dance), Stockbridge (opera), Falls Village, Conn. (chamber music), and—a bit further north—Pike, N. H. (all seven never-livelier arts).

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 6 - 1954

Center at Tanglewood Opens On Hawthorne's Anniversary

The opening exercises of the 12th season of the Berkshire Music center were held Sunday afternoon in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Hawthorne Anniversary

Dr. Lewis D. Perry, a native of Williamstown and a trustee of the Boston Symphony orchestra, acted as master of ceremonies for the program. The event was held on the 150th anniversary of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne, who wrote Tanglewood Tales.

As the retiring chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Perry announced gifts totaling $30,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The center is to receive from the Rockefeller foundation $15,000 this year, $10,000 next year and $5,000 three years from now in order to maintain its world-renowned school, the only one conducted by an orchestra anywhere.

Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music center and conductor of the Boston Symphony and was introduced by Dr. praised for his tremendous leadership and belief in youth.

400-Member Student Body

Dr Munch in turn welcomed the 400-member student body, whose members come not only from far-flung parts of this country but distant lands as well. The famed conductor said, "Music, more than any other art, contributes to the happiness of human beings. Its power lies in the fact that it reveals to us beauties that we cannot find in any other sphere."

Among the many noted guests at the affair was Gertrude Robinson Smith, "godmother" of the Berkshire Festival, who only recently returned from Paris. She was one of the originators of the festival, which she saw launched at the Dan Hanna farm under a huge tent.

Concluding the program was the singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia by the chorus made up of the student body of the center, under the direction of Hugh Ross. Following that, there was a reception and tea for guests, faculty members and students in the formal gardens, adjacent to the theater-hall.

Missourians at Music Camp

Two Missouri girls who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. Talking with GEORGE E. JUDD, orchestra manager, are MARA HALL, center, violinist from Fulton, and EMMA LOU DIEMER, music composition student from Warrensburg.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch
July 27, 1954

[238]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

YWCA Sponsoring Bus to Tanglewood

To Leave at 11.30 Sunday For Afternoon Concert

The Young Women's Christian Association in Howard St., is sponsoring a special bus to Lenox on Sunday for the afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The bus will leave the YW at 11.30. It is suggested that those planning to take the trip, take along picnic lunches, as there will be time to partake of them and also to roam about the grounds before the concert begins. Snacks also may be purchased there.

Sunday's program will include the overture to "Lenore" No. 3, and Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"), by Beethoven, with Claudio Arrau, soloist, and Symphony No. 5 by the same composer.

The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor.

Reservations for bus seats are now open and further information may be obtained by calling the Young Women's Christian Association.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
JUL 10 1954

Send Your Questions To . . .

The Counselor

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Question: We are planning to drive up to the Berkshires to the Music Festival. Will you tell us when these concerts are scheduled and how to get there? Can we drive it from here and back the same evening, and still go to work next day?

Miss ADG

Answer: The concerts started last Wednesday and will continue through Aug. 15. Two routes that are fast are the Taconic Parkway to U. S. 44 just west of Millbrook; east on 44 to Route 7, north on 7 at Canaan to Lenox, Mass., where the concerts are held at Tanglewood, or Route 7 all the way from Norwalk. You may want to try Route 22, which is good in the evenings. The trip takes at least three and a half hours one way, but musical devotees think nothing of driving up and back for the evening's exaltation. You don't reach Westchester until 2 A. M., however.

DOMINION DAY

Question: Just what is meant by the Canadian holiday, "Dominion Day"?

W. H.

Answer: The Canadian legal holiday, July 1, Dominion Day, commemorates the formation of the separate provinces of Canada into the dominion in 1867.

SWIMS FOR PARALYZED

Question: We want all polio victims in Westchester to know about the pools that have been opened for their use this Summer. The Polio Parents Club of Westchester announces that four pools have been donated on four week days for the use of handicapped persons. If you are physically handicapped and wish to join this swim program, write to Mrs. William H. Bender Jr., Alger Court, Bronxville. These pools are in Scarsdale and Yonkers, and arrangements will be made for instruction, and transportation. Swim periods fall on Monday and Tuesday mornings, Thursday and Friday afternoons.

MRS. WALTER T. LAHEY
Polio Parents Club, Pres.

Answer: The cool splashing in hot July and August is less than half of the benefit this supervised swimming gives polio victims. By the end of the Summer, muscles are strengthened by underwater exercise and when the fun is forgotten the new health continues. Any volunteer who wants to join in the fun, who can teach swimming, drive participants back and forth from home to pools, or help in the dressing rooms, get in touch with the Volunteer Service Bureau, WH 8-4742.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Question: We are thinking of retiring in Florida and cannot move all the household goods we have accumulated for 40 odd years. How can we get an honest appraisal on our furniture and pictures before we put them up for sale?

P. O. B.

Answer: Since the market fluctuates from week to week, the best answer is one of our reliable warehouses, auction rooms or used furniture dealers. If you know your pictures and furniture have value as antiques, call in a dealer whose reputation is established. Auction rooms will give you an over-all appraisal free if you are selling through them; art dealers usually are competent appraisers of paintings.

WESTCHESTER GOLF

Question: Would you please tell me what golf courses in Westchester are open to the public? Are any private golf courses open to the public on certain days? Do they give service men special reductions on fees?

M. D. S.

Answer: There are County owned golf courses in four parks —Sprain Lake, Mohansic, Maple Moor and Saxon Woods. Courses that may be opened to the public are the Nannahagen Golf Course in Pleasantville, Green Valley Country Club in Port Chester, and the Somers course near Somers. The public is not allowed to play on private club links. Service men pay the regular greens fees.

INDIVIDUAL ANSWERS

To Mr. Z.: Yes, if the hair cell was not injured.

To P.P.: He should see his dealer. This is a legal matter.

To F.K.: No. Only the family saw it.

To J.A.: Jeanne is right.

To Mrs. A.J.: Long Beach is a city of 250,000 people. Write the Chamber of Commerce there for details about the city.

TO INSURE a reply, please enclose a stamped envelope with your return address on it.

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
JUL 14 1954

The Berkshire Festival

Berlioz 'Faust' Is Feature Of Opening at Tanglewood

By THEODORE M. STRONGIN

LENOX, Mass., July 14 — (Special to The Star and N.Y. Herald Tribune) — The fifth Berkshire Festival program will be conducted in the Shed at Tanglewood here tonight when the Albeneri Trio is heard in numbers by Brahms, Martinu and Beethoven. A capacity audience is expected again.

The trio, composed of Erich Itor Kahn, pianist; Giorgi Ciompi violinist; and Benar Hefitz, cellist, will play trio in B, Op. 8 by Brahms; trio in D minor by Martinu, and trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke") by Beethoven.

The festival opened last Wednesday night with a chamber music concert featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist and the Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoherman, cello) in a Beethoven program including the trio for strings in G, Op. 9, No. 1, and three piano sonatas.

ON Friday the chamber orchestra concert, the second event on this year's program, proved again for an audience of 2,800 (1,200 in the theatre-concert hall, 1,600 outside) that Bach's Brandenburg concerti are wonderful to hear, whether the conductor helps or not.

Unfortunately, Charles Munch, who officiated, did not help often enough. These concerti need the most forthright of accents and steadiest pacing. Mr. Munch changed speed constantly and sometimes played down vigor in favor of a nervous approach rather than a staunch one. Five of the concerti were given; No. 4 was omitted. Only in a few solo portions of Nos. 2 and 5 was anything in evidence like the powerful joyful old Bach most of us expected to hear in these works.

For this small happy residue the principals were responsible. They were, in concerto No. 2, Doriot Anthony, flute; Ralph Gomburg, oboe; Richard Burgin, violin; and Richard Voisin, trumpet; in No. 5, Miss Anthony, Mr. Burgin, and Lukas Foss, pianist. All were splendid even though at times Mr. Voisin's specially built high trumpet penetrated through the orchestra too strongly—but Mr. Munch did not raise the orchestra up to meet the trumpet's shrill demands.

AN audience of 8,500 at the Tanglewood Shed on Saturday heard Mr. Munch conduct the complete Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, 110 members of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society. For soloists there were Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; David Poleri, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles; and Donald Gramm, bass, as Bander.

Mr. Munch's "Damnation" was remarkable; no single soloist or group stood out, because all levels were so high that there was nothing to stand out from. The many separate virtues of each singer, and they had lovely voices, all of them, were much less notable that the perfect service each one gave to the moving work.

Soloists, chorus, orchestra, conducter, all contributed to a human experience, not a mere experience in notes. Theirs was the highest type of musicianship.

THE fourth festival program was conducted Sunday afternoon by Pierre Monteux with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist in an all-Beethoven program: The "Emperor" concerto, "Leonore" overture No. 3; and the fifth symphony. Some 10,050 persons heard the concert.

Mr. Arrau, Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra first played together February 4, 1924. Thirty years gives time for a lot of polish to be applied and Mr. Arrau gave a scintillating, gleaming performance. Brilliant it was, thoughtful it was not, although a little warmth crept into the second movement. Brilliance, however, is a perfectly legitimate facet of this piece.

Mr. Monteux and the orchestra filled the rest of the afternoon with perfect Beethoven, strong, rich and solid as a rock — a rousing conclusion to the Festival's first big week-end.

PROVINCE
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL - 1954

The festival trail leads out and away again this month, with music ringing from Central Park to Steamboat Springs to Santa Barbara. The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. gets under way July 7, and offers visitors six weekends of concerts with Berlioz, played by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, as the main dish. Also tucked into the Berkshire hills near Lenox are festivals at Jacob's Pillow (dance), Stockbridge (opera), Falls Village, Conn. (chamber music), and—a bit further north—Pike, N. H. (all seven never-livelier arts).

NORTH ADAMS, MASS
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 6 - 1954

Center at Tanglewood Opens On Hawthorne's Anniversary

The opening exercises of the 12th season of the Berkshire Music center were held Sunday afternoon in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox.

Hawthorne Anniversary

Dr. Lewis D. Perry, a native of Williamstown and a trustee of the Boston Symphony orchestra, acted as master of ceremonies for the program. The event was held on the 150th anniversary of the birth of Nathaniel Hawthorne, who wrote Tanglewood Tales.

As the retiring chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, Dr. Perry announced gifts totaling $30,000 from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The center is to receive from the Rockefeller foundation $15,000 this year, $10,000 next year and $5,000 three years from now in order to maintain its world-renowned school, the only one conducted by an orchestra anywhere.

Charles Munch, direc[tor] of the Berkshire Music center[,] conductor of the Boston [Symphony] was introduced by Dr. [Perry] and praised for his tremendous leadership and belief in youth.

400-Member Student Body

Dr Munch in turn welcomed the 400-member student body, whose members come not only from far-flung parts of this country but distant lands as well. The famed conductor said, "Music, more than any other art, contributes to the happiness of human beings. Its power lies in the fact that it reveals to us beauties that we cannot find in any other sphere."

Among the many noted guests at the affair was Gertrude Robinson Smith, "godmother" of the Berkshire Festival, who only recently returned from Paris. She was one of the originators of the festival, which she saw launched at the Dan Hanna farm under a huge tent.

Concluding the program was the singing of Randall Thompson's Alleluia by the chorus made up of the student body of the center, under the direction of Hugh Ross. Following that, there was a reception and tea for guests, faculty members and students in the formal gardens, adjacent to the theater-hall.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
JUL 15 1954

Library Offers Recordings of Classic Music

Now that the Berkshire symphonic festival at Tanglewood is in full swing, the Schenectady county public library offers to interested listeners recordings of many of the selections which will be played this season.

* * *

THOSE AVAILABLE for the July performances are: July 18, Debussy, Iberia, Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique; July 23, Handel, Concerto Grosso No. 4, Haydn, Military Symphony, Haydn, Nelson Mass; July 24, Weber, Freischutz Overture, Strauss, Don Juan; July 25, Berlioz, Beatrice and Benedict Overture, Berlioz, Harold in Italy; July 30, Mozart, Serenade; July 31 Berlioz, Romeo and Juliet. Records by Claudio Arrau, playing on July 7; the Zimbler String Sinfonietta on July 21; the Griller string quartet, July 28, also may be borrowed.

* * *

FOR NEWCOMERS to the area or seasoned Tanglewood goers who wish to know something about the locale of the festival and the people taking part in it, the library has available the following book titles: "The Berkshires Through the Camera of Arthur Palme" by Arthur Palme; "The Berkshires," edited by Roderick Peattie; "The Tales of Tanglewood," by M. A. de W. Howe; a biography of the current director, Charles Munch, in "Dictators of the Baton" by David Ewen.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 14 1954

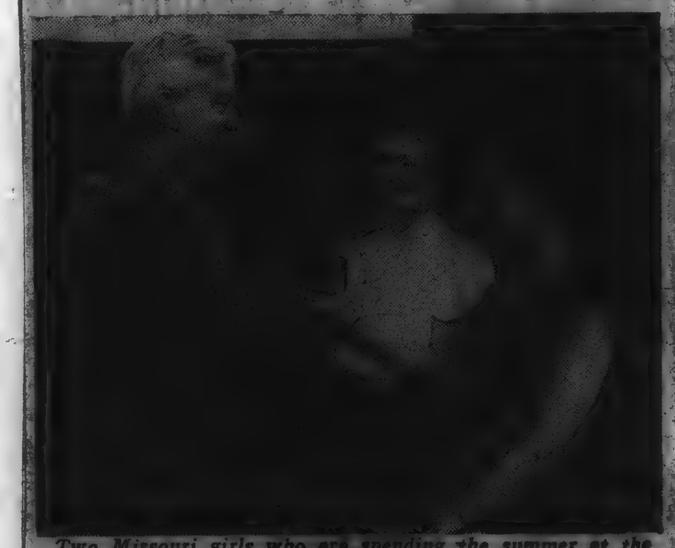
There's More To Piano Than Playing

Lenox, Mass., July 14—(UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 88 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre. Raymond Schmidt 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos were wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

Missourians at Music Camp



Two Missouri girls who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival. Talking with GEORGE E. JUDD, orchestra manager, are MARA HALL, center, violinist from Fulton, and EMMA LOU DIEMER, music composition student from Warrensburg.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch
July 27, 1954

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 9 - 1954

YWCA Sponsoring Bus to Tanglewood

To Leave at 11.30 Sunday For Afternoon Concert

The Young Women's Christian Association in Howard St., is sponsoring a special bus to Lenox on Sunday for the afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. The bus will leave the YW at 11.30. It is suggested that those planning to take the trip, take along picnic lunches, as there will be time to partake of them and also to roam about the grounds before the concert begins. Snacks also may be purchased there.

Sunday's program will include the overture to "Lenore" No. 3, and Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor"), by Beethoven, with Claudio Arrau, soloist, and Symphony No. 5 by the same composer.

The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, a guest conductor.

Reservations for bus seats are now open and further information may be obtained by calling the Young Women's Christian Association.

[238]

DORIOT ANTONY, flautist, the first woman ever to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony orchestra, is the soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto, which will be performed by the Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, in the Friday evening concert, July 30 (8:30 p. m.), the fourth in the series of chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Jean Morel to Conduct At Tanglewood Concert

LENOX, Mass., July 23—Jean Morel will have Nicole Henriot as soloist when the French conductor makes an appearance as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra tomorrow at 8:30 p. m. in the music shed at Tanglewood. The program will include Prokofieff's Sympony No. 6, the Liszt Piano Concerto in E flat, Richard Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan" and the Edward Elgar "Enigma" Variations.

At the Berkshire Festival's matinee Sunday, Music Director Charles Munch conducts a program of Berlioz' Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick", the same composer's "Harold in Italy" in which violist William Primrose will be the soloist, and the first Tanglewood performance of the Symphony No. 2 by Ernest Toch who is guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music center this year.

Four Concerts At Tanglewood This Week

The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will first offer a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall. A program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Lukas Foss as guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin as piano soloist, will follow, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall.

An all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, including Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, is scheduled for Saturday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will offer a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 8 in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

Twin State Telescope

July 29

. . . by Howard T. Swain

Tanglewood Revisited

Tanglewood's mighty music shed continues to be a surprise. Each year one returns with a feeling of disbelief that such a structure actually exists and that a major orchestra is about to perform in this outdoors-under-a-roof.

To your reporter it has always been a privilege to hear the Boston Symphony orchestra. When the orchestra is moved intact into its country setting in the Berkshires, a little more than three hours from the Twin State Valley, the privilege becomes almost an obligation.

The Berkshire festival, in spite of increasing patronage, is doing better this year than ever before in handling traffic and other practical problems that arise when 10,000 determined people decide they must be in one place at the same time.

• • •

The special police (cops de ballet) relentlessly wave the stream of cars into the narrow roads leading to the festival grounds. The cars plunge heroically into the well-foilaged unknown. Everybody gets there and — according to negative accident reports — everyone gets out.

On the grounds, in pastoral setting, an efficient cafeteria takes care of appetites. Refuse boxes are as large as European freight cars and their open tops are invisible from the ground being something like seven feet high (an idea that might well be imitated by other resort areas). You reach up and drop your napkins and ice cream cups into the void.

At each music shed concert many persons, thousands when the weather is right, bring basket lunches to the wide lawns outside the shed and eat while they wait for the magic moment when a meadow becomes a great auditorium.

For the benefit of those who may want to know one Twin State Valley reaction to last week end's music, a thumbnail review is appended.

• • •

The programs of last Saturday night and Sunday afternoon were similar in one respect—the types of music presented—and were far from similar in another, the styles of the conductors.

Jean Morel, Saturday's guest conductor, perhaps underestimated the orchestra's ability to perform or perhaps is given to over-emphasis. The result was a performance that seemed to this listener ragged, shouting rather than singing, exciting at times but disappointing.

To be sure, the music was there and much of it deliciously served, particularly the Elgar Variations on an Original Theme, Op. 36, which is fragmentary by design and resisted the sometimes erratic leadership.

However, the Prokofieff Sixth Symphony failed that night to impress with any sustained force and seemed needlessly harsh, and the familiar Strauss "Don Juan" seemeded merely perfurtory. The overfamiliar Liszt Concerto No. 1, played by attractive Nicole Henriot, a compatriot of the guest conductor, sounded merely familiar.

• • •

Sunday afternoon was another matter. Mr. Munch and the orchestra, which plays with him in effortless cooperation, gave the colorful Berlioz "Harold in Italy" a flowing beauty against which the solo viola of William Primrose glowed. And in the second movement the week end of music reached a peak of perfection.

As nicely performed was the brief "Beatrice and Benedict" overture.

Unable to comprehend the message fo Ernst Toch's Symphony No. 2, this reviewer must be less harsh than he would like with the person who left the shed at the end of the first and second movements. It can be said, however, that they missed one stirring, almost deafening crescendo in the final movement, as well as a chance to see the composer who stood, among the abruptly dispersing crowd, to take a bow.

The Boston orchestra has played five full seasons under Mr. Munch and a quality of its current regime is now clear, one that frequently excells in performance and sometimes leaves something to be desired in programing.

Berkshire Festival In Fourth Week

LENOX, July 29—The Current (fourth) week of Berkshire festival concerts at Tanglewood, includes a program of Rousse, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening (July 30) in the Theatre - Concert hall; Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival chorus of students of the Berkshire Music center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on Saturday evening in the music shed; and the Boston Symphony orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Sunday afternoon in the music shed.

"Romeo and Juliet," performed in its complete form by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony orchestra in Boston (1952-53), Tanglewood (1953), New York and Washington, D. C. (1953-54), and recorded, is being repeated this summer as one of several of Berlioz' rarely-performed full-length works, in honor of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Miss Posselt, Mrs. Burgin in private life, will appear on the same program with her husband for the first time in the Berkshires. The Khatchaturian Concerto she will perform in a Tanglewood premiere.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m.

Springfield Union July 30

DORIOT ANTHONY SOLOIST TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony Principal Flutist Makes Second '54 Appearance There

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will make her second appearance at the 1954 Berkshire Festival as soloist tonight at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Tanglewood.

Earlier this season Miss Anthony was a soloist in the program of Bach Brandenburg Concertos.

Charles Munch conducts tonight's program by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Flute Concerto by Jacques Ibert Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds," all new to Tanglewood, and Mozart's "Paris" Symphony.

Mother First Teacher

Miss Anthony joined the Boston Symphony in the autumn of 1952. Her first teacher was her mother, a professional flutist. Her training continued at the Eastman School of Music where she studied with Joseph Mariano and later with William Kincaid. She played in the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D. C., for two years before joining the Los Angeles Philharmonic, also playing first flute in the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra.

While in California, Miss Anthony devoted much of her time to chamber music, participating in many first performances of contemporary works. In addition to her work with the Boston Symphony and chamber music, Miss Anthony is a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Ibert's Flute Concerto will have its first Tanglewood performance at this concert although Miss Anthony played it with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season in Boston and New York. Winner of the Prix de Rome in 1919 and director of the French Academy at Rome in 1937, Ibert visited the U. S. in 1950 to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center in association with Aaron Copland. His opera "Le Roi d'yvetot" was the major production of Tanglewood's opera department that season and in 1952 the center produced his one-act opera "Angelique."

The Boston Symphony soloists in the "Serenade for Eight Winds" are Ralph Gomberg, Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi, Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano, Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt, Ernst Panenka, bassoons.

Reservations may be made by telephoning the Tanglewood box office at Lenox 600. Tickets of general admission, allowing listeners to hear the concert from the lawns, will be sold a few hours before the program. In case of rain the concert will be in the Music Shed.

Outdoor Concert For Stockbridge Bowl Members

Lenox, July 29—The second annual informal outdoor concert for members of the Stockbridge Bowl Association, of which Lee Gould is president, will be held at 3 p. m. on Thursday, August 5, on the lawns and terraced porch of Wheatleigh, the dormitory of male students of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood.

Celebrated Tanglewood personalities who make their homes on or nearby the Bowl will donate their services for the Bowl Association's aim to raise money to maintain and improve the natural beauties of Lake Mah-Kee-Nac, the Stockbridge Bowl.

Concert basso Mac Morgan, of Stockbridge, will be master of ceremonies, and will sing a group of folk songs by Aaron Copland, with the composer at the piano; and also "A Quiet Girl" from Leonard Bernstein's Broadway musical, "Wonderful Town." Violinist Ruth Posselt, a member of the Tanglewood music school's chamber music faculty, will play selections, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center. Joe Bushkin, the celebrated jazz pianist and trumpeter, who is spending the summer at nearby Richmond while he is a composition student of Lukas Foss at the Tanglewood music school, will play his own compositions. Soprano Theresa Green, a professional concert singer studying opera dramatics at Tanglewood, will be accompanied in a group of songs by Emanuel Balaban, a coach in the opera department. Leo Van Witsen, head of costumes and makeup of the opera department, will give a makeup demonstration.

Retiring president Nathan George Horwitt, of Stockbridge, who has arranged the program, announces the event will be in the nature of a party, "brief, intimate and delightful."

The concert has an important aim: to raise money towards a $1500 commission to composer Lukas Foss, of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, to provide a musical setting for the 121st Psalm, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills." The Biblical citation will be engraved on the Stockbridge Bowl Association's plaques, including those to be presented to the recent winners of the "House Beautiful" contest conducted among Stockbridge Bowl cottagers. It is hoped Mr. Foss' oratorio setting to the hymn, which the composer will have ready by the summer of 1955, may have a Tanglewood premiere.

Austria's Camping Club has equipped 250 camping sites for foreign tourists.

ITS July 30-NY Times

PREMIERE IN U. S. FOR BLOCH WORK

Griller Group Plays String Quartet No. 4 in Concert at Berkshire Festival

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 28—Ernest Bloch's String Quartet No. 4 composed last March had its United States premiére at the Chamber Music Concert, the thirteenth of the Berkshire Festival, given Wednesday evening by the Griller Quartet in the Theatre Concert Hall.

As might be expected from Bloch's previous works in the form, especially the second and third quartets, which have been written in the course of the last seven years, this last is a highly individual and imaginatively free expression, yet, also one of a powerful unity and concentration of ideas.

Its principal themes are few. One, which receives many transformations, is a theme that Bloch discovered in a book of primitive melodies years ago, which persists in different movements and is varied in ways that are of rhythmic as well as linear interest. Harmonically the writing is polytonal, yet the sensation is of a very definite harmonic scheme. And the scheme, one that is solely and characteristically Bloch's.

The moods are introspective and range from those of a chip of the furious Bloch of old to the mystical communions of his later years. There is indeed a curious combination of the old earthiness and gusto and the later inwardness and serenity that seem to have evolved within this passionate artist with the passing of the decades.

The last movement is in part a summation of the developments that preceded it. But it will take considerably more than one hearing to grasp all the inner structural relations of this work. It is clear now that underneath apparently rhapsodic expression there is the hand of a tonal logician and master of his craft.

The Grillers have been Bloch's especial exponent in the chamber music genre through this last decade. They played him, so far as one might know at an initial hearing of the work, with sensitive nuance and proverbial understanding of his thought.

This work of Bloch's as enclosed within two classical quartets by Mozart ("The Hunt") and the Beethoven Quartet in G Major of that splendid early set of Opus 18. For the playing of the slow movement of Mozart alone the playing would have been volable. But the concert was an honor to the players throughout. Mozart and Beethoven, as well as Bloch, received long applause.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

JUL 9 - 1954

Second Week At Festival

The second week off our Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, comprises an eevning of chamber music by the Albeneri Trio (Erich Itor Kahn, piano; Giorgio Ciompi, violin; Benar Heifitz, 'cello) next Wednesday evening in the theatre-concert hall; an all-Bach program, including a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Music Director Charles Munch, on Friday evening in the theatre-concert hall; a program of Debussy and Franck performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, on Friday evening in the music shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and Leo Smit as piano soloist, in a program of Debussy, Copland and Berlioz, on Sunday afternoon (July 18) in the music shed.

Evening concerts are at 8:30, the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the music shed. General admissions to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of performance and festival patrons are invited to attend a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday (July 17) at 10 a.m. for a nominal charge, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

First performances at Tanglewood will be given of the Bach Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," with soloists and students of Department II (choral) and Department IV (opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting(July 16); of excerpts from "St. Sebastian" by Claude Debussy, and of Cesar Franck's "Les Djinns" for Piano and Orchestra (July 17); of Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto (July 18). Piano soloists Vera Franceschi and Leo Smit will also make their Tanglewoodd ebuts.

[239]

G. P. GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS
373 WEST 126 STREET, SUITE 5
NEW YORK 27, N. Y.

STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eva Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are, seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye and Theresa Green, Baltimore.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 1 - 1954

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Tuk-Tuk Sans Onions? Not for Us!

The boys are up on Bylot now, I suppose, studying the ecology of the horned lark in the Arctic habitat, and I am down here slaving away at the old typewriter, and I hope they choke on those tuk-tuks.

I hate to take this peevish attitude, but if everything had gone well in my cooking test I'd have been up there with them rustling up delicious boiled eggs a la Newbury street, fried eggs Rudolph, omelettes en brochette and scrambled eggs Park Street Under. But it didn't; I flopped miserably, and was ignominiously scratched from the roster of the expedition.

First word of the expedition came to me via Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, ornithologist, photographer, explorer and gourmet, who thought up the idea and organized the expedition to this remote arctic island. (That word "gourmet," as you will see, is the key word to my fiasco).

Bylot, it seems, is a large, mountainous island half as big as Massachusetts located off the upper right hand corner of Baffinland, which in turn is located off the upper edge of Labrador. It is still pretty much of a mystery so far as its birds and bees are concerned, too, and the expedition, supported by grants from the Arctic Institute and the New York Zoological Society, is particularly interested in seeing if Bylot is the nesting colony of such birds as Brunnich murres, blue geese, dovekies and so forth.

Advice Sought

It will also check up on the narwhals and whatever else turns up during its five or six weeks in the field, and climb a few mountains as well.

In telling me of the proposed expedition, Mr. Mazzeo asked me if I knew of a good cook who could go along with the party, which was to be flown in sometime in June. I instantly replied that I did know of a good cook, a very good cook indeed. One of the best.

"But can he shoot a shotgun?" inquired Mr. Mazzeo. "Could he bring down a puffin at 100 yards, for study purposes?"

"He certainly could," I said. "After all, I didn't get my marksman's medal as a boy camper for nothing."

"Say," said Mr. Mazzeo, cocking his head, "are you by any chance recommending yourself?"

I said yes, I was, and how about it? It wouldn't cost the expedition a cent because. The Herald had been looking for a correspondent in Bylot for years and would eagerly snatch up the whole tab for my transportation and keep. Besides, I could write magazine articles about it and probably even a book to immortalize the expedition.

Master of Egg

"Now about cooking," said Mr. Mazzeo, unimpressed by the chance for immortality. "What have you ever cooked?"

"Well," I said, "everybody speaks very highly of my cheese rabbit, and I am a master of the egg in all its culinary forms."

"Fine," said Mr. Mazzeo, "only we won't be taking either cheese or eggs on the trip. What else can you do?"

"Fry bacon," I said, "beautiful crisp bacon. I am also good at making toast, peanut butter and jam sandwiches, and a particular specialty of mine, namely, creamed vichysoisse."

"What do you put in your Vichysoisse?" Mr. Mazzeo asked, "onions or leeks?"

"Onions," I said. "Why?"

"Onions in Vichysoisse?" cried the gourmet in Mr. Mazzeo. "Sacrilegious! However," he added, "I'm going up to Bylot in a few weeks to make preparations for the expedition, and I'll think it over."

So. Mr. Mazzeo went up to Bylot on a two-week, 9000-mile reconnaissance trip, obtaining permits from the Canadian government, arranging for the cooperation of the Eskimos, arranging for dog sleds and bush pilots, and aerially photographing the island to be explored and studied.

Learns of Personnel

In the meantime the personnel of the expedition became known. Going along, I learned, were Dr. William Drury, Jr., Dr. Josselyn Van Tyne, Dr. Richard Miller, Dr. Benjamin Ferris, M.D., Edward Ames, Axel and Katherine Rosen, and Mrs. William Drury, Jr., amateur ornithologist. The name of Dr. Rudolph Elie, cookologist, however, was conspicuously missing. And when Mr. Mazzeo returned from his reconnaissance, deeply tanned from the glare of the ice and snow of Bylot, I caught up with him one night as, with bass clarinet in hand, he was preparing to take his place with the Pops orchestra.

"How about it?" I demanded.

"I'm sorry to say you don't qualify," said Mr. Mazzeo. "Any man who puts onions instead of leeks into Vichysoisse cannot qualify as cook on our expedition, even though we won't be having any Vichysoisse on Bylot. What we'll be having up there mostly is tuk-tuk, but even tuk-tuk requires the master hand in the kitchen."

"Tuk-tuk?" I inquired. "And what is tuk-tuk?"

"Tuk-tuk," said Mr. Mazzeo, "is a sort of Eskimo hot dog. It consists of a hunk of narwhal blubber wrapped up in the skin of a fish. Very chewy, of course, but delicious. It has a nutty flavor. Well, I must dash now."

He dashed, and all I can say is I hope they choke on their old tuk-tuk. Narwhal blubber and fish skin without onions? Ugh!

CHICKASHA, OKLA.
EXPRESS
JUN 1954

Violin Needs Own 'Prince Charming'

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — "A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty' it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer - time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this ,interview. "Sit," however is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini — teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father — had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer jatina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some "Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

"A violin needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it. . . . .

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston, which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicions, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was 5, and his American debut in 1939. He speaks English fluently, if not quite perfectly, but that will come, for he works at it all the time.

Lenox—Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. A series of musical programs featuring the work of Berlioz, including The Damnation of Faust, Harold in Italy, Symphonie Fantastique, Romeo and Juliet; performances by Claudio Arrau, the Zimbler Sinfonietta, the Kroll String Quartet, Zino Francescatti; also works of Beethoven, Bach, Handel, Mozart, Stravinsky; Copland's The Tender Land will be the major operatic production, Aug. 2, 3. Charles Münch is musical director and Aaron Copland, assistant director. Festival dates: July 7-Aug. 15.

QUINCY, MASS.
PATRIOT LEDGER
JUL 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Concerts To Be Broadcast On Station WGBH-FM

BOSTON, July 9 — Major concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood will be broadcast over Radio Station WGBH-FM this summer, with the first broadcast scheduled for July 17.

The station said the first concert will be Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust," Charles Munch, conductor, and the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, soloists. This will be heard at 8:30 o'clock. Seventeen other concerts will be heard subsequently.

In addition many student concerts, lectures and forums at the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music will be recorded for broadcast during the fall and winter season.

The Esplanade Concerts also will be brought to listeners by station WGBH-FM. The first concert in the Esplanade series is scheduled for Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock, and others will be broadcast on subsequent Tuesdays direct from the Hatch Memorial Shell in Boston, Arthur Fiedler conducting.

Below: The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, is a Mecca for music lovers. This year's event, which again includes opera and concerts, runs from July 7 through August 15. Charles Münch of the Boston Symphony is musical director.

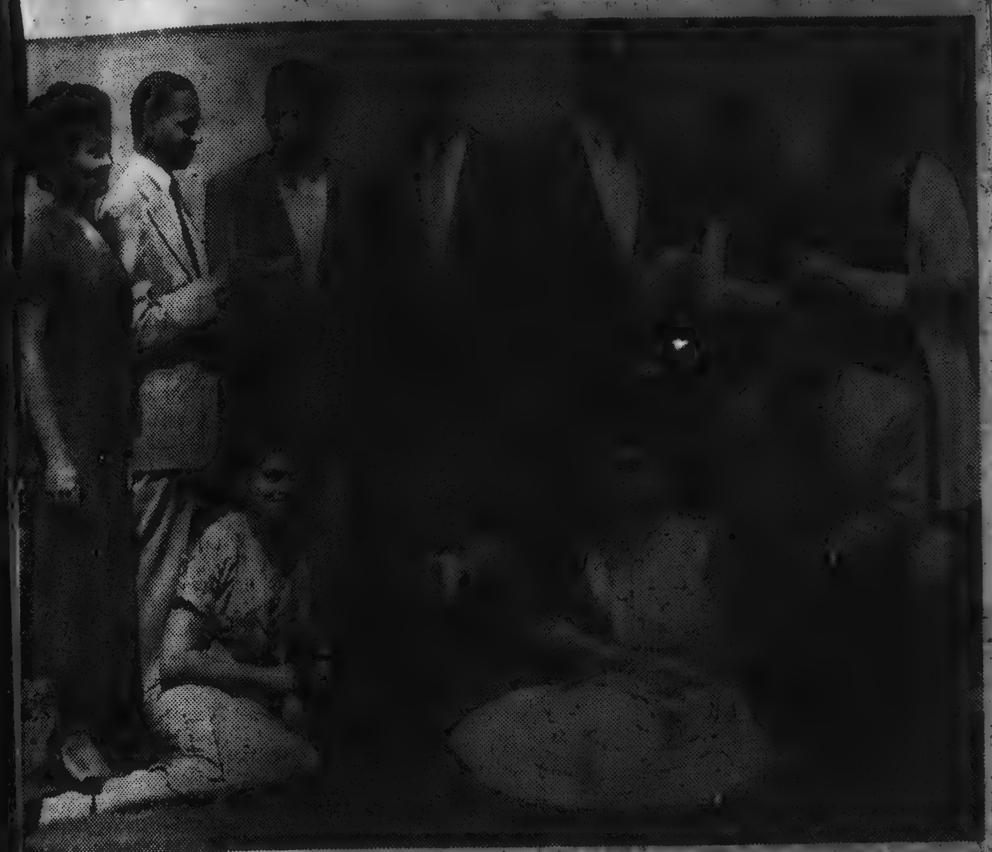
HOWARD S. BABBITT, JR.

[240] Theatre Arts - August, 1954

G. P. GRAHAM
ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS
373 WEST 126 STREET, SUITE 5
NEW YORK 27, N. Y.



STUDENT ARTISTS — Negro students from New York and other parts of the country are studying on scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. Shown securing the autographs of baritone Fred Thomas of New York and Eva Jessye of Lawrence, Mass., both well-known musicians, are, seated: Mrs. Charlotte Holloman, East Elmhurst, L. I.; Benjamin Patterson, Turtle Creek, Pa.; Reri Lorraine Grist, New York City, and Joseph Moore, Detroit. Standing, left to right, are Emma Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Thomas, Harold Johnson, Chicago; Herbert Boatright, Boston; Miss Jessye and Theresa Green, Baltimore.

Violin Needs Own 'Prince Charming'

By W. G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor

NEW YORK, June 6 (AP) — "A violin is like the fairy-tale Sleeping Beauty it needs a Prince Charming to wake it up."

So said Zino Francescatti by way of explaining that there's something more to a Stradivarius than Stradivarius. Mrs. Francescatti put it in her words:

"A violin is like a wine: if it's good at the start, it's still better after aging."

Monsieur and Madame, both being violinists, speak with equal authority, though Mrs. Francescatti no longer plays concerts: "One in the family is enough," she says.

Her husband is one of the best waker uppers of violins, and he has been hailed by the experts here and abroad as a splendid Prince Charming in this professional field.

One of his last official acts, as he quit the concert platform for a long summer - time rest in his home in the Berkshires, in Monterey, Mass., was to sit for this interview. "Sit," however is hardly the word for this distinguished artist who, being southern as well as French, may sit but does not often sit still. And his fingers are agile from talking, I am sure, no less than from fingering the violin.

He plays the "Hart" Stradivarius. Some months ago he was invited to Genoa to play the Stradivarius which Paganini — teacher of the teacher of Francescatti's father — had bequeathed to the Italian city. It was long unused, and needed working in:

"It had dried up, as a pair of shoes left in a closet dries up."

Starting from that, Francescatti discussed that ever popular and mystifying subject: the secret of the greatness of a violin.

"Some people think it's the varnish, or they call it Stradivarius. But the fact is in my opinion, that a violin becomes good after it is played on by good violinists. Note that the great violins usually bear the name of the great violinists who used them.

"Just as a violin looks better from much use, and takes on a richer jatina from the constant rub of fingers, so it sounds better from much use."

Then was a Stradivarius great when it was first made?

"Yes, of course it was great, but greater after it had been in use a couple of centuries. There may be some "Stradivarius' making violins today whose instruments we think are good but which can be proven great only a couple of centuries hence.

"A violin needs to have its merits brought out, or coaxed from it. You have to take your violin and clean it and care for it and love it.

"I have a young friend who is a remarkable musician but on his violin he cannot play harmonics. He can play them on mine. They're in mine. Mine knows what's expected of it."

Francescatti likes New York, its soaring buildings and its unforgettable skyline. He likes Boston, which reminds him of French cities. And he likes Monterey, which is near Tanglewood, so that if he's with fellow musicians all winter on tour, he's surrounded by fellow musicians, even by the entire Boston Symphony, during the Berkshire Music Festival in the summer.

Born in Marseilles just under 50 years ago, he made his first public appearance when he was 5, and his American debut in 1939. He speaks English fluently, if not quite perfectly, but that will come, for he works at it all the time.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 1 - 1954

THE ROVING EYE

By RUDOLPH ELIE

Tuk-Tuk Sans Onions? Not for Us!

The boys are up on Bylot now, I suppose, studying the ecology of the horned lark in the Arctic habitat, and I am down here slaving away at the old typewriter, and I hope they choke on those tuk-tuks.

I hate to take this peevish attitude, but if everything had gone well in my cooking test I'd have been up there with them rustling up delicious boiled eggs a la Newbury street, fried eggs Rudolph, omelettes en brochette and scrambled eggs Park Street Under. But it didn't; I flopped miserably, and was ignominiously scratched from the roster of the expedition.

First word of the expedition came to me via Rosario Mazzeo, bass clarinetist and personnel manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra, ornithologist, photographer, explorer and gourmet, who thought up the idea and organized the expedition to this remote arctic island. (That word "gourmet," as you will see, is the key word to my fiasco).

Bylot, it seems, is a large, mountainous island half as big as Massachusetts located off the upper right hand corner of Baffinland, which in turn is located off the upper edge of Labrador. It is still pretty much of a mystery so far as its birds and bees are concerned, too, and the expedition, supported by grants from the Arctic Institute and the New York Zoological Society, is particularly interested in seeing if Bylot is the nesting colony of such birds as Brunnich murres, blue geese, dovekies and so forth.

Advice Sought

It will also check up on the narwhals and whatever else turns up during its five or six weeks in the field, and climb a few mountains as well.

In telling me of the proposed expedition, Mr. Mazzeo asked me if I knew of a good cook who could go along with the party, which was to be flown in sometime in June. I instantly replied that I did know of a good cook, a very good cook indeed. One of the best.

"But can he shoot a shotgun?" inquired Mr. Mazzeo. "Could he bring down a puffin at 100 yards, for study purposes?"

"He certainly could," I said. "After all, I didn't get my marksman's medal as a boy camper for nothing."

"Say," said Mr. Mazzeo, cocking his head, "are you by any chance recommending yourself?"

I said yes, I was, and how about it? It wouldn't cost the expedition a cent because The Herald had been looking for a correspondent in Bylot for years and would eagerly snatch up the whole tab for my transportation and keep. Besides, I could write magazine articles about it and probably even a book to immortalize the expedition.

Master of Egg

"Now about cooking," said Mr. Mazzeo, unimpressed by the chance for immortality. "What have you ever cooked?"

"Well," I said, "everybody speaks very highly of my cheese rabbit, and I am a master of the egg in all its culinary forms."

"Fine," said Mr. Mazzeo, "only we won't be taking either cheese or eggs on the trip. What else can you do?"

"Fry bacon," I said, "beautiful crisp bacon. I am also good at making toast, peanut butter and jam sandwiches, and a particular specialty of mine, namely, creamed vichysoisse."

"What do you put in your Vichysoisse?" Mr. Mazzeo asked, "onions or leeks?"

"Onions," I said. "Why?"

"Onions in Vichysoisse?" cried the gourmet in Mr. Mazzeo. "Sacrilegious! However," he added, "I'm going up to Bylot in a few weeks to make preparations for the expedition, and I'll think it over."

So Mr. Mazzeo went up to Bylot on a two-week, 9000-mile reconnaissance trip, obtaining permits from the Canadian government, arranging for the cooperation of the Eskimos, arranging for dog-sleds and bush pilots, and aerially photographing the island to be explored and studied.

Learns of Personnel

In the meantime the personnel of the expedition became known. Going along, I learned, were Dr. William Drury, Jr., Dr. Josselyn Van Tyne, Dr. Richard Miller, Dr. Benjamin Ferris, M.D., Edward Ames, Axel and Katherine Rosen, and Mrs. William Drury, Jr., amateur ornithologist. The name of Dr. Rudolph Elie, cookologist, however, was conspicuously missing. And when Mr. Mazzeo returned from his reconnaissance, deeply tanned from the glare of the ice and snow of Bylot, I caught up with him one night as, with bass clarinet in hand, he was preparing to take his place with the Pops orchestra.

"How about it?" I demanded.

"I'm sorry to say you don't qualify," said Mr. Mazzeo. "Any man who puts onions instead of leeks into Vichysoisse cannot qualify as cook on our expedition, even though we won't be having any Vichysoisse on Bylot. What we'll be having up there mostly is tuk-tuk, but even tuk-tuk requires the master hand in the kitchen."

"Tuk-tuk?" I inquired. "And what is tuk-tuk?"

"Tuk-tuk," said Mr. Mazzeo, "is a sort of Eskimo hot dog. It consists of a hunk of narwhal blubber wrapped up in the skin of a fish. Very chewy, of course, but delicious. It has a nutty flavor. Well, I must dash now."

He dashed, and all I can say is I hope they choke on their old tuk-tuk. Narwhal blubber and fish skin without onions? Ugh!

Lenox—Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. A series of musical programs featuring the work of Berlioz, including The Damnation of Faust, Harold in Italy, Symphonie Fantastique, Romeo and Juliet; performances by Claudio Arrau, the Zimbler Sinfonietta, the Kroll String Quartet, Zino Francescatti; also works of Beethoven, Bach, Handel, Mozart, Stravinsky; Copland's The Tender Land will be the major operatic production, Aug. 2, 3. Charles Münch is musical director and Aaron Copland, assistant director. Festival dates: July 7-Aug. 15.

QUINCY
PATRIOT LEDGER
JUL 9 - 1954

Tanglewood Concerts To Be Broadcast On Station WGBH-FM

BOSTON, July 9 — Major concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood will be broadcast over Radio Station WGBH-FM this summer, with the first broadcast scheduled for July 17.

The station said the first concert will be Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust," Charles Munch, conductor, and the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, soloists. This will be heard at 8:30 o'clock. Seventeen other concerts will be heard subsequently.

In addition many student concerts, lectures and forums at the Berkshire Music Center summer school of music will be recorded for broadcast during the fall and winter season.

The Esplanade Concerts also will be brought to listeners by station WGBH-FM. The first concert in the Esplanade series is scheduled for Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock, and others will be broadcast on subsequent Tuesdays direct from the Hatch Memorial Shell in Boston, Arthur Fiedler conducting.

Below: The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, is a Mecca for music lovers. This year's event, which again includes opera and concerts, runs from July 7 through August 15. Charles Münch of the Boston Symphony is musical director.

HOWARD S. BABBITT, JR.

[240]

Theatre Arts - August, 1954

HARTFORD, CONN. TIMES

JUL 3 - 1954

Charles Munch Returns For Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York Friday by plane from Paris, and drove to Lenox, Mass., today to his Summer residence at Elm Court to prepare for his duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert next Friday with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. Saturday night, July 10, he will inaugurate the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in complete form at Tanglewood this Summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society.

* * *

WHILE VACATIONING in France Mr. Munch conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg, where at the Cathedral St. Andre he has just performed Berlioz' biblical work, "L'Enfance du Christ". He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7.

The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a. m., July 10, preceding the first Music Shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for the nominal admission of one dollar, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

CHANGES involving two Saturday evening programs are announced by Mr. Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN

JUL 18 1954

STUDENTS FROM 13 COUNTRIES AT LENOX

Lenox, July 17—With 35 states and 12 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 375 music students, the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center is in operation at Tanglewood. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival, the only school sponsored by a major symphony orchestra, will operate through the end of the festival concerts on Aug. 15.

Over 100 students are registered from New York State, 57 from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are represented by 55 students. From Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin have come 34 students and the Far West is represented by three Washingtonians and six Californians. Canada has its largest enrollment in several seasons with 12 students ranging from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, to Calgary, Alberta. The 29 foreign students, besides the Canadians, include four Cuban registrations and three from France.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN

JUL 18 1954

It was ten minutes past noon when we parked our car in front of the main gate to Tanglewood in the Berkshires last Sunday. Concert time was scheduled for two and one-half hours later but crowds of people were already pouring into the Tanglewood grounds to enjoy leisurely picnic lunches and to set out blankets and folding chairs under shady elm trees and in other choice locations close to the great music shell.

The excitement of the scurrying throngs was contagious. We began to sense it stirring within us as we unloaded our own picnicking paraphernalia and felt in our inside jacket pocket to be sure we hadn't left our admission tickets at home. Then we followed the crowds to the picnic area where we proceeded to eat all sorts of things that weren't especially good for us and to exchange small talk about the forthcoming all-Beethoven concert with other members of our party.

* * *

Last Sunday was one of the loveliest days God ever created. Fleecy white clouds hovered low over the silent music shell as though they wanted to obtain vantage listening posts as close as possible to the scene of the afternoon's performance. There never was a bluer sky anywhere in the whole wide world. It provided a majestic background for stately shade trees, towering distant mountains and the kaleodoscopic colors of the dresses, gowns and other less formal attire of the thousands of attractive women who wandered about the grounds with their escorts or families.

No, sir! God never created a lovelier day. As one member of our party said: "God must love Beethoven. I'm sure this perfect summer day is His tribute to a beloved composer." The simple statement was one with which we were all in agreement.

* * *

With lunch out of the way there was still an hour to be spent before concert time, so we cleared our table of the litter of picnic leftovers and embarked on a tour of the Tanglewood grounds. We didn't start out for any one place in particular. We just permitted our footsteps to guide us where they would. They didn't disappoint us. They led us to little groups of Valley friends and they led us in and out of festive throngs of music lovers dressed in every conceivable sort of costume.

Fashions at Tanglewood never fail to intrigue us. There was certainly an unusual variety of them in evidence last Sunday. We saw men, comfortably clad in Bermuda shorts, chatting with companions who sported immaculate Palm Beach suits. We saw men in beach shorts, men in slacks, men wearing the loudest sports shirts imaginable, and men as conservatively dressed as they would be in the cold, stone canyons of the business world. We even saw a few men carelessly attired in gaily colored swim trunks and T-shirts.

* * *

The women displayed an even wider variety of costumes. They strolled about the lawns clad in peddle pushers, slacks of every color of the spectrum, linen dresses, cotton frocks, chic Fifth Avenue ensembles, shorts and halters, lounging pajamas, and smart skirts and frothy blouses. Here and there, women attired in flawlessly tailored summer suits and formal afternoon frocks, stood out in the crowd like orchid centerpieces dominating a basket of multicolored posies.

Even the children displayed varied tastes in concert attire. Very small children gamboled on the lawns in sunsuits. Older children—just beginning to acquire a paper-thin veneer of premature sophistication—wandered about modeling pretty frocks and, in the case of boys, summer suits which were exact duplicates of the ones worn by their proud daddies.

It didn't seem to matter what anyone wore. The chief idea was to dress comfortably, and that's exactly what everyone did. About the only costume we didn't see was a Bikini bathing suit, but we wouldn't have been at all surprised if one of the scanty costumes had shown up in the colorful throng.

* * *

There was an air of anticipation and suppressed excitement in every corner of Tanglewood as we continued our pre-coucert tour of the grounds. In back of the music shell, musicians tuned up their instruments or chatted with friends. Oboes thrilled and trumpets blared Violins squeaked and cellos boomed. Through this atmosphere of musical excitement rang the clear notes of childrens' laughter and the buzz of a thousand animated conversations.

All of this frenzied activity continued until a few moments before concert time when everyone hurried to locate their seats inside the music shell or, in the case of lawn listeners, to get settled on the blankets and cushions which formed little islands of color on the lawn outside the shell.

* * *

It was nearly 2.30 when the solemn ringing of a bell announced that the afternoon performance was about to begin. It was the signal for the buzz of conversation to fade away into a great silent nothingness. It was as though a sorcerer had waved his wand and commanded the world to be still. Even the occasional flutter of a program page sounded ominously loud as the celebrated conductor Pierre Monteux walked across stage and bowed to his waiting audience. Only then was the spell of silence broken. The assembled throng came to life to greet him with a thundering ovation, then settled back into an even deeper silence as the opening notes of Beethoven's overture to "Leonore" rose into the smiling blue heavens.

It was a glorious performance. Beethoven could have wished for no grander tribute to his memory. We like to think that the spirit of the illustrious composer may have occupied an empty seat in the audience to hear an inspired Boston Symphony Orchestra lovingly interpret the magnificent music which was his bequest to a greateful world.

* * *

We were emotionally exhausted when the concert was over. We had soared on clouds of ecstacy as the music of Beethoven swelled and waned. We had experienced a piece of mind, such as comes to a man only a few times in his life span, during calm, serene passages, and we had thrilled to the gifted performance given by Claudio Arrau, piano soloist of the afternoon. We were still dwelling in the enchanted realm of Beethoven long after we had left the concert grounds to travel to Great Barrington and dinner at the Berkshire Inn. It had been one of the most wonderful Sunday afternoons we can remember.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. NEWS

JUL 18 1954

Kudo for Steber

ELEANOR STEBER, who sang a leading role at the opening concert of the Tanglewood Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox, Mass., last week, has become a leading figure in international music-making. In addition to appearing in Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West" during the May festival in Florence, under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos, Miss Steber has a warm welcome to remember the Holland Festival. In x Miss Steber took on one ie major challenges of her career when she sang the soprano role in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," the opening gun in Conductor Munch's season-long salvo in honor of his French compatriot born 150 years ago.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. INQUIRER

JUL 18 1954

Soprano At Dell Thursday

Dorothy Maynor Will Feature Varied Program

By Edwin H. Schloss

DOROTHY MAYNOR will be the soloist in the Dell next Thursday night, making her first appearance with the Robin Hool Dell Orchestra since the summer of 1946. William Steinberg will conduct.

Tomorrow night, as maestro of the week, Steinberg will preside over a program featuring a distinguished team of duo-pianists, Pierre Luboschutz and Genia Nemenoff. They will play the Mozart Concerto in E flat for Two Pianos and Orchestra as well as Bohuslav Martinu's Concerto for the same combination. The purely orchestra numbers on tomorrow's program include the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3 and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Tuesday night with Steinberg again on the podium, the bill offers Berlioz's Symphony Fantastique and two Wagner numbers—The Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde" and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

The last of three children's concerts will be performed Wednesday morning — again under the baton of Alexander Hilsberg. The performance, for six-to-sixteen-year-olds, will be based on "Music and the Dance."

Thirteen youngsters of the Anna Criss Dance Group will present Schubert's Ballet Music from "Rosamunde," and Strauss' "Blue Danube Waltz." The group's soloists, Kathy Sokoloff and Lori Goldman, will be featured in Strauss' "Pizzicato Polka"; Diniscu's "Hora Staccatto"; and Harl McDonald's "Rhumba."

Pianist Susan Starr, 12, will play Saint-Saens' "Allegro - Appassionata," and ten-year-old Glenn Derringer, organist, will perform Smetana's "Dance of Comedians" and "Jalousie." Orchestral selections include Khatchaturian's Waltz from the "Masquerade Suite" and Borodin's "Polovetzky Dances."

Miss Maynor's program on Thursday includes an excerpt from Bach's Cantata No. 51; two songs from Handel's "L' Allegro"; "Here Ye, Israel" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; the Bachianas Brisileiras, No. 5 by Villa-Lobos and as a concluding number, "Pace, Pace, Mio Dio" from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." Mr. Steinberg's orchestral offerings will include the "Cockaigne" Overture by Elgar; Respighi's "The Pines of Rome" and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Many Philadelphia music lovers will remember Dorothy Maynor's first appearance in this city made with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music more than 14 years ago—March 23, 1940.

It was a debut hailed by press and public as an occasion which introduced one of the great voices of our time. Miss Maynor's gifts were immediately recognized as of uncommon musical quality and she herself as an artist of purest ray serene.

This excitement echoed the electric impression made by Miss Maynor the preceding summer on the occasion of her "discovery" by the late Serge Koussevitzky. This was at a picnic given by Dr. Konssevitzky at Tanglewood, scene of the famous Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Maynor, appearing before a formidable audience of 200 orchestra musicians and their guests, completely captivated her hearers with a program that included music by Handel, Mozart, Wagner and Charpentier. These engagements immediately following her Tanglewood triumph included appearances with the New York Philharmonic, the Chicago Symphony and the Boston Symphony as well as the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Miss Maynor was born 42 years ago in Norfolk, Va., daughter of a Methodist minister. As a youngster, she sang in her father's church choir and studied Home Economics and Dress Design at Hampton Institute. She sang in Hampton's chorus of 120 voices and her first public musical experiences came as a member of the chorus in 1929 when the group toured Europe and this country.

After Hampton, Miss Maynor studied with John Findley Williamson at the famous Westminster Choir School in Princeton, N. J.

In private life, Miss Maynor is the wife of the Rev. Shelby Rooks, pastor of New York's St. James Church.

Miss Maynor's singing is closely related to her deeply religious nature, a fact evidenced by the frequent appearance of sacred art song and Negro spirituals on her programs. These make up a racial and cultural heritage which she has long treasured.

[241]

SYRACUSE, N. Y. HERALD-JOURNAL

JUL 15 1954

FOR THOSE who journey to the east to "Tanglewood," America's supreme effort in music these many summers or west to Chautauqua, where the institution has brought music, lectures and sermons to thousands since the late 19th Century, there are world famous folk in programs. Right here at home the University School of Music and Division of Summer Sessions offers concerts every Monday night through Aug. 2 with other events tonight and on Aug 4. Tonight's concert in the Women's building will present Rose Bampton, soprano, with Stevenson Barrett at the piano.

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Berkshire Music Festival, announces that the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" is scheduled for Friday, Aug. 13, a gala day with numerous features to be made known later. The popular "Bach-Mozart Concerts" in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood" are given on successive Friday nights, Aug. 13 excepted. That week the concert will take place Aug. 12. Tomorrow night's program by the Chamber Orchestra will be conducted by Director Munch and by Choral Conductor Hugh Ross. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will rehearse in the Shed, the modest admission fee going to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. There was a chamber music concert last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Albeneri Trio playing Brahms, Marinu and Beethoven. Tomorrow night's program in the Shed will be conducted by Music Director Munch will be all-Bach and will include a cantata conducted by Choral Director Hugh Ross and two suites performed by chamber orchestra.

Fiedler to Conduct At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert Friday night, Aug. 13, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The program includes Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, excerpts from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," "TViana," Hayman's symphonic arrangement of television commercials, and the "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor radio and television theme.

As already announced, the first half of the concert, with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, includes Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene of Richard Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis in the title role.

Before the concert, there will be demonstrations of the Berkshire Music Center's activities at 6 p. m. and, for the concert's box and reserved seat ticket holders, outdoor opera at 4 p. m. The day's events are for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Information about tickets may be obtained by telephoning Lenox 600.

AR

BOSTON MASS.
POST
JUL 18 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 17—With the single exception of Aaron Copland's early piano concerto scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, the programs in the music shed at Tanglewood this week end are devoted to the French composers, Debussy, Franck and Berlioz. Tonight, Pierre Monteux moved the 8500 listeners to cheers with the most stunning performance of Debussy's "La Mer" I have ever heard. It was a reading which dazzled the ears with every shade of color in the orchestral spectrum, touched the heart with warm emotion and stirred the pulse with its irresistible movement.

In "La Mer" Debussy employs the limitless timbres of the orchestra as a vast tonal palette in evoking the elusive moods of the sea. While seldom attempting a literal musical painting, he has set forth for his players a virtuoso exercise in recreating the everchanging colors, the mysterious impressions and the unfathomable tempers of the sea.

This work even when performed in a humdrum fashion is interesting; but when it is played as Monteux and the Boston Symphony did tonight, "La Mer" becomes an overwhelming experience. Monteux illuminates every bar with a phosphorescent glow, keeping the hearer on seat's edge with sheer opulent beauty of luminous sound. What is even more praiseworthy, the performance was unmarred by any personal idiosyncrasies by the conductor nor by a single blemish from any player in the band.

On Monday in Symphony Hall, these musicians will record this masterpiece; in all probability it will stand as the definitive performance.

Two excerpts from Debussy's incidental music for "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebestieen," somewhat pointless when wrenched from context, opened the concert. Though each short piece was pleasant, they only served to warm the orchestra for the more important "La Mer."

Caesar Franck's ambling symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," based on the Arabian Nights, introduced pianist Vera Franceschi to the Berkshire Festival. Since the composer has given the soloist little to do, an evaluation of Miss Franceschi's capabilities must wait until she can be heard in a more demanding assignment. However, she is very pretty and successfully diverted my mind from this time bleached opus.

The concert closed with a sturdy rendition of Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 18 1954

The Lively Arts—

Berlioz on the Rebound

By T. H. Parker

Patrons of the Berkshire Music Festival know, of course, that this is to be the "Berlioz season" at Tanglewood.

Last year, actually, was the 150th anniversary of the birth of the great French Romantic composer. And as a matter of fact, Charles Munch had begun working up to this season's splurge 'way back in 1952. That summer he had given Berlioz's Requiem. Last season he followed up with "Romeo et Juliette."

But this is to be the Year of the Big Windfall. Already Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Radcliffe Choral Society and Harvard Glee Club, Martial Singher, David Poleri and Donald Gramm have done "The Damnation of Faust" as the season's opener. In addition, there will be "Symphonie Fantastique," "Harold in Italy," another "Romeo," "Summer Nights," the Te Deum and the Requiem once more, as well as a half dozen overtures and excerpts.

★

How this is going to set with audiences who know Berlioz only by reputation, or a single work here or there, is hard to say. Certainly few composers, outside the more rambunctious moderns, have been so disparaged by their post-mortem commentators. It is true that he was a romantic among romantics, to the point of identifying himself with Hamlet. It is true that few of his works are without literary or programmatic bases. And Berlioz could, of course, be flamboyant for any time or clime, without the necessity of pointing to the Hungarian March in the "Damnation," or some of the monologues in "Lelio" as easy examples.

Nevertheless, as many will be made to realize at Tanglewood during the next few weeks, most of the sins reputed to Berlioz were neither indigenous nor indelible. Rather, they were assigned to him by succeeding generations as the result of changing tastes instead of truths.

The contention that it somehow constituted "poor breeding" to exhibit one's feelings even in the pursuit of art is of course a Victorianism that persists in part today. And, of course, programme music has been looked down the nose at by practically everyone except Richard Strauss, ever since modernism has been on the rise. People will still tell you that Beethoven's one lapse from grace is his Pastoral Symphony, and extol the sterility of the Seventh, instead.

In the world of public esthetics, some of the greatest havoc-wreakers are those who contend that "the arts should express our times." Though the stronger of them may retain some hold on universality, the weaker noodles will inevitably love today and disdain yesterday. This has been to considerable degree the operative fallacy in Berlioz's case. Romanticism today is not out, but is so disguised that it appears a different dish from the one out of which Berlioz supped. Mr. Munch's efforts will make some converts at Tanglewood, but one will get you ten if they are not still embarrassed by their own conversion. "Romantic" is a chalk-word on the esthetic fence.

For the sake of these and other Doubting-Thomases, it might be well to rehearse two of Hector Berlioz's incomparable qualities. Despite his literary propensities, his many programmatic works, he was a musician first and foremost rather than a dramatist. This is a point often overlooked and perhaps even more often denied. And as a musician, he was fundamentally more classical than the romantic aspects of his material at first reveal.

No one can deny that Berlioz liked highly - colored subjects. He did indeed. But in the writing itself, its remarkable economy of means, its lucidity, the exactitude with which it says its say, Berlioz's work is more nearly the successor to Beethoven than Brahms' was, as we have remarked on numerous occasions.

One remembers, indeed, the exchange between Berlioz and the King of Prussia, who said, "I understand you are the composer who writes for 500 musicians." "Your Majesty has been misinformed," Berlioz replied. "I sometimes write for 450." But the dimension of the writing is no gauge either of its economy or its finesse, and no one with any sense will fall into the trap of thinking so.

Above all there is Berlioz's extraordinary imagination. The variety within a single work, of material, of temper, of treatment, whether the work deals with a prescribed form, like the Requiem, or is the freest fantasy, like "Lelio," is remarkable and wonderful beyond any other composer. No composer finds so many facets to write about in any one subject, whether they comprise the main gist or the incidental attractions. Many composers have written on many themes. Stravinsky, today, is an example. But none has found so much inner variety for them, so imaginatively.

Unlike Rossini writing came hard for Berlioz. Had he been less in love with his art, he would have been less episodic than he was. Having found some general theme, or mood as the basic treatment of his subject, like Puccini in "Madama Butterfly," for example, he would have stuck with it, saying the same thing over and over. He did not. No subject he touched but what he investigated its every musical possibility, dramatic, lyric, narrative, atmospheric or sheerly fanciful and gratis. Thus each of Berlioz's compositions appears like a mosaic, with the same liveliness and variegation that mosaic affords.

★

Mr. Munch is, of course, the very model of a Berlioz interpreter. He is temperate with Berlioz's works as material, shrewdly discerning of them as music. He does not skimp their brilliance nor their intensity, but he manages these attributes without flamboyance. But he is best, perhaps, with the delicate and exquisite moments, and there are many more of them in Berlioz than his detractors admit. Sensibilite was a real, not a Byronic quality in the great French Romanticist.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 12 1954

Berlioz Work Opener At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 12 — An audience of 8,500 persons sat enthralled at Tanglewood this week end as it listened intently to the Berkshire Festival's premiere presentation of Berlioz's dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," as magnificently interpreted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch.

This epic composition, offered Saturday night at the first of a number of programs marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of the noted French composer, provided the gala opening of the festival's 1954 Music Shed concert series. The two and one half-hour long, four part, 20-section symphonic poem, which recites the story of Goethe's "Faust" in a continuous narrative, was overwhelming in the sweep and vitality of its Tanglewood presentation.

The work was presented with the 104-piece orchestra, the 110 voices of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth; and the solo performances of Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, Donald Gramm, bass.

Especially noteworthy, in a performance made memorable by the almost equally superb renditions by all participants, was the tonal beauty of Miss Steber's Marguerite and the stirring French style of Mr. Poleri's Faust and Mr. Singher's Mephistopholes.

Completing a truly outstanding opening week-end of music in the beautiful Berkshires was an all-Beethovan program attended by over 10,000 persons yesterday afternoon and featuring the eminent Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, and the brilliant 79-year-old French conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Mr. Arrau's carefully modulated, elaborate interpretation of the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") captured all of the composition's sweeping grandeur and dramatic intensity. The unfailing blending of theme and variations between piano and orchestra was perfection itself.

The audience rose with thunderous applause at the conclusion of Mr. Monteux's powerful presentation of the Symphony No. 5. Under his inspired baton, the orchestra was as one magnificent instrument in performing this traditional masterpiece.

A stirring rendition of the Lenore Overture No. 3 opened the afternoon program.

MDA

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 23 1954

RUTH POSSELT will be violin soloist with the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

3 One-Act Operas

Three rarely heard one-act operas by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

BOSTON MASS.
POST
JUL 12 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 11—For the final concert in the opening week end of the Berkshire Music Festival, Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony played an all-Beethoven program before an audience of over 10,000.

This might well be called a classical hit-parade, listing as it does the Leonore Overture No. 3, the "Emperor Concerto," and the Fifth Symphony. And it was thrilling. Beethoven, too. Mr. Monteux has never demonstrated keener insight and the orchestra has seldom, if ever, sounded better.

Monteux maintained a suspenseful mood from the very outset in the "Leonora" despite the dramatic fanfares, trumpet calls, and frequent climactic outbursts.

Claudio Arrau deserved every bravo hurled at him for his triumphal performance of the solo part in the concerto. He is the type of pianist who addresses himself to the music and leaves the histrionics to the pianistic prestidigitator.

He obviously broadened the monumental first movement in adaptation to the vast expanses of the shed, but his performance remained a vivid one, creating an almost unbearable tension in the cascading octaves toward the close.

Mr. Monteux drew from the orchestra a gorgeous texture in the eloquent and noble adagio. His phrasing exactly matched the soloist in mood and color. In the final rondo both Arrau and Monteux reached a peak of brilliance I had never dreamed possible in this work.

The concert ended on the highest possible plane with a taut performance of Beethoven's best-known symphony. Instead of interpreting this masterpiece with a capital I, Monteux played it straight, allowing the music to create the fullest possible impact. That it did was evidenced by the breathless hush which the audience hung onto every note and by the thunderous applause at the conclusion.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 18 1954

NICOLE HENRIOT, gifted young French pianist, who will be guest soloist Saturday evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Liszt's E flat Piano Concerto.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
JUL 14 1954

Library Offers Recordings

The person who wishes to compare Berkshire Festival performances at Tanglewood Lenox, Mass., with recorded versions of the same works has a good opportunity in the record collection of the Schenectady County Public Library.

Many of the selections being played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this season are available at the library.

Music to be played during July performances, obtainable on records at the library, includes the following with the date representing the day of the Tanglewood presentation:

July 16—Bach's "Suite No. 4"; July 18—Debussy's "Iberia" and the "Fantastic Symphony" of Berlioz; July 23—Handel's "Concerto Grosso No. 4" and Haydn's "Symphony No. 100 (Military)" and the "Nelson Mass"; July 24—Weber's "Der Freischutz" Overture and Strauss' "Don Juan"; July 25—Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and the same composer's "Harold in Italy"; July 30—more Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds"; and July 31. Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet."

For persons interested in learning something about the Tanglewood area and the people taking part in it, the library today suggested the following books: "The Berkshires Through the Camera of Arthur Palme"; "The Berkshires," edited by Roderick Peattie; "The Tales of Tanglewood" by M. A. deW. Howe; and "Dictators of the Baton" by David Ewen. The latter includes a biography of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 18 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta, Morel at Tanglewood

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will open the Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

The ensemble will be heard Wednesday evening at 8:30 in "The Seasons," by Vivaldi, "Apollon Musagete" by Stravinsky, and Rossini's Baroque Concerto.

The "Bach Mozart" concert Friday night at 8:30, will offer the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Charles Munch in Handel's Concerto Grosso, Opus 6, No. 4 and Haydn's "Military" Symphony. Hugh Ross will lead the orchestra in Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Jean Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony on the Overture to Weber's "Freischuetz," Prokofiev's Sixth Symphony, Strauss's "Don Juan," and the Elgar "Enigma" Variations.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Overture to "Beatrice And Benedick" and "Harold in Italy," by Berlioz. William Primrose will be viola soloist. The program will close with Toch's Second Symphony.

[242]

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 3 - 1954

Charles Munch Returns For Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, arrived in New York Friday by plane from Paris, and drove to Lenox, Mass., today to his Summer residence at Elm Court to prepare for his duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the orchestra.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert next Friday with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. Saturday night, July 10, he will inaugurate the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in complete form at Tanglewood this Summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society.

* * *

WHILE VACATIONING in France Mr. Munch conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg, where at the Cathedral St. Andre he has just performed Berlioz' biblical work, "L'Enfance du Christ". He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, tomorrow at 3:30 p. m., and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday afternoon, July 7.

The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a. m., July 10, preceding the first Music Shed concert, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for the nominal admission of one dollar, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

CHANGES involving two Saturday evening programs are announced by Mr. Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony.

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the orchestra as soloist three weeks earlier than scheduled, July 24, at the concert to be conducted by Jean Morel, performing the Liszt E flat Piano Concerto, which will replace the Strauss "Don Juan" previously listed.

On the concert Aug. 14, replacing the Ravel Piano Concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin."

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 18 1954

STUDENTS FROM 13 COUNTRIES AT LENOX

Lenox, July 17—With 35 states and 12 foreign countries represented in its enrollment of 375 music students, the 12th season of the Berkshire Music Center is in operation at Tanglewood. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with its Berkshire Festival, the only school sponsored by a major symphony orchestra, will operate through the end of the festival concerts on Aug. 15.

Over 100 students are registered from New York State, 57 from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are represented by 55 students. From Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin have come 34 students and the Far West is represented by three Washingtonians and six Californians. Canada has its largest enrollment in several seasons with 12 students ranging from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, to Calgary, Alberta. The 29 foreign students, besides the Canadians, include four Cuban registrations and three from France.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 18 1954

It was ten minutes past noon when we parked our car in front of the main gate to Tanglewood in the Berkshires last Sunday. Concert time was scheduled for two and one-half hours later but crowds of people were already pouring into the Tanglewood grounds to enjoy leisurely picnic lunches and to set out blankets and folding chairs under shady elm trees and in other choice locations close to the great music shell.

The excitement of the scurrying throngs was contagious. We began to sense it stirring within us as we unloaded our own picnicking paraphernalia and felt in our inside jacket pocket to be sure we hadn't left our admission tickets at home. Then we followed the crowds to the picnic area where we proceeded to eat all sorts of things that weren't especially good for us and to exchange small talk about the forthcoming all-Beethoven concert with other members of our party.

* * *

Last Sunday was one of the loveliest days God ever created. Fleecy white clouds hovered low over the silent music shell as though they wanted to obtain vantage listening posts as close as possible to the scene of the afternoon's performance. There never was a bluer sky anywhere in the whole wide world. It provided a majestic background for stately shade trees, towering distant mountains and the kaleodoscopic colors of the dresses, gowns and other less formal attire of the thousands of attractive women who wandered about the grounds with their escorts or families.

No, sir! God never created a lovelier day. As one member of our party said: "God must love Beethoven. I'm sure this perfect summer day is His tribute to a beloved composer." The simple statement was one with which we were all in agreement.

* * *

With lunch out of the way there was still an hour to be spent before concert time, so we cleared our table of the litter of picnic leftovers and embarked on a tour of the Tanglewood grounds. We didn't start out for any one place in particular. We just permitted our footsteps to guide us where they would. They didn't disappoint us. They led us to little groups of Valley friends and they led us in and out of festive throngs of music lovers dressed in every conceivable sort of costume.

Fashions at Tanglewood never fail to intrigue us. There was certainly an unusual variety of them in evidence last Sunday. We saw men, comfortably clad in Bermuda shorts, chatting with companions who sported immaculate Palm Beach suits. We saw men in beach shorts, men in slacks, men wearing the loudest sports shirts imaginable, and men as conservatively dressed as they would be in the cold, stone canyons of the business world. We even saw a few men carelessly attired in gaily colored swim trunks and T-shirts.

* * *

The women displayed an even wider variety of costumes. They strolled about the lawns clad in peddle pushers, slacks of every color of the spectrum, linen dresses, cotton frocks, chic Fifth Avenue ensembles, shorts and halters, lounging pajamas, and smart skirts and frothy blouses. Here and there, women attired in flawlessly tailored summer suits and formal afternoon frocks, stood out in the crowd like orchid centerpieces dominating a basket of multicolored posies.

Even the children displayed varied tastes in concert attire. Very small children gamboled on the lawns in sunsuits. Older children—just beginning to acquire a paper-thin veneer of premature sophistication—wandered about modeling pretty frocks and, in the case of boys, summer suits which were exact duplicates of the ones worn by their proud daddies.

It didn't seem to matter what anyone wore. The chief idea was to dress comfortably, and that's exactly what everyone did. About the only costume we didn't see was a Bikini bathing suit, but we wouldn't have been at all surprised if one of the scanty costumes had shown up in the colorful throng.

* * *

There was an air of anticipation and suppressed excitement in every corner of Tanglewood as we continued our pre-coucert tour of the grounds. In back of the music shell, musicians tuned up their instruments or chatted with friends. Oboes thrilled and trumpets blared Violins squeaked and cellos boomed. Through this atmosphere of musical excitement rang the clear notes of childrens' laughter and the buzz of a thousand animated conversations.

All of this frenzied activity continued until a few moments before concert time when everyone hurried to locate their seats inside the music shell or, in the case of lawn listeners, to get settled on the blankets and cushions which formed little islands of color on the lawn outside the shell.

* * *

It was nearly 2.30 when the solemn ringing of a bell announced that the afternoon performance was about to begin. It was the signal for the buzz of conversation to fade away into a great silent nothingness. It was as though a sorcerer had waved his wand and commanded the world to be still. Even the occasional flutter of a program page sounded ominously loud as the celebrated conductor Pierre Monteux walked across stage and bowed to his waiting audience. Only then was the spell of silence broken. The assembled throng came to life to greet him with a thundering ovation, then settled back into an even deeper silence as the opening notes of Beethoven's overture to "Leonore" rose into the smiling blue heavens.

It was a glorious performance. Beethoven could have wished for no grander tribute to his memory. We like to think that the spirit of the illustrious composer may have occupied an empty seat in the audience to hear an inspired Boston Symphony Orchestra lovingly interpret the magnificent music which was his bequest to a greateful world.

* * *

We were emotionally exhausted when the concert was over. We had soared on clouds of ecstacy as the music of Beethoven swelled and waned. We had experienced a piece of mind, such as comes to a man only a few times in his life span, during calm, serene passages, and we had thrilled to the gifted performance given by Claudio Arrau, piano soloist of the afternoon. We were still dwelling in the enchanted realm of Beethoven long after we had left the concert grounds to travel to Great Barrington and dinner at the Berkshire Inn. It had been one of the most wonderful Sunday afternoons we can remember.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA.
NEWS
JUL 18 1954

Kudo for Steber

ELEANOR STEBER, who sang a leading role at the opening concert of the Tanglewood Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Lenox, Mass., last week, has become a leading figure in international music-making. In addition to appearing in Puccini's "Girl of the Golden West" during the May festival in Florence, under the direction of Dimitri Mitropoulos, Miss Steber has a warm welcome to remember the Holland Festival. In x Miss Steber took on one ie major challenges of her career when she sang the soprano role in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," the opening gun in Conductor Munch's season-long salvo in honor of his French compatriot born 150 years ago.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
JUL 18 1954

Soprano At Dell Thursday

Dorothy Maynor Will Feature Varied Program

By Edwin H. Schloss

DOROTHY MAYNOR will be the soloist in the Dell next Thursday night, making her first appearance with the Robin Hool Dell Orchestra since the summer of 1946. William Steinberg will conduct.

Tomorrow night, as maestro of the week, Steinberg will preside over a program featuring a distinguished team of duo-pianists, Pierre Luboschutz and Genia Nemenoff. They will play the Mozart Concerto in E flat for Two Pianos and Orchestra as well as Bohuslav Martinu's Concerto for the same combination. The purely orchestra numbers on tomorrow's program include the Beethoven Leonore Overture No. 3 and Debussy's "La Mer."

On Tuesday night with Steinberg again on the podium, the bill offers Berlioz's Symphony Fantastique and two Wagner numbers—The Prelude and Love Death from "Tristan and Isolde" and the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger."

The last of three children's concerts will be performed Wednesday morning — again under the baton of Alexander Hilsberg. The performance, for six-to-sixteen-year-olds, will be based on "Music and the Dance."

Thirteen youngsters of the Anna Criss Dance Group will present Schubert's Ballet Music from "Rosamunde," and Strauss' "Blue Danube Waltz." The group's soloists, Kathy Sokoloff and Lori Goldman, will be featured in Strauss' "Fizzicato Polka"; Diniscu's "Hora Stacatto"; and Harl McDonald's "Rhumba."

Pianist Susan Starr, 12, will play Saint-Saens' "Allegro - Appassionata," and ten-year-old Glenn Derringer, organist, will perform Smetana's "Dance of Comedians" and "Jalousie." Orchestral selections include Khatchaturian's Waltz from the "Masquerade Suite" and Borodin's "Polovetzky Dances."

Miss Maynor's program on Thursday includes an excerpt from Bach's Cantata No. 51; two songs from Handel's "L' Allegro"; "Here Ye, Israel" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah"; the Bachianas Brisileiras, No. 5 by Villa-Lobos and as a concluding number, "Pace, Pace, Mio Dio" from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino." Mr. Steinberg's orchestral offerings will include the "Cockaigne" Overture by Elgar; Respighi's "The Pines of Rome" and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Many Philadelphia music lovers will remember Dorothy Maynor's first appearance in this city made with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music more than 14 years ago—March 23, 1940.

It was a debut hailed by press and public as an occasion which introduced one of the great voices of our time. Miss Maynor's gifts were immediately recognized as of uncommon musical quality and she herself as an artist of purest ray serene.

This excitement echoed the electric impression made by Miss Maynor the preceding summer on the occasion of her "discovery" by the late Serge Koussevitzky. This was at a picnic given by Dr. Konssevitzky at Tanglewood, scene of the famous Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Maynor, appearing before a formidable audience of 200 orchestra musicians and their guests, completely captivated her hearers with a program that included music by Handel, Mozart, Wagner and Charpentier. These engagements immediately following her Tanglewood triumph included appearances with the New York Philharmonic, the Chicago Symphony and the Boston Symphony as well as the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Miss Maynor was born 42 years ago in Norfolk, Va., daughter of a Methodist minister. As a youngster, she sang in her father's church choir and studied Home Economics and Dress Design at Hampton Institute. She sang in Hampton's chorus of 120 voices and her first public musical experiences came as a member of the chorus in 1929 when the group toured Europe and this country.

After Hampton, Miss Maynor studied with John Findley Williamson at the famous Westminster Choir School in Princeton, N. J.

In private life, Miss Maynor is the wife of the Rev. Shelby Rooks, pastor of New York's St. James Church.

Miss Maynor's singing is closely related to her deeply religious nature, a fact evidenced by the frequent appearance of sacred art song and Negro spirituals on her programs. These make up a racial and cultural heritage which she has long treasured.

[241]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
JUL 15 1954

FOR THOSE who journey to the east to "Tanglewood," America's supreme effort in music these many summers or west to Chautauqua, where the institution has brought music, lectures and sermons to thousands since the late 19th Century, there are world famous folk in programs. Right here at home the University School of Music and Division of Summer Sessions offers concerts every Monday night through Aug. 2 with other events tonight and on Aug 4. Tonight's concert in the Women's building will present Rose Bampton, soprano, with Stevenson Barrett at the piano.

CHARLES MUNCH, music director of the Berkshire Music Festival, announces that the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" is scheduled for Friday, Aug. 13, a gala day with numerous features to be made known later. The popular "Bach-Mozart Concerts" in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood" are given on successive Friday nights, Aug. 13 excepted. That week the concert will take place Aug. 12. Tomorrow night's program by the Chamber Orchestra will be conducted by Director Munch and by Choral Conductor Hugh Ross. Saturday morning at 10 o'clock the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will rehearse in the Shed, the modest admission fee going to the Orchestra's Pension Fund. There was a chamber music concert last night in the Theater-Concert Hall by the Albeneri Trio playing Brahms, Marinu and Beethoven. Tomorrow night's program in the Shed will be conducted by Music Director Munch will be all-Bach and will include a cantata conducted by Choral Director Hugh Ross and two suites performed by chamber orchestra.

Fiedler to Conduct At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in the second half of the "Tanglewood on Parade" concert Friday night, Aug. 13, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The program includes Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" march, excerpts from Offenbach's "Gaite Parisienne," "TViana," Hayman's symphonic arrangement of television commercials, and the "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor radio and television theme.

As already announced, the first half of the concert, with Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, includes Bizet's Symphony in C and the final scene of Richard Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis in the title role.

Before the concert, there will be demonstrations of the Berkshire Music Center's activities at 6 p. m. and, for rthe concert's box and reserved seat ticket holders, outdoor opera at 4 p. m. The day's events are for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Information about tickets may be obtained by telephoning Lenox 600.

AR

BOSTON MASS.
POST
JUL 18 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 17—With the single exception of Aaron Copland's early piano concerto scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, the programs in the music shed at Tanglewood this week end are devoted to the French composers, Debussy, Franck and Berlioz. Tonight, Pierre Monteux moved the 8500 listeners to cheers with the most stunning performance of Debussy's "La Mer" I have ever heard. It was a reading which dazzled the ears with every shade of color in the orchestral spectrum, touched the heart with warm emotion and stirred the pulse with its irresistible movement.

In "La Mer" Debussy employs the limitless timbres of the orchestra as a vast tonal palette in evoking the elusive moods of the sea. While seldom attempting a literal musical painting, he has set forth for his players a virtuoso exercise in recreating the everchanging colors, the mysterious impressions and the unfathomable tempers of the sea.

This work even when performed in a humdrum fashion is interesting; but when it is played as Monteux and the Boston Symphony did tonight, "La Mer" becomes an overwhelming experience. Monteux illuminates every bar with a phosphorescent glow, keeping the hearer on seat's edge with sheer opulent beauty of luminous sound. What is even more praiseworthy, the performance was unmarred by any personal idiosyncrasies by the conductor nor by a single blemish from any player in the band.

On Monday in Symphony Hall, these musicians will record this masterpiece; in all probability it will stand as the definitive performance.

Two excerpts from Debussy's incidental music for "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebestieen," somewhat pointless when wrenched from context, opened the concert. Though each short piece was pleasant, they only served to warm the orchestra for the more important "La Mer."

Caesar Franck's ambling symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," based on the Arabian Nights, introduced pianist Vera Franceschi to the Berkshire Festival. Since the composer has given the soloist little to do, an evaluation of Miss Franceschi's capabilities must wait until she can be heard in a more demanding assignment. However, she is very pretty and successfully diverted my mind from this time bleached opus.

The concert closed with a sturdy rendition of Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 18 1954

The Lively Arts—

Berlioz on the Rebound

By T. H. Parker

Patrons of the Berkshire Music Festival know, of course, that this is to be the "Berlioz season" at Tanglewood.

Last year, actually, was the 150th anniversary of the birth of the great French Romantic composer. And as a matter of fact, Charles Munch had begun working up to this season's splurge 'way back in 1952. That summer he had given Berlioz's Requiem. Last season he followed up with "Romeo et Juliette."

But this is to be the Year of the Big Windfall. Already Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Radcliffe Choral Society and Harvard Glee Club, Martial Singher, David Poleri and Donald Gramm have done "The Damnation of Faust" as the season's opener. In addition, there will be "Symphonie Fantastique," "Harold in Italy," another "Romeo," "Summer Nights," the Te Deum and the Requiem once more, as well as a half dozen overtures and excerpts.

★

How this is going to set with audiences who know Berlioz only by reputation, or a single work here or there, is hard to say. Certainly few composers, outside the more rambunctious moderns, have been so disparaged by their post-mortem commentators. It is true that he was a romantic among romantics, to the point of identifying himself with Hamlet. It is true that few of his works are without literary or programmatic bases. And Berlioz could, of course, be flamboyant for any time or clime, without the necessity of pointing to the Hungarian March in the "Damnation," or some of the monologues in "Lelio" as easy examples.

Nevertheless, as many will be made to realize at Tanglewood during the next few weeks, most of the sins reputed to Berlioz were neither indigenous nor indelible. Rather, they were assigned to him by succeeding generations as the result of changing tastes instead of truths.

The contention that it somehow constituted "poor breeding" to exhibit one's feelings even in the pursuit of art is of course a Victorianism that persists in part today. And, of course, programme music has been looked down the nose at by practically everyone except Richard Strauss, ever since modernism has been on the rise. People will still tell you that Beethoven's one lapse from grace is his Pastoral Symphony, and extol the sterility of the Seventh, instead.

In the world of public esthetics, some of the greatest havoc-wreakers are those who contend that "the arts should express our times." Though the stronger of them may retain some hold on universality, the weaker noodles will inevitably love today and disdain yesterday. This has been to considerable degree the operative fallacy in Berlioz's case. Romanticism today is not out, but is so disguised that it appears a different dish from the one out of which Berlioz supped. Mr. Munch's efforts will make some converts at Tanglewood, but one will get you ten if they are not still embarrassed by their own conversion. "Romantic" is a chalk-word on the esthetic fence.

For the sake of these and other Doubting-Thomases, it might be well to rehearse two of Hector Berlioz's incomparable qualities. Despite his literary propensities, his many programmatic works, he was a musician first and foremost rather than a dramatist. This is a point often overlooked and perhaps even more often denied. And as a musician, he was fundamentally more classical than the romantic aspects of his material at first reveal.

No one can deny that Berlioz liked highly - colored subjects. He did indeed. But in the writing itself, its remarkable economy of means, its lucidity, the exactitude with which it says its say, Berlioz's work is more nearly the successor to Beethoven than Brahms' was, as we have remarked on numerous occasions.

One remembers, indeed, the exchange between Berlioz and the King of Prussia, who said, "I understand you are the composer who writes for 500 musicians." "Your Majesty has been misinformed," Berlioz replied. "I sometimes write for 450." But the dimension of the writing is no gauge either of its economy or its finesse, and no one with any sense will fall into the trap of thinking so.

Above all there is Berlioz's extraordinary imagination. The variety within a single work, of material, of temper, of treatment, whether the work deals with a prescribed form, like the Requiem, or is the freest fantasy, like "Lelio," is remarkable and wonderful beyond any other composer. No composer finds so many facets to write about in any one subject, whether they comprise the main gist or the incidental attractions. Many composers have written on many themes. Stravinsky, today, is an example. But none has found so much inner variety for them, so imaginatively.

Unlike Rossini writing came hard for Berlioz. Had he been less in love with his art, he would have been less episodic than he was. Having found some general theme, or mood as the basic treatment of his subject, like Puccini in "Madama Butterfly," for example, he would have stuck with it, saying the same thing over and over. He did not. No subject he touched but what he investigated its every musical possibility, dramatic, lyric, narrative, atmospheric or sheerly fanciful and gratis. Thus each of Berlioz's compositions appears like a mosaic, with the same liveliness and variegation that mosaic affords.

★

Mr. Munch is, of course, the very model of a Berlioz interpreter. He is temperate with Berlioz's works as material, shrewdly discerning of them as music. He does not skimp their brilliance nor their intensity, but he manages these attributes without flamboyance. But he is best, perhaps, with the delicate and exquisite moments, and there are many more of them in Berlioz than his detractors admit. Sensibilite was a real, not a Byronic quality in the great French Romanticist.

WATERBURY, CONN.
AMERICAN
JUL 12 1954

Berlioz Work Opener At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., July 12 — An audience of 8,500 persons sat enthralled at Tanglewood this week end as it listened intently to the Berkshire Festival's premiere presentation of Berlioz's dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," as magnificently interpreted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch.

This epic composition, offered Saturday night at the first of a number of programs marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of the noted French composer, provided the gala opening of the festival's 1954 Music Shed concert series. The two and one half-hour long, four part, 20-section symphonic poem, which recites the story of Goethe's "Faust" in a continuous narrative, was overwhelming in the sweep and vitality of its Tanglewood presentation.

The work was presented with the 104-piece orchestra, the 110 voices of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth; and the solo performances of Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, Donald Gramm, bass.

Especially noteworthy, in a performance made memorable by the almost equally superb renditions by all participants, was the tonal beauty of Miss Steber's Marguerite and the stirring French style of Mr. Poleri's Faust and Mr. Singher's Mephistopholes.

Completing a truly outstanding opening week-end of music in the beautiful Berkshires was an all-Beethovan program attended by over 10,000 persons yesterday afternoon and featuring the eminent Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, and the brilliant 79-year-old French conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Mr. Arrau's carefully modulated, elaborate interpretation of the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") captured all of the composition's sweeping grandeur and dramatic intensity. The unfailing blending of theme and variations between piano and orchestra was perfection itself.

The audience rose with thunderous applause at the conclusion of Mr. Monteux's powerful presentation of the Symphony No. 5. Under his inspired baton, the orchestra was as one magnificent instrument in performing this traditional masterpiece.

A stirring rendition of the Lenore Overture No. 3 opened the afternoon program.

MDA

BOSTON MASS.
POST
JUL 12 1954

Music in Review

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, July 11—For the final concert in the opening week end of the Berkshire Music Festival, Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony played an all-Beethoven program before an audience of over 10,000.

This might well be called a classical hit-parade, listing as it does the Leonore Overture No. 3, the "Emperor Concerto," and the Fifth Symphony. And it was thrilling. Beethoven, too. Mr. Monteux has never demonstrated keener insight and the orchestra has seldom, if ever, sounded better.

Monteux maintained a suspenseful mood from the very outset in the "Leonora" despite the dramatic fanfares, trumpet calls, and frequent climactic outbursts.

Claudio Arrau deserved every bravo hurled at him for his triumphal performance of the solo part in the concerto. He is the type of pianist who addresses himself to the music and leaves the histrionics to the pianistic prestidigitator.

He obviously broadened the monumental first movement in adaptation to the vast expanses of the shed, but his performance remained a vivid one, creating an almost unbearable tension in the cascading octaves toward the close.

Mr. Monteux drew from the orchestra a gorgeous texture in the eloquent and noble adagio. His phrasing exactly matched the soloist in mood and color. In the final rondo both Arrau and Monteux reached a peak of brilliance I had never dreamed possible in this work.

The concert ended on the highest possible plane with a taut performance of Beethoven's best-known symphony. Instead of interpreting this masterpiece with a capital I, Monteux played it straight, allowing the music to create the fullest possible impact. That it did was evidenced by the breathless hush which the audience hung onto every note and by the thunderous applause at the conclusion.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 23 1954

RUTH POSSELT will be violin soloist with the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD
JUL 18 1954

NICOLE HENRIOT, gifted young French pianist, who will be guest soloist Saturday evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Liszt's E flat Piano Concerto.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
JUL 14 1954

Library Offers Recordings

The person who wishes to compare Berkshire Festival performances at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with recorded versions of the same works has a good opportunity in the record collection of the Schenectady County Public Library.

Many of the selections being played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this season are available at the library.

Music to be played during July performances, obtainable on records at the library, includes the following with the date representing the day of the Tanglewood presentation:

July 16—Bach's "Suite No. 4"; July 18—Debussy's "Iberia" and the "Fantastic Symphony" of Berlioz; July 23—Handel's "Concerto Grosso No. 4" and Haydn's "Symphony No. 100 (Military)" and the "Nelson Mass"; July 24—Weber's "Der Freischutz" Overture and Strauss' "Don Juan"; July 25—Berlioz' "Beatrice and Benedict" Overture and the same composer's "Harold in Italy"; July 30—more Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds"; and July 31. Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet."

For persons interested in learning something about the Tanglewood area and the people taking part in it, the library today suggested the following books: "The Berkshires Through the Camera of Arthur Palme"; "The Berkshires," edited by Roderick Peattie; "The Tales of Tanglewood" by M. A. deW. Howe; and "Dictators of the Baton" by David Ewen. The latter includes a biography of Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony.

3 One-Act Operas

Three rarely heard one-act operas by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 18 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta, Morel at Tanglewood

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will open the Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this week.

The ensemble will be heard Wednesday evening at 8:30 in "The Seasons," by Vivaldi, "Apollon Musagete" by Stravinsky, and Rossini's Baroque Concerto.

The "Bach Mozart" concert Friday night at 8:30, will offer the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Charles Munch in Handel's Concerto Grosso, Opus 6, No. 4 and Haydn's "Military" Symphony. Hugh Ross will lead the orchestra in Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Jean Morel will conduct the Boston Symphony on the Overture to Weber's "Freischuetz," Prokofiev's Sixth Symphony, Strauss's "Don Juan," and the Elgar "Enigma" Variations.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in the Overture to "Beatrice And Benedick" and "Harold in Italy," by Berlioz. William Primrose will be viola soloist. The program will close with Toch's Second Symphony.

[242]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SU

JUL 24 195

Music

An 'All-H' Program Is Heard

By ROBERT BAGAR.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24.—In the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night an audience of 2300 (quite a few were lying around outside) heard an all-H program. That is to say it consisted of music by Handel and Haydn.

The works presented consisted of Handel's Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4; the Haydn Symphony in G Major, No. 100, otherwise known as the "Military" symphony, and the Mass No. 3, in D Minor by the same composer.

This mass, conducted by Hugh Ross, has a few descriptive names of its own. In England it goes either by "Imperial" or "Coronation" mass. Still another designation is "Nelson," which refers to the great British Admiral, Lord Nelson, whose victory in the "Battle of the Nile" Haydn heard about while working on the mass.

Conducted by Munch.

Charles Munch conducted the Concerto Grosso and the symphony. He got some quite remarkable effects with the string group, especially with the slow introduction and the third movement, a largo. I could find nothing wrong with his tempos this trip. They were perfectly even, when they had to be. And the playing was clear, incisive—a bit too much that way, sometimes—but compelling.

The feature of the evening, however, was the performance of the Haydn mass. This work, which I know very little about, is simply stunning. Well, it is stunning for a good two-thirds of the way. Such dramatic utterance for the chorus, such beautiful arias for the soloists!

Truly, Haydn had no end of knowledge about voice writing. His music here is at its symphonic best, and all with a chorus to interweave and comment and play an intimate role in the scheme.

Not in a long time have I experienced such pleasure as I did last night when I heard the soprano solo in the "Benedictus." Not only is this one of those arias for the book, but it was delivered with great refinement, not to omit great feeling by Naomi Farr.

Soloists Exceptional.

All the soloists, in fact, were exceptional for the musicianly, the stylistic manner of their work. And the chorus, which last night was grouped differently, sang with a wonderful spirit. Their voices blended perfectly. Oddly enough, I thought that the orchestra could have done with a few more players, just to make the vocal and instrumental equilibrium that much better.

The "Military" symphony got a witty performance by Mr. Munch and his musicians. And that was entirely correct, for the score is not without its gayety, its arch and humorous passages.

Also, it blasts and bangs away in the most abandoned fashion. Papa Haydn was about 62 years old when he delivered himself of this score. Well, if its spirit reflects the man, he must have been quite a droll, fun-poking fellow at that age.

The evening was rather a triumph for Mr. Ross, who is the director, trainer, guide and what-not, of the Berkshire Festival chorus. The singing of that chorus last night, the singing of soloists Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor; Thomas Stewart, baritone, and Miss Farr, the playing of the orchestra, all were products of unremitting labors in rehearsal. He was given a grand ovation at the end.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 24 1954

Berkshire Festival:

Haydn Music Special Treat

By MILES KASTENDIECK.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24.—Rediscovering Haydn turned out to be the special treat of the opening concert of the third weekend of the Berkshire festival in the theatre-concert hall last night.

Hearing his "military" symphony (No. 1000) and his "Nelson" Mass on this occasion was nothing short of a revelation, especially since neither is too well known.

The symphony is a gay, almost exotic work. The music suggests that war could hardly be taken seriously when cheerfulness is always breaking in.

Since Charles Munch conducted the score with a lustiness equaled only by the music, the effect on the audience was electrifying. Trumpets and drums may have contributed, to say nothing of cymbals and the triangle, but the vitality lay within the score itself.

Spirited Living

The Mass gave the impression of burning faith last night. Part of this arose from the crisp performance it rereived under the direction of Hugh Ross. Part came from the spirited singing of the soloists and chorus.

The festival chorus thoroughly distinguished itself in point of attack and freshness of voice.

As the chief soloist the soprano Naomi Farr caught attention for agility of voice in negotiating difficult passages and for attention to style.

She was most ably supported by Beatrice Krebs, contralto, Marvin Worden, tenor and Thomas Stewart, bass. All concerned had been admirably prepared.

The concert began with Handel's Concerto Grosso for strings, opus 6, No. 4, conducted by Munch. The performance could have had less virtuosity and more precision. If the full sweep of the music did not come through, its solid grandeur did.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN

JUL 13 1954

8,500 Hear 'Faust' At Tanglewood

Lenox, Mass., July 12 — An audience of 8,500 persons sat enthralled at Tanglewood over the week end as it listened intently to the Berkshire Festival's premiere presentation of Berlioz's dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," as magnificently interpreted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Charles Munch.

This epic composition, offered Saturday night at the first of a number of programs marking the 150th anniversary of the birth of the noted French composer, provided the gala opening of the festival's 1954 Music Shed concert series. The two and one half-hour long, four part, 20-section symphonic poem, which recites the story of Goethe's "Faust" in a continuous narrative, was overwhelming in the sweep and vitality of its Tanglewood presentation.

The work was presented with the 104-piece orchestra, the 110 voices of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth; and the solo performances of Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, Donald Gramm, bass.

Especially noteworthy, in a performance made memorable by the almost equally superb renditions by all participants, was the tonal beauty of Miss Steber's Marguerite and the stirring French style of Mr. Poleri's Faust and Mr. Singher's Mephistopholes.

Completing a truly outstanding opening week-end of music in the beautiful Berkshires was an all-Beethovan program attended by over 10,000 persons Sunday afternoon and featuring the eminent Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, and the brilliant 79-year-old French conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Mr. Arrau's carefully modulated, elaborate interpretation of the Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") captured all of the composition's sweeping grandeur and dramatic intensity. The unfailing blending of theme and variations between piano and orchestra was perfection itself.

The audience rose with thunderous applause at the conclusion of Mr. Monteux's powerful presentation of the Symphony No. 5. Under his inspired baton, the orchestra was as one magnificent instrument in performing this traditional masterpiece.

A stirring rendition of the Lenore Overture No. 3 opened the afternoon program.

BOSTON, MASS.
HERALD

JUL 18 1954

Berkshire Festival Now in Third Week

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini by The Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Handel and Haydn, including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross, performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch, on Sunday afternoon (July 25), in the Music Shed.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, founded by Josef Zimbler, 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular Wednesday evening Chamber Music series, and their selections, Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," Stravinsky's "Apollon Musagete" and Rossini's "Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass" are all new on Tanglewood programs. Another Tanglewood premiere during the week is the Haydn "Nelson" Mass in D Minor, No. 3 (July 23), with soloists and the Festival Chorus from students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting. The Symphony No. 2 of Austrian-American composer Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood, which Charles Munch introduced to the U. S. in Boston and New York with the Boston Symphony in the 1952-53 season, will also be performed for the first time at Tanglewood; it is dedicated to Albert Schweitzer. Nicole Henriot played last at Tanglewood in 1952, and William Primrose was an instructor in the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs will be given in the Music Shed at 3:00 P. M., July 24.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN

JUL 25 1954

MUSIC

Man of the Hour Is Hector Berlioz

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TODAY'S composer is not of the 20th century but of the 19th!

That Hector Berlioz should be the composer-of-the-hour may be attributed in part to the 150th anniversary of his birth (Dec. 11, 1803). The passage of time often leads to fortuitous revivals.

Miles Kastendieck

Interest at the moment has crystallized chiefly because he has several champions. Most notable among them is Charles Munch, the conductor of the Boston Symphony.

By planning to perform 10 of Berlioz's works in the course of the six weekends of the Berkshire Festival, Munch has given the composer's emergence a healthy spurt. Whether this highlighting will bring a more judicious evaluation of his merits is anybody's guess.

One fact became established after the performance of "The Damnation of Faust" at the opening weekend of the festival: this masterpiece, seldom heard in its entirety (two and a half hours) has been unduly neglected.

Fortunately it will be heard again later this year, and a recording of it will be released in September.

If the Tanglewood performance did nothing else, it made many people realize that Berlioz's music cannot be dismissed in the summary fashion it so frequently is.

The most familiar of Berlioz's works, the Fantastic Symphony was performed last week. Today the relatively familiar "Harold in Italy" is scheduled along with the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick."

Next week the entire "Romeo and Juliet," heard here and in Tanglewood last season, will have another complete performance.

Ahead lie the Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," the "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," the song cycle "Summer Nights," and the "Te Deum" (Aug. 7) and the "Requiem" (Aug. 15).

Such an array of works sends the music lover to reading up on this incurable romantic whose original genius constantly challenges the listener.

One of the most concise and best written monographs about him is by the late Herbert Peyser. Originally written for Philharmonic-Symphony radio listeners, it is now part of an important book entitled "Masters of the Orchestra."

Nicole Henriot At Tanglewood

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, will include a program of Handel and Haydn performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Symphony with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, Friday evening, July 23, in the Hall; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full Boston Symphony with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, Saturday evening, July 24, in the Music Shed; and the Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, with William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berloz and Toch, Sunday afternoon, July 25, in the Shed.

NICOLE HENRIOT

A Tanglewood premiere will be the Haydn "Nelson" Mass in D Minor, No. 3, with soloists and the Festival Chorus from students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting. The Symphony No. 2 of Austrian - American composer Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood, which Charles Munch introduced to the U. S. in Boston and New York with the Boston Symphony in the 1952-1953 season, will also be performed for the first time at Tanglewood; it will be dedicated to Albert Schweitzer.

Nicole Henriot played last at Tanglewood in 1952, and William Primrose was an instructor in the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs will be given in the Music Shed at 3 p. m., July 24.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
SUNDAY NEWS

JUL 25 1954

TRIP TIP

Music lovers have three weekends left to take in the famed Boston Symphony's concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Those who would like to go to the Festival and return the same day can take a special package train trip, while weekend excursionists are offered all-exense-but-meals bus tours.

The train trip, to be operated next Sunday and on Aug. 8 and 15, costs $6.75 per person, including taxes and admission to the concert. Departure from New York is at 8:20 A. M., with return slated for 11:30 P. M. The bus tours, pegged at $19.95, plus tax, will leave here Saturdays at 9 A. M. through Aug. 14, returning on Sunday evenings. This trip includes overnight hotel accommodations, all transportation, sightseeing at Saratoga Springs and admission to two concerts.

THE NEWS Travel Bureau, 224 E. 42d St., New York 17, N. Y., has brochures available describing both trips. They may be had by visiting, writing or calling the Bureau (MU 2-1234).

[243]

Around the Town: Times-Union (Albany) July 23

Crane Inn Draws Many Patrons of Tanglewood

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

The extended season of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this summer—six weekend concerts in the big shed as against three last year—has put an almost prohibitive curtailment on the dining and over-night accommodations in the entire Berkshire Area. Many music lovers from Boston and New York drive to Tanglewood, but unless they have reservations, find it difficult to obtain lodgings and food in the over-crowded hotels, motels, inns and private homes.

However, we discovered one delightful place on the main street of the beautiful village of Dalton, Mass, which is only four miles from the city of Pittsfield. It bears the important name (important in the paper-making industry) of the Crane Inn. It was formerly the Irving House, now entirely restored to its early America heritage by the family whose name it bears. And Albanians will receive the same warmth of greeting as that which was chiseled in the mantel-piece of Keeler's Broadway Hotel which read:

"Whoe'er has travelled this world's dull round; whe'er his stages may have been, may sigh to think he yet has found his warmest welcome at an inn."

DONEGAN IS HOST

And the man who best exemplifies that traditional hospitality is the manager, John E. Donegan, formerly the resident manager of the Ten Eyck Hotel in 1952 and 1953. As is to be expected, one will meet a lot of his friends and neighbors in the charming parlor of rane Inn, or in one of the several dining rooms and the unique cocktail lounge. Ad hoverig over each of the tables is the genial host, John Donegan. Or if he happens to be away at the moment, his function as greeter is easily taken over by his efficient secretary and hostess, Dorothy Murray.

It was our privilege to be taken on "a personally conducted tour" of the rooms on the second and third floors by Mrs. Murray, each done over by an interior decorator at the time the hotel was newly rebuilt last year, within and without.

DELIGHTFUL SPOT

The main dining room, overlooking the elm-shaded street is a delightful spot in which to shed the cares of the world, discuss the past and future programs of the nearby American capital of music at Tanglewood, or just enjoy the delicious food on the extensive menu, either before or after the concerts. One is never afraid to look at the figures in the right-hand corner of the carte de jour.

Nearby is the Crane Museum, housed in Crane and Co.'s Old Stone Mill, built in 1844., and opened as a museum in 1930. In wall and floor cases are exhibits which trace the history of American paper making from Revolutionary days to the all-rag papers used for currency, bonds and stock certificates today. And boniface Donegan tells us that if we think the Berkshires are beautiful now, we should come over in October when the trees take on their gorgeous fall coloring.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS. REPUBLICAN
JUL 18 1954

Time Out for Some Conversation

Time out for conversation, at the Corner House, Lenox, as Boston Symphony members gather for a post-concert confab. Left to right: Concert master Richard Burgin, violinist George Zazofsky, who will solo with the Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday, July 21; oboist Ralph Gomberg, and cellists Joseph Zimbler and Martin Hoherman.

Record Audience Cheers Tanglewood Concerts

Times-Union July 20

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

A very vital and harmonious France was represented by the week-end concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, with two conductors, steeped in the Gallic traditions, taking over the podium. Saturday night, Pierre Monteux was the guest director and Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch, the regular baton-wielder. A record audience was in attendance for both performances.

Saturday night's program included works by Debussy and Cesar Franck, with the D-Minor Symphony by Franck being the piece de resistance. As was to be expected, Mr. Monteux gave a spirited and thoroughly musicianly reading of colorful score. Vera Franceschi, a young American of French extraction, gave an electrifying performance of the Franck tone poem, "Les Djinns," with the orchestra.

MUNCH CONDUCTS

Sunday afternoon's program was highlighted by a portion of Debussy's "Iberia," and the "Fantastic Symphony" by Berlioz, the latter in honor of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch was the conductor of this monumental program. As Franck, Debussy and Berlioz call upon every resourct of the modern orchestra, needless to say, the music raised the audience to a very high peak of enthusiasm.

The American composer, Aaron Copland, was represented by his piano concerto masterfully played by the young American virtuoso, Leo Smit. Mr. Copland has written a score which is unusually difficult for instrumentalists and soloist alike. There is an American strain of modern music running through the concerto with just a suggestion of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" in the middle section.

RATHER DISTURBING

For lovers of the "Three Bs," the work was rather disturbing in its unorthodox treatment of rhythm and harmony. However, the younger element in the audience cheered the work and its performers. Following the bombastic conclusion, Conductor Munch and Composer Copland were enthusiastically recalled for a musical monstrosity which appealed more to the technical skill required than to the strict definition of music, per se. As Mr. Copland is a member of the Tanglewood teaching staff, its inclusion might have musical political implications.

Music lovers are enjoying the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood which is attracting a larger-than-ever audience due to the increased number of ... concerts in the Big Shed. On Saturday, July 31 Charles Mu... will direct the Boston Symphony in a dramatic symphony "Ro... and Juliet," with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center. Sunday afternoon Richard Burgin will be the conductor.

For the ... time in the great Tanglewood Music Shed the Boston Pops Orche... with Arthur Fiedler celebrating his 25th year as conductor will ... form in the "Tanglewood on Parade" program on August 13, ... which is conducted each year for the Boston Symphony Officers Sch... of Music. Festivities from 6 p.m. until 11 p.m. include demonstrations by every department of the school. A lawn supper, the evening concert and dancing on the lawn are included.

Monteux Leads Program Of Franck and Debussy

Knickerbocker News July 19, 1954

The Berkshire Festvial concert Saturday night had all the ingredients for a successful evening, a great orchestra playing under an old favorite as conductor, his program of French music well balanced with two favorite compositions and two less familiar works by two of the best known composers and a pretty, young pianist making her local debut in a captivating performance.

All of these and more combined to produce the obvious satisfaction of the Tanglewood audience shown by the warm response to the soloist and the welcome for Pierre Monteux in his first appearance this season as guest conductor.

As always, Monteux proceeded in his precise manner with economy of physical demonstration in producing keen, energetic and forceful results. The Boston Symphony Orchestra was in superb accord, responding willingly to the musical requirements of a revered artist.

The program offered an interesting study of styles, since it alternated Debussy and Franck. Monteux opened with two excepts from Debussy's incidental music for the mystery play of Gabriele d'Annunzio, "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien."

Next he presented Vera Franceschi, flawless San Francisco pianist, in the seldom-heard "Les Djinns," symphonic poem for piano and orchestra by Cesar Franck. Miss Franceschi firmly asserts her artistry in a positive, graceful style. The free improvisatory manner of the slower section, an impassioned prayer, revealed her deep sense of expression. The composition is hardly a grateful vehicle for an artist, however. The one rather brief continuous movement uses the familiar growing melodic concept of Franck and the contrapuntal devices so characteristic of all his music.

As a musical experiment vaguely following the inspiration and form of Victor Hugo's poem, one could well understand why the composition has not achieved the importance of the "exercise in declamation" of the original model, "genies" notwithstanding.

Returning to Debussy with a powerful reading of "La Mer," Monteux maintained a shimmering luster in the sway of the first two movements that contributed by deliberate anticipation to the excitement and terrific climax of the finale, the Dialogue of the Wind and Sea. This obviously was the moment awaited by the capacity audience.

After intermission Monteux presented his famed interpretation of the great Franck "Symphony in D Minor." His treatment of every detail brought beautiful balance with fluidity of tempi, calm and vigorous moods, responsive performance by the orchestra. The old master richly deserved the ovation that followed.—C.F.S.

From Clipping in Town
PAWTUCKET, R. I.
TIMES
JUL 15 1954

Miss Florence M. McIntosh of Hanover, Conn., was the guest this past week end of Miss Beatrice Whatmough of 231 Central avenue.

Miss Shirley Wilkinson of 282 Smithfield avenue, will leave Sunday for Lenox, Mass., where she will be a student at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Festival. The festival will continue through Aug. 15 at Tanglewood, in Lenox. Miss Wilkinson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wilkinson, is a senior at Pembroke College.

The Roving Reporter: Times-Union

Schenectady Youth Wins Acclaim as GI Musician

By TIP ROSEBERRY July 20

Music doesn't run in the family. But almost as soon as he could talk, Kenneth Schermerhorn, of Schenectady, was insisting: "I'm going to be a trumpet player."

He coaxed for a trumpet until, when he was eight, his mother gave him one and he began taking lessons—to the distress of some neighbors.

He got hold of an old baton, too, and used to wave it about.

Kenneth Schermerhorn is now only 24, but has won overnight acclaim as a symphonic conductor. A story about him is in the current issue of Time, with a picture captioned "The Sergeant gives the orders."

The Schenectady kid has won even the fervent applause of a snooty audience in Salzburg, the Austrian music center, as conductor of the three-year-old Seventh Army Symphony Orchestra. That 65-piece longhair orchestra of GIs is on a tour of Europe with "its morale the highest and its playing the best ever." The Time critic says its Salzburg performance "compared favorably with good European orchestras."

WORKED HIS WAY

A graduate of Mont Pleasant High School in 1947, Kenneth partly worked his way, partly was helped through the New England Conservatory by his widowed mother,, Mrs. Charlotte Schermerhorn, and his sister, Miss Lenore Schermerhorn, of 914 Hazelwood Ave., in the Bellevue district of Schenectady. The sister is a typist for GE.

The boy took lessons with Joseph Mirate, the late William Trembley, and then Willard Musser, who was director of music at Mont Pleasant High where Kenneth was an eager student, playing in the school band and orchestra. He had begun playing with dance-bands at the age of 13, and with the Schenectady Symphony Orchestra at 16.

He went on to the New England Conservatory, graduating with honors in 1950. He spent a Summer at the Berkshire Music Festival, played in a couple of Tanglewood concerts with the Boston Symphony under Koussevitzky. Then he took a chair with the Kansas City Philharmonic, whence he was drafted.

MUSICAL ARMY CAREER

Kenneth's Army career has been mostly musical. He won duty with the West Point Band. But band-music didn't satisfy him. He applied for overseas duty and was sent to Germany, biding his time until he could get into the Seventh Army Orchestra.

"I have won," he cabled his mother last Mother's Day, and signed it "Maestro."

Kenneth has lifted the orchestra out of mediocrity so that it is winning prestige for the Army in Europe. When a friend gets out of the Army next year. His mother doesn't know if he intends to go on with a career in conducting, but half-expects him to stay in Europe for a period of study. Kenneth phoned his mother about the Time article, "I was really floating in air," she says.

THE JEWISH ADVOCATE, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1954

MUSIC IN REVIEW

By GERALD A. BERLIN

(Editor's Note:—This week's column is by Mr. Carl Thorp, pianist, composer and teacher, who resides in Newport. Mr. Thorp has contributed music criticism to this paper on other occasions.)

Last Friday Mr. Munch arranged a nutricious evening of very serious music for an audience that slightly exceeded the capacity of the small Tneater-Concert Hall. Handel's Sixth Concerto Grosso opened the program wherein Mr. Munch brought forth some perfectly magnificent string playing from his players and the Largo E piano movement was one of those rare moments in the life of music listening. Haydn's Military Symphony then followed; it proved to be a stirring prelude to the major work of the evening, namely the D Minor Mass of Haydn.

How Haydn was able to compose his third Mass with Lady Hamilton humming the vocal parts in his ears and a vast staff of servants popping in and out of doors of the Easterhazy Estate is a mystery which defies scrutiny. A mystery to only us, however, for he was most able to do so Hugh Ross unfolded the work with loving hands and it was a joy to hear the open-vowel Latin so strongly associated with this conductor. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, and the tenor, Marvin Worden, were well received and assisted by some superb singing by Thomas Stewart, bass, and Naomi Farr, soprano, in the Qui Tollis. The chorus, itself a ductile one, warmed to their gifted security under the direction of Mr. Ross.

Saturday's feast was shared by an enthusiastic audience, eager to hear Prokofieff, Strauss and the Elgar Variations. They were rewarded in tanto. No Tyro is Jean Morel who gave an impassioned reading of the lupine of Prokofieff's symphonies, the Sixth. The harmonies and textures are extremely complex but the three movements of this great work came to a brilliant unfolding under this gifted conductor's baton. The same can be said for the only slightly less irridescent score of the Strauss tone poem "Don Juan." The vast audience was untiring in calling back to the platform and claiming Jean Morel for the evening.

Strangely enough the E Flat Liszt Concerto was juxtaposed between the Prokofieff and the Strauss. How any conductor can place a Liszt concerto on a program and justify his musical conscience has always baffled me. But then I baffle easily. Mlle. Nicole Henriot, however, brought such freshness to the piece that it was a pity the triangle, a signal of the close, was already upon us. Generally I was in haste for the business to come to an end but not so with Mlle. Henriot whose ingratiating and engaging performance will live long in the minds of her listeners. I think the old Abbe Liszt too, would have beamed with pleasure.

The enigmatic Enigma Variations brought Mr. Morel back to the platform in full charge. A place the audience was well disposed to reserve for him, and it was thus the evening came to a close.

"Beaucoup de bruit pour rien" turns out roughly (and not too roughly at that) "much ado about nothing," upon which Berlioz based his overture called "Beatrice et Benedict" which began the Sunday concert, with Mr. Munch happily in charge of this magical work. It would be amusing to hear the Berlioz score for this comedy but we are not destined to do that. Comedy or drama, here is one composer who gives very little opportunity for idleness or repose to any desk in the orchestra. The bracing score came off with such deftness and alacrity that it left the audience fairly breathless.

William Primose then took his place on the platform with his viola and we prepared for some perfectly magnificent playing. In no way did he disappoint us. Supported by Mr. Munch and the great body of the Boston Orchestra, "Harold in Italy" became one of the great musical experiences of this audience's lifetme. One cannot say they are unlikely to hear a finer performance but for the present they have much to be grateful for in Sunday afternoon's concert.

The second Symphony of Ernest Toch, dedicated to Albert Schweitzer, summoned the brio of an orchestra that evidences the most disquieting originality and most especially in the second movement, "very shadowy, skimming." But disquieting originality was once said of Berlioz.

I only wish we could have heard the works played again for there are so many persistent and running figures which embroider the intense and rhapsodical character of the whole.

Indeed it was a full afternoon of perfectly gorgeous sound and pattern.

y, July 28, 1954

Conductor Arthur Fiedler of the Boston Pops Orchestra; Brenda Lewis, soprano, and Thomas Schippers, left to right. They will participate in the gala "Tanglewood on Parade," annual Center benefit, Aug. 13. This will marke the "Pops" first appearance in Tanglewood, sharing a Boston Symphony Concert led by Schippers, with Miss Lewis as soloist.

46 July 29 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Thursday

Gus Manos

SCENE FROM "The Tender Land," newly revised by Composer Aaron Copland to be sung in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass next Monday and Tuesday nights, in the Theater-Concert Hall by students in the Berkshire Music Center Opera department. Principals include Malcolm Bernstein, Mary MacKenzie and the younger folk Eve Rubin and Rosemary Carlos.

Among Syracusans studying in Tanglewood this summer, enrolled in Berkshire Music Center are Soprano Victoria R. Gorcoff, an active member of Civic Morning Musicals, Inc. and Miss Jane Snyder, 816 Maryland av. Miss Snyder, who teaches in Liverpool, was graduated from Wheelock School, Boston. Both young women sing in small choruses in "Tanglewood."

• • •

HE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, JULY 29,

WORLD PREMIERE FOR BLOCH WORK

Griller Group Plays String Quartet No. 4 in Concert at Berkshire Festival

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 28—Ernest Bloch's String Quartet No. 4 composed last March had its world premiére at the Chamber Music Concert, the thirteenth of the Berkshire Festival, given this evening by the Griller Quartet in the Theatre Concert Hall.

As might be expected from Bloch's previous works in the form, especially the second and third quartets, which have been written in the course of the last seven years, this last is a highly individual and imaginatively free expression, yet, also one of a powerful unity and concentration of ideas.

Its principal themes are few. One, which receives many transformations, is a theme that Bloch discovered in a book of primitive melodies years ago, which persists in different movements and is varied in ways that are of rhythmic as well as linear interest. Harmonically the writing is polytonal, yet the sensation is of a very definite harmonic scheme. And the scheme, one that is solely and characteristically Bloch's.

The moods are introspective and range from those of a chip of the furious Bloch of old to the mystical communions of his later years. There is indeed a curious combination of the old earthiness and gusto and the later inwardness and serenity that seem to have evolved within this passionate artist with the passing of the decades.

The last movement is in part a summation of the developments that preceded it. But it will take considerably more than one hearing to grasp all the inner structural relations of this work. It is clear now that underneath apparently rhapsodic expression there is the hand of a tonal logician and master of his craft.

The Grillers have been Bloch's especial exponent in the chamber music genre through this last decade. They played him, so far as one might know at an initial hearing of the work, with sensitive nuance and proverbial understanding of his thought.

This work of Bloch's as enclosed within two classical quartets by Mozart ("The Hunt") and the Beethoven Quartet in G Major of that splendid early set of Opus 18. For the playing of the slow movement of Mozart alone the playing would have been volable. But the concert was an honor to the players throughout. Mozart and Beethoven, as well as Bloch, received long applause.

WORK HAS U. S. DEBUT: Ernest Bloch, whose String Quartet No. 4 had its first U. S. performance last night at the Berkshire Festival.

Lukas Foss Given Commission

STOCKBRIDGE, July 31—Lukas Foss, Tanglewood composer, conductor and pianist, has agreed to a commission of $1500 from the Stockbridge Bowl Association to write a composition on the theme, "I will lift mine eyes up into the hills."

The Biblical citation appears on the plaques awarded by the association in contests designed to encourage preservation of the beauty of the bowl area.

According to Nathan G. Horwitt, events chairman for the association, the commission will be raised in part by a concert scheduled Saturday on the grounds at Wheatleigh, an estate overlooking the bowl. Among the artists scheduled to give informal performances are; composer-pianist Aaron Copland, jazz pianist Joseph Bushkin, baritone Mac Morgan, soprano Theresa Green and violinist Ruth Posselt.

* * *

Vacationing in the Berkshires had a distinctly international flavor last week as 50 members of the United Nations secretariat frolicked at picnics, sports and concerts as guests of the Workshop for World Understanding in Pittsfield, The trip, the fifth annual, included visits to private homes and farms, concerts at Tanglewood and a picnic at Pontoosuc Lake. The visitors represented 21 different lands and were mostly "white-collar" U. N. employees.

Her-Trib Thurs July 29/54

Lenox Premiere For Bloch Quartet

LENOX, Mass., July 28.—The first American performance of Ernst Bloch's Fourth Quartet was the middle third of the program played by the Griller Quartet tonight in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. They had played it for the first time anywhere on July 18, in Wigmore Hall in London.

The Grillers have had the honor of introducing Bloch's previous two quarters and thus it was only natural that he should rely on them to introduce this latest one, finished in November and dedicated to his English friend, Ernest Chapman.

This new quartet is distinguished by a quiet, calm and reposeful mood. Its texture is lighter than in the previous ones yet it has terrific vitality without retaining the barbaric ingredients once associated with his chamber music. Even the

Variety Keynotes 1954 Tanglewood Concerts

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Variety seems to be the keynote of the 1954 series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood with Berlioz coming into his own in honor of his 150th birthday. Guest conductors seem to emerge from behind every fine elm tree on the spacious lawns on the property of the orchestra and the school. Pierre moments but for this reviewer, Charles Munch, the regular conductor, seems to have that dynamic personality which places the music under his direction on a high and exciting plane, not always attained by his coadjutors.

Saturday night's program was conducted by Jean Morel and proved to be one of the outstanding events so far this season. Prouofieff was represented by his Sixth Symphony and Liszt by his E-Flat piano concerto, admirably played by the distinguished French piano virtuoso, Nicole Henroit. The final panel was the playing of Sir Edward Elgar's interesting and provocative "Enigma" variations, coupled with the colorful "Don Juan" tone poem by Richard Strauss.

SUNDAY CONCERT

Sunday afternoon's concert brought the world's greatest viola player, William Primrose, in his well known performance of Berlioz's travelogue, "Harold in Italy." He invested the work with warmth, a preat variety of tone color, vibrant tone and human sentiment.

Ernest Toch's Second Symphony ,with the composer in the audience and called to the podium at the conclusion of the work, was more a demonstration of the possibilities of a modern orchestra than a piece of music destined for immortality. Mr. Munch brought out every nuance, mood, accent of the work which, in the last analysis could be labeled: "Bombastic." Mr. Toch had a few weak moments when he allowed a melody to seep forth, but for this reviewer, we prefer less provocative music — something that leaves a good taste in the mouth at the conclusion. However, it appealed tremendously to the younger element of the audience as the enthusiastic applause made apparent. There was less demonstration from the staid, old New England box holders who were brougnt up on Bach, Beethoven and Brahms.

Boston Herald 54 July 31

Berlioz "Romeo" at Tanglewood Tonight

Continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists and Festival Chorus of students in the composer's dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Broken String Fails To Halt Violinist

August 2 Waterbury

(Special To The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 2—Sudden, intense drama burst through the confines of the formal score Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood when soloist Ruth Posselt's stirring rendition of Khatchaturian's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" was momentarily interrupted by the snap of her violin's E string halfway through the physically exactly first movement of this lyrical and rhythmic master work.

A shocked audience of 8,225 audibly gasped almost as one person as Miss Posselt, with professional control, turned immediatey to the violin section of the accompanying Boston Symphony and accepted the offer of a substitute instrument. Within seconds she tuned the Stradivarius, took a perfectly-timed cue from her husband, Conductor Richard Burgin, and resumed playing as if nothing had occurred.

After a short respite off-stage following the end of the first movement, Miss Posselt returned with her own instrument, to deliver an immensely moving interpretation of the richly-emotional Andante and vivid, dynamic Allegro Vivace. A genuinely appreciative, sustained ovation greeted the conclusion of her magnificent performance.

Sunday's audience at the Berkshire Festival was very nearly overwhelmed by powerful, intense emotions by the time the full concert was over. For in the second half, Conductor Burgin led an inspired Boston Symphony through Sibelius's pulsating, fiery Symphony No. 2 in D Major. This tremendous masterpiece climbed gradually to its truly splendid climax, leaving the assembled throng with a sense of excitement wonderfully contrasted with the balmy breezes drifting over the suddenly quiet festival grounds.

Completing an extraordinarily well-balanced program was a beautiful, wistful performance of Ralph Vaughan Williams's "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" and a festive, reminiscent celebration of youthful play on city streets, "American Festival Overture," by William Howard Schuman.

MDA

[245]

JULY 29, 1954 Hartford TIMES

Bloch Quartet Makes Debut in Program at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The near capacity crowds which assemble on Wednesdays in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood attest to an eager and enthusiastic devotion to chamber music. The specific attractions last night were the world-famous Griller Quartet from England and the U. S. premiere of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4.

Each of the celebrated string quartets has its defining characteristic or characteristics and the Griller group for us is most distinguishable for its homogeneity of sound, its tonal balance. It was merely the case of four old friends, temperamentally attuned, who were discoursing together with mellowness and perfect understanding.

* * *

TO EXEMPLIFY this instrumental unit there was the Mozart "Hunt" Quartet (K. 458), which was a model of aristocratic grace and tender warmth in the hands of these expert ensemblists. We will find it difficult indeed to erase the memory of an Adagio so exquisite in all its details as the one they offered. Such perfection is worth 150 miles of travel.

In programming the new Bloch quartet directly afterward, the risk was tremendous. But it was in good, reliable company, for the Griller has premiered all of Mr. Bloch's quartets except the First and that practically guarantees sympathetic treatment.

The composer has never employed modernistic devices for themselves and the predominant note in this astringent work is a feeling of intense emotionalism. Its mood is sadly reflective, almost lugubrious, lightened by episodes of vigorous animation.

* * *

THE DISSONANCE is never strident or thick-textured and there seems to be no discernible Hebraic influence here. What is always apparent is a series of conflicts, which are even reflected in the markings for the separate movements: "Tranquillo - Allegro energico - Tranquillo," "Presto - Moderato-Presto," etc. All is resolved, however, in a mood serenity at the conclusion.

Beethoven, as represented in his Opus 18, No. 2 Quartet, could hardly be expected to cap the sonoral climax of Bloch, but it was pleasant to once again hear this youthful effort with its forward-looking Adagio and its somewhat derivative opening Allegro. The Griller ensemble infused it with masculinity and vigor.

Public Events

Tonight

8:30—Concert by chamber orchestra, with Charles Munch, conducting, and Doriot Anthony, soloist. Theater-concert hall. Tanglewood, Lenox.

KANSAS BARN DANCE is about to be rehearsed on the lawn at Tanglewood as these students prepare for Aaron Copland's first full-length opera, "The Tender Land," which will be given by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center Monday and Tuesday evenings at the theater-concert hall. In the foreground going over the score are, left to right, Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department; Mr. Copland, and Frederic Waldman, who will conduct the student orchestra at the performances. Manos

BSO Flutist Soloist Tonight In Ibert Concerto Premiere

July 30

DORIOT ANTHONY

TANGLEWOOD—Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes her second appearance at the 1954 Berkshire Festival as soloist tonight at 8:30 when she will be heard with the BSO Chamber orchestra, playing the Tanglewood premiere of the Flute Concerto by Jacques Ibert. The concert will be in the theater-concert hall. Earlier this season, Miss Anthony was a soloist in the program of Bach Brandenburg Concertos.

Charles Munch will conduct tonight's program by the chamber orchestra of BSO players in the flute concerto; Roussel's "The Spider's Feast"; Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds," all new to Tanglewood and also Mozart's "Paris" Symphony.

On Music Center Faculty

Miss Anthony, who joined the Boston Symphony in the autumn of 1952, was born in Streator, Ill. Her first teacher was her mother, a professional flutist. Her training continued at the Eastman School of Music where she studied with Joseph Mariano and later with William Kincaid. She played in the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., for two years before joining the Los Angeles Philharmonic, also playing first flute in the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra. While in California, Miss Anthony devoted much of her time to chamber music, participating in many first performances of contemporary works. In addition to her work with the Boston Symphony and chamber music, Miss Anthony is a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

Ibert's Flute Concerto, which will have its first Tanglewood performance tonight was played by Miss Anthony with the Boston Symphony Orchestra last season in Boston and New York. Winner of the Prix de Rome in 1919 and director of the French Academy at Rome in 1937, Ibert visited the U.S. in 1950 to teach composition at the Berkshire Music Center in association with Aaron Copland. His opera "Le Roi d'Yvetot" was the major production of Tanglewood's opera department that season and in 1953 the Center produced his one-act opera, "Angélique."

The Boston Symphony soloists in the "Serenade for Eight Winds" are Ralph Gomberg, Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi, Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano, Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt, Ernst Panenka, bassoons.

In case of rain the concert will be held in the Music Shed.

Tanglewood Singer At St. Stephen's

Theresa Green, concert singer who is appearing at Tanglewood this summer, will sing at the 10 a.m. worship service in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Sunday morning.

A native of Baltimore, Md., Miss Green studied at the Curtis School of Music in Philadelphia. She is a three-time winner of the Arthur Godfrey award and made her Town Hall debut in 1950. In 1953-1954, Miss Green made a nationwide concert tour singing 60 concerts.

At Tanglewood this summer, she will sing in the "Bach Cantata" and Mozart's opera, "Idomenia." On Sunday she will sing: "Bist Du Bei Mir," and "My Heart Ever Faithful" both by Bach.

'Carnival' Nets $55 for Tanglewood Scholarship Fund

The Tanglewood scholarship fund is $55 richer thanks to efforts of 12-year-old Michael G. Miller and his assistants, Gary W. Tucker and Norman C. McClintock, who staged the Williams Street carnival yesterday.

More than 150 children attended, many in bathing suits because of the extreme heat. The merry-go-round, made from a wagon wheel and powered by elbow grease, proved the most popular attraction. The pony rides, which ranked second in popularity, came to an abrupt halt for a while when Buttons, the neighbor's pony, lost patience, kicked up his heels and ran for home. Virginia Fischer, 11, was kept busy reading palms in the fortune telling tent.

Mrs. Fenton McClintock, 149 Egremont Ave., won the 16mm. camera awarded as door prize.

City Edition

Stockbridge Bowl Assn. Benefit Slated at Wheatleigh Aug. 5

Mac Morgan Named Master of Ceremonies; Tanglewood Artists and Joe Bushkin, Jazz Pianist and Trumpeter, To Appear

TANGLEWOOD—The second annual informal outdoor concert for members of the Stockbridge Bowl Assn., of which Mrs. John H. P. Gould is president, will be held Thursday, Aug. 5, at 3 p.m. on the lawns and terraced porch of Wheatleigh, the dormitory for male students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Donating Services

Celebrated Tanglewood personalities who make their homes on or near the Bowl will donate their services for the Bowl Assn's aim to raise money to maintain and improve the natural beauties of Lake Mah-Kee-Nac, otherwise known as Stockbridge Bowl.

Concert basso Mac Morgan, of Stockbridge, the master of ceremonies, will sing a group of folk songs by Aaron Copland, with the composer at the piano; and also "A Quiet Girl" from Leonard Bernstein's Broadway musical, "Wonderful Town."

Violinist Ruth Posselt, a member of the Tanglewood music school's chamber music faculty, will play selections, accompanied by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Joe Bushkin, the celebrated jazz pianist and trumpeter, who is spending the summer at Richmond while he is a composition student of Lukas Foss at the Tanglewood music school, will play his own works. Soprano Theresa Green, a professional concert singer studying opera dramatics at Tanglewood, will be accompanied in a group of songs by Emanuel Balaban, a coach in the opera department. Leo Van Witsen, head of costumes and make-up of the opera department, will give a make-up demonstration.

Retiring President Nathan George Horwitt, of Stockbridge, who has arranged the program, announces the event will be in the nature of a party, "brief, intimate and delightful."

The concert has an important aim: To raise money towards a $1,500 commission to composer Lukas Foss, of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty, to provide a musical setting for the 121st Psalm, "I Will Lift Up Mine Eyes Unto the Hills." The Biblical citation will be engraved on the Stockbridge Bowl Assn.'s plaques, including those to be presented to the recent winners of the "House Beautiful" contest conducted among Stockbridge Bowl cottagers. It is hoped Mr. Foss' oratorio setting to the hymn, which the composer will have ready by the summer of 1955, may have a Tanglewood premiere.

Tickets for members at half price and full price to non-members are on sale at the Lenox Library and at the Whitestone Photo Studio in Lenox.

4 Concerts Scheduled At Tanglewood

The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will first offer a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, on Wednesday evening (August 4) in the Treatre-Concert Hall. A program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Lukas Foss as guest conductor and Seymour Kipkin as piano soloist, will follow, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall.

An all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, including Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, is scheduled for Saturday evening, Aug. 7, in the Music Shed and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will offer a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, Sunday afternoon, Aug. 8 in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

Violinist Not Fazed As String Pops

(Special to The Republican)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 2—Sudden, intense drama burst through the confines of the formal score Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood when soloist Ruth Posselt's stirring rendition of Khatchaturian's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" was momentarily interrupted by the snap of her violin's E string halfway through the physically exacting first movement of this lyrical and rhythmic master work.

A shocked audience of 6,239 audibly gasped almost as one person as Miss Posselt, with professional control, turned immediately to the violin section of the accompanying Boston Symphony and accepted the offer of a substitute instrument. Within seconds she turned the Stradivarius, took a perfectly-timed cue from her husband, Conductor Richard Burgin, and resumer playing as if nothing had occurred.

MDA

The Eagle Saturday Features

Tanglewood: The $100,000 Storm

By John G. W. Mahanna

This third in a series of four articles on the early history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., by The Eagle's county editor, reveals the trials and tribulations experienced by the two boards of the Festival and Boston Symphony Orchestra before a tentative agreement was reached on the policies to be followed at Tanglewood.

AFTER STRUGGLING for two years to bring outdoor symphony concerts to the Berkshires, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival finally went out of the red and into the black in 1936 when 15,000 music lovers turned up at Holmwood for the weekend series of programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducting. The three concerts at Mrs. Margaret Emerson's estate on Route 7, between Lenox and Stockbridge, resulted in receipts of $21,194.42 and expenses of $18,259. The net profit was $2,934.75.

* * *

ENCOURAGED with the financial success of the 1936 venture, the Festival officials began to realize their out-of-door concert plan was fast growing from a local undertaking to an artistic event of international importance.

While attempting to broaden the plans for the future development of the Festival idea, the Festival board members and trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra exchanged many views on the proposal for the next season.

* * *

COGNIZANT of the great drawing power of the BSO with its famed conductor Dr. Koussevitzky, the executive committee of the Festival five days after the 1936 series ended authorized Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, the president, John C. Lynch, treasurer, and George W. Edman, clerk of the board, to open negotiations with the BSO to return for another season.

Dr. Koussevitzky had agreed to direct the Boston Symphony in a tent the first year of the groups or organizations, at times when it was not needed by the Festival. Payments of rent for the use of the shed would be made to the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc.

* * *

THE FESTIVAL board voted that if the $100,000 wasn't forthcoming by Nov. 1, 1936, the Festival wouldn't attempt to continue in 1937 unless Dr. Koussevitzky would conduct the concerts another year under the same conditions—in a tent—and that efforts be carried on for a permanent shed in time for the 1938 Festival.

Berkshire businessmen and civic leaders into whose lap this problem was dropped were: Richard H. Gamwell, Donald B. Miller, William A. Whittlesey, Simon England, Jay C. Rosenfeld, Gardner S. Morse, C. Kenneth Fuller, George W. Edman and Lawrence K. Miller of Pittsfield; Henry Dwight, John C. Lynch and Mrs. Charles C. Griswold of Stockbridge; Robert K. Wheeler and John B. Hull Jr. of Great Barrington; Lester Roberts and Mrs. Carlos M. deHeredia of Lenox; Edward S. Rogers, Norvill H. Busey Jr. and Roland Packard of Lee; Philip Marshall Brown of Williamstown and Atty. Milton B. Warner, counsel for the corporation.

* * *

FROM THIS group, a committee of 16 was formed to study the proposal and report before the Nov. 1 deadline. The 16 held several meetings and finally

THE GIFT of Tanglewood to Dr. Koussevitzky and the BSO included the Tappan mansion, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl.

'IT IS HOT,' said Dr. Koussevitzky to the Tanglewood audience one humid afternoon in 1937 when he and his BSO musicians removed their coats in the middle of a program.

TRAFFIC JAMS over Route 183 (West St.) in Lenox were common occurrences the first year concerts were held at Tanglewood.

38 patrons and 356 members through October of 1936. Much more was needed to keep the way, the Festival workers went ahead with the 1937 plan, enlisting new members and patrons, each of whom was notified by letter that "in the event the 1937 Festival is not to be held, all paid subscriptions will be returned in full."

* * *

OLIN DOWNES, the widely ... music critic of the New ...

reasonable amount.

2. A building committee found that estimated cost of a steel building seating 5,000 would be approximately $60,000 without grading or a floor.

3. A finance committee found in a preliminary canvass that no more than $25,000 could be raised from commercial interests alone. This committee thought that a ...

could not come to some ... standing, a few Festival officials began to think of making overtures to the Philadelphia or Cleveland Symphony Orchestras to carry on the Festival plan.

* * *

BOARD members took matters into their own hands and started looking for sites around the Berkshires. Dr. ...

A FEW DAYS after the gift of the beautiful estate was made to Dr. Koussevitzky he turned the property over to the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Upon arriving at Tanglewood to make his first inspection of the new Festival home, Dr. Koussevitzky exclaimed:

...erties in the neighborhood.

"After the successful Festival of 1936," continued the letter, "the board of trustees enthusiastically accepted your proposition of six concerts for 1937 at a cost of $26,000. They were interested in your proposal to erect a permanent shed and stage

...ning greeted them as the concert opened but they carried on bravely. The major trouble the evening came from the humidity.

...could assume the conditions as ...a thing he had never done before in his 12 years with the Boston Symphony—but only after consulting with Miss Robinson Smith and the BSO manager, Mr. Judd. He stepped to the edge of the stage and said to the audience:

"It is awfully hot. You will excuse if we remove our

AN EARLY START on the construction of the ... was necessary in order to complete it in time for the 1938 Festival. These workmen started digging holes for the steel piers in midwinter.

Upon arriving home she prepared a circular which was printed the next morning and distributed at the two remaining concerts, appealing for support of the building fund and seeking drive for building-fund donations, additional patrons and members. Conferences followed with the architect for the great Music Shed. Ground was broken in the middle of winter as workmen ... the steel for the president, John [illegible] and Atty. Milton B. Warner, treasurer, and George W. Edman, clerk of the board, to open negotiations with the BSO to return for another season.

TIGHT BINDING

Dr. Koussevitzky had agreed ahead with the 1937 plan, enlisting new members and patrons, each of whom was notified by letter that "in the event the 1937 Festival is not to be held, all paid subscriptions will be returned in full."

* * *

OLIN DOWNES, the widely known music critic of the New York Times, offered advice to the board on the 1937 plans. Agreeing with Dr. Koussevitzky that an auditorium is "absolutely essential," Mr. Downes felt "it is the only practical measure which can insure the concerts being given, regardless of conditions of weather."

* * *

WITH WAR clouds hovering over Europe, the Festival officials were agreed that "now is the psychological time to institute a music festival of the highest rank in America." They felt the great musical advance of the next half century would take place in the United States because of conditions abroad.

In conferences with Dr. Koussevitzky, the Festival officials and BSO representatives learned that the maestro was anxious to increase the number of concerts the following summer because he did not feel three concerts in one series constituted a Festival. He suggested that the series be increased to two weekends.

Dr. Koussevitzky saw a need among new music lovers in the Berkshires for "music appreciation lectures," and recommended that critic Downes be hired at $500 for a series of lectures on the Festival programs before each concert. The Berkshire Playhouse offered its theater for the series.

* * *

ENTHUSED over the prospects for expanding the Festival, the board members of the Berkshire corporation at their annual meeting, Oct. 20, 1936, decided to go all out in planning the next summer event. They voted to look over sites for a permanent home for the Festival; to try to raise $100,000 for the purpose of acquiring and preparing the necessary land and to erect a permanent shed to seat 5,000 people.

In a resolution adopted by the board at the annual meeting, the business leaders of Berkshire County were invited to assist in the huge task. The Festival officials, pointing to the "economic value" the concerts were bringing to the Berkshires, informed the business leaders that the trustees would continue to assume the financial budgets of the concerts, provided the business men of the Berkshires raised a minimum of $180,000 to acquire a site and build a shed.

* * *

THE RESOLUTION also stipulated that the shed would be made available for use by other counsel for [illegible]

* * *

FROM THIS group, a committee of 16 was formed to study the proposal and report before

38 patrons and 356 members through October of 1936. Much

TRAFFIC JAMS over Route 183 (West St.) in Lenox were common occurrences the first year concerts were held at Tanglewood.

ning greeted them as the concert opened but they carried on was necessary in order to complete it in time for the 1938 Festival. These workmen started digging holes for the steel piers in midwinter.

Upon arriving home she prepared a circular which was printed the next morning and distributed at the two remaining concerts, appealing for support of the building fund and seeking new patrons and members of the Festival.

* * *

THE FUND drive outlined earlier by John Price Jones was called off. Nature had taken over.

From that time on, the Festival organization stepped up its drive for building-fund donations, additional patrons and members. Conferences followed with the architect for the great Music Shed. Ground was broken in the middle of winter as workmen prepared to receive the steel for the framework of the mammoth structure.

The Festival was now on its way to greater glory in the musical world — thanks to the community spirit of a determined group of Berkshire residents with a big assist from the $100,000 storm.

3. A building committee found that estimated cost of a steel building seating 5,000 would be approximately $60,000 without grading or a floor.

5. A finance committee found in a preliminary canvass that no more than $25,000 could be raised from commercial interests alone. This committee thought that a considerable sum might be secured for the project from individuals interested in the Festival, and from foundations which foster similar projects. But the committee made no estimate of the sum that might be so raised.

* * *

IN CONCLUSION, the report of the committee, signed by W. A. Whittlesey, congratulated the Festival officers for making the concerts "a widely known and financial success," and expressed the hope that the trustees "may find it possible to continue their splendid work on some other basis than that laid down in their resolutions."

* * *

ACCOMPANYING Mr. Whittlesey's letter was another from a three-man committee, consisting of Laurence R. Connor, Gardner S. Morse and Donald B. Miller, suggesting that the $100,000 could only be raised from three sources:

1. The residents of Berkshire County.

2. The wealthier summer people of Berkshire County.

3. Musical foundations located in New York or Boston.

The committee also questioned the desirability of having an enlarged Festival, "from the viewpoint of the summer residents." Many summer people found themselves making great adjustments in their social engagements at the time, and a few were not too happy about this new cultural attraction to the Berkshires.

* * *

THE REPORT of the businessmen was sent on to Boston for the BSO trustees to consider, along with a note expressing the feeling that "the money can be raised, but not at the present time."

* * *

DESPITE THIS disheartening development, negotiations continued with the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees. The cost of bringing the BSO to the Berkshires for the 1937 season, covering two weekends, would amount to $26,000, George E. Judd, the BSO manager informed the Festival officials.

Although negotiations were being handled by top-level authorities of both organizations, the enthusiasm among the Festival workers showed signs of wavering because "the future was too uncertain" at this point. The Festival had collected $3,235.35 from standing, a few Festival officials began to think of making overtures to the Philadelphia or Cleveland Symphony Orchestras to carry on the Festival plan.

* * *

BOARD members took matters into their own hands and started looking for sites around the Berkshires. Dr. Koussevitzky and Miss Robinson Smith looked over property near Laurel Lake in Lee, the Berkshires Hunt & Country Club on the Lee-Lenox Road, Mrs. Margaret Emerson's Holmwood estate and a parcel of land on the Pittsfield Road in the rear of Burke's-in-the-Berkshires, later the Cardinal Inn.

Mrs. Elisabeth C. T. Miller, who acquired the Hanna farm, site of the 1934 and 1935 Festivals, offered her property to the Festival for the consideration of $1 per annum.

* * *

FESTIVAL officials, stimulated by Mrs. Miller's offer and encouraged by the reception given them by other property owners in the area, met again Nov. 7 at the home of Miss Robinson Smith in Stockbridge when they unanimously adopted a resolution to go forward with the 1937 plans.

* * *

BY THIS TIME they had convinced the BSO trustees that the shed idea had to be dropped temporarily because of lack of enthusiasm for such a project in the area. While the board members felt three concerts would be more advisable for 1937 than six, the enlarged plan was explored further and the two organizations finally agreed on the two series of programs to be given in a tent with an improved stage and acoustics.

However, the shed plans were still very much in the picture for the 1938 event, and to get an early start, Miss Robinson Smith contacted John Price Jones in New York to interest him in having his fund-raising organization make a preliminary study of a drive to obtain $100,000 the following year.

* * *

DARK CLOUDS swiftly disappeared from the Festival scene one wintry day when Mrs. Gorham Brooks and her aunt, Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan, offered to Dr. Koussevitzky their beautiful and historic 200-acre estate, Tanglewood, for a permanent home for the Festival. All worries over a new site seemed to disappear.

The attractive mansion overlooking picturesque Stockbridge Bowl, the formal gardens and long driveways lined with ancient hemlocks and tall pines made a perfect setting for a music festival.

The estate was created in 1849 by Miss Tappan's father, William Aspinwall Tappan, Boston banker and merchant. From 1851 to 1853, Nathaniel Haw-of the beautiful estate was made to Dr. Koussevitzky he turned the property over to the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Upon arriving at Tanglewood to make his first inspection of the new Festival home, Dr. Koussevitzky exclaimed:

"Wonderful. We make beautiful music here. Festivals of music grow up for various purposes and on a scale commensurate with their surroundings."

* * *

THE GIFT of Tanglewood to Dr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony presented a complex problem for the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc.

Miss Robinson Smith corresponded with the BSO trustees, seeking clarification of the Festival's part in the new setup. After all, the Berkshire organization founded and developed the Festival, free at all times to engage whatever symphony orchestra it desired. Because of the success of the first appearance here of the BSO with Dr. Koussevitzky conducting, the Festival had just completed negotiations for the famed orchestra to return for a second season.

A five-year agreement with the orchestra for six concerts a summer had been worked out between the two organizations when Tanglewood came into the picture. The Festival had gone into plans to erect a great shed for the concerts, but how could they erect a building on some other organization's property? Squatter's rights would perhaps lead to many difficulties.

* * *

BEFORE THE Tanglewood gift was made by Mrs. Brooks and Miss Tappan, Dr. Koussevitzky on a Western trip with the BSO had consulted his close friend, Eliel Saarinen, the noted architect of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., and head of the Cranbrook Academy of Art, about drawing plans for not only a shed but a great musical center in the Berkshires.

In reply to Miss Robinson Smith's letter to the BSO trustees, asking an explanation to the problem facing the Festival board, Ernest B. Dane, BSO treasurer, wrote:

"'Tentatively, the trustees would look favorably upon allowing your association the use of the property (Tanglewood) for your Festival for a period of years, provided suitable structures are erected by you, and that you meet all of the expenses of the upkeep, and such taxes as may be assessed on the property."

MR. DANE'S letter didn't go too well with the Festival board. At a subsequent meeting of the executive committee in Stockbridge, a letter was sent to Bentley W. Warren, president of the committee under no circumstances

"After the successful Festival of 1936," continued the letter, "the board of trustees enthusiastically accepted your proposition of six concerts for 1937 at a cost of $26,000. They were interested in your proposal to erect a permanent shed and stage and were desirous of meeting the proposal in every way possible. After a careful investigation of the situation in the Berkshires, they realized the impossibility of carrying out the project in its entirety this year.

* * *

"THEY HAVE, however, agreed to try to raise $25,000 this year and to erect as much of the shed as this will pay for and to proceed with plans to complete the project in time for the concerts the following year. All of this of course to be on the basis of a suitable contract with the orchestra for concerts for a reasonable number of years.

"Therefore, while appreciating the complex problem facing both boards and realizing Mr. Saarinen's plans may not be completed, we therefore ask you to give us a definite answer by Feb. 6 as to the acceptance of our modified proposal. If we do not receive a favorable reply by that date, we will regretfully assume that we are free to make other plans for the 1937 Festival."

* * *

ON FEB. 5, a memorandum from Bentley Warren was sent to the clerk of the Festival Board, Mr. Edman, setting forth a BSO offer. In brief, the BSO proposed to acquire Tanglewood along with the risk of having to carry it if the Festival failed; to meet the contract for six 1937 concerts, and to give six concerts a year in the following four years if a suitable auditorium were provided.

* * *

NOW THAT some understanding had been reached, the Festival board and BSO trustees were anxious to get on with their joint plan. The two groups had agreed on the two weekend series and Dr. Koussevitzky, though disappointed, agreed to conduct the 1937 Festival in a tent.

A larger tent with an improved stage and better acoustics formed the Tanglewood setting for the 1937 series on Aug. 5, 7 and 8, Aug. 12, 14 and 15.

The first night's concert drew a crowd of 5,000, overflowing to the spacious lawns of the estate. A shower fell over the grounds in the afternoon but stopped before the program was to begin. However, an unscheduled overture of rumbling thunder in the hills to the south of Tanglewood, gave the Festival officials and BSO a few anxious moments.

* * *

THE MUSICIANS and audience were less fortunate the second night. Rain, thunder and light-in his 12 years with the Boston Symphony—but only after consulting with Miss Robinson Smith and the BSO manager, Mr. Judd. He stepped to the edge of the stage and said to the audience:

"It is awfully hot. You will excuse if we remove our coats."

* * *

THE FOLLOWING afternoon, Sunday, as the concert drew to a close, the audience unleashed a turbulent manifestation which ended only when Koussevitzky, near exhaustion, could no longer return to accept for himself and the men of the orchestra the applause the happy audience was so pleased to grant them.

The second series opened Aug. 12 after a terrific publicity campaign had been waged, attracting music lovers to an all-Wagner program. This was a memorable night in the annals of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. The heavens opened up and rain bombarded the canvas roof over the tremendous audience as the BSO started to play the "Ride of the Valkyries." The roar it created within the tent completely drowned out the tones coming from the stage.

Koussevitzky surrendered to the elements. As The Eagle's music critic, Jay C. Rosenfeld, reported at the time "even the French horns were shipping water."

* * *

THE AUDIENCE was in fine humor after the conductor was compelled to stop. Water dripped through a few seams in the tent, but otherwise the listeners complained very little.

Koussevitzky started a second time, but before the trumpet reached its second call, in the introduction of the "Rienzi" overture, the rain pelted the canvas again, compelling the conductor to wave his arms once again in submission. The applause emanating from the audience was a mixed expression of pity and happy sympathy.

* * *

AFTER starting a third time, Dr. Koussevitzky carried his musicians through the first half of the program. At intermission the BSO manager, Mr. Judd, mounted the platform to announce a few changes in the second half of the program, made necessary because of the damage to some instruments by the storm.

* * *

AS THE CONCERT concluded, the Festival president, Miss Robinson Smith, made her way to the front of the tent, climbed up on the platform and announced:

"The storm has proved conclusively the need for a shed. We MUST raise the necessary $100,000 to build it."

Before the night was out, Miss Robinson Smith had received $30,000.

Music

First Fine Friday Weather Brings Crowd for Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH of the Friday evening series in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the small ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra offered a program half Mozart and half of late French music, Roussel and Ibert. The largest audience of the season for this particular series, due to the first real pleasant weather on a Friday evening for four weeks, heard the small orchestra at its most brilliant in the Paris symphony, with which the program ended. Charles Munch, the director of the orchestra, selected tempi that were brisk to giddy for the first and last movements, but the men took the challenge as a frolic and romped through with keen zest. The middle movement, andantino, brought out some extremely lovely string tones and graceful phraseturning.

* * *

BOTH ROUSSEL and Ibert have had close association with the Boston Symphony. Roussel was their guest in Boston to conduct his own works several times and Ibert was at the Berkshire Music Center in 1950 as a guest member of the composition faculty with Aaron Copland. He was mildly irked at that time that everyone seemed to think his unique and total composition was "The White Donkey," which every piano student trots out for uncles and aunts. Roussel's "The Spider's Feast" is in a perfect setting in an ensemble of last night's size, some 35 men. Munch kept the texture light and tenuous and gave a fastidious character to the little drama portrayed in the music, originally intended to support a ballet. At the end, Munch beckoned to James Papoutsakis for his beautiful flute solo.

* * *

DORIOT ANTHONY (who has become Mrs. Thomas Dwyer since her last visit to Tanglewood) was the soloist in Ibert's flute concerto. Her playing of the little cadenza and ensuing improvisatory badinerie of the interlude in the last movement was Here her tone and the masterful Here her tone and the masteful way she varied and controlled it was superb. In the other parts of the existing concerto she was equally in command of her instrument, but it was more an easy conquest of difficulties than at matter of expressiveness. Ibert has put as much interest in the orchestra as in the solo flute. There is some wonderful syncopation early in the first movement and the clarity and lightness of the performance belied its pleasant intricacies. Mrs. Dwyer was given a tremendous ovation for her beautiful performance.

* * *

THE MOZART serenade for eight wind instruments with distinct parts for each of two oboes, clarinets, bassoons and French horns, is a remarkably sonorous suite. The blend of the four kinds of wind tone makes a resonance not equalled very often and the individual players last night contributed solos on occasion and to the ensemble with unsurpassed smoothness and quality. It is a question whether such a work needs a conductor and if it should not be played as a piece of chamber music. Apart from Mozart's wealth of themes and their development and the players' excellence, the performance was over-cautious.

TIGHT BINDING

Berkshire Music Calendar

Plus Nearby Summer Theaters and the Dance

HOW TO GET THERE: Tanglewood, on Route 183 between Stockbridge (via Routes 102 and 183) and Lenox (via Route 183 from center of town); South Mountain, on Route 7 just south of Pittsfield; Music Mountain, off Route 7 in Falls Village, Conn.; Berkshire Playhouse, off Route 7 on Route 102 near center of Stockbridge; Malden Bridge Playhouse, on Route 66 between Chatham and Pittsfield-Albany road (Route 20); Jacob's Pillow, off Jacob's Ladder section of Route 20 in the village of West Becket.

Tomorrow

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Works by Dahl, Rieti, Brahms
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Richard Burgin; soloist, Ruth Posselt.
American Festival Overture — William Schuman
Fantasia on a theme by Tallis — Vaughan Williams
Concerto for Violin — Khachaturian
Symphony No. 2 — Sibelius
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
Guest artist, Dorothy Eustis, pianist.
Quartet No. 1 — Fuleihan
Quartet No. 7 (Dedicated to Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge) — Porter
Piano Quintet — Shostakovitch

Monday, August 2

Berkshire Playhouse

"Traveler's Joy"

Tanglewood

Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program; special tickets required.
"The Tender Land" — Copland

Tuesday, August 3

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"The Silver Whistle"

Tanglewood

Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. IV. Friends program with special ticket required.
"The Tender Land" — Copland

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Richard Dyer-Bennet, tenor-guitarist.
"20th Century Troubadour"
Chamber Music Hall, 4:30 p.m.
String Quartet in G Major, Opus 18 No. 2 — Beethoven
Trio in A Minor, Opus 114 — Brahms
Quintet in E-flat Major, Opus 16 — Beethoven

Wednesday, August 4

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. The Kroll String Quartet.
Quartet in D, Op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark") — Haydn
Quartet No. 3, Op. 22 — Hindemith
Quartet in F — Ravel

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Emerson and Jayne, dance satirists.

Thursday, August 5

Tanglewood

Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Friends program.
"L'Arlesienne" Suite No. 1 — Bizet
"El Salon Mexico" — Copland
"A Night on Bald Mountain" — Moussorgsky
Suite for Orchestra, Opus 9 — Enesco

Wheatleigh

Stockbridge Bowl Assn. Concert. 3 p.m. Mac Morgan, Aaron Copland, Ruth Posselt, Ralph Berkowitz, Joe Bushkin, Theresa Green, Emanuel Balaban.

Sunday, August 8

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Zino Francescatti.
Overture to "Alceste" — Gluck
Violin Concerto — Beethoven
Symphony No. 2 — Brahms
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Monday, August 9

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Carol Stone in
"The Iron Gate"

Tuesday, August 10

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m.
"The Love of Four Colonels"

Tanglewood

Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Betty MacDonald, soprano; Jerry Silverman, singer-guitarist.
"From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."

Wednesday, August 11

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Artur Balsan, pianist.
Violin Sonata in A major — Brahms
Suite in C (Violin unaccompanied) — Bach
Violin Sonata in D Minor — Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

Thursday, August 12

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Jean Morel.
Overture to "Scala di Seta" — Rossini
Symphony in B flat K.319 — Mozart
"Mother Goose" Suite — Ravel
"Der Burger als Edelmann" — Strauss

Sunday, August 15

Tanglewood

Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Charles Munch, conductor. In memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
"Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloist — Berlioz

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Monday, August 16

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. William Roerick in
"Charlie's Aunt"

Tuesday, August 17

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"The Moon Is Blue"

Wednesday, August 18

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Italian and English music of the Renaissance and Baroque.

Sunday, August 22

South Mountain

Chamber Music Festival, Coolidge Series, 4:00 p.m. Chamber Orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Rudolf Serkin and Alexander Schneider.

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 1:30 p.m. Music of the Spanish Renaissance.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Monday, August 23

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m. Betty Field in
"Ethan Frome"

Tuesday, August 24

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"The Moon Is Blue"
(Second week)

Wednesday, August 25

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. English medieval and Elizabethan carols.

Sunday, August 29

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 1:30 p.m. Vocal and instrumental works of Salamone Rossi, Hebreo (Mantua 1587-1628).

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Monday, August 30

Berkshire Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Saturday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday at 2:30 p.m.
(Program to be announced)

Tuesday, August 31

Malden Bridge Playhouse

"Ladies in Retirement"

Wednesday, September 1

Thursday, September 2

Pleasant Valley Sanctuary

Off Route 7 between Lenox and Pittsfield. Watch for signs. Trailside Museum open 1-5 p.m. every day; Red Barn Tea Room, noon to 7 p.m. every day; grounds open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. every day.

Berkshire Garden Center

At junction of Routes 183 and 102, west of Stockbridge. Open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 10 a.m. to noon and 2-6 p.m. Horticulturist in attendance.

Bartholomew's Cobble

Sanctuary featuring native ferns and flowers, unusual limestone outcropping along Housatonic River. Off Route 7 at Ashley Falls. Watch for signs. Open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day. Warden in attendance. Guided tours and picnic facilities.

History, Art and Movies

Berkshire Museum

On South Street, center of Pittsfield. Hours, Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Sunday, 2-5 p.m.; closed Mondays. Exhibitions, through August, paintings by Ellen Emmet Rand, photographs by Clemens Kalischer, miniature rooms by Andrew Zenorini, sculpture by Franc Epping, Wilsson collection of etchings, engravings and lithographs of famous composers (in cooperation with the Boston Symphony Orchestra); Aug. 3-31, Civil War photographs by Mathew Brady.

Little Cinema (Evenings at 8:15; Saturdays, continuous from 7); July 28-31, Jack Hawkins in "Crash of Silence"; Aug. 4-10, Ann Magnani in "The Golden Coach" (in English); Aug. 11-14, "Spice of Life" and "The White Tower"; Aug. 18-24, "Fan Fan the Tulip," with Gina Lollobrigida; Aug. 25-28, to be announced.

Mission House

On Route 7 in the center of Stockbridge. Built in 1739 for John Sergeant, first missionary to the Stockbridge Indians. Moved and restored by Miss Mabel Choate as a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Choate. Open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 12:30, 2-6; Sunday, 2-6.

Friday, August 6

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Lukas Foss; soloist, Seymour Lipkin.
"Pulcinella" (complete) Stravinsky
Piano Concerto in B flat, K.450 Mozart
"Idomeneo" (excerpts) with chorus and soloists Mozart

Saturday, August 7

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Organ recital, Shed, 3 p.m. E. Power Biggs, organist. Friends
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m, Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Eleanor Steber. Berlioz program:
Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"
"Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"
"Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra
"Te Deum" with Festival Chorus and soloist

South Mountain

Chamber Music. 4:00 p.m.
Alexander Schneider, Artur Balsam.
Beethoven Sonatas for violin and piano Nos. 5, 2, 9

Friday, August 13

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.
4:00—Opera Scenes
6:00—Department Demonstrations
8:15—Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra.
Symphony in C Bizet
"Salome" (Final scene) Strauss
Brenda Lewis, soprano, soloist
Boston Pops Orchestra. Arthur Fiedler, conductor.

Saturday, August 14

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3 p.m. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Tragic Overture" Brahms
Symphony No. 4 Piston
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" Ravel
Symphony No. 3 (with organ) Saint-Saens

South Mountain

Juilliard Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
String Quartet No. 2 William Denny
Quartet in G, Op. 54, No. 2 Haydn
String Quartet No. 1 Benjamin Lees
Quartet in F major Ravel

Friday, August 20

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m., Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Negro Dance Theater.
Grace and Kurt Graff.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

Saturday, August 21

South Mountain

Chamber Music Festival, Coolidge Series, 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. Kroll Quartet, Chamber Orchestra from the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Court and chapel music of Henry V-Henry VIII.

Friday, August 27

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.
Yurek-Lazowski, character ballet.
Pearl Lang and Co.
Lotte Goslar.

Saturday, August 28

Pro Musica Antiqua

Festival Concert, Lenox Town Hall, 8:30 p.m. Music of the German Renaissance and Baroque.

Friday, September 3

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens today for two days. Friday and Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.; Friday and Saturday evening at 9 p.m.
Andre Eglovsky and partner, ballet.
Harriet Ann Gray and company.
The American Mime Theater.

Saturday, September 4

Bernstein, Foss Compositions To Be Heard at Israeli Benefit

Compositions by Leonard Bernstein and Lukas Foss will be featured at the third annual Music for Israel concert Monday evening, Aug. 9, at the Jewish Community Center.

Additional artists for the event will be Walter Rubin, a former pupil of the late Victor Polatcheck, first clarinetist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra; and Miss Catherine Akos, mezzo soprano, who has sung at the Budapest Royal Opera. Others who will participate are Richard Burgin, violin; Jean Bedetti, cello; and Ralph Berkowitz, piano; and Mr. Foss, pianist.

Ticket Aides

Ticket committee members, announced by Mrs. Carl J. Wildman, chairman are: Mrs. Paul C. Aaronstein, Mrs. Jason I. Borke, Mrs. Herman S. Braun, Mrs. Pasquale B. Cioffi, Mrs. Jack J. Daniels, Mrs. Benjamin M. England, Mrs. Max E. Fishelson, Mrs. Kenneth B. Goldblum, Mrs. David Gordon, Mrs. Arthur T. Grohe, Mrs. Nathan E. Kolman, Mrs. Robert M. Kriger and Mrs. Mack B. Landis.

Also, Mrs. Julius G. Leavitt, Mrs. Simon Lipton, Mrs. Arthur A. Maislen, Mrs. William H. Morrissey, Mrs. A. Leo Nash, Mrs. Maxwell J. Nadelson, Mrs. Harry G. Rich, Mrs. Ruth Samuels, Mrs. David L. Schainuck, Mrs. Isador Secunda, Mrs. John E. Skole, Mrs. Harry Smith, Mrs. Florence Zlotnick and Mrs. Sidney Zuckerman, all of Pittsfield.

County Members

Others are Mrs. Irving Bashevkin of North Adams, Mrs. Ralph Berkowitz, Mrs. George Bisacca, Mrs. Mildred diLorenzo, Mrs. Nathan G. Horwitt, Mrs. Harriet Parsons Levinson, Mrs. Leo Loeb and Mrs. Richard V. Pelton, all of Lenox; Mrs. George Breit of Becket, Mrs. Scott Buchanan andMrs. William M. Crane of Richmond, Mrs. Abraham Gair of Lee, Mrs. William Leipsig of Tyringham and Mrs. Marvin L. Weiss of Albany.

Complete program for the concert follows:

Sonata for clarinet and piano, Leonard Bernstein
Mr. Rubin and Mr. Foss.
Selections from Song of Songs . Lukas Foss
Miss Akos.
Variations for piano for four hands, Schubert
Mr. Foss and Mr. Berkowitz.
Trio for violin, 'cello and piano, Mendelssohn
Mr. Burgin, Mr. Bedetti and Mr. Foss.

375 Students Enrolled in Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—There are 35 states and 12 foreign countries represented among the 375 students at the Berkshire Music Center this season. The summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in conjunction with the Festival, is the only school in the world sponsored by a major symphony orchestra. The school will close at the end of the festival Aug. 15.

Founded in 1940

The Berkshire Music Center was established in 1940 by the BSO to provide a campus where young musicians could add to their professional training and artistic experience under the guidance of eminent musicians and teachers. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is director of the Center. The eminent American composer Aaron Copland is the assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist of the staff of the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, is dean. The faculty includes Jean Morel, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Lukas Foss and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Gregor Piatigorsky is guest teacher in chamber music, and Ernst Toch is guest teacher in composition. Dr. Toch continues the tradition of having one outstanding contemporary composer in residence each season; his predecesors include Carlos Chavez, Luigi Dallapiccola, Jacques Ibert, Darius Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Boluslav Martinu, Paul Hindemith and Olivier Messiaen.

116 in Study Group

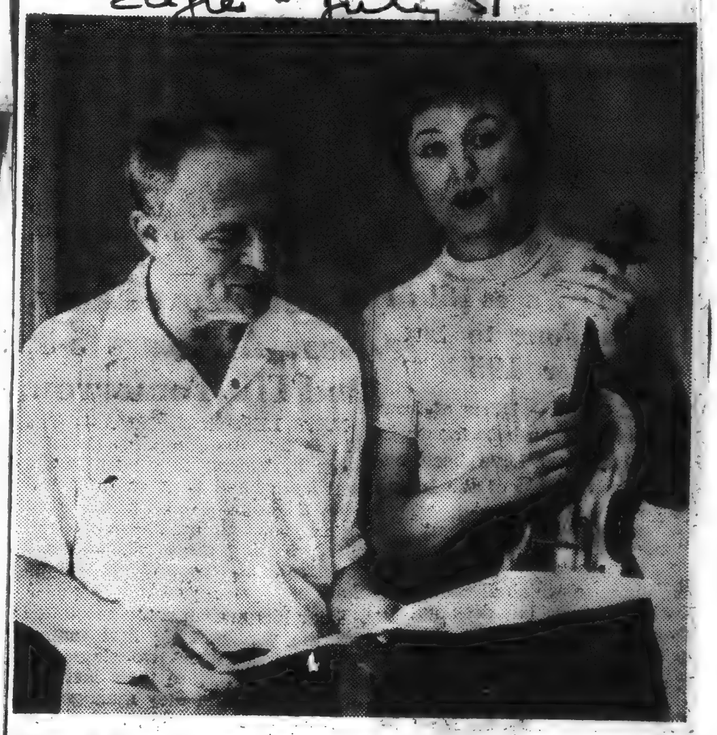
Over 100 students are registered from New York State, 57 from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are represented by 55 students. From Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin have come 34 students and the Far West is represented by three Washingtonians and six Californians. Canada has its largest enrollment in several seasons with 12 students ranging from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, to Calgary, Alberta. The 29 foreign students, besides the Canadians, include four Cuban registrations and three from France. In America since 1953 as an exchange student from 'sHertogenbosch, Holland, on a Fullbright Fellowship is pianist Adriana Crone; Stefan Grove of Cape Town, South Africa, is at Tanglewood on the Margaret Lee Crofts Scholarship as a special composition pupil of Aaron Copland. Another Copland student is Tossi Ichiyanagi from Tokyo, Japan. A housewife from Caracas, Venezuela, Mrs. Suzanne Goldberg, is enrolled in the opera department. Cuba has sent a quartet of string players for orchestral study and John Kim, conductor of the Korean National Naval Symphony Orchestra and resident of Pusan, has returned for another season of coaching in orchestra conducting. Also included in the 12 foreign countries represented are pupils from Haiti, Israel, Hungary and Greece.

BERKSHIRE STUDENTS at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center discuss their progress with Ralph Berkowitz, left, dean of the school. Marjorie Komber of 337 Holmes Rd., Pittsfield, a student in the opera department, and Louis Garemani of North Adams, a choral leader, are among 400 students.

Mason

Munch Leads BSO Tonight In Berlioz' 'Romeo and Juliet'

Eagle - July 31



Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the orchestra tomorrow afternoon when his wife, Ruth Posselt, will be the violin soloist. Here they discuss plans for the program.

BEATRICE KREBS

TANGLEWOOD—Continuing the celebration of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, music director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists and Festival chorus in Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet" tonight at 8:30 in the Music Shed.

Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concertmaster of the BSO, will lead the orchestra for the first time at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in William Schuman's "American Festival Overture," Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," the Sibelius Second Symphony and Khatchaturian's violin concerto in which Ruth Posselt will be the soloist.

"Romeo and Juliet," performed in its complete form by Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston, Tanglewood, New York and Washington, D.D., and recorded by the orchestra within the past two seasons, is being repeated at the Berkshire Festival as one of the rarely-heard Berlioz works being given in their complete form in honor of the composer's 150th anniversary season. The chorus of Tanglewood students has been trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon.

Contralto Soloist

Beatrice Krebs, a Tanglewood student, will be the contralto soloist. Born in Cleveland and a student of the Cleveland Institute of Music, Miss Krebs has appeared with the Robert Shaw Chorale, New York City Opera Company, the Little Orchestra Society and Riverside Church in New York where she is soloist. She first attended the Berkshire Music Center last season when she sang in the Haydn "Theresa" Mass. This season, again studying advanced opera-dramatics, Miss Krebs has been heard by Festival audiences in Bach's Cantata No. 93 and Haydn's "Nelson" Mass.

Repeating their performances of last year will be tenor John McCollum, and Nicola Moscona singing the role of Friar Laurence. A native of Greece, Mr. Moscona came to the United States in 1937 to join the Metropolitan Opera Company where he has sung over 500 performances. Returning to Greece in 1949 he was presented the Cross of the Royal Order of Phoenix by King Paul—the first artist ever to be so honored. Mr. Moscena has also sung 26 times with Arturo Toscanini.

Former Tanglewood Student

Winning the Atwater Kent Auditions in Los Angeles in 1950 started McCollum on his professional career, and in less than four years in the East he has had leading tenor roles with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony, Boston Symphony, Buffalo Symphony orchestras, the Little Orchestra Society of New York, the New England Opera Theater, and in student opera productions at Tanglewood. Last summer, while studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Mr. McCollum performed in four concerts with the BSO and was leading tenor in the school's major opera productions. He was leading tenor in the New England Opera Theater's first national tour in 1953. In the autumn he will again tour the country with this company.

At tomorrow's concert, Richard Burgin will be conducting the Boston Symphony for the first time at the Festival, although he has frequently conducted the orchestra in Boston and New York as well as the student orchestra at Tanglewood and at "Tanglewood on Parade." Concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since 1920 and more recently associate conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Burgin was born in Warsaw, Poland. His first public appearance was at the age of 11 as soloist with the Warsaw Philharmonic Society. Formerly concertmaster of the Leningrad, Helsinki, Christiania and Stockholm orchestras, Mr. Burgin is now conductor of the Portland (Maine) Orchestra in addition to his Boston Symphony duties including Berkshire Music Center teaching.

Soloist in the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto—a Tanglewood premiere—is Mr. Burgin's wife, Ruth Posselt, who was heard earlier in the Festival programs as a member of the Bel Arte Trio. Miss Posselt has toured extensively in Europe in recital and with the orchestra under the aegis of Pablo Casals, who introduced her in Spain in a series of 20 recitals. In this country, in addition to many appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Miss Posselt has played under Monteux, Szell, Golschmann, Bernstein, Wallenstein and others in world premieres of many concerti written expressly for her.

Tickets are available at the Tanglewood box office for all Festival concerts and reservations may be made by telephoning Tanglewood.

[250]

The Berkshire Festival

These are the programs to be presented this week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, partial and complete, and other artists, at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting, William Schuman: "American Festival" Overture; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; Khatchaturian: Violin Concerto (Ruth Posselt, soloist); Sibelius: Second Symphony.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Chamber music played by The Kroll String Quartet. Haydn: Quartet in D major, Op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark"); Hindemith: Quartet No. 3, Op. 22; Ravel: Quartet in F.

MET OPERA soprano, Eleanor Steber will be soloist at a Berlioz program conducted by Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood Saturday night.

Friday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Chamber orchestra conducted by Lukas Foss. Stravinsky: "Pulcinella" Ballet (complete; soloists: Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, bass); Mozart: Piano Concerto in E-flat (K. 450; soloist: Seymour Lipkin); Mozart: Excerpts from the opera "Idomeneo" (soloists: Marvin Worden, tenor; Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos).

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Berlioz: Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights" (soloist: Eleanor Steber, soprano); Te Deum (soloists: David Poleri, tenor; Willem Frank, organ).

Sunday, Aug. 8, at 2:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Gluck: Overture to "Alceste"; Beethoven: Violin Concerto (soloist: Zino Francescatti); Brahms: Second Symphony.

Study, Too

At Tanglewood—These students, lunching by Lake Mah-Kee-Nah, are among an enrollment of 375 studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, at Lenox, a summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival. Housewives, clerks, attorneys and teachers are among the students, from 35 states and 12 foreign lands.

Music-Minded—Aaron Copland (left), ass't director at the music center, confers with Arthur Berger, critic, author and Brandeis University professor, at Tanglewood. Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," has its New England premiere at Tanglewood Monday. See below . . .

CHARLES MUNCH REHEARSES A SECTION OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA FOR A PERFORMANCE AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.

JOHN BROOK "SEVENTEEN" AUGUST 1954

At the noted Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts: Grétry's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion"

WOMAN FLUTIST STAR IN CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Doriot Dwyer Acclaimed at Theater Program; 'Romeo And Juliet' Tonight

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 30—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the bright particular star of the Chamber orchestra concert given tonight under the direction of Charles Munch. The program devoted to the music of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart drew 2500 people to the theater shed and adjacent lawn.

The brilliant and demanding flute concerto by Jacques Ibert proved a perfect vehicle to display the amazing technical resources and sound musicianship of this petite and charming flutist. She was recalled at least a half dozen times.

Two Mozart Works

The color, animation and lyric beauty in this concerto, fine tonal contrasts and cadenzas which all for enormous technical resources, all of which were available in abundance. The small orchestra joined with Mr. Munch in providing splendid collaboration.

The program opened with excerpts from "The Spider's Web," a ballet-pantomime by Albert Roussel. In this delightful work the composer has been singularly successful in devising music for this microscopic drama. It has to do with ants, butterflies and, of course the spider. There are several charming waltz fragments and an impressive funeral procession. Mr. Munch was particularly happy in his reading of this work, providing colors which shimmered and rhythms which entranced.

Mozart was represented by two works. The first was his "Serenade in C Minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons." The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a wonderfully clear, poetic and concentrated performance. Particularly fine was the minuet, a contrapuntal display piece. This work was written to entertain, yet is more than a display piece, it has a depth of feeling and sweetness which rise far above the wit, good humor and cleverness one finds so often in the works of Haydn.

"Paris" Symphony Played

The final work on the program was the "Symphony in D Minor" known as the "Paris." Mozart had not composed a symphony for four years, for the good reason that there had been no call for one. His experiences during his Paris visit were none too happy and there are moments in this symphony when this unhappiness is apparent. The performance tonight was particularly felicitous.

Tomorrow night there will be a performance of Berlioz' symphonic drama "Romeo and Juliet." The soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McColum, tenor and Nicola Moscana, bass. The festival chorus will participate. This work was performed here last summer with Jennie Tourel. The two other soloists were the same.

SHARON, CONN
NEWS
7/22/54

FRENCH PIANIST

Nicole Henriot, young French pianist, is guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening, July 24, (8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.), with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel, in Liszt's E Flat Piano Concerto.

RICHARD BURGIN, concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will conduct the Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, this afternoon.

[251]

The Berkshire Festival

These are the programs to be presented this week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, partial and complete, and other artists at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Richard Burgin conducting. William Schuman: "American Festival" Overture; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; Khatchaturian: Violin Concerto (Isaac Foreait, soloist); Sibelius: Second Symphony.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall, Chamber music played by The Kroll String Quartet. Haydn: Quartet in D major, Op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark"); Hindemith: Quartet No. 3, Op. 22; Ravel: Quartet in F.

Friday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall, Chamber orchestra conducted by Lukas Foss. Stravinsky: "Pulcinella" Ballet (complete), soloists: Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, bass); Mozart: Piano Concerto in B-flat (K. 450) (soloist: Seymour Lipkin); Mozart: Excerpts from the opera "Idomeneo" (soloists: Marvin Worden, tenor; Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos).

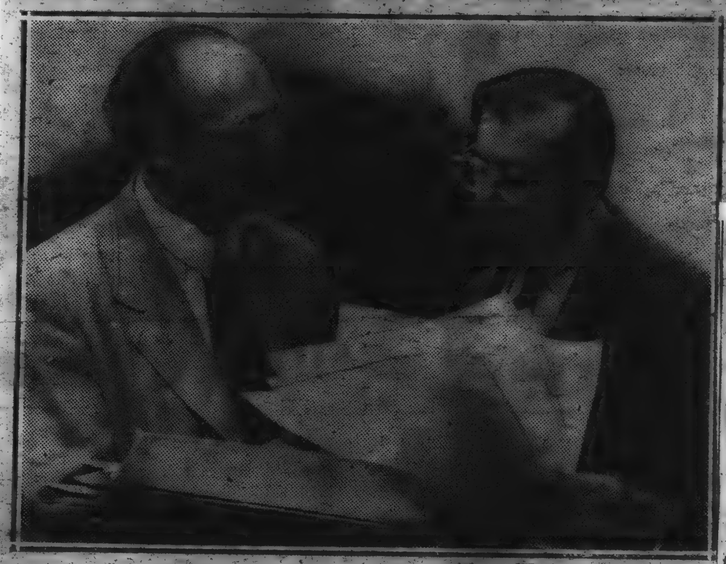
Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Berlioz: Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans"; "Summer Nights" (soloist: Eleanor Steber, soprano); Te Deum (soloists: David Poleri, tenor; Willem Frank, organ).

Sunday, Aug. 8, at 2:30, Music Shed, The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch. Gluck: Overture to "Alceste"; Beethoven: Violin Concerto (soloist); Sinfonia Francescatti); Brahms: Second Symphony.

MET OPERA soprano, Eleanor Steber will be soloist at a Berlioz program conducted by Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood Saturday night.

Study, Too

At Tanglewood—These students, lunching by Lake Mah-Kee-Nah, are among an enrollment of 375 studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, at Lenox, a summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Festival. Housewives, clerks, attorneys and teachers are among the students, from 35 states and 12 foreign lands.



Music-Minded—Aaron Copland (left), ass't director at the music center, confers with Arthur Berger, critic, author and Brandeis University professor, at Tanglewood. Copland's opera, "The Tender Land," has its New England premiere at Tanglewood Monday. See below.

CHARLES MUNCH REHEARSES A SECTION OF THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA FOR A PERFORMANCE AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL.

WOMAN FLUTIST STAR IN CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Doriot Dwyer Acclaimed at Theater Program; 'Romeo And Juliet' Tonight

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 30—Doriot Anthony Dwyer, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the bright particular star of the Chamber-orchestra concert given tonight under the direction of Charles Munch. The program devoted to the music of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart drew 2500 people to the theater shed and adjacent lawn.

The brilliant and demanding flute concerto by Jacques Ibert proved a perfect vehicle to display the amazing technical resources and sound musicianship of this petite and charming flutist. She was recalled at least a half dozen times.

Two Mozart Works

The color, animation and lyric beauty in this concerto, fine tonal contrasts and cadenzas which all for enormous technical resources, all of which were available in abundance. The small orchestra joined with Mr. Munch in providing splendid collaboration.

The program opened with excerpts from "The Spider's Web," a ballet-pantomime by Albert Roussel. In this delightful work the composer has been singularly successful in devising music for this microscopic drama. It has to do with ants, butterflies and, of course the spider. There are several charming waltz fragments and an impressive funeral procession. Mr. Munch was particularly happy in his reading of this work, providing colors which shimmered and rhythms which entranced.

Mozart was represented by two works. The first was his "Serenade in C Minor for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons." The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave a wonderfully clear, poetic and concentrated performance. Particularly fine was the minuet, a contrapuntal display piece. This work was written to entertain, yet is more than a display piece, it has a depth of feeling and sweetness which rise far above the wit, good humor and cleverness one finds so often in the works of Haydn.

"Paris" Symphony Played

The final work on the program was the "Symphony in D Minor" known as the "Paris." Mozart had not composed a symphony for four years, for the good reason that there had been no call for one. His experiences during his Paris visit were none too happy and there are moments in this symphony when this unhappiness is apparent. The performance tonight was particularly felicitous.

Tomorrow night there will be a performance of Berlioz' symphonic drama "Romeo and Juliet." The soloists will be Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McColum, tenor, and Nicola Moscana, bass. The Festival chorus will participate. This work was performed here last summer with Jennie Tourel. The two other soloists were the same.

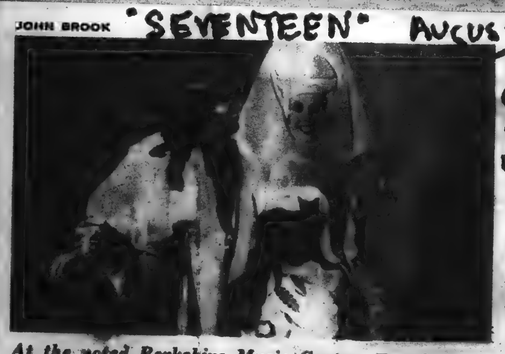
SHARON, CONN
NEWS
7/22/54

FRENCH PIANIST

Nicole Henriot, young French pianist, is guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening, July 24, (8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.), with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel, in Liszt's E Flat Piano Concerto.

RICHARD BURGIN, concert master of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who will conduct the Berkshire Festival concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, this afternoon.

JOHN BROOK "SEVENTEEN" August 1954



At the noted Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts: Grétry's "Richard Coeur-de-Lion"

[251]

Zino Francescatti Enjoys Living in Berkshire Hills

World Renowned Violin Virtuoso Happy at Fiddletop, His Home at Monterey; in Two Concerts at Tanglewood Next Week

By JOHN LA FONTANA

Monterey, July 31—From Marseilles, France, to Monterey, Mass., is the story of Zino Francescatti, world renowned violin virtuoso, who is slated for two appearances at Tanglewood, Lenox, this summer, the first on Sunday afternoon Aug. 8, and the other on Wednesday evening, Aug. 11. And his home "Fiddletop," appropriately named to house a man of his talents, is perched on a knoll which commands a fine view of the Berkshire Hills.

Of course, Tanglewood in Lenox is responsible in a way for attracting outstanding musicians to the Berkshire Hills, but the beauty of the area sells itself also. The late Albert Spalding maintained his home Aston Magna on Berkshire Heights in Great Barrington, and Fritz Kreisler for several years has been spending much of his time in Stockbridge.

Really Enjoys Life

Mr. Francescatti not only loves his home Fiddletop because it is located only a few miles from one of the finest music centers in America, but he finds it a place where he can rest and relax to his heart's content after his strenous concert tours. He can don lounging clothes, and do such prosaic chores as working in the garden or helping to keep the surroundings of Fiddletop in a neat and orderly fashion.

A few minutes with the noted virtuoso, who is considered the foremost exponent of the works of the great Nicola Paganini, soon places his visitor at ease, for Mr. Francescatti reveals he enjoys life to the utmost regardless of whether he is playing the violin, working about the home, or having an informal chat about anything and everything. He exudes charm that is contagious.

You can sense that in the way he speaks, his mannerisms, which are typically continental, aided and abetted by his Italian-French extraction. He emphasizes his remarks with gestures of his hands so typical of the Latin race. His face in a matter of a split second can express moods as quickly as he can change a tune on his violin. It can be a picture of deep seriousness in one second, and suddenly one of keen delight when something happens to please him. He has a fine command of English which he fires in the rapid style of the French language. Short, clipped sentences, and to the point are his forte. And one of his favorite expressions, to designate that something didn't turn out too well, is the puckering tightly of his lips and emitting a "pff-t" and emphasized with a tossing of his hands in a hopeless gesture.

Musical Background

Music is in Mons. Francescatti's life and love, for he was really born into it; a heritage handed to him from which he couldn't escape. His father was Fortunato Francescatti, a gentleman from Verona, Italy, son of a lawyer. Fortunato grew up about the time the influence of Paganini was very strong in Italy. Fortunato, or "Renato" as he was called for short, took up violin playing and became a fine musician. While still a very young man he went to France and was featured soloist and later led many of the outstanding orchestras in that country. He had studied the violin under Bazzini, and Camillo Sivori, two of the greatest of their day.

Sivori was a pupil of Paganini, and in fact his only pupil. The great master had taken a liking to Camillo and taught him all the skills that he knew. In turn the older Francescatti was to learn the technique from Sivori, and he in turn taught them to his son Zino, so that the Paganini technique was handed down family style so to speak. And it is no wonder that on Columbus Day last year in Genoa, Zino Francescatti was invited to play the Paganini violin, for he was considered the artist best able to express the works of Paganini. It marked the third time that the violin, which Paganini willed to the City of Genoa, had been played in public. Other artists had from time to time asked for permission to play it in private for their own satisfaction, but that was all.

Zino's Father

Zino's father after making a name for himself in France as a violinist, decided to establish his home in Marseilles. The large seaport city was not noted as a cultural center, so to speak, but Signor Francescatti found that there were other things that gave him more pleasure than fame and money. In Marseilles he knew he was without peer as a musician, which meant he would avoid a lot of professional clashes. And inwardly he was a naturalist, a lover of everything the Almighty created, whether it be plants, animals, or the arts. There in Marseilles too was a large Italian population and he felt pretty much at home with so many of his countrymen about him. But the one thing that really fascinated him was the docks, for here would come boats from all the ports in the world discharging their miscellaneous cargoes. Many of the boats brought in strange animals from far off places. These fascinated him so much that he spent considerable money buying practically everything that came through the port, monkeys, lizards, turtles, birds of various note and hue. He took these to his large home, and kept them in rooms above his studio, or in his yard. He also pursued his love for etching in wood, painting, and collecting various and sundry articles, and writing too.

Many times his friends would implore him to leave Marseilles and come to Paris where his talents would be much more appreciated and where he would accumulate much more wealth than he could in Marseilles. But Fortunato was adament. He liked Marseilles and there he was going to stay. In fact he was so happy with his way of life, that he gave little thought to romance.

Then came Romance

If "Renato" had been impervious to the charms of the beautiful French belles for many years, he finally found his match when 15-year-old Ernesta Feraud, came to him as a violin pupil. Ernasta had won the conservatory award, and it was decided she would continue her studies under the great Francescatti. Ernasta came from an old Marseilles family which traced its lineage back to the days of the Romans. She was not only a capable violinist, but beautiful as well, and two years later when she was 17 and her teacher 44 years old, they were married, and lived happily together. She like her husband was a great lover of music But she had no aspirations to play in concert halls, or tour the continent. Madame Francescatti was content to play her role as the wife of Signor Francescatti. Even today, she obtains much delight in playing the violin, and will practice as diligently as her son.

Violinist Is Born

On Aug. 9, 1905 their first son was born. They called him Rene, sort of an abbreviation of Renato. But while he was small they tagged the nickname of Zino on him and he was to grow up to be better known by that name than Rene. On June 29, 1908, their second son was born, and he was named Raymond.

At the time Signor Francescatti still kept his home looking much like a combination music salon, museum, and zoo. The strains of a sweet violin, or lilting notes of a piano would be shattered by the sudden chatter of a monkey, or other denizen of the wild, expressing either approval or disapproval of the efforts of the musicians. Finally, Zino's godfather, who was a noted obstetrician of Marseilles, approached Signor Francescatti and told him bluntly that he would have to give up his menagerie, for it wasn't safe with the young boys around. The animals might have contagious diseases with which the children could become afflicted and with dire results. So the elder Francescatti reluctantly gave up his role as zoo-keeper, and the Marseilles zoo was the beneficiary, for it received many of the animals Signor Francescatti had collected.

Music Dominated Home

In the Francescatti home, where music furnished the background of its family life, Zino and Raymond were to hear the strains of the classics in early life. Then came the day when Zino, about five years old, was approached by his father who told him 'matter-of-factly, "Now you are going to study the violin." He brought out a minature-sized instrument and presented it to the boy. Zino did not look upon this gesture with any misgivings, for he was pleased to think that he would have a violin all of his own. And he took to it, like the proverbial duck takes to water.

In no time at all he was playing the clasic works, long before he could fully read the notes on the score sheet before him. "It was easy," he said, "because I had heard the tunes so many times, I knew them by heart."

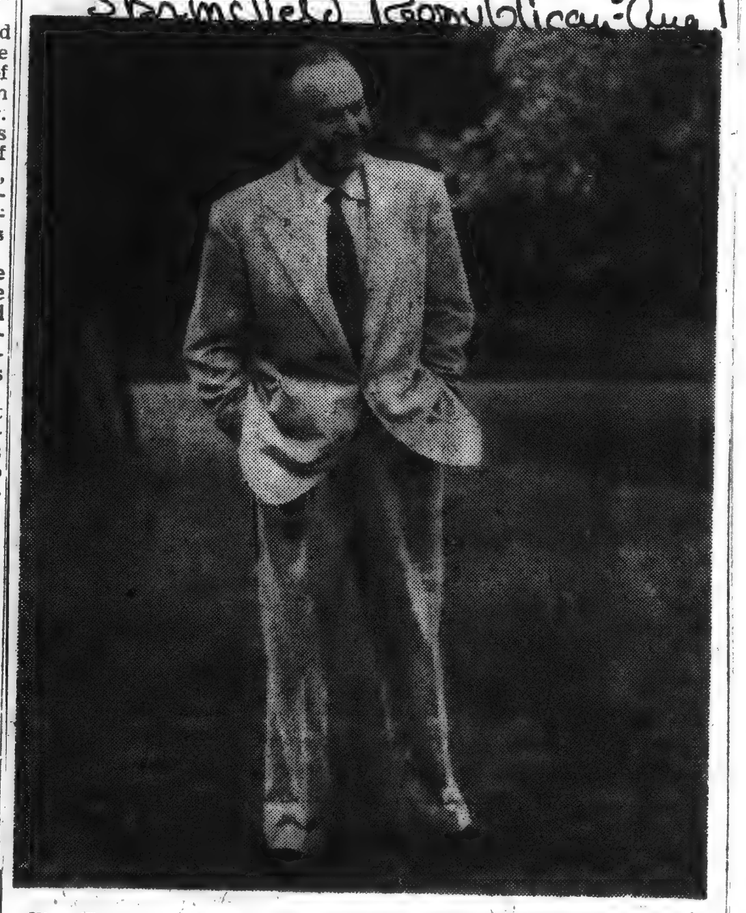
Zino proved to be an apt pupil and when he was 10 years old he gave his first public concert. From then on his climb to artistic fame was rapid. He never found the chore of practicing boring to him, and in fact enjoyed it. Raymond, on the other hand, was taught the piano, but although he had talent he didn't have the penchant for the keyboard as Zino did for the strings. Raymond later was associated with the French railroad. He was killed in 1944 during the invasion of France.

Getting back to Zino and his violin playing, in preparing for his concert program he will practice the selections weeks ahead of time so that he will know every note by heart. Then he sets his instrument aside, until it's about time for the concert. He will go through a rehearsal as a final tune up, just before the concert takes place.

During the period when he is relaxing, he finds that the best place for that is at his home, Fiddletop, which he now considers his permanent home. Next year he will be in Europe from March until September, and then will return to his Monterey home for a stay with his wife, the former Yolande Potel De La Briere, of Paris, France. She was a concert violinist, but gave up the role to devote her time to running her home. Also with Mr. and Mrs. Francescati at Fiddletop is the violinist's mother.

The trio find Fiddletop and Monterey in general much to their liking, and to say that the folks of Monterey, like having one of their neighbors one of the world's greatest musicians is putting it conservatively. They tune in on his radio programs, listen to his recordings and concerts, and hope that he will be a neighbor at Fiddletop forever.

Relaxing in Monterey



Zino Francescatti, world renowned violinist, pictured in a relaxing pose at his home, Fiddletop in Monterey. He will be heard at two Tanglewood concerts in Lenox this year, the first on Sunday afternoon Aug. 8, and the other Wednesday night, Aug. 11.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, July 31—Arthur Fiedler's program with the Boston Pops for "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala day-long benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Friday, Aug. 13, rain or shine, will include two Fiedler specialties: the Merrick-Bennett arrangement of the Gillette razor theme of its radio and television programs, "Look Sharp-Be Sharp"; and the arrangement by Hayman of a pot-pourri of television commercials called "TV-iana."

* * *

A special attraction for patrons of "Tanglewood on Parade" who buy the box seats or tickets for the reserved sections in the Music Shed, will be the one-act opera, performed by students of the school's Department IV, held, in the formal gardens at 4 p. m. This year Frederic Cohen has selected "Le Medecin Malgre Lui" The Doctor In Spite of Himself after Moliere's play, composed by Charles Gounod in 1858.

* * *

Karl Kohn, assistant to Lukas Foss and Florence Dunn in Tanglewood's Department V, the Tanglewood Study Group, is on the faculty of music at Pomona College, Cal. Mr. Kohn is also an accomplished pianist, and Tuesday night (July 27) was soloist at the Esplanade Concert in Boston in Beethoven's piano concerto No. 1. The concert was conducted by G. Wallace Woodworth, leader of the Harvard Glee Club, which performed recently at the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

Pierre Monteux, who led two Festival concerts at Tanglewood this summer, has been announced as musical director of the San Francisco Opera Company's staged production of Arthur Honegger's "Joan of Arc at the Stake, its U. S. premiere in this form, on Oct. 15 and 21. Film star Dorothy McGuire will portray Joan. Mr. Monteux was conducter of the San Francisco Symphony for 17 years, and will be returning to the Coast city for the first time since he shared with Charles Munch the 1953 tour to the West Coast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

William Sistare, Pittsfield Community Concert manager, who is head of ushers at the Berkshire Festival concerts and in charge of program distribution, has as his deputies this summer the following: David M. Cullen, Jr., Pittsfield (gate); Lawrence Baldwin, West Stockbridge, and James M. Kimball, Jr., Great Barrington (box section); Benjamin E. Bowers and David Keating, Pittsfield (blue section), George Tompkins and Gordon Davidson, Pittsfield (red section); Harry Hamilton, Pittsfield (aides); H. R. Birt and William E. Bensch, Pittsfield, Harry E. Stedman and David R. Kidd, Dalton (assistants) Mrs. Alexander J. Young, Lenox, and Miss Dorothy Heidenreich and Miss Josephine Enright, Pittsfield (program girls); Warren Sears (first aid). Mr. Sistare's staff totals 20 ticket takers, 90 ushers, 30 program girls, and 18 first aid administrators.

* * *

Juan Orego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustine 620, Santiago, Chile, who at the close of last summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center was awarded the Samuel Wechsler Commission for a short work suitable for orchestral performance, is due to spend the last 10 days of the Festival season at Tanglewood, according to Aaron Copland, assistant director of the summer music school. Mr. Copland advises that Senor Orego is en route from Chile, to lecture in the Tanglewood "Aspects of Music parties, and it is hoped his work will be performed by the student symphony orchestra in its final concert of the season, Saturday, Aug. 14, at 3 p. m. in the Music Shed.

* * *

Jean Morel, head of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, who made such a pronounced hit with Berkshire Festival audiences when he led the Boston Symphony for the first time, last Saturday (July 24), will conduct a second Festival concert this summer, the final chamber orchestra program, which because of "Tanglewood on Parade" being scheduled for Friday, Aug. 13, will be heard a day earlier than customary, on Thursday, Aug. 12. Mr. Morel will introduce three works new to Tanglewood: Rossini's overture to his short farcical opera "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), written when the composer was 20 years of age, in 1812; Ravel's "Mother Goose Suite"; and Richard Strauss' suite composed for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" (The Would-Be Gentleman), which Pierre Monteux gave for the first time in the U. S. with the Boston Symphony in 1921.

* * *

E. Power Biggs gives the second of his two Saturday afternoon organ recitals in the Tanglewood Music Shed on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 7, at 3 p. m. Mr. Biggs will also play the organ solo role in Camille Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3", with Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, in the Festival concert of Saturday night, Aug. 14.

* * *

Berlioz' massive "Requiem," which concludes the 1954 Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15, is remembered vividly from its Tanglewood premiere by Charles Munch two summers ago. Mr. Munch had conducted the 100th anniversary of the first performance (1837) in Paris, in the same auditorium, the Chapel of St. Louis in the Invalides in June, 1937, and brought it to Boston in April, 1951. As before, the "Requiem" requires the the participation of four bands, 26 players for, which are now being recruited in Boston, which will play under the Shed platform, at the edges of the stage, in promenade sections. The brass-bands will rehearse with the Boston Symphony and Mr. Munch on Friday afternoon, Aug. 13; with the chorus of Festival students augmented by 50 voices from the Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra Chorus; and in the Pension Fund public rehearsal Saturday morning, Aug. 14.

* * *

With the Berkshire Festival at the half-way mark this season, a total attendance at 12 concerts in the first three weeks of 60,750 persons has been registered, which compares favorably with the 117,950 persons who attend the Festival in six weeks in the summer of 1953. Attendance at 12 of the scheduled 25 student concerts this season totaled 16,025.

COPLAND'S OPERA 'THE TENDER LAND' TO BE PRESENTED

Two Casts of Students to Perform Work at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 21—"The Tender Land," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, newly revised by its composer who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded in 1940 in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival, will have its second production anywhere as a major project of the summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by the students of the opera department, in the Theater-Concert Hall, at 8:30 p. m. Monday and Tuesday.

Second Opera.

Composer of many symphonies, mallets, chamber, theater and film music, Aaron Copland explored the opera medium only once before, when he wrote "The Second Hurricane," a children's piece more than 15 years ago. "The Tender Land," finished in March of this year, was written on a commission from the League of Composers, from a grant by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d.

"I think my piece has great workshop possibilities," Mr. Copland said at the time of the New York premiere. "The music is stylistically plain, It has a colloquial flavor, even, and in some spots is suite folkish."

The composer chose a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Walker Evans in a book about southern tenant farmers in the 1930's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," by James Agee. It tells the story of Laurie, the elder of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the even of her graduation to work out her own life beyond the horizon of the farm.

Frederic Cohen will be assisted in the staging of the Berkshire Music Center production by Elsa Kahl. Scenery and lighting are by John Blankenchip, costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen. Thomas De Gaetani is technical director, Thomas Garrett is master electrician. The orchestra of Department I students will be conducted by Frederic Waldman. Two different casts of opera department students will sing the work.

AARON COPLAND

Zino Francescatti Enjoys Living in Berkshire Hills

World Renowned Violin Virtuoso Happy at Fiddletop, His Home at Monterey; in Two Concerts at Tanglewood Next Week

By JOHN LA FONTANA

Monterey, July 31—From Marseilles, France, to Monterey, Mass., is the story of Zino Francescatti, world renowned violin virtuoso, who is slated for two appearances at Tanglewood, Lenox, this summer—the first on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 8 and the other on Wednesday evening, Aug. 11. And his home "Fiddletop," appropriately named to house a man of his talents, is perched on a knoll which commands a fine view of the Berkshire Hills.

Of course Tanglewood in Lenox is responsible in a way for attracting outstanding musicians to the Berkshire Hills, but the beauty of the area sells itself also. The late Albert Spalding maintained his home Avalon Magna on Berkshire Heights in Great Barrington, and Fritz Kreisler for several years has been spending much of his time in Stockbridge.

Really Enjoys Life

Mr. Francescatti not only loves his home Fiddletop because it is located only a few miles from one of the finest music centers in America, but he finds it a place where he can rest and relax to his heart's content after his strenuous concert tours. He can don lounging clothes, and do such prosaic chores as working in the garden or helping to keep the surroundings of Fiddletop in a neat and orderly fashion.

A few minutes with the noted virtuoso, who is considered the foremost exponent of the works of the great Nicola Paganini, soon places his visitor at ease, for Mr. Francescatti reveals he enjoys life to the utmost regardless of whether he is playing the violin, working about the home, or having an informal chat about anything and everything. He exudes charm that is contagious.

You can sense that in the way he speaks, his mannerisms, which are typically continental, aided and abetted by his Italian-French extraction. He emphasizes his remarks with gestures of his hands so typical of the Latin race. His face in a matter of a split second can express moods as quickly as he can change a tune on his violin. It can be a picture of deep seriousness in one second, and suddenly one of keen delight when something happens to please him. He has a fine command of English which he fires in the rapid style of the French language. Short, clipped sentences, and to the point are his forte. And one of his favorite expressions, to designate that something didn't turn out too well, is the puckering tightly of his lips and emitting a "pff-t" and emphasized with a tossing of his hands in a hopeless gesture.

Musical Background

Music is Mons. Francescatti's life and love, for he was really born into it; a heritage handed to him from which he couldn't escape. His father was Fortunato Francescatti, a gentleman from Verona, Italy, son of a lawyer. Fortunato grew up about the time the influence of Paganini was very strong in Italy. Fortunato, or "Renato" as he was called for short, took up violin playing and became a fine musician. While still a very young man he went to France and was featured soloist and later led many of the outstanding orchestras in that country. He had studied the violin under Bazzini, and Camillo Sivori, two of the greatest of their day.

Sivori was a pupil of Paganini, and in fact his only pupil. The great master had taken a liking to Camillo and taught him all the skills that he knew. In turn the elder Francescatti was to learn the technique from Sivori, and he in turn taught them to his son Zino, so that the Paganini technique was handed down family style so to speak. And it is no wonder that on Columbus Day last year in Genoa, Zino Francescatti was invited to play the Paganini violin, for he was considered the artist best able to express the works of Paganini. It marked the third time that the violin, which Paganini willed to the City of Genoa, had been played in public. Other artists had from time to time asked for permission to play it in private for their own satisfaction, but that was all.

Zino's Father

Zino's father after making a name for himself in France as a violinist, decided to establish his home in Marseilles. The large seaport city was not noted as a cultural center, so to speak, but Signor Francescatti found that there were other things that gave him more pleasure than fame and money. In Marseilles he knew he was without peer as a musician, which meant he would avoid a lot of professional clashes. And indeedly he was a naturalist, a lover of everything the Almighty created, whether it be plants, animals, or the arts. There in Marseilles too was a large Italian population and he felt pretty much at home with so many of his countrymen about him. But the one thing that really fascinated him was the docks, for here would come boats from all the ports in the world discharging their miscellaneous cargoes. Many of the boats brought in strange animals from far off places. These fascinated him so much that he spent considerable money buying practically everything that came through the port, monkeys, lizards, turtles, birds of various note and hue. He took these to his large home, and kept them in rooms above his studio, or in his yard. He also pursued his love for etching in wood, painting, and collecting various and sundry articles, and writing too.

Many times his friends would implore him to leave Marseilles and come to Paris where his talents would be much more appreciated and where he would accumulate much more wealth than he could in Marseilles. But Fortunato was adament: He liked Marseilles and there he was going to stay. In fact he was so happy with his way of life, that he gave little thought to romance.

Then came Romance

If "Renato" had been impervious to the charms of the beautiful French belles for many years, he finally found his match when 15-year-old Ernesta Feraud, came to him as a violin pupil. Ernasta had won the conservatory award, and it was decided she would continue her studies under the great Francescatti. Ernasta came from an old Marseilles family which traced its lineage back to the days of the Romans. She was not only a capable violinist, but beautiful as well, and two years later when she was 17 and her teacher 44 years old, they were married, and lived happily together. She like her husband was a great lover of music But she had no aspirations to play in concert halls, or tour the continent. Madame Francescatti was content to play her role as the wife of Signor Francescatti. Even today, she obtains much delight in playing the violin, and will practice as diligently as her son,

Violinist Is Born

On Aug. 9, 1905 their first son was born. They called him Rene, sort of an abbreviation of Renato. But while he was small they tagged the nickname of Zino on him and he was to grow up to be better known by that name than Rene. On June 29, 1908, their second son was born, and he was named Raymond.

At the time Signor Francescatti still kept his home looking much like a combination music salon, museum, and zoo. The strains of a sweet violin, or lilting notes of a piano would be shattered by the sudden chatter of a monkey, or other denizen of the wild, expressing either approval or disapproval of the efforts of the musicians. Finally, Zino's godfather, who was a noted obstetrician of Marseilles, approached Signor Francescatti and told him bluntly that he would have to give up his menagerie, for it wasn't safe with the young boys around. The animals might have contagious diseases with which the children could become afflicted and with dire results. So the elder Francescatti reluctantly gave up his role as zoo-keeper, and the Marseilles zoo was the beneficiary, for it received many of the animals Signor Francescatti had collected.

Music Dominated Home

In the Francescatti home, where music furnished the background of its family life, Zino and Raymond were to hear the strains of the classics in early life. Then came the day when Zino, about five years old, was approached by his father who told him 'matter-of-factly, "Now you are going to study the violin." He brought out a minature-sized instrument and presented it to the boy. Zino did not look upon this gesture with any misgivings, for he was pleased to think that he would have a violin all of his own. And he took to it, like the proverbial duck takes to water.

In no time at all he was playing the clasic works, long before he could fully read the notes on the score sheet before him. "It was easy," he said, "because I had heard the tunes so many times, I knew them by heart."

Zino proved to be an apt pupil and when he was 10 years old he gave his first public concert. From then on his climb to artistic fame was rapid. He never found the chore of practicing boring to him, and in fact enjoyed it. Raymond, on the other hand, was taught the piano, but although he had talent he didn't have the penchant for the keyboard as Zino did for the strings. Raymond later was associated with the French railroad. He was killed in 1944 during the invasion of France.

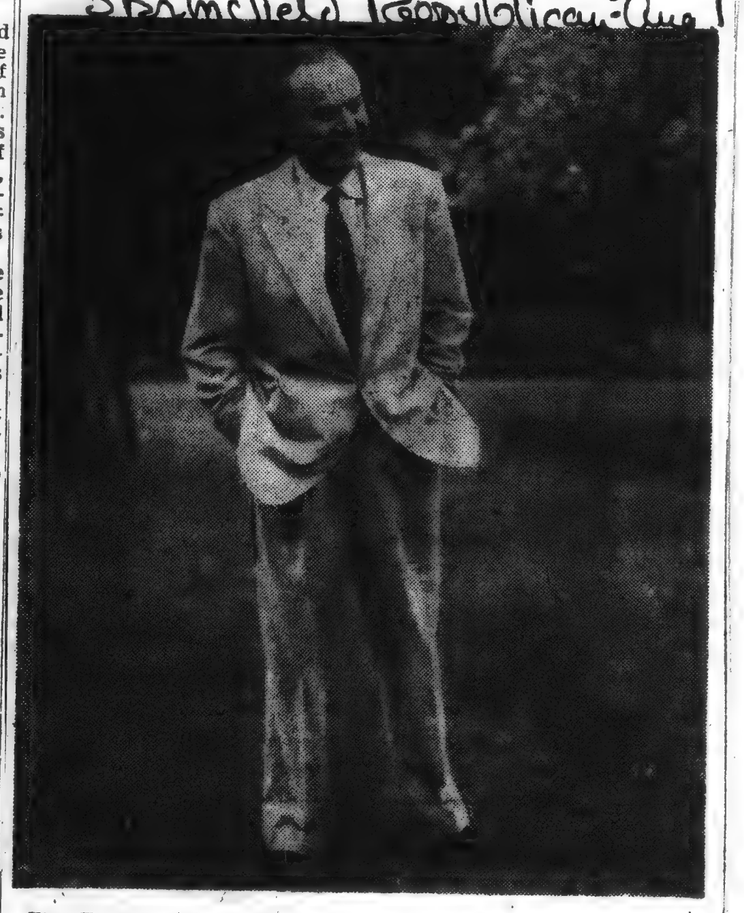
Getting back to Zino and his violin playing, in preparing for his concert program he will practice the selections weeks ahead of time so that he will know every note by heart. Then he sets his instrument aside, until it's about time for the concert. He will go through a rehearsal as a final tune up, just before the concert takes place.

During the period when he is relaxing, he finds that the best place for that is at his home, Fiddletop, which he now considers his permanent home. Next year he will be in Europe from March until September, and then will return to his Monterey home for a stay with his wife, the former Yolande Potel De La Briere, of Paris, France. She was a concert violinist, but gave up the role to devote her time to running her home. Also with Mr. and Mrs. Francescati at Fiddletop is the violinist's mother.

The trio find Fiddletop and Monterey in general much to their liking, and to say that the folks of Monterey, like having one of their neighbors one of the world's greatest musicians is putting it conservatively. They tune in on his radio programs, listen to his recordings and concerts, and hope that he will be a neighbor at Fiddletop forever.

Relaxing in Monterey

Springfield Republican-Aug 1



Zino Francescatti, world renowned violinist, pictured in a relaxing pose at his home, Fiddletop in Monterey. He will be heard at two Tanglewood concerts in Lenox this year, the first on Sunday afternoon Aug. 8, and the other Wednesday evening, Aug. 11.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, July 31—Arthur Fiedler's program with the Boston Pops for "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala day-long benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, on Friday, Aug. 13, rain or shine, will include two Fiedler specialties: the Merrick-Bennett arrangement of the Gillette razor theme of its radio and television programs, "Look Sharp-Be Sharp"; and the arrangement by Hayman of a pot-pourri of television commercials called "TV-iana."

* * *

A special attraction for patrons of "Tanglewood on Parade" who buy the box seats or tickets for the reserved sections in the Music Shed, will be the one-act opera, performed by students of the school's Department IV, held, in the formal gardens at 4 p. m. This year Frederic Cohen has selected "Le Medecin Malgre Lui" The Doctor In Spite of Himself after Moliere's play, composed by Charles Gounod in 1858.

* * *

Karl Kohn, assistant to Lukas Foss and Florence Dunn in Tanglewood's Department V, the Tanglewood Study Group, is on the faculty of music at Pomona College, Cal. Mr. Kohn is also an accomplished pianist, and Tuesday night (July 27) was soloist at the Esplanade Concert in Boston in Beethoven's piano concerto No. 1. The concert was conducted by G. Wallace Woodworth, leader of the Harvard Glee Club, which performed recently at the Berkshire Festival.

* * *

Pierre Monteux, who led two Festival concerts at Tanglewood this summer, has been announced as musical director of the San Francisco Opera Company's staged production of Arthur Honegger's "Joan of Arc at the Stake, its U. S. premiere in this form, on Oct. 15 and 21. Film star Dorothy McGuire will portray Joan. Mr. Monteux was conducter of the San Francisco Symphony for 17 years, and will be returning to the Coast city for the first time since he shared with Charles Munch the 1953 tour to the West Coast of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

William Sistare, Pittsfield Community Concert manager, who is head of ushers at the Berkshire Festival concerts and in charge of program distribution, has as his deputies this summer the following: David M. Cullen, Jr., Pittsfield (gate); Lawrence Baldwin, West Stockbridge, and James M. Kimball, Jr., Great Barrington (box section); Benjamin E. Bowers and David Keating, Pittsfield (blue section), George Tompkins and Gordon Davidson, Pittsfield (red section); Harry Hamilton, Pittsfield (aides); H. R. Birt and William E. Bensch, Pittsfield, Harry E. Stedman and David R. Kidd, Dalton (assistants) Mrs. Alexander J. Young, Lenox, and Miss Dorothy Heidenreich and Miss Josephine Enright, Pittsfield (program girls); Warren Sears (first aid). Mr. Sistare's staff totals 20 ticket takers, 90 ushers, 30 program girls, and 18 first aid administrators.

* * *

Juan Orego, of the Facultad de Belles Artes, Augustine 620, Santiago, Chile, who at the close of last summer's session of the Berkshire Music Center was awarded the Samuel Wechsler Commission for a short work suitable for orchestral performance, is due to spend the last 10 days of the Festival season at Tanglewood, according to Aaron Copland, assistant director of the summer music school. Mr. Copland advises that Senor Orego is en route from Chile, to lecture in the Tanglewood "Aspects of Music parties, and it is hoped his work will be performed by the student symphony orchestra in its final concert of the season, Saturday, Aug. 14, at 3 p. m. in the Music Shed.

* * *

Jean Morel, head of the student symphony orchestra at Tanglewood, who made such a pronounced hit with Berkshire Festival audiences when he led the Boston Symphony for the first time, last Saturday (July 24), will conduct a second Festival concert this summer, the final chamber orchestra program, which because of "Tanglewood on Parade" being scheduled for Friday, Aug. 13, will be heard a day earlier than customary, on Thursday, Aug. 12. Mr. Morel will introduce three works new to Tanglewood: Rossini's overture to his short farcical opera "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), written when the composer was 20 years of age, in 1812; Ravel's "Mother Goose Suite"; and Richard Strauss' suite composed for Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" (The Would-Be Gentleman), which Pierre Monteux gave for the first time in the U. S. with the Boston Symphony in 1921.

* * *

E. Power Biggs gives the second of his two Saturday afternoon organ recitals in the Tanglewood Music Shed on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 7, at 3 p. m. Mr. Biggs will also play the organ solo role in Camille Saint-Saens "Symphony No. 3" with Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony, in the Festival concert of Saturday night, Aug. 14

* * *

Berlioz' massive "Requiem," which concludes the 1954 Berkshire Festival on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15, is remembered vividly from its Tanglewood premiere by Charles Munch two summers ago. Mr. Munch had conducted the 100th anniversary of the first performance (1837) in Paris, in the same auditorium, the Chapel of St. Louis in the Invalides in June, 1937, and brought it to Boston in April, 1951. As before, the "Requiem" requires the the participation of four bands, 26 players for, which are now being recruited in Boston, which will play under the Shed platform, at the edges of the stage, in promenade sections. The brass-bands will rehearse with the Boston Symphony and Mr. Munch on Friday afternoon, Aug. 13; with the chorus of Festival students augmented by 50 voices from the Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra Chorus; and in the Pension Fund public rehearsal Saturday morning, Aug. 14.

* * *

With the Berkshire Festival at the half-way mark this season, a total attendance at 12 concerts in the first three weeks of 60,750 persons has been registered, which compares favorably with the 117,950 persons who attend the Festival in six weeks in the summer of 1953. Attendance at 12 of the scheduled 25 student concerts this season totaled 16,025.

COPLAND'S OPERA 'THE TENDER LAND' TO BE PRESENTED

Two Casts of Students to Perform Work at Tanglewood

Lenox, July 21—"The Tender Land," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, newly revised by its composer who has been assistant director of the Berkshire Music Center since the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra was founded in 1940 in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival, will have its second production anywhere as a major project of the summer of the Berkshire Music Center. The New England premiere, and the first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by the students of the opera department, in the Theater-Concert Hall, at 8:30 p. m. Monday and Tuesday.

Second Opera.

Composer of many symphonies, mallets, chamber, theater and film music, Aaron Copland explored the opera medium only once before, when he wrote "The Second Hurricane," a children's piece more than 15 years ago. "The Tender Land," finished in March of this year, was written on a commission from the League of Composers, from a grant by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein 2d.

"I think my piece has great workshop possibilities," Mr. Copland said at the time of the New York premiere. "The music is styled tonally plain. It has a colloqu[illegible] in some sp[illegible]

Transportation direct to Hampton
For Free Color Folder and Accom
Chamber of Commerce, 22 Ocean grand prizes
TALENT SHOWS — BEA FISHING DERBY — PHO
"MISS HAMPTON BE
Plus . . . Water Ski Show
Dawn 'n' Day • Festival Parade
• Daily Band Concerts • and tions all month long!
by fo
b i f

AARON COPLAND

Featured Artists at Tanglewood This Week

ELEANOR STEBER

RICHARD BURGIN AND RUTH POSSELT

LUKAS TOSS

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

E. POWER BIGGS

STORM DISRUPTS BERLIOZ CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Conductor Munch Waits for Rain to Stop Before Continuing

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, July 31—At this moment Tanglewood history is repeating itself. In the middle of the "Queen Mab Scherzo" of Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" the heavens opened up and the rains came down to the accompaniment of thunder and lightning. The delicate music couldn't be heard.

Artists Dismissed

Charles Munch stopped the orchestra, waited several minutes and then dismissed orchestra, chorus and soloists. The same sort of storm interupted a Wagner program given in the tent in the '30's, but Serge Koussevitzky shifted programs and played Wagner to the accompaniment of the elements.

The bell is now ringing signifying the concert will start again. Perhaps the elements will give better co-operation now.

Tonight Charles Munch is continuing the Berlioz series commemorating the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth, with a performance of "Romeo and Juliet." A similar performance was given last year. Indeed, although Beatrice Krebs replaces Jennie Tourel in the contralto role, John McCollum and Nicola Moscona are singing the roles, they sang last year.

Berlioz, labelled this work a dramatic symphony. To maintain a symphonic medium he has relegated the textual exposition to the first part of the symphony, during which he outlines the whole story in narrative form. He has restricted the solo voices to narration.

Four Movements

The symphony has the general style of four movements with a prologue as a vocal introduction to the first. The love scene and the "Queen Mab Scherzo," both instrumental, correspond to the slow movement and scherzo, while the chorale finale rounds out the whole.

Mr. Munch finds this work congenial and he has offered it numerous times and has recorded it. Thus the performance tonight is distinguished by its power and the insight of the director. The purely orchestral portions of the program have been played in superb style. What should be broad in style and grandiose has been so. What should be delicate, pi[illegible] and imabinative has been so.

Beatrice Krebs has a voice of beautiful texture and an ability to understand and project a mood. Her sincerity is very real and there is a personal quality to her singing which is affecting. She provided distinguished utterance of the two metrical verses dealing with the vows of the lovers and their delight.

John McCollum has a fine voice, sings with understanding of text and he projects his scherzetto clearly and cleanly. The music lies a bit low for absolute vocal effectiveness.

Greek Basso Excels

Of the three soloists, Nicola Moscona has the best opportunity for vocal display and the Greek basso made the most of it. His recitative and air were sung with tremendous impact. Vocally rich and convincing.

The festival chorus was in top form singing with full realization of text and well blended tones. The men's section was distinguished in the love scene. Compelling indeed was the choral funeral dirge. A total of 9800 persons heard this concert.

Tomorrow afternoon Richard Burgin, concertmaster, will take over as conductor. Ruth Posselt, his wife, will be heard in the Khatchaturian violin concerto. The orchestral works will include William Schuman's "American Festival Overture." Vaughan Williams, "Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, for double spring orchestra" and "Symphony No. 2 in D Major" by Jan Sibelius.

Fiedler and Pops Orchestra At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Schippers to Conduct First Half of Special Concert On 13th, Brenda Lewis Soloist

Lenox, July 31—Tanglewood will be "On parade" Friday, the 13th. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 8500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. Festivities, from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

Fiedler, to Conduct

For the first time in the history of the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history. Mr. Fiedler is now conducting the art commission Pop concerts in San Francisco's Civic Auditorium, and will fly to the Berkshires of "Tanglewood on Parade" and return to California immediately.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center where he was a student in 1948, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Soloist on this half of the concert will be Brenda Lewis, young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Strauss' "Salome."

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme," and did a coast-to-coast tour with the Met's production of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." She created the role of Birdie in the original Broadway production of Marc Blitzstein's opera "Regina," sang the title role in the New York City Opera Co.'s revival last year. On Broadway she has starred in "The Merry Widow," "The Gypsy Baron" and last season in the musical comedy, "The Girl in Pink Tights."

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved bytelephone to Lenox 500.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is Chairman of the "Tanglewood on Parade" committee; Mrs. Bruce Sanborn of Lenox and Mrs. John H. Rice of Pittsfield, are vice-chairmen; Miss Margo Miller of Pittsfield is secretary. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, of Glendale, is chairman of the committee for the sale of boxes, with Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Jr., as vice-chairman. Mrs. Sanborn is also heading the committee for door prizes, which will be awarded to luck ticket-holders after the concert. The program follows:

4.00 p. m.—Opera Scenes (Students of Department IV), Formal gardens (for box-holders and reserved seat patrons only)

5.45 p. m.—Fanfare; welcome address, Steps of Administration Building.

6.00 p. m., Simultaneous demonstrations by each department, Berkshire Music Center: Music Shed—Short symphonic works, Orchestra (Department I students); Theatre-Concert Hall—One-act operas (Department IV students); Chamber Music Hall—Chamber Music program (Department I students)

7.15 p. m.—Lawn party, picnic supper, Concert by Chorus (Department II students), steps of Administration Building.

8.15 p. m.—Music Shed—Gala Concert: Boston Symphony Orchestra—Thomas Schippers, conductor.

.....Bizet Symphony in C

Strauss "Salome" (Final Scene) Brenda Lewis, Soprano, soloist Boston pops Orchestra Arthur Fiedler, conductor in a typical Pops program.

11 p. m.—Drawing for Door Prize.

11.14 p. m.—Waltzing on the lawn.

STUDENT EVENTS AT TANGLEWOOD

Lenox, July 31—Student concerts during the next week by pupils of the Berkshire Music Center, admission to which is through a voluntary contribution to the school's support are as follows:

Sunday, Aug. 1 and Aug. 8, 10 a. m.—Chamber Music Hall: Chamber music concerts by students of Department I (Orchestra)

Monday and Tuesday, 8.30 p. m.—Theater-Concert Hall: (All seats reserved) "The Tender Land," opera in three acts by Aaron Copland, libretto by Horace Everett (New England premiere). Produced and staged by Frederic Cohen, assisted by Elsa Kahl, scenery and lighting by John Blankenchip, costumes and makeup by Leo Van Witsen, orchestra of Department I students conducted by Frederic Waldman. With alternating casts of student performers.

Thursday, 8.30 p. m.—Music Shed: Symphony concert by students of Department I (Orchestra)

Sunday, August 8, 8.30 p. m.—Chamber Music Hall: Composers' Forum by students of Department III (Composition).

Second Thoughts in Music

Concerts of String Music At Tanglewood Rewarding

Chamber Group and Chamber Orchestra Prove Popular; Festival Chorus Does Fine Work; Jean Morel Conducts; Ernst Toch's Symphony Heard

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood has passed its halfway mark. Achievements to date have been considerable and there is much more to come. Two performances by the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross reveal what a fine conductor of choral muic he is and how fortunate the Berkshire Music School is to have him on its staff. One must realize, however that advanced students and choral directors make up the material with which Mr. Ross works, so much of the drudgery which the average choral director must go through to put on a performance is eliminated.

Chamber Concerts

We have found the chamber music concerts each Wednesday night most rewarding. There is an intimacy and an interesting audience attitude and reaction that one can find only at such concerts. Last Wednesday night the Zimbler Sinfonietta, a group of 20 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was heard in a program included "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi; Stravinsky's ballet "Apollom Musgete" and Rossini's Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass.

The Vivaldi opus really four concerti for violin and strings, was given a splendid performance, heightened in interest through the brilliant playing of George Zazofsky. This splendid violinist is well known in Springfied both as a soloist with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra and as an occasional member of the first violin section.

Chamber Orchestra Plays

Leaving the realm of Bech and Mozart, the chamber orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch provided great pleasure in a program which included Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6 No. 4 by Handel and Haydn's Symphony in G major, No. 100, familiarly known as the "Military." This was beautiful music indeed and the Boston Symphony has just the string virtuosi to make Handel's Concerti Grossi sing. Mr. Munch was particularly successful in his reading of the Haldn symphony, a work which does not demand a silken texture. The French conductor sensed its somewhat earthy humor and communicated it to the audience.

Hugh Ross was on hand to conduct Haydn's Mass No. 3 in D minor, the "Nelson." The music school has some excellent soloists this season and a good chorus. Thomas Stewart, basso, was particularly effective vocally. His is the finest basso we have heard at Tanglewood. Beatrice Krebs, known here in Springfield and a second-year member of the music school, and Naomi Farr, a soprano with brilliant top notes, vocal flexibilty and good projection handled the music with excelent taste and understanding. Marvin Worden, the tenor, had a light pleasant voice and awareness of text.

Orchestra Concerts

Jean Morel, the French conductor and member of the music school faculty this summer, made his initial appearace as conductor on the Saturday night program. Morel has had a varied and consistent career in the United States since 1939, having conducted both opera and orchestras. His reading of Prokofieff's Symphony No. 6, in E flat minor was powerful and intellectual, particularly fine was his perception of the compex character of the slow movement. Strauss' tone poem "Don Juan" and the "Enigma" variations served to give one a good picture of this conductor's versatility and sound musicianship.

The piano soloist in Liszt's Concerto for Piano in E flat major, No. 1 was Nicole Henriot, making her second appearance as a Tanglewood soloist. Her playing was marked by tonal brilliance, technical bravura and a considerable feeling for the poetry in the work. She received admirable support from the orchestra.

Last Sunday afternoon Charles Munch continued his tribute to Hector Berlioz by playing his Symphony with Viola Solo known as "Harold in Italy." William Primrose was the soloist. It was a memorable performance, spacious, rich-toned and sensitive. Mr. Primrose played with a exquisite sensitivity and drew marvellous tones from his instrument. The rapport between soloist and condictor was complete.

Ernest Toch is on the music school staff this summer, so it was not strange that his second symphony was programmed by Mr. Munch. This was written in 1951 and is strictly contemporary. There is a deal of dissonance and a smattering of melody. It is well written and while it may not be heard to any great extent it is a notable addition to the orchestra repertory. Mr. Toch informs us that he was inspired to write this symphony because of his admiration for the great Albert Schweitzer, doctor, missionary, organit and Bach authority.

The weather has not co-operated to well with the festival. On many days skies were thratening, while on others it rained. Audences for the Shed concerts have seemed small to us, 10,050 being the largest, we believe. The audiences at both the chamber music and chamber orchestra concerts have been good, with the Theater-Shed usually full and several hundred people outside.

It wil be interesting to see what this new six-week season will accomplish in the way of audiences and receipts. One thing it has already accomplished—the bringing to its audiences of a greater variety of music and great performances.

Organ Recital

Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday at 10 a. m., for $1, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

An added attraction for Festival patrons is the organ recital at 3 p. m., Saturday in the Music Shed, by E. Power Biggs, admission free to Friend tof the Berkshire Music Center, those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony by voluntary contributions. Mr. Biggs' program consists of: Antonio Soler: Double Concerto No. 3, in G; J. S. Bach: Fantasia and Fugue in C minor; Louis Claude Dequin: Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Donato: Two Pastels; Jehan Alain: Litanies. The complete programs.

Wednesday, 8.30 p. m. Theater concert Hal, Chamber Music:

Haydn: String Quartet in D major, Op. 64 No. 5, ("Lark"); Hindemith: String Quartet No. 3, Op. 22; Ravel: String Quartet in F. The Kroll String Quartet: William Kroll, Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdovsky, 'cello.)

Friday, 8.30 p. m.—Theater Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra:

Stravinsky: "Pulcinella," Ballet with song in one act (after Pergolesi); with soloists Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; Mulleurs Boatwright, bass. Mozart: Piano Concerto in B flat major, K. 550—with Seymour Lipkin, soloist. Mozart: Excerpts from "Idomeneo," K. 366, soloists Marvin Worden, tenor; Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty, Charlotte

[253]

Burgin to Conduct Today First Time at Tanglewood

August 1 — Springfield Republ.

Ruth Posselt Soloist in Khatchaturian Violin Concerto; Kroll Quartet, Foss, Lipkin, Eleanor Steber Featured Artists Later This Week

Lenox, July 31—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, will present a program of music by William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Aram Khatchaturian and Jan Sibelius tomorrow afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Burgin, concertmaster of the orchestra, is guest conductor for the first time on a Festival program, although he has conducted the student orchestra and "Tanglewood on Parade" here and has led the Boston orchestra in Boston and New York.

Miss Posselt, Mrs. Burgin in private life, will appear on the same program with her husband for the first time in the Berkshires. The Khatchaturian concerto she will perform is a Tanglewood premiere. The complete program: Schuman: American Festival Overture; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis; Khatchaturian: Violin Concerto; Sibelius: Symphony No. 2.

This Week's Features

There will be a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber ochestra of members of the Boston Symphony, Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist, Friday evening, also in the Theater-Concert Hall.

An all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Smyphony, Charles Munch conducting, including Tanglewood permieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycly with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, will be presented Saturday evening in the Music Shed. The orchestra will be heard in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms next Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed, with Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

The Kroll String Quartet, under the leadership of William Kroll, violin, who with Richard Burgin heads the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center, consists also of Louis Graeler, violin; David Mankovitz, viola; Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello, and will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular Wednesday evening Chamber Music series.

Foss to Conduct

Foss, who is a teacher of composition and who heads the Tanglewood Study Group division of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra chamber orchestra in its first performance of "Pulcinella," ballet with song in one act, by Igor Stavinsky, after Pergolesi, with Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Boatwright, bass, as soloists.

Another Tanglewood premiere on this program will be the excerpts from Mozart's opera, "Idomeneo" (which had its American permiere by the Berkshire Music Center's opera department at Tanglewood in 1947), with soloists Marvin Worden, tenor, and Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; 50 voices of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, supplemented by 18 boys from Indian Hill Workshop, Stockbridge, trained by David L. Buttolph and Harold Aks.

Mr. Much's Saturday evening Festival concert, one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the six "Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the New York Symphony Orchestra.

The "Te Deum," also to be given its first performance by the Boston Symphony, will have the assistance of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, 40 boys, aged nine to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac at neighboring Stockbridge Bowl, and 44 girls, aged 13 to 18, from Indian Hill Music Workshop at Stockbridge.

Holloman, sopranos; Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, augmented by pupils of the Indian Hill Music Workshop.

Saturday 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra:

Berlioz: Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans;" "Summer Nights," for Soprano and Orchestra, Op. 7—with Eleanor Steber, soloist. "Te Deum;" for Three Choruses, with Orchestra and Organ, Op. 22, with David Poleri, tenor; William Frisco Frank, organ soloist; Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke DeVaron, augmented by a children's chorus from Camp Mah-Nac for Boys, Stockbridge Bowl, and Indian Hill Music Workshop, Stockbridge. Charles Munch, conductor.

World of Music

By TUCKER KEISER

Boston Post

Overshadowed by the widely publicized concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Tanglewood student orchestra, composed of instrumentalists on the brink of professional careers, gives weekly concerts of extraordinary quality.

During a recent week end at Lenox I made it a point to visit this orchestra in rehearsal. As I passed the Shed on a beautiful Saturday morning, the strains of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" floated over the well-kept lawn, disappearing it seemed in the distant Stockbridge Bowl. Eleanor Steber's glorious soprano was filling the coolish morning air with Marguerita's third act aria.

Down the rolling hill, past the Hawthorne House, I found the student orchestra rehearsing with fervor and utter absorption in the spacious barn. Samuel Krachmalnick, an advanced conducting student who served as Arthur Fiedler's assistant during the last "Pops" tour, was leading these tieless and Toniless musicians through Stravinsky's tricky "Divertimento."

Overseeing this orchestral reading sat a handsome, huskily built man with silver-grey hair, intently following a conductor's score propped up vertically on a substantial music stand. Huddled around him was a small group of eager-eyed young people following every whispered remark and vivid gesture of the seated maestro.

The Third Man

This was Jean Morel, the distinguished conductor. As acting head of the instrumental music and conductor of the Tanglewood school orchestra, Morel becomes the third person to head this department of the Berkshire Centre since the school's founding in 1940. Koussevitzky, despite his busy schedule with the Boston Symphony itself, directed every operation of the department until 1951; then his pupil and protege, Leonard Bernstein, took over the post. Mr. Bernstein is on leave of absence this season.

What struck me so forcefully about the orchestra was its beautiful tone. I have heard many of the smaller professional orchestras throughout the country; none, however, had the rich strings or the sonorous brasses of this student organization, which by the way, when I heard them had only been playing as a group a little over a week. Koussevitzky once remarked that his students created a more beautiful sound than a well-known, long-established Midwestern orchestra. He was nearly sued for slander.

Later in the day, I had the chance to speak to Mr. Morel about his young musicians. As we sat comfortably over coffee, he explained the fine tone of this group.

"Tone is seldom a problem," he declared, "with a group such as this one. They are all young, they bring an immense capacity to work, they all study with that concentration students genuinely in love with their art have, they constantly practice sonatas, they continue to work with their teachers, and they enjoy what they play. Candidates are rigorously auditioned for Tanglewood, and an instrumentalist admitted to the school is expected to be a master of his oboe, trumpet, or fiddle."

"Each one in this stage of his career is interested in obtaining all the beauty of sound from his instrument of which he is capable; in reading class or in performance he never lets down for a minute. Here, my job is primarily one of explaining points of style and ensemble."

Morel further stated that the music which he has selected for this summer embraces all periods of orchestral literature, baroque, classical, romantic, and contemporary.

Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass. "The Tender Land" by Aaron Copland. (New England premiere) directed by Frederic Cohen. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

Tuesday

Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass. Program same as Monday. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

Wednesday

Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass. Kroll Quartet. Haydn—Quartet in D major, op. 64, no. 5. Hindemith—Quartet No. 3. Ravel—Quartet in F.

* * *

Friday

Theatre-Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lukas Foss conducting. Stravinsky—"Pulcinella." Mozart—Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450. Mozart—Excerpts from "Idomeneo." Seymour Lipkin soloist. 8:30 p. m.

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass., New York Brass Ensemble and Geoffrey Holder. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

Saturday

Tanglewood Music Shed, E. Power Biggs, organist. 3:00 p. m.

Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz — Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," "Summer Nights" and "Te Deum." Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor and Festival Chorus. 8:30 p. m.

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. New York Brass Ensemble and Geoffrey Holder. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

Sunday

Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Gluck—Overture to "Alceste." Beethoven—Violin Concerto. Brahms—Symphony No. 2. Zino Francescatti, soloist. 2:30 p. m.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
JUL 27 1954

Non-Profit Adult Camp

For young men and women (18-28) Camp Lehman, Big Indian, N. Y., offers a beautiful pool, cook-outs in the mountain countryside, dancing every evening, sings around a camp fire, outings to the Music Festival at Tanglewood and bicycle trips with other bike fans.

roadblock Tournavon
Wed July 28, 1954

Here's Tanglewood Line-up For Week

We got some nice "thank you" notes for printing up the Tanglewood programs for last week, so we're bowing to public demand and setting down the musical fare coming up this week at the 1954 Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass.

If you're interested in driving over, take your choice from these performance:

Tonight, Wednesday, July 28 — The Griller String Quartet—Mozart Quartet in E flat, K. 428, Bloch Quartet No. 4 (first performance), Beethoven Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2.

Friday evening, July 30 — Roussel "The Spider Feast," Ibert Flute Concerto (Soloist: Doriot Anthony), Mozart Serenade for Eight Winds K. 388, Mozart "Paris" Symphony K. 297 (Charles Munch conducting).

Saturday evening, July 31—Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony and Festival Chorus and Soloists (Charles Munch conducting).

Sunday afternoon, August 1 — Schuman American Festival Overture, Vaughn Williams Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, Khatchaturian Violin Concerto (Soloist: Ruth Posselt), Sibelius Symphony No. 2 (Richard Burgin conducting).

Wednesday evening — August 4 — The Kroll String Quartet — Haydn Quartet in D, O. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark"), Hindemith Quartet No. 3, Op. 22, Ravel Quartet in F.

Woodstockers will certainly want to attend the August 4 concert, featuring the Kroll String Quartet, with hometowner William Kroll who's been the hit of the current Maverick Concerts, on violin.

[254]

Ruth Posselt in Striking Violin Solo at Festival

Springfield Union
Aug 2

By JULLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 1—There were 8225 persons in the audience for this afternoon's concert by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Richard Burgin, its concertmaster. The soloist was Ruth Posselt, violinist and Mr. Burgin's wife.

Varied Program

The large audience heard a varied program, ranging through the contemporary scene. It opened with a striking performance of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture." Its rhythmic content is more interesting than its melodic content, but it is bright, virile and a good opener. The orchestra played magnificently in perfect rapport with the conductor.

There are few lovelier contemporary works than the "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams. It is written for double string orchestra. Although based on an old theme, one must regard this music as strictly modern. The Boston strings are incomparable and Mr. Burgin's approach to the music was sensitive and clear.

Continued On Page 9

Few violinists have done more for contemporary music than Ruth Posselt. Her performances of this music have formed a notable contribution to the concert and recital hall. The Khatchaturian violin concerto, although it lacks some of the musicality and solidity of the familiar piano concerto, is a gay, brilliant rhythmically provoking piece of writing, a sure-fire hit with any audience. Miss Posselt was in top form, playing with all the required brilliance and providing a deal of poetic utterance when necessary. The fact that a violin string broke during the opening movement disturbed her not at all.

Switches Violins

She switched violins with the concertmaster and continued without missing a note.

The concert concluded with a performance of the Sibelius "Symphony No. 2 in D major." This is perhaps the most favored of the Sibelius symphonies. One can only marvel at the economy of means and the treasurable results. The simplicity of approach and the clarity of expression reveal that magnificent fertility and absorption which pervades all things and direct them to a single end. Mr. Burgin has made this work one of his finest interpretive achievements and it was a performance of nobility, deeply felt emotion and a plasticity of movement. The second movement with its fragments of melody which follow one after the other in rich profusion was superbly played.

N.Y. Times - Aug. 3

POSSELT IS HEARD AS VIOLIN SOLOIST

She Plays Khatchaturian's Concerto at 16th Program of Berkshire Festival

By OLIN DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1—The sixteenth program of the Berkshire Festival, given this afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Richard Burgin, was the most symphonic program of this season.

The most conspicuous feature of this concert was Ruth Posselt's brilliant performance of Khatchaturian's Violin Concerto. This concerto may not be as bold a work, or as rich in its developments as the same composer's Third Piano Concerto, which the late William Kappel played so successfully, but it is a work of picturesque orientalism—very effectively written for the solo violin with unusual combinations of the solo part and that of the orchestra.

Not only in the orientalism of the melodic line, but also in the interlacing of complex rhythms is the work arresting. Miss Posselt played it with fiery vituosity, with Bravura and exceptional accuracy, a vibrant and sensuous tone and a style that went well with the nature of the music. The concerto could well be performed more often than has yet been the case. It is at the least a welcome addition to the rather restricted literature of the violin in this field.

Orchestral Works Given

The orchestral works were, first, the robust American Festival Overture of William Schuman; the Fantasia on a theme of Thomas Tallis by Vaughan Williams and Sibelius' Second Symphony.

The Schuman Overture interests us more in its second theme and in its later developments than it does by its clamorous beginning. The Fantasia on the Tallis theme is now an accepted masterpiece, certain to move an audience my the poetry and the fine cathedral-gray of its coloring.

Mr. Burgin made a notable success with the Sibelius Symphony, which is now past its half century and continues to stir the listener by its breadth and the masculinity of accent, its reflections of northern nature, the somberness of the legendary slow movement sand the wildly triumphant finale.

The concert last night was devoted to an eloquent reading by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony of Berlioz' uncut and complete "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony, with chorus, soloists and all, thus giving us the work as a whole and not in the truncated form in which the purely orchestral passages are customarily presented at symphonic concerts.

The result was an impressive realization of the complete justice of the public verdict these many years past upon the actual values of this astonishing score, and also of the heights of poetry and the depths of banality that Berlioz was capable of reaching almost simultaneously.

Berlioz at Its Finest

The pages that are the imperishable essence of this symphony are those of the love music of Shakespeare's fated pair. Berlioz himself ranked these pages as his greatest, and there is no reason to differ with him in this as he thinks of Romeo alone in the garden, hearing from afar the echoes of the ball at the Capulets.'

The music soars, in an ecstatic flight of which only the man and the tone poet who himself sought love—so dauntlessly, so tragically all his life—was capable; the one who could hymn it as only Berlioz does in these incomparable pages.

Cheek by jowl with all this is the buzz and banality of the introduction, the highly conventional writing for the chorus and the contraltos' recitative and stanzas, relieved only by the occasional significance of the instrumental commentary; and finally, the interminable loquacity of the passages depicting the adjurations of Friar Laurence.

There is a moment of light, or rather of melancholy shadow, in the chorus of lamentation for Juliet, but that also is marred by tonal devices that turn out to be conscious mannerisms before they are over.

Instrumental Magic

But the friar: It is customary to class King Mark in Wagner's "Tristan" as a king of operatic bores. Even he takes less time to discharge his diatribe than this pompous, long-winded friar.

What now and again relieves the commonplaceness of the vocal writing, solo and choral, is the magical use of the instruments when Berlioz does not attempt to be realistic, or other than the sublime singer of instrumental song it is his truest nature to be. Compare the enunciation of the love theme when it comes from the lips of the chorus in the prologue with the moment when the instruments seize upon this theme and begin to discourse it; or that exquisite flight of fancy, the Queen Mab Scherzo, with its Gossamer orchestration and the imagination displayed in the delicate use of pulsatile instruments of its later pages.

We are then listening to the voice of the arch-prestidigitator and magician of the modern orchestra, from whose scores so many of the composers who succeeded him in the century after his death have plundered.

The performance was finest when Mr. Munch was making the instruments eloquent. The chorus sang lustily, with confidence, enthusiasm and brilliancy, if not invariably wth distincton of style.

The soloists were of high rank. The soprano was Beatrice Krebs; the tenor, John McCollum; the basso—the only voice that sings as a character in the drama—Nicola Moscona.

But why, the reader might naturally ask, with voices present and available, does not Romeo himself sing his sweet Romanza, and why not from Juliet's lips the song of love triumphant? Simply for the reason that Berlioz' imagination takes fire most irresistably when he turns to his instruments. Their voices are more marvelous to him than any that ever issued from a human throat. For he was the Geni of the instruments.

The audience this afternoon numbered 8,225, and 9,800 attended last night's performance.

COPLAND'S "THE TENDER LAND" REACHES TANGLEWOOD

A rehearsal in front of the Theatre-Concert Hall. The cast practices the square dance. In the foreground are Frederick Cohen, director, and Mr. Copland (seated) and Frederic Waldman, conductor. The performance by the Berkshire Music Center will take place tomorrow and Tuesday.

The New York Times (by Sam Falk)

EARLY MASTERPIECE

Vecchi's 'L'Amfiparnasso' Has Historic Importance and Is Also Great Music

By OLIN DOWNES

THE first part of a triple bill offered by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Centre last Tuesday night was a mimed version of a score celebrated in music history, but honored more often in the breach than in the observance, where performance is concerned. This was "L'Amfiparnasso" of the early Italian composer, Orazio Vecchi.

In fact, this was probably the first dramatic presentation of the work, with scenery, costumes and action, in America. "L'Amfiparnasso" was given in concert form by Paul Boepple and the Dessoff Choirs in New York in February, 1953. But the performance at Tanglewood under the direction of Frederick Cohen, acting director of the opera department, followed in principle the procedure of its revival at the Florence May Festival of 1938, when the score —cast in the form of fourteen unaccompanied madrigals—was done with singers and costumed mimes; given, in short, as the cross between madrigal and opera buffa that its nature is.

Appropriate Way

For ourselves this seems the appropriate way to present Vecchi's famous work, and this in spite of a sentence in the prologue, which says that "this spectacle is to be seen with the mind, which it enters by the ear and not by the eyes."

Yet there are old woodcuts of "L'Amfiparnasso," that comedy which is to be considered as not of the heights but of the slopes of Parnassus, which show a stage, actor and an audience. The score, in which concerted voices sing individual roles, exchange banter and jokes between individuals and not groups on the stage, provides an astonishing number of effects of action, gesture and realistic episode by means of the unaccompanied voices alone. It is polyphonic madrigal feeling its way toward monodic aria and recitative, in a word-play of delicious nonsense, poetry, sensuality and wit, and adroit characterization of the figures on the stage. And it is impossible to believe that the wonderful, monodic, cantata-pantomime of Monteverdi, "Il Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda," could possibly have come into existence, in 1624, thirty years after Vecchi's work, if Vecchi's score had not been well known to the first great genius of seventeenth-century music-drama.

The work is a madrigal variation, or sublimation, of the comedy of masks, that semi-provisional form of dramatic entertainment that for two centuries and more delighted the Italian public and represented the most popular form of musico-dramatic representation that they knew. Vecchi's characters, in the libretto that he fashioned with the valuable cooperation of the poet Guilio Cesare Croce, have as principals Pantalone, the traditional Venetian merchant; the learned Doctor Graziano; the Bergomask buffoons, Arlecchino and Brighella, to whom are added the courtesan, Hortensia; the Spanish soldier Captain Cardone; a chorus of Jews, and two pairs of lovers. These are Lucio and Isabella, who quarrel and languish, love and despair, till at the end they are happily united.

They supply what may be generally described as the "lirica tragica" element in the plot, while the others represent the "grottesco-comica" side of it.

The Plot

The plot, of course, is of the slightest and of a generally inconsecutive character. Pantalone calls to his insolent servant Pedrolino to cease his guzzling and summon the contemptuous Hortensia, who will have nothing of the old man. Lelio, misunderstanding his Nissa, is woeful at her apparent indifference. Pantalone mocks Doctor Graziano, who wishes to marry his daughter, but they bargain it out. Lucio is alarmed at the lascivious Captain Cardone's pursuit of his Isabella. The capitano tells his Zanni to knock at Isabella's door. Isabella, truly loving Lucio, dissembles and practices the ways of the coquette with the amorous military man. But if Lucio does not return to her, Isabella will kill herself. The devoted servant Frutto prevents this, telling her that Lucio will be coming back to her.

Grazione, granted the hand of Pantalone's daughter, plans a wedding feast. His very loquacious man, Francatrippa, asks why his relatives are not to be invited to the feast. The Doctor sings an amorous serenade under the window, supposedly, of his inamorata. Francatrippa, short of cash, goes to the Jews to pawn a diamond but they cannot do business with him on Sunday. Now Lucio and Isabella find each other and arrange for their wedding. Lelio and Nissa are similarly united.

We sketch this farrago in order to make a comparison with the manner of its stage presentation, which was quite incongruous and inappropriate to the many strokes of humor and sentiment and badinage in the verses. No doubt Mr. Cohen wanted to escape literalisms and afford a sort of mimed fantasy in the manner of commedia dell' arte without attempting any exactitude of a realistic kind with his stage picture. In conception this is entirely logical and legitimate. In execution the pantomime inexcusably cheapens and obscures the meaning of the work.

Sung Superbly

It was sung, and sung superbly, by the Madrigal Groups One and Two, as they were called in the program; and if Vecchi's admonition to listen and reach the brain only by the ear and not the eye had been heeded, we would have had a very lively and expressive performance from the singers, who indeed proved to be virtuosos as well as vocal dramatists, under Hugh Ross' baton. But the further fact is of a lot of tumbling and buffoonery that were pointless and exaggerated in a way that greatly harmed the quality of the work. Much was made of Captain Cardone, who simply burlesqued in ways that had the smallest relation, if any, to the plot. Of the real quality, wit, finesse and rollicking humor of the piece, contrasting with the exquisite madrigals of the lovers, the thing was simply thrown out of court.

It is a pity, since, as Mr. Ross and his singers triumphantly demonstrated, the score has a vitality, poetry, and jocosity that would only come clearly into relief if the stage presentation equalled the genius of the text and music. Capitol Records has the Cetra-Soria recording of the vocal performance given by the chorus of the Lecco Academy in Modena, Vecchi's birthplace, where "L'Amfiparnasso" was revived at the 400th anniversary of the composer's birth in 1950. It is a beautiful performance. Yet we preferred the greater degree of vivacity, contrast and dramatic motivation that Mr. Ross' singers secured.

MEMORIAL

Serge Koussevitzky would have been 80 last Monday, had he been spared a few more years. His former chauffeur, Victor Sakharoff, who still works for the family, did not forget the birthday. He wrote a poem in honor of his employer, in which he likened the conductor's career to the light of a meteor which "still shines brightly, even now, as a rainbow after the rain."

Friday Aug. 1 THE

DORIOT ANTHONY IS FLUTE SOLOIST

Presents Ibert Concerto in Fourth Program of Series at Festival in Lenox

By OLIN DOWNES

Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., July 30—It is difficult to write of the fourth concert of the so-called Mozart-Bach series, given Friday evening by Charles Munch and a small orchestra of the Boston Symphony players in the Theatre Concert Hall, and avoid superlatives.

The program was ideal. Given in a relatively small auditorium, in an intimate atmosphere that established a special rapport between audience and orchestra, it was half Mozart and half modern French music. It found the performers and Mr. Munch in top form, wholly in the vein, and rarely communicative of their inspiration. Perhaps, where distinction on the part of a single performer is concerned, the highlight of the evening was the performance of the Ibert Flute Concerto by the rarely gifted Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the orchestra.

Pleasure and Profit

Miss Anthony has played this concerto elsewhere with the Boston Symphony. The fact that your reporter heard her in the concerto for the first time must be the excuse for retailing the pleasure and profit that he had from her playing. Young as she is, with only two years' experience with the Symphony, she showed in all that she did her worthiness of the traditions of the famous orchestra and of succeeding in the position she occupies that master flutist, Georges Laurent.

It seemed that Miss Anthony lacked nothing pertaining to the highest finish and artistic treatment of her instrument. She displayed an impeccable virtuosity and beauty of tone. All the effects of which the flute is capable were there—harmonic effects, double-tonguing staccati, a wonderful legato and breath control and a singing tone that the finest singer might envy.

Mr. Munch was conducting, through the concert for all he was worth. When he does that things happen. He began with the engaging ballet suite, "Le Festin d' Araignee" ("The Spider's Feast") of Albert Roussel, a score in the vein that was modern at the time of Debussy. Somewhat more modern than Debussy is its artful dissonance and skill in the use of transparent orchestral coloring, in which, incidentally, James Pappoutsakis, the third flute of the orchestra, also played in a way notable for its beauty of tone and style.

For the second part of the program Mr. Munch conducted the Mozart Serenade for Eight Wind Instruments in C minor, K. 388.

NEW YORK TIMES, S

In this performance every player was the consummate artist. The balance and quality and blend of tone were things to remember. The piece is scored for oboes, clarinets, horns and bassoons in pairs. The oboes were Ralph Gomberg and Louis Speyer; clarinets, Gino Cioffi and Manue Valerio; horns, James Stagliano and Harry Shapiro; bassoons Sherman Walt and Ernest Pa aenka. No wonder that they were applauded to the echo.

The Mozart symphony that ended the concert was the "Paris" Symphony, the one that poo Mozart wrote—in the midst o the most discouraging circum stances—for the orchestra of the "Concerts Spirituels." One need not dilate here upon the qualities of the well known symphony. But there are things to be said o the glory of Mr. Munch's performance—and that of the serenade as well as the symphony For he interpreted the glowing music with superb virility and sweep, with a combination of masculinity, gusto and tona radiance that placed him in the rare category of those conductors who do not consider that it is necessary to play Mozart nicely and prettily to do him justice.

This was the full blooded surging music of Mozart with the wine of life singing in his veins transforming everything to wonder and triumphant beauty. Such and not an anemic classicism, should be the Mozart tradition.

Mr. Munch enunciated it magnificently, and the resulting demonstration of the audience was the proof of how aptly he had driven the truth home.

[255]

Doriot Anthony Soloist Tonight at Tanglewood

B. Post - July 30

Flutist to Play Ibert Concerto

Doriot Anthony, principal flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, makes her second appearance at the 1954 Berkshire Festival as soloist tonight at 8:30 P. M. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Earlier this seanon Miss Anthony was one of the soloists in the program of Bach Brandenburg Concertos.

Charles Munch conducts tonight's program by the chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in Roussel's "The Spider's Feast," the Flute Concerto by Jacques Ibert, Mozart's "Serenade for Eight Winds," all new to Tanglewood, and also Mozart's "Paris" Symphony.

JOINED IN 1952

Miss Anthony, who joined the Boston Symphony in the autumn of 1952, was born in Streator, Ill. Her first teacher was her mother, a professional flutist. Her training continued at the Eastman School of Music where she studied with Joseph Mariano and later with William Kincaid. She played in the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D. C., for two years before joining the Los Angeles Philharmonic, also playing first flute in the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra. While in California, Miss Anthony devoted much of her time to chamber music. In addition to her work with the Boston Symphony and chamber music, Miss Anthony is a faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center.

A few seats at $4 and $5 remain for tonight's concert and reservations may be made by telephoning the Tanglewood box office at Lenox (Mass.) 600. Tickets of general admission, allowing listeners to hear the concert from the lawns, will be sold af ew hours before the program. In case of rain the concert will be held in the Music Shed.

Doriot Anthony

BOSTON, MASS.
MORNING GLOBE
JUL 18 1954

The Berkshire Festival

The third week of concerts in the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be as follows:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Debussy: "Iberia"; Copland: Piano Concerto (Leo Smit, soloist); Berlioz: "Fantastic" Symphony.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Chamber music. Vivaldi: "The Four Seasons"; Stravinsky: "Apollon Musagete"; Rossini: Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass. Played by members of the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

Friday at 8:30, Theatre-Concert Hall. Small orchestra and chorus. Charles Munch conducting: Handel: Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn: "Military" Symphony; Hugh Ross conducting: Haydn: "Lord Nelson" Mass.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Jean Morel conducting. Prokoneff: Sixth Symphony; Liszt: Piano Concerto in E-flat (Nicole Henriot, soloist); Strauss: Tone Poem, "Don Juan"; Elgar: "Enigma" Variations.

Sunday, July 25, at 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Berlioz: Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick"; "Harold in Italy" (William Primrose, viola soloist); Toch: Second Symphony.

Ernst Toch Tells What's Wrong With Composers

By JAY S. HARRISON

It was a typical Tanglewood scene. Rehearsals, feverish preparations took place on every side; students, their instrument cases held tightly in hand, scattered in every direction. Before us, two singers, their cues not yet in sight, were passing time throwing stones at a tree. A conductor shrieked at his orchestra. An oboist sounded her "A." It was the kind of business-as-usual pandemonium that denotes the Berkshire Music Festival at high tide.

Through it all, Ernst Toch, Tanglewood's present composer-in-residence, seemed unperturbed. We were seated on a bench behind the school's Theater-Concert Hall waiting for a run-through of Mr. Toch's one-act opera, "The Princess and the Pea," to begin. And he was saying:

"For many, many years have I taught; and I have learned many things. The most important, I assure you, is that there exists today a great confusion in the minds of our young composers. The reasons? Well, they are easy to explain and hard to cure." At this point, Mr. Toch, a slow-speaking, methodical and almost severely serious gentleman, began to expand a theory which he has on countless other occasions brought to the music world's attention.

Instruction Based on Past

"You see, a young student—what is he taught? He works in traditional harmony and sixteenth-century counterpoint. He deals with the music of the past. His instruction is based on another age's instruction. And what happens? When he goes out to compose, when he is on his own, he discovers that the music of his day does not conform to the traditional ideas he has been taught. That, of course, upsets him completely, and he must find for himself a way to reconcile the new and the old.

"This situation results, I believe; in all the 'isms' apparent in modern music. It is also responsible for a book which I wrote, 'The Shaping Forces in Music,' in which I have concentrated on the subjects common to music in any and all times. The subtitle, by the way, is 'An Inquiry into Harmony, Melody, Composition, Form,' and the book's motto, which I took from Heraclitus, states 'Everything is in flux.' You understand, then, that I have studied the topic for years."

The noted Vienna-born musician cocked an ear in the direction of the song-full concert hall. Paul Hindemith's "Hin und Zuruck" was in rehearsal, to be followed by Mr. Toch's own "Princess." "No," he said, "they are not ready for me yet. We can continue. But here comes the greatest problem of all. You may teach a young man harmony, you may teach him counterpoint and form and rhythm—even you may instruct him in melody. But the one thing you cannot put into textbooks is creativity. Creativity is something—something, well not in any books. How can it be? Composing, after all, is not simply a matter of notes. There are other things behind it, things that start in your soul.

"I have to laugh. Today it is possible to get a Ph.D. in composition. Instead of writing a dissertation, you compose a symphony. So now we have certified composers, just like certified accountants. But it cannot be, it cannot be. Yes, all the musical elements can and must be shown to the young. And it's possible to guide, to help them use these elements; but after that, what? Good music is not written in ink, it is written in blood. I can explain better.

"There are compositions that start in the heart; from there their next station is the mind of the composer. From that point it travels over manuscript paper and then to the heart of the listener. In contrast, there are compositions that start on manuscript paper, travel over it and stop on the paper without arriving anywhere. And can you or I honestly teach the difference between one or the other? No, the heart is inside of you. You cannot give instructions to the heart."

With such finality was the foregoing said, that it seemed appropriate to change the topic. Tanglewood appeared a likely choice, since Mr. Toch had not, before his recent appointment as teacher of composition, ever even seen the vast and lovely grounds.

An Ideal Spot

"Tanglewood," he began, "is an ideal spot in all respects. The landscape, the climate, the student body are grand. Of course, it is practically impossible to attend all the activities—there is so much. And it is difficult, I think, for my pupils, too. You see, I meet my class as a whole once a week. Then I teach each member singly once a week for an hour and a half. That's when the real work is done. Still, with only six weeks to the summer semester you hardly get to know each other. Besides, there are so many events to follow. There are forums and lectures and contests and rehearsals, and no one, naturally, likes to miss any. They shouldn't either, for its miraculous compressed chance to imbibe music and knowledge. Such an opportunity I never had. In fact, I was trained as a physician and am self-taught as a composer."

Mr. Toch, who lives in California, continued by stating that he was born in 1887, had studied music on the sly, won several awards and, in 1932, arrived for the first time in America. Since then he has taught at the New School for Social Research and the Universities of Southern California and Oregon.

An Illustration

Additionally, as he put it, "I have composed regularly. That reminds me again of what I said about creativity. Several years ago in Europe I was attending a rehearsal of one of my works when a woman came to me and said, 'I hear that you were at a concert where my latest composition was performed. How,' she asked belligerently, 'did you like it?'

"To this I shook my head sadly," and she pounced on me. 'You are wrong,' she cried. 'I will show you you are wrong. Look at the score—every phrase of it equals every other phrase, every measure has its counterpart. It's perfect. Everything comes out even.'"

Mr. Toch rose from our bench and sighed. "Now," he asked, doesn't that tell the whole story?"

Ernst Toch

N.Y. Herald-Tribune Aug. 2

Munch and Burgin Share Podium at Tanglewood

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 1.—The fourth week end of concerts in the great shed at Tanglewood drew the season's largest audiences. Charles Munchc, the musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, shared the podium with his concertmaster and associate conductor, Richard Burgin, who was given this afternoon's program for his first appearance as leader of a major concert in the Berkshire festivals. He chose a popular program in which he had the brilliant assistance of his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, in the Khatchaturian concerto.

The weather was a very important factor in these last two concerts. Mr. Munch was forced to stop his program just after a few bars of the Queen Mab of Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliette" Saturday night when a heavy shower, which had been threatening, finally deluged the several thousands of the audience who had bivouacked on the adjacent lawns.

The rain itself was not reason fo. the cessation of the music, but the commotion raised by that part of the audience that had been under the skies, or rather the clouds, coming in under the shelter of the roof was too disturbing to allow the music to go on. Mr. Munch wisely decided to declare an intermission at that point, and when he resumed after a rest, except for one threatening rumble, the symphony proceeded to the end without incident from the weather.

There had been plenty of emotional upheaval, however, in the intense performance Mr. Munch gave. The huge festival chorus enlisted from the student body of the Berkshire Music Center, the school which is a part of the activities of the summer Tanglewood season, sang for Mr. Munch with terrific impact. In the final scene, before Pere Laurence ominously reproached the quarreling families, the chorus rose to superlative splendor above a level loftily maintained during the whole drama. The Friar Laurence was sung by Nicola Mascona; Beatrice Krebs as Juliette was most impressive in her "premieres transports." John McCollum was excellent if not quite melancholy as Romeo.

Miss Posselt was sure and true in her concerto this afternoon. Near the close of the first movement her E string broke, but with magnificent sang-froid she handed her Guarnerius to acting assistant concert-master George Zozofsky, took his stradivarius and went on to complete the movement. She resumed on her own instrument before the andante, Mr. Burgin's program was calculated for popular appeal. The William Schuman "American Festival Overture," the Vaughan Williams fantasia on a theme of Tallis and the Sibelius second symphony pleased the huge audience and earned him endless recalls.

Saturday afternoon was also the fourth week end of concerts in Collidge Hall on South Mountain where, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago and the Elizabeth Sprage Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress in Washington, a series of six programs is being given. The program played by Alexander Schneider, violin; John Barrows, horn, and Artur Balsam, piano, consisted of the Brahms F major sonata for horn and piano an dalso his E flat trio for violin, horn and piano. There were two new compositions: A trio of Hugo Kauder and a sonata for violin and piano of Ben Weber, both commissioned by the Fromm Foundation.

The Kauder trio is a modal work. It is excellently placed for the horn and is well integradted with the other instruments, but it tended to be hollow or possibly more like a framework not filled in. It was quiet and reflective and placid. The extremely capable artists did not seem to have anything tto convei in their reading.

FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS
JUL 10 1954

Program Is Listed For Second Week At Tanglewood

A Wednesday night program of chamber music will open the second week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tan[redacted]. The Albeneri Trio will play Brahms' Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu's Trio in D minor; and Beethoven's Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

An all-Bach program, including a cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, are listed for the Friday night Theater-Concert Hall program.

Bach's Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott," will be played for the first time at Tanglewood.

The full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Pierre Monteux as guest conductor and Vera Franceschi as piano soloist, will present a program of Debussy, (excerpts from "St. Sebastian," and "La Mer") and Franck, ("Les Djinns" and Symphony in D Minor). First performances of "St. Sebastian" and "Les Djinns" will be given at this Saturday night concert.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Symphony Orchestra in a program of Debussy Copland and Berlioz, with Leo Smit as piano soloist, Sunday afternoon, July 18.

[256]

Munch Program Brisk, Pleasant

B. Post July 31

Tanglewood, Mass. — Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony opened their fourth week of music-making here at Tanglewood last night with a brisk and, for them, adventurous program.

The selections, played before a wildly enthusiastic audience of 2,500 people, ran from Mozart's Paris Symphony on up to the meaningless Ibert Flute Concerto and excerpts from Roussel's ballet suite "The Spider's Feast."

* * *

IN BETWEEN these two came a performance of Mozart's Serenade for Eight Winds, the eight winds being two each from the oboe, bassoon, horn and clarinet departments. It was quite a composition and quite a performance.

These eight men, all first and second chair players, performed with such spirit and ensemble feeling that they deserve individual credit: Ralph Gomberg and Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi and Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano and Harry Shapiro, French horns, and Sherman Walt and Ernst Panenka, bassoons. Separately they were incomparable, together they were perfection.

* * *

DR. MUNCH, and he was greatly responsible for the perfection of the Mozart Serenade, conducted the Roussel and the Ibert with his customary capture of everything Gallic and joyous in the French repertoire.

Doriot Anthony Dwyer was the soloist in the Ibert Concerto. She played the flute extraordinarily fine last night. Although the concerto gives her a marvelous opportunity to show off, it does not provide her with any opportunity to make music. Thus her performance was all show and brilliance, signifying little.

It was a happy discovery to find Samuel Mayes, the orchestra's first cellist, back in harness after a siege of illness. It was, in fact, a very pleasant evening of music all the way around.—E. C.

Berkshire Programs Now in Fifth Week

The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, Sunday afternoon (August 8) in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

The Kroll String Quartet, under the leadership of William Kroll, violin, who with Richard Burgin heads the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center, consists also of Louis Graeler, violin; David Markovitz, viola, Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello, and will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular Wednesday evening Chamber Music series.

Summer Opera in Three Stages

AARON COPLAND'S opera, "The Tender Land," in a revised and expanded version, will be performed tomorrow and Tuesday by the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Producing an opera at Tanglewood, which is in the heart of the Berkshire mountains, is a more bucolic process than musicians—normally a breed of city dwellers—are accustomed to, as these three pictures indicate.

Top, opera department head Frederic Cohen consults with Mr. Copland and conductor Frederic Waldman; students auditioning for roles surround them. Center, rehearsals have progressed from the outdoor grass to an impromptu set in a barn. Below, the cast moves to the finished set for a last run-through.

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 21 1954

IN BOSTON . . .

WGBH-FM set to tape all of Boston Symphony Orchestra's major concerts at Tanglewood this summer for delayed broadcasts. Station will also tape student concerts, lectures and events at Berkshire Music Centre summer school for fall broadcasts . . . WBZ-TV debuts local hour-long variety show, to be aired Monday through Friday, Monday. by Nelson Bragg with localites [illegible] hosted the vocalizing . . . Lt. Com. [illegible] handling been named Commanding Officer of [illegible] engineer, has Division 1-8 . . . [illegible] Reserve Submarine brated the first anni[illegible] and tv editor, celeweek . . . WBMS moves [illegible] What's Old," last Hotel, which was recently sold to B[illegible] ers at the Shelton Aug. 1 . . . George E. Probst, [illegible] the Hotel Somerset has been named program director and [illegible] of the U. of Chicago, WGBH-FM and WGBH-TV. Latter sta[illegible] general manager of tional outlet, is expected to hit the air ne[illegible] channel 2 educa-

WORCESTER, MASS
GAZETTE
JUL 1 - 1954

Tanglewood Concert Series Opens July 9

TANGLEWOOD, July 1—Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will arrive in New York Friday by Air France from Paris, and will drive to Lenox to his Summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch immediately will prepare for his Summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth Summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer School of Music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

First Concert July 9

Mr. Munch will give his first concert July 9 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood at 8.30 p. m., an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. On Saturday, July 10, he will inaugurate the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this Summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer.

Conducted in France

During his month vacation in France, at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony's 73d season, Mr. Munch conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg, where at the Cathedral St. Andre he has also performed Berlioz' Biblical work, "L'Enfance du Christ." He conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood Sunday at 3.30 p. m., and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston orchestra on Wednesday afternoon. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 o'clock, July 10, preceding the first Music Shed concert, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund, will be open to the public for $1, a pattern for succeeding Saturday mornings during the festival.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 9 - 1954

Weekly Exhibits Again Tanglewood Feature

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture and photographs again will be a feature of the Berkshire Music festival season, housed in the reception hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, through the courtesy of the Berkshire museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry, it was announced today.

Three large wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn, of West Stockbridge, will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer in the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. They are "Early Spring," a seven-foot study symbolizing a plant unfolding, done last winter at the artist's studio in Glen Head, L. I.; "School of Fish," a laminated work 60 inches long, mounted on wooden base, created in 1953; and "Horses," a panel two feet by five feet, finished this year.

The first art exhibit at Tanglewood is of photographs of music and musicians, entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge road, which was recently housed in Carnegie hall, New York city.

Next week will feature an exhibit of sculpture by Miss Franc Epping of Lenox, director of the Sculpture workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox library gardens. Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz school of art at the Lenox school, will exhibit paintings a week commencing July 19. Additional sculpture and paintings of Homer Gunn will be on display the week of July 26. Miss Carol Cleworth, of Stockbridge, will show modern paintings a week beginning Aug. 2. From Aug. 9 to 15, paintings will be on view by Lawrence R. McCoy, vice president of the Southern Vermont Art center, Manchester, Vt.

PORTLAND, ORE.
OREGONIAN
JUL 4 1954

Young Conductor Billed

BLOOMFIELD—The young American conductor Theodore Bloomfield will direct Portland's Symphony orchestra in two concerts November 1 and November 15.

During his brief but promising career, Bloomfield has conducted both here and abroad, gaining the continued approval of critics. Since graduation from Oberlin conseryatory and Julliard Graduate school, he has studied with Pierre Monteux and George Szell. He was appointed Szell's personal assistant with the Cleveland orchestra in 1946. The next year, Bloomfield founded the Cleveland Little Symphony and has served as its director since then.

His European conducting debut was in Como in 1952, and since that time he has appeared with orchestras in Milan, Palermo, Vienna, and Catania. In this country he has been guest director for the Berkshire Music festival (Tanglewood), the ABC symphony, and 30 nationwide broadcasts by the Cleveland orchestra in 1951.

Guest artist for Bloomfield's first concert here November 1 will be Eugene Istomin, pianist. Other musical figures to appear during the coming season include Enrique Jorda, Carlos Chavez, and Astrid Varnay.

THEODORE BLOOMFIELD
Billed to lead orchestra

[257]

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 13 1954

Albeneri Trio At Tanglewood

The Albeneri Trio will give a recital on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, second in the new and popular series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts now incorporated into the Berkshire Festival.

Now in its sixth season, the Albeneri Trio is headed by pianist Erich Itor Kahn who was born in Rimbach, Germany. Mr. Kahn received his musical training in Europe at the Frankfurt-am-Main Conservatory. He concertized throughout Europe and toured with Pablo Casals until becoming a United States resident in 1954. He has composed for orchestra and chamber groups and was awarded the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge medal for "eminent services to chamber music" in 1948.

First Italian violinist in many years to win the first prize at the Paris Conservatoire, Giorgio Ciompi, the Albeneri Trio's violinist, was born in Florence, Italy. His recital debut at New York's Town Hall took place in 1938 when he was 20. Concerts in Europe followed, as well as advanced study wtih Georges Enesco, until the outbreak of the recent world war. On his return to this country, where he took up permanent residence in 1947, Mr. Ciompi returned to the concert stage in recital and with the Albeneri Trio.

Benar Heifetz, 'cellist, launched his career with a recital at the age of 12. Born in Russia, Mr. Heifetz studied at the St. Petersburg Conservatory and at the Master School in Leipzig, Germany. His solo career continued until 1926 when he joined the Kolisch Quartet in Vienna, with which group he concertized throughout the world. A resident of the United States since 1937, Mr. Heifetz—before joining the Albeneri Trio—was first 'cellist of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra and member of the NBC Symphony Orchestra under Arturo Toscanini.

A few seats, at $2.00 and $3.00, remain for the Wednesday evening program which will consist of Brahms' Trio in B, Op. 8; Trio in D Minor by Martinu, and Beethoven's "Archduke" Trio. Telephone reservations are accepted at the box office, Tanglewood, telephone, Lenox 600, Lenox. Admission tickets, entitling holders to listen from the Tanglewood lawns, will be sold a few hours before the program begins. In case of rain, the concert will be held in the Music Shed.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 12 1954

Large Crowds At Tanglewood Over Weekend

Fine weekend weather brought thousands to Tanglewood at Lenox for the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival, both held in the big Music Shed.

Altho the chamber music concerts, held earlier in the week, are drawing larger and larger crowds, it is the big concerts that fill the lawns of Tanglewood with listeners. It is estimated that there were 10,500 on hand for the Sunday afternoon program alone.

On Saturday night Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony and director of the Berkshire Music Center, led the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" as part of the celebration of Berliaz's 150th anniversary.

Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux of France conducted a Beethoven program consisting of the Overture to "Leonore" No. 3, the "Emperor" Concerto with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, and the Fifth Symphony.

M. Monteux is 79, but his spirit is young and vigorous and the program was received with much admiration.

Mr. Arrau also won high praise as pianist of meticulous skill. It must be remembered also that when the Boston Symphony plays Beethoven, all staleness drops from these classic masterpieces and the grandeur stands forth.

This week the Albeneri Trio will present the chamber music program Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall, and Charles Munch will conduct an all-Bach concert Friday night with the chamber orchestra in the same place.

Saturday night M. Monteux will lead the full orchestra in a Cesar Franck program in the Music Shed, and Sunday afternoon compositions by Debussy, Copland, and Berlioz will be conducted by Charles Munch.

COXSACKIE, N.Y
UNION
7/9/54

Players and Pipers

By John and Betty Bagley

"FINIAN'S RAINBOW"
by
E. Y. Harburg, Fred Saidy and Burton Lane
Directed by Michael Howard
Sets by Robert Jillson
Choreography, Betty Lind
Musical Directors: Abba Bogin and Norma Champainer
Starring
Susan Reed — Alan Gilbert
Michael Lewin

Anyone who likes social satire, an Ogden Nash twist of rhyme, leprechauns, good dancing and happy tunes will have a fine time attending the lively produciton of "Finian's Rainbow" at the Woodstock Playhouse this week. Rock-ribbed conservatives, who have stored their sense of humor in mothballs for the summer, are the only people who can think of who might not have fun.

Leonardo Cimine as Og plays as convincing a leprechaun as one could hope to see, (with the aid of intricate business which must have kept some stage-hand on constant alert throughout the evening). Michael Lewin is good as Irish Finian who spirits Og's pot of gold to America, thereby providing the plot.

Susan Reed, Finian's daughter, has a sweet voice, which she used to especially good advantage in "Old Devil Moon," a duet, with the male lead, Alan Gilbert. Mr. Gilbert, who played the part of Woody in the London Production, has a good voice and gives the most finished performance of the evening.

Betty Lind dances the part of the mute, Susan Mahoney, with distinction. We liked Miss Purcell's singing of "Necessity"; Bernard Kate's acting of Senator Billboard Rawkins; Heywood Hale Broun's Buzz Collins, and the various contributions of acting and singing by Charles Queenan.

This is an ambitious undertaking for a summer theatre which has been brought off surprisingly well by Director Michael Howard and his technical aids.

One of the delights of heaven will surely be a performance of Mozart's G Major quartet, K 387, by the Berkshire String Quartet like the one given Sunday at Music Mountain. As the newspaper critic will get through the pearly gates, even with a press card, we are happy to have been present Sunday.

After the Mozart, Bruce Simonds joined the proup in playing Brahm's Quintet in F Minor for piano and strings. Mr. Simonds is an accomplished musician and ensemble player who avoided the common tendency of the pianist to overwhelm the strings. The long concert closed with the Beethoven quartet, Opus 59, No. 2, in E Minor, which we think is one of the master's lesser works.

Since we last heard them in 1952, the members of the quartet have improved the balance and unity of their playing, which last Sunday was as smooth as if one mind and spirit controlled the instruments. They have an advantage over many summer string groups in playing togetner throughout the year as quartet in residence at Indiana University, where they perform and teach chamber music.

This summer's series at Music Mountain will be devoted to music of Beethoven, Mozart and Brahms, next Sunday's program being all Beethoven. Programs for the later recitals have not been announced. Some of Beethoven's chamber music is, of course, difficult to grasp, but anyone who likes a tune will enjoy Mozart's chamber music. As for Brahms—in spite of his reputation for scholarly aridity and solemnity, he has innumerable singable melodies and whenever we hear his music, we have a sense of exploration and discovery. In Sunday's quintet, for example, several portions amazingly foreshadowed the rhythms and melodic devices of twentieth century music.

If you're not going to spend all your summer music money and time at the heavily Berlioz-laden Tanglewood concerts, we suggest a Sunday afternoon trip to Music Mountain. Concerts at 4; $2. admission; most men wear jackets. It's a beautiful ninety-minute, forty-five mile trip from Catskill or Kingston through Millerton to Lime Rock, Conn. Call us for short-cut, back road information on getting to Music Mountain or Tanglewood. By the way, there are two delightful picnic spots within three miles of Music Mountain.

At the theatres:

Woodstock Playhouse, July 13-18, "Mr. Roberts."

Malden Bridge Playhouse, July 13-18 and July 20-25, "My Three Angels".

Berkshire Playhouse, July 12-17, "My Three Angels".

Berkshire Musical Festival:

July 9, evening, all Bach program including Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6 with piano solo by Lukas Foss. July 10, evening, "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz with Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists.

July 11, afternoon, all Beethoven program, "Leonore" overture No. 3, "Emperor" concerto with Claudio Arrau soloist, and Symphony No. 5.

July 14, evening, The Alberneri Trio playing Brahms, B Major; Martinu, D Minor; and Beethoven, B flat trios.

July 10 at 4 p. m. Alexander Schneider, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist, will open a series of three Beethoven concerts at South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mass.

July 11 at 4 p. m. the Berkshire String Quartet also play an all Beethoven concert at Music Mountain, including Trio Op. 8, and two quartets, Op. 95 and 132.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, July 9 and 10, matinee and night, John Butler Dance Theatre; Michael Maule and Mary Ellen Moylan, classical ballet; and the Ernestis, American Indian Dancers.

July 10 at 4 p. m. there will be chamber music at the Maverick Concert Hall in Woodstock.

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 2 - 1954

Munch Arrives, Tanglewood Season Ready To Open

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, arr[illegible] York today by Air France from Paris, and will drive to Lenox, Saturday to his summer residence at Elm Court.

Mr. Munch will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert July 9 with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

The following night, July 10, he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performances of Berlioz' "The Damnation Of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Elea[illegible] (Marguerite), David Polerl (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust," will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Perlioz society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.

During the distinguished conductor's month vacation in France, at the conclusion of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 73rd season, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg, where at the Cathedral St. Andre he has just performed Berloz' biblical work, "L'Enfance du Christ." He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

Mr. Munch will address Opening Exercises of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre Concert Hall at Tanglewood this Sunday afternoon and will have his first rehearsal with the Boston Symphony orchestra on July 7. The Saturday morning rehearsal at 10 a. m., July 10, for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Pension Fund, will be open to the public for the nominal admission of $1, a pattern to be followed on succeeding Saturday mornings during the Berkshire Festival.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.
REGISTER
JUL 18 1954

Berkshire Music Festival Concerts This Week

Several Tanglewood premieres will be given during the coming week of concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival. Three of the four concerts in this third week of programs will have premiere performances, those on Wednesday and Friday evenings and that on next Sunday afternoon.

The entire program by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, to be given in the Theater-Concert Hall on Wednesday evening at 8:30, will represent first Tanglewood performances. This chamber music program consists of Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," Stravinsky's "Apollon Musagete," and Rossini's "Sonata" for violins, cellos, and double bass. The 21 man Sinfonietta, founded by the Boston Orchestra cellist, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening.

Friday's concert, by the chamber group of the Boston Orchestra, will have a premiere in the performance of Haydn's Mass No. 3 in D minor. The Festival Chorus and soloists will assist in this performance which is to be conducted by Hugh Ross. The instrumental portion of this concert, consisting of Handel's Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op 6, No. 4, and Haydn's "Military" Symphony, will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Nichole Henriot, the accomplished young French artist who has thrilled Woolsey Hall listeners with her piano wizardry on several occasions, will be the soloist in Saturday evening's concert. She will be heard in the Liszt E flat major Concerto. The balance of Saturday's program will be made up of Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony; the Strauss tone poem, "Don Juan"; and the "Enigma" Variations of Edward Elgar. The full Boston Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel, will participate in this concert.

Another first Tanglewood presentation will come in next Sunday afternoon's concert, to be conducted by Mr. Munch. This is the Symphony No. 2, by the Austrian-American composer, Ernst Toch, who is a guest teacher of composition in the Berkshire Music Center this season. The Boston Orchestra gave the first American performances of the work during the 1952-53 season. Also listed in this program are two Berlioz works—the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the symphony, "Harold In Italy," with William Primrose as the Viola soloist.

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
JUL 19 1954

Berlioz Fantastic Symphony Heard At Berkshire Festival

Boston Orchestra Directed By Munch At Conclusion Of Event's 2nd Weekend

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD, N.Y., July 19 (HTNS)—The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival ended yesterday afternoon with the Berlioz Fantastic Symphony, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch. A refreshing but partially cloudy afternoon attracted an audience of 1,700, and encouraged the management to believe that their new plan for this season is a wise and viable one.

Instead of three weeks of smaller ensemble concerts in the theater concert hall, followed by three weeks by the entire orchestra playing in the great shed, there are Wednesday and Friday evenings in the concert hall and two concerts each of the six weekends in the shed. Saturday night there was an audience of 8,500.

Entrancing Contrast

Mr. Munch drew exquisitely poignant tone from his virtuoso orchestra in the "Parfums de la Nuit" from the Debussy Iberia. The surrounding movements were properly boisterous and gross so that the contrast of the central movement was all the more entrancing.

In the Copland early Concerto for the piano the soloist was Leo Smith. He contributed to the general triumph of the performance, although the composer has given him scant opportunity to emerge above the tremendous orchestra for which he has written.

Mr. Copland, who is assistant dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by Koussevitzky in 1940 in connection with the festival concerts, was present in the audience. After the soloist and conductor had been recalled several times, the composer was called to the stage to share the enthusiasm the performance had excited.

Unalloyed Jazz

The slow lyric first part is luscious Hollywood via the Boulangerie at Place de Clichy. The second and more rhythmic section which follows without interruption, is pure and unalloyed jazz. Mr. Smith and Mr. Munch caught its spirit and conveyed the infection to the large audience to their complete delight.

Saturday night Pierre Monteux, making the second of his two guest appearances with the orchestra, brought fresh spirit and vitality to the Franck Symphony.

He avoided the pitfalls of the innumerable ritards and allargandos by picking up the tempo at a buoyant pace. He led with easy security and the orchestra played for him with their full palette of colors.

Excerpts From Debussy

He began his program with excerpts from Debussy's incidental music to Gabriele Dgjannunzio's "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien," and after the Franck symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," again returned to Debussy, this time to "La Mer."

For the Franck poem the piano soloist was Vera Franceschi who made the most of a not too rewarding assignment. She played with poise and eloquence and did not attempt to make more of the solo than it provided.

The wind sections of the orchestra played with admirable cohesion and tonal balance for Mr. Monteux in the "Saint-Sebastien," especially in the prelude to the first act in which the strings have only a minor part.

[258]

THE ORIGINAL
ROMEIKE
PRESS CLIPPINGS
220 W. 19th St., NEW YORK 11, N.Y.
Tel. CHelsea 3-8860
Cir. (D 13,210)
This Clipping From
NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUN 25 1954

Music Center Student Registration Already Has Passed 375-Mark

Student registration at the Berkshire Music Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, has passed the 375-mark, Miss Edith A. Bossler, registrar, said today. Additional applications will be processed daily until the full enrollment of 400-450 is reached before the students begin arriving from most of the 48 states, Canada and foreign countries, for the opening of the 12th season Sunday, July 4.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, is director of the Berkshire Music center, compoesr Aaron Copland is assistant director, Ralph Berkowitz is dean, and Boston Symphony manager-elect Thomas D. Perry, Jr., is executive secretary with Gail Rector as his assistant.

Enrollment is ahead of last year when 345 students had registered at this time. The 375 students registered to date include 112 in the two-year-old Tanglewood study group, 35 of whom are spending the full six weeks at Tanglewood, 22 four weeks, and 55 two-week terms. The study group offers advanced students of music, professional or amateur, an opportunity to spend their vacations in absorption of music. Lucas Foss heads the department this summer. Last year 92 students had registered in the study group by mid-June.

As against last summer's 14 foreign students, Miss Bossler reports 30 to date, 12 from Canada, four from Cuba, three each from France and Israel, one each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti. The study group includes seven from Canada, one each from France and Haiti.

A mother and son are students enrolled at the Berkshire Music Center, Mrs. Keith Rogers, president of the Island Radio Broadcasting Company, and her son, William Keith Rogers, musical director of radio station CFCY, both of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada. There are three husband-wife combinations, also three heads of music departments of various colleges.

Students at the Berkshire Music center study orchestra playing and conducting under Jean Morel of the Juilliard School of Music, New York city; chamber music under first-chair members of the Boston Symphony orchestra; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition under Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and guest composer Ernst Toch; opera under Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School, or are enrolled in the Tanglewood Study group under Mr. Foss.

Tanglewood Tales

Student Orchestra
Battles the Elements

During last week's concert by the student symphony orchestra in Tanglewood's Music Shed, when thunder, lightning and a torrential downpour added spectacular effects to the music, but did not dampen the ardor of 2,500 spectators, the downpour on the Shed roof was so noisy that three trumpets and one trombone had to sound the "A" before students could hear to tune their instruments.

* * *

Berkowitz To Tour
With Piatigorsky

When the Berkshire Music Center ends its 12th season Sunday, Aug. 15, dean Ralph Berkowitz will sail to Europe on the Queen Mary with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, for whom he will serve as accompanist on an extended concert tour, commencing with a month in Rome.

* * *

Two BSO Musicians
To Retire Soon

Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be honored by their orchestra conferes, on their retirement, at a luncheon at the Tanglewood cafeteria at 12:30 on Friday, following the morning rehearsal under Charles Munch in the Music Shed. They are Samuel Leon Gorodetzky, second violin, who joined the orchestra, then conducted by Pierre Monteux, in 1920, and who makes his home in Brookline, with his wife and son; and Georges Fourel, viola, who was brought to the U.S. by Mr. Monteux to join the orchestra in 1921, and who also lives in Brookline with his wife and two daughters.

Mr. Gorodetzky, a native of Paris, graduated from the New England Conservatory, where he held a scholarship. He studied piano, but specialized in violin study with Gruenberg, Winternitz and Witek, giving many recitals and concerts. He teaches and coaches violin and in his spare time tries his hand at sculpture, painting and photography. Born in Grenoble, France, Mr. Fourel attended the Lycee at Donai and Alancon, won first prize in viola at the Paris Conservatory under Lafarge, studied orchestra under Vincent D'Indy. He entered the Lamoureux Symphony Orchestra in 1912; now teaches viola and string quarter at the New England Conservatory. He owns violas made by Hieronymas and Amati.

They have been succeeded, respectively, in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by Jesse Ceci, violin, and John Fiasca, viola. Mr. Ceci, of Philadelphia, was a pupil of Hilsberg at the Curtis School of Music, played in the American Youth Orchestra, the Dumbarton Oaks orchestra, attended Julliard School of Music, won a Fulbright scholarship to study at the Paris Conservatory, and also studied at the Ecole Normale de Musique de Paris. He has recently played in the St. Louis Sinfonietta, and was assistant concertmaster last season of the New Orleans Symphony. Mr. Fiasca, of Los Angeles, was first violist under Leon Barzin at the Greek Theater there this summer. He studied at Wisconsin College of Music, went to Juilliard on a fellowship, became assistant first violist in the St. Louis Symphony. He has held this position in the National Symphony (Washington, D.C.), the Portland (Ore.) Symphony, and with Columbia Pictures. He was a student at Tanglewood in 1942, has spent three summers with the Chautauqua Symphony and two with the Hollywood Bowl orchestra.

* * *

Julius Fleischmann
Coming to Festival

Cincinnati industrialist and patron of the arts, Julius Fleischmann, will attend the final two weekends of the Berkshire Festival, arriving next week with his family to stay at the Red Lion, Stockbridge, and proprietor Heaton Treadway is hosting a cocktail party in his honor Saturday. Mr. Fleischmann has long been the No. 1 "angel" of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, which, after a couple of inactive seasons he is reactivating for a national tour this season. With his theatrical partners, Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers, he has produced on Broadway such outstanding hits of recent times as "Goodbye, My Fancy," starring Madeleine Carroll; Shaw's "Ceasar and Cleopatra" with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lilli Palmer; "The Devil's Deciple" with Maurice Evans and Dennis King; "The Moon Is Blue" with Barbara Bel Geddes. Mr. Fleischmann is also active in Mr. Aldrich's two Music Circuses on Cape Cod and his prosperous Cape Playhouse, at Dennis, and Connamesset Theater, at Falmouth.

Mr. Fleischmann has a pleasant association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra through his active interest in the Congress for Cultural Freedom, the worldwide organization of philanthropists who have been waging a cultural war against the agression of communism. It was the Congress—and Mr. Fleischmann—who invited the Boston Symphony in 1952 to Paris for the huge exposition of the arts, "Masterpieces of the 20th Century," and made financially possible the orchestra's subsequent tour of European capitals.

* * *

Springfield Chorus
To Appear at Festival

Alexander Leslie will bring 50 voices of his 125-man Springfield Symphony Chorus to perform, with the student Festival Chorus, in the Berkshire Festival's concluding concert, the Berlioz "Requiem" which Charles Munch conducts Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15. Organized 10 years ago, the chorus is part of the Springfield Symphony, and has performed the Brahms "Schicksalslied," Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," the Mozart C minor Mass, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the Messiah, and the Verdi Requiem.

The Springfield Symphony Orchestra and chorus, under Mr. Leslie's conductorship, performed the Berlioz "Requiem" with full musical forces, assisted by Paul Knowles, tenor, in the Springfield Municipal Auditorium on Oct. 28, 1952, two months after the work was given its Tanglewood premiere by Mr. Munch.

Bushkin To Play
For Parade Waltz

Joe Bushkin, the popular jazz pianist and trumpeter, who is studying composition with Lukas Foss this summer while summering with his family in Richmond, will provide music for waltzing on the lawn, which winds up the Tanglewood on Parade festivities on Friday, Aug. 13.

* * *

Mystery Cleared Up
On Missing Programs

If last weekend's Berkshire Festival patrons were short of programs, here is why: 3,000 books were missing from the shipment sent by the Boston printer each week to Tanglewood, and after many telephone calls they were found left on a freight elevator. They were shipped to Lenox railway express, were picked up by Tanglewood's college student guides, and taken to the male student's residence at Wheatleigh, where they were mistaken in their crates for foodstuff and locked up in the refrigerator for frozen fish.

* * *

just loud . . . Tanglewood guest conductor Jean Morel has advanced to beat the band, or at least three members of it. Had reunion with Boston Orchestra musicians Albert Bernard, Gaston Dufresne and Einer Hanson. All four toured Spain 30 years ago in same orchestra, Morel handling the tympani, least auspicious post in any orchestra. Now he's leader . . . Perry Nussbaum is third rabbi to leave same Pittsfield congregation for the South, and the second to go to Mississippi. Rabbi Saul Habas went there few years ago, and Rabbi Solomon Cherniak went to Mobile, Ala. . . . Reference to "Rigg" in Scottish program at Jacob's Pillow led us to ask Celtic Ballet Director Margaret Morris the meaning of Bonnie Rigg (Four Corners). Says Bonnie Rigg means fine stand of rye growing in field. Only rye nowadays at Bonnie Rigg is in bottles . . . Eagle music critic who fights down puns day and night reports self on verge of writing in Tanglewood review, "Doriot Anthony's flute tone was more liquid than ever even though she is now Dwyer." Just wed to Dr. Dwyer, you! . . . Good crowd as Sculpture Workshop opening in Lenox Library gardens, though rain sprinkled exhibits near 6 p.m. closing. Renewed acquaintance with exhibitors Marthe Poncy, Franc Epping and Pink Horwitt. Sculptors said to be most devoted to their work of all creative artists. Their product solid, three dimensions and may be laid hold of. Exhibit continues through Aug. 10.

—o—

OUTDOOR FILING system of Librarian Bob Newman assures his locating his car in parking lot readily after a big night at Tanglewood. He raises the radio antenna as high as it will go and puts a mitten on it.

—o—

JUST WHAT was up wasn't quite clear to local hosts who helped entertain members of the U.N. secretariat a couple of weekends ago when the U.N. people were here as guests of the Workshop for World Understanding. Many U.N. reporters and photographers accompanied the visitors, and stories they were to send home would appear in some 25 different languages world-wide. But the photographers were specially insistent that they get photos of local people entering and leaving church. This was clearly an order from somewhere higher up. Religion is often a controversial matter, and the State Department has avoided it in seeking international good will. It was sensed that the U.N. felt this was a serious omission in the program, which stresses rather heavily the material phases of life in the U.S. The photographers were stationed in Park Square Sunday morning and took some fine shots of the Congregationalists and Episcopalians.

—o—

OVERHEARD AT Tanglewood, bright-eyed old lady asking guide in front of Tappan residence, "Is this the House of the Seven Gables?"

28,775 at Fest Despite Two Thunderstorms

TANGLEWOOD—Two rain storms during the week failed to dampen the enthusiasm of music lovers at Berkshire Festival events. A record crowd of 28,775 attended the week-long programs, including the student events and public rehearsal Saturday morning of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last week's total was 25,925; the second week, 23,200 and the first, 21,295.

The four BSO concerts, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday drew 21,825 to the theater-concert hall and Music Shed, compared to 18,600 last week.

Biggest crowd of the week turned out Saturday night when the BSO, with Charles Munch conducting, gave a performance of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," with the full Festival chorus and three soloists. That performance attracted 9,800, hundreds of whom were forced to flee for cover when a thunderstorm broke over the area shortly after the program opened. Yesterday afternoon 8,225 attended the BSO concert with Richard Burgin conducting.

Despite a heavy downpour Thursday evening, a crowd of 2,500 Friends of the Berkshire Music Center turned up in the Shed for the student orchestra's program. Wednesday night's concert attracted 1,300 and on Friday 2,500 were at the theater-concert hall.

Music

Festival Artists Win Over Storm, Broken Violin String

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

WHEN JAN SIBELIUS drove through Lenox 40 years ago on his way to lunch in Pittsfield, his second symphony was already 12 years old. The great ovation which was accorded its playing at the end of yesterday afternoon's program at Tanglewood when Richard Burgin, the Boston symphony orchestra's famous concertmaster, stepped from his seat at the head of the players to the podium for the first time at a major concert in the Berkshire Festivals, was a personal triumph for the conductor as well as a mark of the continuing reverence for the composer.

It was a curious fact that all the composers whom Burgin chose for his program yesterday happen to be living and that the respective works chosen are all the products of their creators' 37th year. Indeed, the same statement may be made of the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" which Charles Munch, the orchestra's musical director, played Saturday night. Concerning Burgin's program, it should naturally be noted that the Sibelius symphony and Vaughan-Williams' Fantasia on a theme of Tallis were written before William Schuman and Aram Khatchaturian were born.

Burgin made the Sibelius broad and eloquent and the Vaughan-Williams impressively resonant. The solos that fell to the first chairs were beautifully played in their turn, by violist Joseph de Pasquale, by acting concertmaster and his assistant violinists, Alfred Krips and George Zazofsky, and cellist Samuel Mayes. Burgin's accompaniment to the Khatchaturian concerto in which his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, was the soloist was a remarkable application of the conductor's knowledge of his own instrument to control of an orchestra. Miss Posselt has never played so magnificently. She was convincingly at ease, sure and secure in every intricate demand, comfortingly true in intonation. There was a sweep and apparent unconcern with the notes per se which raised the performance to one of the most memorable ever heard on that stage. In the long cadenza there is a dialogue between the solo and the clarinet and Burgin generously asked Gino Cioffi to stand at the completion of the concerto to share the enthusiastic tribute of the audience.

JUST AS the first movement was coming to an end, Miss Posselt's A string snapped. She quickly and deftly handed her Guarnerius to George Zazofsky and took his Stradivarius with the loss of scarcely an instant or of an iota of composure. Both Krips and Zazofsky gallantly offered the lady their violins in her distress, but she, equally chivalrous and observant of protocol, did not disarm the concertmaster but left him equipped for his responsibilities and accepted the offer of his assistant. Zazofsky quickly replaced the broken string and the soloist's own instrument was ready for her at the beginning of the second movement.

Another incident of quite a different type but equally spectacular occurred Saturday evening when Charles Munch was conducting the Berlioz symphony with the assistance of the Festival chorus. The storm which had been growling and accumulating its power for the early part of the evening broke just as Munch was starting the Queen Mab scherzo. The great numbers of people who had taken vantage points outside the Shed and on the lawn made a rush for the shelter of the roof. The consequent disorder created such a buzz of flutter and whisper that Munch was forced to stop. Very wisely he made the decision to call the intermission then and there. It so turned out that the particular outburst was past when the audience was called to hear the second half and so the famous scherzo was played then before proceeding to the Funeral Procession of Juliet.

Continuing the observance of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' death, or, more accurately, repeating the observance made in Symphony hall in Boston in the past season, Munch added another medal to his collection in his devotion to the music of the great French originator of so many musical devices. The whole idea of a symphony with a chorus and solo voices to tell a story was new in this particular form. It is an achievement of tremendous proportions to prepare but the measure of its success was the joy both the details and the high light sections afforded as well as the over-all and complete accomplishment. The chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Anne Devere Barron, rose to its most impressive moments in the chorus of Capulets and Montagues preceding the minatory statements of Nicola Moscona as the Friar Laurence.

Beatrice Krebs, the contralto soloist, was immediately affecting in her complaints of the sad destiny of Romeo. John McCollum, tenor soloist, was spirited in his Queen Mab speech. Every factor under Munch's baton contributed to an amassment of tension and emotional excitement for a memorable evening.

AN INFORMAL CONCERT at Wheatleigh Thursday at 3 p.m. will be sponsored by the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. with Nathan G. Horwitt, right, as chairman. Among Tanglewood artists lined up are, left to right, Ralph Berkowitz, Leo Van Witsen, and Miss Ruth Posselt. Mac Morgan, master of ceremonies, will sing some of Aaron Copland's folk songs with Mr. Copland providing accompaniment. Manos

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the B.S.O. conducting a student rehearsal (right)

[259]

Tanglewood Tales

Student Orchestra Battles the Elements

During last week's concert by the student symphony orchestra in Tanglewood's Music Shed, when thunder, lightning and a torrential downpour added spectacular effects to the music, but did not dampen the ardor of 2,500 spectators, the downpour on the Shed roof was so noisy that three trumpets and one trombone had to sound the "A" before students could hear to tune their instruments.

* * *

Berkowitz To Tour With Piatigorsky

When the Berkshire Music Center ends its 12th season Sunday, Aug. 15, dean Ralph Berkowitz will sail to Europe on the Queen Mary with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, for whom he will serve as accompanist on an extended concert tour, commencing with a month in Rome.

* * *

Two BSO Musicians To Retire Soon

Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be honored by their orchestra confreres, on their retirement, at a luncheon at the Tanglewood cafeteria at 12:30 on Friday, following the morning rehearsal under Charles Munch in the Music Shed. They are Samuel Leon Gorodetzky, second violin, who joined the orchestra, then conducted by Pierre Monteux, in 1920, and who makes his home in Brookline, with his wife and son; and Georges Fourel, viola, who was brought to the U.S. by Mr. Monteux to join the orchestra in 1921, and who also lives in Brookline with his wife and two daughters.

Mr. Gorodetzky, a native of Paris, graduated from the New England Conservatory, where he held a scholarship. He studied piano, but specialized in violin study with Gruenberg, Winternitz and Witek, giving many recitals and concerts. He teaches and coaches violin and in his spare time tries his hand at sculpture, painting and photography. Born in Grenoble, France, Mr. Fourel attended the Lycee at Donai and Alancon, won first prize in viola at the Paris Conservatory under Lafarge, studied orchestra under Vincent D'Indy. He entered the Lamoureux Symphony Orchestra in 1912; now teaches viola and string quarter at the New England Conservatory. He owns violas made by Hieronymas and Amati.

They have been succeeded, respectively, in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by Jesse Ceci, violin, and John Fiasca, viola. Mr. Ceci, of Philadelphia, was a pupil of Hilsberg at the Curtis School of Music, played in the American Youth Orchestra, the Dumbarton Oaks orchestra, attended Julliard School of Music, won a Fulbright scholarship to study at the Paris Conservatory, and also studied at the Ecole Normale de Musique de Paris. He has recently played in the St. Louis Sinfonietta, and was assistant concertmaster last season of the New Orleans Symphony. Mr. Fiasca, of Los Angeles, was first violist under Leon Barzin at the Greek Theater there this summer. He studied at Wisconsin College of Music, went to Juilliard on a fellowship, became assistant first violist in the St. Louis Symphony. He has held this position in the National Symphony (Washington, D.C.), the Portland (Ore.) Symphony, and with Columbia Pictures. He was a student at Tanglewood in 1942, has spent three summers with the Chautauqua Symphony and two with the Hollywood Bowl orchestra.

* * *

Julius Fleischmann Coming to Festival

Cincinnati industrialist and patron of the arts, Julius Fleischmann, will attend the final two weekends of the Berkshire Festival, arriving next week with his family to stay at the Red Lion, Stockbridge, and proprietor Heaton Treadway is hosting a cocktail party in his honor Saturday. Mr. Fleischmann has long been the No. 1 "angel" of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, which, after a couple of inactive seasons he is reactivating for a national tour this season. With his theatrical partners, Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers, he has produced on Broadway such outstanding hits of recent times as "Goodbye, My Fancy," starring Madeleine Carroll; Shaw's "Ceasar and Cleopatra" with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lilli Palmer; "The Devil's Deciple" with Maurice Evans and Dennis King; "The Moon Is Blue" with Barbara Bel Geddes. Mr. Fleischmann is also active in Mr. Aldrich's two Music Circuses on Cape Cod and his prosperous Cape Playhouse, at Dennis, and Connamesset Theater, at Falmouth.

Mr. Fleischmann has a pleasant association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra through his active interest in the Congress for Cultural Freedom, the worldwide organization of philanthropists who have been waging a cultural war against the agression of communism. It was the Congress—and Mr. Fleischmann—who invited the Boston Symphony in 1952 to Paris for the huge exposition of the arts, "Masterpieces of the 20th Century," and made financially possible the orchestra's subsequent tour of European capitals.

* * *

Springfield Chorus To Appear at Festival

Alexander Leslie will bring 50 voices of his 125-man Springfield Symphony Chorus to perform, with the student Festival Chorus, in the Berkshire Festival's concluding concert, the Berlioz "Requiem" which Charles Munch conducts Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15. Organized 10 years ago, the chorus is part of the Springfield Symphony, and has performed the Brahms "Schicksalslied," Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," the Mozart C minor Mass, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the Messiah, and the Verdi Requiem.

The Springfield Symphony Orchestra and chorus, under Mr. Leslie's conductorship, performed the Berlioz "Requiem" with full musical forces, assisted by Paul Knowles, tenor, in the Springfield Municipal Auditorium on Oct. 28, 1952, two months after the work was given its Tanglewood premiere by Mr. Munch.

Mystery Cleared Up On Missing Programs

If last weekend's Berkshire Festival patrons were short of programs, here is why: 3,000 books were missing from the shipment sent by the Boston printer each week to Tanglewood, and after many telephone calls they were found left on a freight elevator. They were shipped to Lenox railway express, were picked up by Tanglewood's college student guides, and taken to the male student's residence at Wheatleigh, where they were mistaken in their crates for foodstuff and locked up in the refrigerator for frozen fish.

* * *

just loud . . . Tanglewood guest conductor Jean Morel has advanced to beat the band, or at least three members of it. Had reunion with Boston Orchestra musicians Albert Bernard, Gaston Dufresne and Einer Hanson. All four toured Spain 30 years ago in same orchestra, Morel handling the tympani, least auspicious post in any orchestra. Now he's leader . . . Perry Nussbaum is third rabbi to leave same Pittsfield congregation for the South, and the second to go to Mississippi. Rabbi Saul Habas went there few years ago, and Rabbi Solomon Cherniak went to Mobile, Ala. . . . Reference to "Rigg" in Scottish program at Jacob's Pillow led us to ask Celtic Ballet Director Margaret Morris the meaning of Bonnie Rigg (Four Corners). Says Bonnie Rigg means fine stand of rye growing in field. Only rye nowadays at Bonnie Rigg is in bottles . . . . Eagle music critic who fights down puns day and night reports self on verge of writing in Tanglewood review, "Doriot Anthony's flute tone was more liquid than ever even though she is now Dwyer." Just wed to Dr. Dwyer, you! . . . Good crowd as Sculpture Workshop opening in Lenox Library gardens, though rain sprinkled exhibits near 6 p.m. closing. Renewed acquaintance with exhibitors Marthe Poncy, Franc Epping and Pink Horwitt. Sculptors said to be most devoted to their work of all creative artists. Their product solid, three dimensions and may be laid hold of. Exhibit continues through Aug. 10.

—o—

OUTDOOR FILING system of Librarian Bob Newman assures his locating his car in parking lot readily after a big night at Tanglewood. He raises the radio antenna as high as it will go and puts a mitten on it.

—o—

JUST WHAT was up wasn't quite clear to local hosts who helped entertain members of the U.N. secretariat a couple of weekends ago when the U.N. people were here as guests of the Workshop for World Understanding. Many U.N. reporters and photographers accompanied the visitors, and stories they were to send home would appear in some 25 different languages world-wide. But the photographers were specially insistent that they get photos of local people entering and leaving church. This was clearly an order from somewhere higher up. Religion is often a controversial matter, and the State Department has avoided it in seeking international good will. It was sensed that the U.N. felt this was a serious omission in the program which d household goods. % or more. Sale days ave. 5 and morning of West St.—Adv. —3 blackop. 2-1472.—

28,775 at Festival Programs Despite Two Thunderstorms

TANGLEWOOD—Two rain storms during the week failed to dampen the enthusiasm of music lovers at Berkshire Festival events. A record crowd of 28,775 attended the week-long programs, including the student events and public rehearsal Saturday morning of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last week's total was 25,925; the second week, 23,200 and the first, 21,295.

The four BSO concerts, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday drew 21,825 to the theater-concert hall and Music Shed, compared to 18,600 last week.

Biggest crowd of the week turned out Saturday night when the BSO, with Charles Munch conducting, gave a performance of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet," with the full Festival chorus and three soloists. That performance attracted 9,800, hundreds of whom were forced to flee for cover when a thunderstorm broke over the area shortly after the program opened. Yesterday afternoon 8,226 attended the BSO concert with Richard Burgin conducting.

Despite a heavy downpour Thursday evening, a crowd of 2,500 Friends of the Berkshire Music Center turned up in the Shed for the student orchestra's program. Wednesday night's concert attracted 1,300 and on Friday 2,500 were at the theater-concert hall.

Music

Festival Artists Win Over Storm, Broken Violin String

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

WHEN JAN SIBELIUS drove through Lenox 40 years ago on his way to lunch in Pittsfield, his second symphony was already 12 years old. The great ovation which was accorded its playing at the end of yesterday afternoon's program at Tanglewood when Richard Burgin, the Boston symphony orchestra's famous concertmaster, stepped from his seat at the head of the players to the podium for the first time at a major concert in the Berkshire Festivals, was a personal triumph for the conductor as well as a mark of the continuing reverence for the composer.

It was a curious fact that all the composers whom Burgin chose for his program yesterday happen to be living and that the respective works chosen are all the products of their creators' 37th year. Indeed, the same statement may be made of the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" which Charles Munch, the orchestra's musical director, played Saturday night. Concerning Burgin's program, it should naturally be noted that the Sibelius symphony and Vaughan-Williams' Fantasia on a theme of Tallis were written before William Schuman and Aram Khatchaturian were born.

Burgin made the Sibelius broad and eloquent and the Vaughan-Williams impressively resonant. The solos that fell to the first chairs were beautifully played in their turn, by violist Joseph de Pasquale, by acting concertmaster and his assistant violinists, Alfred Krips and George Zazofsky, and cellist Samuel Mayes. Burgin's accompaniment to the Khatchaturian concerto in which his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, was the soloist was a remarkable application of the conductor's knowledge of his own instrument to control of an orchestra. Miss Posselt has never played so magnificently. She was convincingly at ease, sure and secure in every intricate demand, comfortingly true in intonation. There was a sweep and apparent unconcern with the notes per se which raised the performance to one of the most memorable ever heard on that stage. In the long cadenza there is a dialogue between the solo and the clarinet and Burgin generously asked Gino Cioffi to stand at the completion of the concerto to share the enthusiastic tribute of the audience.

JUST AS the first movement was coming to an end, Miss Posselt's A string snapped. She quickly and deftly handed her Guarnerius to George Zazofsky and took his Stradivarius with the loss of scarcely an instant or of an iota of composure. Both Krips and Zazofsky gallantly offered the lady their violins in her distress, but she, equally chivalrous and observant of protocol, did not disarm the concertmaster but left him equipped for his responsibilities and accepted the offer of his assistant. Zazofsky quickly replaced the broken string and the soloist's own instrument was ready for her at the beginning of the second movement.

Another incident of quite a different type but equally spectacular occurred Saturday evening when Charles Munch was conducting the Berlioz symphony with the assistance of the Festival chorus. The storm which had been growling and accumulating its power for the early part of the evening broke just as Munch was starting the Queen Mab scherzo. The great numbers of people who had taken vantage points outside the Shed and on the lawn made a rush for the shelter of the roof. The consequent disorder created such a buzz of flutter and whisper that Munch was forced to stop. Very wisely he made the decision to call the intermission then and there. It so turned out that the particular outburst was past when the audience was called to hear the second half and so the famous scherzo was played then before proceeding to the Funeral Procession of Juliet.

Continuing the observance of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz' death, or, more accurately, repeating the observance made in Symphony hall in Boston in the past season, Munch added another medal to his collection in his devotion to the music of the great French originator of so many musical devices. The whole idea of a symphony with a chorus and solo voices to tell a story was new in this particular form. It is an achievement of tremendous proportions to prepare but the measure of its success was the joy both the details and the high light sections afforded as well as the over-all and complete accomplishment. The chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Anne Devere Barron, rose to its most impressive moments in the chorus of Capulets and Montagues preceding the minatory statements of Nicola Moscona as the Friar Laurence.

Beatrice Krebs, the contralto soloist, was immediately affecting in her complaints of the sad destiny of Romeo. John McCollum, tenor soloist, was spirited in his Queen Mab speech. Every factor under Munch's baton contributed to an amassment of tension and emotional excitement for a memorable evening.

AN INFORMAL CONCERT at Wheatleigh Thursday at 3 p.m. will be sponsored by the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. with Nathan G. Herwitt, right, as chairman. Among Tanglewood artists lined up are, left to right, Ralph Berkowitz, Leo Van Witsen, and Miss Ruth Posselt. Mac Morgan, master of ceremonies, will sing some of Aaron Copland's folk songs with Mr. Copland providing accompaniment. Manos

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the B.S.O. conducting a student rehearsal (right)

"Music in the Berkshires"

A PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBIT

BY CLEMENS KALISCHER

The big shed at Tanglewood awaiting the flood of music lovers

Listening to a Sunday night composers forum at Tanglewood

Listners to a Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at Tanglewood.

In the sensitive hands of Clemens Kalischer, a camera is a Sixth Sense. Through it he opens a magic window upon reality, capturing moods and action which the ordinary eye cannot see. All of this is natural to him for he began his creative life as an artist. He soon found that a good photograph is worth several yards of canvas and reaches a much wider audience. Mr. Kalischer divides his time between Stockbridge, Mass., and New York City. He was born in Germany and brought up in France. After some time with the French Army, he spent nearly three years in concentration camps and finally reached the U.S. in 1942. His work appears in many leading national magazines. He has had exhibits in Rochester, Albany, Brooklyn, New York City, Paris and London.

"MUSIC IN THE BERKSHIRES", a one man photographic exhibit by Mr. Kalischer, is on view at the Berkshire Museum, in Pittsfield through July and August. Some of these evocative pictures were on display at Tanglewood during its opening week and also at Carnegie Hall Gallery during the past winter. A few of them appear on these pages. The exhibit reveals the diversity and growth of musical life in the Berkshire Hills, ranging from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood to the various nearby groups, such as South Mountain, Avaloch's First Festival of Medieval Music; the Pittsfield Community Music School, Indian Hill Music Workshop, Stockbridge Bell Ringers and others. In February, he will exhibit at the Kaufman Gallery at the 92nd St. 'Y' in N.Y.C.

Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the B.S.O. conducting a student rehearsal (right)

Emanuel Balabam of the Tanglewood faculty, enthuses over a composition by Julia Perry, young composer from Akron, Ohio (left)

MUSIC WORKSHOPS

"Music, when soft voice die,
Vibrates in the memory"

. . . Shelley

As he wrote these lines, Shelley might have had in mind something akin to the music festivals and work conferences which are held each summer in the various music centres. Not as numerous as the writer's conferences or as the art colonies, these centres are for professional musicians who attend for the purpose of perfecting their art.

Serious workers are found at music workshops and for the professional who wishes to study rather than merely 'summer', the conference type of music colony is suggested. As with the listings of art and writing, only the courses still available at this late date are published. There are excellent workshop courses available at other colonies, but registration deadline is already past.

k Music Workshop, Lenox, Mass.
Dr. Charles Carle, Director
Birchwood Barn, Lenox, Mass.

en Summer Institute, Aspen, Colorado

kshire Music Centre
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

l mouth Rock Center of Music and Drama
Duxbury, Mass.

d llwild School of Music and the Arts (ISOMATA)
San Jacinto Mts
Idlyllwild, California
(Dr. Max T. Krone, Director)

(An article on Isomata, called "California's Music Mountain" appears in the July issue of Holiday magazine.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 3 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Open This Week

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who arrived in New York yesterday by Air France from Paris, left there for his summer home in Elm Court, in Lenox, Mass. He will prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Symphony, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday night with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 o'clock, an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. Saturday night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists, Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.

Pleasure Almanac

MUSIC

SYMPHONY MUSIC

Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood. Berkshire Festival, 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts in The Shed. July 9-August 15. Every Sat. evening & Sun. afternoon (See full program listings, page 14 .)

FOLK AND JAZZ ROUNDTABLE

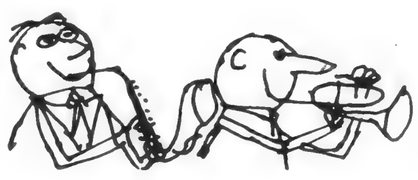
by Sharon Deykin

sic, music! During the summer the beautiful Berkshire hills ppear to live and breathe north to south — South n Pittsfield, Tanglewood, qua in Lenox, Music Mountain Village, Conn. — the very utter of all Berkshire, it sic in a classical vein.

you might ask, You mean to say that's all those people go for up there in the Berkshires — that long-haired music?"

No. Not at all. For also thriving in those same musical hills is one of the outstanding events in the world of jazz. Coming to vibrant life in Lenox at the moment the Tanglewood symphonic season ends is the annual Jazz Festival held at Music Inn, August 15 to September 6.

"That's more like it." you might say, your interest in the Berkshires warming, "Tell me more."



This year marks the fifth season that folk and jazz musicians, folk lorists, musicologists and many other lovers of jazz are gathering at Music Inn for a 3-week session of jazz performances, lectures, demonstrations, and fascinating discussions under the direction of Marshall Sterns, recently dubbed the "Jazz Scholar" by the N.Y. Herald Tribune's This Week Magazine. Among the distinguished guests participating in this year's Folk and Jazz Round-table will be Willis James, world authority on Negro hollers, shouts, and cries. Geoffrey Holden with his contributions of Carribean jazz music and dances; Nat Hentoff, editor of Downbeat Magazine, and Rudi Blesh, top jazz historian and defender of jazz primitives.

But that's not all. Also appearing in this year's festival will be poet Langston Hughes, Al Collins or Radio WNEW, Semanticist S. I, Hayakawa, Mama Yancey, Henry Cowell and Termaine McDowell. Instrumentalists, singers, and dancers are unusually well-represented this season. The discussions and demonstrations often induce members of the audience to join in the set-to's.

These lively panel discussions are held in the afternoon, while evenings are devoted to jazz recitals and talks. All activities are open to the public.

Actually, the jazz festivities of Music Inn have become well-known throughout the world of jazz lovers. Louis Armstrong summed it up this way: "They're doing wonderful things for jazz up there at Lenox. They're really helping to make music history." Director Stearns hopes that such events as this festival will hasten the time when jazz attains its rightful position in the world of music. Said Mr. Stearns: "Jazz is one of the few original American phenomena. It is a very vital part of our culture."

"Music in the Berkshires"

A PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBIT

BY CLEMENS KALISCHER

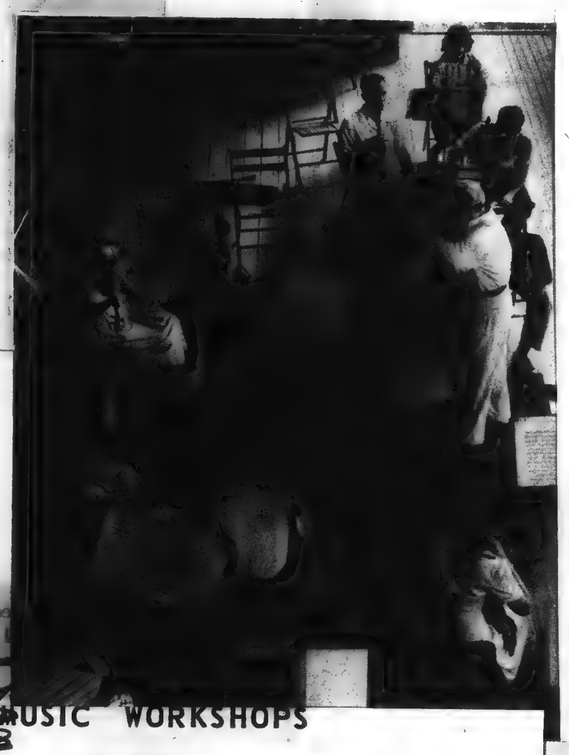
The big shed at Tanglewood awaiting the flood of music lovers

Listening to a Sunday night composers forum at Tanglewood

Listners to a Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at Tanglewood.

In the sensitive hands of Clemens Kalischer, a camera is a Sixth Sense. Through it he opens a magic window upon reality, capturing moods and action which the ordinary eye cannot see. All of this is natural to him for he began his creative life as an artist. He soon found that a good photograph is worth several yards of canvas and reaches a much wider audience. Mr. Kalischer divides his time between Stockbridge, Mass., and New York City. He was born in Germany and brought up in France. After some time with the French Army, he spent nearly three years in concentration camps and finally reached the U.S. in 1942. His work appears in many leading national magazines. He has had exhibits in Rochester, Albany, Brooklyn, New York City, Paris and London.

"MUSIC IN THE BERKSHIRES", a one man photographic exhibit by Mr. Kalischer, is on view at the Berkshire Museum, in Pittsfield through July and August. Some of these evocative pictures were on display at Tanglewood during its opening week and also at Carnegie Hall Gallery during the past winter. A few of them appear on these pages. The exhibit reveals the diversity and growth of musical life in the Berkshire Hills, ranging from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood to the various nearby groups, such as South Mountain, Avaloch's First Festival of Medieval Music; the Pittsfield Community Music School, Indian Hill Music Workshop, Stockbridge Bell Ringers and others. In February, he will exhibit at the Kaufman Gallery at the 92nd St. 'Y' in N.Y.C.



Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the B.S.O. conducting a student rehearsal (right)

Emanuel Balaban of the Tanglewood faculty, enthuses over a composition by Julia Perry, young composer from Akron, Ohio (left)

Pleasure Almanac

MUSIC

SYMPHONY MUSIC

Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood. Berkshire Festival, 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts in The Shed. July 9-August 15. Every Sat. evening & Sun. afternoon (See full program listings, page 14..)

MUSIC WORKSHOPS

"Music, when soft voice die,
Vibrates in the memory!"

. Shelley

As he wrote those lines, Shelley might have had in mind something akin to the music festivals and work conferences which are held each summer in the various music centres. Not as numerous as the writer's conferences or as the art colonies, these centres are for professional musicians who attend for the purpose of perfecting their art.

Serious workers are found at music workshops and for the professional who wishes to study rather than merely 'summer', the conference type of music colony is suggested. As with the listings for art and writing, only the courses still available at this late date are published. There are excellent workshop courses available at other colonies, but registration deadline is already past.

k Music Workshop, Lenox, Mass.
Dr. Charles Carle, Director
Birchwood Barn, Lenox, Mass.

pen Summer Institute, Aspen, Colorado

kshire Music Centre
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Plymouth Rock Center of Music and Drama
Duxbury, Mass.

dyllwild School of Music and the Arts (ISOMATA)
San Jacinto Mts
Idyllwild, California
(Dr. Max T. Krone, Director)

(An article on Isomata, called "California's Music Mountain" appears in the July issue of Holiday magazine.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 3 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Open This Week

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who arrived in New York yesterday by Air France from Paris, left there for his summer home in Elm Court, in Lenox, Mass. He will prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Symphony, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday night with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 o'clock, an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. Saturday night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists, Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.

FOLK AND JAZZ ROUNDTABLE

by Sharon Deykin

sic, music! During the summ- the beautiful Berkshire hills pear to live and breathe north to south — South n Pittsfield, Tanglewood, qua in Lenox, Music Moun- Village, Conn. — the very utter of all Berkshire, it sic in a classical vein.

you might ask, You mean to say that's all those people go for up there in the Berkshires — that long-haired music?"

No. Not at all. For also thriving in those same musical hills is one of the outstanding events in the world of jazz. Coming to vibrant life in Lenox at the moment the Tanglewood symphonic season ends is the annual Jazz Festival held at Music Inn, August 15 to September 6.

"That's more like it." you might say, your interest in the Berkshires warming, "Tell me more."

This year marks the fifth season that folk and jazz musicians, folk lorists, musicologists and many other lovers of jazz are gathering at Music Inn for a 3-week session of jazz performances, lectures, demonstrations, and fascinating discussions under the direction of Marshall Sterns, recently dubbed the "Jazz Scholar" by the N.Y. Herald Tribune's This Week Magazine. Among the distinguished guests participating in this year's Folk and Jazz table will be Willis James, world authority on Negro hollers, shouts, and cries. Geoffrey Holden with his contributions of Carribean jazz music and dances; Nat Hentoff, editor of Downbeat Magazine, and Rudi Blesh, top jazz historian and defender of jazz primitives.

But that's not all. Also appearing in this year's festival will be poet Langston Hughes, Al Collins or Radio WNEW, Semanticist S. I. Hayakawa, Mama Yancey, Henry Cowell and Termaine McDowell. Instrumentalists, singers, and dancers are unusually well-represented this season. The discussions and demonstrations often induce members of the audience to join in the set-to's.

These lively panel discussions are held in the afternoon, while evenings are devoted to jazz recitals and talks. All activities are open to the public.

Actually, the jazz festivities of Music Inn have become well-known throughout the world of jazz lovers. Louis Armstrong summed it up this way: "They're doing wonderful things for jazz up there at Lenox. They're really helping to make music history." Director Stearns hopes that such events as this festival will hasten the time when jazz attains its rightful position in the world of music. Said Mr. Stearns: "Jazz is one of the few original American phenomena. It is a very vital part of our culture."

[2160]

"Music in the Berkshires"

A PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBIT

BY CLEMENS KALISCHER

The big shed at Tanglewood awaiting the flood of music lovers

Listening to a Sunday night composers forum at Tanglewood

Listners to a Sunday morning Chamber Music Concert at Tanglewood.

In the sensitive hands of Clemens Kalischer, a camera is a Sixth Sense. Through it he opens a magic window upon reality, capturing moods and action which the ordinary eye cannot see. All of this is natural to him for he began his creative life as an artist. He soon found that a good photograph is worth several yards of canvas and reaches a much wider audience. Mr. Kalischer divides his time between Stockbridge, Mass., and New York City. He was born

"MUSIC IN THE BERKSHIRES", a one man photographic exhibit by Mr. Kalischer, is on view at the Berkshire Museum, in Pittsfield through July and August. Some of these evocative pictures were on display at Tanglewood during its opening week and also at Carnegie Hall Gallery during the past winter. A few of them appear on these pages. The exhibit reveals the diversity and growth of musical life in the Berkshire Hills, ranging from the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood to the various nearby groups, such as South Mountain, Avaloch's First Festival of Medieval Music; the Pittsfield Community Music School, Indian Hill Music Workshop, Stockbridge Bell Ringers and others. In February, he will exhibit at the Kaufman Gallery at the 92nd St. 'Y' in N.Y.C.

PLAYTIME, AUGUST 1954

some three d the g na-
's cha-reaches ester, ndon.

rflowing us mus-ships seaport
ed boys.
self-gov-
he Conened to year, in homes
y. In every direction, on es where colonial leaders
a," for its perfect preserva-

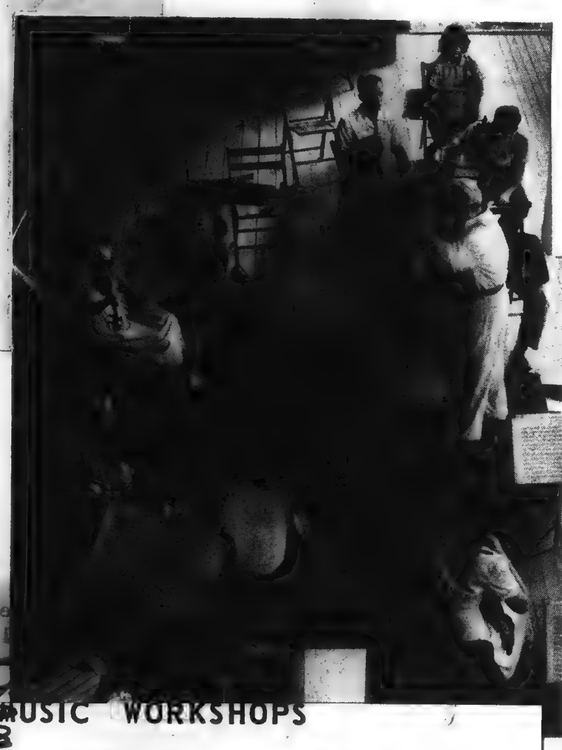
Emanuel Balabam of the Tanglewood

Pleasure Almanac

MUSIC

SYMPHONY MUSIC

Lenox, Mass. Tanglewood, Berkshire Festival, 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra. Concerts in The Shed, July 9-August 15. Every Sat. evening & Sun. afternoon (See full program listings, page 14.)



Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the B.S.O. conducting a student rehearsal (right)

Shelburne Museum, a village of fine old New England buildings 7 miles south of Burlington, Vt., overflowing with priceless colonial items. Among the transplanted buildings is an early Vermont church, stagecoach inn, brick schoolhouse, carriage barns, country store, Shaker Shed, covered bridge, Pioneer Village, Salem, Mass. Here you will find buildings as they were built by the first settlers before 1630. Also, in Salem, is the Peabody Museum, The House of Seven Gables and the Witches' House. Route 128 to 114.

is evoked. Route 20 to 27.

glimpse back into New England history

MUSIC WORKSHOPS

"Music, when soft voice die,
Vibrates in the memory."

. . . Shelley

As he wrote these lines, Shelley might have had in mind something akin to the music festivals and work conferences which are held each summer in the various music centres. Not as numerous as the writer's conferences or as the art colonies, these centres are for professional musicians who attend for the purpose of perfecting their art.

Serious workers are found at music workshops and for the professional who wishes to study rather than merely 'summer', the conference type of music colony is suggested. As with the listings of art and writing, only the courses still available at this late date are published. There are excellent workshop courses available at other colonies, but registration deadline is already past.

lk Music Workshop, Lenox, Mass.
Dr. Charles Carle, Director
Birchwood Barn, Lenox, Mass.

pen Summer Institute, Aspen, Colorado

kshire Music Centre
Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

P mouth Rock Center of Music and Drama
Duxbury, Mass.

Id yllwild School of Music and the Arts (ISOMATA)
San Jacinto Mts
Idyllwild, California
(Dr. Max T. Krone, Director)

(An article on Isomata, called "California's Music Mountain" appears in the July issue of Holi magazine.)

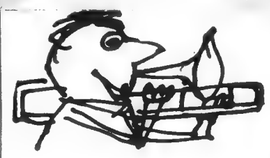
POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 3 - 1954

Berkshire Festival To Open This Week

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, who arrived in New York yesterday by Air France from Paris, left there for his summer home in Elm Court, in Lenox, Mass. He will prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire Festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Symphony, and as director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the Festival.

Mr. Munch will give his first concert Friday night with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players, in the Theater-Concert hall at Tanglewood, at 8:30 o'clock, an all-Bach program of Brandenburg Concertos, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. Saturday night he inaugurates the Music Shed series with the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society trained by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists, Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander).

"The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of a number of the works of Hector Berlioz to be presented in their complete form at Tanglewood this summer, under the baton of Mr. Munch, in observance of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz society, founded to advance knowledge and understanding of Berlioz and his works.



FOLK AND JAZZ ROUNDTABLE

by Sharon Deykin

Music, music, music! During the summer months the beautiful Berkshire hills certainly appear to live and breathe music. From north to south — South Mountain in Pittsfield, Tanglewood, Musica Antiqua in Lenox, Music Mountain in Falls Village, Conn. — the very bread and butter of all Berkshire, it seems, is music in a classical vein.

"Really?," you might ask, You mean to say that's all those people go for up there in the Berkshires — that long-haired music?"

No. Not at all. For also thriving in those same musical hills is one of the outstanding events in the world of jazz. Coming to vibrant life in Lenox at the moment the Tanglewood symphonic season ends is the annual Jazz Festival held at Music Inn, August 15 to September 6.

"That's more like it." you might say, your interest in the Berkshires warming, "Tell me more."

This year marks the fifth season that folk and jazz musicians, folk lorists, musicologists and many other lovers of jazz are gathering at Music Inn for a 3-week session of jazz performances, lectures, demonstrations, and fascinating discussions under the direction of Marshall Sterns, recently dubbed the "Jazz Scholar" by the N.Y. Herald Tribune's This Week Magazine. Among the distinguished guests participating in this year's Folk and Jazz Roundtable will be Willis James, world authority on Negro hollers, shouts, and cries. Geoffrey Holden with his contributions of Carribean jazz music and dances; Nat Hentoff, editor of Downbeat Magazine, and Rudi Blesh, top jazz historian and defender of jazz primitives.

But that's not all. Also appearing in this year's festival will be poet Langston Hughes, Al Collins or Radio WNEW, Semanticist S. I, Hayakawa, Mama Yancey, Henry Cowell and Termaine McDowell. Instrumentalists, singers, and dancers are unusually well-represented this season. The discussions and demonstrations often induce members of the audience to join in the set-to's.

These lively panel discussions are held in the afternoon, while evenings are devoted to jazz recitals and talks. All activities are open to the public.

Actually, the jazz festivities of Music Inn have become well-known throughout the world of jazz lovers. Louis Armstrong summed it up this way: "They're doing wonderful things for jazz up there at Lenox. They're really helping to make music history." Director Stearns hopes that such events as this festival will hasten the time when jazz attains its rightful position in the world of music. Said Mr. Stearns: "Jazz is one of the few original American phenomena. It is a very vital part of our culture."

[260]

TIMES Toledo Ohio

JUL 19 1954

Boston Orchestra Placed In N.Y. Yankees Class

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., July 18—As these notes are being set down the Boston Orchestra under Charles Munch is playing the eighth concert of the Tanglewood series. The program is being devoted mainly to Berlioz' Fantastic Symphony.

This concert will conclude the second week of the Tanglewood concert activities. Of the week's concerts I heard the chamber orchestra concert Friday night and the concert by the full orchestra under Pierre Monteux yesterday.

The Boston Orchestra and the New York Yankees have things in common. Each offseason both organizations are read out of future serious competition. The encroachments of age, the inability of replacements to measure up in talent and experience to their predecessors, the don't-care attitude generated by years of success, too much and too long; all these items and more are advanced toward the failure and eventual demise as a power of the ball team and the orchestra.

No Serious Deterioration

Everybody knows about the Yankees. To any who do not know about the Boston Orchestra let them be reassured that it is not a group that has suffered any serious deterioration.

The chamber orchestra concert, an all-Bach program, was given over to Bach's Cantata No. 93 and the Orchestral Suites 1 and 4, Hugh Ross conducted the Cantata in which four vocal soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus took part. Mr. Munch conducted the chamber orchestra of Boston players in the Bach Suites. These are the cream of the Boston Orchestra, the experienced professionals. As such, they played. And their Bach was quite the most fitting that I have heard in some time.

Mr. Monteux's program Saturday night was all of music with which he, of all presently active conductors, is probably on most intimate terms, excerpts from Act 1 of Debussy's "Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien," Franck's "Les Djinns," in which Vera Franceschi was the piano soloist, Debussy's "La Mer," and Franck's Symphony in D minor.

Still Effective At 79

Mr. Monteux will be all of 80 years old on his next birthday. And neither has age withered nor custom staled him. His gestures are economical, his deportment relaxed and buoyan.. He gives the distinct impression of knowing exactly what he is about and of being able to attain to such ends as he sets himself entirely by musicianship and entirely without the pyrotechnics and semi-charlatanism to which not a few conductors have accustomed us.

I have not seen the Boston Orchestra so completely relaxed since the list time Mr. Monteux conducted it—when I was in the audience. And not since the same occasion has the orchestra's product been so tonally rich, so cleanly lined, so concisely, yet effortlessly, balanced. Debussy's vari-colored "La Mer" is not often so vividly displayed, a matter of which most of the 9,000 in the audience seemed wholly aware.

Page 2—CATSKILL DAILY MAIL TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

The past weekend of music opened on Friday evening, July 23, with a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra devoted to the music of Handel and Haydn; the program, as usual, being presented at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., the summer home of this orchestra. The Handel Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Opus 6, No. 4 is a composition very reminiscent of the early 18th centuries.

The performance, under the baton of Charles Munch was an exceedingly fine one with the strings showing sumptuous tone in the slow movement and a rhythmic and technical facility which could hardly be surpassed in the allegro movements. Mr. Munch gave a vigorous reading of the Symphony in G minor, No. 100, "The Military," by Haydn, in which special emphasis was placed on the bass drum, cymbals and triangle. The symphony is filled with good-natured humor and sparkling wit, and the performance on Friday evening was entirely in keeping with the composer's full intentions.

The focal point of the evening was a performance of the Mass No. 3 in D minor ("Nelson") by Haydn, with the Festival Chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross, with Naomi Farr, soprano, Beatrice Krebs, contralto, Marvin Worden, tenor and Thomas Stewart, bass, as soloists. It is most gratifying to say that the chorus was in much better form for this performance than it was for the Bach Cantata of last week. The Mass (in many parts reminiscent of "The Creation"), was given an energetic, forceful performance, kept in the bounds of the stylistic tendencies of that era. The soloists were excellent, with special plaudits going to Naomi Farr, soprano (who carried the larger portion of the solo work) and to Thomas Stewart, bass. Both were in good voice, and sang with a great deal of confidence and conviction.

(Saturday morning, July 24th, found your music editor at a dress rehearsal of the orchestra, open to the public for the nominal fee of $1, which, incidentally, goes into the pension fund of the orchestra. The rehearsal, which takes you into the inner workings of a symphony orchestra, is scheduled for each Saturday, 10 a. m., and usually last until about noon.)

Biggs Organ Recital

At 3 p. m., Saturday, E. Power Biggs, one of America's foremost concert organists presented an organ recital in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. Mr. Biggs, working under the handicap of a rather small pipe organ with limited resources, provided his small, but appreciative audience, with a most diversified organ program culled from organ literature of various eras. Opening his program with Handel's Organ Concerto No. 2, Mr. Biggs again proved himself a master technician, as well as a versatile musician, as he employed the full resources of the organ in this concerto.

The second group of works played by Mr. Biggs included "The Trophy" by Francois Couperin, the "Pavane" "The Earle of Salisbury" by William Byrd and the D Major "Trumpet Voluntary" of Henry Purcell. Handicapped by not enough stops on the organ for varied changes of tone color and ensemble, Mr. Biggs did a most admirable job of performing the "Prelude, Fugue and Variation" by Cesar Franck, although interpretatively, quite a bit was found lacking. (This, I might say, is not the blame of Mr. Biggs. The organ in the Music Shed, even when played with the orchestra, leaves much to be desired.) Mr. Biggs ended his program with a sparkling performance of the A minor Organ Concerto of Antonio Vivaldi in which an impeccable organ technique was displayed by the soloist. Mr. Biggs was most gracious, offering one of Louis Claude D'Aquin's "Noels" as an encore.

HANOVER, PA. SUN

The fifth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of chamber music by Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel played by the Kroll String Quartet, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist, on Friday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, conducting, including Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco-Frank, organ soloist, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, Sunday afternoon (August 8) in the Music Shed, Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening Festival concert—one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony Orchestra of the six "Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the N. Y. Symphony Orchestra. The "Te Deum," also to be given its first performance by the Boston Symphony, will have the assistance of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, 40 boys, aged nine to thirteen, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac Neighborhood, Stockbridge, Mass., and 44 girls, aged thirteen to eighteen, from Indian Hill Music Workshop at Stockbridge.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the Music Shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance, and Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday (August 7) at 10:00 a. m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

July 31

THE 1954 SEASON in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center, brings together noted musicians. Aaron Copland is an American composer of achievement. Seymour Lipkin, young pianist who has played in Syracuse, is among Festival soloists. William Kroll, violinist heads the Kroll String Quartet; Lukas Foss is among younger conductors in the Music Center.

THE KROLL String Quartet, to perform Wednesday night in the Theater-Concert Hall includes Kroll and Louis Graeler, violins; David Mankovitz, viola and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. Lukas Foss will conduct a Stravinsky and Mozart program next Friday night, with Lipkin as soloist. Foss, also known as a composer, has been a member of the Berkshire Center faculty since 1946.

Copland Foss

"THE TENDER LAND," opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will be presented tomorrow and Tuesday nights in the Theater-Concert Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., summer home of the Berkshire Music

Lipkin Kroll

Center, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Copland, assistant director of the Center since its establishment in 1940 in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival, has newly revised the opera for this its New England premiere. Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department this summer, had planned "The Tender Land" for "Tanglewood" this year before the opera was sung by the New York City Opera Co. in City Center last April. The production in "Tanglewood" is in three acts with three added scenes. Its period now is the spring of 1910.

THE CAST: On successive nights will include Eva Rubin, Mary MacKenzie, Beatrice Krebs, Robert Simpson, Alvin Edmonson, Rosemary Carlos, Phyllis Murphy, Thomas Stewart, Malcolm Bernstein, Nicholas Maxymuk, Regina Sarfaty, Esther Schatzow. The orchestra comprises Department I students conducted by Frederic Waldman.

THIS AFTERNOON'S Concert in The Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Richard Burgin, Orchestra concertmaster, with his wife (known professionally as Ruth Posner), as guest soloist. The program will open with William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture," followed by Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a theme" by Thomas Tallis. Miss Poleri will play the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto with orchestra.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y. GAZETTE

JUN 29 1954

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

THE BERKSHIRE MUSIC Center, the six-week summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival concerts, will open July 4. Early enrollments, according to Miss Edith A. Bessler, registrar, have passed the 375 mark with additional applications being processed daily.

The full enrollment will include between 400 and 450 students. Last year at this time there were only 345 students registered.

Foreign students this year include 20 to date, 12 from Canada, four from Cuba, three each from France and Israel, one each from Japan, Korea, Holland, Hungary, Greece, South Africa, Venezuela and Haiti.

One mother and son are enrolled as students and there are three husband-wife combinations, also three heads of music departments of colleges.

The two-year-old Tanglewood Study Group has a present enrollment of 112. This includes 35 who will spend the full six weeks at Tanglewood, 22 who will spend four weeks and 55 who have enrolled for two-week terms. This department offers advanced students of music, professional or amateur, an opportunity to spend their vacations in absorption of music. Lucas Foss is heading the department this summer.

Students at the center study orchestra playing and conducting under Jean Morel of the Juilliard School of Music; chamber music under first-chair members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; choral singing and conducting under Hugh Ross; composition under Aaron Copland, Lukas Foss and guest composer Ernst Toch; opera under Frederic Cohen of the Juilliard School or may enroll in the previously mentioned Study Group.

* * *

FIVE CONCERTS of first performances of works by composers in residence at the Bennington Composers' Conference will be given on the campus of Bennington College Aug. 18, 21, 25, 28 and 31. The concert will be free to the public and will begin at 8:15 p.m.

Alan Carter, conference director, has announced that the composer staff this year includes Roger Goeb, Burrill Phillips, Lionel Nowak and Theodore Strongin. Due to a grant the conference is offering several tuition scholarships of $100 each this year. Composers interested should send at least two scores to Mr. Carter at Middlebury, Vt.

* * *

SIX PROGRAMS devoted entirely to early music will be presented Aug. 18 through 29 in the Lenox, Mass., town hall by the New York Pro Musica Antiqua, six singers, five instrumentalists and directors Noah Greenberg and Bernard Krainis. The group was organized in 1953 and specializes in music of the Middle Ages, the Renaissance and the Early Baroque.

* * *

THE SUMMER SEASON at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival near Lee, Mass., will open Friday with a gala matinee at 4 p.m. and matinee and evening shows Saturday at 4 and 9 p.m. Ted Shawn, director, has announced that dancers for the Friday and Saturday performances will include Inesita, Pearl Lang, Don Farnworth, Marlene Dell and Joan Skinner.

Alice Markova, world-famous ballerina who was scheduled to present five performances at the festival, has cabled from London that she will be unable to fulfill her contract due to an acute sinus infection. Carmelita Maracci has been engaged to replace her on the July 22 through 24 dates and will make her festival debut then. Born in Uruguay and now living in California, Miss Maracci is considered one of the truly great dancers in the western hemisphere. Her Spanish techniques have been as roundly applauded as her dancing in ballet and her creative efforts in choreography.

HANOVER, PA. SUN

JUL 3 - 1954

MUSIC

The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934, the fifteenth since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts on Wednesday evening at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. On Friday also at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing the opening weekend, July 10 at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander). On Sunday afternoon guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

Since 1936 when the 6,000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Festival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U.S. and Canada until last summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each Shed concert.

* * *

This Clipping From

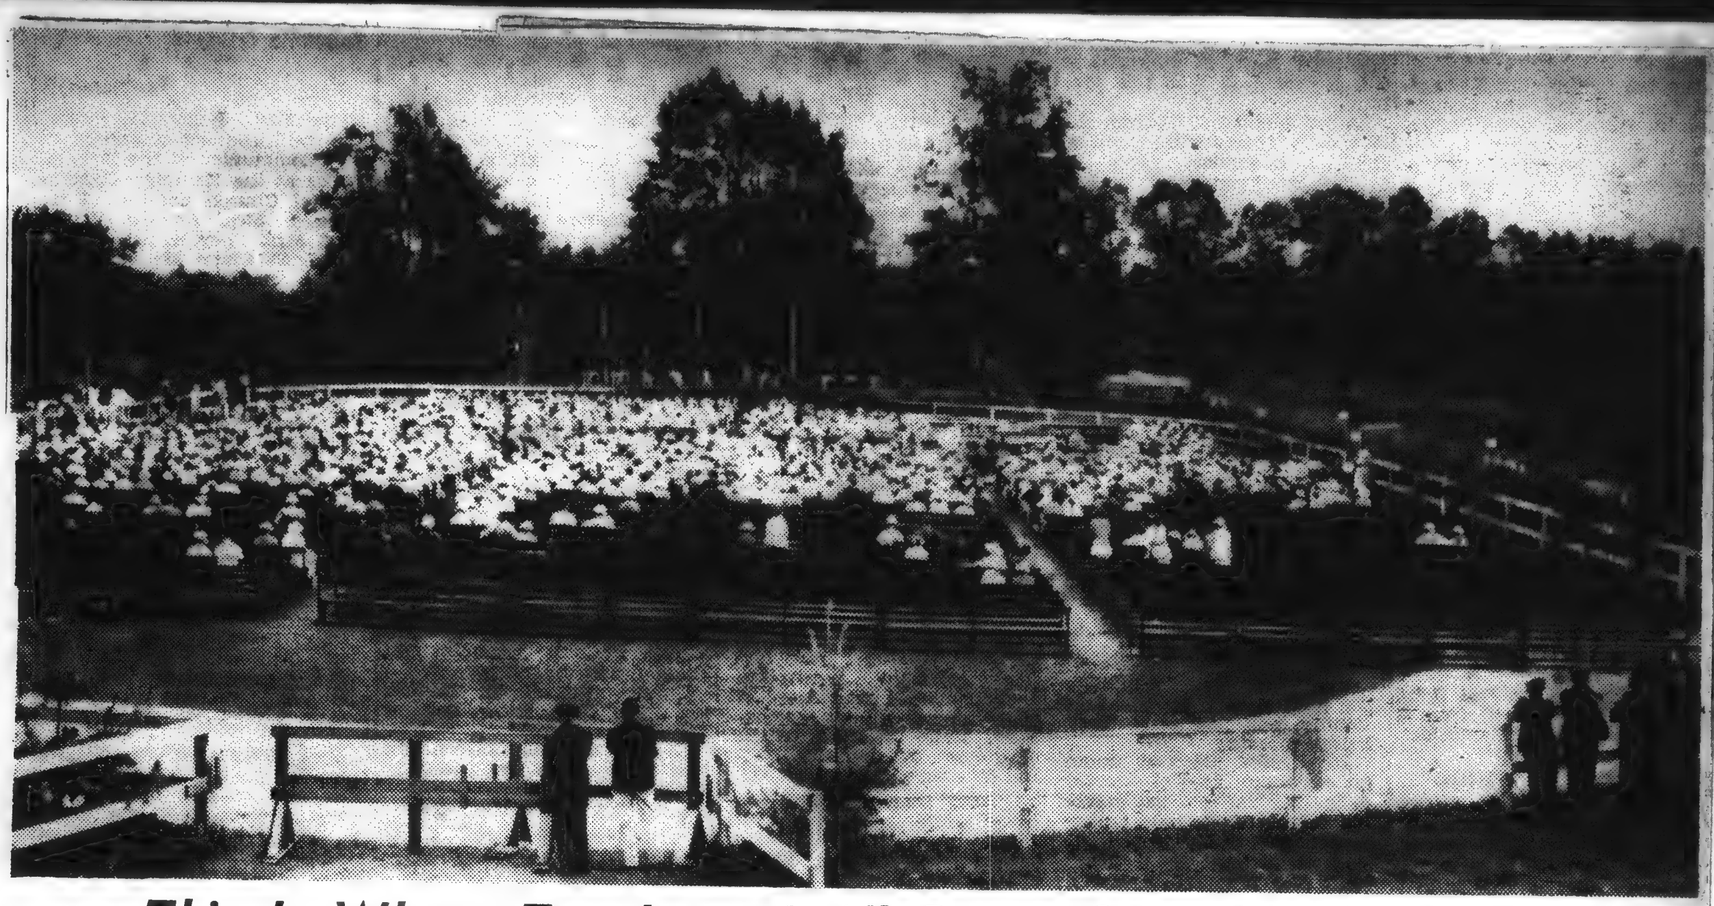
BOSTON, MASS. MORNING GLOBE

JUL 4 - 1954

A preview of music to be performed at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during July and August will be played during Martin Bookspan's recorded concert over WCOP from 8:05 to 11:55 tonight. Mr. Bookspan will open with Beatrice and Benedict Overture, by Berlioz, and will include works of Ravel, Strauss, Bach, Beethoven and Roussel. He will conclude with Symphony in D Minor by Franck.

* * *

[261]



This Is Where Tanglewood All Began Some 20 Years Ago

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
JUL 12 1954

THE FIRST Berkshire Music Festival looked like this in 1934 when the first three concerts were presented in the horse ring on the Hanna Farm in Stockbridge. The New York Philharmonic was the orchestra, the Festival lost $513, and as the picture shows, there were a good many empty seats in the rear, which would never happen these days when a crowd of 10,000 people on a Sunday is not unusual.

$100,000 For George

The late George Eastman, who gave to the United States world leadership in the development of the camera into such terms and prices that every man could use it, came near being a twin of Holyoke's William Prentiss. It just happened that Mr. Prentiss was one of the very early devotees of the camera as his first and closest hobby.

Mr, Eastman's hobby was music.

For his one hundredth birthday on Sunday the Eastman Kodak Company has given $100,000 to the Rochester Civic Music Association. That gift, for the present, saves the solvency of Rochester's great music program. It was Mr. Eastman's devoted and understanding leadership that made Rochester one of the great music centers of America.

Music supports have had rather a hard sledding since the men and women who founded music centers have died and the income tax man has taken the power of such support from those who have come after them. The Boston Symphony has had to go asking for support such as used to pour in upon it. New York's Metropolitan Opera has been on the beseeching lists for national support for years. The great New York and Detroit and Chicago orchestra stars have had to try to find new supports.

As of today $100,000 doesn't go too far to support such a great music center as Mr. Eastman established in his home town. But it will pay present deficits and its management says it will set the whole Rochester music understanding on a healthy financial footing — which in plain terms means money in the bank.

COPLAND OPERA HIGHLY ENJOYED AT TANGLEWOOD

Unsigned - August 2

'The Tender Land' Proves One of Center's Best Productions

BY WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 2—Through the years the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center has put on some splendid operas, most of them seldom heard. Tonight, under the direction of Frederic Cohen who is substituting for Boris Goldovsky this season, the opera department staged "The Tender Land" by Aaron Copland, written to the text of Horace Everett. It was one of the finest productions we have witnessed at Tanglewood. The simple, affecting story, the fine youthful voices and the simplicty of approach combined to produce the very essence of the work.

The story is simple. The isolated come and as the girl goes to find her own life, the mother turns to her younger daughter, knowing that one responsibility has ended and another begun.

Singers Excel

Mr. Copland has written skilfully for the voice and for the orchestra. Seldom does its texture overpower the vocal line. He has drawn freely from folksongs and rural rhythms. All the singers were more than adequate. Some, like Thomas Stewart, as Grandpa Moss, were outstanding. Stewart has a splendid bass voice and a flair for acting. His characterization of the stern, loveable old farmer was skilful.

Another fine characterization was offered by Mary Mackenzie, a mezzo-soprano of uncommon beauty of voice. She portrayed the anxious mother with affecting reality. Rosemary Carlos as Laurie, the daughter, and John Hornor, the hired hand, provided the love interest. Both approached their characterizations with simplicity and both had fresh, lovely voices. Jefferson Morris as the second hired hand revealed a big, robust baritone clearly projected.

Little Eve Rubin as the young daughter acted charmingly and spoke her lines clearly. It is not often that words are projected so clearly by native singers, singing their own language. Except for a few moments when a bit of singing was done from a covered porch, we got most of the words distinctly.

Attractive Settings

There are some splendid and effective solos, duets and ensembles, notably the quintet, based on a well-known hymn, which closed the first act. The second act, depicting the graduation party, was clever pictorially with its rustic dances and humor.

The settings were simple, attractive, functional and well lighted. Under the direction of Frederic Waldman the orchestra played well and the performance was held together with sure hand. It is probable this opera will have many future performances. It is ideal for use by opera workshop and should lend itself to TV.

Because it was easy to understand, attractively produced and charmingly sung, the audience was enthusiastic, as it should be. Mr. Copland has made a real contribution to American opera through this work.

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Cotuit Daily Mail
July 30

By Clarence Warrington, Jr.

On Saturday evening, July 24, the reins of the Boston Symphony were taken over by Jean Morel, who conducted works by Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Edward Elgar. The Prokofieff Sixth Symphony is a sombre composition filled with dark musical color, filled to the brim with a sense of deep tragedy. The reading given by Mr. Morel was filled with great breadth in which the complex score was completely exploited.

The ovation of the evening went to Nicole Henroit for her performance of the Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1, "The Triangle." Miss Henriot is the possessor of an immaculate, well-controlled piano technique, and as a technician she was superb. Found lacking, however, was a firm piano tone in the great climaxes of the concerto. It was also noted that Mr. Morel did not seem completely at home in this concerto. The combination of the two may have been what made this performance a somewhat tepid affair.

Mr. Morel provided the audience with a colorful, spirited performance of Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan" and closed the concert with a revealing, yet orthodox, playing of the "Enigma Variations" by Elgar.

Piece de Resistance

Berlioz was again the main attraction on the program of Sunday afternoon, July 25. At the helm again was Charles Munch who opened the program with a sparkling version of the Overture to "Beatrice and Benedict" by Hector Berlioz. The piece de resistance of the afternoon was the playing of "Harold In Italy," Symphony with Viola Solo, with William Primrose as viola soloist. Charles Munch must have a special place in his heart for Berlioz, for again, this Berlioz composition took on the aspect of a real, vital, living musical composition. Mr. Munch seems to be able to mold mountains of tone from the orchestra as a whole; delicacy from the string section; color from the woodwinds; and a firm Berlioz musical foundation built on the solidity of the brass section. Mr. Munch seems determined to perform the works of Berlioz with great precision with an eye toward the ultimate in perfection. The performance on Sunday afternoon was a most memorable musical experience, thanks not only to Hector Berlioz, but his interpreter, Charles Munch.

Closing the Sunday afternoon concert was the Tooh Symphony No. 2. This symphony which undoubtedly brings great pleasure to the myriads of people who enjoy modern 20th Century music, is a composition that cannot be judged on one hearing. It would be interesting to see what conclusions may be reached about the symphony after repeated hearings. In my humble opinion, it will probably remain a rather dull composition.

Berkshire Festival:

N.Y. Journal-American Aug. 2

Excellent Family Team

Ruth Posselt Soloist As Burgin Conducts

By MILES KASTENDIECK

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—Though he has conducted the Boston Symphony elsewhere, Associate Conductor Richard Burgin directed his first Berkshire Festival concert in the Tanglewood music shed yesterday afternoon.

His appearance on the podium meant that when Ruth Posselt came on stage to play the solo part of the Khatchaturian violin concerto, man and wife were performing together.

They make an excellent team. Miss Posselt has always excelled while playing contemporary scores. Burgin has always conducted with a fine sense of musicianship. The Rapport between them produced a spirited performance which drew hearty applause. The poise with which Miss Posselt handled an exchange of violins when she broke a string during the cadenza of the first movement won her special admiration.

Welcome Stranger

The concerto holds up well after a decade. It flows easily, never too far removed from the folkish elements which provide its flavor. Why so violinistic a piece has not been more frequently heard remains something of a mystery. It is good audience music.

This program began in lusty, brash fashion with Schumann's "American Festival Overture." It progressed with Vaughan Williams' uncommonly persuasive "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," quite beautifully played by the Boston strings. It ended with a thoroughly musical if not inspired interpretation of Sibelius' Second Symphony.

Storm Interrupts

Burgin conducted as well as he ever has. Well routined, he offered a sure beat and dependable direction. The men gave him what he asked, solid performances of inestimable value. A crowd of 8,225 appeared to enjoy them.

The Berlioz score for this week-end was the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet." Munch had given a performance of this last season, not only here but in New York. The one on Saturday night attracted 9,800, who had the novel experience of having the famous "Queen Mab" scherzo temporarily suspended because of a violent thunderstorm. since the storm had abated by the end of the intermission which Munch called ahead of time, the "Fairy of Dreams" was then allowed to spin her magic web in the best of pianissimo tradition.

Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, were the soloists.

[262]

Complete & Revised

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL PROGRAMS

THEATRE-CONCERT HALL
6 WEDNESDAY EVENINGS AT 8:30
Chamber Music

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 7
CLAUDIO ARRAU, Piano
The BEL ARTE TRIO
BEETHOVEN
String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1
Piano Sonatas, Op. 79, 110, 57 ("Appassionata")

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 14
The
ALBENERI TRIO
BRAHMS Trio in B, Op. 8
MARTINU Trio in D minor
BEETHOVEN Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke")

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 21
The
ZIMBLER SINFONIETTA
VIVALDI "The Four Seasons"
(String Orchestra)
STRAVINSKY "Apollon Musagete"
(String Orchestra)
ROSSINI "Baroque Concerto"

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 28
The
GRILLER STRING QUARTET
MOZART Quartet in E flat, K. 428
BLOCH Quartet No. 4
(First performance)
BEETHOVEN Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2

WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 4
The
KROLL STRING QUARTET
HAYDN Quartet in D, Op. 64, No. 5 ("The Lark")
HINDEMITH Quartet No. 3, Op. 22
RAVEL Quartet in F

WEDNESDAY EVENING, AUGUST 11
ZINO FRANCESCATTI, Violin
ARTUR BALSAM, Piano
BRAHMS Violin Sonata in A major
BACH Suite in C (Violin unaccompanied)
BRAHMS Violin Sonata in D minor

THEATRE-CONCERT HALL
FRIDAY* EVENINGS AT 8:30
Chamber Orchestra ("Bach-Mozart" Concerts)

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 9
BACH
Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6
Piano Solo: LUKAS FOSS
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 16
BACH
Cantata No. 93 "Wer nur den lieben Gott"
(HUGH ROSS Conducting)
Suites Nos. 1 and 4
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 23
HANDEL Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4
HAYDN Symphony No. 100, "Military"
HAYDN "Nelson" Mass
(HUGH ROSS Conducting)
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 30
ROUSSEL "The Spider's Feast"
IBERT Flute Concerto
Soloist: DORIOT ANTHONY
MOZART Serenade for Eight Winds K.388
MOZART "Paris" Symphony K.297
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

FRIDAY EVENING, AUGUST 6
STRAVINSKY "Pulcinella" (Complete)
MOZART Piano Concerto in B flat, K. 450
Soloist: SEYMOUR LIPKIN
MOZART "Idomeneo" (Excerpts) with Chorus and Soloists
Conductor: LUKAS FOSS

*THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 12
ROSSINI Overture to "Scala di Seta"
MOZART Symphony in B flat K.319
RAVEL "Mother Goose" Suite
STRAUSS "Der Bürger als Edelmann"
Conductor: JEAN MOREL

*The annual TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE will take place on Friday, August 13

MUSIC SHED
6 SATURDAY EVENINGS AT 8:30
Boston Symphony Orchestra

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 10
BERLIOZ
"THE DAMNATION OF FAUST"
with Harvard Glee Club,
Radcliffe Choral Society and Soloists
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING JULY, 17
DEBUSSY Excerpts, "St. Sebastian"
DEBUSSY "La Mer"
FRANCK "Les Djinns", for Piano and Orchestra
Soloist: VERA FRANCESCHI
FRANCK Symphony in D Minor
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 24
PROKOFIEFF Symphony No. 6
LISZT Piano Concerto in E Flat
Soloist: NICOLE HENRIOT
STRAUSS "Don Juan"
ELGAR "Enigma" Variations
Conductor: JEAN MOREL

SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 31
BERLIOZ
"ROMEO AND JULIET"
Dramatic Symphony
with Festival Chorus and Soloists
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 7
BERLIOZ
Overture to "Benvenuto Cellini"
"Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans"
"Summer Nights", for Soprano and Orchestra
Soloist: ELEANOR STEBER
"Te Deum" with Festival Chorus and Soloist
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SATURDAY EVENING, AUGUST 14
BRAHMS "Tragic Overture"
PISTON Symphony No. 4
RAVEL "Le Tombeau de Couperin"
SAINT-SAENS Symphony No. 3, (With Organ)
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

HONORING THE
150th ANNIVERSARY SEASON
OF HECTOR BERLIOZ

MUSIC SHED
6 SUNDAY AFTERNOONS AT 2:30
Boston Symphony Orchestra

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 11
BEETHOVEN
Overture to "Leonore", No. 3
Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor")
Soloist: CLAUDIO ARRAU.
Symphony No. 5
Conductor: PIERRE MONTEUX

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 18
DEBUSSY "Iberia"
COPLAND Piano Concerto
Soloist: LEO SMIT
BERLIOZ "Fantastic Symphony"
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 25
BERLIOZ
Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick"
"Harold in Italy", Symphony
(with Viola Solo)
Soloist: WILLIAM PRIMROSE
TOCH Symphony No. 2
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 1
SCHUMAN American Festival Overture
VAUGHAN WILLIAMS Fantasia on a Theme
KHATCHATURIAN Violin Concerto
Soloist: RUTH POSSELT
SIBELIUS Symphony No. 2
Conductor: RICHARD BURGIN

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 8
GLUCK Overture to "Alceste"
BEETHOVEN Violin Concerto
Soloist: ZINO FRANCESCATTI
BRAHMS Symphony No. 2
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

SUNDAY AFTERNOON, AUGUST 15
BERLIOZ
"REQUIEM"
with Festival Chorus and Soloist
IN MEMORY OF SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY
Conductor: CHARLES MUNCH

CONNECTICUT
MASSACHUSETTS
VERMONT
NEW HAMPSHIRE
MAINE
RHODE ISLAND
NEW YORK

Pleasure Almanac

PLAYTIME'S TOP 20 EVENTS IN THE EAST THROUGH AUGUST 15

Connecticut

- 300th anniversary celebration of seaport of Mystic, Conn., July 10 to July 21, with parades, old-fashioned clambake, garden court, sailing boat races, whaleboat ride.

Massachusetts

- Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra in six weeks of world's greatest masterpieces, including chamber music and opera. July 7-Aug. 15.
- Yankee Doodle Days, Charlemont, Mass., (Route 2) Aug. 6-8. with a rollicking mixture of old fashion auction, barbecue, square-dancing in the covered bridge.
- The Celtic Ballet of Scotland, in a spectacular 3-week (July 28-Aug. 14) series of performances at Ted Shawn's Jocob's Pillow Dance Festival, east of Lee, Mass.
- Pilgrim Breakfast, Plymouth, Mass. Aug. 11, commemorating historic episode in the birth of America.
- The Helen Hayes Festival of four plays, starring Helen Hayes, directed by John Stix, at Richard Aldrich's Falmouth Playhouse, Coonamessett-on-Cape-Cod, Mass., July 3 through July 31, (See summer Theatre schedule)

Vermont

- Trapp Family Sing Weeks. Stowe, Vermont, July 19-29, Aug. 2-12, Aug. 16-26.
- Vermont Square Dance Festival, Brandon, Vermont, Aug. 3.

New Hampshire

- 5th Annual White Mountain's Festival of the 7 Arts, Lake Tarleton Club, Pike, N.H. July 5-19.
- National Water Ski Open Championships, Lake Opechee, Laconia, N.H.
- 6th Annual Summer Ski Jump, on pulverized ice, Belknap Mt. July 18.

Maine

- Shakespearean Festival, Camden, Garden Theatre, Camden, Maine, Aug. 3-8. — 8th annual festival, in the million-dollar outdoor amphitheatre, overlooking Harbor.
- 8th Annual Maine Seafood & Lobster Festival, Rockland, Maine, Aug. 6-8.

Rhode Island

- Annual Yacht Race for Queen's & Una Cups, off Newport, R.I. Aug. 4-5.
- Annual Miss Rhode Island Red Head Contest, Crescent Park, East Providence, Aug. 4.
- Indian Federation Pow-wow, Ceremony of Greeting by Princess Nashoonona, Aug. 7-8, Lafayette, R.I.

New York State

- Annual International Folk Dance Festival by costumed groups from [illegible], Niagara Falls, N.Y. July 17, 7:30-10 p.m.
- Chautauqua Summer Festival of [illegible] symphony, opera, chamber music [illegible] choral groups, plays, lectures [illegible] Chautauqua, N.Y. July 4-Aug. 29
- New York City Summer Festival with outdoor symphony, ballet special shows until Labor Day.

FIVE FESTIVALS THIS SUMMER FOR CONDUCTOR MUNCH

The fifth season of Charles Munch as Conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra came to a close on May 2, with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Within a few hours he flew to conduct the Orchestra Nationale and the orchestra at the opera in Paris. He conducted in the Festival at Bordeaux, and presented Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" in the cathedral in his native city of Strasbourg.

Returning to America, Mr. Munch opened the Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass. on July 10 with Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust". After the conclusion of the Festival on August 15, he will return to Europe to conduct at Besancon and at the Edinburgh Festival.

He will open the 74th season of the

Charles Munch

Boston Symphony Orchestra in Symphony Hall on October 8. The Saturday night concerts next season will be broadcast on the NBC network, replacing the Toscanini series.

In addition to his activities as Conductor, Charles Munch has found time to write a book which will shortly be published in French and subsequently in English. It is entitled, "Je suis chef d'orchestre" ("I Am a Conductor").

A resume of the Boston Symphony programs through the five years under the directorship of Mr. Munch shows 408 performances of works by 104 composers. Of these, 36 works have been by 23 composers American by birth or long residence. These five years have included this orchestra's first tour of Europe in the spring of 1952, and its first transcontinental tour in the spring of 1953.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is probably the most active in the country. Its total number of concerts for the season 1953-54, including the Pops concerts and outdoor Esplanade concerts in Boston (conducted by Arthur Fiedler) is 217; the over-all season, 45 weeks.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL OF 1954 BRINGS STUPENDOUS MUSIC TO THRONGS

There's music in the air at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., every evening, except Monday when musicians, soloists and the students must get their day of rest. The new and enlarged program for the 1954 season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., is a vast improvement over previous seasons not only in quantity but in the diverse quality of the offerings. Credit for this goes to the vision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's conductor, Charles Munch and to Mr. George E. Judd, manager of the orchestra.

During previous seasons, symphony under the stars at Tanglewood was mostly a week-end treat, with the full orchestra of 104 musicians performing in the Music Shed only during the last three of the six week-end series. This year the full orchestra will give concerts on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons on each of the six weekends, starting July 7 and ending August 15.

The new plan was prompted by last summer's record attendance of 118,000 and the obvious desire of many thousands to hear the full orchestra in the first three weeks of the Festival as well as the last three weekends.

Charles Munch will conduct in the Shed on July 10, 18, 25, 31, August 7, 14 and 15. Pierre Monteux, a favorite with Tanglewood audiences, will conduct on July 11 and 17. Jean Morel will be on the podium on July 24 and Richard Burgin on August 1. Missing this year is Leonard Bernstein, the youthful but veteran guest conductor of many successful Tanglewood seasons who is expected to return for concerts next summer.

The concerts by the orchestra of chamber proportions in the Theatre-Concert Hall, devoted mostly to the music of Bach and Mozart, which formerly occupied the first three weeks of the Festival, will now be given each Friday evening preceding the weekend Shed concerts. Together with the performances by the students of the Berkshire Music Center, this will result in six weeks of daily performances on an identical rotation through each week.

The Munch plan thus provides 12 Festival concerts in the Shed instead of nine as before, and six "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre as before, but now on a once-a-week basis.

In the course of the 12 Shed concerts Mr. Munch will honor the Sesquicen-

DAILY GUIDE TO TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

From Tuesday evening through Sunday afternoon, a great variety of music is offered this summer at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with noted soloists and scholarship students of the summer school of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Go early to be sure of ample time to park. Stay late and enjoy the stars above and the view of Stockbridge Bowl, and thus have less traffic congestion homeward bound.

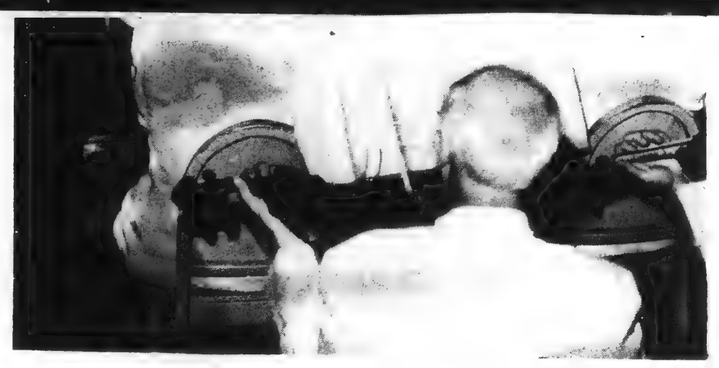
Dress for summer comfort, but Tanglewood officials advise against scant attire such as beachwear. Girls in shorts are disconcerting at a concert, to pun its parenthetically.

Here is the Daily Schedule:

Tues. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Opera Scenes*
Wed. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Chamber Music
Thurs. 8:30 p.m. (Shed) — Student Orchestra Concert*
Fri. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Bach-Mozart Concert
Sat. 10 a.m. (Shed) — Rehearsal of full B.S. Orchestra
Sat. 8:30 p.m. (Shed) — Boston Symphony Orchestra Concert
Sun. 10 a.m. (Chamber Hall) — Student Chamber Concert*
Sun. 2:30 p.m. (Shed) — Boston Symphony Orchestra Concert

Open by invitation to Friends of the Berkshire Music center. A contribution gives you membership in this group and thus entitles you to admission to these particular events without further charge.*

Charles Munch, Conductor



CLOSEST INN TO TANGLEWOOD

Avaloch A COUNTRY INN

AT LENOX, MASS.

Avaloch is set high upon the hillside, just across the road from Tanglewood, and commands magnificent views of lakes and mountains.

It offers excellent American Plan accommodations and resort facilities to a limited number of guests. Its dining room is open to the public.

[264]

Catskill, N.Y.
DAILY MAIL
August 5, 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

By Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

Another program devoted to a work of Hector Berlioz was presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood on Saturday evening, July 31st. The composition which filled the entire program was "Romeo and Juliette," Dramatic Symphony, Opus 17. The soloists of the evening were Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Mascona, bass, along with the Festival Chorus, prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross, their conductor.

Charles Munch again showed his love for the work of Berlioz. He seemed to mold each phrase, carefully control dynamics, and in general, take the black and white of the printed page and build it into a creative musical masterpiece. The French diction of the chorus was a tidy bit of work. However, musically they did not seem well balanced, for individual voices, especially in the tenor section, seemed to protrude above what should have been an equality in the blend of vocal parts. The soloists of the evening were excellent with top honors going to Nicola Mascona, bass, who sang Friar Laurence. We should like to hear more of John McCollum, tenor, for his rich, clear, true tenor voice was one of unusual beauty. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, proved herself a most competent musician, although the combination of the French language and the quality of her voice somehow seemed to produce a bit of incoherence.

Aside from the thunderstorm which stopped the performance in the middle of the soft scherzo, the program was a great musical experience; what one might call a musical rarity.

The program for Sunday afternoon, August 1st, was under the direction of Richard Burgin, concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony. The program was devoted to the playing of music from the 20th Century.

Mr. Burgin conducted a rousing version of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture" and followed it with Ralph Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" for Double String Orchestra. The Fantasia gave Mr. Burgin every opportunity to display the beautiful strings of the Boston Symphony, and the rich sonorities of the composition, written so skillfully by Vaughn Williams, were exploited to a high degree of perfection.

Soloist of the afternoon was Ruth Posselt, violinist, who played the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto. Miss Posselt is a most versatile volinist, displaying a superb violin technique. (She did not seem the slightest bit disturbed when her string broke at the end of a most complex cadenza in the middle of the first movement.) She is the possessor of a quick, sure technique which was amply displayed in the intricacies of this concerto. What seemed to be lacking, however, was a rich full tone; a tone which never seemed to materialize. Her performance was a positive one, marked by rhythmical accuracy, vigor and vitality, but the concerto, however, never seemed to jell. It lacked the zest and impact so closely connected with the work of Khatchaturian.

Mr. Burgin brought the afternoon to a close with a well-paced performance of the Sibelius Symphony No. 2. This symphony, marked by an abundance of soaring melodies, and sumptuous orchestral color, displayed the flexability of this orchestra to its fullest degree.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL OF 1954 BRINGS STUPENDOUS MUSIC TO THRONGS

There's music in the air at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., every evening, except Monday when musicians, soloists and the students must get their day of rest. The new and enlarged program for the 1954 season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., is a vast improvement over previous seasons not only in quantity but in the diverse quality of the offerings. Credit for this goes to the vision of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's conductor, Charles Munch and to Mr. George E. Judd, manager of the orchestra.

During previous seasons, symphony under the stars at Tanglewood was mostly a week-end treat, with the full orchestra of 104 musicians performing in the Music Shed only during the last three of the six week-end series. This year the full orchestra will give concerts on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons on each of the six weekends, starting July 7 and ending August 15. The new plan was prompted by last summer's record attendance of 118,000 and the obvious desire of many thousands to hear the full orchestra in the first three weeks of the Festival as well as the last three weekends.

Charles Munch will conduct in the Shed on July 10, 18, 25, 31, August 7, 14 and 15. Pierre Monteux, a favorite with Tanglewood audiences, will conduct on July 11 and 17. Jean Morel will be on the podium on July 24 and Richard Burgin on August 1. Missing this year is Leonard Bernstein, the youthful but veteran guest conductor of many successful Tanglewood seasons who is expected to return for concerts next summer.

DAILY GUIDE TO TANGLEWOOD CONCERTS

From Tuesday evening through Sunday afternoon, a great variety of music is offered this summer at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with noted soloists and scholarship students of the summer school of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Go early to be sure of ample time to park. Stay late and enjoy the stars above and the view of Stockbridge Bowl, and thus have less traffic congestion homeward bound.

Dress for summer comfort, but Tanglewood officials advise against scant attire such as beachwear. Girls in shorts are disconcerting at a concert, to pun its parenthetically.

Here is the Daily Schedule:

Tues. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Opera Scenes*
Wed. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Chamber Music
Thurs. 8:30 p.m. (Shed) — Student Orchestra Concert*
Fri. 8:30 p.m. (Theatre) — Bach-Mozart Concert
Sat. 10 a.m. (Shed) — Rehearsal of full B.S. Orchestra
Sat. 8:30 p.m. (Shed) — Boston Symphony Orchestra Concert
Sun. 10 a.m. (Chamber Hall) — Student Chamber Concert*
Sun. 2:30 p.m. (Shed) — Boston Symphony Orchestra Concert

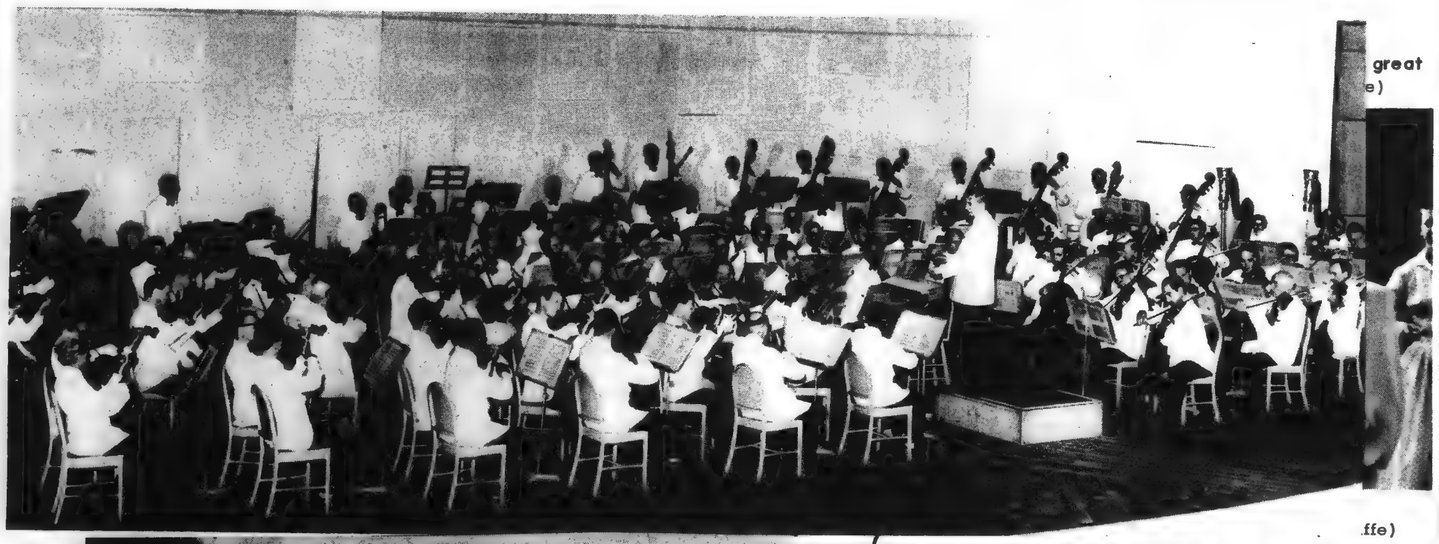
Open by invitation to Friends of the Berkshire Music center. A contribution gives you membership in this group and thus entitles you to admission to these particular events without further charge.

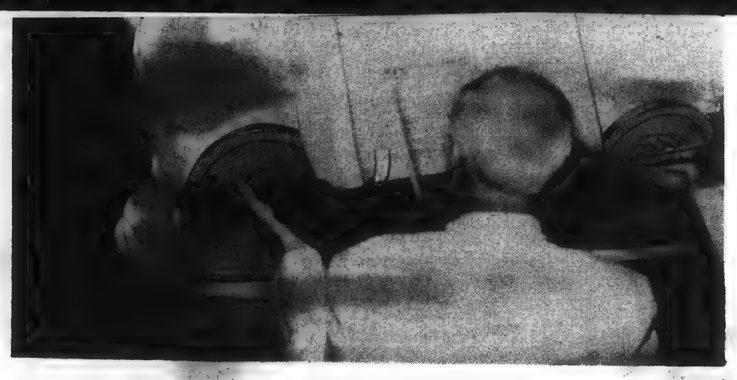
Charles Munch, Conductor

Concert Hall, devoted mostly to the music of Bach and Mozart, which formerly occupied the first three weeks of the Festival, will now be given each Friday evening preceding the weekend Shed concerts. Together with the performances by the students of the Berkshire Music Center, this will result in six weeks of daily performances on an identical rotation through each week.

The Munch plan thus provides 12 Festival concerts in the Shed instead of nine as before, and six "Bach-Mozart" concerts in the Theatre as before, but now on a once-a-week basis.

In the course of the 12 Shed concerts Mr. Munch will honor the Sesquicen-





CLOSEST INN TO TANGLEWOOD

Avaloch A COUNTRY INN

AT LENOX, MASS.

Avaloch is set high upon the hillside, just across the road from Tanglewood, and commands magnificent views of lakes and mountains.

It offers excellent American Plan accommodations and resort facilities to a limited number of guests. Its dining room is open to the public.

[264]

Catskill, N.Y. DAILY MAIL Aug 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

By Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

Another program devoted to a work of Hector Berlioz was presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood on Saturday evening, July 31st. The composition which filled the entire program was "Romeo and Juliette," Dramatic Symphony, Opus 17. The soloists of the evening were Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Nicola Mascona, bass, along with the Festival Chorus, prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross, their conductor.

Charles Munch again showed his love for the work of Berlioz. He seemed to mold each phrase, carefully control dynamics, and in general, take the black and white of the printed page and build it into a creative musical masterpiece. The French diction of the chorus was a tidy bit of work. However, musically they did not seem well balanced, for individual voices, especially in the tenor section, seemed to protrude above what should have been an equality in the blend of vocal parts. The soloists of the evening were excellent with top honors going to Nicola Mascona, bass, who sang Friar Laurence. We should like to hear more of John McCollum, tenor, for his rich, clear, true tenor voice was one of unusual beauty. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, proved herself a most competent musician although the combination of the French language and the quality of her voice somehow seemed to produce a bit of incoherence.

Aside from the thunderstorm which stopped the performance in the middle of the soft scherzo, the program was a great musical experience; what one might call a musical rarity.

The program for Sunday afternoon, August 1st, was under the direction of Richard Burgin, concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony. The program was devoted to the playing of music from the 20th Century.

Mr. Burgin conducted a rousing version of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture" and followed it with Ralph Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" for Double String Orchestra. The Fantasia gave Mr. Burgin every opportunity to display the beautiful strings of the Boston Symphony, and the rich sonorities of the composition, written so skillfully by Vaughn Williams, were exploited to a high degree of perfection.

Soloist of the afternoon was Ruth Posselt, violinist, who played the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto. Miss Posselt is a most versatile violinist, displaying a superb violin technique. (She did not seem the slightest bit disturbed when her string broke at the end of a most complex cadenza in the middle of the first movement.) She is the possessor of a quick, sure technique which was amply displayed in the intricacies of this concerto. What seemed to be lacking, however, was a rich full tone; a tone which never seemed to materialize. Her performance was a positive one, marked by rhythmical accuracy, vigor and vitality, but the concerto, however, never seemed to jell. It lacked the zest and impact so closely connected with the work of Khatcheturian.

Mr. Burgin brought the afternoon to a close with a well-paced performance of the Sibelius Symphony No. 2. This symphony, marked by an abundance of soaring melodies, and sumptuous orchestral color, displayed the flexability of this orchestra to its fullest degree.

Tanglewood from the air

VARIED CONCERT PROGRAMS OFFERED BY STUDENTS

A student orchestra of 100 scholarship students will give six concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood during the current summer 6-week Festival.

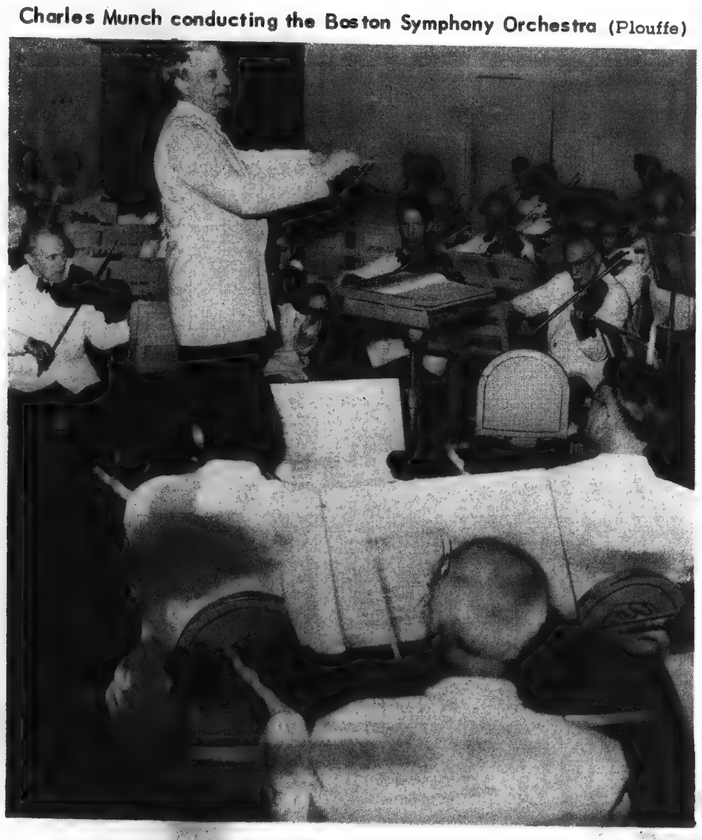
Here is the complete concert schedule for the various sections of the famous summer music school of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch:

Department I (Orchestra):	Music Shed, 8:30 P.M., July 8, 15, 22, 29, August 5; August 14 at 3:00 P.M.
Department I (Chamber Music):	Chamber Music Hall, 10 A.M. July 11, 18, 25, August 1, 8, 15
Department III (Composition:	Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 P.M., July 11, 18, 25, August 1, 8
Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera) — reserved seats:	2 one-act operas, Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 P.M., July 27
Department IV (Opera) — reserved seats:	full-length opera, Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 P.M. August 2, 3
Department II (Chorus) and IV (Opera):	Theatre-Concert Hall, 8:30 P.M. July 20, August 10

Extra concerts: E. Power Biggs, organist, Music Shed, 3:00 P.M., July 24, August 7

Pension Fund Benefit rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra (admission $1.00), Music Shed, 10:00 A.M., July 10, 17, 24, 31, August 7, 14

Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra (Plouffe)



Charles Munch with the widow of the late, great conductor, Serge Koussevitzky. (Whitestone)

Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux (Plouffe)

Complete Revised Tanglewood Program

Playtime

PLEASURE ALMANAC FOR EASTERN TRAVELERS

Catskill, N.Y. DAILY MAIL Aug 1st 1954

MUSIC

Boston Symphony Orchestra

By Clarence R. Warrington, Jr.

Another program devoted to the work of Hector Berlioz was presented by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch at Tanglewood on Saturday evening, July 31st. The composition which filled the entire program was "Romeo and Juliette," Dramatic Symphony, Opus 17. The soloists of the evening were Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Nicola Moscona, bass, along with the Festival Chorus, prepared for the occasion by Hugh Ross, their conductor.

Charles Munch again showed his love for the work of Berlioz. He seemed to mold each phrase, carefully control dynamics, and in general, take the black and white of the printed page and build it into a creative musical masterpiece. The French diction of the chorus was a tidy bit of sport. However, musically they did not seem well balanced, for individual voices, especially in the tenor section, seemed to protrude above what should have been an equality in the blend of vocal parts. The soloists of the evening were excellent with top honors going to Nicola Moscona, bass, who sang Friar Laurence. We should like to hear more of John McCollum, tenor, for his rich, clear, true tenor voice was one of unusual beauty. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, proved herself a most competent musician although the combination of the French language and the quality of her voice somehow seemed to produce a bit of incoherence.

Aside from the thunderstorm which stopped the performance in the middle of the soft scherzo, the program was a great musical experience; what one might call a musical rarity.

The program for Sunday afternoon, August 1st, was under the direction of Richard Burgin, concertmaster and Associate Conductor of the Boston Symphony. The program was devoted to the playing of music from the 20th Century.

Mr. Burgin conducted a rousing version of William Schuman's "American Festival Overture" and followed it with Ralph Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" for Double String Orchestra. The Fantasia gave Mr. Burgin every opportunity to display the beautiful strings of the Boston Symphony, and the rich sonorities of the composition, written so skillfully by Vaughn Williams, were exploited to a high degree of perfection.

Soloist of the afternoon was Ruth Posselt, violinist, who played the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto. Miss Posselt is a most versatile violinist, displaying a superb violin technique. (She did not seem the slightest bit disturbed when her string broke at the end of a most complex cadenza in the middle of the first movement.) She is the possessor of a quick, sure technique which was amply displayed in the intricacies of this concerto. What seemed to be lacking, however, was a rich full tone; a tone which never seemed to materialize. Her performance was a positive one, marked by rhythmical accuracy, vigor and vitality, but the concerto, however, never seemed to jell. It lacked the zest and impact so closely connected with the work of Khatcheturian.

Mr. Burgin brought the afternoon to a close with a well-paced performance of the Sibelius Symphony No. 2. This symphony, marked by an abundance of soaring melodies, and sumptuous orchestral color, displayed the flexability of this orchestra to its fullest degree.

Mrs. Judd compliments of Mrs. Moore

This is the sketch with some improvements

[264]

TANGLEW

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
JUL 27 1954

Berkshire Bus Tour

Saratoga Springs and the Berkshire Music Festival form the chief ingredients of a new Weekend Tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each weekend through Aug. 14.

14 Playtime - August - 1954

Munch Arrives At Tanglewood

New Haven Register July 4

Charles Munch arrived in New York from abroad last Friday and went to Lenox, Mass., yesterday to prepare for the Berkshire Music Festival which gets under way this week. The celebrated conductor of the Boston Symphony will speak at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon at 3:30. Munch, in addition to his role of conductor of the Festival concerts, is also the director of the Center.

Munch has been on a month's vacation in France. While abroad, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg. He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

He will conduct his first concert on Friday evening with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players. This is to be an all-Bach program in the Theater-Concert Hall, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following evening, he will conduct the first of the Shed concerts in which the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" will be given. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will participate in the performance and the soloists are to be Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

Next Sunday's all-Beethoven program (in the Shed) will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The celebrated French pianist, Claudio Arrau, is to be the soloist in the Concerto No. 5 after the opening work, the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3.

Arrau will also be the soloist in the first Festival concert, a chamber music program on Wednesday evening of this week. He will be heard in three Beethoven sonatas—Op. 79, 110 and 57—and the Bel Arte Trio will offer Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1.

Saturday's performance of "The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of several Berlioz works to be presented this season which will honor the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to promote a greater knowledge of the composer's music.

Visitors will be admitted to the Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, commencing at 10 a. m. There will be an admission charge of $1.00 and proceeds will go to the orchestra's Pension Fund.

Friday, August 13, Events from 6 to 11 p.m.
(RAIN OR SHINE)

"Tanglewood on Parade"

For the Benefit of the Berkshire Music Center

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
will give a concert in the Shed, to be conducted by Thomas Schippers
(a student of the Berkshire Music Center in 1948)

BIZET Symphony in C Major

STRAUSS "Salome" (Final Scene)
The part of Salome will be sung by
BRENDA LEWIS, Soprano
Popular star of Broadway, the Metropolitan Opera and the New York City Opera

THE BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
(First appearance outside Symphony Hall, Boston)
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
in a typical
POPS PROGRAM

Arthur Fiedler, Conductor

MUSIC SHED, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. - 8:30 p.m.

LAWN PARTY ... PICNIC SUPPER ... DOOR PRIZES
WALTZING ON THE LAWN

Watch for further announcements

TICKETS ... Box Seats — $5 ... Front Sections (All seats reserved) — $4 and $3
Unreserved Section — $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the school at 6 o'clock

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA · OPERA SCENES · THE CHORUS · CHAMBER MUSIC

Holders of Boxe

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS

NEAR TANGLEWOOD AND OTHER INTERESTING PLACES

SEND FOR BROCHURE OF BERKSHIRE PROPERTIES

A

F

In perfect condition this fine Colonial, tastefully remodeled, is in one of our most picturesque valleys. 133 acres, mostly woodland. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, Fireplace. Deep well. $30,000.

ON HILLTOP WITH EXTENSIVE VIEW TO THE WEST
Remodeled Colonial of 8 rooms, 2 baths. Fine spring water. 2-car garage. 13 acres. $18,000.

WHEELER and TAYLOR · INC.

REALTORS • GREAT BARRINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS
TELEPHONE GREAT BARRINGTON 1, or AMER LISTINGS 15 E. 53d St. N Y C MU 8-3824

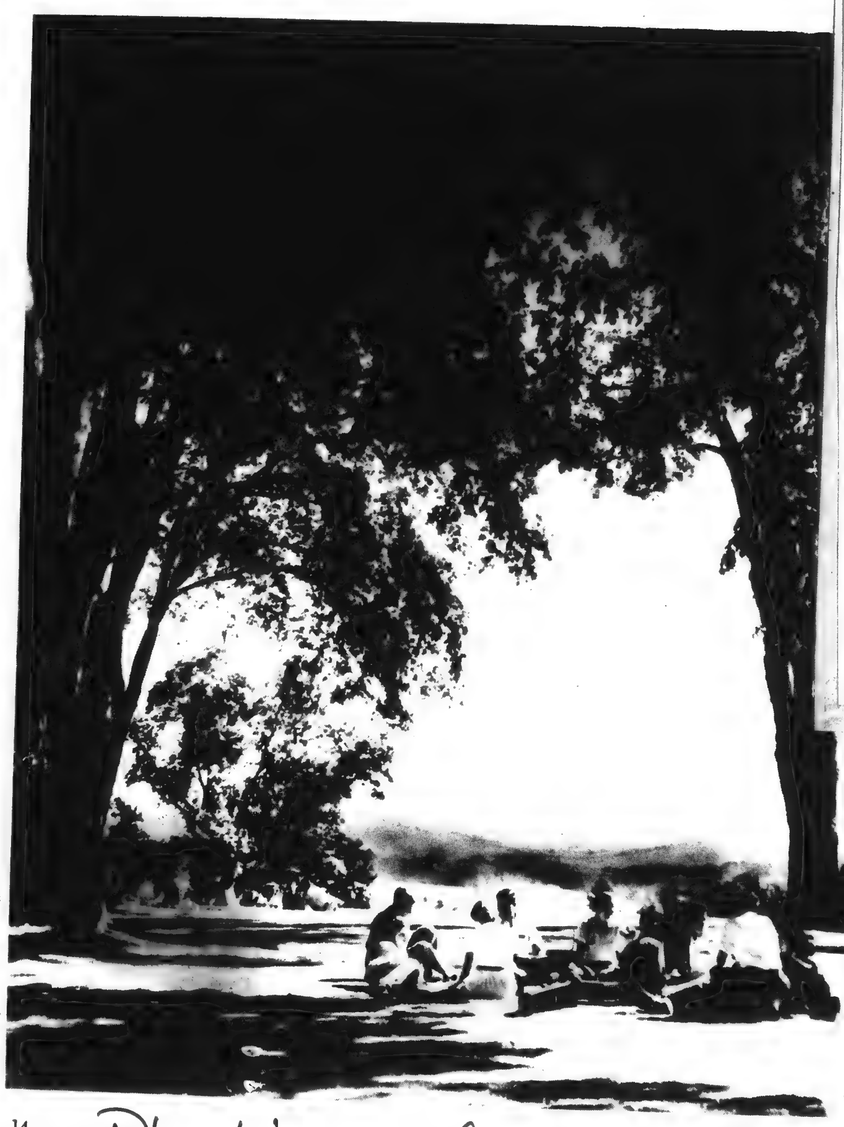
[265]

TANGLEW

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
7 1954

Berkshire Bus Tour

Saratoga Springs and the Berkshire Music Festival form the chief ingredients of a new Weekend Tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each weekend through Aug. 14.



Playtime - August - 1954

Friday, August 13, Events from 6 to 11 p.m.

(RAIN OR SHINE)

"Tanglewood on Parade"

For the Benefit of the Berkshire Music Center

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

will give a concert in the Shed, to be conducted by

Thomas Schippers

(a student of the Berkshire Music Center in 1948)

BIZET Symphony in C Major

STRAUSS "Salome" (Final Scene)

The part of Salome will be sung by

BRENDA LEWIS, Soprano

Popular star of Broadway, the Metropolitan Opera and the New York City Opera

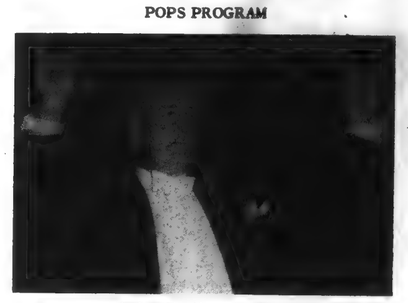
THE BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

(First appearance outside Symphony Hall, Boston)

ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor

in a typical

POPS PROGRAM



Arthur Fiedler, Conductor

MUSIC SHED, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. - 8:30 p.m.

LAWN PARTY ... PICNIC SUPPER ... DOOR PRIZES
WALTZING ON THE LAWN

Watch for further announcements

TICKETS ... Box Seats — $5 ... Front Sections (All seats reserved) — $4 and $3
Unreserved Section — $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the school at 6 o'clock

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA · OPERA SCENES · THE CHORUS · CHAMBER MUSIC

Holders of Box

Munch Arrives At Tanglewood

New Haven Register July 4

Charles Munch arrived in New York from abroad last Friday and went to Lenox, Mass., yesterday to prepare for the Berkshire Music Festival which gets under way this week. The celebrated conductor of the Boston Symphony will speak at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon at 3:30. Munch, in addition to his role of conductor of the Festival concerts, is also the director of the Center.

Munch has been on a month's vacation in France. While abroad, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg. He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

He will conduct his first concert on Friday evening with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players. This is to be an all-Bach program in the Theater-Concert Hall, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following evening, he will conduct the first of the Shed concerts in which the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" will be given. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will participate in the performance and the soloists are to be Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

Next Sunday's all-Beethoven program (in the Shed) will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The celebrated French pianist, Claudio Arrau, is to be the soloist in the Concerto No. 5 after the opening work, the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3.

Arrau will also be the soloist in the first Festival concert, a chamber music program on Wednesday evening of this week. He will be heard in three Beethoven sonatas—Op. 79, 110 and 57—and the Bel Arte Trio will offer Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1.

Saturday's performance of "The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of several Berlioz works to be presented this season which will honor the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to promote a greater knowledge of the composer's music.

Visitors will be admitted to the Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, commencing at 10 a. m. There will be an admission charge of $1.00 and proceeds will go to the orchestra's Pension Fund.

[265]

THE BERKSHIRE HILLS

NEAR TANGLEWOOD AND OTHER INTERESTING PLACES

SEND FOR BROCHURE OF BERKSHIRE PROPERTIES

In perfect condition this fine Colonial, tastefully remodeled, is in one of our most picturesque valleys. 133 acres, mostly woodland. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, Fireplace. Deep well. $30,000.

ON HILLTOP WITH EXTENSIVE VIEW TO THE WEST
Remodeled Colonial of 8 rooms, 2 baths. Fine spring water. 2-car garage. 13 acres. $18,000.

WHEELER and TAYLOR · INC.

REALTORS • GREAT BARRINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS

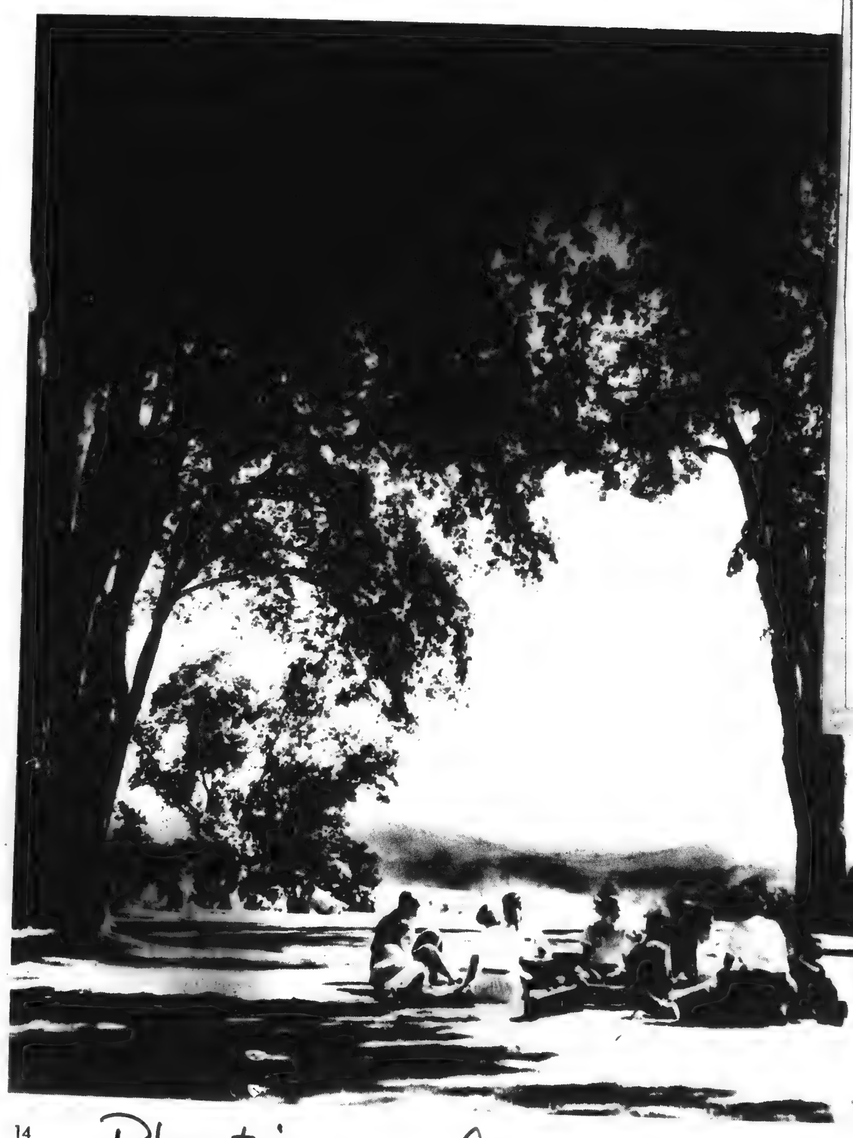
TELEPHONE GREAT BARRINGTON 1, or AMER. LISTINGS 15 E. 53d St., N.Y.C. MU 8-3824

TANGLEW

NEW YORK, N. Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
7 1954

Berkshire Bus Tour

Saratoga Springs and the Berkshire Music Festival form the chief ingredients of a new Weekend Tour to be operated by Bingler Vacation Tours, Inc., 203 W. 41st St., each weekend through Aug. 14.



Friday, August 13, Events from 6 to 11 p.m.

(RAIN OR SHINE)

"Tanglewood on Parade"

For the Benefit of the Berkshire Music Center

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

will give a concert in the Shed, to be conducted by

Thomas Schippers

(a student of the Berkshire Music Center in 1948)

BIZET Symphony in C Major

STRAUSS "Salome" (Final Scene)

The part of Salome will be sung by

BRENDA LEWIS, Soprano

Popular star of Broadway, the Metropolitan Opera and the New York City Opera

THE BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA

(First appearance outside Symphony Hall, Boston)

ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor

in a typical

POPS PROGRAM

Arthur Fiedler, Conductor

MUSIC SHED, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. - 8:30 p.m.

LAWN PARTY . . . PICNIC SUPPER . . . DOOR PRIZES
WALTZING ON THE LAWN

Watch for further announcements

TICKETS . . . Box Seats — $5 . . . Front Sections (All seats reserved) — $4 and $3
Unreserved Section — $2.50

All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the school at 6 o'clock

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA · OPERA SCENES · THE CHORUS · CHAMBER MUSIC

Holders of Boxes and Reserved Seats are invited to a special performance of Opera in the Formal Garden at 4 o'clock

A mid-summer's day dream . . .
Music and Tanglewood

Munch Arrives At Tanglewood

New Haven Register July 4

Charles Munch arrived in New York from abroad last Friday and went to Lenox, Mass., yesterday to prepare for the Berkshire Music Festival which gets under way this week. The celebrated conductor of the Boston Symphony will speak at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center this afternoon at 3:30. Munch, in addition to his role of conductor of the Festival concerts, is also the director of the Center.

Munch has been on a month's vacation in France. While abroad, he conducted at music festivals in Bordeaux and in his native city of Strasbourg. He also conducted concerts at the Opera in Paris.

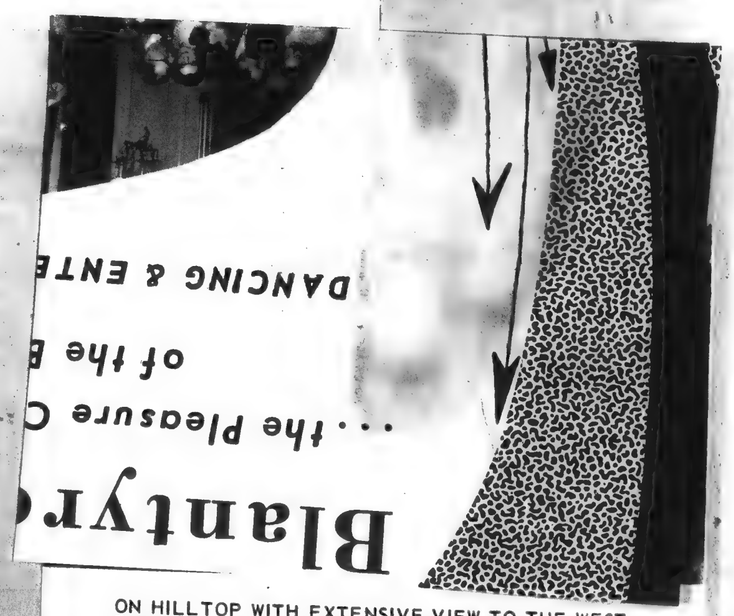
He will conduct his first concert on Friday evening with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players. This is to be an all-Bach program in the Theater-Concert Hall, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist. The following evening, he will conduct the first of the Shed concerts in which the first Tanglewood performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" will be given. The Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society will participate in the performance and the soloists are to be Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm.

Next Sunday's all-Beethoven program (in the Shed) will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. The celebrated French pianist, Claudio Arrau, is to be the soloist in the Concerto No. 5 after the opening work, the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3.

Arrau will also be the soloist in the first Festival concert, a chamber music program on Wednesday evening of this week. He will be heard in three Beethoven sonatas—Op. 79, 110 and 57—and the Bel Arte Trio will offer Beethoven's String Trio in G, Op. 9, No. 1.

Saturday's performance of "The Damnation of Faust" will be the first of several Berlioz works to be presented this season which will honor the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth. Munch is president of the newly-formed Berlioz Society, founded to promote a greater knowledge of the composer's music.

Visitors will be admitted to the Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony, commencing at 10 a. m. There will be an admission charge of $1.00 and proceeds will go to the orchestra's Pension Fund.



ON HILLTOP WITH EXTENSIVE VIEW TO THE WEST
Remodeled Colonial of 8 rooms, 2 baths. Fine spring water. 2-car garage. 13 acres. $18,000.

WHEELER and TAYLOR · INC.

REALTORS • GREAT BARRINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS

TELEPHONE GREAT BARRINGTON 1, or AMER. LISTINGS 15 E. 53d St., N.Y.C. MU 8-3824

[265]

New York Herald-Tribune

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1954

Berkshire Festival

Rewritten Copland Opera, 'Tender Land,' Is Produced

By Evans Clinchy

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—Few operatic composers have ever been granted the reprieve from the finality of the critical word that Aaron Copland received last night and tonight at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Instead of watching his first full-length opera, "The Tender Land" sink softly into the oblivion of "worthy but far from faultless" after its premiere in the spring at the New York City Center, Mr. Copland has instead been able to rewrite his piece almost completely in hopes of wiping out its previous faint-hearted reception.

Split Into 3 Acts

With his librettist, Horace Everett, Mr. Copland has split his opera into three acts. He has changed its setting from the 1930s to 1910. And he has added three scenes designed to increase the over-all dramatic punch—a singlar lack of which was the primary cause for complaint at the premiere.

As it stands now, abetted by an extraordinarily resourceful production by Tanglewood's Opera Department, the work is a sombre study of barren life on a mid-western farm, the pitiful unhappiness that can result from conflicts between duty and desire, the rigidity of home and the urge to spread wings.

Whatever Mr. Everett's exact revisions may be he has not succeeded in clothing his simple story with the stuc of dramatic conviction. His language for the most part if felicitous and quite singable. But his words alone cannot carry a plot that lacks a taut, compelling structure. His people exist—they speak and sing—but the audience is rarely made to feel that they are driven by their very humanity to speak and sing and act the way they do on the stage.

Astringent Music

Mr. Copland himself must share a bit of the blame for this lack of a sense of absolute necessity. His music is just a bit too astringent to sound the depths of the heart. It seems aimed more at the head, and on this level it often aptly summons up the dust and sweat of a Mid-Western farm and, perhaps too often, its essential drabness. Even in a rousing "hoe-down" scene there is little real sparkle. Only in the "Promise of Glory" finale to the first act does the music open up and mercingly illuminate the inner lives of the characters.

Although Mr. Copland thoroughly convinced the opera did present an approximation of life, and this was in great part attributable to the excellent production. John Blankenchip's moody lighting and his mobile, skeletal sets were exquisitely gaunt. Frederic Cohen had staged the piece in as vivid a manner as possible, and Frederic Waldman conducted with great zest and intensity.

Rosemary Carlos as the Girl, Jecerson Morris as the drifter, Mary Mackenzie as the mother, and Thomas Stewart as the Grandfather all sang with freshness and a splendid projection not only of the words themselves but also of their meaning.

"The Tender Land" is a fine, honest try, but it fails to make its people vibrant. Thus, it essentially fails.

Come to

TANGLEWOOD!

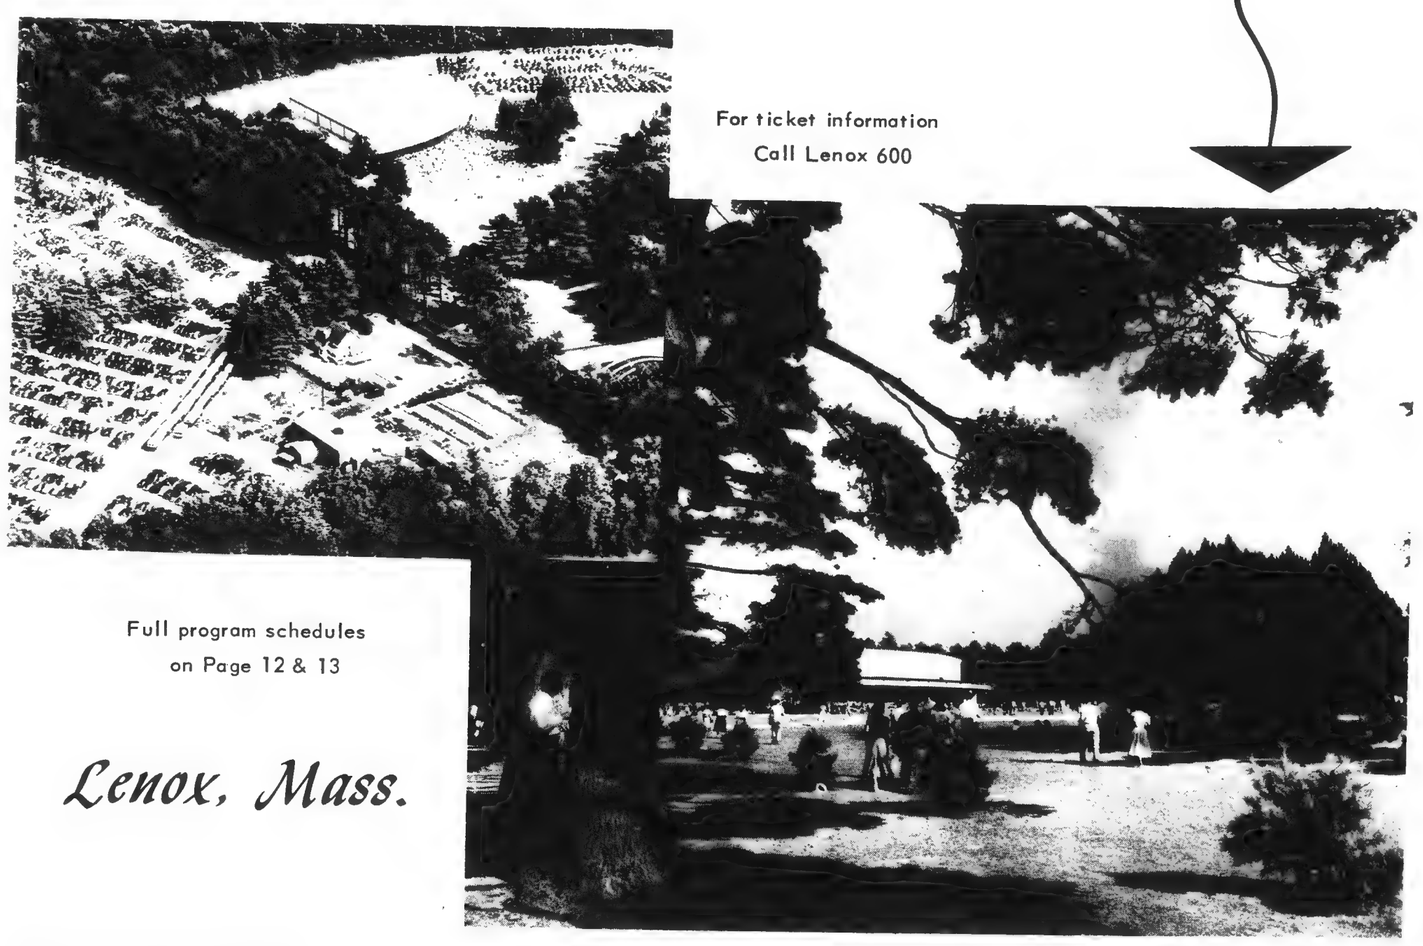
The Berkshire Festival - 1954

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

24 concerts - July 7 to August 15

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE - Gala Concert
Friday Evening, August 13th



For ticket information
Call Lenox 600

Full program schedules
on Page 12 & 13

Lenox, Mass.

PLAYTIME, AUGUST 1954

Playtime - August - 1954

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES

JUL 12 1954

Berlioz and Beethoven Works Featured at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The genius of Berlioz consists in a masterly use of orchestral timbres, a galvanic rhythmic sense, and a resplendence of tonal resource.

All these traits crowded upon the ear Saturday night at Tanglewood when the Shed concerts were formally initiated with an exciting performance of the composer's "Damnation of Faust." Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists in the first of many scheduled Berlioz works.

* * *

TO THOSE ACQUAINTED only with the famous orchestral excerpts this masterpiece, so sorely neglected in this country, must come as a complete revelation. It contains an infinitude of Berliozan effect, an astounding gamut of orchestral color, and a propulsive drive that carries everything before it.

This is no literal re-telling of the Goethe classic and, considering the dramatic weakness of the Boito version, the composer wisely avoided this pitfall. He chose at random what appealed to him in the story and made some original additions which, at first consideration, may seem disjointed and out of context.

But there is at least a spiritual unity here, one might call it a symbolic verisimilitude to the story. Faust, Marguerite, and Mephistopheles are directly out of Goethe, eternal figures for all to observe.

* * *

ONE MAY CAVIL — with esthetic justice — over the composer's placing Faust in the Hungarian plains so that the celebrated Rakoczy March may be interpolated. But no one can deny its tremendous effect, coming as a climax to Part One. The audience was almost literally pulled up out of its seat Saturday night.

Mr. Munch, who is such an ardent protagonist for Berlioz, conducted with dedication and complete understanding and the orchestra responded with a cohesive fervor rare in the annals of these Summer concerts. The well-trained choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe were in unusually good form, especially in the peasant choruses which require facile articulation.

The distinguished soloists were Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm. It was Martial Singher, however, who dominated the proceedings with his authoritative and beautifully conceived Mephisto, a more diabolical figure than Gounod created.

Mr. Poleri sang Faust with ringing intensity and surprising refinement and Miss Steber, as Marguerite, was at her very best. Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander was resonantly effective.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood was an occasion for greeting old and trusted friends.

Certainly not least in importance was the return of Pierre Monteux in the role of guest conductor. According to the archives and veteran followers of the Boston organization Mr. Monteux was regular conductor of the orchestra right after World War One and since 1951 has been a frequent guest.

* * *

HIS ROLY-POLY FIGURE and inscrutable expression are always a source of delight, but he is not a man to be taken at face value. For behind this amiable facade is a leader of impeccable musicianship and taste, a peerless conductor of the French repertory, and one of the great symphonic directors of this era.

And he brought with him three tried and true "friends" — Beethoven's "Leonore No. 3 Overture," the "Emperor" Concerto, and the most popular of all symphonies, the same composer's "Fifth." The mere inclusion of the latter did not guarantee a record-breaking crowd — but there were more than 10,000 in attendance.

It is almost superfluous to say that Mr. Monteux expounded this All-Beethoven program to the audience with his customary adherence to reasonable tempi and tasteful dynamics. Such an approach, coming after so many exaggerated interpretations, can have a salutary effect — and such was the case Sunday.

* * *

A PARTICULAR delight was the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which gained immeasurably in emotional impact from the emphasis on the cantilena passages. Mr. Monteux knows how to draw out the long line and make it count for something.

Claudio Arrau, the Chilean pianist, was the soloist in the Beethoven "Emperor" and sustained his reputation as one of the outstanding technicians today. However, there is more than technique to Beethoven and we occasionally found his bravura style a little annoying. He did relax his dynamism in the second movement with very gratifying results.

[266]

New York Herald-Tribune

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1954

Berkshire Festival

Rewritten [illegible] Opera, 'Tender L[illegible]' Produced

By Evans Clinchy

LENOX, Mass., Aug. [illegible] operatic composers have [illegible] been granted the reprieve from the finality of the critical word that Aaron Copland received last night and tonight at the Berkshire Music Festival.

Instead of watching his first full-length opera, "The Tender Land" sink softly into the oblivion of unworthy but far from faultless" after its premiere in the spring at the New York City Center, Mr. Copland has instead been able to rewrite this piece almost completely in hopes of wiping out its previous faint-hearted reception.

Split Into 3 Acts

With his librettist, Horace Everett, Mr. Copland has split his opera into three acts. He has changed its setting from the 1930s to 1910. And he has added three scenes designed to increase the over-all dramatic punch—a singlar lack of which was the primary cause for complaint at the premiere.

As it stands now, abetted by an extraordinarily resourceful production by Tanglewood's Opera Department, the work is a sombre study of barren life on a mid-western farm, the pitiful unhappiness that can result from conflicts between duty and desire, the rigidity of home and the urge to spread wings.

Whatever Mr. Everett's exact revisions may be he has not succeeded in clothing his simple story with the cloak of dramatic conviction. His language for the most part if felicitous and quite singable. But his words alone cannot carry a plot that lacks a taut, compelling structure. His people exist—they speak and sing—but the audience is rarely made to feel that they are driven by their very humanity to speak and sing and act the way they do on the stage.

Astringent Music

Mr. Copland himself must share a bit of the blame for this lack of a sense of absolute necessity. His music is just a bit too astringent to sound the depths of the heart. It seems aimed more at the head, and on this level it often aptly summons up the dust and sweat of a Mid-Western [illegible] and, perhaps too often, the essential drabness. Even the rousing "hoe-down" scene [illegible] little real sparkle. Only the "Promise of Glory" finale [illegible] does the music [illegible] piercingly illumin[illegible] of the character[illegible]

Althou[illegible] roughly convince[illegible] all pre-sent an [illegible] of life, and this [illegible] part attributable [illegible] excellent production. John Blankenchip's moody lighting and his mobile, skeletal sets were exquisitely gaunt. Frederic Cohen had staged the piece in as vivid a manner as possible, and Frederic Waldman conducted with great zest and intensity.

Rosemary Carlos as the Girl, Jecerson Morris as the drifter, [illegible]achkenzie as the mother, [illegible]homas Stewart as the father all sang with fresh-[illegible]nd a splendid projection [illegible]ty of the words them-[illegible]ut also of their meaning. "The Tender Land" is a fine, honest try, but it fails to make its people vibrant. Thus, it essentially fails.

Come to

TANGLEWOOD!

The Berkshire Festival - 1954

Boston Symphony Orchestra

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director

24 concerts - July 7 to August 15

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE - Gala Concert

Friday Evening, August 13th

For ticket information

Call Lenox 600

Full program schedules

on Page 12 & 13

Lenox, Mass.

PLAYTIME, AUGUST 1954

Playtime - August - 1954

HARTFORD, CONN. TIMES

JUL 12 1954

Berlioz and Beethoven Works Featured at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The genius of Berlioz consists in a masterly use of orchestral timbres, a galvanic rhythmic sense and a resplendence of tonal resource.

All these traits crowded upon the ear Saturday night at Tanglewood when the Shed concerts were formally initiated with an exciting performance of the composer's "Damnation of Faust." Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony, the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists in the first of many scheduled Berlioz works.

* * *

TO THOSE ACQUAINTED only with the famous orchestral excerpts this masterpiece, so sorely neglected in this country, must come as a complete revelation. It contains an infinitude of Berliozan effect, an astounding gamut of orchestral color, and a propulsive drive that carries everything before it.

This is no literal re-telling of the Goethe classic and, considering the dramatic weakness of the Boito version, the composer wisely avoided this pitfall. He chose at random what appealed to him in the story and made some original additions which, at first consideration, may seem disjointed and out of context.

But there is at least a spiritual unity here, one might call it a symbolic verisimilitude to the story. Faust, Marguerite, and Mephistopheles are directly out of Goethe, eternal figures for all to observe.

* * *

ONE MAY CAVIL — with esthetic justice — over the composer's placing Faust in the Hungarian plains so that the celebrated Rakoczy March may be interpolated. But no one can deny its tremendous effect, coming as a climax to Part One. The audience was almost literally pulled up out of its seat Saturday night.

Mr. Munch, who is such an ardent protagonist for Berlioz, conducted with dedication and complete understanding and the orchestra responded with a cohesive fervor rare in the annals of these Summer concerts. The well-trained choruses from Harvard and Radcliffe were in unusually good form, especially in the peasant choruses which require facile articulation.

The distinguished soloists were Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm. It was Martial Singher, however, who dominated the proceedings with his authoritative and beautifully conceived Mephisto, a more diabolical figure than Gounod created.

Mr. Poleri sang Faust with ringing intensity and surprising refinement and Miss Steber, as Marguerite, was at her very best. Donald Gramm in the brief role of Brander was resonantly effective.

Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood was an occasion for greeting old and trusted friends.

Certainly not least in importance was the return of Pierre Monteux in the role of guest conductor. According to the archives and veteran followers of the Boston organization Mr. Monteux was regular conductor of the orchestra right after World War One and since 1951 has been a frequent guest.

* * *

HIS ROLY-POLY FIGURE and inscrutable expression are always a source of delight, but he is not a man to be taken at face value. For behind this amiable facade is a leader of impeccable musicianship and taste, a peerless conductor of the French repertory, and one of the great symphonic directors of this [illegible]

And [illegible] brought with him three [illegible]ated and true "friends" [illegible]eethoven's "Leonore No. 3 [illegible]verture," the "Emperor" Concerto, and the most popular of all symphonies, the same composer's "Fifth." The mere inclusion of the latter did not guarantee a record-breaking crowd — but there were more than 10,000 in attendance.

It is almost superfluous to say that Mr. Monteux expounded this All-Beethoven program to the audience with his customary adherence to reasonable tempi and tasteful dynamics. Such an approach, coming after so many exaggerated interpretations, can have a salutary effect — and such was the case Sunday.

* * *

A PARTICULAR delight was the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which gained immeasurably in emotional impact from the emphasis on the cantilena passages. Mr. Monteux knows how to draw out the long line and make it count for something.

Claudio Arrau, the Chilean pianist, was the soloist in the Beethoven "Emperor" and sustained his reputation as one of the outstanding technicians today. However, there is more than technique to Beethoven and we occasionally found his bravura style a little annoying. He did relax his dynamism in the second movement with very gratifying results.

[266]

MEMORIAL BEGUN FOR KOUSSEVITZKY

Berkshire Citizens Contribute for Scholarship to Aid Young Composers

EVEN CHILDREN DONATING

Fund Already Totals $5,000 —First Beneficiary Will Be Named Soon

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 3—A group of residents of the Berkshire area have joined to establish a fitting memorial to Serge Koussevitzky.

The late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra played a decisive role in establishing the Berkshire Festival and founded the training ground for young musicians at Tanglewood known as the Berkshire Music Centre.

The tribute is taking the form of a Koussevitzky Memorial Fund, which will endow at least one annual scholarship for a gifted young conductor. The first award will be made on Aug. 14, the final day of this summer's Berkshire Center session.

Thus far the fund, which was started almost spontaneously, has reached $5,000. Its objective is a minimum of $15,000. If it exceeds this target, the committee will set additional conducting scholarships.

School Children Give

Contributions have ranged from $2 to $500. The most touching gift came from a group of Pittsfield children of elementary school age. They held a carnival some days ago, setting up their own sideshows and providing their own refreshments. They realized $59 and contributed it to the Koussevitzky Memorial Fund.

The idea of the memorial started with Mrs. William Merriam Crane who lives in nearby Richmond. She was troubled by the fact that no lasting tribute to Mr. Koussevitzky, who died in 1951, had been set up at Tanglewood, whose very existence he had so much to do in shaping.

Mrs. Crane was a long-time admirer of Mr. Koussevitzky. She and her husband went to a concert in Paris in 1921 and heard an exciting program conducted by the then relatively unknown musician from Russia.

She still has the program of the event, and she recalls that Maurice Ravel was in the audience to hear his "La Valse" played with brilliance and that Serge Prokofieff's "Scythian Suite" had its premiere and won tumultuous acclaim.

When Mr. Koussevitzky several years later took over the leadership of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. Crane were faithful subscribers. Whehn the Berkshire Festival began to develop under the conductor's imaginative guidance, the Cranes were steadfast supporters.

But in all those years Mrs. Crane did not meet the conductor personally and could not tell him of her admiration. It was only after he died that she went to Mrs. Koussevitzky to speak of her feelings.

Festival Began Poorly

That residents of the Berkshires, without official prompting, have taken the initiative in organizing this fund is a commentary in itself on what Tanglewood with its Festival and Center have come to mean not only to this area but the nation as a whole.

It is no secret that when the festival was begun in 1934 local people had doubts about its value. When Mr. Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony became part of the festival several years later it took on solidity.

Under Mr. Koussevitzky's large-visioned leadership, the festival expanded steadily. And it has continued to grow under the guidance of Charles Munch, who succeeded Mr. Koussevitzky as musical director of the Boston Symphony.

This year the festival has the most ambitious program of its history, embracing not only the regular concerts in the music shed but also weekly programs for chamber orchestra and a new weekly series for small chamber music units. The audiences will probably reach an all-time high, and as usual they will be drawn from all over the country. These audiences are a show in themselves in their mixture of formality and informality and in their relish of fine music.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Fund Committee has raised its money locally, but it has no prejudice against donations from beyond the Berkshires. Paul K. Fodder of the Agricultural Bank in Pittsfield will cheerfully accept contributions from sources outside this community.

The Berkshire Festival Lures Music Lovers to a Sylvan Setting at Tanglewood

New York Times - August 4

With food to satisfy the inner man and music for their esthetic senses, picknickers sprawl on lawn. Other enthusiasts sit under shed where musicians perform.

The New York Times (by Sam Falk)

Two visitors relax on the grass as they listen to selections played by Boston Symphony

COPLAND'S OPERA SUNG AT FESTIVAL

N.Y. Times

Revised 'Tender Land' Heard at Lenox—Rosemary Carlos Repeats Leading Role

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2—Aaron Copland has been making changes in his opera, "The Tender Land." At least two of these revisions were in the work as it was performed here Monday night at Tanglewood by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, and while they do not alter the musical profile of the piece, they do make a difference to the story.

Mr. Copland and his librettist, Horace Everett, have had the courage and wisdom to concede that their opera was weak in dramatic conflict. As it was done at the New York City Center last season, its appeal lay in its evocation of atmosphere. But it was clear that this would not be enough to secure a place for the opera, and the authors have taken measures to overcome some of the defects.

A full report on the changes cannot be filed for the simple reason that they were not all visible and audible. The work has been broken up into three acts, and in each of the acts a short but vital scene is being added. Mr. Copland did not hesitate tonight to explain where these additions had been made in the first two acts, but he seemed a bit shy about discussing the third act change.

Pressed for details, he smiled and said, "I haven't finished it yet, but it will be in the published score and, I hope, the next production."

Set 20 Years Earlier

In the first version, the opera was set in the Nineteen Thirties; now it has been moved back some twenty years. The difference, as a result, is small, making for a change in the kind of costumes worn by the cast. The big difference is in the relationship between the girl, who plays the leading role, and her grandfather, who is the head of her family.

In the earlier—shall we say the City Center version—grandpa was a quaint old gentleman without much character. He has become a more dominant force, and the girl's need to leave home and to find her own way of life now comes into collision with the old man's will. Not enough has been done to make this conflict potent, but what has been accomplished improves the opera.

The piece as a whole strikes one, upon rehearing, as an effort worthy of Mr. Copland, who is one of our distinguished composers. There is a wealth of musical subtlety in this score, though its means are economical and its style simple. Touches in the orchestration show the hand of the expert, and when Mr. Copland allows himself to turn lyrical, he can do so effectively. The quintet that ends the first act is a felicitous, soaring thing.

The Center's production, staged by Frederic Cohen, the opera department's head this summer, is resourceful. The color and freshness of the period are suggested without strain, and what one admired most was the way in which Mr. Cohen moved some of his characters at strategic moments to imply action not in the story.

Sang Role At City Center

Rosemary Carlos, who sang the leading female role in the City Center version, was in the part tonight, and once again she sang sensitively and looked every bit the pretty young graduate-to-be. Thomas Stewart was a sturdy grandpa, and Jefferson Morris and John Hornor were believable young drifters. Mary MacKenzie sang Ma Moss creditably. The others in the cast were Robert Simpson, Nicholas Maxymuk, Regina Srafaty, Esther Schatzow, and Eva Rubin, who was the little sister.

Frederic Waldman, who conducted, did an outstanding job with a student orchestra. John Blankenchip's sets and lighting and Leo Van Witsen's costumes had charm.

On Tuesday night the opera will be repeated with other singers in the principal roles. Mr. Copland's last-act addition will not be ready; he does not work that fast. But one looks forward to the completed version.

One "suspects that "The Tender Land," though it may not have enough sheer vitality and power to succeed in the repertories of the great opera companies, will be welcomed and relished in small theatres and workshops across the land. And who knows? Its feeling for a simpler America may prove to be attractive to operagoers in other countries.

[267]

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 12 1954

Tanglewood Berlioz Is Magnificient

Musical Doubleheader Marks Opening of Top Festival Concerts

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 10—(Special)—The greater the day, the greater the deed—and there were great deeds here at Tanglewood this evening.

The event was a kind of musical doubleheader. It marked the opening of the major concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. At the same time, it inaugurated a Berlioz season, commemorating a bit late by the calendar perhaps, the 150th anniversary of the birth of the great French romantic.

The celebratory work was Berlioz's dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust,' and it took Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard and Radcliffe College Glee Clubs, Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm to perform it.

Thrilling to Hear

For Berlioz didn't do things by halves. And it was thrilling to hear and it is happy to report that nothing was done by halves in the performance tonight. It was magnificent in every department. Mr. Munch had been sort of warming up for Berlioz during the last two seasons doing the requiem and the "Romeo and Juliet," and he had been inclined to take them on the subdued side. Tonight, however, he gave 'The Damnation of Faust' everything everybody had — Berlioz, his performers and himself. It shone in beauty and was incandescent in poignance, and where bedazzlement was called for, or exquisiteness, it was brilliant.

Berlioz wrote numerous great works, in which the richness of imagination was matched only by the quality of it. Yet each time you hear one of the masterpieces, the difference of each strikes you afresh. How elegantly French is the "Romeo and Juliet." How Teutonically robust and luxuriant "The Damnation of Faust" is, over so much of its course. It is so suited to the atmosphere of Goethe's work, even if it completely eschews its philosophical vein.

In French Vein

At the same time, its spirit of theater is almost entirely in the French vein. And like all Berlioz's music, it is so lucid, so transparent, so choice in its means and effects that one can only wonder why Berlioz was so long deemed little more than a wild-eyed frenetic, a chaotic romantic, with emotions in place of a head.

"The Damnation of Faust," is not a profound work, but it is continually moving in a tender way and it is magnificently pointed up with vivid areas which constitute its mise-en-scene more than its meaning. The famous Hungarian march, the will-o'-the-wisp music, the student songs are as striking as anything the work has to say in a purely dramatic vein. Certainly, Berlioz was intent at least on telling Goethe's story of "Faust." But what he relished most of all was not the opportunity for high narrative or solid drama, but the chance to make an extraordinary variety of gleaming, lustrous music for voices, for orchestra. And he succeeded almost better here than in any other of his large works.

Mr. Munch Brilliant

Thus, the wonder of tonight's performance was its complete, musical handsomeness. It is hard to remember when Mr. Munch in a long history of brilliance and sensitivity, was quite so brilliant, or sensitive, or imaginative as he was tonight, in reading "The Damnation of Faust." It is hard to remember too, many occasions when the Boston Symphony played with such inspired virtuosity, in a score where every note has point and pith, every passage a special gleam.

The singers were splendid. David Poleri was the Faust, singing with a wonderful combination of the lyric and dramatic tempers, in beautiful long lines. Eleanor Steber was Marguerite, singing with high style, fine voice, elegance. Martial Singher was Mephistopheles. He is perhaps not the possessor of so substantial a voice as he was formerly, but he is a most knowledgeable artist, poised and alert. Donald Gramm, who sang Brander, is a youn g man with a bass voice of remarkable suppleness and clarity, and a lively sense of theater.

The Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society gave, I am happy to report, one of the best choral performances I have heard in ages. They had been beautifully prepared by G. Wallace Woodworth their faces shown with eagerness and they gave all their hearts as well as voices to Berlioz and to Mr. Munch, in impeccable, imaginative song.

It was the perfect intergration of all these elements that made tonight's performance so triumphant. That and the fact that Mr. Munch took care that it should not appear like an opera done in street clothes. He kept it a symphonic-choral work something quite different, something very compelling in a medium not too frequently attempted. He could have made it sound like opera. That would have been the easy way. He made it "a dramatic legend" instead, and memorably so.

T. H. P.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
EVE. NEWS
JUL 12 1954

All-Beethoven Program Inaugurates Shed Series

Ten Thousand Music Lovers on Hand at Tanglewood To Hear Boston Symphony With Pierre Monteux, Conductor, and Claudio Arrau, Piano Soloist

By W. HARLEY RUDKIN

New friends and old friends gathered by the thousand in the great Shed and on the wide lawns at Tanglewood yesterday for an afternoon of Beethoven with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Conductor Pierre Monteux and Pianist Claudio Arrau. For performers and listeners, it was a fortuitous occasion, laced with brilliance, filled with warmth, and a wholly fitting inaugural for the major symphonic series at the Berkshire Music Festival.

CLAUDIO ARRAU

For Mr. Monteux and Mr. Arrau, who collaborated yesterday on the Concerto in E Flat Major, the so-called "Emperor," the event must have had a certain nostalgia, for it was in 1924 that the conductor and soloist, with the Boston Symphony, first appeared jointly in concert.

A lot of years, a lot of accomplishment and a lot of glory have come to all of them since then, and it is pleasant to be able to report that all seem to have stood the test of time exceedingly well.

Mr. Arrau, one of the world's foremost Beethoven interpreters, was heard earlier in the week in another all-Beethoven concert, but it is one thing to present a solo program, and quite another to perform with a full orchestra. This is an occasion where the blend is more important than the individual; where virtuosity is necessary, but valuable only in its collaboration with the other component parts.

The concerto, which followd the opening overture, gave Mr. Monteux and his soloist plenty of room for bravura, for that's the way it was written. And, plenty of bravura they gave it, to the obvious delight and enthusiasm of the 10,000 people who had turned out to see and hear them.

The Beethoven Fifth, which closed the afternoon program, lies just beyond the "Eroica," and just behind the "Pastoral," and has a tremendous rhythmic sweep that carries everything before it. It was this imperious call that Mr. Monteux gave it yesterday, completely rising to the challenge of the composer.

For those who like their Beethoven served piping hot, this was their dish. It had everything, including a well-deserved ovation at the close. Nothing else would have done.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 8 - 1954

First of Berkshire Festival Concerts Attended by 1,400

The first of the 1954 Berkshire Festival concerts, a program of chamber music by Beethoven, was held at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox last evening, with some 1,400 persons present. Featured artists were the Bel Arte trio and Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau.

Concert Tomorrow

Th initial week's concerts will continue tomorrow evening, also at the theater-concert hall, when a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony orchestra members will play a program of Bach's Brandenburg concertos. The orchestra will be under the direction of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston symphony, with Lukas Foss as the piano soloist.

On Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, the scene will shift to the larger music shed, where the full Boston Symphony orchestra will perform in the first two of the 12 major concerts on the year's schedule.

Last night's chamber music concert marked the start of a new programing idea for the festival. In the past a number of chamber music concerts were donated by the late Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge for the aid of the Berkshire Music center and were patronized in increasingly larger numbers. This year Mr. Munch, the festival director, conceived the idea of incorporating them into the festival framework, with noted ensembles and soloists to appear each of the six Wednesday evenings.

First Appearance

The Bel Arte trio, made up of Ruth Posselt, violinist; Joseph de Pasquale, violist, and Martin Hoherman, violincellist, was making its first Tanglewood appearance and its members were loudly applauded by the audience and warmly praised by the critics.

Mr. Arrau's performance was equally well received. He is a veteran at Tanglewood and his performance at the 1949 festival set an all-time attendance record of 14,200 persons.

Tomorrow night's Chamber orchestra concert also marks a change in the program schedule for the festival. Known popularly as the "Bach-Mozart concerts," these increasingly popular events were formerly concentrated on the first three week-ends of the festival. This year, however, one will be held each Friday evening for the six-week series.

Saturday Concert

The first performance of the 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra Saturday night will feature Hector Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," being presented for the first time at Tanglewood. The Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe Choral society of 110 voices, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, will also participate. Soloists, all making their festival debuts, will be Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass.

The first Sunday afternoon music shed concert will have Pierre Monteux as guest conductor in an all-Beethoven program, consisting of the Overture to "Leonore," No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") and Symphony No. 5. Mr. Arrau, who first appeared with the Boston Symphony 30 years ago under Mr. Monteux, will be the soloist for the "Emperor" work.

The evening concerts at Tanglewood start at 8.30 o'clock and the ones on Sunday afternoons at 2.30.

"Operation Shuttle"

The extended concert schedule at Tanglewood and the lengthening of the schedule of Esplanade concerts in Boston will mean that some 65 members of the Boston Symphony will have to commute back and forth between Lenox and Boston each week in what has been called "Operation Shuttle." It has been estimated that the orchestra members will travel 1,650 miles each during the summer months to meet the scheduling requirements.

The group will travel from Boston to Tanglewood each Thursday and back to the Hub on Monday.

A number of changes in the Festival schedule were also announced today.

For the concert in the music shed on Aug. 1, Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony, who will conduct the orchestra that afternoon with his wife, Ruth Posselt, as violin soloist, has scheduled William Schuman's "An American Festival Overture" as the first work. It will be followed by Vaughn Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," then by Khatchaturian's Violin concerto, in which Miss Posselt will be soloist. These selections replace the previously scheduled "Chout" ballet suite of Prokofieff and the Dvorak Violin concerto.

Also Advanced

Also announced was the advancement to July 24 of Nicole Henriot, French pianist, as soloist, playing the Liszt E Flat Piano concerto on that program, replacing Weber's Overture to "Der Freischutz." On the concert of Aug. 14, in place of Miss Henriot's piano concerto, Mr. Munch will conduct Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," and Brahms' "Tragic Overture" will be played in place of the Prelude to "Lohengrin" by Wagner.

Pierre Monteux's originally planned all-Frank concert of July 17 has had Debussy's Excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer" substituted for Franck's "Le Chasseur Maudit" and "Les Eolides."

It also was announced today that two Northern Berkshire residents, Miss Muriel V. Flagg of Williamstown and Roy E. Deyle, Jr., of Adams, will be among the Red Cross volunteers ready to give first aid to any person needing it at the Sunday concert.

MEDFORD, MASS.
MERCURY
JUL 15 1954

Local Man Registered at Tanglewood

(SPECIAL TO THE MERCURY)

Joseph Pietropaol of 544 Main street, is among 400 students who have been registered in the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival which will continue through August 15 at Tanglewood, in Lenox.

NORTH ADAMS, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT
JUL 14 1954

Albeneri Trio to Be Heard At Tanglewood This Evening

The second series of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood gets underway this evening, with the Albeneri Trio playing a program of chamber music in the theater - concert hall. Additional concerts are scheduled Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon.

Albeneri Trio

The Albeneri Trio, now in its sixth season, is headed by pianist Erich Itor Kahn, with Giorgi Ciompi as violinist and Benar Heifitz as 'cellist. All three men have had extensive concert careers in this country and Europe.

This evening's concert will consist of Brahm's Trio in B, Op. 8; Trio in D Minor by Martinu, and Beethoven's "Archduke" trio. The program starts at 8:30 o'clock and will be moved to the big shed in case of rain.

The Friday evening concert, an all-Bach program, will include a Cantata conducted by Hugh Ross and two suites performed by a chamber orchestra composed of members of the Boston Symphony, under the direction of Charles Munch. That concert also will be held in the theater-concert hall.

Saturday, Sunday

On Saturday and Sunday the scene will shift again to the big shed, where the full Boston Symphony will perform. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor for the Saturday evening program, devoted to the works of Franck and Debussy, while Mr. Munch returns to the podium on Sunday afternoon for the final concert in the series.

Continuing the weekly exhibitions of art in the reception room at the main gate of the Berkshire festival, Franc Epping of Lenox will have a showing of her sculpture. The exhibit, which opened Monday, is Miss Epping's second Tanglewood showing.

A private teacher in Lenox and director of the Sculpture workshop, Miss Epping is responsible for the annual outdoor exhibit of Berkshire sculptors in the Lenox Library gardens.

[268]

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

MILLERTON, N.Y
NEWS
7/15/54

GUEST CONDUCTOR

Jean Morel, eminent French conductor who will head the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center this summer at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts is in its 12th season, July 7-August 15. Mr. Morel is the French conductor who is at present head of the orchestra at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. He has conducted the Opera Comique in Paris, served as conductor of the Orchestre Symphonique de Paris, and of the Opera Rio de Janeiro Opera Mexico, as well as with the New York City Opera Company. He will take the place of Leonard Bernstein, on leave of absence from Tanglewood this summer, and will conduct concerts of the Berkshire Festival on July 24 and August 12.

Tanglewood Opens With Claudio Arrau And Bel Arte Trio

A sold-out house greeted the famous Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, and the Bel Arte Trio, on the night of the Berkshire Festival's first concert of the 1954 seeason July 7 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Despite rain and fog, the Theatre-Concert Hall was jammed with music lovers who paid frenzied tribute to Arrau's dramatic playing of the Beethoven sonatas Opera 78, 110, and 57. And there was plenty of applause for the quieter performance of the Beethoven Op. 9, No. 1, by Ruth Posselt, violin, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Martin Hoherman, cello.

With tickets priced at only $2 and $3, and with top-billing artists appearing on almost every program, the Wednesday evening chamber music series is expected to be so popular that early reservations are advised. (For full information on these, or other Tanglewood programs, phone Lenox 600, Lenox, Mass.)

A second chamber music series, the Bach-Mozart Concerts, (seats at $4 and $5) opened to a near-capacity house on the cool evening of July 9, with a stunning performance of the Brandenburg Concertos 1, 2, 3, 5, and 6 under Charles Munch. Members of the conductor's orchestra, the Boston Symphony, supported soloists Lukas Foss, piano; Doriot Anthony, flute; Richard Burgin, violin; Roger Voisin, trumphet; and Ralph Gumberg, oboe.

ONEONTA, N. Y.
STAR
JUL 16 1954

Trek Shapes Up For Tanglewood

Another Sunday trek to Tanglewood to hear Boston Symphony Orchestra is being formed by John L. Wilsbach. Persons wishing a ride or willing to give one may phone Mr. Wilsbach [illegible] noon today, at 539.

The caravan of cars will leave State Teachers College campus at 8:30 a.m. Sunday and return late Sunday night. Charles Munch will direct the orchestra.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
MORNING UNION
JUL 16 1954

Varied Program Listed This Week At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 15—The second concert in the enlarged Bach-Mozart series of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Friday at 8.30 p. m., in the Theater-Concert Hall, will feature Charles Munch conducting a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony Orchestra players in Johann Sebastian Bach's Suites Nos. 1 in C Major and 4 in D Major and Hugh Ross conducting the first Tanglewood performance of the same composer's Cantata No. 93: "If Thou Wilt Suffer God to Guide Thee."

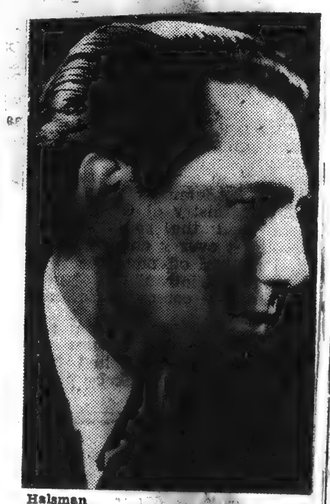
In the Bach cantata, Mr. Ross will have the assistance of the Festival Chorus, composed of students of the Berkshire Music Center, with Theresa Green, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; David Lloyd, tenor; and McHenry Boatwright, bass, as the soloists. Mr. Ross is head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department.

The second week end of music shed concerts at the Festival will find guest conductor Pierre Monteux leading the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday night at 8.30 in the Music Shed, with Vera Franceschi as piano soloist. Sunday afternoon at 2.30 Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra and pianist Leo Smit will be the soloist. M. Monteux' program will include two Debussy works: excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer," and two by Franck: "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra, and Symphony in D Minor. Mr. Munch has chosen the Debussy "Iberia," Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto and Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" for the Sunday matinee. Both soloists are making their first Tanglewood appearances.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
JUL 16 1954

Joseph de Pasquale, principal cellist, Boston Symphony Orchestra, took his post there in 1947 at the age of 27. In "Tanglewood" this summer, de Pasquale also is a member of the Bel Arte Trio which opened the 17th Berkshire Festival earlier this month for the Boston Symphony.

BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monit
JUL 17 1954



Halsman

Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood on Saturday, July 24, and Thursday, Aug. 12.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 19 1954

ARTISTS AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT

JOHN McCOLLUM (left) is tenor soloist in the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," which the Boston Symphony Orchestra—Charles Munch conducting—will perform at 8.30 p. m. Saturday at Tanglewood, Lenox. At the Berkshire Festival Concert at 8.30 p. m. Friday, will be DORIOT ANTONY, flutist, and first woman ever to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She will be soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 19 1954

Berlioz 'Fantastic' Symphony In Tanglewood Performance

BY GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—An almost [illegible] moniac intensity characterized all of Charles Munch's [illegible] with the Boston Symphony Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

* * * *

THIS APPROACH was [illegible] ently justified in the case of Berlioz' "Fantastic" Symphony. A still remarkable essay in pure orchestration, it must nevertheless be categorized as a youthful work from a composer of 27 who had yet to reach the acme of his powers. Even if one disregards Berlioz's "program" as the unifying scheme, it is as Robert Schumann pointed out, an uneven creation in all its vigor and originality.

But Mr. Munch met it on its own terms. Berlioz, the romanticist, would undoubtedly have approved the grandiloquence with which it was recreated Sunday afternoon. None of the drama, the lyric content, or the awesome grandeur were allowed to languish.

When the March to the Scaffold was terminated and the Witches Sabbath begun there was an almost audible tension that gripped the audience, which broke in a torrent of tumultuous applause at the conclusion. There was an orchestral tour de force by the Bostonians and everyone loved it.

However, the conductor seemed unaware that the entire program was not Berlioz, for a similarly dynamic treatment was given Debussy and Copland. It must be reported that Mr. Copland stood up under the siege better than Debussy.

* * * *

DEBUSSY'S "IBERIA" had a measure of lucent poetry and impressionistic grace, notably in the second movement, but it suffered from Mr. Munch's penchant for frenzied climaxes. The last movement sounded, in its concluding moments, more like one of Borodin's Russian dances than a Debussyan creation.

Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto, composed way back in 1926, did not arouse any derision or catcalls for its dissonance, the way it did when first performed in Mexico City. In fact, the Tanglewood audience Sunday was extremely warm in its reception for both Leo Smit, the able and authoritative soloist, and Mr. Coplan, who was present.

Based on jazz idioms, such as the "blues" and the straight ragtime number, it is a diverting but hardly forbidding work to a generation familiar with Berg and Webern. It must have made Mr. Coplan feel slightly reminiscent, since he long ago abandoned the idea that jazz devices can be successfully transplanted into the symphonic soil.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 17 1954

MUSIC CALENDAR

Sunday

2:30 p. m. — Debussy and Franck program by Charles Munch and Boston Symphony, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

4 p. m. — Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

Tuesday

8:15 p. m. — Martha Wright, William Tabbaret, New Haven Pops, Yale Bowl, New Haven.

Thursday

4 p. m. — Markova and Lester Horton Dance Theater, Jacob's Pillow, Lee, Mass.

Friday

4 and 9 p. m. — Jacob's Pillow, as above.

8:30 p. m. — Handel and Haydn, Tanglewood.

Saturday

4 and 9 p. m. — Jacob's Pillow, as above.

4 p. m. — Schneider and Balsam, violin and piano, South Mountain, Pittsfield, Mass.

8:30 p. m. — Weber, Prokofieff, Strauss and Elgar, Tanglewood.

KINGSTON, N.Y
PRESS
7/22/54

Tanglewood Concerts:

Friday, July 23, 8:30 P.M. — Handel Concerto Grosso for Strings, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn Symphony No. 100, "Military" and Haydn "Nelson" Mass—Hugh Ross and Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 24, 8:30 P.M.— Liszt E [illegible] Prokofieff Symphony No. 6; Strauss "Don Juan" and Elgar "Enigma" Variations — Conductor, Jean Morel.

Sunday, July 25, 2:30 P.M. — Berlioz, Overture to "Beatrice and Benedick", and "Harold in Italy" symphony, with viola solo by William Primrose; Tech Symphony No. 2.

[271]

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.
TIMES-HERALD
JUL 19 1954

Berlioz Festival at Tanglewood Shed

LENOX, Mass. — Concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood this season are honoring the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz. Complete versions of the composer's principal works are being performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch, in the 5,000-seat shed erected on the estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago. All shed concerts are held on Saturday evenings or Sunday afternoons, and can accommodate another four or five thousand listeners on the grass surrounding the covered seats.

This coming Sunday Mr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in the overture to "Beatrice and Benedick" and the symphony, "Harold in Italy," with William Primrose as viola soloist. The following Saturday, July 31, the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" will be heard in its complete form, with the festival chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscana as soloists.

On Saturday, August seventh, shed listeners will hear the overture to "Benvenuto Cellini," "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," the song cycle "Summer Nights" with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the "Te Deum" with the festival chorus and David Poleri as soloist.

The concluding program of the festival on Sunday, August 15 will be a rendition of the "Requiem" written in memory of Serge Koussevitzky again with the festival chorus and David Poleri as soloist.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 20 19[illegible]

Musical Portraits At UConn Wednesday

Special to The Hartford Times

STORRS — A trio of young artists will present a program of "Musical Portraits" Wednesday evening at the University of Connecticut.

The program, one of a series of special events on the Summer activities calendar at the University, is scheduled for the tudent Union Ballroom at 8 p. m. and is open to the public without charge.

"Musical Portraits" feature opera and musical comedy scenes fully acted out and staged with fundamental properties. The specially arranged and presented material is designed to give in miniature form what customarily is reserved for large-scale musical productions. Presentation of the program is by Emmalina DeVita, soprano; John Clegg, tenor; and Dana Lordly who serves as pianist with the group and commentator.

Miss DeVita, winner of the 1953 Eleanor Steber Scholarship, is a former member of Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera Theatre and has many performances of musical comedy to her credit.

John Clegg, who has appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and on television shows in Chicago and New York, also has coached at the Tanglewood Music Center and last year received wide acclaim as leading dramatic tenor with the Plymouth Rock Opera Theater.

Dana Lordly, a native of western Canada, is, like Miss DeVita and Mr. Clegg, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. He wrote and produced the musical comedy "That's the Spirit" which was used in connection wtih the graduation exercises at the Conservatory.

BOSTON, MASS.
TRAVELER
JUL 20 1954

LENOX CHANGE

Pianist Nicole Henriot will appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood three weeks earlier than scheduled, appearing as soloist Saturday night in the Music Shed for the Liszt Eflat Piano Concerto, replacing the Strauss "Don Juan." Jean Morel will conduct.

BERKSHIRE
Lukas [illegible]
chambe progra chorus;
Aug. 7
Bosto
with tenor;
Aug.
the B
catti,
8:30:
Ba
For th
ter. . .
Münch (Tangl day, Au

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
7/23/54

Sunday Soloist

William Primrose

Another of the important works of Hector Berlioz will be given this Sunday afternoon, July 25, at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with the presentation by the 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra of the composer's "Harold in Italy" Sympony, with William Primrose playing the viola solo. The concert will be given in the Music Shed at 2:30 under the baton of Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony.

This is the third of six works included in this year's Berlioz cycle at the Berkshire Festival. The cycle opened with the presentation of the choral work "The Damnation of Faust" on Saturday, July 10, with the Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and soloists performing with the orchestra. Last Sunday afternoon, the orchestra played the "Fanstastic Symphony" with Mr Munch conducting.

Scheduled for the last three week-ends of the festival are "Romeo and Juliet", Berlioz' dramatic symphony, next Saturday evening, July 31; "Te Deum", with the festival chorus and soloists in an all-Berlioz program on Saturday evening, August 7, and the composer's "Requiem" to be performed in memory of the late Serge Koussevitky chorus and soloists as the season's finale on Sunday, August 15.

In the second half of this Sunday's concert, the Boston Sympony will play the Symphony No. 2 of the Austrian-American composer Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood. The Toch symphony, which was introduced to the United States by the Boston Symphony under Mr Munch in its 1952-53 season, is dedicated to Albert Schweitzer.

Other concerts this week-end include a Handel-Haydn program by the festival chamber orchestra on Friday at 8:30 p.m., with Mr Munch conducting the orchestra and Hugh Ross leading the Haydn "Nelson" Mass, and the Boston Symphony conducted by Jean Morel in a Saturday evening program of works of Weber, Prokofieff and Elgar, and Nicole Henriot the soloist in Franz Liszt's E Flat Piano Concerto.

The festival's chamber music series will be continued on Wednesday evening, July 28, with the Griller String Quartet playing compositions of Mozart, Bloch and Beethoven. The program includes a first performance, that of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4.

The complete programs for the next two weeks will be found in the Weekly Calendar in this week's issue.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Friday, Aug. 6, at 8:30: Lukas Foss directing the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra in a Stravinsky-Mozart program, with Seymour Lipkin, piano; a chorus; and vocal soloists. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 7, at 8:30: Charles Münch directing the Boston Symphony in an all-Berlioz program, with Eleanor Steber, soprano; David Poleri, tenor; and several choruses. . . . ¶ Sunday, Aug. 8, at 2:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony, with Zino Francescatti, violin. . . . ¶ Wednesday, Aug. 11, at 8:30: Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano. . . . ¶ Thursday, Aug. 12, at 8:30: Jean Morel conducting the Boston Symphony chamber orchestra. . . . ¶ Friday, Aug. 13, at 6: The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" [illegible] offerings by the [illegible] of the Berkshire [illegible], a concert by the [illegible] conducted by Thomas [illegible], soprano) and [illegible] by Arthur Fiedler [illegible] lawn. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. . . . ¶ Saturday, Aug. 14, at 8:30: Charles Münch conducting the Boston Symphony. (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Through Sunday, Aug. 15.)

NEW YORKER AUGUST 7

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 17 1954

Past and Present at Tanglewood

PRESENT Boston Symphony conductor, Charles Munch, left, greets Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder of first Berkshire Music Festival 20 years ago, seeing the present Tanglewood for first time after living for many years in Paris. At right is Tod Perry Jr., new manager-elect of the Boston Symphony, who succeeds George Judd.

MONTREAL, CANADA
STAR
JUL 19 1954

Music at Berkshire

New Plan Successful

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Special to The Star and the N.Y. Herald Tribune

TANGLEWOOD, July 19—The second weekend of the Berkshire Festival ended yesterday afternoon with the Berlioz Fantastic Symphony, played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch. A refreshing but partially cloudy afternoon attracted an audience of 7,700, and encouraged the management to believe that their new plan for this season is a wise and viable one.

Instead of three weeks of smaller ensemble concerts in the theatre concert hall, followed by three weeks by the entire orchestra playing in the great shed, there are Wednesday and Friday evenings in the concert hall and two concerts each of the six weekends in the shed. Last night there was an audience of 8,500.

MR. MUNCH drew exquisitely poignant tone from his virtuoso orchestra in the Parfums de la Nuit from the Debussy Iberia. The surrounding movements were properly boisterous and gross so that the contrast of the central movement was all the more entrancing.

In the Copland early concerto for piano the soloist was Leo Smith. He contributed to the general triumph of the performance, although the composer has given him scant opportunity to emerge above the tremendous orchestra for which he was written.

COPLAND, who is assistant dean of the Berkshire Music Center, the school established by Koussevitzky in 1940 in connection with the Festival concerts, was present in the audience. After the soloist and conductor had been recalled several times, the composer was called to the stage to share the enthusiasm the performance had excited.

The slow lyric first part is luscious Hollywood via the boulangerie at Place de Clichy. The second and more rhythmic section which follows without interruption, is pure and unalloyed jazz. Smith and Munch caught its spirit and conveyed the infection to the large audience to their complete delight.

SATURDAY night Pierre Monteux, making the second of his two guest appearances with the orchestra, brought fresh spirit and vitality to the Franck symphony.

He avoided the pitfalls of the innumerable ritards and allargandos by picking up the tempo at a buoyant pace. He lead with easy security and the orchestra played for him with their full palette of colors. He began his program with excerpts from Debussy's incidental music to Gabrielle D'Annunzio's le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien, and after the Franck symphonic poem, Les Djinns, again returned to Debussy, this time to La Mer.

FOR THE Franck poem the piano soloist was Vera Franceschi who made the most of a not too rewarding assignment.

The wind sections of the orchestra played with admirable cohesion and tonal balance for Monteux in the Saint-Sebastien, especially in the prelude to the first act in which the strings have only a minor part.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 17 1954

Dr. Munch Knows, Plays Bach, Well

By EVANS CLINCHY

Tanglewood, Mass. — After five Brandenburg concerti in one evening last week, the Bach forces here at the Berkshire Music Festival spread themselves out a bit and gave about 1,900 quivering, shivering people a Bach cantata and two of the four orchestral suites.

Not that the suites are total strangers to the broad, spacious lawns of Tanglewood. At least a few of them turn up every year with each succeeding generation of mosquitoes, but they are magnificent pieces of music and I rather doubt if they have ever been more splendidly performed than they were last night.

The more one hears Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony play the music of Bach the more one is delighted by the immense energy and vivacity that this ensemble brings to this composer. Many conductors might present them more gracefully, others might coax a more glistening sound from the instruments, but no one but Dr. Munch could make the notes dance and leap the way he does.

The First and Fouth suites were the ones selected for performance last night, a welcome relief from the usual Second and Third, and it was quite apparent that Dr. Munch's understanding of each is boundless. No muddled conglomeration of unseparated sound here. Nothing but clarity, each section, each instrument, each interlocking passage given its proper chance to breathe and sing all by itself.

Neatly balancing these purely orchestral joys was the cantata selection, in this instance No. 93, whose lengthy German title can be translated by someone other than myself as "If Thou Wilt Suffer God to Guide Thee." It is a lilting and at the same time passionate work, a perfect example of religious music that is tender rather than didactic, devout, but not dully rigid.

Under Hugh Ross' direction, the festival chorus, the orchestra and a brace of soloists gave this persuasive music a sweet and moving performance. I particularly enjoyed the clear soprano of Theresa Green, and the fluent, dependable tenor of David Lloyd.

All of this may not be unusual Bach, but it is superb music played and sung with love and comprehension. That is just about all anyone could possibly ask.

Charles Munch Back at Podium At Tanglewood

By IRVING [illegible]LODIN

There's [illegible] political maxim that [illegible], "If you can't beat them, join them." Whether or not he's acquainted with it, it can be construed as the guiding maxim of Charles Munch as he begins another season of activity in charge of the Summer concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood, Mass. (A locality known to the mapmakers as Lenox). Surveying this prospect, it stands as the first to show a direct influence of Munch after its many years in the pattern created by the late Serge Koussevitzky.

"It" is a Summer-long Berlioz festival, in honor of the French composer born 150 years ago, during which such substantial works as the "Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," "Harold in Italy" and the "Requiem" will be offered in a sequence not known previously in America.

The consequential fact about this is that Munch was rumored a year or two ago to be on the way out in Boston because he couldn't reconcile himself to the arduous Summer work after the even more strenuous Winter schedule—especially as it was conceived in the image of his predecessor.

However, in facing up to the problem and shaping it to his own resources, Munch has shown an appreciation of the philosophy noted above which may substantially (a) lengthen his tenure in Boston, (b) extend his effect on musical life in America. Musical people generally will welcome this evidence of flexi- welcome on the part of the Alsatian-born violinist-turned-conductor, for there are not too many men of comparable abilities available in Europe, and he seems to enjoy a majority favor in Boston, though, as always, there is an articulate minority on the prowl for reasons (good or bad) to dislodge him.

To judge from what he has done in the past with works of Berlioz (his recording of the "Romeo and Juliet" Symphony was awarded a Grand Prix du Disque recently in a Parisian competition), he is leading from strength in this particular competition.

(Copyright SR)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
JUL 19 1954

Berkshire Concerts Open Wednesday

LENOX, Mass., July 19—This week's programs at the Berkshire Festival will begin Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. with a concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood by the Zimbler Sinfonietta.

The program will include Vivaldi's "Four Seasons," Stravinsky's "Apollon Musagete" and Rossini's "Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass."

On Friday at 8:30 p.m., also in the Theater-Concert Hall, a chamber orchestra, plus the festival chorus and solists, will present Haydn's "Mass No. 3 in D Minor" under the direction of Hugh Ross. Directed by Charles Munch, the chamber orchestra will play Handel's "Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra" and Haydn's "Symphony in G Major."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel, will present in the Music Shed Saturday at 8:30 p.m. Prokofieff's 'Symphony No. 6," Liszet's "Concerto No. 1 for Piano" with Nicole Henriot as solist, Strauss' "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma Variations."

The program for the Boston Symphony concert Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Music Shed, with Munch as conductor, will include Berlioz' "Overture to Beatride and Benedick" and "Harold in Italy" and Toch's "Symphony No. 2." William Primrose, violinist, will be the soloist for "Harold in Italy."

[27a]

TIGHT BINDING

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 20 1954

Record Audience Cheers Tanglewood Concerts

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

A very vital and harmonious France was represented by the week-end concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, with two conductors, steeped in the Gallic traditions, taking over the podium. Saturday night, Pierre Monteux was the guest director and Sunday afternoon, Charles Munch, the regular baton-wielder. A record audience was in attendance for both performances.

Saturday night's program included works by Debussy and Cesar Franck, with the D-Minor Symphony by Franck being the piece de resistance. As was to be expected, Mr. Monteux gave a spirited and thoroughly musicianly reading of colorful score. Vera Franceschi, a young American of French extraction, gave an electrifying performance of the Franck tone poem, "Les Djinns," with the orchestra.

MUNCH CONDUCTS

Sunday afternoon's program was highlighted by a portion of Debussy's "Iberia," and the "Fantastic Symphony" by Berlioz, the latter in honor of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer. Mr. Munch was the conductor of this monumental program. As Franck, Debussy and Berlioz call upon every resourct of the modern orchestra, needless to say, the music raised the audience to a very high peak of enthusiasm.

The American composer, Aaron Copland, was represented by his piano concerto masterfully played by the young American virtuoso, Leo Smit. Mr. Copland has written a score which is unusually difficult for instrumentalists and soloist alike. There is an American strain of modern music running through the concerto with just a suggestion of Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" in the middle section.

RATHER DISTURBING

For lovers of the "Three Bs," the work was rather disturbing in its unorthodox treatment of rhythm and harmony. However, the younger element in the audience cheered the work and its performers. Following the bombastic conclusion, Conductor Munch and Composer Copland were enthusiastically recalled for a musical monstrosity which appealed more to the technical skill required than to the strict definition of music, per se. As Mr. Copland is a member of the Tanglewood teaching staff, its inclusion might have musical political implications.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 20 1954

Music Center Lists Students

With 35 states and 12 foreig countries represented in its en rollment of 375 music students the twelfth season of the Berk shire Music Center is in operatio at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massa chusetts. The summer school o music maintained by the Bosto Symphony Orchestra in conjunc ion with its Berkshire Festival— he only school in the worl sponsored by a major symphon orchestra—will operate throug he end of the festival concerts o August 15.

The Berkshire Music Cente was established in 1940 by th Boston Symphony orchestra t provide a campus where youn musicians could add to their pro fessional training and artistic ex perience under the gludance o eminent musicians and teachers Charles Munch, music director o the Boston Symphony orchestra is director of the Center. Ameri can composer Aaron Copland, i the assistant director, and Ralph Berkowitz, pianist of the staff o the Curtis Institute of music i Philadelphia, is dean. The facul ty includes Jean Morel, Seymour Lipkin, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Frederic Cohen, Lukas Foss and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Gregor Piatigorsky is guest teacher in chamber music and Ernst Toch is guest teacher in composition. Dr. Toch continues the tradition of having an outstanding contemporary composer in residence each season; his predecessors include Carlos Chavez, Luigi Dallapiccola, Jacques Ibert, Darius Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Bohuslav Martinu, Paul Hindemith and Olivier Messiaen.

More than 100 students are registered from New York state, 57 from Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are represented by 55 students. From Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin have come 34 students and the far-west is represented by three Washingtonians and six Californians. Canada has its largest enrollment in several seasons with 12 students ranging from Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, to Calgary, Alberta. The 29 foreign students, besides the Canadians, include four Cuban registrations and three from France. In America since 1953 as an exchange student from 'sHertogenbosch, Holland, on a Fulbright Fellowship is pianist Adriana Crone; Stefan Grove of Cape Town, South Africa, is at Tanglewood on the Margaret Le Crofts Scholarship as a speci composition pupil of Aaron Copland. Another Copland student, Tossi Ichiyanagi from Tokyo, Japan. A housewife from Caracas, Venezuela, Mrs. Suzanne Goldberg, is enrolled in the opera department. Cuba has sent a quartet of string players for orchestral study and John Kim, conductor of the Korean National Navy Symphony Orchestra and resident of Pusan, has returned for another season of coaching in orchestral conducting. Also included in the twelve foreign countries represented are pupils from Haifa, Israel, Hungary and Greece.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
PRESS
JUL 21 1954

Organizations

West Side unit, Maccabees, will hold an all-games party Thursday evening in the Maccabee building, Sheldon av. Refreshments will be served by unit officers.

* * *

Creston Townsend club No. 3 will meet Thursday at the hall, Plainfield av., for a 7:30 p. m. business meeting followed by luncheon and games.

Ladies auxiliary to FOE No. 201 will meet Thursday at 8 p. m. Mrs. Hobart Whitten will be hostess. Mrs. Vincent Bandy is refreshment chairman. Mrs. Sarah Webster is in charge of entertainment. New mystery friends will be taken and picnic plans formulated.

With Music Center

Alice Dutcher, Ardmore st., is among 400 students who have been registered in the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music, maintained by the Boston Symphony orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music festival, which will continue through Aug. 15 in Lenox, Mass.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 22 1954

Zimbler Sinfonietta Performs Chamber Music at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to The Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The third in a series of Wednesday night chamber music concerts at Tanglewood featured the Zimbler Sinfonietta, an ensemble of string players from the Boston Symphony, in a varied and unusual program at the Theater-Concert Hall.

Those who imagine that program music originated with Beethoven's "Pastoral" Symphony were probably taken aback by the explicit depiction of nature in Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons," which was performed last night. For the four concerti grossi of the composer's Opus 8 which bear this subtitle contain literal representations of such things as the twitterings of birds, thunder and lightning storms, and even the chatter of teeth in the winter cold.

But quite aside from such effects this music has an antique charm that continues to beguile the ear.

* * *

VIVALDI was a celebrated string virtuoso in his day and throughout the concerti grossi his gracious mastery of this medium is always apparent. The Zimbler Sinfonietta and its soloists, George Zazofsky, violinist, and Fernando Valenti, harpsichordist, admirably preserved the spirit of this typically 18th century music.

As a modern counterpart to the Vivaldi, there was Stravinsky's ballet suite, "Apollon Musagete," which has been called "pallid" by at least one critic. Compared to the tonal flamboyance of Petrouchka or Le Sacre it may indeed be tame, but one must remember the intent of the composer, which was a neo-classical evocation of the style of Lully.

* * *

ALEXANDER TANSMAN has spoken of the "serene tenderness" of this work and it does have a lyric warmth unusual for Stravinsky. The emphasis, however, is on the linear and melodic content and not on tonal coloration or driving rhythms, which have become the musical signature of this composer.

The concluding work was the little known Sonata for Violins, Cellos, and Double Bass by Rossini, which afforded the Sinfonietta's first desk men an opportunity to display their dexterity in numerous solo passages, if nothing else.

Summer music and theatrical performances overwhelm us. We were able to attend only one Tanglewood event last week — the Friday night concert in the small theatre. Mr. Munch conducted the string section of the orchestra in one of Handel's brief concerti grossi, (Opus 6, No. 4 in A Minor). As always, the strings were eloquent and graceful in this period piece, which was followed by a sprightly performance of Haydn's "Military" Symphony, (No. 100, in G Major). It is gay and tuneful, but not even Haydn could have written a hundred good compositions of the type we now call symphonic. The "Military" is short and light; performed with a small orchestra, it is little beyond chamber music.

The chef d'oeuvre of the evening was Haydn's "Nelson" Mass, No. 3 in D Minor, composed largely in commemoration of Nelson's victory in the battle of the Nile. Large portions of this seem more military than religious in nature; the "Kyrie" was anything but a prayer for mercy. Other parts, however, soar up into the spiritual and prove that Haydn had depth not revealed in such lighter works as the preceding symphony.

All four soloists, Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor; and Thomas Stewart, Bass; and the Festival Chorus sang with spirit and skill. Hugh Ross admirably performed the difficult task of conducting the orchestra as well as the singers.

At The Theatres
Woodstock Playhouse: Aug. 6-7

ROCHESTER, N. Y.
TIMES-UNION
JUL 20 1954

APROPOS OF INTERESTING GUESTS in town, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Herman of Honolulu are enjoying a month's stay visiting relatives and friends. Dividing their time between Mr. Herman's sister, Mrs. Russell C. Marron and Mr. Marron of Trafalgar street and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas of Elmwood Hill lane, the visitors are enjoying a gay whirl of informal entertainments.

Mr. and Mrs. Marron have entertained for them as have also Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Knight of Newark. Mr. and Mrs. James E. McGhee of Ambassador drive will entertain at dinner at their home this evening for Mr. and Mrs. Herman and on Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will entertain informally at their home for them—to mention but a few of the parties arranged for this popular couple.

* * *

IN RETROSPECT: Saw an old friend in town this week. Mrs. Robert Stevens of Ithaca, the former Eva Howe, . . . who stopped off on Monday to spend the day here with some old friends en route to her summer home in Nantucket, Mass., after attending a wedding in Buffalo, . . . Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Taylor of Clover street plan to leave this week for Great Barrington, Mass., to spend a few days and to attend the Berkshire Festival concert at Tanglewood, Mass. returning Sunday.

ALBANY, N. Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
JUL 21 1954

FESTIVAL SOLOIST—William Primrose, violist, will be soloist in Berlioz' "Harold in Italy" which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform at a Berkshire Festival concert on Sunday afternoon at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Music Festival

Friday, July 30, at 8:30, Roussel, "The Spider's Feast" Ibert Flute Concerto with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart Serenade for Eight Winds K. 388; and Mozart "Paris" Symphony K. 297 with Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 31, at 8:30: Berlioz "Romeo and Juliet" Dramatic Symphony with Festival Chorus and Soloists, Charles Munch conducting.

Sunday, August 1 at 2:30 William Schuman "An American Festival Overture;" Vaughan Williams "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis;" Khatchaturian Violin Concerto; and Sibelius Symphony No. 2, Richard Burgin, conducting.

August 2 and 3 "The Tender Land," a new opera by Aaron Copland on an American theme, will be given in the Theatre-Concert Hall as the major production of the opera department of the Music Center.

August 4, 8:30 the Kroll String Quartet in Haydn Quartet in D; Hindemith Quartet No. 3, Op. 22; and Ravel Quartet in F.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival

Wednesday evening, July 28; Thursday matinee July 29; Friday

Greene County Examiner Record Catskill, N.Y. July 29

[273]

פילע אידישע קינסטלער באטיליגען זיך אין מאנגעלוואוד מוזיק פעסטיוואל

שען ארקעסטער. אונטער דער לייך מונג פון מוזש און פון ספעציעל ג׳אדעצע דיריגענטען. אויסער דעם זיינען דא קאנצערטען פון דעם סטודענטן־ארקעסטער (און צו זיין א מאנגעלוואוד סטודענט מוז מען זיין אן אויסנעצייכענטער מוזיקער), קאמער מוזיק קאנצערטען, סאלא קאנצערטען און אויך דיסקוסיעם און דער באטעם וועגען מוזיק און נייע קאמפאזיציעס.

דער גרויסער ערפאלג פון מאנגעלוואוד מוזיק פעסטיוואל גיט א מעגליכקייט צו הונדערטער טויזענד מער מוזיק־ליבהאבער צו באקומען זיך מיט דעם אומן וויי אזוי א קאנצערט וועלט צונעגרייט, וויבאל די באזוכער האבען די מעגליכקייט זיך צוצוהערען און בייצואוואוינען די פראבעס פון ארקעסטער, וויי אויך פון די סטודענטען.

די נענעסט ארום מאנגעלוואוד, א דאנק דעם איינפלוס פון דעם מוזיק פעסטיוואל, איז רייך אין אנדערע קונסט און קולטור אקטיוויטעטען. עס איז דא די קאריסטע מאנץ־מאקדעמיע פון דעמיע און מעאטער אנגעפירט פון מער שאון. דעם פאפולערען אסערי מאנער מאנץ־מייסטער. די אקאדעמיע גיבט איך אין דרשייקאבם פיר לאר און ציחט צו זיך סטודענטען פון אמעריקע. עס איז דארטען אויך פארא א „סאבערע" פון ישראל, אהבה כוכב. וועלכע איז נעקומען שטודירען מאדערנעם טאנץ. אין דער אקאדעמיע וועלען נעלערענט באלעט, מאדערנעם טענץ און עטנישע (פאלקס) טענץ. אלע אונטער דער לייטונג פון באריסמע טאנץ־מייסטער.

אין דעם דזשייקאבס פילאו טעאטער וועלען נענעבען מאנץ־פארשטעלונגען פון א נייער אות באריסמע טרעטען אויף אין דעם טאנץ טעאטער.

אויסער מאנגעלוואוד און דזשיי־קאבס פילאו נעמינען זיך אין דער נעענט טעאטערען. וואו מען שפילט אלטע און נייע פיעסעס, קונסט אויסשטעלונגען אוא. אנדערע אקטיוויטעטען.

פארץ אידישען עולם איז מאנגעלוואוד דערווייל א נייע זאך. אבער עס זיינען שוין דארטען פארא א צאל גומע אידישע חאטעלען און מער ווילען זיבער נעבויט ווערען צו באפרידיגען דעם מאדאנע פון די אידישע מיטען. זוילכע קומען קיין מאנגעלוואוד אונטער צו האבען פון די שיינע מאנגעלוואוד טענץ און די נאטירלעך שיינקייט פון דער נעגענט. ס. ה. (*)

July 30
Jewish Daily Forward - Auguste
New York Journal-American ★ Tues., Aug. 3, 1954

'The Tender Land':

Opera Still Lacks Power

Copland Work Has 2d Premiere at Tanglewood

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 3.—Aaron Copland's opera "The Tender Land," first heard at City Center with the New York City Opera Company last April, had its second premiere in a revised version here in the theatre-concert hall last night, given by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center. It was produced in line with the composer's original intention of creating it for colleges, workshops, and opera groups.

In seeking to point up the dramatic motivation Copland has divided the opera into three acts instead of two, added three scenes, tightened others, and set its period back from 1930 to 1910. The result is definitely a move in the right direction.

The work still lacks the emotional power inherent in the situation based on the theme that all young people want to leave home. Some of this deficiency still lies in the libretto, more with the musical impact at strategic moments. The shift in period means little.

Reflects Ability

Aside from still having the impression of being unoperatic, the score lacks pungency both in characterization and in style. It nevertheless reflects expert craftsmanship and contains some most persuasive pages. These owe their strength to superior orchestral writing. The outstanding musical moment remains the quintet at the end of the first act.

The opera has both quality and atmosphere. It happens not to jell. The pointing up of the dramatic situation in Act II has greatly improved the action. It is the showdown between mother and daughter in Act III that makes the ending so weak.

An able cast sang and a capable student orchestra performed. Frederic Waldman allowed the orchestra to play too loud. The singers' diction obscured important passages of the text. The sets of John Blankenchip and the costumes of Leo Van Witsen were excellent. High praise should go to Frederic Cohen as producer and stage director.

Saturday Review - July 31

Virtuoso of the Double Bass

By OLGA KOUSSEVITZKY

SERGE KOUSSEVITZKY's early and extraordinary career as double-bass virtuoso was not premeditated, it was providential. At fourteen he had dreamed of conducting and composing. But as a late applicant for a scholarship at the Philharmonic he was given the choice of one of the three instruments still available for free study. These were the trombone, the horn, and the double bass. He selected the unpopular double bass, following his predilection for the string instruments.

The instant young Koussevitzky discovered the latent possibilities of the huge fiddle, his attraction for the double bass became magnetic and he began its conquest. He overcame its technical difficulties, explored and exploited its tonal resources. A fellow pupil in the cello class recalled the hours of practice together.

We would start with scales, go over to cello studies, and wind up with concertos. Koussevitzky would play along keeping pace with the cello on the bass fiddle. There was no limitation for him. Listening to Koussevitzky one would forget that he was playing the bass. It was some instrument between a cello and a bass of unusual beauty.

One of Koussevitzky's recollections of student days was playing for Tchaikovsky and receiving praise from this great and kind composer so idolized by students. Graduating as Master of Free Arts in 1894, Serge Koussevitzky was invited to be "soloist" on the double bass with the Moscow Imperial Opera Orchestra, a position especially created for him. In 1897 the young artist replaced his late teacher, Joseph Rambousek, as professor at the Philharmonic Conservatory. His reputation was growing as he appeared in Moscow and St. Petersburg and toured other principal cities of Russia. He had yet to win over the continent of Europe and break down prejudice against his "unclassical" instrument.

It was in 1898 that Koussevitzky gave his debut in Berlin. Arthur Abell, then critic of the Musical Courier recollects:

I distinctly remember the furor that Koussevitzky created in Berlin on the occasion of his debut at the venerable Singakademie, as double-bass virtuoso. Even in concert-ridden Berlin, then the musical center of the world, a recital on the double bass was an event such as had not been heard of since the palmy days of Bottesini. But the youthful, aristocratic looking Russian outdid his great Italian predecessor in one respect, for he played on a regular orchestral bass with four strings tuned to fourths whereas Bottesini played a three-stringed bass tuned to fifths and pitched a whole tone higher to insure greater brilliancy.

Giovanni Bottesini, who preceded Koussevitzky by half a century, was in turn preceded by Domenico Dragonetti half a century earlier. Dragonetti, also an Italian, was a contemporary of Beethoven and the first known master of the bass viol. Koussevitzky's double bass, with which he triumphed in musical Berlin, was his treasured old Amati, one of the three bass instruments fashioned by the hands of the celebrated Cremonese violin maker of the seventeenth century.

Koussevitzky and his Amati.

Thus, within the space of a decade, the aspiring student at the doorstep of the Moscow Philharmonic School reached the footlights of the famous Singakademie as an accomplished artist. Thereafter all European stages were open to the young Koussevitzky. His seven-league boots were at work again taking him from country to country, from one musical mecca to another. His aim was high but not unattainable. Still not the annals of music note two remarkable virtuosi of the double bass, his predecessors, who mastered the unmanageable member of the string family and raised it to a state of artistic beauty and respect? Nor was his art revolutionary; for deeply inherent in him was the classical tradition of the strings.

IN HIS youthful art Serge Koussevitzky sought a latitude beyond perfection. He searched for the unrevealed dimension of the double bass, for the "inner voice" of strings which he likened to cords of the natural instrument—the human voice. In this sense his art was evolutionary. Listening to the great singers of his day, trying to imitate their vocal art, he was not merely playing "on" a string instrument, he was singing through the voice of the double bass.

"The moment his bow is in motion, Serge Koussevitzky and his double bass become one," wrote Gabriel Alphaud in the Paris Comoedia.

At the turn of the century the demand for Koussevitzky's solo appearances was increasing and his repertoire became insufficient. To replenish it, he transcribed and composed for the double bass, adding the following compositions to his repertoire:

Transcriptions

1. Handel: Sonata (for violin)
2. Galliard: Sonata (for cello)
3. Eccles: Sonata (for cello)*
4. Mozart: Concerto (for bassoon)
5. Bruch: "Kol Nidrei"
6. Bach: Aria (from Cantata No. 12)
7. R. Strauss: Sonata (for cello)
8. Scriabin: Two Etudes, Opus 74

Compositions for Double Bass

1. Valse Miniature*
2. Chanson Triste*
3. Andante
4. Humoresque

In 1902 he completed his Concerto for Double Bass and Orchestra* and dedicated it, as well as some of his smaller pieces, to Mlle. Natalie Ouchkoff, whom he married in 1905. In later years he also was at work on a method of instruction for double bass playing, the draft of which remained in his files when he left Moscow in 1920.

(Continued on page 66)

The compositions marked with an asterisk are represented on an LP reissue of Koussevitzky's double-bass recordings made in the late Twenties. On the reverse of this record, RCA Victor LCT-1145, is Tchaikovsky's "Romeo and Juliet" as recorded by the Boston Symphony under Koussevitzky.*

During World War I, Koussevitzky signed a contract to tour America with his young accompanist and friend, Pierre Luboshutz. But the deepening war conditions in Russia presented insuperable difficulties, and in 1916 the American concert tour was canceled.

Eight years later Serge Koussevitzky arrived in America not as the virtuoso of the double bass, but as an orchestra conductor who had gained firm ground and world recognition. In 1924 he became the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a position he maintained for twenty-five years.

It had been said that Koussevitzky in his youth was "so enamored of the double bass that he first became its slave and finally its master." One could say of Koussevitzky, the conductor of mature and older years, that he was possessed with and passionately consecrated to the art and task of conducting; the orchestra became his element and his instrument; he both slaved for and mastered the orchestra. The double bass was no longer the vital outlet of his artistic powers. Though still heard at private, intimate gatherings, the voice of his Amati, like a rare art treasure, was accessible only to a few. In America the virtuoso past of Koussevitzky remained a distant myth overshadowed by his dynamic presence as a conductor. It was yet to be "unveiled."

NOT until 1926 did the myth come to life. During his second season in America, Serge Koussevitzky was conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Music by Brown University. It was announced to the distinguished audience of scholars, gathered in Providence (R.I.) for the occasion, that the conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, "mistrusting his English," would respond to this honor by playing "solo double bass." Curiosity and speculations were aroused, culminating in profound astonishment and enthusiasm for the artistry revealed.

The private "unveiling" in Providence led to a public "exhibit" in Boston.

In 1927 it was announced that "Serge Koussevitzky is to give his first public recital in America on the double bass in Symphony Hall. This will be a benefit concert, the proceeds to go to needy Russian students in exile." This recital took place in Boston on October 24, 1927. As a benefit, it had far-reaching results; as a musical event, it met the test of expectation. Reviewing the concert, Boston's great Philip Hale had this to say:

> The fame of Mr. Koussevitzky's incomparable ability as a player of the double bass crossed the Atlantic long before he came to dwell here as an orchestra conductor. Many of us had read the glowing tributes paid to him in European cities. These eulogies no longer seem exaggerated or fulsome. . . . Koussevitzky's Concerto is not a mere show piece for vain display; it is thoughtfully conceived, carefully written, with melodic originality, without trivial details. Nor is he remarkable merely for his unusual technical proficiency. His tone, now full and noble, is exquisitely beautiful as the music demands. The tone at once commands attention, impresses, haunts the memory; the tonal nuances are infinite. His great command of rhythms is known to the audiences of the Symphony concerts. Last night his phrasing was musical and eloquent. Without straining for effect, it was effective. In declamatory passages there was power with dignity; in lyric measures there was sustained and appealing song. The performance of a genius.

In 1928 the benefit was repeated in Carnegie Hall, New York; then in 1929 once again in Symphony Hall, Boston. "The double bass has conquered!" exclaimed the respected H. T. Parker in the old Boston Evening Transcript.

No one present on this memorable occasion on October 22, 1929, could foresee that it was to be the last appearance of Koussevitzky on his beloved solo instrument. When he lowered the bow on the final note of his Double Bass Concerto, the voice of his Amati was silenced, and with it, after forty years, was silenced the art of Serge Koussevitzky on the instrument of his youth.

Flute Concerto Concert Feature At Tanglewood

Last night's concert by the Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra was perfection itself. From start to finish, the program was sensitively realized by Charles Munch, eminent music director of the Music Center at Tanglewood. The particular highlight of the evening was the arresting and tantalizingly brilliant solo work of Mrs. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, in a Concerto for Flute and Orchestra by Jacques Ibert. This concerto was composed in 1934 and first performed in Paris. There are many elaborate solo passages, made additionally difficult for the solo performer by off-beat entrances and running triplets which would seem to demand the epitome of ability and endless practice. Miss Anthony, as she is professionally known, is the first flutist with the Boston Symphony and created a considerable stir when appointed to occupy this chair, as it is rare that the achievement is acquired by a woman. This artist more than lives up to the honor, and her performance last evening was rewarded by at least five bursts of applause.

Rousel's Excerpts from "Le Festin de l'Araignee" ("The Spider's Feast"), a Ballet-Pantomime, was the first choice of Mr. Munch on the evening's program and a more microscopically conceived or a more fascinatingly graphic score would be hard to imagine. If you can picture a funeral procession for anything as ephemeral as a Day-Fly or as exquisite as the dance of a butterfly, you might have some idea of the delicacy and charm of this composition. The miniature details involved, always in perfect taste, in depicting "ants discoving a rose petal" or a "spider coaxing a dancing butterfly into her web" are almost too inconceivably minute to transmute to music, yet Roussel did it most successfully and Mr. Munch and the Chamber Orchestra gave an artistically sensitive and articulated performance.

Following the intermission two works by Mozart were heard. The first was an infrequently heard "Serenade for Eight Winds in C Minor." This is written for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. The Serenade is dark in color and mood, yet there are many passages of a lyric quality and some contrapuntal writing with rapid, almost staccato phrases for the bassoons which are very amusing. Ralph Gomberg on the first oboe did an especially efficient piece of playing in many instances where that instrument presented themes or started a counterpoint.

The second work by Mozart and the last number on the program, was the "Symphony in D Major," the "Paris" symphony. Mr. Munch, very much in command of the distinctively successful reading of this symphony, brought to this Parisian" work of Mozart all of the crispness and concise, adroit facility and ease of movement which the composer must have desired.

The large audience was extremely enthusiastic and will for some time call to mind the brilliance of the Flute Concerto, and the charm and beauty of the entire concert. — F.M.R.

Another Interesting 'First' At Festival

Another interesting "first" at Tanglewood took place yesterday afternoon when Richard Burgin, concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, became guest conductor for the first time at Tanglewood. In addition to this, Miss Posselt, Mrs. Richard Burgin in private life, was the violin soloist of the afternoon in a Tanglewood premiere of Aram Khatchaturian's Concerto for violin and orchestra.

The whole program was one of contrasts throughout. The second half was concerned with Sibelius' Second Symphony in D Major which is one of violent contrasts. The orchestra and Mr. Burgin presented this work with full comprehension of the need for impassioned playing, inclusiveness alternating with lyrical ideas of great beauty.

The afternoon's program opened with William H. Schuman's "American Festival Overture," which was composed in 1939 for two special concerts of American music by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and first performed at the second of these concerts in Symphony Hall under the direction of Serge Koussevitsky, October 6, 1939. It was a piece based on a boyhood call or signal used to call the gang together for games or some other festive occasion. It is not, however program music, but a work developed along "purely musical lines."

This was followed by "Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis for Double String Orchestra," by Ralph Vaughan Williams. The rich sonorities produced by the ever resonant and unified strings was most impressive. The divisions of larger and smaller groups playing, provided nice contrasts and variety of tone color. The beautiful tones of the solo viola and violin in turn, were especially representative of the virtues ascribed to the entire string section.

The orchestra and Miss Posselt then played Khatchaturian's Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. This was in direct contrast to the sensitively lovely Fantasia. Miss Posselt is a very fine violinist as well as an extremely valuable teacher at the Music Center. Her brilliant playing of the Russian composer's difficult but engaging work was entirely assured and much more than just technically accurate. Her poise and pleasing stage presence were not in the least jarred by the untimely break of a violin string following a very lively and strenuous solo passage. She most prepossessingly borrowed another instrument from the man to her right and finished the section with undiminished fervor. There was some lovely lyrical writing for both the solo instrument and orchestra in the second movement and the third, marked Allegro Vivace, has a popular flavor, rhythmic, syncopated and tuneful.

A total of 8,225 music lovers attended this varied and enjoyable concert, a large number making the most of a beautiful, golden day and the expanse of green lawn to heighten their enjoyment. It is an enviable experience to enter the grounds of Tanglewood, to see the beauties of nature as well as to become a listening participant in the musical activity of the Center. — F. W. R.

Intense Treatment Given Symphony By Director Munch

Berlioz' dramatic symphony "Romeo et Juliette" received emotionally intense treatment Saturday evening in the music shed at Tanglewood. Charles Munch, on the podium, directed the music with the power and insight that we have come to expect from this wielder of the baton.

The orchestra, soloists and chorus were individually impressive, for the most part, and together were coordinated by Mr. Munch into a superb ensemble, doing justice to the rich musical values inherent in the score.

Of the soloists, Beatrice Krebs was outstanding. She possesses an opulent, ear-soothing contralto, McCollum, tenor, sang Romeo's brief lines with the proper understanding of text. He possesses a pleasant tenor, and uses his voice well. Nicola Mascona was rather disappointing as Friar Lawrence. His lower register simply was not there, and his high notes suffered from excessive vibrato. The middle range did ring out through the hall; and throughout, the basso evidenced comprehension of characterization.

The chorus was brilliant, though at times perhaps a trifle too enthusiastic. They sang for Mr. Munch, though, with terrific impact. The men's section was particularly wonderful in the love scene, and the entire chorus was excellent indeed in the thrilling finale.

It must be said that the symphony reaches its greatest poetic heights when it is in the hands of the orchestra. However, the entire work is eloquent and wonderful, especially as done by Munch and company Saturday night.—B. D.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER

JUL 21 1954

Program Tonight At Tanglewood

Consisting of 21 Boston Symphony orchestra members playing historical stringed instruments valued at $90,000, The Zimbler Sinfonietta—under the direction of its founder and music director, Joseph Zimbler—plays the third of the new chamber music concert series at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 p. m., in the Theatre-Concert hall.

A member of the Boston Symphony orchestra's 'cello section, Josef Zimbler came to America from Czechoslovakia to join the orchestra in 1934. He first organized the Zimbler String Quartet and in 1945 expanded his group into the Sinfonietta in order to commission and perform new and seldom-heard works written for chamber orchestra. George Zazofsky, graduate of Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music and member of the Boston Symphony since 1941, is concertmaster of the Sinfonietta with Emil Kornsand as assistant concertmaster. Mr. Kornsand joined the BSO in 1939 after playing under Toscanini in the NBC orchestra and 15 years as a member of the Berlin State Opera orchestra. Two first-chair men of the Boston Symphony also play in the Sinfonietta, principal violinist, Joseph de Pasquale and Samuel Mayes, the first 'cellist.

Ture Bengtz, Berkshire resident and head of the Bengtz School of Art at Lenox school, who has recently exhibited at the Lenox library and at the Otis library and museum, has an exhibition of his works at the reception hall—Main Gate—of the Berkshire Festival. The showing will be Mr. Bengtz's third annual Tanglewood exhibit and the third of the Berkshire Festival's weekly shows of paintings, sculpture and photographs, arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield, and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Mr. Bengtz's show, consisting of lithographs, will include works which have been purchased by the Boston Museum and the Library of Congress in Washington, D. C.

[274]

World of Music

Boston Post Aug 1/54

By TUCKER KEISER

Overshadowed by the widely publicized concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Tanglewood Music Shed, the Tanglewood student orchestra, composed of instrumentalists on the brink of professional careers, gives weekly concerts of extraordinary quality.

During a recent week end at Lenox I made it a point to visit this orchestra in rehearsal. As I passed the Shed on a beautiful Saturday morning, the strains of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" floated over the well-kept lawn, disappearing it seemed in the distant Stockbridge Bowl. Eleanor Steber's glorious soprano was filling the coolish morning air with Marguerita's third act aria.

Down the rolling hill, past the Hawthorne House, I found the student orchestra rehearsing with fervor and utter absorption in the spacious barn. Samuel Krachmalnick, an advanced conducting student who served as Arthur Fiedler's assistant during the last "Pops" tour, was leading these tieless and Toniless musicians through Stravinsky's tricky "Divertimento."

Overseeing this orchestral reading sat a handsome, huskily built man with silver-grey hair, intently following a conductor's score propped up vertically on a substantial music stand. Huddled around him was a small group of eager-eyed young people following every whispered remark and vivid gesture of the seated maestro.

The Third Man

This was Jean Morel, the distinguished conductor. As acting head of the instrumental music and conductor of the Tanglewood school orchestra, Morel becomes the third person to head this department of the Berkshire Centre since the school's founding in 1940. Koussevitzky, despite his busy schedule with the Boston Symphony itself, directed every operation of the department until 1951; then his pupil and protege, Leonard Bernstein, took over the post. Mr. Bernstein is on leave of absence this season.

What struck me so forcefully about the orchestra was its beautiful tone. I have heard many of the smaller professional orchestras throughout the country; none, however, had the rich strings or the sonorous brasses of this student organization, which by the way, when I heard them had only been playing as a group a little over a week. Koussevitzky once remarked that his students created a more beautiful sound than a well-known, long-established Midwestern orchestra. He was nearly sued for slander.

Later in the day, I had the chance to speak to Mr. Morel about his young musicians. As we sat comfortably over coffee, he explained the fine tone of this group.

"Tone is seldom a problem," he declared, "with a group such as this one. They are all young, they bring an immense capacity to work, they all study with that concentration students genuinely in love with their art have, they constantly practice sonatas, they continue to work with their teachers, and they enjoy what they play. Candidates are rigorously auditioned for Tanglewood, and an instrumentalist admitted to the school is expected to be a master of his oboe, trumpet, or fiddle."

"Each one in this stage of his career is interested in obtaining all the beauty of sound from his instrument of which he is capable; in reading class or in performance he never lets down for a minute. Here, my job is primarily one of explaining points of style and ensemble."

More further stated that the music which he has selected for this summer embraces all periods of orchestral literature, baroque, classical, romantic, and contemporary.

Music In Review

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 31—By every indication tonight's performance of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" should have been one of the best events in this year's Tanglewood season. Mr. Munch has previously played the work with stunning effectiveness; the orchestra by now knows the score backwards; the music itself contains some of Berlioz' most inspired passages; and the soloists are excellent singers. As it happened, however, tonight's "Rodeo" was in every way a routine reading.

The orchestra got off to a very rough start in the introduction, setting the pace for much of the remaining sections. Only when Nicola Moscona, the commanding bass-baritone of the Metropolitan opera, stepped to the stage for the role of Friar Lawerence did the music receive that vital spark. It was as if he personally lifted the entire chorus, conductor and orchestra by the bootstraps to hurl forward the musical movement.

Moscona makes a powerful and dynamic padre; it is too bad that we do not hear him in this role during the winter season in Symphony Hall.

Mr. Munch, obviously attuned to the stodginess of the performance, poured on the accelerandos, but succeeded only in making the music fevered and uneven. The touching love scene possessed no warmth and certainly no tenderness; imposing a passionate mood in this lyric passage is false, and that is just where Mr. Munch erred in his emphasis. Where there was a richness demanded, we had nervousness; where there was a depth of feeling needed we had only superficialities.

The two soloists in the first part sang their brief roles capably; however, Beatrice Krebs' woofy contralto is unsuited to the naive character of the Strophes, and John McCollum (a fine musician incidentally), probably due to the sultry weather, fatally belabored the Queen Mab aria.

In the middle of the scherzo, a thunderstorm sent the 4000 auditors who were seated on the lawn (the audience numbered 9800 altogether) scurrying into the shed for cover. This forced Mr. Munch to stop the music. After waiting some moments, Richard Burgin suggested to the conductor that an intermission be declared. The downpour over, the concert resumed at the beginning of the scherzo.

Music In Review

Boston Post Aug 1/54

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, July 31—By every indication tonight's performance of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" should have been one of the best events in this year's Tanglewood season. Mr. Munch has previously played the work with stunning effectiveness; the orchestra by now knows the score backwards; the music itself contains some of Berlioz' most inspired passages; and the soloists are excellent singers. As it happened, however, tonight's "Rodeo" was in every way a routine reading.

The orchestra got off to a very rough start in the introduction, setting the pace for much of the remaining sections. Only when Nicola Moscoma, the commanding bass-baritone of the Metropolitan opera, stepped to the stage for the role of Friar Lawerence did the music receive that vital spark. It was as if he personally lifted the entire chorus, conductor and orchestra by the bootstraps to hurl forward the musical movement.

Moscona makes a powerful and dynamic padre; it is too bad that we do not hear him in this role during the winter season in Symphony Hall.

Mr. Munch, obviously attuned to the stodginess of the performance, poured on the accelerandos, but succeeded only in making the music fevered and uneven. The touching love scene possessed no warmth and certainly no tenderness; imposing a passionate mood in this lyric passage is false, and that is just where Mr. Munch erred in his emphasis. Where there was a richness demanded, we had nervousness; where there was a depth of feeling needed we had only superficialities.

The two soloists in the first part sang their brief roles capably; however, Beatrice Krebs' woofy contralto is unsuited to the naive character of the Strophes, and John McCollum (a fine musician incidentally), probably due to the sultry weather, fatally belabored the Queen Mab aria.

In the middle of the scherzo, a thunderstorm sent the 4000 auditors who were seated on the lawn (the audience numbered 9800 altogether) scurrying into the shed for cover. This forced Mr. Munch to stop the music. After waiting some moments, Richard Burgin suggested to the conductor that an intermission be declared. The downpour over, the concert resumed at the beginning of the scherzo.

Music in Review

Boston Post Aug 2/54

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 1 — Ruth Posselt broke another string on her violin this afternoon during a performance of the first movement of the Khatchaturian Violin Concerto with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Without looking a bit disturbed and with the savoir faire of one who has had this experience before, she exchanged her fiddle with George Zazovsky and concluded the movement.

In many years of concert going, I have only known three such experiences; Miss Posselt cannot but help wondering if these dramatic interruptions are not avoidable.

The concerto itself is an ideal vehicle for the soloist, and it is sure to please an audience seeking music in a lighter vein. Requiring no concentration on the part of the listener, the music is in turn flashy, brittle, not a little noisy, and sometimes downright corny. It is also rhythmic, tuneful, and at every point obvious. Miss Posselt finds the work an excellent showcase for her brilliant technique, her almost aggressively big tone, and her temperament.

Needless to say, the audience of over 8000 lustily cheered, both for her playing and her performance.

Richard Burgin, who conducted in the Berkshire festival for the first time this afternoon, opened the concert with William Schumann's bombastic and academic American festival overture.

In the second piece, Vaughan-Williams' Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, Mr. Burgin allowed the string section the utmost freedom in tonal matters. And the players responded with a gloriously rich sonority. It was the most beautiful sound I have heard so far this season here at Tanglewood. The Fantasia is constructed on a modal tune by the 16th century English composer and follows the rather free form of the Elizabethan keyboard fantasies.

A solid and straightforward reading of Sibelius' second symphony brought the concert to a close. Mr. Burgin plays Sibelius with devotion, affection, and the greatest respect.

Music in Review

Boston Post Aug 3/54

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 2—The eagerly-awaited, new three-act opera by Aaron Copeland, "The Tender Land," presented tonight as the major operatic offering in the Berkshire Festival, is not, I am saddened to say, the long-sought American opera.

Despite passages of distinction and scenes of considerable power, the opera as it now stands is not a compelling work; the music as a whole lacks unity and the characters need depth.

The Libretto, with more than its share of cliches and moralizing platitudes, is not the chief difficulty, however. The plot is servicable and bears striking resemblance to the current Broadway hit, "Picnic."

Laurie Moss, on the eve of her graduation from high school, falls in love with a handsome drifter, Martin. Martin persuades Laurie to elope with him, but later realizing that he has nothing to offer her, steals away in the night.

When Laurie discovers this, she, too, decides to run away, since grandpa with whom she has been living is a dominating old man.

As might be expected, Copeland's lean, concise style is well suited to such a rural American theme. He has written an expertly [illegible] musical score, employing folk materials in skillfully [illegible] ensembles, singing lines, unforced recitatives, and arousing square-dance sequences which seems to be the best part of the score.

Yet, through the entire work the music has little tenderness and no warmth.

Past operatic productions here at Tanglewood have been noteworthy theatrical achievements. This one departs from these high standards; in fact, it is appallingly bad.

The stage ensemble is awkward, the acting poor, (even by operatic standards); the settings and costumes indescribably drab and the lighting murky. The production paints a grim picture of rural Midwest at the turn of the century, dictated neither by fact nor the libretto.

Three members of the cast stand out for various reasons. Rosemary Carlos was a fresh-voiced Laurie with an unsophisticated charm.

Gets Music Post At Harvard

N.Y. Herald-Trib. August 6

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. Aug. 5.—G. Wallace Woodworth will succeed Archibald T. Davidson as Harvard University's James Edward Ditson Professor of Music, it was announced today. Mr. Davidson retired from the faculty in the spring. Mr. Woodworth has taught mlusic at Harvard since 1926 and has been a professor since 1946; he directed the Harvard Glee Club since 1933 and the Radcliffe Choral Society since 1925. He has also been active as the university's organist and choir master.

He was born in Boston, spent his boyhood in upstate New York and received the A. B. and A. M. degrees from Harvard in 1924 and 1926. He is a trustee of Fisk University and the New England Conservatory of Music.

Music in Review

N. Y. Herald-Trib. August 6

By TUCKER KEISER

LENOX, Aug. 5—Tonight's performance of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was a disappointing one. Not that the singing was not good, for it was; not that the orchestra was not well-prepared, for it was; not that the production was not handsome, for it was. But the performance as a whole was not a unified one.

Charles Munch, who conducted, was not in his best form. Tempi were erratic, and the orchestra frequently lagged behind the singers. Mr. Munch's reading of the score was not a sympathetic one; he seemed to be more interested in the orchestra than in the singers.

Of the singers, Eleanor Steber as Donna Anna was the most satisfactory. Her voice is a beautiful one, and she sang with a fine sense of style. Her aria, "Non mi dir," was the highlight of the evening.

Leonard Warren as Don Giovanni was vocally adequate, but he lacked the dash and the devilishness that the role requires. He was not convincing as the libertine.

Jan Peerce as Don Ottavio sang his arias with taste and skill, but he was dramatically dull.

Lisa Della Casa as Donna Elvira was the most disappointing of the singers. Her voice is not a large one, and it was frequently overwhelmed by the orchestra. She also lacked the dramatic fire that the role requires.

Fernando Corena as Leporello was a delightful comedian, but his voice was not always under control.

Cesare Siepi as the Commendatore was vocally impressive, but he was dramatically stiff.

The production, by Herbert Graf, was a handsome one. The sets, by Horace Armistead, were simple and effective.

'TANGLEWOOD' Note 120,000 In Berkshire '54 Concerts

Herald American August 2

By EMMA VAN WORMER

LENOX—Rain or shine programs go on in "Tanglewood," summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra here. The great Music Shed which seats 6,000 and the Theater-Concert Hall and the spacious lawns accommodate the throngs. When weather is showery, as last Saturday night, concerts by the Symphony in The Shed are halted to permit those on the lawns to move inside. Attendance Saturday night was 9,800. Charles Munch conducted an eloquently persuasive reading of the Berlioz dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet," the Festival Chorus having been prepared by Hugh Ross.

YESTERDAY afternoon 8,225 heard the orchestral featuring the Sibelius Second Symphony program, conducted by Richard Burgin, Boston Symphony Concertmaster. Soloist was Ruth Posselt, violinist (Mrs. Burgin) who played the interesting Khachaturian Concerto. This Concerto which replaced the previously announced Dvorak Violin Concerto was a happy choice.

WITH AN anticipated attendance of 120,000 for the season, the Berkshire Festival today starts the final fortnight with the first of two New England performances of Aaron Copland's American folk opera "The Tender Land." The opera, newly revised by Composer Copland, had its New York premiere last spring in the City Center. At that time several groups of college students, including the Music Study Class in Wells College, Aurora, were in attendance. The opera will be repeated tomorrow night, both performances scheduled for the Theater-Concert Hall with those supporting the Berkshire Music Center in attendance.

ARTHUR FIEDLER will bring the 92-piece Boston "Pops" Orchestra to play in Tanglewood's Music Shed for a first time on Aug. 13, a stellar attraction of the gala concert "Tanglewood on Parade," annual day-long benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Thomas Schippers, former Berkshire Music Center student, will conduct the Boston Symphony in Bizet's Symphony in C. and Bernda Lewis, soprano, known both as a Metropolitan Opera and Broadway [illegible] will be featured in the [illegible] from "Salome", Richard Strauss opera.

[illegible] simultaneously, details [illegible] will take place in the [illegible] Shed, the Chamber [illegible] Hall and the Theater-Concert Hall by student groups in symphony, chamber music and opera. There also will be a program of opera in the formal gardens. The Berkshire Festival closes with a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem" Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15, Charles Munch conducting

WICHITA, KAN.
BEACON

JUL 18 1954

Reno Student At Music Center

Robert Barney Childs, of Reno, Nev., is among 400 students who have been registered in the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival which will continue through August 15 at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass.

Founded by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky in 1940, the school provides courses for some 400 students, selected from over 1,500 applicants, in composition, conducting, opera, chamber music, chorus and orchestra under the supervision of leading musicians acting as a musical faculty.

The school is headed by Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assisted by composer Aaron Copland.

A considerable number of the student body includes amateur musicians who are housewives, social workers, attorneys, bookkeepers or stenographers throughout the year but who like to spend their vacations in musicland.

The Jersey Journal August 2 Jersey City, N.J.

BUDDING VOCALIST—Weehawken's Jean Hagen ge[ts] some musical tips from her musical coach, Hugh Ros[s] at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mas[s]

Tanglewood Student

Concert Career Her Aim

A beautiful blonde from Weehawken, currently singing at the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, Mass., is preparing for the concert and opera stage.

One of the "limited number of especially qualified students" to be selected for a scholarship at the internationally-famous school, Joan Hagen, 22, of 217 Angelique St., is a lyric soprano.

FINANCE PROBLEMS

Miss Hagen, who has worked as a dental assistant, salesgirl and office clerk to finance her musical studies, plans to compete in the annual National Musicians League contest this fall. Winners receive one-year contracts.

Miss Hagen's ventures as a professional singer have been limited mainly to appearances in Hudson County. Soloist for two years at the Lebanon Lutheran Church, West New York, she gave recitals in Jersey City, and appeared in Atlantic City, Philadelphia and Reading, Pa.

SCHOLARSHIP WINNER

The soprano began to study music seriously after she was graduated from Weehawken High School in 1950. Last summer she won a scholarship to study at the Pittsburgh Opera Workshop. At the Berkshire Music Center, the young lass is a member of the "Small Choir." She also has been selected as a "chorus leader."

Although other members of her family have creative talents, Miss Hagen is the only one interested in music. Her brother, Donald, 19, likes painting and sculpturing and her mother is a millinery designer.

SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Tuesday, [illegible]

TALKING IT OVER

Note Music Here, in Cornell U. Hall, In Berkshire Festival Shed

By EMMA VAN WORMER

[275]

McCollum Huyck

John McCollum, tenor, was [illegible] in the dramatic symphon[y] "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz r[e]cently in The Shed, "Tanglewood [illegible]" where Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Music Center, conducted. The Festival Chorus was under direction of Hugh Ross. Tonight marks the second of two performances of Aaron Copland's opera, of American life, "The Tender Land" in the Theater-Concert Hall in Tanglewood. "Tanglewood on Parade," a gala, is announced for Aug. 13, with closing of the Festival on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15 with a performance of the Berlioz "Requiem" in The Shed, Charles Munch conducting.

Copland 'Can Do Better' Says Critic of New Opera

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"The Tender Land," Aaron Copland's new opera which had its premiere in New York last spring, was given in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Frederick Cohen, head of the opera department, was assisted in its preparation by the members of his staff. Frederic Waldman was the conductor.

All three acts start with but a very few bars of orchestral prelude. The scene takes place at spring harvest time in a Western state on an isolated farm, the home of Laurie Moss, who is just about to graduate from high school. The action concerns her response to the plea of one of a pair of itinerant farmhands to leave with him and get married.

Copland has explained that he asked Horace Leverett to write a libretto after Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II had commissioned the work through the League of Composers, and that James Agee's book, a WPA project on tenant farmers of the South, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," was the inspiration and point of departure. Leverett has detached and raised the social status of the Moss family.

* * *

THE OPENING CURTAIN shows Laurie's mother, sung by Mary MacKenzie, and her small sister, delightfully played by little Eve Rubin, sitting on the porch of a simple farmhouse, ingeniously constructed to convey the sense of distant fields and stark living. Copland requires the same orchestra in the pit that is used for his "Appalachian Suite" and the music often has much the same quality and is obviously from the same pen, but while it is distinctively his, there is little derivative or referential to his previous music. There is a quiet serenity expressed by the maronic formulae which are his cachet and a fluent and masterful use of the woodwinds with the strings for background effects for more positive statement. Indeed, from that viewpoint, there was more the impression of "Pelleas" than of conventional support for voices.

Ma Moss has a narrative to sing at the outset but the first real vocal morsel is Laurie's soliloquy in which Rosemary Carlos carried the demureness of her characterization to excess in her voice. She later revealed her true and substantial vocal potentialities. The two itinerants, Martin and Top, Jefferson Morris and John Hornor, were convincing in all respects. Thomas Stewart as Grandpa Moss was vocally powerful and after he fired the two farmhands there ensued a quintet "the promise of a harvest" with Laurie and her mother joining at the close of the first act which is the emotional high point of the opera and Copland's finest achievement. There was opportunity for each one to sing with fervor and they all contributed to a dramatic climax.

* * *

THE SECOND ACT starts with a boisterous graduation party in which the more noisy and busy stage can not quite make up for nor conceal bare spots in the libretto. The "Thank You" chorus by the animated party is not entirely effective but the ensuing love declaration of Martin and the duet with Laurie becomes moving and the orchestra writing here could be detached for performance on its own whenever it becomes desirable. Copland writes here with the mastery long conceded him and the orchestral tone is devised at its happiest.

* * *

THE THIRD ACT, previously a second scene of the second act, has a certain poignancy when Martin, about to run away with Laurie at daybreak, sings "Does Someone Still Love Me?" in which Laurie soon joins him. The denouement of this episode, however, is weak. Suffice it to say that Laurie's departure, not with her lover, but alone, to seek whatever it is young people seek in this world, is thin and incredible. The final curtain descends on a scene which by the circuitous patern finds Ma Moss knitting and Eve playing with her doll as at the rise of the first curtain.

The stage settings, admirably executed by the Center staff, the direction, so effectively coordinated the excellent cast and orchestra, and all the individual ingredients could not in the aggregate make the "land" a viable production. It is vague and indecisive, in the music as in the plot, too often and too long. Many features of the evening hold one's interest but Copland can do better and must try again.

Fiedler Announces Program For Boston Pops Concert

TANGLEWOOD—Arthur Fiedler, who is bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday, Aug. 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, announced today a program of popular symphonic music.

John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March will open the Pops section of the Music Shed after intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, then Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gilette razor theme of radio and TV.

It is expected that there will be encores of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Tanglewood on Parade's concert starts at 8:15 p.m. with Thomas Schippers, former student of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C, followed by the final scene from the Richard Strauss opera, "Salome," with Broadway and Metropolitan Opera star Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music, and student opera will go on respectively in the Music Shed, Chamber Music Hall, and theater-concert hall on Tanglewood's big day, commencing at 6 p.m. A special attraction for holders of box seats and tickets in the reserved sections of the Music Shed is a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens, at 4 p.m.

If You Want To Be 'Changed' See Van Witzen at Bowl Event

STOCKBRIDGE — Old men who would like to see what their appearance would be if they were young girls—or vice versa—can find out by volunteering. A demonstration in make-up will be given at the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. concert here Thursday.

Leo Van Witzen, in charge of costume and make-up in the opera department at Tanglewood and on the faculty there and at the Juilliard School of Music, will give the demonstration. The concert will begin at 3 p.m. on the grounds at Wheatleigh.

Mr. Van Witzen says he cannot tell in advance what he will make his subject up as. That depends, he explains, on who in the audience volunteers to serve as subject. He will try to change the person to an opposite extreme.

A native of Holland, Mr. Van Witzen came to the United States in 1939. He had only an amateur's interest in costuming and make-up at the time, but went into partnership in Boston in a costume rental business. His partner made him a professional at make-up.

Mr. Van Witzen has been at Tanglewood for the past eight years. He designs costumes and does make-up in the opera department and teaches both subjects. Among his recent work was costuming for the three one-act operas given last week—ranging in period from 16th century Commedia dell'Arte to the Jazz Age of the 20s.

STRING QUARTET CONCERT PLEASES AT TANGLEWOOD

Kroll Ensemble Heard by 1300 in Chamber Music Program

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 4—The Kroll String Quartet, one of the finest of string ensembles, drew 1300 people tonight for the fifth of the six chamber music concerts which have proven so popular this season. An addition to the concert series, it has been found that there is a very special and devoted audience available and at each concert the theater shed has been filled.

Perfect Co-ordination

The Kroll String Quartet consists of William Kroll, violin, Louis Graeler, violin, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, cello. The quartet has played extensively in this country and throughout the world.

The program opened with one of the charming Haydn quartets, the "String Quartet in D major, Op. 64, No. 5." This has been labeled the "lark" quartet, probably because of the upward sweep of notes given to the first violin in the opening movement. One could admire and enjoy to the full the perfect co-ordination of this ensemble, its flexibility and the varied tone colorings of which it is capable. It brought to the Haydn quartet just the right amount of solidity and lyricism needed. The final vivace was a gem, sparkling with humor.

It is quite a distance from the felicities of Haydn to the complex utterances of Hindemith but the quartet bridged the gap with ease, providing a clear and telling account of his third quartet. Its dark lyricism was emphasized through the sheer beauty of the instruments themselves. Hindemith has given lyrical solo passages to each of the four instruments and these contrast strongly with the somewhat involved ensemble passages which have the charteristic rough dissonant speech often affected by this composer. The work was played tonight with exemplary clarity and full understanding.

Friday Concert

The final work played was Ravel's lovely "Quartet in F." Once again the Kroll ensemble was able to fit its style to the work at hand. One heard a performance rich in color, restrained in feeling yet alive and vibrant. If the Gallic nuances were sometimes lacking, there was a straightforward approach and honesty of expression that admirably disclosed the essence of this work.

Friday night Lukas Foss will conduct the chamber orchestra concert. This promises to be one of the high spots of the season. Seymour Lipkin, pianist, will be heard in Mozart's "Piano Concerto in B-flat, K. 450" and Mr. Foss will present Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," a ballet with song in one act (after Pergelesi) and excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," which has been given in its entirety by the opera department. The soloists will be Marvin Worden, tenor; Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green, sopranos.

Soloists in the Stravinsky work will be Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor, and McHenry Boatwright, bass.

The Lively Arts

By Milton R. Bass

EVERYONE has visualized his moment of glory, that blessed instant of impending tragedy where by one act or gesture the kingdom is won, the maiden is saved, the villain is smitten or the violin is exchanged. We have all seen ourselves in our day-dreams and our night dreams coming through at the crucial point to score the touchdown, be voted Miss Universe, win the Kentucky Derby or exchange the violin with the busted string.

The audience close to the orchestra at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon gasped at the dread plunk which signified that violinist Ruth Posselt had broken her A string during the first movement of the Khatchaturian concerto. They oohed with admiration as she turned without pause to first-desk violinist Zazofsky and exchanged her Guarnerius for his Stradivarius. And they ahed with delight as she slid into home plate, violin and spikes high, coming on like Gangbusters.

* * *

FOR THAT ONE brief moment everybody in the audience was Miss Posselt, faced with an insurmountable crisis and mounting it, and they showed by the enthusiasm of their applause how they felt about what she had done and what they would have done under the circumstances.

It is not too uncommon for a violinist to snap a string during a performance. If it is a solo appearance, the artist usually stops right there and re-strings his instrument while the audience buzzes about the situation. Some violinists keep a spare instrument handy but this type of conservation is decidedly rare.

It is said that Paganini would deliberately break all the strings on his violin before a concert in the hope that one would break. When the happy accident would occur, the virtuoso would keep right on going, using the other strings in its place to demonstrate the genius of his technique and artistry. As the man said, that's show business.

* * *

ALTHOUGH NO ONE has ever accused her of pulling a Paganini, the story goes that Miss Posselt snared her man by getting snared in the horse hairs of her bow string. It seems that several years ago, while appearing as a soloist with the Boston Symphony, Miss Posselt had an unfortunate accident during the performance. Only this time it was the strings on her bow that came loose instead of the string on her violin. Several of the long bow hairs became entangled in the folds of her dress and disaster threatened from several directions.

But Galahad appeared in the person of the concertmaster, a gentleman by the name of Richard Burgin who had only been casually introduced to the guest artist. He leaped to the rescue, disentangled the hairs, saved the day and the concert was brought to a triumphant close. Miss Posselt felt that such a gallant gesture could be made only by a man who was a concertmaster in all respects and so they were married. That is how the tale was told me, and if it isn't true, it ought to be.

* * *

HAVE YOU EVER noticed the jealous trees at Tanglewood? If you sit in the right hand section of the Shed facing the orchestra, you can't help but become aware of the petulant attempts of the birches, the maples, oaks and elms to distract from the music and the musicians. They wave to and fro as their friend the wind s o u g h s through their branches, drowning out the pianissimo, dancing vivacissimo in the hope that people will ignore the puny efforts of man as compared to the grandeur of nature.

There are times, however, when the magic created by man is too much for these leafy prima donnas and they dance and sing in tune and time with the symphony being played. This is one of the most beautiful moments that Tanglewood has to offer, the combination of man's higher nature and Nature's nature. It is a highly emotional experience to watch and hear the orchestra with your left eye and ear and observe the motions of the trees and their sighings with the right side.

* * *

AND IF YOU really want perfection, you will bring along a lovely and seat her on your right. Then you can observe the beauties of man and Nature at the same time while the Boston Symphony soothes your s a v a g e breast.

There are those who would insist on having sandwiches to complete the perfect picture and satisfy all of man's basic cravings, but we choose to ignore such barbarians.

Eagle—Manos

SOLOISTS for the chamber orchestra concert Friday night in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood take a rest from rehearsals to chat with Lukas Foss, right, who will conduct the BSO chamber orchestra in the program which will include Stravinsky's "Pulcinella," to which, left to right, Jefferson Morris, Regina Sarfaty and McHenry Boatwright will sing. The program also will include Mozart's opera, "Idomeneo," in which Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green will be soloists; and the Mozart Piano Concerto in B-flat with Seymour Lipkin as soloist.

[276]

Knickerbocker News - Albany - Aug 7 1954

Boxoffice and Boredom Help Wild Frenchman

Tanglewood Gives Berlioz a Chance To Become the Fourth Big 'B' of Music

By DUANE LA FLECHE

TANGLEWOOD and a wild French genius are knocking at the door of the three traditional "B's" of classical music—Brahms, Beethoven and Bach.

Hector Berlioz, with the particular support of Charles Munch and his Boston Symphony Orchestra, is demanding an equal place with the Brahms, Beethoven, Bach triumvirate at the top of the classical repertory.

Whether he gets it for keeps or not will depend in part on a fifth "B" in music—boxoffice. But supporting him is a sixth "B"—boredom.

The "B" for boredom was added to the traditional "B's" by Aaron Copland, the American composer, who has a few irons in the musical fire himself. In a public complaint, printed where it would receive wide circulation, Mr. Copland recently expressed his exasperation with music listeners who demand Bach, Beethoven or Brahms on every program and eschew those featuring the works of such contemporary composers as Hindemith, Piston, Toch and—it might be guessed—Copland.

Mr. Copland asserted he is bored with the traditional symphonic menu.

• • •

Neither Mr. Copland nor any of his supporters could make that complaint this summer at Tanglewood, which has observed the 150th anniversary of the birth of Berlioz by devoting nearly half of its shed concerts to the performance of his works.

With completion of two-thirds of the season, which has seen the works of Berlioz dominate or entirely fill the programs at four of the eight concerts, a spokesman for Tanglewood says it is happy with the outcome of the season from both cultural and boxoffice viewpoints.

The spokesman reports numerous commendations received on all the Berlioz presentations to date, with particular emphasis on the first two concerts, when the Harvard Glee Club, Radcliffe Choral Society and Eleanor Steber appeared with the orchestra in "The Damnation of Faust." The boxoffice report shows the attendance that night was 8,500.

• • •

THAT THE spectacular nature of the Berlioz works draw crowds was shown again Saturday night when the dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," again with chorus and soloists, drew 9,800 listeners despite the early threat of rain and its development into an intermission thunderstorm.

It might be noted, however, that both those figures were in considerable excess of two Sunday afternoon concerts when less spectacular works of Berlioz were presented. The "Fantastic Symphony" was heard by 7,700 and "Harold in Italy" by 7,200.

Could it be seen that the contemporary works on those [illegible] afternoon programs failed to attract?

• • •

ON ONE SUNDAY a Toch symphony was played, and on the other the program included—you guessed it—a work by Mr. Copland. It might be noted, however, that an all-Beethoven concert drew the greatest crowds of the season, 10,000.

But boxoffice is only a part—even though it be a most necessary part—of a musical success story, and the Berlioz season at Tanglewood has been just that.

Mr. Munch, conductor for all the Berlioz works, has shown a full understanding of the sometimes tumultous, sometimes seraphic moods of that composer.

Mr. Munch is president of the recently formed Berlioz Society, which has as its aim the more frequent performance of the composer's works.

But [illegible] Berlioz is a major undertaking aesthetically and financially. Such pieces as the "Fantastic Symphony" present relatively few difficulties, but the spectacular works demanding choruses and soloists are another matter. New York City hasn't heard "The Damnation of Faust" for a dozen years, although it is slated by the New York Philharmonic for this fall.

EVEN MORE spectacular, and presenting more practical difficulties is the "Requiem," which will be heard at Tanglewood the afternoon of Aug. 15. The score calls not only for symphony orchestra, chorus and soloists, but also for four brass bands, no less.

It takes a good boxoffice to foot the bills.

But Tanglewood has been pleased this season, not only with the success of its shed concerts, but also with the happy acceptance of its Wednesday chamber music concerts, the chamber orchestra concerts each Friday night, and the more privately presented student undertakings. In all nearly 100,000 persons have attended. The Wednesday evening concerts have drawn audiences in excess of the 1,200 seating capacity of the small theater-concert hall each night. The Friday evening concerts have seen an average of nearly 2,500 persons in attendance. The eight shed concerts to date have been heard by 67,000.

At the Wednesday concerts, all conducted for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the artists have donated their services. They have included Claudio Arrau, pianist, and the Kroll String Quartet, which will be heard tonight.

TANGLEWOOD has found, too, that its six-week season, inaugurated this year, is showing some advantages over the previous plan that saw the major part of its program concentrated in three weeks. A continuation of the six-week season can be expected next year.

And what will be heard next year? It is still too early to say, but it is a good bet that even more Mozart than usual will be on the programs.

EAGLE

gle, Wednesday, Aug. 4, 1954

Oil Paintings In Exhibit at Tanglewood

Manos Photos Also Being Shown at Reception Room

TANGLEWOOD—Miss Carol Cleworth, who has just finished her first one-man show at the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield, is exhibiting five modern oil paintings in the reception room at the Berkshire Festival, through Aug. 8. The final exhibition, from Aug. 9 to the Festival's closing Aug. 15, will be paintings by Lawrence R. McCoy, vice president of the Southern Vermont Art Center, Manchester, Vt.

Included in this week's exhibit is "Paris—After Hours" which was awarded third prize (modern class) at the Berkshire Art Assn.'s annual exhibition in 1953. Along with Miss Cleworth's work, the current exhibition includes the modern oil "Portrait of Edgar Varese" by Xanti Schawinsky, which has been lent by the Berkshire Museum.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Miss Cleworth majored in art at Skidmore College and received further training under Louis Bouche and Will Barnet at the Art Students' League in New York before an extended period in Europe where she studied in Paris. She is a summer resident of Stockbridge but maintains a New York studio where she has exhibited widely.

Festival Scenes

At the final Tanglewood art exhibit photographs by Gus Manos, photographer on the Berkshire Music Center staff, will be shown in addition to the works of Mr. McCoy. Mr. Manos will show a collection of photographs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival's conductors and soloists, at rehearsal and in performance; and scenes of the Berkshire Music Center, its faculty and students at work in the 1954 Tanglewood season. Mr. Manos is a junior at the University of South Carolina, Columbia, and plays flute in Columbia's symphony orchestra.

Through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum and its director, Stuart C. Henry, six exhibits, including photographs, paintings and sculpture by Clemens Kalischer, Franc Epping, Ture Bengtz, Homer Gunn, Miss Cleworth and Mr. McCoy, have been seen at Tanglewood during the Festival, in addition to sculpture by Homer Gunn on display throughout the season in the formal gardens.

Stockbridge

MRS. JOHN HEATHER
Tel. 429

Indian Hill Faculty Concert Tomorrow Night

STOCKBRIDGE—The faculty of the Indian Hill Workshop will present a concert of chamber music tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. They will play Faure's Piano Quartet in C minor and Dohnanyi's Serenade for String Trio. The concert is open to the public.

Indian Hill will be well represented at Tanglewood Friday. Seymour Lipkin of the faculty will be the soloist for Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat with Lukas Foss conducting. Twenty-two Indian Hill boys will augment the Tanglewood male chorus of [illegible] singers in excerpts from Mozart's opera, "Idomeneo." Saturday night, girls from Indian Hill will sing in a special chorus for Berlioz's "Te Deum."

The final concert by Indian Hill will be Saturday, Aug. 21, at 8:30 p.m., at the First Congregational Church.

Haydn, Hindemith and Ravel On Tonight's Festival Program

TANGLEWOOD—The Kroll String Quartet will give the fifth chamber music concert in the theater-concert hall tonight at 8:30.

The chamber music series is new to the Berkshire Festival this year as part of the design of Festival Director Charles Munch to increase the number of public concerts. The chamber music concerts replace the three in past years sponsored by the late Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge. The series, proceeds from which are donated to the Berkshire Music Center, has attracted an audience of more than 5,500 for the first four concerts in the 1,200-capacity theater-concert hall.

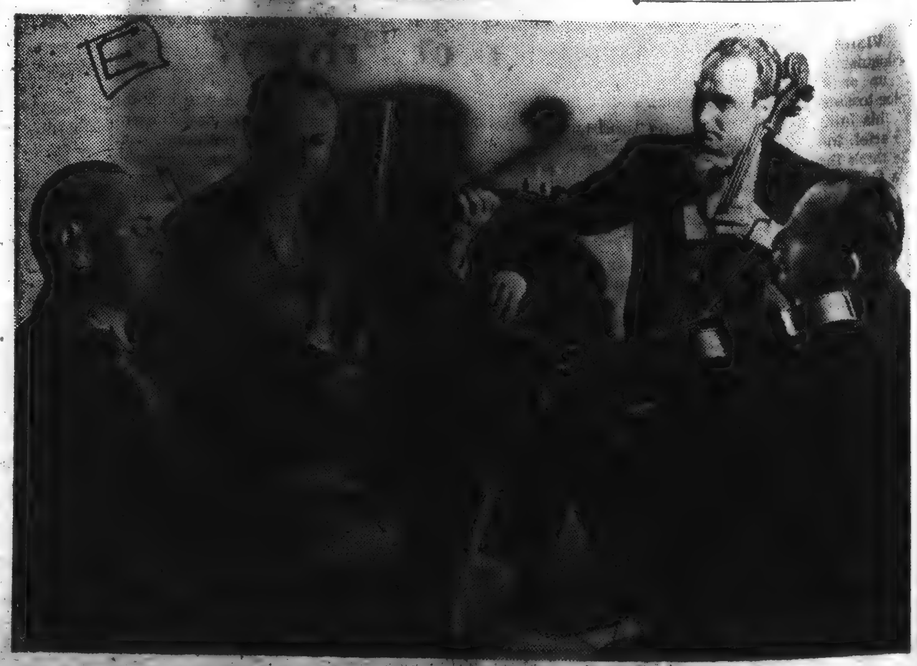
Haydns "Lark" Quartet, Paul Hindemith's Quartet No. 3, Op. 22, and the Ravel Quartet in F will be performed by the quartet, consisting of William Kroll, first violin; Louis Graeler, second violin; David Mankovitz, viola; and cellist Avron Twerdowsky.

Founded in 1945

As the official quartet of the Musicians' Guild in New York, the Kroll String Quartet has given 40 Town Hall recitals since it was founded by William Kroll in 1945, in addition to its annual tours. Mr. Kroll, co-head of the Berkshire Music Center's chamber music department, has been head of violin and chamber music at Baltimore's Peabody Conservatory of Music since 1947 and teacher at the Mannes College of Music since 1943. Soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra five times and recipient of the Coolidge medal for service to chamber music, Mr. Kroll was born in New York City and studied with Henri Marteau at the Royal Conservatory in Berlin and with Franz Kneisel at the Institute of Musical Arts in New York where, upon graduation in 1922 with highest honors, he was awarded the Loeb Medal.

Associated with Mr. Kroll since 1924, violist David Mankovitz will come to Tanglewood directly from New York with second violinist Louis Graeler, who has been a member of the organization since its founding and is regularly heard in many New York chamber music recitals. The quartet's cellist, Avron Twerdowsky, is a faculty member of the Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore, Md.

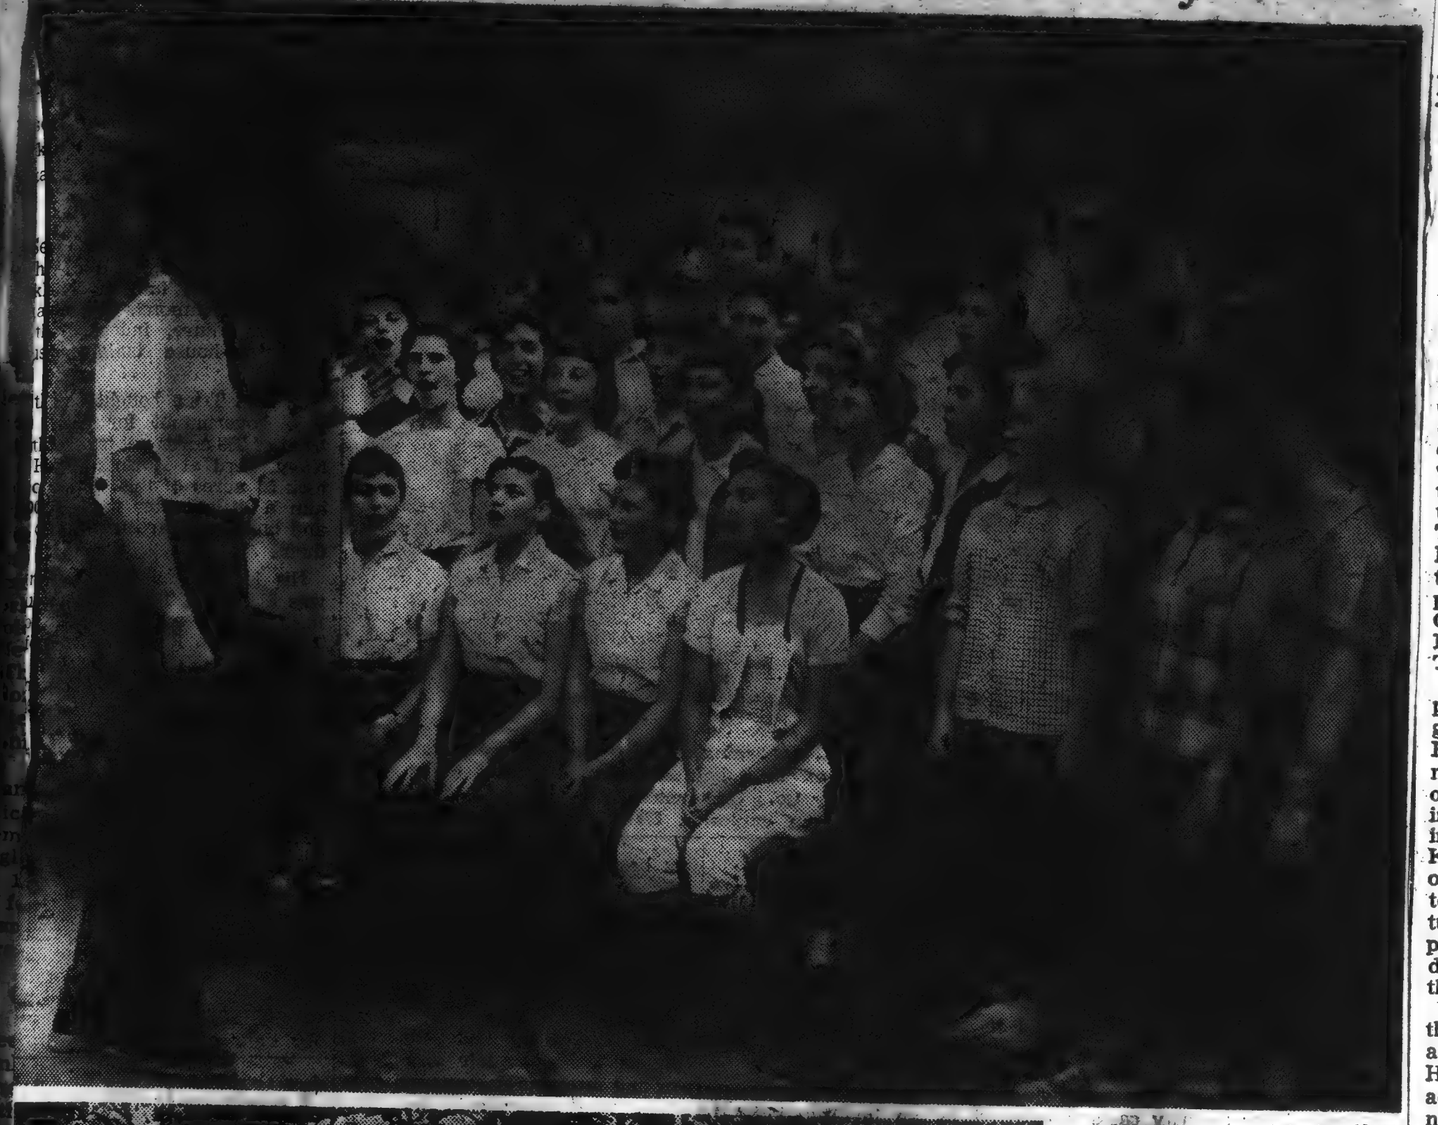
Reservations for remaining tickets for the Kroll String Quartet concert may be made at the Berkshire Festival box office at Lenox. Tickets of general admission to the Tanglewood lawns will be sold before the concert.



THE KROLL STRING QUARTET will perform in the Berkshire Festival chamber music concert this evening at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. Left to right, William Kroll, Louis Graeler, Avron Twerdowsky and David Mankovitz.

[277]

Camp Children To Join Festival Chorus Saturday in Shed



Manos

Combined choirs from the Indian Hill Music Workshop, Chesterfield, and Camp Mah-Kee-Nac for Boys, Lenox, left, rehearse for their roles in Saturday night's Tanglewood premiere of the Berlioz "Te Dum" which Charles Munch will conduct with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. David Buttolph has rehearsed his chorus of 44 girls, age 13 to 18, for weeks while Joe Kruger of the boys' camp has managed to pull some rounded notes from the throats of his young charges.

Eagle - August 5

Music

Kroll Quartet Sets New High For Tanglewood Stage Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE LAST BUT ONE of the Wednesday evening chamber music series at Tanglewood was played last night in the theater concert hall by the Kroll string quartet. One of the most magnificent exhibits of chamber music on that stage gave the audience which filled the hall a memory to treasure and a standard by which to measure for years to come. The Haydn D major, "The Lark," Hindemith's third, Opus 22, and the Ravel quartet comprised the program. William Kroll and Louis Graeler are the violins, David Mankovitz, viola, and Avron Twerdowsky, 'cello.

Mr. Kroll is the unexcelled exponent of the great class and the great tradition handed down by Franz Kneisel, the first concert-master of the Boston Symphony orchestra and, later, the pioneer in establishing chamber music in its proper niche in America. Kroll brings to these heritages his own superb instrumental mastery, a sense of style in the literature and an elegance of musical personality which make him the dean of chamber musicians in this country.

The program served to reveal the beauties of three distinct areas in quartet music. The Haydn was vital and agile; the adagio a model to what technical lengths the artists were willing to go to preserve tonal homogeniety in relatively simple music.

* * *

HINDEMITH'S QUARTET was written in 1922, nearly twenty years before he served on the composition faculty at the Berkshire music center at Tanglewood. It is a strange medley of various types, atonal, polytonal, and then emerging into good old reposeful conventional harmonic progress. It is ingenious and resourceful and inventive. It has five movements of which the first two and last two are played without interruption. The Krolls gave it clarity and architectural structure. The variety of rhythms and the employment of every device the instruments afford to produce sounds give way to an unusual but almost naive quiet slow movement in which a flowing line persists nearly without stop. If Hindemith had applied his talents to the plastic arts, the results, it is our conjecture, would hardly have deserved the classification of "beauty." We needn't delay here to define that term, but there is an underlying layer or intangible factor in his music which is not pretty nor courteous. How the Krolls add so much polish to it is a paradox.

The Ravel took on new lighting and setting in last night's performance. Phrases took on new and more valid inflections by the insight evident in the bowing. Ravel's purposes were realized and his writing enhanced in such instances as the fading in to the distance of the first violin when it doubles in long lines with the viola. The marvel of the evening was that such refinement could be achieved while still playing with such relaxed freedom and flexibility. We hope that the viola will eliminate a slide here and there which was conspicuous only because the whole evening otherwise was so fastidious.

Boris Goldovsky Won't Smile Back At Mona Lisa

BOSTON (AP) — Mona Lisa Taft, 18, a student of voice, has learned that smiling day and night [illegible] to an impressario [illegible] to impress him.

Superior Court Judge Edward J. Voke placed the girl on probation yesterday after she promised not to call Boris Goldovsky any more.

The girl said she was seeking a singing job from Goldovsky, head of the New England Opera Theater.

(Mr. Goldovsky is on leave of absence this year from his duties as opera director at Tanglewood.)

HOLYOKE, MASS.
TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM

JUL 24 1954

Holyoker In Festival Chorus At Tanglewood

A torrent of majestic color released in a performance of Haydn's Mass No. 3 in D Minor highlighted the Friday night chamber orchestra concert at Tanglewood, which attracted 2,250 persons.

Hugh Ross adeptly conducted the Boston Symphony's chamber orchestra and Festival chorus in the work, which formed the second half of the program. Four student soloists featured were: Naomi Farr, soprano; Beatrice Krebs, contralto; Marvin Worden, tenor, and Thomas Stewart, bass.

From the opening "Kyrie Eleison" to the closing "Dona Nobis Pacem" excitement was produced by the full-toned chorus, which included Miss Jonelle Stickel of Holyoke, who is attending the Tanglewood summer music school. The well-knit rise and fall of the choral voices formed a richly patterned background for the soloists.

Mr. Stewart possesses a well-controlled and vibrant bass. He excelled with his solemn shadin gof "Qui Tollis," while Miss Farr's light soprano voice carried the part precisely but with little color. Miss Krebs and Mr. Worden completed the good workmanship of the picture.

Handel's Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Opus 6, No. 4, and Haydn's Symphony in G Major, No. 100 ("Military"), which constituted the first half of the program, evolved for the audience musical patterns pristine in their beauty.

With Charles Munch conducting, the orchestra filled Handel's work with freshness and imagination as the strings played upon its flexible qualities. Mr. Munch's explicit direction brought sweetness in the first half of the work, which lacked somewhat in elasticity during the last half.

Delightful sounds were achieved in the Haydn symphony. Its gay melodies were garnished with the clash of drum and cymbal which lent a Turkish flavor to the work, as well as the piping of the flute and a touch of the oboe.

Featured in tonight's program will be Jean Morel, conducting the Boston Symphony in Prokofiev's Symphony No. 6 in E Flat Minor, Opus 111; Liszt's Concerto for Pianoforte in E Flat Major, No. 1; Strauss' tone poem, Don Juan, Opus 20, and Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme, Opus 36 ("Enigma"). Piano soloist will be Nicole Henriot. —I. R. M.

AFTER 20 YEARS of Tanglewood Festivals, the ice around Philadelphia has at last been broken. Friendly rivalry between the Boston Orchestra and the Philadelphia Symphony is believed to have impelled Philadelphia people to ignore Tanglewood until this summer, when leading critic of the "enemy camp," Max de Schauensee of the Evening Bulletin came here and wrote a review. Though fresh from Robin Hood Dell concerts, his report was glowing with praise, and he advised Philadelphians to investigate Tanglewood. He should have dropped in sooner.

MUSIC IN REVIEW

Jewish Advocate Aug. 5

By GERALD A. BERLIN

(Editor's Note.—This week's column is by Mr. Carl Thorp, pianist, composer and teacher, who resides in Newport. Mr. Thorp has contributed music criticism to this paper on other occasions.)

"GLORIOUS MUSIC" AT TANGLEWOOD

The Berkshire Music Festival had a very full weekend of glorious music. Charles Munch devoted the first half of Friday's concert to the works of two Frenchmen, Albert Roussel, who died less than twenty years ago, and Jacques Ibert, who lives in Paris. The flute concerto of Jacques Ibert is probably the most substantial of this composer's music, at least as we know his music in this country, and it was played with consummate skill and true empathy by Mme. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, a young woman of grace and distinction.

Albert Roussel's comparatively unknown music was represented by excerpts from the ballet, "The Spider's Feast." Roussel was a composer of great taste and his ingenuity never descends to unbecoming subtlety, nor did Mr. Munch overstep the stylistic boundaries in a bracing performance of the work.

The beautiful C Minor Serenade of Mozart, a tragically colored octet for oboes, clarinets, horns and bassoons, played with superb musicianship preceded the great Paris Symphony by the same composer.

Always a great favorite, the "Paris" was directed by Mr. Munch with great affection, deserved confidence and zeal.

Saturday night was dedicated to a full uncut performance of the dramatic symphony "Romeo and Juliet" by Hector Berlioz in celebration of the 150th anniversary of his death. The continuity of the first part was completely pulverized unhappily by a good deal of histrionics from the heavens themselves when a brief but wholly articulate thunderstorm made a maladroit appearance. After a short adjustment to these ardours, the outside audience regained its composure and Mr. Munch continued on with the Scherzetto which featured the most subtle artistry of the tenor Joohn McCollum. Against the tenor line the chorus did a sharp descent at a terrific pace, always pianissimo, declaring to the listeners the swift able workmanship of Hugh Ross' training of the Festival chorus. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, had a short passage as Juliet and Nicola Moscona, bass, fulfilled the aesthetic and vocal demands of Friar Laurence.

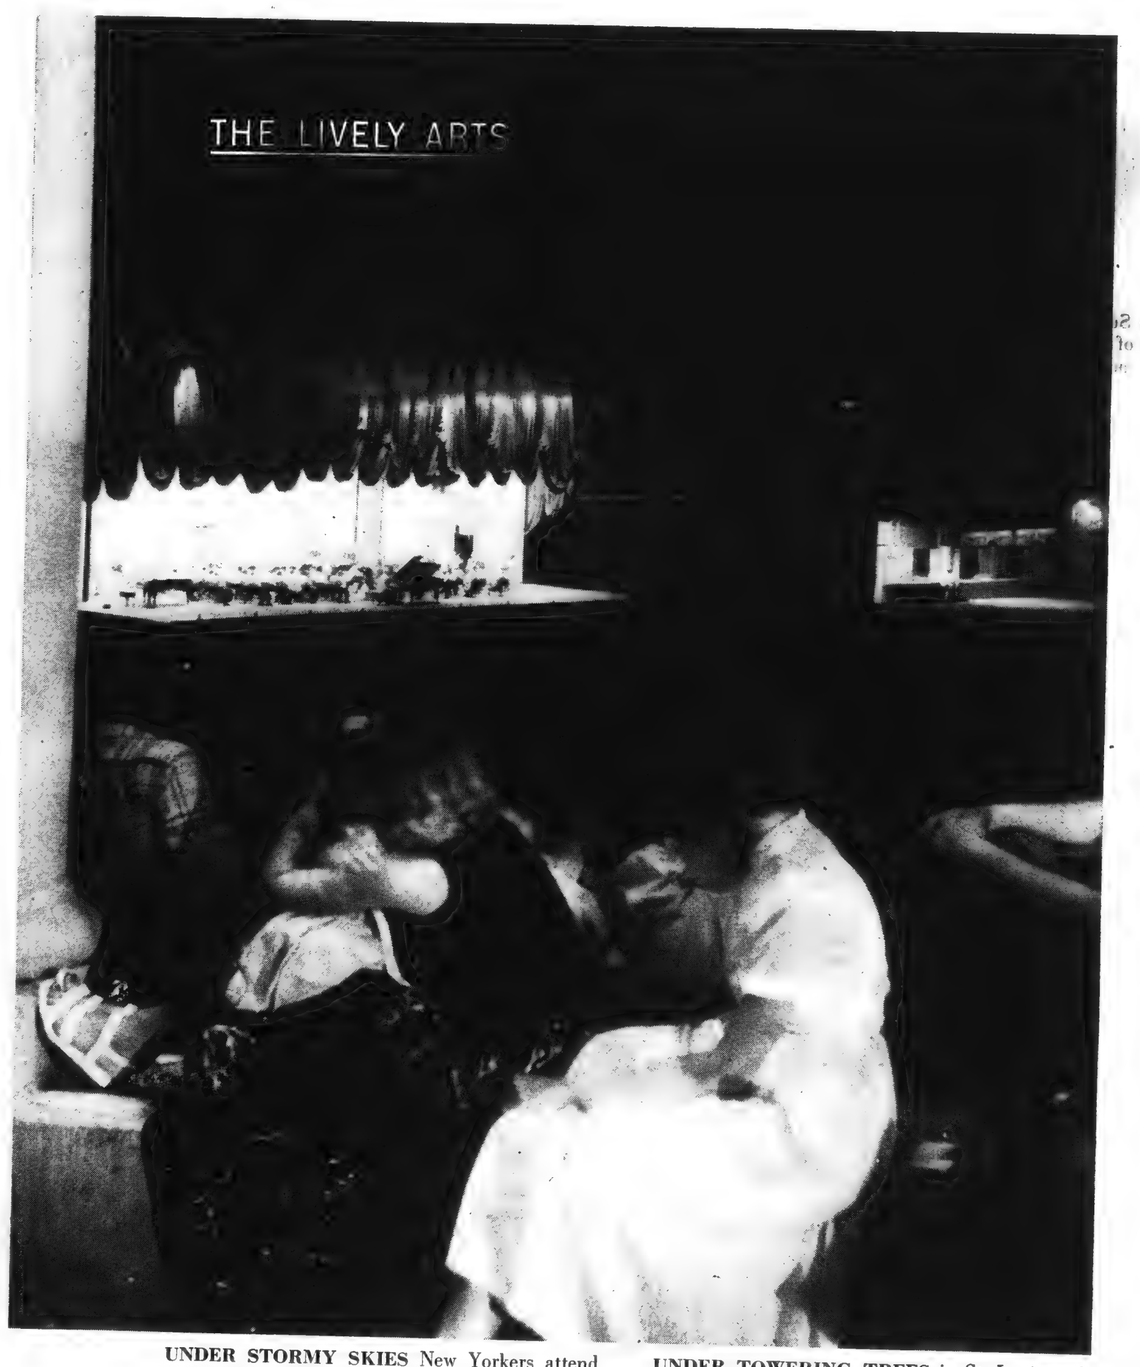
Sunday's concert was ablaze with rapturous sound but when a composer chooses a mean tone for the very basis of his overture, the piece is obliged to stay at that low level. This is what happened to William Schuman's "American Overture" which opened the afternoon's concert and left me "underwhelmed." Structurally adequate and with some rather startling and effective scoring it nevertheless lost its communicative power because it had nothing to communicate. Richard Burgin, conductor of the day, gave a brilliant if not sweeping performance of the aforesaid amorphous work.

Happily enough, it was followed by a glorious reading of a truly noble work and the world owes a great debt to Ralph Vaughan Williams for his magnificent setting of a theme by Thomas Tallis called Fantasia for a double-string orchestra. Here beauty lies in the expressive power as well as the musical language in which it is written.

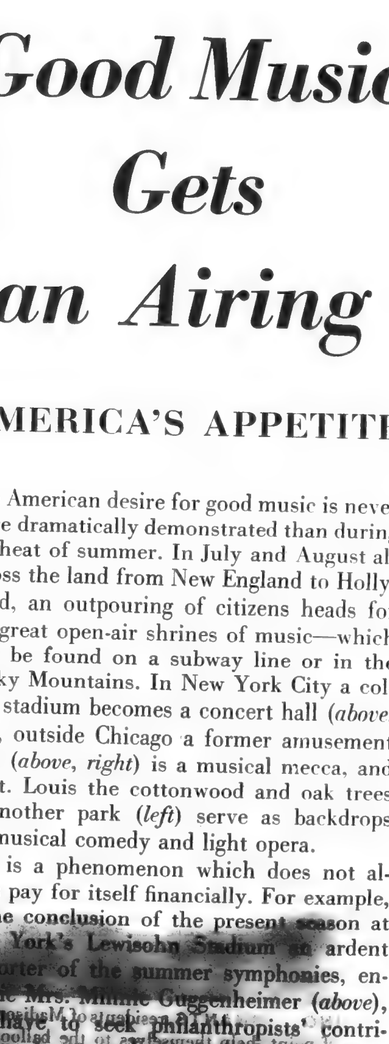
Following the intermission, Ruth Posselt, an able, wonderfully gifted violinist played the vivid, Khatchaturian Concerto, a work whose melodic lines are now enchanting in their lyricism, now stirring in their dramatism. I think the composer has extended his themes too much, with the result that the first and second movements are unbelievably long. They are simply too long. Miss Posselt's tone and expert technic were awesome and the vast audience claimed her with unflagging enthusiasm.

For that matter, so they did for Mr. Burgin too in a magnificent performance of the great Sibelius second Symphony. The emergence of Sibelius' music is nearly always meteoric, and of course that final movement with its ascending Coda would send any audience back into the fields from which they came with the confident and satisfying feeling that their afflatus had been well filled, and so it was. Mr. Burgin gave it all he had, and there was no lack of it.

[278]



UNDER STORMY SKIES New Yorkers attend annual all-Gershwin program in Lewisohn Stadium.



MUSIC PATRON, Mrs. Guggenheimer, raises the funds for New York concerts.

UNDER TOWERING TREES in St. Louis park Municipal Opera stages Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.

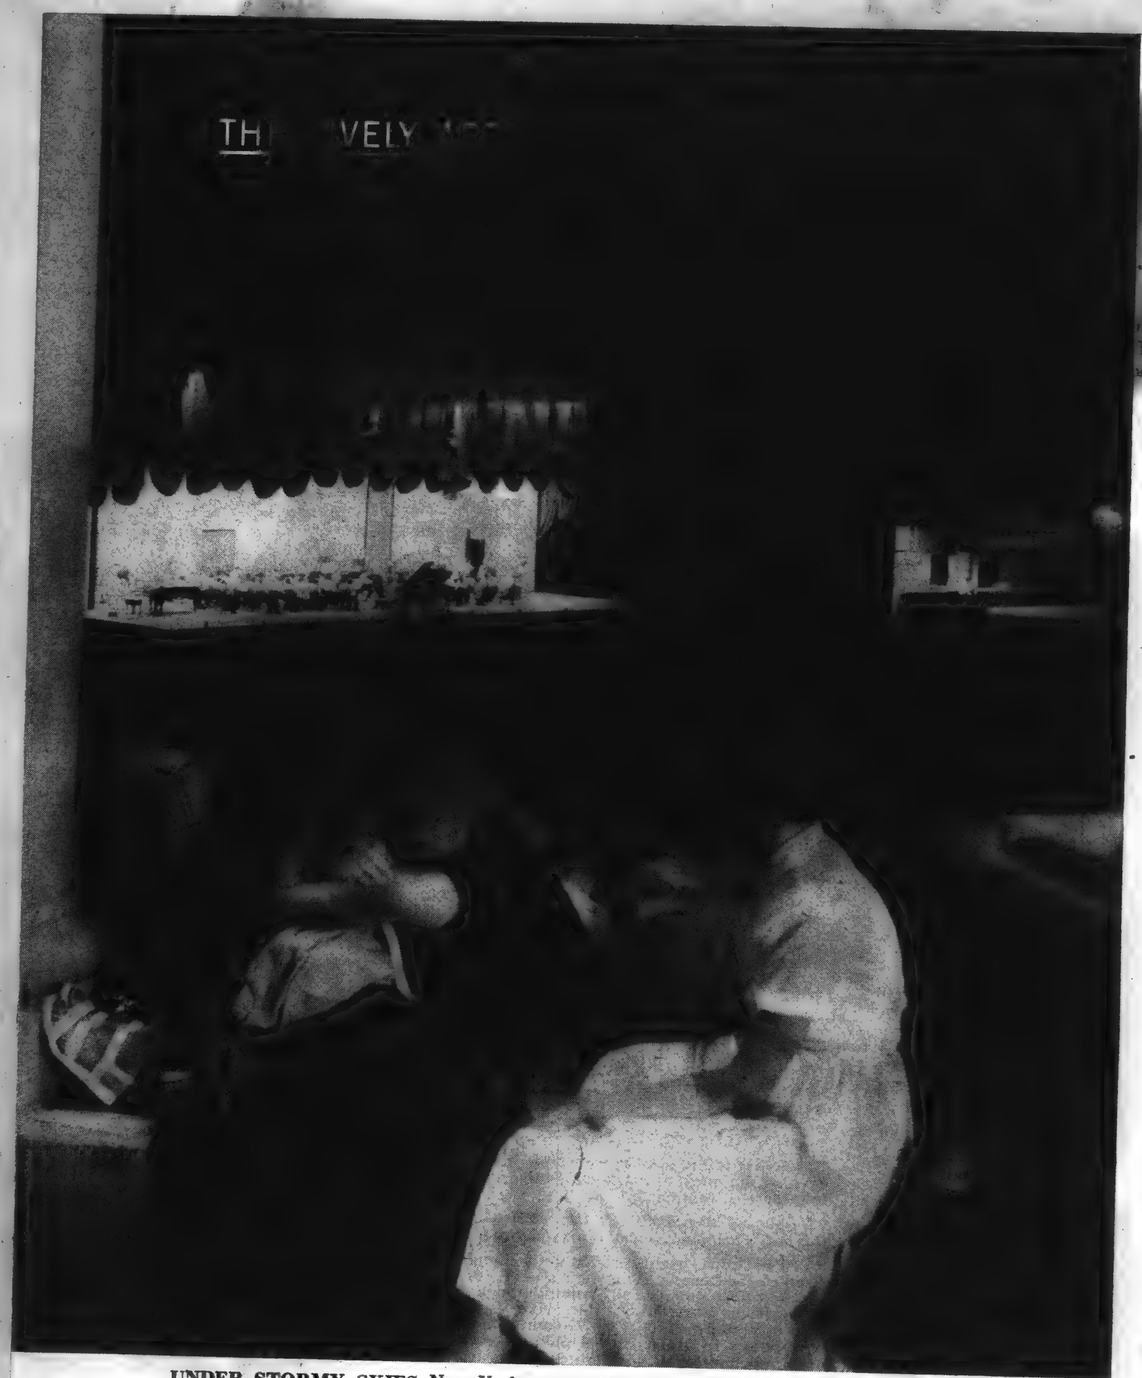
Good Music Gets an Airing

AMERICA'S APPETITE

The American desire for good music is never more dramatically demonstrated than during the heat of summer. In July and August all across the land from New England to Hollywood, an outpouring of citizens heads for the great open-air shrines of music—which may be found on a subway line or in the Rocky Mountains. In New York City a college stadium becomes a concert hall (above, left), outside Chicago a former amusement park (above, right) is a musical mecca, and at St. Louis the cottonwood and oak trees of another park (left) serve as backdrops for musical comedy and light opera.

It is a phenomenon which does not always pay for itself financially. For example, at the conclusion of the present season at New York's Lewisohn Stadium an ardent supporter of the summer symphonies, energetic Mrs. Minnie Guggenheimer (above), will have to seek philanthropists' contributions to cover Lewisohn's deficit, which

[279]



UNDER STORMY SKIES New Yorkers attend annual all-Gershwin program in Lewisohn Stadium.

UNDER TOWERING TREES in St. Louis park Municipal Opera stages Gentlemen Prefer Blondes.

MUSIC PATRON, Mrs. Guggenheimer, raises the funds for New York concerts.

Good Music Gets an Airing

AMERICA'S APPETITE

The American desire for good music is never more dramatically demonstrated than during the heat of summer. In July and August all across the land from New England to Hollywood, an outpouring of citizens heads for the great open-air shrines of music—which may be found on a subway line or in the Rocky Mountains. In New York City a college stadium becomes a concert hall (above, left), outside Chicago a former amusement park (above, right) is a musical mecca, and at St. Louis the cottonwood and oak trees of another park (left) serve as backdrops for musical comedy and light opera.

It is a phenomenon which does not always pay for itself financially. For example, [illegible] ardent [illegible], enthusiasts have to seek philanthropists' contributions to cover Lewisohn's deficit, which normally runs from $40,000 to $80,000 annually. Yet such deficits rarely daunt the many private citizens who in effect subsidize serious music in the U.S., and they never deter the hundreds of thousands who attend the summer concerts. People who may never enter a concert hall or opera house during the winter will happily make an early Sunday morning excursion of 150 miles to spend a summer afternoon at such a high-brow musical event as the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Massachusetts.

[279]

AT CONCERT IN CHICAGO'S RAVINIA PARK MUSIC ENTHUSIASTS RELAX ON THE LAWN, WHERE SEATS ARE CHEAPER THAN INSIDE THE PAVILION IN BACKGROUND

FOR SYMPHONY IS WHETTED BY SUMMER CONCERTS OUT-OF-DOORS

It may be wondered skeptically whether such music lovers are really interested in what they hear, or only in escaping the city heat to doze beneath the trees or gaze at the stars. Their behavior under favorable circumstances may even suggest that summer concerts are only an agreeable means for public love-making. In their canoes on the Potomac River at Washington, D.C. or stretched out on blankets on the broad green lawns of Tanglewood (next page), young concertgoers may hold hands to Haydn or steal kisses to Rimsky-Korsakoff. Still, the summer music concerts by and large are serious events, seriously planned to provide an attractive way for even the most unmusical citizens to expose themselves to the pleasure of good music.

One of the oldest and most respected of the big summer productions is held each year at Ravinia Park north of Chicago, which was opened originally as a high-class amusement park. That enterprise failed, and in 1905 the park's musical tradition was created. Chicago businessmen gave financial backing to a long, shining era of summer concerts and opera. The great depression brought four silent years, but since 1936 Ravinia has been going strong again, managed by a nonprofit corporation whose wealthy guarantors pay off the inevitable deficits in order to "furnish to the greater Chicago community the best symphonic music at less than cost." Ravinia's orchestra is the venerable Chicago Symphony, and its conductors this summer have included William Steinberg, Alfred Wallenstein and other well-regarded musicians.

Deeper in the Middle West, at St. Louis, the reputation of another of the summertime pioneers, the Municipal Opera in Forest Park, has been built not upon classical music but upon light opera staged by the Municipal Opera Company. The success story of Forest Park began in 1919 with a minor disaster, when a heavy thunderstorm during a performance of Robin Hood caused the River des Peres to rise behind the stage and wash away Sherwood Forest. The "Muny" summer shows now attract three quarters of a million people a season. This year the Muny is concentrating on the revival of musical comedies which have scored top hits on Broadway.

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

AT CONCERT IN CHICAGO'S RAVINIA PARK MUSIC ENTHUSIASTS RELAX ON THE LAWN, WHERE SEATS ARE CHEAPER THAN INSIDE THE PAVILION IN BACKGROUND

FOR SYMPHONY IS WHETTED BY SUMMER CONCERTS OUT-OF-DOORS

normally runs from $40,000 to $80,000 annually. Yet such deficits rarely daunt the many private citizens who in effect subsidize serious music in the U.S., and they never deter the hundreds of thousands who attend the summer concerts. People who may never enter a concert hall or opera house during the winter will happily make an early Sunday morning excursion of 150 miles to spend a summer afternoon at such a high-brow musical event as the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Massachusetts.

It may be wondered skeptically whether such music lovers are really interested in what they hear, or only in escaping the city heat to doze beneath the trees or gaze at the stars. Their behavior under favorable circumstances may even suggest that summer concerts are only an agreeable means for public love-making. In their canoes on the Potomac River at Washington, D.C. or stretched out on blankets on the broad green lawns of Tanglewood (next page), young concertgoers may hold hands to Haydn or steal kisses to Rimsky-Korsakoff. Still, the summer music concerts by and large are serious events, seriously planned to provide an attractive way for even the most unmusical citizens to expose themselves to the pleasure of good music.

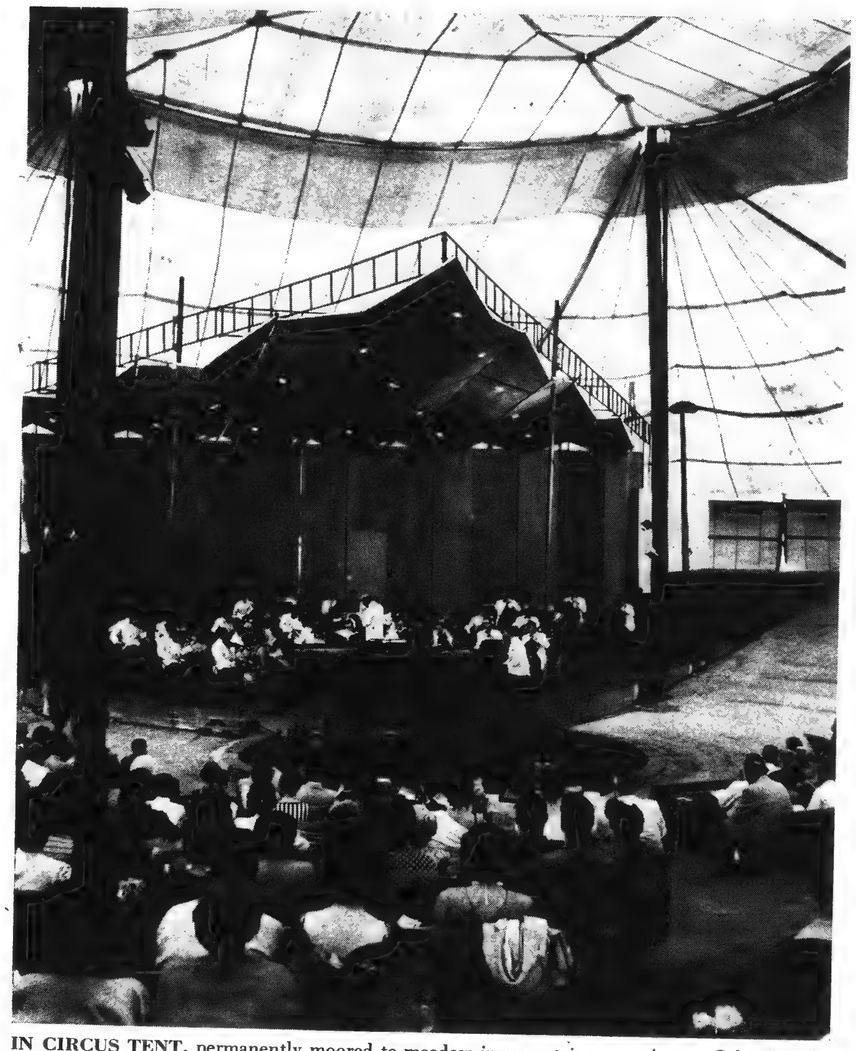
One of the oldest and most respected of the big summer productions is held each year at Ravinia Park north of Chicago, which was opened originally as a high-class amusement park. That enterprise failed, and in 1905 the park's musical tradition was created. Chicago businessmen gave financial backing to a long, shining era of summer concerts and opera. The great depression brought four silent years, but since 1936 Ravinia has been going strong again, managed by a nonprofit corporation whose wealthy guarantors pay off the inevitable deficits in order to "furnish to the greater Chicago community the best symphonic music at less than cost." Ravinia's orchestra is the venerable Chicago Symphony, and its conductors this summer have included William Steinberg, Alfred Wallenstein and other well-regarded musicians.

Deeper in the Middle West, at St. Louis, the reputation of another of the summertime pioneers, the Municipal Opera in Forest Park, has been built not upon classical music but upon light opera staged by the Municipal Opera Company. The success story of Forest Park began in 1919 with a minor disaster, when a heavy thunderstorm during a performance of Robin Hood caused the River des Peres to rise behind the stage and wash away Sherwood Forest. The "Muny" summer shows now attract three quarters of a million people a season. This year the Muny is concentrating on the revival of musical comedies which have scored top hits on Broadway.

CONTINUED ON NEXT PAGE

IN HOLLYWOOD BOWL, where 24 concerts attract some 200,000 people each summer, Composer Richard Rodgers conducts Los Angeles Philharmonic in a program of his own music.

IN TANGLEWOOD SHED Pierre Monteux opens an all-Beethoven program by leading Boston Symphony in overture to



IN CIRCUS TENT, permanently moored to meadow in mountains near Aspen, Colorado, the student symphony of the Aspen School of Music plays to appreciative visitors in its 1954 debut.

Summer Music CONTINUED

The St. Louis formula would, of course, never be remotely considered at Tanglewood, the sprawling, pine-shaded campus just outside the charming small town of Lenox, Massachusetts, home of the Berkshire Festival. This is the queen of summer symphony festivals, and its first-rate concerts attract visitors from all parts of the eastern U.S. and Canada. For the minimum $2 admission fee, they get 2½ hours of music plus a sun tan, for the cheaper seats are on the lawns surrounding a pavilion which holds 6,000 listeners and boasts really excellent acoustics.

Tanglewood fans, many of them from Boston and New York City, are a remarkably reverent lot, even when they bring small children, boxes of fried chicken and Thermos jugs filled with lemonade. They hush the children and sip the lemonade quietly as they listen to the Boston Symphony under the baton of its resident director Charles Munch or guest conductors. Recently Tanglewood attracted a Sunday crowd of 10,000 with an all-Beethoven program conducted by Pierre Monteux. The piano solo of the Emperor Concerto was played on this occasion by Claudio Arrau, who was celebrating the 30th anniversary of his American debut.

Some 2,000 miles west of Tanglewood is another summer music center which, although only four years old and not nearly as well patronized as those in the east, has gained a wide reputation for seeking the best in serious music. This is Aspen, Colorado, high in the Rockies. Mass attendance is not the aim of its major-domo, Richard Leach, who offers a weekly concert by a 48-piece student orchestra drawn from the 200 students of Aspen's summer music school, many of them distinguished musicians. William Steinberg, making his debut as music director this summer, drew 560 persons to the circus tent (left, below) which serves as Aspen's concert hall. When a thunderstorm pelted the tent during a Mozart concerto, helpers lowered the left), outside Chicago a former amusement park (above, right) is a musical mecca, and at St. Louis the cottonwood and oak trees of another park (left) serve as backdrops for musical comedy and light opera.

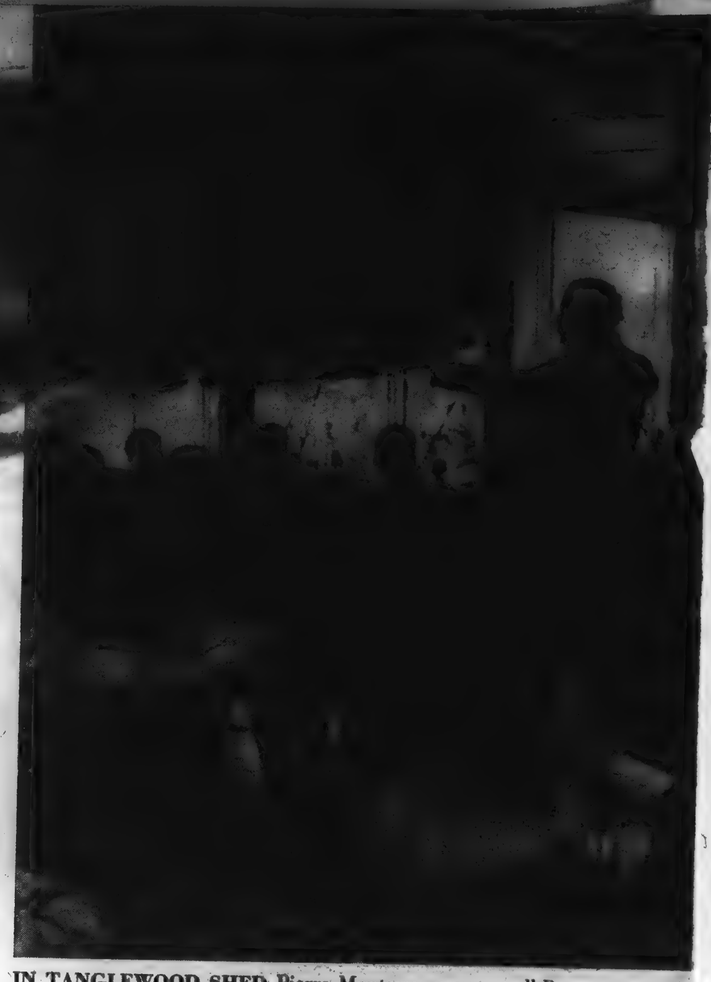
It is a phenomenon which does not always pay for itself financially. For example, at the conclusion of the present season at New York's Lewisohn Stadium an ardent supporter of the summer symphonies, energetic Mrs. Minnie Guggenheimer (above), will have to seek philanthropists' contributions to cover Lewisohn's deficit, which

[279]

IN HOLLYWOOD BOWL, where 24 concerts attract some 200,000 people each summer, Composer Richard Rodgers conducts Los Angeles Philharmonic in a program of his own music.



IN TANGLEWOOD SHED Pierre Monteux opens an all-Beethoven program by leading Boston Symphony in overture to

IN CIRCUS TENT, permanently moored to meadow in mountains near Aspen, Colorado, the student symphony of the Aspen School of Music plays to appreciative visitors in its 1954 debut.

Summer Music CONTINUED

The St. Louis formula would, of course, never be remotely considered at Tanglewood, the sprawling, pine-shaded campus just outside the charming small town of Lenox, Massachusetts, home of the Berkshire Festival. This is the queen of summer symphony festivals, and its first-rate concerts attract visitors from all parts of the eastern U.S. and Canada. For the minimum $2 admission fee, they get 2½ hours of music plus a sun tan, for the cheaper seats are on the lawns surrounding a pavilion which holds 6,000 listeners and boasts really excellent acoustics.

Tanglewood fans, many of them from Boston and New York City, are a remarkably reverent lot, even when they bring small children, boxes of fried chicken and Thermos jugs filled with lemonade. They hush the children and sip the lemonade quietly as they listen to the Boston Symphony under the baton of its resident director Charles Munch or guest conductors. Recently Tanglewood attracted a Sunday crowd of 10,000 with an all-Beethoven program conducted by Pierre Monteux. The piano solo of the Emperor Concerto was played on this occasion by Claudio Arrau, who was celebrating the 30th anniversary of his American debut.

Some 2,000 miles west of Tanglewood is another summer music center which, although only four years old and not nearly as well patronized as those in the east, has gained a wide reputation for seeking the best in serious music. This is Aspen, Colorado, high in the Rockies. Mass attendance is not the aim of its major-domo, Richard Leach, who offers a weekly concert by a 48-piece student orchestra drawn from the 200 students of Aspen's summer music school, many of them distinguished musicians. William Steinberg, making his debut as music director this summer, drew 560 persons to the circus tent (left, below) which serves as Aspen's concert hall. When a thunderstorm pelted the tent during a Mozart concerto, helpers lowered the left), outside Chicago a former amusement park (above, right) is a musical mecca, and at St. Louis the cottonwood and oak trees of another park (left) serve as backdrops for musical comedy and light opera.

It is a phenomenon which does not always pay for itself financially. For example, at the conclusion of the pres[illegible]on at [illegible]dent [illegible]mphonies, en-[illegible]enheimer (above), [illegible] to seek philanthropists' contributions to cover Lewisohn's deficit, which

[279]

Leonore. This orchestra, which some consider top U.S. symphony, plays three times weekly at Tanglewood during summer.

IN ROBIN HOOD DELL at Philadelphia, Pianist Victor Borge entertains a capacity crowd. The natural amphitheater has seats for 9,000, space for twice as many more on the hillsides.

flaps and the orchestra went right on playing. After Wagner's Siegfried Idyll the applause was so loud that it stampeded a herd of 17 saddle horses grazing in an adjacent pasture—a musical hazard not shared by other festivals.

Probably the largest audience of the current season was the crowd of 26,000 which greeted the Danish artist Victor Borge—a concert pianist of considerable skill who has become one of America's favorite sophisticated comedians—at Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell on July 15. In this vast natural amphitheater the programming shows a catholic taste and a desire to please nearly everybody. During the same week when Victor Borge did a burlesque version of The Bartered Bride overture, another star attraction was Violinist Yehudi Menuhin. The drawing power of lighthearted programs in a place as steamy hot as Philadelphia seems to have been proved by the Borge concert, yet the appeal of the thoroughly serious artist Menuhin was hardly less. He attracted 21,000 people.

In the past the Dell had financial troubles with more serious concert doned. Then, h
turer named F
music because to think I coul
a free hand in the box office musicians by teer group of $100 apiece, a adelphia City
ion that "no
in the summe and lobster."
lighter musica
ly reflect wha
—an appreciat vast American

LIFE

Vol. 17, No. 4 INTERNATIONAL EDITION AUGUST 23, 1954

O TEMPORA, O MORES, O'CASEY

CHORUS GIRLS IN HOLLYWOOD, A CONCERT CROWD AT TANGLEWOOD AND WOODEN LEGS IN BRUSSELS

he ever-changing times, new customs and new scitific discoveries are always challenging old ideas manding their constant re-evaluation. This sumer, for example, thanks to chemistry, it seems no nger necessary to worry about soil exhaustion.
remarkable new method for making the soil vastly cher, described on pages 36–39, holds promise not ly for America but for the world's agriculture.

Other sure signs of the changing times come to ght in this issue. In Germany a new sort of airlift as again provided happy vacations for Berlin chilren (pp. 16, 17). On the U.S. political scene there ppears to be a changing attitude about Senator McCarthy (p. 22). We also show in this issue what has come of the redesigning of one of Hollywood's biggest nightclubs (pp. 26, 27).

To offset this sense of change, however, some old customs are being revived—in Brussels an ancient and colorful one (pp. 34, 35) reappears. And in many U.S. cities and towns there has been the usual summertime revival of interest in serious music (pp. 30–33). But most heartening is the evidence, on pages 44–45, that the literary world of Sean O'Casey in Dublin is little changed since the days when he was writing his brilliant plays there—little changed except for its being older and much more peaceable.

July 7
Boston Herald

Schippers to Conduct BSO in Tanglewood

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday, August 13 at 8:15, in the Music Shed is a music revelation in himself," said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" w twenty-three-year-old A made his first Europea in 1951.

YONKERS, N.Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
JUL 13 1954

In The News

Henry Simon, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Simon of 83 Iroquois Road, who is spending the Summer at Camp Mah Kee Nac in Lenox, Mass., has been chosen to sing in the choir at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Music Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Aug. 1. He is a seventh grader at School Eight.

te,
m.

33

[280]

Leonore. This orchestra, which some consider top U.S. symphony, plays three times weekly at Tanglewood during summer.

IN ROBIN HOOD DELL at Philadelphia, Pianist Victor Borge entertains a capacity crowd. The natural amphitheater has seats for 9,000, space for twice as many more on the hillsides.

flaps and the orchestra went right on playing. After Wagner's Siegfried Idyll the applause was so loud that it stampeded a herd of 17 saddle horses grazing in an adjacent pasture—a musical hazard not shared by other festivals.

Probably the largest audience of the current season was the crowd of 26,000 which greeted the Danish artist Victor Borge—a concert pianist of considerable skill who has become one of America's favorite sophisticated comedians—at Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell on July 15. In this vast natural amphitheater the programming shows a catholic taste and a desire to please nearly everybody. During the same week when Victor Borge did a burlesque version of The Bartered Bride overture, another star attraction was Violinist Yehudi Menuhin. The drawing power of lighthearted programs in a place as steamy hot as Philadelphia seems to have been proved by the Borge concert, yet the appeal of the thoroughly serious artist Menuhin was hardly less. He attracted 21,000 people.

In the past the Dell had financial troubles with more serious concert doned. Then, I
turer named F
music because to think I cou
a free hand in the box office musicians by teer group of $100 apiece, a adelphia City
ion that "ne
in the summ and lobster."
lighter musica
ly r wha
—a vast

LIFE
Vol. 17, No. 4 INTERNATIONAL EDITION AUGUST 23, 1954

O TEMPORA, O MORES, O'CASEY

CHORUS GIRLS IN HOLLYWOOD, A CONCERT CROWD A[illegible] WOODEN LEGS IN BRUSSELS

The ever-changing [illegible] entific discoveries are alwa[illegible] demand[illegible] their constant re-evaluation. This summer, for example, thanks to chemistry, it seems no longer necessary to worry [illegible] exhaustion. A remarkable new [illegible] making the soil vastly richer, described on pages 36–39, holds promise not only for America but for the world's agriculture.

Other sure signs of the changing times come to light in this issue. In Germany a new sort of airlift has again provided happy vacations for hosts of children (pp. 16, 17). On the [illegible] appears to be a changing attitude about Senator McCarthy (p. 22). We also show in this issue what has come [illegible] ging of one of Hollywood's biggest nightclubs (pp. 26, 27).

To offset this sense of change, however, some old customs are being revived—in Brussels an ancient and colorful one (pp. 34, 35) [illegible]. And in many U.S. cities and towns there has been the usual summertime revival of interest in serious music (pp. 30–33). But most heartening is the evidence, on pages 44–45, that the literary world of Sean O'Casey in Dublin is little changed since the days when he was writing his brilliant plays there—little changed except for its being older and [illegible]y peaceable.

YONKERS, N. Y.
HERALD STATESMAN
[illegible] 3 1954

In The News

Henry Simon, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Simon of 83 Iroquois Road, who is spending the Summer at Camp Mah Kee Nac in Lenox, Mass., has been chosen to sing in the choir at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Music Festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Aug. 7. He is a seventh grader at School Eight.

[280]

Leonore. This orchestra, which some consider top U.S. symphony, plays three times weekly at Tanglewood during summer.

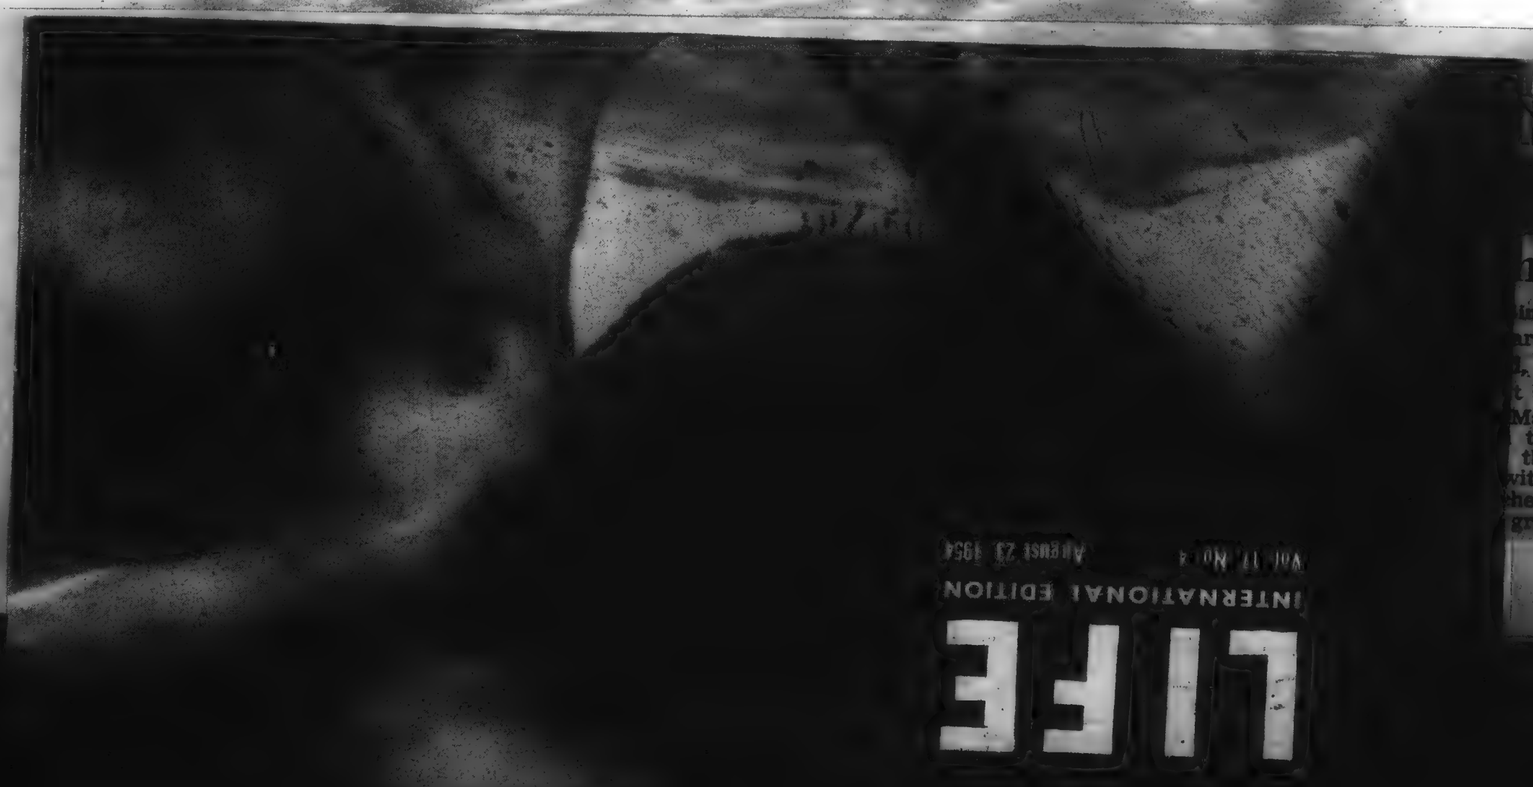
IN ROBIN HOOD DELL at Philadelphia, Pianist Victor Borge entertains a capacity crowd. The natural amphitheater has seats for 9,000, space for twice as many more on the hillsides.

flaps and the orchestra went right on playing. After Wagner's Siegfried Idyll the applause was so loud that it stampeded a herd of 17 saddle horses grazing in an adjacent pasture—a musical hazard not shared by other festivals.

Probably the largest audience of the current season was the crowd of 26,000 which greeted the Danish artist Victor Borge—a concert pianist of considerable skill who has become one of America's favorite sophisticated comedians—at Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell on July 15. In this vast natural amphitheater the programming shows a catholic taste and a desire to please nearly everybody. During the same week when Victor Borge did a burlesque version of The Bartered Bride overture, another star attraction was Violinist Yehudi Menuhin. The drawing power of lighthearted programs in a place as steamy hot as Philadelphia seems to have been proved by the Borge concert, yet the appeal of the thoroughly serious artist Menuhin was hardly less. He attracted 21,000 people.

In the past the Dell had financial troubles with more serious concerts, and in 1948 the concerts were abandoned. Then, however, up rose a millionaire manufacturer named Fredric Mann who was sentimental about music because, he says, he was "once brainless enough to think I could have been a concert pianist." He asked a free hand in running the concerts, promptly abolished the box office and made everything free. He paid the musicians by raising contributions from a large volunteer group of "Friends of the Dell," who donated $100 apiece, and by securing a subsidy fr[illegible] the Philadelphia City C[illegible] H[illegible] M[illegible] opinion that "nobody wants [illegible] program in the summertime. They want something like salad and lobster." But if heat seems to create a taste for lighter musical menus, the summer concerts also clearly r[illegible] what their sponsors have always hoped for —a[illegible]ociation of great and enduring music by a vast [illegible]can audience.

IN RENTED CANOES, moored in the Potomac River alongside Washington's [illegible], concertgoers raise paddles in salute as Navy band opens concert by playi[illegible]them.



[illegible]NKERS, N. Y.
[illegible]LD STATESMAN
[illegible]3 1954

[illegible]he News

[illegible]imon, son of Dr. and [illegible]rd Simon of 83 Iro[illegible], who is spending the [illegible]t Camp Mah Kee Nac [illegible]Mass., has been chosen [illegible] the choir at Tangle[illegible] the Berkshire Music [illegible]with the Boston Sym[illegible]hestra on Aug. 7. He is [illegible] grader at School Eight.

[a80]

PASSAIC, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS

JUL 15 1954

Henry Janiec

Henry Janiec, Scholarship Winner, To Lead Symphony at Tanglewood

Winner of a six-week scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass, was Henry Janiec, of Passaic.

Auditions were held last week at the summer music school, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Janiec will lead the orchestra every Thursday night during the Berkshire Music Festival which will continue through August 15. He will make his debut in this role tonight.

Mr. Janiec, who is conductor of the Spartanburg (S.C.) Symphony Orchestra and a professor at Converse School of Music in Spartanburg, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Avenue, Passaic.

His brother, Edward Janiec, is conductor of Chopin Singing Society of Passaic.

The school at Tanglewood, which provides courses for 400 students chosen from more than 1,500 applicants, was founded in 1940 by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. It is now headed by Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by Aaron Copland, composer. The student body includes many amateur musicians who are housewives, social workers, professional and business people who like to spend their vacations there.

Mr. Janiec won the 1952 Outstanding Student of the Year award at Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Oberlin College, Ohio, where he received bachelor's and master's degrees. He is an appointed member of Pi Kappa Lambda, national music honor society. Mr. Janiec is a graduate of Passaic public schools and studied music with George Keller, of Paterson.

LOWELL, MASS
SUN
7/1/54

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will arrive tomorrow from Paris and will drive to Lenox to his summer residence at Elm Court. He will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and as director of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music center in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon at 3:30, and will

N. Y. Times — Aug 6

10 C AMUSEMENTS TH

Jazz Pianist Digs Sonata Forms

Joe Bushkin Mingles With Long-Hairs as Tanglewood Pupil

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—One of the country's fine jazz pianists has been studying sonata form at Tanglewood as an enrolled, paying student this summer.

Joe Bushkin, who has played with Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Bunny Berigan and his own quartet, passed up a rich engagement in a Nevada resort to mingle with the long-haired set. He is working in composition with Lukas Foss, and in his spare time he is listening to symphonies, operas oratorios and chamber music like crazy.

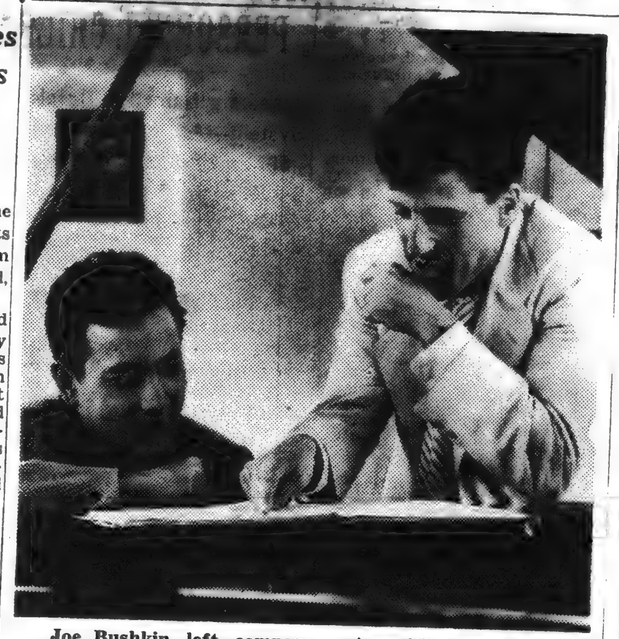
The last thing Joe wrote for his class was a one-movement string quartet in sonata form. Before that he turned his hand to a piece for wind-instruments. What next? Joe says he's game to try anything.

Joe Bushkin, a slim, intense man of 37, came to Tanglewood to work at the Berkshire Music Center with some 400 students of the higher realms of music at the suggestion of Leonard Bernstein, who fools with jazz, too.

Joe has no desire to desert his kind of music, which brings him something like $1,000 a week. But he thinks that this six-week immersion in the older forms will broaden his approach to jazz.

"I've been listening to stuff that's 100 and 200 years old," he said yesterday, "and it's new to me. It hits me as if it were written yesterday."

Joe has been planning a set of recordings for piano and full jazz band, and his thought was that the experience at Tanglewood would help him to prepare distinctive arrangements of his own. And it has. The other day he was working on a Rodgers number, and he was looking for an interesting counteer-theme. That evening he happened to hear a rehearsal of music from Mozart's "Idomeneo," and when he got back to the house he has rented in near-by Richmond, the counter-theme wrote itself.



Joe Bushkin, left, compares notes with Lukas Foss

Several days later, he lpayed the passage for his composition teacher, wondering whether Mr. Foss would recognize the Mozartean strain. Mr. Foss did not. Joe's version wa in his own jazz image.

What was his quartet like?

"Oh," said Joe airily, "it has a first theme, a second theme, a development and a recapitulation. But it's slick enough to be mood music on a aelevision show. Now I'm trying to open up a little, try different combination and be more daring."

Joe has not been shy about showing his mettle as a pianist. This afternoon he appeared at a formal concert, the one jazz musician among performers like Mr. Foss, Aaron Copland, Mac Morgan, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Theresa Green, Ralph Berkowitz, Emanuel Balaban and Leo Van Witzen. The occasion was a program sponsored by the Stockbridge Bowl Association, which presented to Mr. Foss a $1,500 commission to write a work on Psalm 121, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

Joe is going to sit in on piano on Aug. 13 for the waltzing on the lawn that will conclude "Tanglewood on Parade." It may be something livelier than waltzing when Joe swings it. He wishes he could get a few of his crowd up here to show them what a small combo sounds like. Tanglewood could do worse than bring Joe back for the chamber music series next summer.

In the words of George E. Judd, Boston Symphony manager, "Mr. Bushkin has been as good for Tanglewood as we hope Tanglewood has been for him."

CONCERT OFFERED BY KROLL QUARTE

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4—Of the many-faceted activities th fill the air with music at Tangl wood, none is more deserving support than the chamber mus series. And the remarkable thi is that it gets fine public tur outs, better turnouts, in fac than some similar events in t big cities.

Take Wednesday's concert b the Kroll String Quartet as an ex ample. This was the fifth in th new schedule of Wednesday nigh chamber music events; the Th atre-Concert Hall was full an there were people outside o benches and on the lawns. Thi in spite of the fact that the pro gram did not contain outstand ing favorites of the repertory.

William Kroll and his col leagues — Louis Graeler, Davi Mankovitz and Avron Twerdow sky — began the evening with Haydn's D Major Quartet, Op. 5 known as "The Lark." They played it with appealing spa ciousness and warmth. But this was the only work that could be called easy to take.

The centerpiece was Hindemith's String Quartet No. 3, Op. 22. Compared with some quartets written by contemporaries, this is not difficult music, but compared with Haydn, it represents a new, somewhat angular, somewhat distorted world. And yet there is a rich lyrical vein in the quartet; the slow movement is particularly effective. The Kroll Quartet, which has a fondness for this music, gave it a sensitive, strong-limned performance.

Ravel's Quartet served as the final work of the evening. It has been around for some decades, and its idiom no longer has anything strange about it. But one must remember that the chamber music audience is limited, and one would guess that there were quite a few who heard it for the first time tonight.

Certainly, it is music that blends elegance of style with deep integrity of feeling. Chamber music is the medium for intimacy and confidences, and the slow movement of this quartet was one place where this shy composer bared his heart. The Kroll Quartet gave the work a subtle, imaginative reading.

It is said that the Berkshires are "chamber music country." There is a tradition in the area —witness South Mountain in Pittsfield and Music Mountain in Falls Village, Conn. Tanglewood's series is helping to enlarge it.

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
7/9/54

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

Connecticut Pops Concert at Fairfield University field, Friday evening, July 9, with Dorothy Kirsten, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and the orchestra conducted by Milton Katims.

The Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., presents chamber music Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m.; chamber orchestra Fridays at 8:30 p.m. and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets on sale at the box office, telephone Lenox 600.

Friday, July 9: Bach, Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, piano solo by Lukas Foss. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 10: Berlioz, "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club, Radcliff Choral Society and soloists. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11: Beethoven, Overture to "Leonore", No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau, soloist; Symphony No. 5. Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Wednesday, July 14, The Albeneri Trio: Brahms, Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu, Trio in D Minor; Beethoven, Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Friday, July 16: Bach, Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", Hugh Ross conducting; Suites Nos. 1 and 4, Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 17: Debussy, Excerpts from "St. Sebastian", and "La Mer"; Franck, "Les Djinns", for piano and orchestra with Vera Francheschi as soloist, and Symphony in D Minor, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sunday, July 18, Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto with Leo Smit as soloist; Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony". Charles Munch, conductor.

Wednesday, July 21, The Zimbler Sinfonietta; Vivaldi, "The Four Seasons; Stravinsky, "Apollon Musagete"; Rossini, "Barc... que Concerto".

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
AUG 1 - 1954

MAN in the KITCH

Chicken Legs With Italian Overtones

After the Cooperstown adventures described here last week, my search for good regional recipes took me to Cape Cod. But on the way I stopped over at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for two glorious days at the magnificent music festival sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

I stayed with friends who have a beautiful summer home near Tanglewood and at dinner the first night I was "entertained," as so frequently happens to me, alas, by being invited to prepare the meal myself.

My hosts had recently given a dinner party at which chicken breasts were served, therefore the deep-freeze contained two dozen chicken legs, as well as ducklings, chickens, steaks, roasts, veal, lamb and pheasants. But, being a show-off by nature, I chose to use the left-over legs instead of the other materials available. And since my hostess formerly was prima donna of La Scala opera company in Milan, I determined to improvise a dish that would be Italian in spirit, but would not duplicate anything in the literature of the Italian or any other cuisine.

Naturally, I would need wine and mushrooms, as well as Italian seasonings, and all of these were at hand except fresh mushrooms. But I found a can of "Broiled in Butter" mushrooms in the pantry and these served very nicely. While the family cook, a Maltese woman, prepared the rest of the meal I cooked Tanglewood Chicken Legs as follows:

Cut 6 chicken legs into drumsticks and thighs and rub with salt and pepper. Roll in flour and brown on all sides in 2 tablespoons each, butter and olive oil. Add 2 tablespoons warmed Cognac or other brandy. set afire and shake pan til flames die out.

Add 3 minced scallions or young onions 1-3 lb. sliced and previously sauteed fresh mush-

Driving over to Tanglewood last Sunday we were impressed by the roadside beauty unmarred by billboards and leaping electrical signs. We don't know whether there is an ordinance against them but the few we saw were dignified. The impressive setting of the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood enhanced by the body of water known as the Stockbridge Bowl surrounded by Berkshire mountains makes music lovers linger for hours after the concert to enjoy the beauty of the grounds, where 20 years ago the first concert was held. Last Sunday after the concert, among those enchanted were the members of the Celtic Ballet of Scotland, now appearing at Jacob's Pillow. They had attended the performance as guests of the management and it reminded them of their beloved homeland.

[281]

Rensselaer Review August 6

RENSSELAE

ZINO FRANCESCATTI, violinist, is soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with Charles Munch conducting in the Sunday afternoon, August 8, concert (2:30 p.m.) of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

PASSAIC, N. J.
HERALD-NEWS
JUL 15 1954

Henry Janiec

Henry Janiec, Scholarship Winner, To Lead Symphony at Tanglewood

Winner of a six-week scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., was Henry Janiec, of Passaic.

Auditions were held last week at the summer music school, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Janiec will lead the orchestra every Thursday night during the Berkshire Music Festival which will continue through August 15. He will make his debut in this role tonight.

Mr. Janiec, who is conductor of the Spartanburg (S.C.) Symphony Orchestra and a professor at Converse School of Music in Spartanburg, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Janiec, 186 Columbia Avenue, Passaic.

His brother, Edward Janiec, is conductor of Chopin Singing Society of Passaic.

The school at Tanglewood, which provides courses for 400 students chosen from more than 1,500 applicants, was founded in 1940 by the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky. It is now directed by Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, assisted by Aaron Copland, composer. The student body includes many amateur musicians who are housewives, social workers, professional and business people who like to spend their vacations there.

Mr. Janiec won the Piano Outstanding Student of the Year award at Oberlin Conservatory of Music, Oberlin College, Ohio, where he received bachelor's and master's degrees. He is an appointed member of Pi Kappa Lambda, national music honor society. Mr. Janiec is a graduate of Passaic public schools and studied music with George Keller, of Paterson.

LOWELL, MASS
SUN
7/17/54

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony orchestra, will arrive tomorrow from Paris and will drive to Lenox to his summer residence at Elms Court. He will immediately prepare for his summer duties as conductor of the 1954 Berkshire festival, his fourth summer as permanent conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and as director of the Berkshire Music center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra in connection with the festival.

Mr. Munch will address opening exercises of the Berkshire Music center in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood, on Sunday afternoon at 3:30, and will

N. Y. Times — Aug 6

10 C AMUSEMENTS TH

Jazz Pianist Dips Sonata Forms

Joe Bushkin Mingles With Long-Hairs as Tanglewood Pupil

By HOWARD TAUBMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—One of the country's fine jazz pianists has been studying sonata form at Tanglewood as an enrolled, paying student this summer.

Joe Bushkin, who has played with Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey, Bunny Berigan and his own quartet, passed up a rich engagement in a Nevada resort to mingle with the long-haired set. He is working in composition with Lukas Foss, and in his spare time he is listening to symphonies, operas oratorios and chamber music like crazy.

The last thing Joe wrote for his class was a one-movement string quartet in sonata form. Before that he turned his hand to a piece for wind-instruments. What next? Joe says he's game to try anything.

Joe Bushkin, a slim, intense man of 37, came to Tanglewood to work at the Berkshire Music Center with some 400 students of the higher realms of music at the suggestion of Leonard Bernstein, who fools with jazz, too.

Joe has no desire to desert his kind of music, which brings him something like $1,000 a week. But he thinks that this six-week immersion in the older forms will broaden his approach to jazz.

"I've been listening to stuff that's 100 and 200 years old," he said yesterday, "and it's new to me. It hits me as if it were written yesterday."

Joe has been planning a set of recordings for piano and full jazz band, and his thought was that the experience at Tanglewood would help him to prepare distinctive arrangements of his own. And it has. The other day he was working on a Rodgers number, and he was looking for an interesting counteer-theme. That evening he happened to hear a rehearsal of music from Mozart's "Idomeneo," and when he got back to the house he has rented in near-by Richmond, the counter-theme wrote itself.

Several days later, he played the passage for his composition teacher, wondering whether Mr. Foss would recognize the Mozartean strain. Mr. Foss did not. Joe's version was in his own jazz image.

What was his quartet like?

"Oh," said Joe airily, "it has a first theme, a second theme, a development and a recapitulation. But it's slick enough to be mood music on a television show. Now I'm trying to open up a little, try different combination and be more daring."

Joe has not been shy about showing his mettle as a pianist. This afternoon he appeared at a formal concert, the one jazz musician among performers like Mr. Foss, Aaron Copland, Mac Morgan, Richard Dyer-Bennet, Theresa Green, Ralph Berkowitz, Emanuel Balaban and Leo Van Witzen. The occasion was a program sponsored by the Stockbridge Bowl Association, which presented to Mr. Foss a $1,500 commission to write a work on Psalm 121, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

Joe is going to sit in on piano on Aug. 18 for the waltzing on the lawn that will conclude "Tanglewood on Parade." It may be something livelier than waltzing when Joe swings it. He wishes he could get a few of his crowd up here to show them what a small combo sounds like. Tanglewood could do worse than bring Joe back for the chamber music series next summer.

In the words of George E. Judd, Boston Symphony manager, "Mr. Bushkin has been as good for Tanglewood as we hope Tanglewood has been for him."

Joe Bushkin, left, compares notes with Lukas Foss

CONCERT OFFERED BY KROLL QUARTE

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4—Of the many-faceted activities th fill the air with music at Tang wood, none is more deserving support than the chamber mus series. And the remarkable thi is that it gets fine public tur outs, better turnouts, in fac than some similar events in t big cities.

Take Wednesday's concert the Kroll String Quartet as an e ample. This was the fifth in th new schedule of Wednesday nigh chamber music events; the The atre-Concert Hall was full an there were people outside benches and on the lawns. Th in spite of the fact that the pr gram did not contain outstand ing favorites of the repertory.

William Kroll and his co leagues—Louis Graeler, Davi Mankovitz and Avron Twerdow sky—began the evening with Haydn's D Major Quartet, Op. known as "The Lark." They played it with appealing spaciousness and warmth. But this was the only work that could be called easy to take.

The centerpiece was Hindemith's String Quartet No. 3, Op. 22. Compared with some quartets written by contemporaries, this is not difficult music, but compared with Haydn, it represents a new, somewhat angular, somewhat distorted world. And yet there is a rich lyrical vein in the quartet; the slow movement is particularly effective. The Kroll Quartet, which has a fondness for this music, gave it a sensitive, strong-limned performance.

Ravel's Quartet served as the final work of the evening. It has been around for some decades, and its idiom no longer has anything strange about it. But one must remember that the chamber music audience is limited, and one would guess that there were quite a few who heard it for the first time tonight.

Certainly, it is music that blends elegance of style with deep integrity of feeling. Chamber music is the medium for intimacy and confidences, and the slow movement of this quartet was one place where this shy composer bared his heart. The Kroll Quartet gave the work a subtle, imaginative reading.

It is said that the Berkshires are "chamber music country." There is a tradition in the area—witness South Mountain in Pittsfield and Music Mountain in Falls Village, Conn. Tanglewood's series is helping to enlarge it.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
POST
AUG 1 - 1954

MAN in the KITCH

Chicken Legs With Italian Overtones

After the Cooperstown adventures described here last week, my search for good regional recipes took me to Cape Cod. But on the way I stopped over at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., for two glorious days at the magnificent music festival sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

I stayed with friends who have a beautiful summer home near Tanglewood and at dinner the first night I was "entertained," as so frequently happens to me, alas, by being invited to prepare the meal myself.

My hosts had recently given a dinner party at which chicken breasts were served, therefore the deep-freeze contained two dozen chicken legs, as well as ducklings, chickens, steaks, roasts, veal, lamb and pheasants. But, being a show-off by nature, I chose to use the left-over legs instead of the other materials available. And since my hostess formerly was prima donna of La Scala opera company in Milan, I determined to improvise a dish that would be Italian in spirit, but would not duplicate anything in the literature of the Italian or any other cuisine.

Naturally, I would need wine and mushrooms, as well as Italian seasonings, and all of these were at hand except fresh mushrooms. But I found a can of "Broiled in Butter" mushrooms in the pantry and these served very nicely. While the family cook, a Maltese woman, prepared the rest of the meal I cooked Tanglewood Chicken Legs as follows:

Cut 6 chicken legs into drumsticks and thighs and rub with salt and pepper. Roll in flour and brown on all sides in 2 tablespoons each, butter and olive oil. Add 2 tablespoons warmed Cognac or other brandy, set afire and shake pan till flames die out.

Add 3 minced scallions or young onions, 1-3 lb. sliced and previously sauteed fresh mush-

[28]

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
7/5/54

WEEKLY CALENDAR

A schedule of places to go and things to do in The Bee's area

Music

Connecticut Pops Concert at Fairfield University field, Friday evening, July 9, with Dorothy Kirsten, Metropolitan Opera soprano, and the orchestra conducted by Milton Katims.

The Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., presents chamber music Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m., chamber orchestra Fridays at 8:30 p.m. and the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets on sale at the box office, telephone Lenox 800.

Friday, July 9: Bach, Brandenburg Concertos, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, piano solo by Lukas Foss. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 10: Berlioz, "The Damnation of Faust", with the Harvard Glee Club, Radcliff Choral Society and soloists. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11: Beethoven, Overture to "Leonore", No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 ("Emperor") with Claudio Arrau, soloist; Symphony No. 5, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Wednesday, July 14, The Albeneri Trio: Brahms, Trio in B, Op. 8; Martinu, Trio in D Minor; Beethoven, Trio in B flat, Op. 97 ("Archduke").

Friday, July 16: Bach, Cantata No. 93, "Wer nur den lieben Gott", Hugh Ross conducting; Suites Nos. 1 and 4, Charles Munch conducting.

Saturday, July 17: Debussy, Excerpts from "St. Sebastian", and "La Mer"; Franck, "Les Djinns", for piano and orchestra with Vera Francheschi as soloist, and Symphony in D Minor, Pierre Monteux, conductor.

Sunday, July 18, Debussy, "Iberia"; Copland, Piano Concerto with Leo Smit as soloist; Berlioz, "Fantastic Symphony". Charles Munch, conductor.

Wednesday, July 21, The Zimbler Sinfonietta; Vivaldi, "The Four Seasons; Stravinsky, "Apollon Musagete"; Rossini, "Barocque Concerto".

Driving over to Tanglewood last Sunday we were impressed by the roadside beauty unmarred by billboards and leaping electrical signs. We don't know whether there is an ordinance against them but the few we saw were dignified. The impressive setting of the Boston Symphony concerts at Tanglewood enhanced by the body of water known as the Stockbridge Bowl surrounded by Berkshire mountains makes music lovers linger for hours after the concert to enjoy the beauty of the grounds, where 20 years ago the first concert was held. Last Sunday after the concert among those enchanted were the members of the Celtic Ballet of Scotland, now appearing at Jacob's Pillow. They had attended the performance as guests of the management and it reminded them of their beloved homeland.

Rensselaer Republican
August 6
RENSSELAER

ZINO FRANCESCATTI, violinist, is soloist in Beethoven's Violin Concerto, which the Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform with Charles Munch conducting in the Music Shed afternoon, August 8, concert (2:30 p.m.) of the Berkshire Festival, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

LAKEVILLE JOURNAL
July 1, 1954

Festival At Tanglewood Will Hold 1st Concert Wednesday

The Music Shed concerts in 1954 will honor the 150th anniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of this composer's principal works. In addition to the opening Shed concert's Tanglewood premiers of The Damnation of Faust, a masterpiece lasting two and a half hours and seldom heard in its entirety, Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Fantastic Symphony (July 18); the Overture to Beatrice and Benedict and the Symphony Harold in Italy, with William Primrose as viola soloist (July 25); the dramatic symphony Romeo and Juliet in its complete form with the Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center, and John McCollum and Nicola Moscana as soloists (July 31); the Overture to Benvenuto Cellini, Royal Hunt and Storm from The Trojans, the song cycle Summer Nights with Eleanor Steber as soloist, and the Te Deum with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 7); concluding the Festival with the Requiem in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, again with the Festival Chorus and David Poleri, soloist (August 15).

The first week's Berkshire Festival programs are:

Wednesday, July 7 — 8:30 p.m. —Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Beethoven: String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1 — The Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, Violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola; Martin Hoherman, violincello); Piano Sonatas, Op. 79; Op. 110; Op. 57 ("Appassionata") — Claudio Arrau.

Friday, July 9 — 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Bach: Brandenburg Concertos No. 1, in F; No. 2, in F — with the following soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra: Doriot Anthony, flute, Harold Gomberg, oboe, Roger Voisin, trumpet, Richard Burgin, violin; No. 3, in G — strings; No. 5, in D — with the following soloists: Lukas Foss, piano, Miss Anthony, flute, Mr. Burgin, violin; No. 6, in B-flat — strings. Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 10 — 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: The Damnation of Faust — with the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Chorale Society, directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber soprano (Marguerite), David Poleri, tenor (Faust), Martial Singher, baritone (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone (Brander). Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, July 11 — 2:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Beethoven: Overture to Leonore, No. 3; Piano Concerto No. 5 (Emperor) — with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Symphony No. 5. Pierre Monteux, conductor.

plant unfolding, done last winter at the artist's studio in Glen Head, L. I.; "School of Fish," a laminated work, 60 inches long, mounted on wooden base, created in 1953; and "Horses," a panel two feet by five feet, finished this year.

The first art exhibit at Tanglewood, commencing Saturday, July 3, will be of photographs of music and musicians, entitled "Music in the Berkshires," by Clemens Kalischer, Stockbridge Road, which was recently housed in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

Week commencing July 12, will feature an exhibit of sculpture by Miss Franc Epping, of Lenox, director of the Sculpture Workshop and the annual outdoor exhibit at the Lenox Library gardens. Ture Bengtz, head of the Bengtz School of Art at the Lenox School, will exhibit paintings the week commencing July 19. Additional sculpture and paintings of Homer Gunn will be on display the week of July 26. Miss Carol Clewworth, of Stockbridge, will show modern paintings the week beginning August 2. From August 9 to 15, paintings will be on view by Lawrence R. McCoy, vice-president of the Southern Art Center, Manchester, Vt.

LJ July 15

Nicole Henriot, young French pianist who is to be guest soloist at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday July 24.

Interesting Variety Offered In Third Festival Week

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts, at Tanglewood Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections o Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini b The Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening (July 21) in th Theatre-Concert Hall; a program o Handel and Haydn, including Haydn Mass conducted by Hug Ross, performed by a chamber or chestra of members of the Bosto Symphony, with Music Directo Charles Munch on the podium, o Friday evening (July 23) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program o Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Jean Morel as guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist, on Saturday evening (July 24), in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting, and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch on Sunday afternoon (July 25), in the Music Shed.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, founded by Josef Zimbler, 'cellist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and under his musical direction, consisting of 21 players, will perform for the first time at Tanglewood in the new and popular Wednesday evening Chamber Music series, and their selections, Vivaldi's The Four Seasons, Stravinsky's Apollon Musagète and Rossini's Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass are all new on Tanglewood programs. Another Tanglewood premiere during the week is the Hayden "Nelson" Mass in D Minor, No. 3 (July 23), with soloists and the Festival Chorus from students of Department II (Choral) and Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center assisting. The Symphony No. 2 of Austrian-American composer Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at Tanglewood, which Charles Munch introduced to the U. S. in Boston and New York with the Boston Symphony in the 1952-53 season, will also be performed for the first time at Tanglewood; it is dedicated to Albert Schweitzer. Nicole Henriot played last at Tanglewood in 1952, and William Primrose was an instructor in the chamber music department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947.

The first of two Saturday afternoon organ recitals by E. Power Biggs will be given in the Music Shed at 3:00 p.m., July 24.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p.m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p.m. In the event of rain the Wednesday and Friday evening concerts will be moved to the Music Shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance, and Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday (July 24) at 10 a.m., for the nominal charge of $1.00, for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, July 21, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Vivaldi: The Four Seasons, for String Orchestra — violin solo, George Zazofsky; harpsichord, Fernando Valenti; Stravinsky: Appollon Musagète, Ballet in two scenes; Rossini: Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, Josef Zimbler, Music Director (violins: George Zazofsky, Emil Kornsand, Vladimir Resnikoff, Harry Dickson, Norbert Lauga, Leonard Moss, Clarence Knudson, Manuel Zung, Herman Silberman, Stanley Benson; violas: Joseph de Pasquale, Jean Cauhape, Albert Bernard, Eugene Lehner; 'cellos: Samuel Mayes, Josef Zimbler, Martin Hoherman, Mischa Nieland, Karl Zeise; Bass: Henry Portnoi; Harpsichord, Fernando Valenti.)

Friday, July 23, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Handel: Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4; Haydn: Symphony in G Major, "Military," No. 100 — Charles Munch, conductor. Haydn: Mass No. 3 in D Minor ("Nelson") — Hugh Ross, conductor, with Festival Chorus and soloists.

Saturday, July 24, 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Prokofieff: Symphony No. 6, in E flat Minor, Op. 111; Liszt: Concerto for Pianoforte, in E flat Major, No. 1 — with Nicole Henriot as soloist; Strauss: Don Juan, Tone Poem, No. 20; Elgar: Enigma Variations, Op. 36. Jean Morel, conductor.

[282]

Charles Munch, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra this coming weekend in the big shed at Tanglewood.

JULY 8

Sunday, July 25, 2:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: Overture to Beatrice and Benedict, Berlioz: Harold in Italy, Symphony with Viola Solo Op. 16 — with William Primrose as soloist; Toch: Symphony No. 2, Op 73 — Charles Munch, conductor.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday, July 17, Debussy: Excerpts, St. Sebastian, Franck: Les Djinns, for Piano and Orchestra — with Vera Franceshci as soloist; Debussy: La Mer; Franck: Symphony in D ... Pierre Monteux, guest conductor. Sunday, July 18, Debussy: Iberia; Copland: Piano Concerto — with Leo Smit as soloist; Berlioz: Fantastic Symphony — Charles Munch, conductor.

TANGLEWOOD CONCERT
(July 9)
By Elise Becket

What greater offering could there be for the music lover than the opportunity to hear five of the six Brandenburg concerti of the great Bach, in one evening at Tanglewood, conducted by Charles Munch, and performed by a select group of the famed string section of the Boston orchestra, and several outstanding wind instrument players and soloists? Even after the tension of anticipation, at no point in the program was there a let-down; the performance transported one to a rarefied and exhilarating atmosphere.

The order of presentation was: the first concerto, the third, the second; after the intermission, the sixth, and lastly the fifth. During most of the evening the number of strings employed was larger than usual. In the second concerto the violinist was Richard Burgin; the flutist Doriot Anthony (a most personable young lady!); the oboe player Ralph Gomberg; and the trumpeter, Roger Voisin. As the trumpet in F used in Bach's day is now no longer made, there is a dearth of players trained in the difficult technique of such a highly pitched instrument. The substitution of a clarinet or saxophone is unsatisfactory as to color. For this occasion, however, a special trumpet was constructed, with which Mr. Voisin created thrilling effects. A piano was used at all times for the continuo and for the solo in the Sixth, although one wished for the timbre of the harpsichord.

The third concerto was happily left as Bach wrote it, without the addition of a slow movement. The Adagio measure under Munch's dramatic touch seemed thoroughly satisfying between the Allegro parts. In the sixth concerto a small, stellar group of violists, cellists, double bass players, and a pianist were the performers. In the fifth, the brilliant piano part was played by Lukas Foss; the violin again by Mr. Burgin, and the flute by Miss Anthony.

These three, unaccompanied in the Adagio, played with superb artistry, the violin was infinitely expressive, the flute ideally smooth. Mr. Foss' rendition of the cadenza in the first movement was electrical. The rhythm was a living force, and the masterful gradation of the crescendi and tremendous power of the climaxes kept one on the edge of one's seat. In the Adagio his phrasing was all that could be desired, but this reviewer would have preferred his taking advantage of the singing possibilities of the instrument, rather than treating it percussively.

The general impression of the concert was of having heard some of the world's greatest music in an unusually vitalised performance. One's emotional response might be best described in quoting Albert Schweitzer on the message of the concerti: "We really seem to see before us what the philosophy of the ages conceives as the fundamental mystery of things — that self-unfolding of the idea in which it creates its own opposite in order to overcome it, creates another, which again it overcomes, and so on until it finally returns to itself, having traversed the whole of existence."

TANGLEWOOD
By A. C. S.

The first chamber music concert of the Berkshire Festival, given Wednesday evening, was devoted to works of Beethoven. The Bel Arte Trio (Ruth Posselt, Joseph de Pasquale, and Martin Hoherman) opened the program with a sparkling performance of the String Trio in G, Op. 9 No. 1. Three piano sonatas, Op. 78, 110, and 57 ("Appassionata"), comprised the remainder of the program. Claudio Arrau, whose most persuasive interpretation was heard in the late opus, played them all with great depth of understanding, beauty of tone, and impeccable technique. A sizable audience was on hand despite rain and cool temperatures.

Charles Munch is an acknowledged conductor of the first rank, but certainly none can surpass him in the interpretation of the works of Hector Berlioz. This fact was emphasized in the first program making special observance of the sesquicentennial of the composer's birth. The reading given the complete Dramatic Legend, Damnation of Faust will long be remembered by those who had the privilege of hearing it Saturday evening.

From the opening bar to the final note, one could sense an inner spirit guiding Mr. Munch in his exploration of every facet of the work. Infinite gradations of color were drawn to our attention; the most personal emotional and psychological secrets were exposed. That the conductor conveyed his inspiration and dedication to those under his baton was obvious in their response. The soloists (Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm), the Radcliffe Choral Society, the Harvard Glee Club, and the Boston Symphony gave performances of such equally high quality that it would be presumptuous to attempt to appraise them. The audience did its best to express appreciation by prolonged applause and cheers.

The high musical standards set by the Berlioz concert were also characteristic of the Sunday afternoon performance of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3, Piano Concerto No. 5, and the Fifth Symphony under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Claudio Arrau, who was soloist in the "Emperor" Concerto, again gave insight into the master's work with a truly exhilarating performance. The much heard symphony took a new lease on life in the hands of Monteux. The first movement seemed a bit breathless but the work as a whole had drive and proportion.

Northwest. July 8 LJ

WEEKLY EXHIBITS OF ART ON VIEW AT MUSIC FESTIVAL

A weekly exhibit of paintings, sculpture and photographs again will be a feature of the Berkshire Festival season, housed in the reception hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. and arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum, Pittsfield and its director, Stuart C. Henry.

Three large wooden sculptures in California redwood, by Homer Gunn, of West Stockbridge, Mass. will be on outdoor exhibition through the summer, in the formal gardens at Tanglewood and at the reception hall. They are 'Early Spring," a seven-foot study symbolizing a

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.
EXAMINER
JUL 25 1954

Grillers to Play Bloch Quartet

World premiere of Ernest Bloch's new Fourth String Quartet was billed by the Griller Quartet recently in London. The Grillers will play the American premiere this week at the Berkshire Festival, in Massachusetts.

LAKEVILLE JOURNAL
July 15, 1954

Tanglewood Announces The Fourth Week Of Festival

The fourth week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first U. S. performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, on Wednesday evening (July 28) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Music Director Charles Munch on the podium, and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist, on Friday evening (July 30) in the Theatre-Concert Hall; Berlioz' dramatic symphony Romeo and Juliet, with Beatrice Krebs, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, on Saturday evening (July 31), in the Music Shed; and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Richard Burgin as guest conductor and Ruth Posselt as violin soloist, in a program of William Schuman, Vaughan Williams, Khatchaturian and Sibelius, on Sunday afternoon (August 1) in the Music Shed.

The complete programs are:

Wednesday, July 28, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Mozart: Quartet in B flat ("Hunt"), K. 458; Bloch: Quartet No. 4 (United States premiere); Beethoven: Quartet in G major, Op. 18, No. 2 — The Griller String Quartet (Sidney Griller, Jack O'Brien, violins; Philip Burton, viola; Colin Hampton, celo).

Friday, July 30, 8:30 p.m. — Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Roussel: The Spider's Feast; Ibert: Flute Concerto — with Doriot Anthony as soloist; Mozart: Serenade for Eight Winds, K. 388 — with Ralph Gomberg, Louis Speyer, oboes; Gino Cioffi, Manuel Valerio, clarinets; James Stagliano, Harry Shapiro, French horns; Sherman Walt, Ernst Panenka, bassoons; Mozart: Paris Symphony, K. 297.

Charles Munch, conductor.

Saturday, July 31, 8:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: Romeo and Juliet, dramatic symphony with Festival Chorus of Berkshire Music Center students, and soloists Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum, tneor; Nicola Moscona, bass-baritone.

Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, August 1, 2:30 p.m. — Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Schuman: American Festival Overture; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; Khatchaturian: Violin Concerto — with Ruth Posselt as soloist; Sibelius: Symphony No. 2.

Richard Burgin, conductor.

This weekend's Music Shed concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are: Saturday, July 24: Prokofieff: Symphony No. 6; Liszt: Piano Concerto in E flat — with Nicole Henriot as soloist; Strauss: Don Juan; Elgar: Enigma Variations — Jean Morel, guest conductor; Sunday, July 25: Berlioz: Overture to Beatrice and Benedick; Berlioz: Harold in Italy symphony — with William Primrose as viola soloist; Toch: Symphony No. 2 — Charles Munch, conductor.

GRACE NOTES

TANGLEWOOD
WEDNESDAY, JULY 14
By H. C. S.

The Albeneri Trio played a very enjoyable evening of Chamber Music on Wednesday, July 14 in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. The Hall was filled to capacity in spite of a threatening storm, and the rolling thunder over head did not seem to affect the mood and spirit of the performers or the audience.

Erich Kahn, pianist, Giorgio Ciompi, violinist, and Benar Heifetz, cellist, gave a splendid rendition of Brahms' Trio in B Major, Op. 8. The first movement, Allegro con brio, was dignified and lovely. The second movement, Allegro molto, was indeed a treat to hear. It moved along with sprightly rhythms and clever piano passages which were beautifully executed. The Adagio followed in a stately style with a singing melody, and the Allegro concluded the number in a fervent spirit.

The Trio in D Minor by Martinu was of quite a different period in music composition. The first movement contained many colorful modern chords, with interesting harmony throughout. The last movement was cleverly written with contrasting rhythms and beautifully performed.

The closing number was Beethoven's Trio in B Flat Major, Opus 97 (Archduke) which made a well balanced program for everyone. The Scherzo, Allegro had fine clear cut rhythms and were well defined by each of the three instruments. The piano part was especially beautiful in the introduction to the third movement, with the two strings carrying on in a lovely singing tone.

(Continued on Page Eleven)

The concluding Allegro was bright and showy. The Trio played extremely well together here; the parts were woven together with real precision. All in all, the evening was a very satisfying one and the audience seemed to leave in a pleasant mood in spite of the down-pour of rain which confronted them as they left the Concert Hall.

TANGLEWOOD
FRIDAY, JULY 16
By A. C. S.

The Friday evening concert, which was devoted to music by J. S. Bach, began with the church cantata no. 93, Wer nur den lieben Gott lasst walten, conducted by Hugh Ross. While this is not the most musically nor emotionally rewarding of the Bach cantatas, the reading given by Mr. Ross seldom got below the printed score. There were, however, performances of individual merit.

David Lloyd, as tenor soloist, displayed a rich and well controlled voice, singing the aria, Man halte nur ein wenig, with understanding. The high point of the work came in the duet for soprano and alto, sung by Theresa Green and Beatrice Krebs. McHenry Boatwright, as bass soloist, and the Festival Chorus sang solidly and with excellent diction.

Charles Munch directed the second half of the program in which the first and fourth orchestral suites were heard. The latter, with its brilliant writing for trumpet, evoked such enthusiastic response from the audience that the final movement was encored.

TANGLEWOOD
SATURDAY, JULY 17
By A. H.

A cool evening and a nearly-full moon contributed extra attractions to the crowd which gathered at Tanglewood's big shed and its surrounding lawns last Saturday night.

Following the bow of Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony presented a well-balanced program of Debussy and Cesar Franck. Excerpts from Debussy's music for the first act of Le Martyre de Saint-Sebastien opened the program. The stately sweetness and archaic tranquility of this composition made the listener wonder why it is not more often performed. Cool, delicately contrived music, the Saint-Sebastien score served as an ideal opener for Tanglewood's usual indoor-outdoor audience which is always heavily loaded with picnickers and vacationists seeking relaxed entertainment. The Debussy piece acted like a stroking hand; soothing, lulling and restraining.

Les Djinns, Franck's rich and colorful symphonic poem for piano and orchestra, featured Vera Franceschi as soloist. Young, attractive and gifted, this twenty-six year old pianist played with extraordinary sensitivity and feeling. Her skill went far beyond technical virtuosity and Franck's exquisite score was given a warm and deeply understanding rendition. Numerous recalls testified to the audience's appreciation.

Mr. Monteux' interpretation of Debussy's La Mer left something to be desired, this reviewer felt. Somehow the surging swell of the sea was lacking; the flashing, glinting surfaces, the bright spray were musically pictured, but the passages portraying the sea's relentless strength and surging power lacked character and conviction.

The finest offering of the evening was Franck's Symphony in D minor. Here the listener was assured that conductor and composer were of one mind. Music and musicians were united in a mystical marriage to produce a compelling and irresistible spell under which the audience sat enthralled through the last lingering resonances . . . before concluding the evening with a rolling thunder of applause and bravos.

TANGLEWOOD
SUNDAY, JULY 18
By A. C. S.

The Boston Symphony presented something of a novelty on its Sunday afternoon program, the Concerto for Piano and Orchestra by Aaron Copland with Leo Smit as soloist. This work, originally written at the suggestion of the late Serge Koussevitzky and first played under him in 1927, is in two movements. The first is lush, both in material and treatment. The second, which follows without interruption, is jagged and jazzy, punctuated by child-like dissonances and animal-like roars. All concerned gave a sizzling performance, although the solo instrument was often obscured by the immensity of the orchestration. We can be grateful that the Concerto, youthful and buoyant as it is, does not stand as the only testimony to the musical worth of its creator.

Charles Munch opened the program with Debussy's Iberia and chose the Fantastic Symphony to represent Hector Berlioz. The reading given this work, filled with violent emotions and macabre thoughts, was truly vivid, the lengthiness of the composition forgotten in a dynamic performance.

TANGLEWOOD — JULY 21
By P. R. M. and E. v B. H.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, composed of twenty-one members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is an outgrowth of the String Quartet formed in 1945 by Joseph Zimbler, cellist, with this organization, to "commission and perform new and seldom heard works written for chamber orchestra." Their first concert in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on July 21 fulfilled its secondary purpose by giving premiere performances to Vivaldi's Four Seasons, Stravinsky's Apollon Musagete and the Rossini Sonata for Violins, Cellos and Double Bass."

The Vivaldi Concerti delle Stagioni, starring Fernando Valenti at the harpsichord and George Zazofsky, doubling as first violinist and concertmaster, was elucidated by program notes paraphrased by Margaret Fiske.

Emerson's observation that "Evil is often a former good viewed from a higher level" — i.e. that perfection, today, yields to a higher level of perfection tomorrow — may well be a reminder to music reviewers that adjectives be reserved for such an ascending scale. That superlatives were in order to describe the Vivaldi performance, the audience attested with thunderous applause.

The concerti was divided into four parts, representing the seasons, each broken into several tempi. Every mood and experience seemed to find expression in this work; each movement opened new vistas in living music. In the Largo of the Spring section the lovely sounds flowing from Zazowsky's violin were like a silken thread — so fine, so tender.

Fernando Valenti's opportunity with the harpsichord came later with a series of single notes of ascending and descending scales followed by staccato notes on strings, increasing in volume. A solo by the lone bass fiddle was one with many humorous passages. In its gayety and grace it reminded this listener with pleasure of the dancing pink elephants in Walt Disney's "Fantasia."

In Rossini's Sonata which closed the program, each section leader found opportunity to show that he was a soloist of the first order able, also, to direct and control a group of strings as part of a perfect whole.

To fulfill its primary purpose, the Sinfonietta has commissioned several modern composers, such as Irving Fine, Gardner Read and Allen Shulman to write for their bowing. The latter's work for viola, strings and harp will be heard at the Sinfonietta's first New York performance in the Town Hall in November.

July 29

TANGLEWOOD
FRIDAY, JULY 23
By A. C. S.

The Concerto Grosso for String Orchestra, Op. 6, No. 4, by Handel, opened this evening's program in the Theater-Concert Hall. It was followed by the G Major Symphony ("Military") by Haydn, properly resplendent with cymbal and triangle.

The most rewarding work of the concert was the seldom heard Haydn Mass in D Minor. While this Mass is often referred to by the name "Imperial," or "Coronation," is is also known as the "Nelson" Mass, having been written at the time of, and perhaps partially inspired by, Lord Nelson's victory in the Battle of the Nile. It is an unusual piece in several respects. It is jubilant and affirmative throughout despite the minor tonality and the textual implications of the "Et incarnatus," "Agnus Dei," and "Dona nobis pacem." Although four solo voices are called for in addition to the chorus, these, with the exception of the one rather longer bass solo, are used more in the fashion of solo instruments in a concerto grosso: breaking into and interweaving with the choral parts.

Naomi Farr sang the difficult soprano solos brilliantly. Beatrice Krebs, appearing for the second week in succession, had more opportunity here to display a lovely warm contralto. Thomas Stewart, bass, and Marvin Worden, tenor, were equally fine.

Top honors, however, must go to the conductor, Hugh Ross. His well-trained chorus sang with vitality, good tone, and excellent diction. His authority over the musical forces, choral and orchestral, never wavered; his pacing of the work was ever exhilarating. His dedicated pursuit of the musical and spiritual core of the Mass was excitingly revealed in a performance that a large and appreciative audience was privileged to hear.

TANGLEWOOD
SATURDAY, JULY 24
By A. H.

With dynamic fluency, Jean Morel conducted a vivid and varied concert at the big shed in Tanglewood last Saturday evening. The program opened with the complex and exciting Sixth Symphony in E Flat Minor by Prokofieff. The symphony was briefly interrupted between movements to allow outdoor picnickers to seek shelter in the shed from the onslaughts of recurrent thunder storms. Although this prolonged pause somewhat broke the continuity of the composition, the haunting quality of the Largo and the mounting drama of the final movement brought forth spontaneous and fervid applause.

The Prokofieff was followed by the delicate, melodic filagree of List's Concerto for Pianoforte in E-Flat Major. The fine performance of the orchestra was brilliantly supplemented by the solo work of the lovely young Nicole Henriot, whose exquisite understanding of the score and delicate shading of tone brought the entire audience to her feet. She was recalled countless times and the great shed rang with "bravos."

Following the intermission the magnificent Don Juan by Strauss was given a splendid performance and the program closed with Sir Edward Elgar's musical tribute to his circle of friends. This work, episodic and only loosely connected by any thematic unity, nevertheless charmed the audience by its originality of conception and its variety of musical mood.

TANGLEWOOD
SUNDAY, JULY 25
By A. C. S.

The Sunday concert opened with one of the lesser works of Berlioz: the Overture to Beatric and Benedict. The two musical themes of the overture are taken from the opera, the libretto of which, written by the composer himself, is based on Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." It served, this afternoon, as a delightful prelude to the larger, and more rewarding, Harold in Italy Symphony, a musical autobiography of Berlioz' sojourn in that country. The colorful orchestral effects were highlighted by the superb reading we have come to expect from Charles Munch. The solo viola part, representing the wandering hero, was sympathetically played by William Primrose. His warmth of tone and keen understanding of this work which he has virtually made his own, were most effectively expressed in the second movement of the symphony, the "March of the Pilgrims Singing their Evening Hymn."

A relatively new composition, written in 1951, comprised the second half of the program. This was the Symphony No. 2 by Ernst Toch. Dedicated to Albert Schweitzer and gathering inspiration from the Biblical account of Job's struggle with the angel, the piece is a profound and dynamic expression of ideals and emotions. At times bombastic with cutting brasses, now hesitant and skittish with flying arpeggios and figuration (with wonderful undercurrent in the pedal tympany), now reminiscent with pseudo-Wagnerian passages, and finally vehemently affirmative, it is an almost embarrassingly personal declaration. Mr. Munch gave an impressive presentation of this dramatic symphony which, despite its provocative nature, elicited enthusiastic applause for both composer and conductor.

[283]

NEWARK, N. J.
NEWS
JUL 25 1954

At Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass. — The fourth week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood starts Wednesday, with a program of chamber music by the Griller String Quartet, including the first United States performance of Ernest Bloch's Quartet No. 4, in the Theater-Concert Hall. A program of Roussel, Ibert and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch on the podium and Doriot Anthony as flute soloist will be presented Friday evening. Berlioz's dramatic symphony, "Romeo and Juliet," with Beatrice Krebs, contralto; John McCollum tenor; Nicola Moscona bass-barytone, and the Festival Chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center with the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be performed Saturday evening.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.
STANDARD-TIMES
JUL 4 - 1954

Berkshire Music Festival Begins Next Wednesday

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 3—The 17th Berkshire Festival since concerts were inaugurated in the hills of Western Massachusetts in 1934 and the 15th since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated, will commence six weeks of 24 concerts next Wednesday night at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. It will be an all-Beethoven program of chamber music, featuring Claudio Arra, pianist, and the Bel Arte string Trio. On Friday also at 8:30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in an all-Bach program, with Lukas Foss as piano soloist.

For the first time in Berkshire Festival history, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts will be given commencing next Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and July 11 at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday in the first Tanglewood presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth participating, and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher and Donald Gramm (Brander). On July 11, guest conductor Pierre Monteux will conduct the full Boston Symphony in an all-Beethoven program, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr. Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr. Monteux.

Since 1938 when the 6,000-seat Music Shed was erected on the Tanglewood estate where Nathaniel Hawthorne was a guest a century ago, open on three sides so the music might spill out to the thousands who listen to it on the grass under the stars, the Berkshire Fesival has attracted increasingly large crowds from all over Eastern U. S. and Canada until last Summer all attendance records were broken, with an average of 10,200 at each shed concert.

To accommodate its growing crowds of music lovers, the 1954 Berkshire Festival has been increased in scope within its six week framework: Twelve She concerts instead of last year nine, on Saturday nights and Su day afternoons; the popular Bac Mozart concerts which last Sum mer were concentrated in th festival's first three weekends th year are to be held each Frida night and a new series has bee inaugurated of six Wednesda night chamber music programs, total of 24 concerts in all. On nex Saturday morning at 10 a. m. th Boston Symphony will hold th first of six weekly open rehears als, for the benefit of the orches tra's pension fund, to which th public is invited for the nomina admission of $1.

CHARLES MUNCH

The Berkshire Music Center the Summer school of musi maintained by the Boston Sym phony Orchestra in connectio with the festival, opens its 12t session, a six-week course of musi studies for advanced students an professionals, at Tanglewood, thi afternoon.

The first school performance will be given next Thursday, a 8:30 p. m. in the Music Shed, whe for the first time the symphony orchestra of 100 students in De partment 1 will play together The first of six weekly chambe music concerts will be given by students of Department I in the Chamber Music Hall July 11 at 1 a. m.

NEWARK, N. J.
NEWS
JUL 19 1954

Berkshire Festival

The third week of four Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., comprises a program of three rarely-heard selections of Vivaldi, Stravinsky and Rossini by the Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening, a program of Handel and Haydn including a Haydn Mass conducted by Hugh Ross performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch on the podium on Friday evening; a program of Prokofieff, Liszt, Richard Strauss and Elgar performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Jean Morel at guest conductor and Nicole Henriot as piano soloist on Saturday evening, and the orchestra, Mr. Munch conducting and William Primrose as viola soloist, in a program of Berlioz and Toch on Sunday.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
JUL 17 1954

Monteux to Conduct Tanglewood Concert

Pierre Monteux will be the guest conductor for the second weekend of Music Shed concerts at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., 8:30 o'clock tonight in the Music Shed. He will lead the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, with Vera Francrschi as piano soloist.

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Music Director Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra when pianist Leo Smit will be the soloist. Mr. Monteux program will include two Debussy works: excerpts from "St. Sebastian" and "La Mer," and two by Franck: "Les Djinns" for piano and orchestra, and Symphony in D Minor. Mr. Munch has chosen the Debussy "Iberia," Aaron Copland's Piano Concerto and Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" for the Sunday matinee.

This weekend's soloists are making their first Tanglewood appearances.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
REPUBLICAN
JUL 25 1954

The Boston Symphony

A non-musical friend expressed sincere confusion the other day when he went to Boston and found the Boston Symphony performing in the Hatch Memorial Shell beside the Charles River in the morning.

"I thought they were all at Tanglewood at the other end of the state," he declared.

It is not sleight of hand. There are not two of the famous symphony orchestras. It is in both places every week, this season.

Best of all, apparently the commuting is making everyone quite happy. There was a very simple reason for it. It seems that the orchestra makes a good deal of money in Tanglewood. On the other hand, the Esplanade concerts beside the Charles River have been free of charge, although the hat is passed. The Esplanade concerts have been losing money for some time.

We are certainly in favor of the principle of bringing top-flight music to everyone, especially those who cannot afford the price of a seat at Boston's Symphony Hall, or those who can afford it, but can't plan far enough ahead to be able to buy the seats which are sold out well in advance.

The whole arrangement seems to make the Boston Symphony Orchestra that which it is in the minds of many Massachusetts individuals, the "Massachusetts Symphony Orchestra." That is an excellent idea, something for Bay Staters to speak about when they are confronted with the boasting of Texans or Californians.

The arrangement seems a truly excellent one, except for one thing. Could they work a stop in Springfield into the commuting?

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.
ILL. STATE JOURNAL
JUL 26 1954

Vacation And The Arts.

The vacationer who likes to mix a little bit of the arts in his travels has a wide range of selections to choose from this summer, both in this country and abroad.

Here in our own area, of course, are the Springfield and St. Louis municipal operas, the Abraham Lincoln plays and the outdoor symphonies at Chicago. In the East are the famous Tanglewood festival in New Jersey, with music by the Boston Symphony orchestra, which runs from July 7 to Aug. 18; the Newport music festival in August; the Guggenheim Memorial concerts and the Stadium concerts in New York City; the special summer music programs at Aspen, Colo., and Ogden, Utah, and four historical plays in the Southeast, "The Lost Colony," at Manteo, North Carolina; "The Common Glory" at Williamsburg, Va.; "Horn in the West" in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina, and "Unto These Hills" in the Smoky Mountains of North Carolina.

Abroad, are these major music festivals: Salzburg, July 25 to Aug. 30; Bayreuth, July 22 to Aug. 22; Glyndbourne, June 10 to last of July. Other European centers where special music activities are scheduled are Aix-en-Provence and Prades, in France; several cities in Holland; Aldeburgh in England and Llangollen in Wales; Venice, Vienna, Berlin and Stockholm.

With today's quick and inexpensive transportation facilities, it is possible for many Americans, those who have the desire and the time, to see and hear these musical and theatrical events. We're not trying to persuade the confirmed fisherman to give up his rod and reel nor the excursionist to give up his ship for a flight into the ecstasies of the arts. Maybe they wouldn't enjoy it at all. But for those who do like good music and plays, the opportunities are varied and many.

[284]

Millbrook July 22
Round table

Choral Director

Hugh Ross again in the summer of 1954 heads the choral music department of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. With the assistance of James Aliferis and Lorna Cooke DeVarn, Mr. Ross guides music students in choral conducting, small choir singing, and the Festival chorus which this summer participates in Berkshire Festival concerts on July 31 (Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" dramatic symphony), August 6 (Mozart's "Idomeneo" excerpts), August 7 (Berlioz' "Te Deum'), August 15 (Berlioz' "Requiem"). Mr. Ross will also conduct Haydn's "Nelson" Mass on Friday evening, July 23rd.

Three One-Act Operas At Tanglewood Tuesday

Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by students of Department IV (Opera) of the Berkshire Music Center, for a single performance at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Tuesday (July 27) at 8:30 p.m. in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The performance is open to those who support the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra by joining the Society of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. All seats are reserved.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera composed in 1954, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45A, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia in 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christian Anderson tale, book by Benno Elkan, English version by Marion Farquhar.

WORCESTER, MASS.
TELEGRAM
JUL 25 1954

To Record Tanglewood Concerts

WGBH-FM has concluded arrangements to tape-record all of the major concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood and present them in delayed broadcast during the Summer months.

Many student concerts, lectures and forums to be given during the six weeks of the Berkshire Music Center Summer school of music will be recorded by WGBH for broadcast during the Fall and Winter.

Jordan M. Whitelaw, WGBH music manager, with James Montgomery of the engineering staff will record the 18 Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts.

Six are Friday evening concerts in the Theater and 12 are Saturday and Sunday concerts in the Shed—for broadcast before the opening of the Symphony's Fall season.

Three concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood will be broadcast during the month of July. The first of these concerts was heard over WGBH last night.

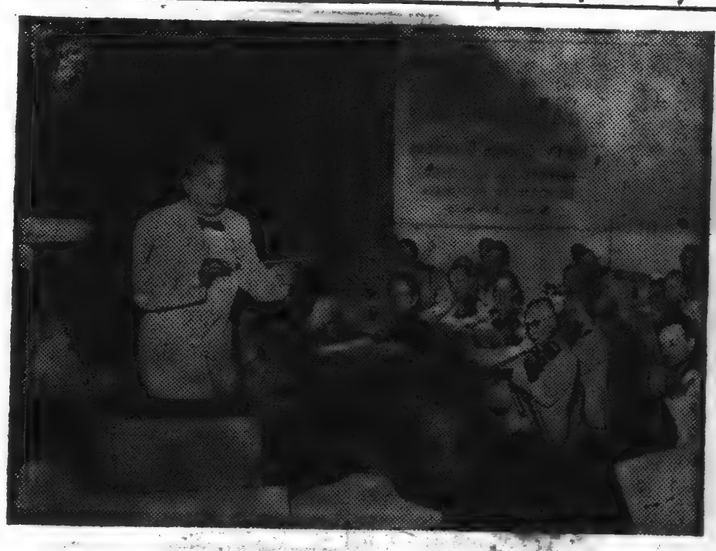
On Monday and Tuesday evenings, August 2 and 3, the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will give the New England premiere, and the first Tanglewood performances, of Aaron Copland's full-length opera on an American theme, "The Tender Land," newly revised by the composer who has been Assistant Director of the summer school of music of the Boston Symphony Orchestra since its founding under the direction of the late Serge Koussevitzky in 1940.

Frederic Cohen, head of the opera department this summer, had planned a production for Tanglewood this year before the opera was given its premiere by the New York City Opera Company, at City Center, New York, on April 1 (1954), and Mr. Cohen's production will be an entirely different one from that given in New York, in line with the composer's original intention that his opera be produced by colleges, workshops and opera groups. Mr. Copland has made revisions, so that at Tanglewood the opera is now in three acts, has three added scenes, and its period is now the spring of 1910.

"The Tender Land" was written on a commission from the League of Composers, from a grant by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. It is set to a libretto by Horace Everett, young California poet and painter, inspired by a photograph by Walker Evans in a book about Southern tenant farmers in the 1930's, "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men," by James Agee. It tells the story of Laurie, the elder of two daughters of a farmer's wife, and her decision on the eve of her graduation to work out her own life beyond the horizon of the farm.

Ticket information will be furnished by the Friends office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. The telephone is Lenox 600.

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE July 22, 1954



Berkshire Festival Director

Charles Munch, music director for the past five years of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is directing its Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., in its 17th season, the 15th in which the orchestra has participated, July 5 through August 15.

Mr. Munch is also director of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music operated by the orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Festival.

Millbrook Roundtable July 29

Tanglewood on Parade--Arthur Fiedler, Brenda Lewis and Thos. Schippers

Annual Benefit August 13th

Tanglewood will be on Parade Friday, August 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 8,500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. Festivities, from 6:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

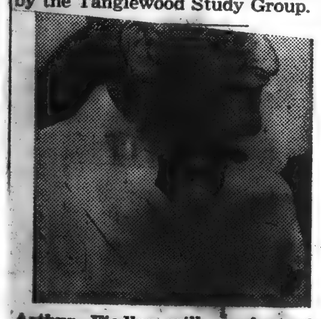
For the first time in the great Tanglewood Music Shed, The Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music enter, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early twenties, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim when, at the age of nineteen, he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul." Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with equal distinction during several seasons with the New York City Opera Company, including the world premiere on April 1 last of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," which will have its New England premiere by Tanglewood's opera department on August 2 and 3. Mr. Schippers has also conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras.

Soloist on Mr. Schipper's half of "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme," and did a coast-to-coast tour with the Met's production of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." She created the role of Birdie in the original Broadway production of Marc Blitzstein's opera "Regina," sang the title role in the New York City Opera Company's revival last year. On Broadway she has starred in "The Merry Widow," "The Gypsy Baron" and last season in the musical comedy, "The Girl in Pink Tights."

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office, and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special added attraction for purchasers of box seats, a $5.00 and front sections (reserved) of the great Music Shed, at $4.00 and $3.00, is a performance of opera at 4:00 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets, on sale at $2.50, will entitle the holders to seats in the Shed's rear sections. All ticket holders are invited to attend demonstrations, at 6:00 p.m., by the Berkshire Music Center's symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.



Arthur Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of The Boston Pops Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at the gala Tanglewood on Parade—the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center—Friday, August 13, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Fiedler and the Pops will share a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers, with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD July 30

Ravena News-Herald

DORIOT ANTONY, flautist, the first woman ever to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is the soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto, which will be performed by the Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, in the Friday evening concert, July 30 (8:30 p. m.), the fourth in the series of chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

FRIDAY, JULY 30:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Chamber Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting

SATURDAY, JULY 31:
10:00 a. m. in the Shed
Boston Symphony Rehearsal
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
Berlioz - "Romeo and Juliet"
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting

SUNDAY, AUG. 1:
10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
Chamber Music, Dept. 1
(Free to Friends)
2:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Richard Burgin, conducting
8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
Composer's Forum
(Free to Friends)

MONDAY, AUG. 2:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Opera in 3 acts
"The Tender Land" - Copland

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 1 - 1954

Mozart, Late French Music Presented at Tanglewood

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, shared the rehearsal in the Shed at Tanglewood this morning. Mr. Burgin will be taking his first turn as conductor of a major concert at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon and he devoted his share of the rehearsal to the Khatchaturian Concerto which his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will play on that program. Munch used his part of the morning to run through a few sections of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" which will be given in its entirety this evening.

Last night the largest audience this year to attend a Friday evening program of the so-called Bach-Mozart series heard Mr. Munch lead a small ensemble in a program of Mozart and late French music.

Doriot Antony, the orchestra's first flutist, was the soloist in Ibert's Concerto for Flute and Orchestra. Her charmingly modest manner did not lessen the tremendously favorable impression she made on her audience with a superb rendition of the solo. In the final movement, a cadenza, recitativo and badinerle were played with remarkable artistry. Throughout her tone had depth and substance and she controlled it with musicianship as well as technical proficiency.

Mr. Munch lead the orchestra in the Mozart "Paris" Symphony with vivacity, verve and, in the slow movement, remarkable grace. He also conducted eight solo wind players in a wonderfully sonorous but other wise too cautious performance of Mozart's C Minor serenade for oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns.

Another member of the orchestra's flute section was beckoned by Mr. Munch to stand after Rousell's "Festin de l'Araignee." James Pappoutsakis was outstanding in a dazzling performance marked by delicacy and tonal transparency. The weather made the lawns adjacent to the Theatre-Concert Hall extremely pleasant and there were more listeners outside the hall than in the packed auditorium.

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE
aug 5, 1954

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Orchestra At Tanglewood Aug. 13

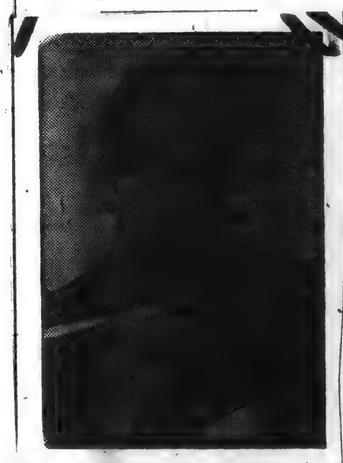
Arthur Fiedler, bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Friday, August 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, announces a program of popular symphonic music.

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March will open the Pops section of the Music Shed concert after intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, then Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of the well-known television commercials, called "TViana;" and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gilette razor theme of radio and TV. It is expected that there will be encores of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Tanglewood on Parade's concert starts at 8:15 p.m. with Thomas Schippers, former student of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C, followed by the final scene from the Richard Strauss opera, "Salome," with Broadway and Metropolitan Opera star Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music, and student opera will go on respectively in the Music Shed, Chamber Music Hall, and Theatre-Concert Hall on Tanglewood's big day, commencing at 6:00 p.m. A special attraction for holders of box seats and tickets in the reserved sections of the Music Shed is a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens, at 4:00 p.m.



Zino Francescatti, violinist, accompanied by Artur Balsam at the piano, will play the last of the Berkshire Festival series of six chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., when he plays Brahms' sonates in A major and D minor, and Bach's Suite in C, on Wednesday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m.

MILLBROOK

Thos. Schippers to Conduct Symphony

Annual "Tanglewood on Parade" August 13th

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade," Friday, August 13 (8:15, Music Shed) is a "musical revelation in himself," said the Paris press and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome," with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fiedler leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley," and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

After studying at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948 Mr. Schippers was chosen by Gian-Carlo Menotti to conduct his opera "The Consul," which ran for four months on Broadway before Mr. Schippers went to Europe to conduct it there.

Upon returning to America, Mr. Schippers was appointed a resident conductor of the New York City Opera Company at City Center, becoming the youngest conductor on the staff of any major opera company. At City Center he has conducted standard operatic works like "Carmen" and "La Boheme," modern scores such as "L'Heure Espagnole" of Ravel and the world premiere of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" on April 1, 1954.

Active in television, Schippers conducted the TV premiere of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Christmas Eve in 1952, and has filled engagements as guest conductor with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the N.B.C. Symphony and at New York's Lewisohn Stadium.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special attraction for purchasers of box seats and front sections (reserved) of the Music Shed, is a performance of opera at 4:00 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets will entitle holders to unreserved rear sections of Shed. All ticket-holders are invited to attend demonstrations, at 6:00 p.m., by the Berkshire Music Center's student symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

[285]

Millbrook Roundtable July 29

Tanglewood on Parade--Arthur Fiedler, Brenda Lewis and Thos. Schippers

Annual Benefit August 13th

Tanglewood will be on Parade Friday, August 13. The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, which attracted 8,500 persons last summer, is in aid of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, now in its 12th season in conjunction with the six-week Berkshire Festival. Festivities, from 6:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m., include demonstrations by every department of the school, a lawn supper, a gala evening concert, followed by drawing of door prizes and dancing on the lawn.

For the first time in the great Tanglewood Music Shed, The Boston Pops Orchestra will perform, with Arthur Fiedler, celebrating his 25th year as its conductor, on the podium. Through its annual seasons in Symphony Hall and at the Esplanade concerts on the Charles River mall in Boston, its extensive tours, and the mediums of recordings, radio and television, probably more people have heard the Pops and Arthur Fiedler than any other orchestra or conductor in history.

The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers, a distinguished young alumnus of the Berkshire Music enter, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Bizet and Richard Strauss. Still in his early twenties, Mr. Schippers won national acclaim when, at the age of nineteen, he made his debut on the podium with Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera, "The Consul." Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with equal distinction during several seasons with the New York City Opera Company, including the world premiere on April 1 last of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," which will have its New England premiere by Tanglewood's opera department on August 2 and 3. Mr. Schippers has also conducted the Philadelphia, NBC and Lewisohn Stadium orchestras.

Soloist on Mr. Schipper's half of "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will be Brenda Lewis, celebrated young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Miss Lewis made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera two years ago as Musetta in "La Boheme," and did a coast-to-coast tour with the Met's production of Johann Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." She created the role of Birdie in the original Broadway production of Marc Blitzstein's opera "Regina," sang the title role in the New Y... V... h... "...

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the first appearance of The Boston Pops Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., at the gala Tanglewood on Parade—the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center—Friday, August 13, at 8:30 p.m. Mr. Fiedler and the Pops will share a concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers, with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

This Week At TANGLEWOOD July 30
Ravena News-Herald

DORIOT ANTONY, flautist, the first woman ever to hold a major desk with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is the soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto, which will be performed by the Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, in the Friday evening concert, July 30 (8:30 p. m.), the fourth in the series of chamber orchestra concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

FRIDAY, JULY 30:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Festival Concert
Chamber Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting

SATURDAY, JULY 31:
10:00 a. m. in the Shed
Boston Symphony Rehearsal
8:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
Berlioz - "Romeo and Juliet"
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Charles Munch, conducting

SUNDAY, AUG. 1:
10:00 a. m. in Chamber Music Hall
Chamber Music, Dept. 1
(Free to Friends)
2:30 p. m. in the Shed
Festival Concert
by the Boston Symphony
Richard Burgin, conducting
8:30 p. m. Chamber Music Hall
Composer's Forum
(Free to Friends)

MONDAY, AUG. 2:
8:30 p. m. in the Theatre
Opera in 3 acts
"The Tender Land" - Copland

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
AUG 1 - 1954

Mozart, Late French Music Presented at Tanglewood

By Jay C. Rosenfeld

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Richard Burgin, concertmaster and associate conductor, shared the rehearsal in the Shed at Tanglewood this morning. Mr. Burgin will be taking his first turn as conductor of a major concert at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon and he devoted his share of the rehearsal to the Khatchaturian Concerto which his wife, violinist Ruth Posselt, will play on that program. Munch used his part of the morning to run through a few sections of Berlioz' "Romeo and Juliet" which will be given in its entirety this evening.

Last night the largest audience this year to attend a Friday evening program of the so-called Bach-Mozart series heard Mr. Munch lead a small ensemble in a program of Mozart and late French music.

Doriot Antony, the orchestra's first flutist, was the soloist in Ibert's Concerto for Flute and Orchestra. Her charmingly modest manner did not lessen the tremendously favorable impression she made on her audience with a superb rendition of the solo. In the final movement, a cadenza, recitativo and badinerie were played with remarkable artistry. Throughout her tone had depth and substance and she controlled it with musicianship as well as technical proficiency.

Mr. Munch lead the orchestra in the Mozart "Paris" Symphony with vivacity, verve and, in the slow movement, remarkable grace. He also conducted eight solo wind players in a wonderfully sonorous but other wise too cautious performance of Mozart's C Minor serenade for oboes, clarinets, bassoons and horns.

Anoth... of the orchestr... was beckon... stand... l'Ara... was per... an... w... c...

aug 5, 1954
MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE

Arthur Fiedler and Boston Pops Orchestra At Tanglewood Aug. 13

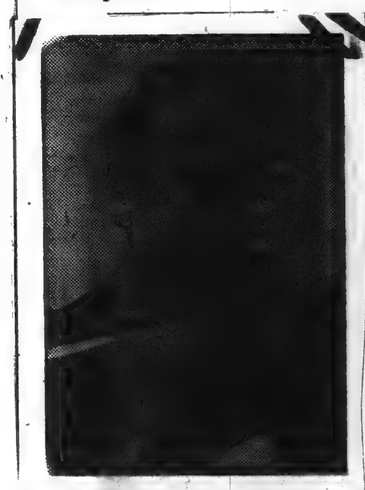
Arthur Fiedler, bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Friday, August 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, announces a program of popular symphonic music.

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" March will open the Pops section of the Music Shed concert after intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, then Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero."

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of the well-known television commercials, called "TViana;" and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gilette razor theme of radio and TV. It is expected that there will be encores of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Tanglewood on Parade's concert starts at 8:15 p.m. with Thomas Schippers, former student of the Berkshire Music Center, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C, followed by the final scene from the Richard Strauss opera, "Salome," with Broadway and Metropolitan Opera star Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist.

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music, and student opera will go on respectively in the Music Shed, Chamber Music Hall, and Theatre-Concert Hall on Tanglewood's big day, commencing at 6:00 p.m. A special attraction for holders of box seats and tickets in the reserved sections of the Music Shed is a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens, at 4:00 p.m.



Zino Francescatti, violinist, accompanied by Artur Balsam at the piano, will play the last of the Berkshire Festival series of six chamber music concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., when he plays Brahms' sonates in A major and D minor, and Bach's Suite in C, on Wednesday, August 11 at 8:30 p.m.

MILLBRO...

Thos. Schippers to Conduct Symphony

Annual "Tanglewood on Parade" August 13th

Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade," Friday, August 13 (8:15, Music Shed) is a "musical revelation in himself," said the Paris press and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the twenty-three-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951.

For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome," with Brenda Lewis of the Metropolitan Opera and the Broadway stage as soloist; in the concert's second half Arthur Fiedler leads The Boston Pops Orchestra for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed.

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Michigan, at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Church when he was eleven, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of fourteen. After concertizing in other mid-western cities as pianist and organist he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

Mr. Schippers—at seventeen—was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon," as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley," and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

After studying at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948 Mr. Schippers was chosen by Gian-Carlo Menotti to conduct his opera "The Consul," which ran for four months on Broadway before Mr. Schippers went to Europe to conduct it there.

Upon returning to America, Mr. Schippers was appointed a resident conductor of the New York City Opera Company at City Center, becoming the youngest conductor on the staff of any major opera company. At City Center he has conducted standard operatic works like "Carmen" and "La Boheme," modern scores such as "L'Heure Espagnole" of Ravel and the world premiere of Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land" on April 1, 1954.

Active in television, Schippers conducted the TV premiere of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Christmas Eve in 1952, and has filled engagements as guest conductor with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the N.B.C. Symphony and at New York's Lewisohn Stadium.

Seats for "Tanglewood on Parade" are now on sale at the Tanglewood box office and may be reserved by telephone to Lenox (Mass.) 600. A special attraction for purchasers of box seats and front sections (reserved) of the Music Shed, is a performance of opera at 4:00 p.m. in the formal gardens. General admission tickets will entitle holders to unreserved rear sections of Shed. All ticket-holders are invited to attend demonstrations, at 6:00 p.m., by the Berkshire Music Center's student symphony orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera departments and by the Tanglewood Study Group.

[285]

Eagle - Aug 6

Stockbridge

MRS. JOHN HEATHER — Tel. 429

Whitestone

Commissioned by the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. to write music on the theme "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills," Lukas Foss receives a $500 installment on the $1,500 commission yesterday from Mrs. John H. P. Gould, association president, at the second annual concert.

300 at Bowl Assn. Benefit; Composer Gets $500 Check

STOCKBRIDGE — An estimated 300 people followed the Stockbridge Bowl Assn.'s second annual concert from Wheatleigh to the red barn in the rear of the Hawthorne House yesterday where the affair was held inside due to rain.

Lukas Foss, Tanglewood composer-conductor-pianist, was presented a check for $500 as first installment on a $1,500 commission for writing a Stockbridge psalm on the theme "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills." The check was presented by Mrs. John H. P. Gould, association president.

Mr. Foss was later called upon to join Aaron Copland in the piano duet "Dance Cabana." The presentation was given without rehearsal and scheduled only a few minutes before it was presented.

Mr. Copland played on a grand piano with Emanuel Balaban as page turner and Mr. Foss played on a spinet-type piano with Ralph Berkowitz as page turner.

Mr. Balaban was accompanist for soprano Theresa Green. She sang an aria from "LaWally," by Catalani, "Les Chemins de Lamour" by Poulenc and "Joy" by Winter Watts. Mr. Berkowitz was accompanist for violinist Ruth Posselt who performed "Jota" by de-Falla and "The Ghost Dance" by Ellis Levy.

Morgan Master of Ceremonies

Master of ceremonies was Mac Morgan, who sang three of Mr. Copland's folk song arrangements with Mr. Copland at the piano. The numbers were "Zion's Walk," an old revivalist tune, "The Little Horses" and "Ching-a-Ring-Chow."

"Students come to Tanglewood from all over the world, but this jazz pianist is the first to come from the Copa Cabana to see what we long hairs are doing," Mr. Foss said in introducing Joe Bushkin.

Mr. Bushkin presented "I Love a Piano," a song he described as written by Irving Berlin "in his pro musica antiqua days," and a song, "Aggrivation," he said he did when he was with Tommy Dorsey's Band. He sang with both numbers and presented a third without a title or vocal.

Dyer-Bennet Entertains

Richard Dyer-Bennet sang three numbers, a Shakespearian ballad, "Come Away Death" from "Twelfth Night," "Phyllis and Her Mother,' and "The Lonesome Valley."

Nathan G. Horwitt, chairman of the concert, told what the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. has done and hopes to do. He explained he was killing time as the program was delayed because Mr. Foss' car was stuck in a ditch.

Mr. Morgan read the 121st Psalm on which the music will be based which Mr. Foss has been commissioned to write. Following the presentation, Leo Van Witsen, designer and make-up artist in the opera department of Tanglewood, gave a demonstration. His subject was a volunteer from the audience, Selectman Arthur Maskell of Stockbridge. Mr. Witsen made him up as a woman.

Tanglewood Student Who Is 'Going Places'

E

Midwestern Girl Winning Recognition Via Music Center

Manos

Catherine N. Dufford of Evansville, Ind., studies oboe in the orchestra and chamber music dept. at Tanglewood. She is a top student.

"I cannot remember when I first heard about Tanglewood," mused oboe student Catherine N. Dufford of Evansville, Ind. "I've known about it so long, and had heard so much about it from other students, that I always hoped I could come here sometime and see it for myself."

Picked as a "typical" Tanglewood student, Catherine has a solid down-to-earth approach to her work, which stems from her solid down-to-earth Midwestern heritage. Born in Missouri, she was educated and lived there until two years ago, when her parents moved to Evansville. Her father is a professor at Evansville College.

In September Catherine will return to her senior year at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., where she is majoring in oboe and woodwind pedagogy. This is her second summer at the Berkshire Music Center, and by acting as assistant music librarian for the student orchestra she earns her board and room at the girls' dormitory at Lenox School.

Little Free Time

Studying in the orchestra and chamber music department, she keeps a tight schedule of a three-hour orchestra rehearsal in the morning, playing under different conductors, and a chamber music session squeezed into the afternoon with classes held by different members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. At other times extra rehearsals are held of works by various students. This gives the budding composers an opportunity to hear their pieces played by a full orchestra. Practicing takes up any time that's left.

"The evenings usually are filled with concerts, and I play in the opera orchestra too, so there is very little free time left for the beach or sightseeing," she said. Despite this demanding daily program, Catherine has managed to spend some time looking over this section of the country which she finds "quite charming." "Some of the old homes," she said, "are just wonderful. You know, in Missouri and the Middle West a house is very old if it goes back to 1840, but that's not considered very old here, at all."

Typically American

A likable girl, whose serious brown eyes, frequently sparkle, and dispel any notion one might have that she's a "music grind," Catherine modestly describes herself as "pretty typically American" and "a product of American teaching."

Claiming no foreign travel or experience, she feared she might not be interesting enough to portray a typical Tanglewood student, she failed to say that she is one of the top students on the campus and has been officially described as "a young lady we'll be hearing from in the near future. We think very highly of her here, and are sure she'll be making a name for herself."

She has spent five summers at the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Mich., three years as a student in the high school division, and two years on the music library staff. Last year while at Eastman, she played one season as second oboe in the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra.

Several Scholarships

"I feel luckier than most people," Catherine claimed. "I've had some pretty nice opportunities," referring to her music scholarships, which she has earned at Eastman as well as at Tanglewood and Interlochen. She claims these scholarships are due to the fact that oboe-players are relatively rare.

Catherine says her Tanglewood experience has been helpful. "It's been interesting to meet people who have had similar training in different places. It does a lot to broaden your musical outlook." She feels fortunate to have been at the music center for two years and strongly believes it has helped her playing immensely.

In discussing her plans for the future, she hopes to do as much playing as she can, but also has teaching in mind.

All Types of Students

When queried about the many types of students at Tanglewood, she laughed, and said she imagined that Lenox people must have a weird impression of them. As everywhere, she said that some students were serious musicians, that others deluded themselves with the idea that the way to get ahead was to be noticed and went to any lengths to gain attention.

All in all, Catherine feels that her two summers as a Tanglewood student, working with noted musicians and teachers, and benefiting from associating with students of all nationalities and localities, has been most worthwhile.

As it was time for her chamber music class, she left with a cordial invitation to come back and see her again, and headed for one of the small wooden rehearsal buildings set in a woodland area.

From her youthful dignity and charm, and her obvious talent, one could well believe the statement of of the personnel director who said, "Catherine will make a name for herself."

Two Artists for Benefit

E

Manos

Lukas Foss, pianist, and Miss Catherine Akos, soprano, look at the score for a group of songs to be heard at the third annual Music for Israel concert at 8:30 Monday evening at the Jewish Community House. Miss Akos, now of Toronto, formerly lived in Budapest, Hungary, where she was a member of the State Opera Company. Others to perform at the benefit are Walter Rubin, clarinetist; Ralph Berkowitz, pianist; Richard Burgin, violinist; and Jean Bedetti, cellist.

Tanglewood Tales

E

Organ Recital At Shed Tomorrow

The organ recitation tomorrow afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed by E. Power Biggs is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The program:

Double Concerto No. 3 in G ..... Antonio Soler
Allegro vivace.
Minuet with Variations.

Fantasia and Fugue in G minor.
Johann Sebastian Bach

Three Noels with Variations.
Louis Claude Daquin
Noel Suisse.
Noel en Musette.
Noel Grand Jeu et Duo.

Two Pastels ..... Anthony Donato
Quietly and rather slowly.
Fast and brilliant.

Chamber Music Concert Sunday

The fifth concert of chamber music by members of Department 1 of the Berkshire Music Center will be held Sunday morning at 10 in the chamber music hall.

The program:

String Quartet in D minor, K. 421.. Mozart
Allegro moderato.
Andante.
Menuetto: Allegretto.
Allegretto ma non troppo.
Richard Elias, violin; Ethel Dreyfus, violin; Joseph Pappoccio, viola; Bruce Klingbeil, violoncello.

Sonata for flute, viola and harp .. Debussy

String Quartet in C minor, Opus posthumous ..... Schubert
Allegro con brio.
Andantino.
Menuetto: Allegro vivace.
Allegro.
Constance Field, violin; Ody Bromberg, violin; Carlos Quian, viola; Constance Whittaker, violoncello.

[286]

N.E. Premiere of Strainsky's 'Pulcinella' To Be Given at Festival Concert Tonight

Lukas Foss, right, who will conduct the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony tonight in a program including the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's ballet, "Pulcinella," discusses works of the composer during a visit with Stravinsky.

TANGLEWOOD — Lukas Foss, who appeared as piano soloist earlier in this year's Berkshire Festival will make his conducting debut of the season tonight at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall, conducting a chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra players.

Mr. Foss will have Seymour Lipkin as piano soloist in Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat major.

Regina Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright will be soloists in the New England premiere of Igor Stravinsky's "Pulcinella" and Mr. Foss conducts excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo" for the program's second half with Marvin Worden, Miss Sarfaty, Charlotte Holloman and Theresa Green as soloists.

Koussevitzky's Pupil

Head of the study group department at the Berkshire Music Center and associated professor of music at the University of California in Los Angeles, Mr. Foss came to this country in 1937 at the age of 15 where he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. From the earliest days of Tanglewood he had been a popular figure at the Center, as a conductor-pupil of the late Serge Koussevitzky, as official pianist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1944 and faculty member since 1946. The young American composer-conductor-pianist won the Fulbrizer Scholarship when he was only 20. His compositions brought him a Fulbright Fellowship, the Herblit Award of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Prix de Rome. In 1945 he won a Guggenheim Fellowship, the youngest composer ever to be so honored, and a citation from the New York Music Critics' Circle for "The Prairie," his cantata for chorus, solo voices and orchestra. He has appeared as piano soloist or had compositions performed by the

Seymour Lipkin

Boston Symphony, the New York Philharmonic, the Los Angeles and Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestras, the CBS and New York City Symphony Orchestras.

Concertized Extensively

Seymour Lipkin, faculty member of the Berkshire Music Center, was born in Detroit in 1927. He attended the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia where he studied piano with Rudolf Serkin and enrolled as a student of the Berkshire Music Center in 1942. A conducting pupil of Serge Koussevitzky in 1946 and winner of the Rachmaninoff Fund National Piano Contest in 1948, Mr. Lipkin has since concertized extensively throughout the country.

Tonight's vocal soloists are students at Tanglewood; the chorus in excerpts from the Mozart opera is made up of Tanglewood choral students and 21 boys, age 13 to 18, from the Indian Hill Music Workshop, who have been trained by Harold Aks.

Stravinsky composed his Ballet "Pulcinella" for Serge Diaghilev in 1920. It was premiered in Paris that year with choreography by Leonide Massine, scenery and costumes by Pablo Picasso. The Mozart opera was written in 1780 and what was probably the first production in the United States was given by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in 1947.

Reservations for tickets to tonight's concert may be made by telephoning the Tanglewood box office. In case of rain, the concert will be transferred from the Theater-Concert Hall to the Music Shed.

With Orchestras

Mr. Boatwright made his Boston debut in Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" at Boris Goldovsky's New England Opera Theater and has appeared with the Chicago and New York Philharmonic Orchestras. This summer he has made six appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. He has recorded the "Damnation of Faust" and was seen on television on Ed Sullivan's "Toast of the Town."

Mr. Green studied at the Eastman School of Music. He received degrees of bachelor of music with distinction and master of music in composition.

He has studied composition with Hunter Johnson and Bernard Rogers and violin with Boris Koutzen and Andre de Ribaupierre. He is working this summer with Aaron Copland at the Berkshire Music Center. His orchestral works have been performed at the Festival of Contemporary Arts at Cornell University, Wooster (Ohio) College and Rochester.

Arias Listed

Mr. Boatwright will sing the following arias: "O Sommi Dei," by Handel; "O Divine Redeemer," by Gounod, and "The People That Walk in Darkness," from "The Messiah," by Handel. His spirituals will be "My Soul's Been Anchored in de Lard," and "Let Us Break Bread Together," which he has arranged.

Mr. Green will play the adagio from the sonata in E major by Handel, "Romanza," by Beethoven, and three of his works, "Carillons," "Scherzetto," and "Nocturne."

Boatwright, Green Featured In Interlaken Concert Sunday

INTERLAKEN—Tanglewood artists McHenry Boatwright, baritone, and George Green, composer-violinist, will be soloists at a concert-hymn sing Sunday at 4 in the Interlaken Church for the benefit of the organ fund.

Mrs. Harriet Parsons Levinson of Lenox will be guest organist at the sing, which is being sponsored by the church choir to replace the 50-year-old Esty organ.

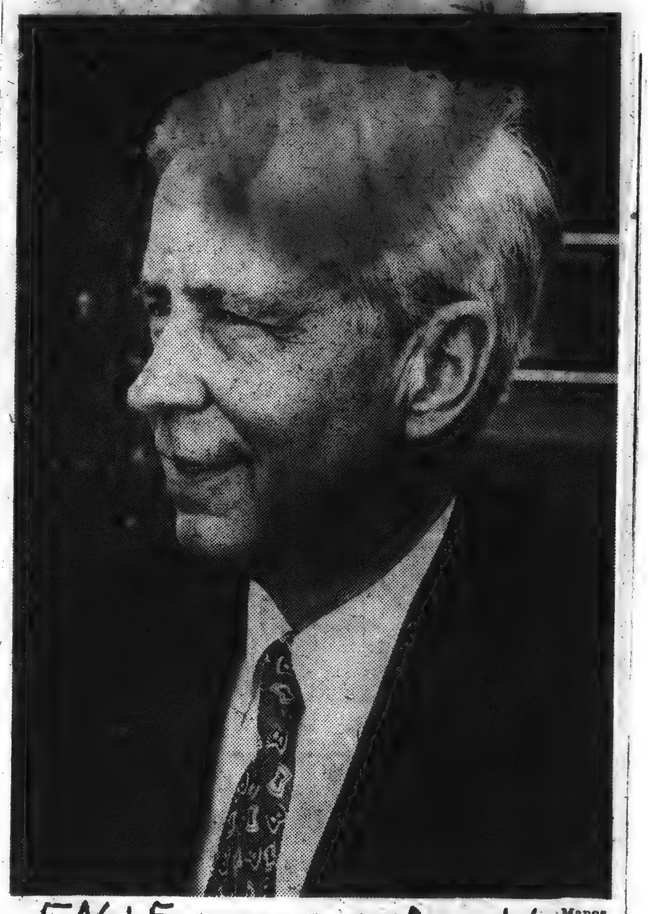
Mr. Boatwright, a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston this June, has made an outstanding record in his brief career.

Among honors he has won are the Chicagoland Music Festival award for best male singer of 1953, the Marian Anderson award and the Pi Kappa Lambda scholarship for 1953-55. He was the outstanding graduating student of the New England Conservatory and was soloist at that school's "Night at the Pops" with Richard Burgin conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra.

McHenry Boatwright

Retiring BSO Manager Judd Honored for Long Service

40 Years Devotion to Orchestra Praised in Tanglewood Ceremony— 2 Retiring String Men Also Feted



EAGLE GEORGE E. JUDD August 6 Manos

TANGLEWOOD—After nearly 40 years of service to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with which he became associated in 1915, and which he has managed since 1936, George E. Judd was honored at a luncheon by members of the orchestra today at Tanglewood, where the Berkshire Festival to which he brought the Boston Symphony in 1937 is drawing to the close of its 17th season. Mr. Judd will be succeeded Sept. 1, at the start of the orchestra's 74th season in Symphony Hall, Boston, by Assistant Manager Thomas D. Perry Jr.

The retirement ceremony also paid tribute to Leon Zorodetsky, violinist, with the Boston Symphony since 1920, and violist Georges Fourel, whom Pierre Monteux (then permanent conductor of the orchestra) brought from France in 1921. They were presented with engraved gold watches on behalf of members of the orchestra and the management by Music Director Charles Munch after the morning's rehearsal for tomorrow night's all-Berlioz program in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Jerome Lipson, violist, chairman of the orchestra committee, presided, and first violinist Harry Dickson was toastmaster.

With characteristic modesty, Mr. Judd refused to allow any special ceremony to be made of his official farewell to the symphony and to Tanglewood, but asked that he be included in the orchestra men's lunch in honor of their colleagues "as a third retiring member of the orchestra." An engraved gold watch was also presented him.

A special gift to Mr. Judd was a leather-bound record album containing the only copy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's final program of its 73rd season in Symphony Hall May 1, Beethoven's 9th Symphony conducted by Mr. Munch, tape-recorded unbeknown to Mr. Judd by WGBH, Boston's non-commercial radio station which broadcasts a number of the orchestra's programs to educational institutions, and with the blessing of the Musicians' Union pressed in an LP album by RCA-Victor Records, complete with regular labels. The special edition of one record included the gold-plated master from which it was made and also the plate from which the text on the album cover was printed. The album was presented the retiring manager by Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra.

Under George E. Judd's direction the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a 1½ million dollar operation, added further luster to its status as one of the leading orchestras in the United States; during his tenure the orchestra became part of the annual Berkshire Festival where an anticipated audience of 120,000 will have attended its 24 concerts of the 1954 season; some 10,000 are expected at "Tanglewood on Parade" next Friday (the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood), and a predicted 45,000 patrons will have witnessed the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, thus making a total of 175,000 who will have enjoyed this summer's music at Tanglewood.

In the summer of 1952, under Mr. Judd's guidance, the orchestra made its first tour to Europe and in the spring of 1953 its first coast-to-coast tour. Recently the manager negotiated contracts with the National Broadcasting Co. for his orchestra to replace the NBC Symphony of Arturo Toscanini next season on weekly Saturday night broadcasts. He vigorously backed the Charles Munch plan to extend this season's Berkshire Festival concerts within the six-week framework, and also expanded Arthur Fiedler's schedule of Esplanade concerts in Boston. In his 20 years Mr. Judd has scheduled the Boston Symphony to play a longer season than any other orchestra, and it is the only one to maintain a music school of its own. His duties have also included arranging the orchestra's bookings, scheduling its tours, negotiating salaries and recording contracts, supervising transportation, dealing with unions, guest conductors, soloists, and the daily details of running Symphony Hall and Tanglewood.

Retiring to Farm

Born in Stamford, N.Y., Jan. 6, 1887, George Judd was educated at Oneonta Normal School in New York State, and received his B.A. degree from Harvard in 1911. He was given an Honorary LL.D. by Bates College (June, 1953) and was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the government of France (July, 1953). He commenced his career as secretary to Andrew J. Peters, a congressman from Massachusetts, in Washington in 1911. In 1914 he entered the office in Boston of banker Henry Lee Higginson, who had founded the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1881. The following year Mr. Judd was switched to Mr. Higginson's orchestral office where he has remained ever since. He became secretary to the first manager, Charles A. Ellis, was made assistant manager in 1918 under Ellis' successor, William H. Brennan. Upon the latter's death he succeeded to the management in 1936, when the late Serge Koussevitzky was music director. A widower, Mr. Judd has two sons active in New York musical circles, William M. Judd, of Columbia Artists' Management, and George Judd Jr., of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. After the Tanglewood season he retires to a farm he owns in Cannonsville, Delaware County, New York State, to concentrate on floriculture.

[287]

MISS STEBER, DAVID POLERI SING TONIGHT

Francesatti in Violin Concert On Sunday Matinee At Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8.30 p. m., and again at tomorrow's matinee at 2.30 p. m.

Eleanor Steber is soloist tonight in the first performance at the Berkshire Festival of Berlioz's song cycle "Summer Nights" for soprano and orchestra.

The all-Berlioz program, honoring the 150th anniversary season of the composer's birth, also includes "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans," and the "Te Deum" with tenor David Poleri as soloist with the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon.

Children's Chorus, Too

The choir of Berkshire Music Center students will be augmented by a children's chorus of 40 boys, aged nine to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac at nearby Stockbridge Bowl who have been trained by Mrs. De Varon and camp Director Joe Kruger; and a chorus of 44 girls, aged 13 to 18, from Indian Hill Music Workshop who have been trained by David L. Buttolph, a former Berkshire Music Center pupil.

Miss Steber, who sang on July 10 in the Berlioz "The Damnation of Faust" which opened the Music Shed concerts this season, has just returned from engagements in Chicago, two performances at the Hollywood Bowl, recitals in California and appearances at the Red Rocks Festival in Denver, Col. She was guest artist on the Telephone Hour broadcast Monday and will appear at the Florence (Italy) Maggio Musical in 1955 following her season at the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York.

Performing three times at the 1954 Berkshire Festival, David Poleri sang the title role in the July 10 performance of "The Damnation of Faust" and will be heard again on the final Festival concert, Aug. 15, in the Berlioz "Requiem" in addition to his performance in tonight's "Te Deum." Mr. Poleri, a native of Philadelphia, was a student of the Berkshire Music Center before joining the New York City Opera Company.

Zino Francescatti makes the first of two Berkshire Festival appearances when he plays the Beethoven Violin Concerto Sunday afternoon. On Wednesday evening, the 11th, donating his services to the Berkshire Music Center, he will give the final chamber music concert of the season at a Theater-Concert Hall recital. Francescatti and his wife, a professional violinist who gave up her career to further his, have chosen nearby Monterey for their permanent home.

Tickets for all Festival concerts are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and reservations may be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

Say It With Music

Rosario Mazzeo at left, personnel manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, presents a gold plated master recording to retiring Manager George Judd at Tanglewood. At right is Conductor Charles Munch who presented Mr. Judd with an engraved gold watch on behalf of the world famous orchestra.

Foss Conducts Splendidly In Chamber Music Concert

Springfield Union — August 7

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 6—This most exciting of the Friday night chamber orchestra concerts drew a record audience of 3350 for both atmospheric and musical conditions pointed up to a feast of music which could not be missed.

Bountifully Gifted

Lukas Foss, conductor, pianist and composer, was on the podium conducting with his usual sensitivity, rhythmic exactness and musicality. Few indeed are the young musicans so bountifully gifted as he. The program tonight was of exceptional interest, offering as it does such seldom heard works as "Pulcinella" a ballet with Sonv (after Pergolesi), by Stravinsky and excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo," which has been given here by the opera department in its entirety. Then, for good measure Seymour Lipkin, another gifted pianist-conductor, was soloist in Mozart's "Concerto in B-Flat Major, K, 450."

Stravinsky has taken the gracious music of Pergolesi and orchestrated in his own manner, revitalizing and even beautifying it through unusual use of sole instruments. Only seldom has he forgotten Pergolesi and gone entirely Stravinsky, thus offsetting what he started out to accomplish.

He has included several charming solo and ensemble numbers which were capably sung by Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor and McHenry Boatwright, bass. Miss Sarfaty has a rich mezzosoprano voice and she sings with fine feeling for text. Mr. Morris, who looks very young has a tenor voice well worth watching for in a few years he should become a most valuable artist.

Mr. Boatwright has a fine bass voice, a feeling for rhythm and real interpetive powers.

There is much to admire and enjoy in this score. Its orchestration is diverse, clever and always effective. The music is by turns sprightly and languishing, always melodic and always interesting.

Excellent Co-operation

It was a pleasure to see such close co-operation between two pianist-conductors. Mr. Foss is one of the finest of Mozart interpreters when he plays and Mr. Lipkin is one of the best of the young pianists. The "Concerto in B-Flat Major", is a particularly lovely and delicate work with one of those affecting middle movements which Mozart seemingly could toss off at will. Tonight's performance was in impeccable taste with soloist and orchestra responding completely to each other under Mr. Foss' direction. The audience was quick to realize the beauty of this performance and a real ovation followed it.

Mozart's "Idomeneo" was given what is probably its first performance in the United States by the Berkshire music center's opera department in 1947. Tonight Mr. Foss chose excerpts from Acts II and III which gave ample opportunities to the festival chorus and soloists. The story of "Idomeneo" is taken from ancient Greece and deals with the vow made by the King of Crete to Neptune that he would sacrifice the first person he met on reaching the shores of Crete in gratitude to Neptune for saving his fleet during a storm. The first person he meets happens to be his son. Of course everything turns out happily.

Mozart has invested this work with magnificent solos and choral numbers. Mr. Foss had competent soloists tonight. They included Marvin Worden, as Idomeneo, Regina Sarfaty as Idamante, Charlotte Holloman as Ilia and Therese Green as Elektra. If all did not have complete command of the Mozartean style, they all had fresh, young voices which they used intelligently to bring the meaning of the text to the audience.

Once again Mr. Foss revealed his knowledge of and love for the music of Mozart and he held his forces under fine control, providing a performance that was thoroughly musical and often effective.

N.Y. Herald-Tribune

Honored at Festival

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6.—George E. Judd jr., retiring manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and two retiring musicians were honored at a luncheon today at Tanglewood, site of the Berkshire Music Festival. Mr. Judd, who will leave the orchestra after forty years service on Sept. 1, and Georges Fourel, violinist, were Georges Fourel, violinist, were given engraved gold watches. Mr. Judd will be succeeded by Thomas D. Perry jr., the orchestra's assistant manager.

Berkshire Boxholders Listed For Tanglewood on Parade

The box section for Tanglewood on Parade next Friday night is rapidly filling up, according to a report made at a committee meeting yesterday by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, chairman of the box committee. To date more than half the boxes have been sold.

Included among box holders for the program which will benefit the Berkshire Music Center are scores of Berkshire County residents. The boxes are being sold at prices below the regular prices charged at regular programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

May Attend Opera

Box holders and those who buy reserved seats will be entitled to attend a special performance of Gounod's opera, "Le Medecin Malgre Lui," to be staged in the formal gardens at Tanglewood at 4 p.m. Frederic Cohen of the Tanglewood opera department will direct students from the Berkshire Music Center.

Those who have taken boxes for the concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 include Mr. and Mrs. Harrison L. Amber, Mr. and Mrs. Alan J. Blau, Monroe B. England, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Jalonack, Mrs. Ralph Jones, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Rice, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger W. Wellington of Pittsfield; Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton; Miss Gladys Greene, Mrs. David Huxley, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, and Mrs. John L. Senior of Lenox; Miss Mabel Choate, Mrs. Charles C. Griswold, Mrs. David B. Karrick, Mrs. A. W. Percival, Mrs. George Otis Rockwood, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beecher Stowe of Stockbridge.

Also, Mrs. William Felton Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Martin L. Straus II, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert K. Wheeler of Great Barrington; the Rev. and Mrs. William Crane, Donald B. Miller, and Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Kelly of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Sprague of Williamstown; Mr. and Mrs. Zino Francescatti of Monterey, George E. Sokolsky of Otis; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hahn, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Kinzel of Canaan, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Williams of Old Chatham, N.Y.; Frederick W. Beinecke, Mrs. Milton J. Heller of New York; Mrs. John Alden Carpenter of Chicago; Mrs. Marion Guy of Binghamton, N.Y.; Mrs. Alfred G. Kay of Chester, N.J.; Dr. William J. Mulligan of Brookline.

Reservations for boxes should be made with Miss Margo Miller at Tanglewood in Lenox.

August 7

"Tanglewood on Parade"

FRIDAY AUG. 13 • Events from 6 to 11 P. M.
RAIN OR SHINE
TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.

Including Shed Concert at 8:15 by the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conducted by THOMAS SCHIPPERS
Bizet.....Symphony in C major
Strauss....."Salomé" (Final Scene)
Soloist: BRENDA LEWIS
Popular soprano of Broadway, the Metropolitan, and N. Y. City Opera

BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA
ARTHUR FIEDLER, Conductor
In a typical Pops program—for the first time in the Shed!

LAWN PARTY — PICNIC SUPPER
WALTZING ON THE LAWN — DOOR PRIZES

TICKETS: Box Seats—$5; Front Sections (All seats reserved) $4 and $3; Unreserved Section $2.50
All who purchase tickets will be invited to attend the activities of the Berkshire Music Center at 6 o'clock:—

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA — OPERA SCENES
THE CHORUS — CHAMBER MUSIC

REMAINING FESTIVAL CONCERTS
Tonight at 8:30—Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed) Eleanor Steber, Soprano
Sun. Aft., Aug. 8—Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed) Zino Francescatti, Violin
Wed. Eve., Aug. 11—Zino Francescatti, Violin
Thur. Eve., Aug. 12—Jean Morel, Cond. (Theatre)
Sat. Eve., Aug. 14—Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed)
Sun. Aft., Aug. 15—Charles Munch, Cond. (Shed) Berlioz' Requiem
Wed. Eve. Chamber Concerts—$2, $3; Fri. Eve. Theatre Concerts—$4, $5; Sat. Eve. and Sun. Aft. Shed Concerts—$2.50, $3., $3.50, $4., $5.50, $6.50 (Box Seats). Admission $2.00.
Write or phone TICKET OFFICE, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. (Lenox 600)
Berkshire Playbill — RCA Victor Records

Winsted (Conn.) Evening Citizen

[288]

Tanglewood: The Shed Goes Up

The Berkshire Eagle Weekender

By John G. W. Mahanna

This is the concluding article of a series of four on the early history of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., the organization responsible for bringing outdoor concerts to the Berkshires 20 years ago. All re-publication rights are reserved by The Eagle Publishing Co.

THE $100,000 storm at the final series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in 1937 was the springboard for the Music Shed fund drive that followed, but it was only a drop in the bucket compared to the rumblings heard at subsequent meetings of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees. Long before the Shed's steel framework went up, Festival officials were having their headaches over the original plans, drawn by the noted architect, Eliel Saarinen, as well as the location on the Tanglewood property for the great auditorium.

* * *

MRS. GORHAM BROOKS, who gave the Tanglewood estate to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was made a member of the board of trustees of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival. A joint agreement had been reached by the two boards on policies to be followed at Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. took on the responsibility of conducting a fund drive for $100,000 to build the Music Shed. In spite of the fact that the Festival president, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith had raised $30,000 in cash and pledges Aug. 12, 1937, the night of the $100,000 storm in the tent at Tanglewood, there were many residents of the county who began to question the value to the community of the Festival.

* * *

MISS MABEL CHOATE of Stockbridge called a meeting at her home of these county residents, whose enthusiasm for the Festival plan lessened with the announcement of an expanded project.

Invited to answer questions about the Festival, Miss Robinson Smith explained the benefits of the project, apparently to the satisfaction of the group and the fund drive for the Music Shed [illegible] Sept. 15, 1937, as the deadline for final reports.

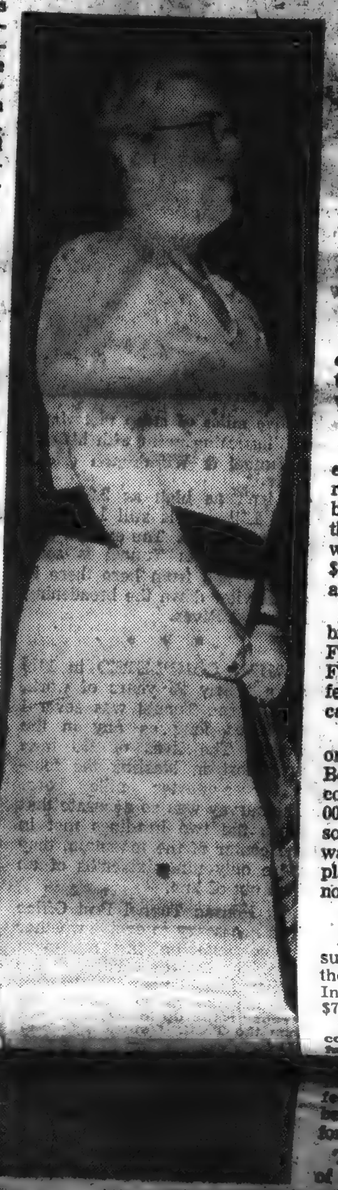
* * *

MEANTIME, Festival trustees and BSO representatives met informally at Stockbridge to discuss [illegible] and the location in the field, feeling that the simplicity and beauty of the location near the formal garden would be lost.

The board reviewed the actions of the building committee and voted against [illegible] tempt was made to have Saarinen modify his plans.

* * *

BIDS WERE sought on the last plans submitted by Saarinen but the figures were still too high. Joseph Franz, member of the board and an engineer in Stockbridge, was asked to secure several bids from contractors and Miss Robinson Smith presented



Four Workers Still on Duty After 20 Years

There are only four of the original volunteer workers at the first Festival concerts in 1934 still connected with the concert events at Tanglewood after 20 years.

They are Willard M. Sistare, who was named personnel manager of volunteer workers after the Shed was built; Mrs. Alexander J. Young, the former Martha Hick, who is in charge of program girls, David Cutler and Louis J. Plass, who assist as ticket takers at the gate. All are residents of Pittsfield.

architect had anticipated most of the modifications, but was strongly opposed to adding three columns in the pavilion. The architect informed Mr. Franz that if the committee decided to make this change he did not wish to be associated with the reconstruction project.

* * *

"HE WAS quite willing, however," Mr. Franz reported, "that the Berkshire Symphonic Festival should use his plans."

* * *

THE FESTIVAL board accepted Saarinen's resignation with regret, expressing to him the board's appreciation of his authorization to use his plans—for which he billed the Festival $4,000. He was paid immediately.

Satisfied that the Shed could be built with modified plans, the Festival board appointed Mr. Franz construction engineer at a fee of $1,000 and instructed him to call for new bids.

Asked to restudy the plans in order to keep down costs, the Bethlehem Steel Co. proposed to construct the steel work for $38,000 "if competitive bids are not sought." The building committee was authorized to go ahead with plans to build the Shed, the cost not to exceed $81,009.

* * *

AFTER SEVERAL bids were submitted, the Festival awarded the contract to Graves & Hemmes Inc. of Great Barrington for $77,768.

The proposed site for the Shed continued to be the subject of [illegible] were hauled out by bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

While workmen were riveting the framework of the Shed, 150,000 feet of firwood was on its way to Tanglewood from the West [illegible] through the Panama Canal, around to the Atlantic Coast and up to Albany. It took about two weeks to bring the entire load in 6,000-foot lots from Albany to Tanglewood.

within the scaled-down budget, Mr. Franz made the following additions which were not in the preliminary estimate: The stage and shell, tuning room, conductor's room, guest artists' room, rest [illegible] to the Shed and other buildings; electric lights for the Shed; sewage lines and eaves troughs.

Nine hundred fifteen square [illegible] of [illegible] began a project to help the school children of Berkshire County acquire a better understanding of great music.

[illegible] Festival allotted [illegible] tival board of trustees contributed $39,110 or 40.75 per cent of total amount raised, $78,132.30.

Eighty-one per cent [illegible] grounds.

"It is our conviction that music lovers who believe in the old

Babbitt

THE RESULTS of years of hard work by a small group of Berkshire residents who believed in the Festival idea introduced to the county by Dr. Henry Hadley in 1934, through Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, are illustrated in this aerial view of Tanglewood taken by Howard S. Babbitt Jr., former photographer

Music Appreciation Courses Popular In County Schools

TIGHT BINDING

TIGHT BINDING

announcement of an expanded project.

Invited to answer questions about the Festival, Miss Robinson Smith explained the benefits of the project, apparently to the satisfaction of the group and the 15, 1937, as the deadline for these reports.

* * *

MEANTIME, Festival trustees and BSO representatives met informally at Stockbridge to discuss the plans drawn by Saarinen. The Festival board informed the BSO trustees, Bentley W. Warren, Henry Sawyer and Edward Taft, that it would be impossible for the Berkshire organization to consider raising more than $100,000, and asked the BSO representatives if they were prepared to finance the future development of Tanglewood as sketched by Saarinen in his original drawings. The BSO trustees were unable to commit themselves at the time.

* * *

SAARINEN'S original plans for the Music Shed alone called for an expenditure of "several hundred thousand dollars," and the Festival officials had agreed to raise only $100,000. The architect was asked to make a plan which would not cost more than $100,000. Though skeptical about it, he agreed to give the matter careful study and report to the executive committee as soon as possible.

* * *

SAARINEN CAME to Tanglewood in November, 1937, to inspect the property. He felt strongly that the Shed should be erected in the field near the adjoining estate of Mrs. William Norton Bullard, but the BSO trustees favored erecting it on the site of the tent used for the 1937 series.

Director Koussevitzky agreed with his friend Saarinen about putting the Shed in the field. Finally, because the responsibility of building the Shed was the Festival's, the Festival board decided, with only two dissenting votes (George W. Edman and Henry W. Dwight) to place the auditorium on the site recommended by Saarinen.

* * *

ONE OF Mr. Saarinen's early estimates for the construction of the pavilion totaled $167,000. Additional items to complete the project brought the amount up to $232,000. After being asked to revise the plans, Mr. Saarinen reported he could bring the cost down to $125,000, but it would not include the expenses of plumbing, lighting, roads, parking space, etc.

By this time the Festival had raised $77,000 from only 675 contributors. The response was discouraging to the Festival officials. At one point the Festival was in danger of being abandoned. Board members considered a move to return contributions to the donors, but delayed formal action until a report was received from a special committee named to confer with BSO officials to see whether they would accept a building which could be erected with the funds on hand. The BSO trustees gave their approval and another at-

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith
"A Dream Comes True"

one from Marc Eidlitz & Son of New York.

* * *

TO REDUCE the cost of the building, elimination of certain features of the Shed was suggested at a meeting of the executive committee, which became the building committee.

Mr. Franz was authorized to go to Bloomfield Hills, Mich., with the modified plans to consult Saarinen. Major changes were placing three columns in the Shed to reduce the weight of the steel that was planned for the building, simplifying the steel structure by having 78 steel piers instead of 90, and substituting a wood deck on the roof instead of the gypsum block recommended by the architect.

Upon arriving in Bloomfield Hills, Mr. Franz learned that the submitted, the Festival awarded the contract to Graves & Hemmes Inc. of Great Barrington for $77,768.

The proposed site for the Shed continued to be the subject of simplicity and beauty of the location near the formal garden would be lost.

The board reviewed the actions of the building committee and voted again to "approve the erection of the type of building designed by Mr. Saarinen, except as modified by the use of three columns and that it be erected in the field east of the house."

* * *

GROUND WAS broken on Dec. 31, 1937. Frost at Tanglewood made digging through hardpan and clay a major problem for the workmen preparing the ground for the 78 steel piers. Each night they filled the holes with hay to keep the bottoms from freezing.

* * *

ON MARCH 12, 1938, the first carloads of steel started arriving from the Bethlehem Steel Co., a week ahead of schedule, and six days later the first rivet was driven.

Heavy thaws at Tanglewood made difficult the delivery of steel. The land was a sea of mud. Trucks carrying trusses—90 feet long and weighing 16 tons—became mired in the mud and were hauled out by bulldozers and other heavy equipment.

While workmen were riveting the framework of the Shed, 150,000 feet of firwood was on its way up to Albany. It took about two weeks to bring the entire load in 6,000-foot lots from Albany to Tanglewood.

* * *

DURING construction, many additions were made to the Shed. While carrying out the project around to the Albany

within the scaled-down budget, Mr. Franz made the following additions which were not in the preliminary estimate: The stage and shell, tuning room, conductor's electric lights for the Shed; sewage lines and eaves troughs.

Nine hundred fifteen square feet of floor space was added to the apex of the building so the stage could be set further back, and the seating capacity was increased.

* * *

BENCHES USED in the first year of the Festival in 1934 at the Hanna Farm and in 1935, 1936 and 1937 were placed in the Shed, but there weren't enough to fill the spacious auditorium. So Festival officials decided to place the benches in the rear of the box section and buy 3,016 chairs at a cost of $6,848 for the front section. Plans were made to add more chairs to the rear section the following year.

* * *

AS CONSTRUCTION neared an end, the Festival board engaged Prof. Richard Fay of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at a fee of $500 to study the acoustics in the Shed. After many tests were made, he recommended the installation of a sound re-

South Mountain Eliminated Conflict With Festival Events

When the Berkshire Symphonic Festival started expanding in 1938, scheduling concerts in the Music Shed on Thursday evening and Saturday and Sunday afternoons, Willem Willeke, the director of the South Mountain concerts in Pittsfield, changed his chamber-music concerts from Saturday afternoons to Friday afternoons. This co-operative move was typical of the rearrangements made by other cultural activities in the county to eliminate any conflict with Festival dates.

Music Appreciation Courses Popular

THE RESULTS of years of hard work by a small group of Berkshire residents who believed in the Festival idea introduced to the county by Dr. Henry Hadley in 1934, through Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, are illustrated in this aerial view the school children of Berkshire County acquire a better understanding of great music.

The Festival allotted $1,200 from its treasury to establish in the area schools a Layman's Music Course, given by Miss Harriet Johnson of New York through arrangements made by Miss Alice Riggs of Stockbridge. The idea was originated by Olga Samaroff Stokowski.

So great was the enthusiasm among school officials, that the Festival offered for a few years reserved seats in the Shed as prizes for children who won top honors in the courses.

flector at the rear of the pavilion to eliminate echoes.

The Music Shed was completed June 16, 1938, a month ahead of schedule. Now with a permanent auditorium for the summer concerts, the Festival board looked for its most successful season.

Through the efforts of Mr. Edman, chairman of the coordinating committee and publicity director of the Festival, the Shed and concert plans for 1938 received nationwide attention from newspapers, magazines and radio stations.

* * *

DR. KOUSSEVITZKY had added to the 1938 program, a chorus and soloists for the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. This helped build up the publicity for the first season in the Shed.

Enthusiasm was running high as the concert series approached, and practically every box was reserved weeks before the programs opened.

* * *

WHEN THE SHED was formally opened for the two series of weekend concerts on Aug. 4, 1938, Berkshire County residents had contributed to the building fund $52,724, of which $34,460 came from summer residents of Great Barrington, Lee, Lenox, uted $38,110 or 40.75 per cent of for total amount raised, $78,142.50.

Eighty-one per cent of the money collected came from donors within 50 miles of Stockbridge and 18 per cent came from contributors 50 miles or more from town.

* * *

AT THE SHED dedication on the night of Aug. 4, Miss Robinson Smith declared:

"Had a clairvoyant predicted five years ago today that the Berkshire Symphonic Festival would be inaugurating this great Music Shed, no one would have paid the least attention. It is, however, an inspiring reality. The residents of the Berkshires became intrigued with this idea and put their shoulders to the wheel to make it a success."

* * *

SHE POINTED out, however, that much remained to be done. She explained the need of $58,000 to carry out essential improvements such as steel roller curtains to close in the Shed against

Trades Council Placed Shed Job On 'Unfair List'

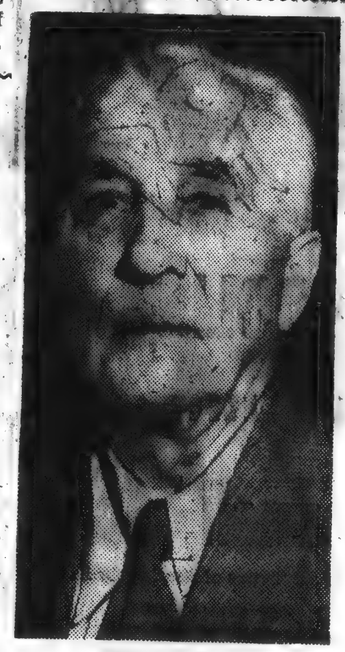
The Pittsfield Building and Construction Trades Council stepped into the picture at Tanglewood March 30, 1938, when ercetion of the Music Shed was under way. The council placed the project on the "unfair list" before the contractors, Graves & Hemmes of Great Barrington, agreed to unionize the job. At the same time, the council tied up in Albany the shipment of 150,000 feet of lumber for the roof of the Shed until the contractors came to an agreement with the trades council.

Ward Gaston At Tanglewood Nearly 25 Years

Ward Gaston, who maintains the attractive natural beauty of Tanglewood, will be rounding out 25 years on the estate next year. He succeeded the late Alexander MacConachie as superintendent of the Tappan estate.

Each summer he has a crew of workmen "manicuring" the spacious lawns and keeping the formal gardens an attractive background for operas or sculpture exhibits.

When Dr. Koussevitzky was musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Supt. Gaston had the honor of escorting the maestro from his nearby estate to the Music Shed. Mr. Gaston's lead car had a special horn so that all and sundry would know that the impressario was arriving.



Joseph Franz
He adapted Saarinen's plans grounds.

"It is our conviction that music lovers who believe in the old American tradition of individual support of culture in America will help us in the future and help us now," she declared.

Miss Robinson Smith introduced the president of the trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Bentley W. Warren, a summer resident of Williamstown, who lauded the Festival group for "its foresight, energy and success in making available this adequate and admirable auditorium."

* * *

MR. WARREN announced: "It is the hope of our conductor—a hope, I am happy to say, shared by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival and the Boston Symphony Orchestra—that the annual Festival may be supplemented by a school or academy holding annual sessions, preceding the concerts themselves, and devoted to the cultivation of the highest standards in the work of orchestral conductors, choral leaders and separate instrumentalists. Tanglewood is the ideal location for such a school."

* * *

THUS THE DIE was cast. The Berkshire Symphonic Festival had developed an idea into one of the great musical centers of the world.

Dr. Henry Hadley's dream of concerts "under the moon" back in 1934, and Dr. Koussevitzky's dream of a music center for students at Tanglewood both became realities beyond all expectations, thanks to the perseverance and determination of a volunteer group of Berkshire residents who were able to overcome all sorts of obstacles to make the Festival idea a success.

As time went on, and more and more decisions had to be made by the two boards in the joint operation of Tanglewood, it was obvious the Festival couldn't serve two masters. On Oct. 5, 1945, the Boston Symphony Orchestra was given the $100,000 Music Shed, giving with the building "entire control and management of future Festivals."

* * *

ALTHOUGH INACTIVE since 1945, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc. is still in existence.

At next Friday night's Tanglewood on Parade program, the president, Miss Robinson Smith, will be honored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in recognition of her leadership, enthusiasm and vision in helping create and develop the great musical center.

Sharing the spotlight with her will be the board of trustees of the Festival.

As she looks back today on the early history of the Festival, Miss Robinson Smith pays tribute "to the trustees who are no longer with us," stating that

Tanglewood
Continued on Page 21

THE SHED IN 1938, with its lone box office in the field and a wooden fence surrounding it, stands as a memorial to the efforts of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival officials and workers who turned the great auditorium over to the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1945.

300 TONS OF STEEL went into the Music Shed at Tanglewood. The contractors, Graves & Hemmes of Great Barrington, working with the Berkshire Symphonic Festival's construction engineer, Joseph Franz, started Dec. 31, 1937, and finished June 16, 1938—a month early.

Tanglewood

Continued from Twentieth Page

"their inspiration, generosity and belief in the Festival idea from the beginning, helped to make the Festival what it is today."

* * *

DURING HER last nine summers in France, Miss Robinson Smith attended many of the European music festivals, but she is still enthusiastic about the Berkshire Symphonic Festival.

She is happy to be back in the Berkshires among her many friends to enjoy once again concerts "under the moon" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its great conductor, Charles Munch.

THE FESTIVAL idea, born 20 years ago, has grown into one of the greatest musical events in the world, thanks to the zeal of Miss Robinson Smith, who spearheaded the drive and brought fame to the Berkshires.

Statistics prove her idea was right. The cold, hard figures of the box office show a steady, solid gain down through the years. The music-loving public, whose interest or lack of it decides whether a dream such as the Berkshire Symphonic Festival is to become a reality, has made up its mind. And the answer is yes.

Same Old Shell

The shell in the Music Shed at Tanglewood is basically the same structure that was built for the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival concert at the Hanna Farm in 1934. After being used at the Hanna estate in 1934 and 1935, it was moved to Holmwood for the 1936 concerts, and then to Tanglewood in 1937 for the program under a tent. When the Shed was built, Joseph Franz, moved the shell into the great auditorium, where experts have marveled for years over its acoustic perfection.

Mozart, Stravinsky Program Features Foss and Lipkin

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

LUKAS FOSS chose a program of unusual interest for the concert he conducted in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night. A major half of his program was Mozart, to adhere to the flexible limits of the Friday evening concerts which originated as the Bach-Mozart series. The other composer from whom he played was Stravinsky—his ballet music, "Pulcinella" on themes of Pergolesi.

"Pulcinella" was one of the pieces which blossomed in the first decades of this century in the glamorous era of Diaghileff, the promoter of ballet whose imagination inspired and encouraged so many great musical ventures. He found the music of Pergolesi in a forgotten corner of a Napolitan library and brought it to Stravinsky to refurbish. He asked Massine to prepare the ballet, Picasso the costumes and decor. Stravinsky took the two-century-old comedy of Pergolesi on the amorous adventures of the fictitious character which Naples zealously claimed as her own and set it for vocal soloists and chorus, for an orchestra with the principals of the five string divisions serving as a string quintet of instrumental soloists.

* * *

ANYONE WHO gave his program only cursory attention would be prompted to turn back to it after hearing one or two of the short sections of the work, which, of course, last night was given without dance or stage setting to check the composer's identity. It is strange Stravinsky but wonderful Pergolesi, and if anyone were not aware that this was a revivication, he would be bewildered indeed. The music proceeds in true very early 18th century style and then Stravinsky inserts a sly and witty touch of his own, an harmonic addition here, a rhythmic distortion there.

The soloists were Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; and McHenry Boatwright, bass. They caught the youthful spirit of the evening which Foss dominated. He injected a fresh and buoyant vim into the whole program which was reflected by every one of the soloists and the collaborative factors.

SEYMOUR LIPKIN had a quite different and more rewarding opportunity in the Mozart B flat piano concerto than he did in the left-handed Ravel of last year. As usual with this young artist, he submerged his own role for the success of the larger picture. His piano playing suits us too much to warrant the recession of the solo in the final allegro into the orchestral background. The brilliant opening allegro was given an ebullient infusion of gusto and a confident command of the keyboard. Foss and Lipkin [illegible] perfect agreement on the tempo of this most beautiful of the Mozart concertos and the accompaniment was not only a wonderful support but a model of coherent understanding.

* * *

THE FINAL HALF of the program was devoted to excerpts from Mozart's "Idomeneo," which saw its first American total performance as an opera on this same stage in 1947 by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center. Foss had the assistance last night, in the order they sang, of Charlotte Green as Elektra, Marvin Worden as Idomeneo, Miss Sarafaty, again as Idamante, and Charlotte Holloman as Ilia. The chorus of students of the Berkshire Music Center and choral enthusiasts of Tanglewood were fortified by an additional group of 21 boys from the neighboring summer school, the Indian Hill music workshop.

It was very apparent to all that Foss had chosen this as well as his whole program, because it is music he loves. He played and conducted it that way. Without implying the contrary to be true, he did not conduct in a stuffy, dignified way but he made music in the intimate spirit of asking his audience to enjoy with him beauties he recognized and which he wanted everyone to share with him.

* * *

The 400 students of the Berkshire Music Center have their final get-together on Monday evening at Wheatleigh, the male students' dormitory. The students' "Berlioz Ball" is for the benefit of the Student Council Emergency Fund, which assists needy students.

* * *

A hasty call for two bass trumpets, an uncommon instrument not needed for ordinary orchestral works, was put out last week by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for the Berkshire Festival's concluding performance, the Berlioz "Requiem," which will have the assistance of the students' Festival Chorus, 50 voices from the Springfield Symphony Orchestra Chorus, and four brass bands. Although the Boston Symphony owns two—one is played by Gerard Goguen, fourth trumpeter, when occasion demands—two others had to be supplied. They came from the Pittsburgh and Chicago symphony orchestras.

Saturday, August 14

Tanglewood

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 10 a.m. Rehearsal.
Dept. I Orchestra, Shed, 3 p.m. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch.
"Tragic Overture" Brahms
Symphony No. 4 Piston
"Le Tombeau de Couperin" Ravel
Symphony No. 3 (with organ) Saint-Saens

South Mountain

Juilliard Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
String Quartet No. 2 William Denny
Quartet in G, Op. 54, No. 2 Haydn
String Quartet No. 1 Benjamin Lees
Quartet in F major Ravel

Sunday, August 15

Tanglewood

Chamber Music, Theater-Concert Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Charles Munch, conductor. In memory of Serge Koussevitzky.
"Requiem" with Festival Chorus and soloist Berlioz

One Act Opera Tuesday Night At Tanglewood

Gounod's one-act opera, "Le Medecin Malgre Lui" (The Doctor in Spite of Himself), which will be presented in the formal gardens at Tanglewood on Parade by students of the Berkshire Music Center's opera department, for boxholders and holders of reserved seats Friday at 4 p.m., will be given first for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center on Tuesday's program of choral works and opera scenes, at 8:30 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall. It has been produced and staged by Morton Siegel, who has been assistant stage director of the opera department at the Juilliard School of Music, New York, in an English adaptation and translation from the original French libretto by Mr. Siegel. At the conclusion of the Tanglewood season Mr. Siegel departs to Munich, Germany, to work at the Staatsoper under a recently-won Fulbright Fellowship.

* * *

On Tuesday's program of chorus and opera at Tanglewood, the associate division of the opera department, assisted by instrumentalists of the Tanglewood Study Group, will present Act II of Monteverdi's "Orfeo," first performed in 1607, staged and conducted by Ludwig Zirner and using unit costumes, courtesy of the University of Illinois, by Laura Zirner.

* * *

An unscheduled event at Tanglewood, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, is a program of opera scenes by students of Frederic Cohen's opera department, from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall on Thursday. The program will consist of Zerbinetta's solo from Richard Strauss' opera, "Ariadne auf Naxos" (1912) which the Tanglewood opera department presented complete in 1949; the duet of Arabella and Zdenka from Act I of Strauss' "Arabella," (1933) in the new English translation by John Gutman, assistant manager of the Metropolitan Opera, which will be used when the Met gives the U.S. premiere of the work next season, by special permission of Mr. Gutman; the quartet from Mozart's "Idomeneo"; the sleep-walking scene from Verdi's "Macbeth"; in memory of the late French novelist Colette, a scene from Ravel's opera, "L'Enfante et Les Sortileges" for which she wrote the libretto; and the entire third act of Verdi's "Don Carlo."

Tanglewood's opera department's final performance of the summer will be its program at 6 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall for Tanglewood on Parade patrons, of Act III from Puccini's "La Boheme," a repetition of the scene from "Arabella" by Strauss; and a repetition of its "Hin und Zurueck" (There and Back) by Paul Hindemith.

* * *

Tanglewood on Parade will also have, at 6 p.m. in the Music Shed, the final concert by the student symphony orchestra, which has been prepared this year by Jean Morel. Henry Janiec will conduct Bizet's "L'Arlesienne" Suite No. 1; Paul Vermel will be on the podium for Mozart's Symphony in D major ("Haffner"); Samuel Krachmalnick will lead the orchestra in Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole" for Violin and Orchestra, Opus 21, with Tiberius Klausner as soloist, and in excerpts from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

Sculptures in ironwood by Mrs. Louis Speyer, of Boston, wife of the English horn player of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are being added to the final week's art exhibition, arranged through the courtesy of the Berkshire Museum at the Reception Hall by the Main Gate at Tanglewood. Likenesses of Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, of conductor Pierre Monteux and other musicians are in the exhibit. A recently completed etching of Charles Munch by the noted Maryland artist, Arthur Heintzelman, will also be on display.

Tomorrow

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Chamber Music Hall, 10 a.m. Dept. I. Friends program.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Shed, 2:30 p.m. Conductor, Charles Munch; soloist, Zino Francescatti.
Overture to "Alceste" Gluck
Violin Concerto Beethoven
Symphony No. 2 Brahms
Composers' Forum, Chamber Music Hall, 8:30 p.m. Dept. III. Friends program.

Music Mountain

Berkshire Quartet, 4:00 p.m.
Guest artists, Alice Howland, mezzo-soprano; Elizabeth Phillips, viola; Sidney Edwards, cello.
E-flat Quartet Mozart
Songs for Mezzo-Soprano and Violin Obbligato Brahms
"Il Tramonto" Respighi
G Major Sextet Brahms

Monday, August 9

Berkshire Playhouse

"The Iron Gate"

Israeli Benefit

Jewish Community Center, Pittsfield, 8:30 p.m.
Lukas Foss, Walter Rubin, Catherine Akos, Richard Burgin, Jean Bedetti, Ralph Berkowitz. Works by Foss, Bernstein, Schubert, Mendelssohn.

Tuesday, August 10

Malden Bridge Playhouse

Opening night, performances every evening through Sunday. Curtain time 8:45 p.m. except Sunday at 7 p.m.

"The Love of Four Colonels"

Tanglewood

Concert of Chorus and Opera, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Departments II and IV. Friends program.

Folk-Music Workshop

Festival Concert, Lenox Library, 8:30 p.m. Betty MacDonald, soprano; Jerry Silverman, singer-guitarist.

"From the Pastures of Ireland to the Appalachian Mountains."

Wednesday, August 11

Tanglewood

Chamber music, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Zino Francescatti, violinist; Artur Balsan, pianist.
Violin Sonata in A major Brahms
Suite No. 3 (Violin unaccompanied) Bach
Violin Sonata in D Minor Brahms

Jacob's Pillow

Dance Festival. Opens tonight for four days. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday evenings at 9 p.m.; Thursday, Friday, Saturday matinees at 4 p.m.
Celtic Ballet of Scotland.
Ram Gopal, Hindu dancer.

Thursday, August 12

Tanglewood

Chamber Orchestra, Theater-Concert Hall, 8:30 p.m. Conductor, Jean Morel.
Overture to "Scala di Seta" Rossini
Symphony in B flat K.319 Mozart
"Mother Goose" Suite Ravel
"Der Burger als Edelmann" Strauss

Friday, August 13

Tanglewood

Tanglewood on Parade.
4:00—Opera Scenes
6:00—Department Demonstrations
8:15—Concert, Boston Symphony Orchestra
Symphony [illegible] Bizet
Salome" (Final scene) Strauss
Brenda Lewis, soprano, soloist Boston Pops Orchestra. Arthur Fiedler, conductor.

Lenox 'Respectfully Requests' Visitors To Dress Properly

LENOX—The Selectmen here decided this week to post notices asking summer visitors to be properly dressed when they appear on local streets.

The decision followed receipt from a local woman of a letter which culminated several complaints received by the Selectmen during the past few weeks. The letter was addressed to R. Harry Barnes, chairman of the board, by Mrs. Charles F. Bassett of Sundrum, Kemble Street.

"I wonder if you and the other members of the board realize," the letter asks, "the appalling condition of our town, which for the past three or four years has become . . . noticeably worse owing to the influx of men and women who profess to be music lovers.

"I am not in any way referring to the fine class of those attending the music school at Tanglewood," the letter emphasizes.

"I am a property owner and lover of Lenox, but I am heartsick at the truly disgusting sights on our streets; such as the lack of clothes on old and young . . . May I add that I am not alone in my desire to have some decency in our lovely town. Music lovers from away are also greatly appalled by the freedom and lack of decency . . ."

The Selectmen decided that in view of the fact that they agree with Mrs. Bassett and have received similar complaints from other townspeople, something should be done about the situation. They decided the best thing would be to "respectfully request" visitors to dress properly as "they are probably aware" of the way so many townspeople feel about the situation.

. . . It was typical of George Judd that he should fight shy of any special spotlight on his own retirement and insist on being considered just another member of the orchestra now than it did 10 years ago. The virtual impossibility of avoiding a picture of Lukas Foss in last night's Eagle (there were three of them) leads to the thought [illegible] and his Tanglewood colleagues [illegible] extremely generous in donating their time and talents to Berkshire [illegible]. The Stockbridge Bowl [illegible] concert, tomorrow's benefit with McHenry Boatwright and George Green for the Interlaken Church organ fund, [illegible] concert Monday night in Pittsfield are just a sampling of their contributions.

Tanglewood Tales

Informal Concert At Chamber Hall

Monday afternoon at 4:30 an informal chamber music concert will be held in the chamber music hall for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The program:

Sonata in E minor for Violin and Piano, K. 304 ..... Mozart
Allegro.
Judith Heinz, violin.
Patricia McCraw, piano.

Kleine Suite ..... Kauder
Preludium.
Danse.
Melodie.
Rondo (Canon).
Joseph Andreucci, trumpet.
Donald Benedetti, trumpet.
Janet Cardwell, French horn.
Catherine Ameer, French horn.
Raymond Orcutt, trombone.
Joseph Moore, trombone.
Norman Bernstein, trombone.
Constance Weldon, tuba.

Sonata in G minor for Violin and Piano, Opus 30, No. 2 ..... Beethoven
Allegro con brio.
Richard Elias, violin.
Mary deCsepel, piano.

String Quartet in F major, Opus 96, Dvorak
Allegro ma non troppo.
William Keller, violin.
Alice Handelman, violin.
Anthony Ginter, viola.
Louise Hazen, violoncello.

Trio for Horn, Trumpet and Trombone, Poulenc
Allegro moderato.
Andante.
Rondeau.
John Minkoff, trumpet.
Wilbur Kaslick, trombone.
David Allan, French horn.

Small Choir Concert Tuesday Evening

The first concert by the small choir of Department II and the active and associate divisions of Department 4 of the Berkshire Music Center will be held Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the theater-concert hall.

The choir program follows:

Missa a Quatro Voci da Cappella, Monteverdi
Kyrie.
Gloria.
Sara Holroyd, Conductor.
Sanctus.
Benedictus.
Agnus Dei.
Coleridge Taylor Perkinson, Conductor.

Five Songs on Old Text ..... Hindemith
Of Household Rule.
Gloria B. Jerjisian, Conductor.
Lady's Lament.
True Love.
Ruth Jane O'Keefe, Conductor.
Troopers' Drinking Song.
The Devil a Monk Would Be.
Jan Toon DeJong, Conductor.

Two Madrigals ..... Gesualdo
Horo Lasso al mio Duelo.
Peter Re, Conductor.
Itene o mici Sospiri.
Saul Lilienstein, Conductor.

Songs of Nature ..... Dvorak
Melodies Steal Into My Heart.
Vesper Bells Ring.
John G. McKay Jr., Conductor.
This Day.
Oscar Warren Conner, Conductor.

Three Shakespeare Songs, Vaughan Williams
Full Fathom Five.
The Cloud-Capp'd Towers.
Over Hill, Over Dale.
Richard McKinley Renfro, Conductor.

Magnificat ..... C. P. E. Bach
Magnificat.
Chorus.
Quia respexit,
Reri Lorraine Grist, soprano.
Et misericordia,
Chorus.
Fecit potentiain,
Malcolm G. Bernstein, bass.
Suscepit Israel,
Joan Evelyn Hagen, alto.
Gloria Patri,
Chorus.
Sicut Erat,
Chorus.
James Aliferis, Conductor.

BSO Violinist Soloist Tomorrow

LEE—A soloist at the Congregational Church tomorrow will be Vladimer Resnikoff, violinist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Judy Vohr, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred H. Vohr of Park St., will be organist.

All-Berlioz Program at Festival Tonight; Francescatti Is Violin Soloist Tomorrow

Brook
Rehearsing this morning at the public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Charles Munch, right, directs the BSO, while Zino Francescatti plays Beethoven's Violin Concerto which will be featured on the Festival program at tomorrow afternoon's concert.

TANGLEWOOD—An all-Berlioz program, honoring the 150th anniversary season of the composer's birth, will be given in the Music Shed tonight at 8:30 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. Featured in the first performance at the Berkshire Festival of Berlioz' song cycle, "Summer Nights," for soprano and orchestra will be soloist Eleanor Steber.

The Berlioz program also will include "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans" and the "Te Deum," with tenor David Poleri as soloist with the Festival chorus, prepared by High Ross and Lorna Cooke De Varon.

The choir of the Berkshire Music Center students will be augmented by a children's chorus of 40 boys, aged 9 to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac at Stockbridge Bowl, who have been trained by Mrs. De Varon and Joseph Kruger, camp director; and a chorus of 44 girls, aged 13 to 18, from Indian Hill Music Workshop in Stockbridge, who have been trained by David L. Buttolph, a former Berkshire Music Center pupil.

Leads Busy Life

Miss Steber, who sang on July 10 in the Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust" which opened the Music Shed concerts this season, has just returned from engagements in Chicago, two performances at the Hollywood Bowl, recitals in California and appearances at the Red Rocks Festival in Denver, Colo. Coming to Tanglewood from New York where she was guest artist on the Telephone Hour broadcast Monday, Aug. 2, Miss Steber has been re-engaged to appear at the Florence (Italy) Maggio Musicale in 1955 following her season at the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York

Performing three times at the 1954 Berkshire Festival, David Poleri sang the title role in the July 10 performance of "The Damnation of Faust" and will be heard again on the final Festival concert, Aug. 15, in the Berlioz "Requiem" in addition to his performance in tonight's "Te Deum." Mr. Poleri, a native of Philadelphia, was a student of the Berkshire Music Center before joining the New York City Opera Company where he has appeared in the major tenor roles. He has also had national concert tours and European engagements.

Donates Services to Center

Zino Francescatti makes the first of two Berkshire Festival appearances when he plays the Beethoven Violin Concerto tomorrow afternoon. On Wednesday evening, donating his services to the Berkshire Music Center, he gives the final chamber music concert of the season in a theater-concert hall recital. Born in Marseilles, France, in 1905, Mr. Francescatti made his first public appearance at five and at 10 gave his first public performance of the same concerto he plays tomorrow at Tanglewood.

After his formal debut with the Orchestra of the Concerts del Conservatoire in Paris and a successful career in Europe and South America, Mr. Francescatti made his United States debut with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra in 1939. Since that time he has toured the United States some 15 times and appeared with every major orchestra in the country. A true cosmopolite, with annual tours in Europe at the major festivals and recital centers, Mr. Francescatti with his wife, the former Yolande Potel de la Briere, a professional violinist who gave up her career to further his, live in Monterey.

Tickets for all Festival concerts are on sale at the Tanglewood box office and reservations may be made by telephoning Tanglewood.

Manos
'JUST ANOTHER' retiring member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was the way George E. Judd, center, the BSO manager for 40 years, described himself at a luncheon given in honor of Mr. Judd and two string players of the orchestra on the Tanglewood grounds yesterday. A special gift to Mr. Judd, here being presented by orchestra personnel manager, Rosario Mazzeo, second from left, was a leather bound record album containing the only copy of the BSO's final program of its 73rd season in Symphony Hall on May 1, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The special edition of one record included the gold-plated master from which it was made. At left is Leon Gorodetzky, retiring violinist, and at extreme right, Georges Fourel, violist. Between him and Mr. Judd is Charles Munch, BSO director.

[292]

TANGLEWOOD IN THE BERKSHIRES

IN THE MOOD
. . . for an all-Beethoven concert were the thousands of people who thronged the Tanglewood grounds.

Springfield Republican Rotophotos by Krause

One of the greatest musical events of the world, the Berkshire Music Festival annually attracts multitudes of music lovers to Tanglewood, Lenox, where the music of the great composers may be heard lingering over the hills on starlit nights and sunny Sunday afternoons. The current season of the annual Tanglewood concerts will come to an end on August 15, but memories of an outstanding series of programs will dwell in the hearts of music lovers who will preserve nostalgic memories of the concerts they attended. Such memories will include Tanglewood interludes like those photographically depicted in this roto feature.

Aug. 8

CONCERT MAESTRO
-Right-
Pierre Monteux was greeted with thunderous applause as he mounted the conductor's platform.

LAST MINUTE INSPECTION
. . . of his attire was made by distinguished conductor Pierre Monteux a few minutes before concert time.

GUEST SOLOIST
. . . Claudio Arrau, posed for this informal backstage camera study.

READY FOR ACTION
-Left-
Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tuned their instruments as they awaited the on-stage arrival of conductor Pierre Monteux.

Boston Herald
Aug. 8

DAVID POLELLI, tenor soloist in the Berlioz "Requiem" which will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug15, in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

[293]

TANGLEWOOD IN THE BERKSHIRES

IN THE MOOD
. . . for an all-Beethoven concert were the thousands of people who thronged the Tanglewood grounds.

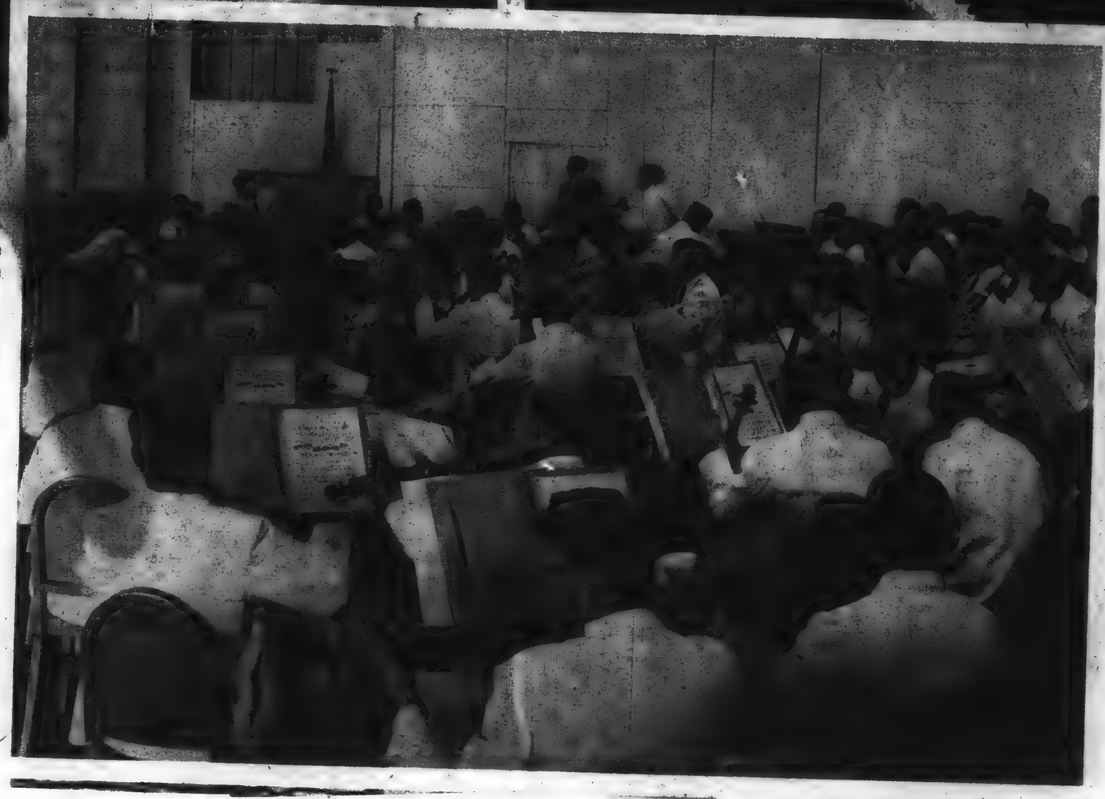
Springfield Republican
Rotophotos by Krause

. . . ents of the . . . the Berkshire Music Festival annually attracts multitudes of music lovers to Tanglewood, Lenox, where the music of the great composers may be heard lingering over the . . . on starlit nights . . . Sunday afternoons. . . . of the annual Tanglewood concerts will come to an end August 15, but memories of an outstanding series of programs will dwell in the hearts of music lovers who will preserve nostalgic memories of the concerts they attended. Such memories will include Tanglewood interludes like those photographically depicted in this roto feature.

Aug. 8

CONCERT MAESTRO
-Right-
Pierre Monteux was greeted with thunderous applause as he mounted the conductor's platform.

LAST MINUTE INSPECTION
. . . of his attire was made by distinguished conductor Pierre Monteux a few minutes before concert time.



GUEST SOLOIST
. . . Claudio Arrau posed for this informal backstage camera study.

READY FOR ACTION
-Left-
Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra tuned their instruments as they awaited the on-stage arrival of conductor Pierre Monteux.

DAVID POLLEY, tenor soloist in the Berlioz "Requiem" which will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug15, in memory of Serge Koussevitsky.

SOLID COMFORT

. . . was the general idea as concert-goers enjoyed lunches and exchanged program notes before the afternoon program began.

BIRD'S—EYE—VIEW

-Right-
. . . of a trio of relaxed, barefooted music lovers was photographed on the spacious lawn outside the music shell.

FASHION TREND

Bermuda shorts, said to be the coming thing in mens' summer fashions, were modeled by many male music lovers.

CONCERT CELEBRITIES

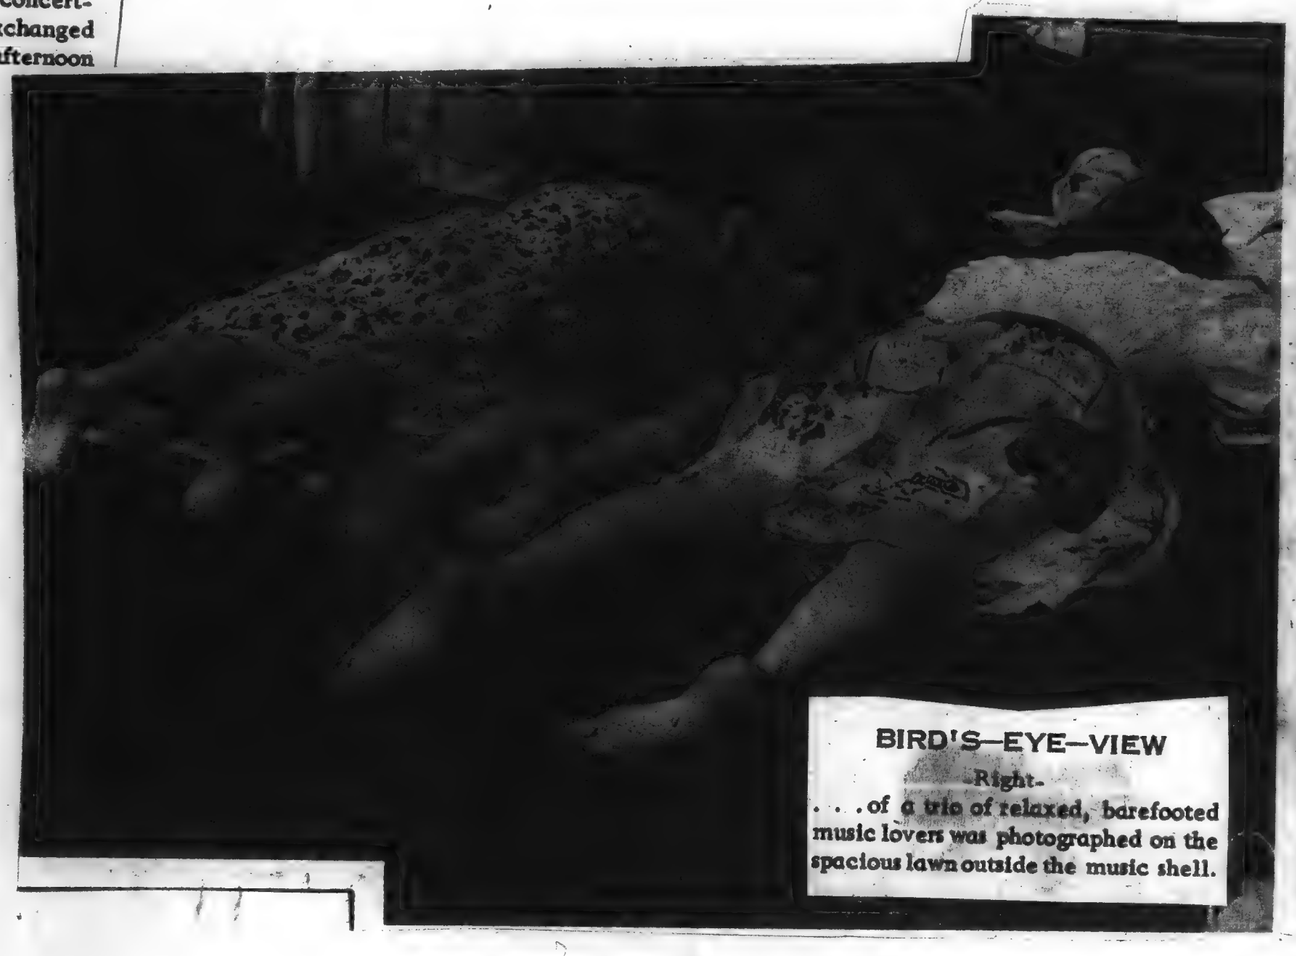
n foreground, left to right, are: Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder of the Berkshire festivals Charles Munch, celebrated conductor; and Pierre Beique, manager of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

PORTRAIT GROUP

These members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assembled at the rear of the music shell to pose for an official portrait. They were still waiting for the photographer when this roto photo was taken.

SOLID COMFORT

. . . was the general idea as concert-goers enjoyed lunches and exchanged program notes before the afternoon program began.



BIRD'S—EYE—VIEW

Right-
. . . of a trio of relaxed, barefooted music lovers was photographed on the spacious lawn outside the music shell.

FASHION TREND

Bermuda shorts, said to be the coming thing in mens' summer fashions, were modeled by many male music lovers.

CONCERT CELEBRITIES

In foreground, left to right, are: Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder of the Berkshire festivals; Charles Munch, celebrated conductor; and Pierre Beique, manager of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra.

PORTRAIT GROUP

These members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra assembled at the rear of the music shell to pose for an official portrait. They were still waiting for the photographer when this roto photo was taken.

PASTORAL SETTING of Tanglewood, site of the annual Berkshire festival, encourages a leisurely enjoyment of music. This week end the festival completes its fifth week of concerts. Next Friday, "Tanglwood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music center will take place featuring the student orchestra, the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops orchestra, as part of the sixth and final festival week end. Claremont N.H. Eagle.

PRIVATE REHEARSAL

This musician entertained his family with a private concert just before the Boston Symphony Orchestra prepared to assemble. Left to right, are: Martin Hoberman, celloist, Amy Bernard, Mrs. Albert Y. Bernard, Eve, and Mr. Bernard.

Berkshire Festival Enters Fifth Week at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6 — The fifth week of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, includes a program of Stravinsky and Mozart performed by a chamber orchestra of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Lukas Foss guest conductor and Seymour Lipkin piano soloist, this evening in the Theatre-Concert hall; an all-Berlioz program by the full 104-piece Boston Symphony orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, conducting, including Tanglewood premieres of the "Summer Nights" song cycle with Eleanor Steber as soprano soloist and of the "Te Deum" with David Poleri as tenor soloist and Willem Frisco Frank, organ soloist, on Saturday evening in the music shed; and the Boston Symphony orchestra, in a program of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms, Sunday afternoon in the music shed, Mr. Munch conducting, Zino Francescatti violin soloist.

Mr. Foss, who is a teacher of composition and who heads the Tanglewood study group division of the Berkshire Music center will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra chamber orchestra in its first performance of "Pulcinella", ballet with song in one act, by Igor Stravinsky, after Pergolesi, with Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor; McHenry Poatwright, bass, as soloists. Another Tanglewood premiere on this program will be the excerpts from Mozart's opera, "Idomeneo" (which had its American premiere by the Berkshire Music center's opera department at Tanglewood in 1947), with soloists Marvin Worden, tenor, and Theresa Green, Regina Sarfaty and Charlotte Holloman, sopranos; 50 voices of the Festival chorus of Berkshire Music center students, supplemented by 18 boys from Indian Hill Workshop, Stockbridge, trained by David L. Buttolph and Harold Aks.

"Summer Nights"

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening Festival concert, one of his programs this summer in honor of the 150th aniversary season of the birth of Hector Berlioz, will mark first performances by the Boston Symphony orchestra of the six 'Summer Nights" songs after Theophile Gautier which Miss Steber has previously performed with the New York Symphony orchestra.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Friday evening concert will be moved to the music shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance.

An added attraction for Festival patrons is the organ recital at 3 p. m., Saturday in the music shed, by E. Power Biggs. Mr. Biggs' program consists of Antonio Soler: Double Concerto No. 3, in G; J. S. Bach: Fantasia and Fugue in C minor; Louis Claude Daquin: Three Noels with Variations; Anthony Donato: Two Pastels; Jehan Alain: Litanies.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL IS IN ITS FINAL WEEK

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at 24 concerts, an expected 10,000 next Friday at Tanglewood on Parade, and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, concludes its 1954 schedule in the coming week. One hundred and seventy-five persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision to enlarge the annual summer festival.

What Final Week Offers

The sixth and final week of festival concerts comprises a recital by Zino Francescatti, violinist, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall; a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and Munch leading the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requiem", in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, next Sunday in the Music Shed.

Parade of Stars at Tanglewood

Featured on the "Tanglewood On Parade" program, scheduled for Friday, the 13th, will be (left to right) Brenda Lewis, lovely soprano star of opera and Broadway; Arthur Fiedler, who will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in its first appearance at Tanglewood; and Thomas Schippers, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, who will return to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the benefit program for the Center.

Scotland's Celtic Ballet Visits Tanglewood

Ted Shawn (light suit, center), director of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival and the Celtic Ballet of Scotland of which Margaret Morris (center, rear) is founder and director are welcomed to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by Boston Symphony Orchestra's music director, Charles Munch (dark suit, center) who conducts at the Edinburgh (Scotland) Festival next month.

Zino Francescatti Will Be Tanglewood Soloist Today

Celebrated Violinist to Appear in Beethoven Concerto; Program Conducted by Munch Will Also Include Gluck Overture and Brahms Symphony

Lenox, Aug. 7—Zino Francescatti, celebrated violinist, will be the soloist tomorrow afternoon in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, appearing in the Beethoven violin concerto in D major, Opus 61. The other featured work on the program to be conducted by Charles Munch, which is to open with Gluck's Overture to "Alceste," will be the Symphony No. 2 by Johannes Brahms.

Final Week Reached

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts comprises a recital by Francescatti, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall, and a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Mr. Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed.

ZINO FRANCESCATTI

Mr. Munch will lead the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requeim," in memory of Serge Koussevitzky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday, the 15th in the Music Shed. Mr. Francescatti, summering at nearby Monterey, is donating his recital on Wednesday to the Berkshire Music Center. Arthur Balsam is his accompanist. Mr. Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Music Center this summer, makes his second appearance on the podium for a Festival concert, featuring two works new to Tanglewood audiences, the Overture to "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), the short opera Rossini composed at the age of 20, and Richard Strauss' suite "Der Burger als Edelmann" (Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme) arranged from his incidental music to Moliere's play.

Mr. Munch's Saturday evening concert also has two Tanglewood premieres; Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the University of Minneapolis in 1951, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in which E. Power Biggs is organ soloist.

When Berlioz' "Requiem" which had its Tanglewood premiere in 1952, is repeated as the Festival's final concert Sunday, again under Mr. Munch's direction, it will conclude the conductor's performance this summer in their complete form of "The Damnation of Faust," "Romeo and Juliet," the "Harold in Italy" and "Fantastic" Symphonies the "Summer Nights" song cycle, and the "Te Deum," in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the French composer.

The majestic "Requiem" will have the assistance of David Poleri, tenor soloist, a chorus of 200 voices of students of the choral and opera departments of the Berkshire Music Center augmented by the chorus of the Springfield Symphony Association, and four brass bands totalling 36 players.

Evening concerts are at 8:30 p. m., the Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 p. m. In the event of rain the Thursday evening chamber orchestra program will be moved to the Music Shed. General admission to the grounds, enabling overflow crowds to hear the concerts from the spacious Tanglewood lawns, are placed on sale on the day of the performance and Festival patrons are invited to a public rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Saturday (August 14) at 10 a. m., at the nominal charge of $1 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Week end music lovers are invited to subscribe to "Tanglewood on Parade" on Friday. The annual benefit for the orchestra's music school, now completing its 12th season, which provides opportunity for ensemble performance and musical instruction under expert musicians for some 400 students from 35 states in the U. S. and 12 foreign lands, is from 6 p. m. to 11 p. m. It will commence with demonstrations by all departments—student symphony orchestra, chamber music, chorus and opera, followed by a gala concert in the Music Shed and concluding with the drawing of door prizes and waltzing on the lawn.

Thomas Schippers will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in symphonic music of Bizet and the final scene of Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis as soloist; and Arthur Fiedler will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical program. The complete programs are:

Wednesday, August 11, 8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Music: Brahms: Violin Sonata in A major; Bach: Suite in C (violin unaccompanied) Brahms: Violin Sonata in D minor. Zino Francescatti, Violin—Arthur Balsam, Piano.

Thursday, August 12, 8:30 p. m.—Theatre-Concert Hall, Chamber Orchestra: Rossini: Overture to "Scala di Seta"; Mozart: Symphony in B flat K. 319; Ravel: "Mother Goose" Suite; Strauss: "Der Burger als Edelmann". Jean Morel, conductor.

Friday, August 13, Tanglewood on parade: 6-7 p. m.—Student Symphony Orchestra, Music Shed. Student Opera, Theatre-Concert Hall. Student Chamber Music, Chamber Music Hall. 7-8 p. m.—Picnic Supper, Student Chorus, Porch, Administration Building. 8:15 p. m.—Music Shed: Bizet: Symphony in C; Strauss: "Salome" (Final Scene)—Brenda Lewis, soprano. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thomas Schippers, conductor. Sousa: March "Stars and Stripes Forever"; Offenbach: Suite from "Gaite Parisienne"; Hayman (arr.) "TViana"; Merrick-Bennett (arr.) "Look Sharp—Be Sharp". The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler, conductor. 11 p. m. midnight — Drawing for door prizes; waltzing on the lawn, Joe Bushkin, pianist.

Saturday, August 14, 8:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Brahms: Tragic Overture; Piston: Symphony No. 4; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin"; Saint-Saens: Symphony No. 3, with E. Power Biggs as organ soloist. Charles Munch, conductor.

Sunday, August 15, 2:30 p. m.—Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra: Berlioz: "Requiem"—in memory of Serge Koussevitzky—with David Poleri, tenor soloist and 200 voices, Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center students augmented by Chorus of Springfield (Mass.) Symphony Orchestra; and with four brass bands. Charles Munch, conductor.

TANGLEWOOD PROGRAM ENDS NEXT SUNDAY; NEW RECORDS MADE

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by visiting ensembles and 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra—; an expected 10,000 next Friday at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra); and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, concludes its 1954 schedule in the coming week. About 175,000 persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munch's decision this year to enlarge the annual summer Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts within the scope of its previous six-week framework.

Photographs by Kalischer

There is also being presented at the museum a new show of photographs by Clemens Kalischer, entitled "Music in the Berkshire," which includes scenes from Tanglewood, South Mountain, and the Stockbridge School of Music. Also Civil War photographs by Matthew Brady. Being continued is the first group of sculpture by Franc Epping, the exhibition of paintings by Carol Cleworth and the miniature rooms by Andrew Jenorini already reviewed.

Second Thoughts in Music

Gala Week at Tanglewood Despite Disrupting Storms

Attendance Is Good and Concerts Keep Up to High Standard Expected at Berkshire Music Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Another gala music week has passed at Tanglewood where the annual Berkshire Music Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra is taking place. There have been disrupting storms but attendance has kept up and the concerts have been keeping to the expected standards.

Chamber Music

The Griller String Quartet offered Wednesday evening chamber music concert. This admirable organization flew in from London for this concert. They brought with them for its first American performance the fourth string quartet by Ernest Bloch which they had given first performance in London 10 days previously. As one expects from Bloch, this quartet is deeply emotional work, always effective and, at times, quite lovely. It needs further hearing for complete appraisal, but on the basis of a first hearing we believe it does not always indicate the real stature of the composer.

The program opened with the "Hunt" quartet by Mozart and concluded with Beethoven's "Quartet in G major, No. 2 Op. 18." The performances were of unequal merit. The Mozart suffered from rhythmic vagaries and Sidney Griller, first violin, often pushed his instrument beyond its agreeable tonal resources.

Chamber-Orchestra

Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was the bright star of the Friday night concert. This talented musician has youth, charm and a complete mastery of her chosen instrument. Her playing of Ibert's "Concerto for Flute and Orchestra" was both an amazing technical feat, and a test of musicality which she passed with colors flying. Mr. Munch opened the program with the dainty bit of fantasy called "The Spider's Web" which Albert Roussel wrote as a Ballet-Pantomime. He offered an imaginative and sensitive reading quite devoid of that roughness of texture which often mars his readings.

Another fine performance was provided for the Mozart "Serenade in C minor for eight winds." The work calls for two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. Written to entertain this work through the warm blend of instrumental tones is more than an entertainment piece. Its work is a masterpiece as carefully written as any the composer ever wrote.

The program concluded with a stunning performance of Mozart's "Paris" symphony.

Shed Concerts

Last year Mr. Munch offered the Berlioz Symphonic Drama "Romeo and Juliet" for the first time at Tanglewood. This week, continuing the observance of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth it was performed again. Beatrice Krebs, contralto, replaced Jennie Tourel who sang last season, but John Collum, tenor, and Nicola Moscona, bass, repeated their success of last season. The Festival chorus sang extremely well and Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided such magnificent readings of the purely orchestral portions of the score that it all made for a memorable performance.

A terrific thunderstorm opened up during the playing of the delicate Scherzo. One could hear nothing. Mr. Munch stopped the orchestra, waited a bit and then gave up. A half hour afterwards he continued.

We remember a similar occurance ein the '30's when the concerts were held in a tent. During a Wagner program a storm broke. Koussevitzky shifted his program and started in on "The Ride of the Valkyrie" with thunder and lightning adding unusual sound effects. All very exciting.

Richard Buring took over conducting duties for the Sunday afternoon concert. The veteran concertmaster of the orchestra is a conductor of considerable resources and solid musicianship. His wife, Ruth Posselt, violinist, was the assisting artist. She provided a handsome performance of the Khatchaturian "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra." The fact that a string broke during the first movement disturbed her not at all. She exchanged violins with the concertmaster and continued without missing a bar. Miss Posselt has many memorable performances of contemporary music to her credit. The Khatchaturian concerto is a surefire hit because of its gay spirit and rhythmic and melodic content.

Mr. Burgin opened the program with a powerful reading of William Schuman's American Festival Overture. Schuman is on the Berkshire School faculty and "The Tender Land" will be performed by the Opera Department.

The concert concluded with a deeply expressive reading of the second symphony of Jan Sibelius.

TOP CROWD IN '54 ENJOYS PROGRAM AT TANGLEWOOD

10,600 Hear Works of Berlioz, Singing of Eleanor Steber

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 7—There were probably two reasons why a seasonal record crowd of 10,600 persons attended the concert tonight. First, we think it was the opportunity to hear Eleanor Steber in person, for this American soprano is known to millions through radio, TV, concert and opera appearances. Second, and perhaps this ought to come first, it was the opportunity to hear a seldom performed work, the "Te Deum" by Hector Berlioz.

Descriptive Music

And the audience got its wish, continuing his series in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz, Dr. Charles Munch opened the program with an excerpt from his opera "Les Trojans," "The Royal Hunt and Storm." Berlioz intended that his royal hunt and storm to depict the moment in the opera when Aeneas and Dido are driven by a storm which Venus has contrived, into a cave where their love is consummated. This is descriptive music, tender in the love moments, raging during the storm. Only the ride of the valkyrie equals this storm in its intensity. It was a magnificent performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, vibrant and powerful.

Berlioz first wrote his six songs titled "Summer Nights" for soprano and piano. Later he orchestrated them. These songs run the gamut of emotion and demand superb technical resources from the singer, in addition to a fine interpretive power. Eleanor Steber, lovely to look at, was the singer.

It took the soprano about three songs to warm up the voice.

At first it was strident, ill focused and littered with unpleasant chest tones. There was also a tendency to scoop for top tones. However, when she came to "L'Absence," "Au Cimitiere" and "L'ile Inconnue," things went better, Miss Steber has communicative power, but this listener felt that her feeling for the work was superficial, theatrical, rather than from the heart. She was recalled several times and pranced about the stage, tossed a blue scarf about and shook hands with the concertmaster more than once. She at least, appeared to be having a fine time.

Parts Well Blended

Berlioz' "Te Deum" demands almost as great orchestral resources as his "Requiem." It is built on the same massive scale but its overtones are joyous befitting a "Te Deum." There are moments of beautiful harmonies, purely liturgical, but this work lacks the power and attention holding of the "Requiem." There is one solo for tenor which David Poleri sang well.

The festival chorus sang with exactitude and meticulous attention to pitch. The parts were well blended and attacks were correct. Hugh Ross was on hand to conduct the chorus along with Dr. Munch. William Frank was at the organ. The instrument plays an important part as an integral part of the orchestra. Berlioz wrote this work with the hope that it would have an overwhelming impact on an audience. At times it does, but much of it is standard fare.

Tomorrow afternoon Zino Francescatti, violinist, will be heard in Beethoven's "Violin concerto in D Major." Dr. Munch will open the program with the overture to "Alceste" by Gluck and conclude with Brahms' Symphony No. 2 in D Major."

FIEDLER, BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA AT TANGLEWOOD

Will Be Star Attraction at Gala 'Parade' Concert In Music Shed Friday

Lenox, Aug. 7—Arthur Fiedler, bringing the 92-piece Boston Pops Orchestra to play for the first time in Tanglewood's Music Shed on Friday, August 13, as the star attraction of the gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, the day-long annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, announces a program of popular symphonic music.

John Phillip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" march will open the Pops section of the Music Shed concert after intermission. A suite from the lively operetta music of Jacques Offenbach, culled for the ballet "Gaite Parisienne," will follow, then Maurice Ravel's popular "Bolero."

Two Specialties

Two Fiedler specialties will complete the announced part of the program, a symphonic arrangement by Hayman of well-known television commercials, called "TViana"; and the Merrick-Bennett "Look Sharp-Be Sharp" Gillette razor theme of radio and TV. It is expected that there will be encores of the type that have endeared audiences for 70 years to the Boston Pops.

Celebrating his 25th year as conductor of the famed Pops, Mr. Fiedler is probably the best known symphonic conductor in America through his long association with the Pops, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's outdoor Esplanade Concerts which he founded in 1929, his guest conducting throughout the country and the more than 600 recordings he has made with the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Born in Boston, Fiedler studied piano, violin and conducting in Berlin and made his concert debut in Berlin at the age of 17. He joined the Boston Symphony as a violinist in 1915, becoming the youngest member of the orchestra. In 1924 he organized the Boston Sinfonietta; in 1929, the Esplanade Concerts given outdoors on the banks of Boston's Charles River, which now draw as many as 35,000 listeners on a warm summer evening.

25th Season

He has just celebrated his 25th season with the Boston Pops, the longest conductorship in the history of the orchestra which was organized in 1885 when the Boston Symphony Orchestra was four years old and the programs were call "Promenade Concerts" after the old London concerts Mr. Fiedler and the Pops have become so popular that the gross receipts for the ten-week season in Boston's Symphony Hall exceed the yearly income of more than half of the American major symphony orchestras.

In demand as a guest conductor, Mr. Fiedler has conducted the Montreal, Minneapolis, Seattle, Portland (Oregon), Dallas, Corpus Christi and San Antonio Symphony Orchestras as well as the Louisville Philharmonic, the Grant Park Concerts in Chicago, the NBC-Symphony Orchestra and New Haven's "Pops".

A favorite on the West coast, he was asked to open the new San Francisco Pop series in 1951 for the San Francisco Art Commission and has returned to conduct this series each summer with increasing success and extended seasons. He will interrupt his current San Francisco engagement to fly to Tanglewood for the August 13th festivities and returns immediately to California. In addition to the San Francisco Pops, Mr. Fiedler has conducted the Standard Hour broadcasts from that city and the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra.

New Orchestra

In response to national demand, Mr. Fiedler formed a new orchestra called the Boston Pops Tour Orchestra in 1953 which toured the United States for ten weeks from Troy, New York, south to Florida, west to Texas, and back to New York, playing 64 concerts in 68 days. The success of this first tour was repeated with a six-week tour in 1954, and already another national tour is scheduled for 1955.

Besides the typical Pops program which he will conduct as the second half of the Music Shed concert, the Tanglewood on Parade concert program includes Thomas Schippers conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Bizet's Symphony in C and soprano Brenda Lewis singing the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome."

Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music, and student opera will go on respectively in the Music Shed, Chamber Music Hall, and Theater-Concert Hall on Tanglewood's big day, commencing at 6 p. m. A special attraction for holders of box seats and tickets in the reserved sections of the Music Shed is a program of outdoor opera in the formal gardens, at 4 p. m.

[296]

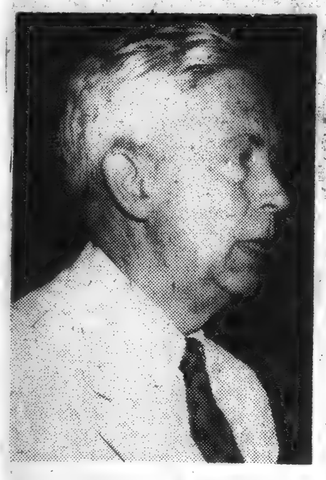
August 8

Republican THE SPRINGFIELD

Boston Symphony Manager George Judd Ends Service

With Orchestra for 40 Years, Will Be Succeeded On Sept. 1 by Aide, Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

After nearly 40 years of service to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with which he became associated in 1915, and which he has managed since 1936, George E. Judd was honored at a luncheon by members of the orchestra Friday at Tanglewood, where the Berkshire Festival to which he brought the Boston Symphony in 1937 is drawing to the close of its 17th season.



GEORGE E. JUDD

Judd will be succeeded Sept. 1, at the start of the orchestra's 74th season in Symphony Hall, Boston, by Assistant Manager Thomas D. Perry, Jr.

Two Others Honored

The retirement ceremony also paid tribute to Leon Gorodetzky, violinist, who has seen service with the Boston Symphony since 1920, and to violist Georges Fourel, whom Pierre Monteux (then permanent conductor of the orchestra) brought from France in 1921. They were presented with engraved gold watches on behalf of members of the orchestra and the management by Music Director Charles Munch at the conclusion of the morning's rehearsal for tonight's all-Berlioz program in the Tanglewood Music Shed. Jerome Lipson, violist, chairman of the orchestra committee, presided, and first violinist Harry Dickson was toastmaster.

THOMAS D. PERRY, JR.

With the modesty that has characterized his association with the orchestra all his year, Judd refused to allow any special ceremony to be made of his official farewell to the symphony and to Tanglewood, but asked that he be included in the orchestra men's lunch in honor of their colleagues "as a third retiring member of the orchestra." An engraved gold watch was presented him.

Given Closing Program Record

A special gift to Judd was a leather-bound record album containing the only copy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's final program of its 73d season in Symphony Hall May 1, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by Munch, tape-recorded unbeknownst to Judd by WGBH, Boston's noncommercial radio station which broadcasts a number of the orchestra's programs to educational institutions, and with the blessing of the Musicians' Union.

The special edition of one record included the gold-plated master from which it was made and also the plate from which the text on the album cover was printed. The album was presented the retiring manager by Rosario Mazzeo, personnel manager of the orchestra.

During Judd's tenure, the orchestra became part of the annual Berkshire Festival, where an anticipated audience of 120,000 will have attended its 2# concerts of the 1954 season, some 10,000 are expected at "Tanglewood on Parade" next Friday (the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra at Tanglewood), and a predicted 45,000 patrons will have witnessed the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, thus making a total of 175,000 who will have enjoyed this summer's music at Tanglewood.

Led Orchestra to "Firsts"

In the summer of 1952, under Judd's guidance, the orchestra made its first tour to Europe and in the spring of 1953 its first coast-to-coast tour. Recently the manager negotiated contracts with the National Broadcasting Co. for his orchestra to replace the NBC Symphony of Arturo Toscanini next season on weekly Saturday night broadcasts.

He vigorously backed the Charles Munch plan to extend this season's Berkshire Festival concerts within the six-week framework, and expanded Arthur Fiedler's schedule of Esplanade concerts in Boston.

In his 20 years at its helm, Judd has scheduled the Boston Symphony to play a longer season than any other orchestra, and it is the only one to maintain a music school of its own. His numerous duties have included arranging the orchestra's bookings, scheduling its tours, negotiating salaries and recording contracts, supervising transportation, dealing with unions, guest conductors, soloists, and the daily details of running Symphony Hall and Tanglewood.

Manager-elect Perry has been assistant manager of the Boston Symphony since 1948, and executive secretary of its Tanglewood music school for several seasons. A native of Grand Rapids, Michigan, he graduated from Yale in 1935, taught in a private school, came from Philadelphia's Curtis Institute to Boston in 1941 to manage the New England Mutual Hall, served two years in the Navy, and became associated with the orchestra eight years ago.

The two orchestra string players, retiring after more than 30 years with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, both are natives of France. Gorodetzky, born in Paris, graduated from the New England Conservatory of Music, where he held a scholarship, studied violin with Gruenberg, Winternitz and Witek, teaches and coaches violin, and in his spare time tries his hand at sculpture, painting and photography.

Born in Grenoble, Fourel attended the Lycee at Donai and Alancon, won first prize in viola at the Paris Conservatory under Lafarge, studied orchestra under Vincent D'Indy, entered the Lamoreux Symphony in 1912, now teaches viola and string quartet at the New England Conservatory, owns violas made by Hieronymas and Amati.

Their places in the orchestra will be taken in the season of 1954-55 by Jesse Ceci, violin, and John Fiasca, viola.

HAVERHILL, MASS. GAZETTE

JUL 12 1954

There's More To A Piano Than Playing

LENOX, Mass. (UP)—To provide pianos for the famous musicians, singers and music students attending the Berkshire Festival here this summer, 88 of the massive instruments and an electronic organ were shipped 750 miles from Cincinnati to the festival site at Tanglewood.

Two huge trailer trucks with their heavily padded cargo make the journey in two and a half days. Since drivers, by regulation, may only be on the road 10 hours a day, the trucks had to maintain a 30-mile an hour average despite occasional traffic tie-ups, stops for lunches and unpredictable weather.

Loading the pianos took 16 hours and 300 heavy double pads, collectively long enough to cover a third of an acre, Raymond Schmidt, 38, a piano-moving expert, supervised a series of complicated maneuvers at the (Baldwin) factory in which the pianos are wrapped and stacked on trucks without marring the finish. They had to be tightly taped against inevitable jarring during the long trek.

North Adams Girl Big Hit Singing Opera in Colorado

Christina C. Cardillo Receives Many Fine Tributes For Her Performance as Marguerite in Faust

Pittsfield, Aug. 7—Christina C. Cardillo, talented North Adams soprano, has completed a successful engagement at the Central City Opera in Colorado. This followed closely her nationwide recognition gained when she won the 1954 Metropolitan Auditions of the Air.

CHRISTINA C. CARDILLO

Neither came as any surprise to those who heard her as the featured soprano in operas staged at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last season.

At Central City, Miss Cardillo appeared in her favorite role as Marguerite in the performance of Faust. Critics reporting the performance referred to the North Adams singer as "a lovely brunet heroine, youthful and insouscient, who posseses a sweet voice of warm quality in its upper register and excellent enunciation." Continuing, they said: "Christina fitted charmingly into the picture with her natural, graceful and superb acting."

Many Compliments

Such praise was doubly significant considering that she had had no stage rehearsals nor one with the orchestra. Just before curtain time she was given an opportunity to take a look at the set for each act in order to acquaint herself with the location of various props.

Both Dr. Elmer Nagy and Kurt Adler were extremely pleased with the performance, but perhaps the biggest thrill came following the Sunday afternoon performance. Then it was that Lily Pons and Andre Kostalonatz went to the dressing room of Miss Cardillo to extend their praise and invited her to join them at dinner. One week later it was Eleanor Steber who went back stage to compliment the young soprano and requested her to dine with her.

Liberace was due in Central City. His arrival was delayed and as the result he missed the Faust performance. But he caught up with Christina in the cocktail lounge and insisted that she favor him by singing an aria and "Summertime." Christina took time out from an ardious schedule to take part in a benefit concert for St. Malo's Catholic Boys' School.

Visit Tanglewood

Now Christina is hurrying to get back East in order that she may attend the final week of the Berkshire Festival. It was at Tanglewood that she got her start as a student at the Berkshire Music Center and her brother, Pat, is clarinetist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It may be recalled that he journeyed to Tanglewood from North Adams for a try-out with BSO, made the grade and joined the unit.

Of course Christina would also like to be at Tanglewood when Eleanor Steber appears as soloist so that she might be able to return the compliment given her by the star in Central City. And of course Tanglewood on Parade holds a special interest too, for it was with the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler that Christina did her first solo. By E. H. Toole

THOMAS SCHIPPERS HAILED ABROAD AS 'A BORN CONDUCTOR'

Lenox, Aug. 7—Thomas Schippers, who conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first half of the gala evening concert at the Berkshire Music Center's annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Friday at 8.15 in the Music Shed, is a "musical revelation in himself," said the Paris press, and London agreed that "Thomas Schippers was a born conductor" when the 23-year-old American made his first European tour in 1951. For his conducting debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Schippers conducts Bizet's Symphony in C major and the final scene from Richard Strauss' opera "Salome."

Making his debut in his native Kalamazoo, Mich., at the age of six, Mr. Schippers was official organist at St. Luke's Episcopal Church when he was 11, and at the First Reformed Church at the age of 14. After concertizing in other Midwestern cities as pianist and organist, he enrolled at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia and New York's Juilliard School of Music.

At 17 he was chosen by Eugene Ormandy as one of the five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music. The same season he conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first United States production of Haydn's "Man in the Moon."

After studying at the Berkshire Music Center in 1948 Mr. Schippers was chosen by Gian-Carlo Menotti to conduct his opera "The Consul," which ran for four months on Broadway before Mr. Schippers went to Europe to conduct it there. Upon returning to America, Thomas Schippers was appointed a resident conductor of the New York City Opera Company at City Center, becoming the youngest conductor on the staff of any major opera company. Active in television, Schippers conducted the TV premiere of Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors" on Christmas Eve in 1952, and has filled engagements as guest conductor with the Philadelphia Orchestra, the NBC Symphony and at New York's Lewisohn Stadium.

Tanglewood Tales

Lenox, Aug. 7—Two members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were honored by their orchestra confreres, on the occasion of their retirement, at a luncheon at the Tanglewood cafeteria recently following the morning rehearsal under Charles Munch in the Music Shed. They are Samuel Leon Gorodetzky, second violin, who joined the orchestra, then conducted by Pierre Monteux, in 1920, and who makes his home in Brookline with his wife and son; and Georges Fourel, viola, who was brought to the U. S. by Mr. Monteux to join the orchestra in 1921, and who also lives in Brookline with his wife and two daughters.

* * *

Mr. Gorodetzky, a native of Paris, graduated from the New England Conservatory, where he held a scholarship; he studied piano, but specialized in violin study with Gruenberg, Winternitz and Witek, giving many recitals and concerts; teaches and coaches violin and in his spare time tries his hand at sculpture, painting and photography.

* * *

Born in Grenoble, France, Mr. Fourel attended the Lycee at Donai and Alancon, won first prize in viola at the Paris Conservatory under Lafarge, studied orchestra under Vincent D'Indy. He entered the Lamoureux Symphony Orchestra in 1912; now teaches viola and string quartet at the New England Conservatory; owns violas made by Hieronymas and Amati.

They have been succeeded, respectively, in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, by Jesse Ceci, violin, and John Fiasca, viola. Mr. Ceci, of Philadelphia, was a pupil of Hilsberg at the Curtis Schol of Music, played in the American Youth Orchestra, the Dumbarton Oaks Orchestra, attended Juilliard School of Music, won a Fulbright scholarship to study at the Paris Conservatory, and also studied at the Ecole Normale de Musique de Paris, has recently played in the St. Louis Sinfonietta, and was assistant concertmaster last season of the New Orleans Symphony.

* * *

Mr. Fiasca, of Los Angeles, was first violist under Leon Barzin at the Greek Theatre there this summer. He studied at Wisconsin College of Music, went to Juilliard on a fellowship, became assistant first violist in the St. Louis Symphony. He has held this position in the National Symphony (Washington, D. C.), the Portland (Ore.) Symphony, and with Columbia Pictures. He was a student at Tanglewood in 1942, has spent three summers with the Chautauqua Symphony and two with the Hollywood Bowl orchestra.

Cincinnati industrialist and patron of the arts, Julius Fleischmann, will attend the final two weekends of the Berkshire Festival, arriving next week with his family to stay at the Red Lion, Stockbridge, and proprietor Heaton Treadway is hosting a cocktail party in his honor Saturday (August 7). Mr. Fleischmann has long been the No. 1 "angel" of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, which after a couple of inactive seasons he is reactivating for a national tour this season. With his theatrical partners, Richard Aldrich and Richard Myers, he has produced on Broadway such outstanding hits of recent times as "Goodbye, My Fancy," starring Madeleine Carroll, Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" with Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lilli Palmer; "The Devil's Disciple" with Maurice Evans and Dennis King; "The Moon is Blue" with Barbara Bel Geddes. Mr. Fleischmann is also active in Mr. Aldrich's two Music Circuses on Cape Cod and his prosperous Cape Playhouse, at Dennis, and Connamesset Theatre, at Falmouth.

* * *

Mr. Fleischmann has a pleasant association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra through his active interest in the Congress For Cultural Freedom, the world-wide organization of philanthropists who have been waging a cultural war against the aggression of communism. It was the Congress—and Mr. Fleischman—who invited the Boston Symphony in 1952 to Paris for the huge exposition of the arts, "Masterpieces of the 20th Century," and made financially possible the orchestra's subsequent tour of European capitals.

* * *

Alexander Leslie will bring 5(voices of his 125-man Springfiel Symphony Chorus to perform, wit the student Festival Chorus, in th Berkshire Festival's concludin concert, the Berlioz "Requiem' which Charles Munch conducts Sunday afternoon, Aug. 15. Organized 10 years ago, the chorus is an integral part of the Springfield Symphony, and has performed the Brahms "Schicksalslied" Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise," the Mozart C minor Mass, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the Messiah, and the Verdi Requiem. The Springfield Symphony Orchestra and Chorus, under Mr. Leslie's conductorship, performed the Berlioz "Requiem" with full musical forces, assisted by Paul Knowles, tenor, in the Springfield Municipal Auditorium on October 28, 1952, two months after the work was given its Tanglewood premiere by Mr. Munch.

* * *

Joe Bushkin, the popular jazz pianist and trumpeter, who is studying composition with Lukas Foss this summer while summering with his family in Richmond, will provide music for [illegible] on the lawn, which winds up the "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities on Friday, Aug. 13.

* * *

When the Berkshire Music Center ends its 12th season Sunday, Aug. 15, dean Ralph Berkowitz will sail to Europe on the "Queen Mary" with cellist Gregor Piatigorsky, for whom he will serve as accompanist on an extended concert tour, commencing with a month in Rome.

[297]

'Con Brio' At Tanglewood

The setting is rustic, but the mood is intense. There is no music center where so much concentrated work is done in a six-week period as at Tanglewood, in the Berkshires. Here, each summer, young men and women from the U. S. and abroad assemble for a kind of post-graduate course in the practical aspects of their art. There are no examinations, no credits, no degrees, only the satisfaction of working with professionals to help speed their careers. Shown here are Tanglewood students at work.—HOWARD TAUBMAN.

VOCALISTS AT WORK—In a made-over barn, with doors thrown open onto rolling fields, young singers rehearse, hardly aware of the visitors outside.

ON THE GREENSWARD—Informal rehearsals like this are apt to start without warning out in the open. The young woman is playing a French horn, the young man beside her a bassoon. The fellow behind holds a trumpet.

IN A GARRET—This one is in the Berkshires, not Paris. The young woman is practicing the English horn (an oboe stands beside her) in a room where she will disturb no one at all.

STUDENT ORCHESTRA—The bassoon and horn section (right) practices with the full ensemble in Tanglewood's Music Shed. This orchestra has a chance to play under experienced maestros as well as under student leaders.

UNDER A BIRCH—There are wide lawns, formal gardens and gracious tree-shaded areas at Tanglewood. This young flutist finds a fair amount of privacy out in the open. Her friend, who is also in the student body, may look asleep, but he is listening critically.

88 Sunday, August 8 THE NEW YORK TIMES,

[From Late Editions of Yesterday's Times.]

LIPKIN IS SOLOIST AT LENOX FESTIVAL

Offers Mozart's B Flat Piano Concerto — Foss Conducts Excerpts From 'Idomeneo'

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6—Mozart and Pergolesi, the latter as seen through the twentieth-century eyes of Stravinsky, provided the material for tonight's program in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood. Lukas Foss was the conductor, and he had the cooperation of a sizable segment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a Berkshire Music Center chorus and a number of vocal soloists drawn from the center's opera department.

There was also a piano soloist, Seymour Lipkin, who is an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Lipkin was here some years ago as a conducting student under Serge Koussevitzky. He is so gifted a pianist that he is quite capable of making a career in this area. He played Mozart's B Flat major Concerto (K.450), one of the loveliest of them all and one of the most difficult to search out to its roots. The measure of his performance was that he gave so searching an account of the slow movement, so rich in its own right and so clearly a prefiguring of the romantic era.

The other Mozart piece was "Idomeneo," not all of it, to be sure, but a fine representation. This opera was one of the composer's special favorites, but the sad truth is that it has a static libretto and some dull patches. By presenting some of the finest pages in concert form, Mr. Foss is showing the way toward the rescue of a beautiful work for more general appreciation.

Chorus Sings With Color

Mr. Foss, who had given Mr. Lipkin sensitive support, conducted the "Idomeneo" excerpts with affection and verve. The young chorus sang with variety of color. The soloists were Marvin Worden, Theresa Green, Charlotte Holloman and Regina Sarfaty, and they did effective work, considering that this is music that would tax the most polished professional.

The evening began with Stravinsky's homage to Pergolesi in "Pulcinella." This is a flavorsome score, with most of the flavor emanating from Pergolesi, but not a little from Stravinsky. It is a score full of charm and surprises. One felt that it had not been prepared with quite the care it needs, for it did not have the instrumental transparency that would serve it best. The soloists, who did well, were Miss Sarfaty, Jefferson Morris and McHenry Boatwright.

At noon today, the members of the orchestra gave a luncheon for three persons connected with it for many years — George E. Judd, manager, and Leon Goroditzky and Georges Fourel, string players, all of whom are retiring at the end of this Tanglewood season. There were gifts of watches for all three. For Mr. Judd there also was a specially pressed album—the only copy in existence, made with permission of the union—of a recording of Beethoven's Ninth as Charles Munch led it at the final concert of the season in Boston last spring.

To Conduct at Tanglewood

Springfield Republican—Aug 8

Jean Morel, eminent French conductor who has been heading the orchestra and conducting departments of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood this summer, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Theater-Concert Hall Thursday night.

August 8
N.Y. Times X 7

REVISED OPERA

Copland's 'Tender Land' Done in New Version

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

LENOX, MASS.

AARON COPLAND should be able to write a good opera, perhaps a first-rate one. It is to be hoped that he will try again soon. Opera in America needs operas by Americans, and Mr. Copland could be the composer to create the first work by an American to win a secure place in the repertories of the major companies.

"The Tender Land," Mr. Copland's initial opera—if you do not count "The Second Hurricane," a children's piece—leads one to believe that the composer's next effort could turn the trick. One feels this more strongly after listening to both performances of "The Tender Land" as it was produced by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Mr. Copland and his librettist, Horace Everett, have made some changes in "The Tender Land," and the revisions, though they are relatively slight, strengthen the piece as compared with the version seen at the New York City Center last season. The opera is still weak in places. Its total effect is that of a landscape with genre figures rather than of a drama of vivid, moving human beings.

But there are significant plus factors in "The Tender Land" which convince one that Mr. Copland has vital elements of the operatic problem under control. He can write effectively and ingratiatingly for the voice. He has long since mastered the art of writing for the orchestra, and in "The Tender Land" he proves that he can combine instruments and singers so that each element retains its individuality without impinging on the other.

Weakness

The glaring weakness in "The Tender Land" remains in the principal role, that of the girl, Laurie, who falls in love with a drifter on the eve of her graduation and who then decides to leave the old homestead and to seek a life of her own. Laurie is simply not realized as a human being. We are told things about her, but we are not made to feel them. The failing is not only in the libretto but in the music.

It has been said that one of the troubles with "The Tender Land" is its flat libretto, just as so many other operas have been defeated by libretto trouble. There is some point in this criticism, but it does not absolve the composer of responsibility.

A glance at operatic history will show that the great composers with the theatre in their blood badgered their librettists to write and re-write until their pieces had some stage-worthiness. In some cases the composers fashioned their own librettos. But given weak or strong books, the best theatre composers have managed somehow to vitalize their works.

The truth is that music is a tremendously powerful dramatic element in its own right. A composer with a gift for the theatre can transcend feebleness in a libretto by the urgency of his own insight and inspiration. There are Italian operas whose stories are embarrassingly hackneyed but whose characters have a throbbing immediacy that surmounts thinness or thickness of plot.

Knows It Well

Mr. Copland, who is both cultured and sophisticated, need not be lectured on these things. He knows them better than most of us. But it is one thing to know them intellectually and another to apply them successfully to one's own work, even when one is trying to.

It has been said that Mr. Copland was aiming in "The Tender Land" to write an atmospheric piece in which the emphasis would be on the time and place rather than on the individuals in the story. But this is not a ballet, a cantata or a symphonic work with voices. It is a dramatic piece, and the most effective way to evoke time and place remains the old one of creating credible, touching human beings.

The parallels between certain aspects of "The Tender Land" and of "Oklahoma!" and "Picnic" have been pointed out before, but these strike one as superficial even if they are disconcerting at first glance. Mr. Copland, it could be said, previsioned "Oklahoma!" in his ballet score, "Rodeo," and one would guess that neither he nor Mr. Everett knew anything of "Picnic" when they started work on "The Tender Land."

The important and encouraging thing about "The Tender Land" is that Mr. Copland speaks with his own voice. As far as the music is concerned, it is reminiscent of nothing but Copland. At its best, it contains some of the finest things the composer has written, such as the quintet which ends the first act.

For this reason, if for no other, one is certain that Mr. Copland can write a good opera. Now in his fifties, he has a musical personality all his own. He has a feeling for the stage, as his ballet and movie scores prove. "The Tender Land" is a step in the right direction. If Mr. Copland will assert himself fully, his next opera should be worth waiting for.

N.Y. Herald-Tribune
E, MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1954

Berkshire Festival

Boston Symphony Gives 2 Concerts at Tanglewood

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8.—The Berkshire Festival's largest audiences thus far this season heard the fifth week's two closing concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in Tanglewood's music shed. For last night's program of mainly unfamiliar music in Hector Berlioz the attendance was 10,600, while 12,700 persons listened this afternoon to well known masterpieces, including the overture to Gluck's "Alceste," Beethoven's violin concerto with Zino Francescatti as the soloist, and the Second Symphony of Brahms.

In the Berlioz program the royal hunt and storm from "The Trojans" prefaced "Nuits D'Ete" (Summer Nights) sung by Eleanor Steber, and the Te Deum for three choruses with orchestra and organ with David Poleri as the tenor soloist. Children from Camp Mahkeenac and Indian Hill sang with the festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke De Valon. The Te Deum figured in Carnegie Hall's opening concert in 1891, but has not had many New York concert hearings since; the Summer Nights cycle of six songs with texts by Theophile Gautier was performed in New York two seasons ago, but is far from a repertory item.

Music of Intimacy

This is music of intimacy and poetic charm, happily wedded to the poems and conveying their expressive nuances; it is also vocally grateful. Delicacy and subtlety marks orchestration whic hsupports and never challenges the voice. The style is forward looking, it anticipates a genre of late nineteenth-century French song. There is, indeed, more expressive subtlety than emotional contrast, and limitation of variety can be noticed before Summer Nights has run its leisurely and usually delectable course.

In tone quality, especially in certain memorable high notes, Miss Steber's singing was often exquisite; her interpretation was sensitive and musicianly. Usually it was persuaively poetic, although differences of mood might have been more fully realized; after the appropriately conveyed elegaic vein of "In the Cemetery," a brighter hue was needed for "The Unknown Isle." But the general impression was one of sympathetic understanding of the music and of its style and character; such an understanding also marked the admirably co-ordinated orchestral playing.

Of Different Character

The Te Deum, Berlioz' last major choral work, is of a very different character, calling for large choral and orchestral forces and presenting imposing masses of sound, and vivid and contrasted color. There are, indeed, quieter and more intimate measures, as in the appealing tenor solo which Mr. Poleri sang with consistently good quality of tone and expressive insight, but the more pronounced musical hues and higher dynamic levels dominate in the listener's memory.

The musical ideas are not all equally memorable, but the work with its points of obvious effectiveness also realizes the dominating mood and the expressive details of its text; its praise is heartfelt and devoted as well as proclamatory. Berlioz master of the use of timbred and musical colors is especially ominously of the final section; the darkest and lowest hues tell ominously of the final judgment, alternating with bright and luminous parts of the musical spectrum to tell of hope.

Momentum and Tension

The finale reaches its climax with impressive momentum and increasing expressive tension, and this was a factor in the ovation which followed. The performance met all the demands of the music. The tone quality of the various parts of the chorus had its differences of merit, but this mattered little. The prevailing quality was good, and notable spirit and vitality marked the singing, which scored in its prevailing unity and particularly in range and vividness of color, distinctions of volume and the stirring delivery of the work's most sonorous measures.

The orchestra was in good form for this afternoon's program, beginning with a full disclosure of the lyric tragedy and solemnity of the Gluck overture and closing with a satisfying interpretation of the Brahms symphony. Mr. Francescatti, who is a summer resident of Monterey, a few miles from here, illustrated both his technical mastery and his knowledge and love of the Beethoven concerto. His tone was clear and warm, apart from a few of the more florid measures in which it seemed slightly thin. But otherwise it was ingratiating in timbre, with due volume and constant lyricism but without an excess of opulence alien to the music. A slightly greater elan would not have been amiss in the finale, but the violinist's performance of the larghetto was a memorable example of poetic musical meditation.

Conductor and orchestra gave Mr. Francescatti admirable cooperation.

BROADWAY STAR ON TANGLEWOOD PARADE FRIDAY

Spring Republican
Aug. 8

Brenda Lewis Will Sing Final Scene From 'Salome'

Lenox, Aug. 7—Broadway comes to the Berkshires on Friday when Brenda Lewis sings with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thomas Schippers conducting, at the Berkshire Music Center's gala Tanglewood on Parade. The second half of the Music Shed concert will feature Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra in a typical Pops program which will include Ravel's "Bolero" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Stars of Broadway's recent musical, "The Girl in Pink Tights," Miss Lewis also starred in "The Merry Widow" with Jan Kiepura, "Secret du Suzanne," as Birdie in Marc Blitzstein's opera, "Regina," and toured the nation in the Strauss operetta "The Gypsy Baron."

In Scene From "Salome"

Medicine and not music was to be Miss Lewis' career when she enrolled at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, but after a short apprenticeship with the Philadelphia Opera Co. she made her debut as the Marshilin in "Der Rosenkavalier." Although only 19 she received great critical acclaim and moved on to Broadway, opera and concert engagements.

During one season she sang six different leading opera roles in Rio de Janeiro, with the Pro Arte Opera Co. in Cuba, and with the Central City Opera Festival. An Honorary Citizen of Montreal because of her successive appearances there in opera, Miss Lewis has also starred in light opera with the St. Louis Municipal Opera Co. and summer music theaters in Kansas City, Dallas, Memphis, Birmingham and Chicago.

When she appears with Mr. Schippers and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Miss Lewis will sing the final scene from Richard Strauss. "Salome" which she has sung with the New York City Opera Co. at Manhattan's City Center. When she first performed this role the New York press gave her unanimous praise.

When she made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in February of 1952, Miss Lewis sang Musetta in the new production of "La Boheme" with such success that she followed with appearances as Rosalinda in "Fledermaus" and toured the nation in this role. She has also sung with the San Francisco and Pittsburgh Opera Co., in addition to symphony appearances with such major orchestras as those of Philadelphia, Dallas, Kansas City and Havana, Cuba.

Miss Lewis—who successfully combines a busy professional career with running a home and rearing a family in New Rochelle, N. Y.—will make her first appearance at Tanglewood at the gala concert. In addition to the final scene frm "Salome" the first half of the program inclues Bizet's Symphony in C; after the intermission, the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, complete the program.

Tanglewood On Parade will begin at 4 p. m. with a special program of opera in the formal gardens for the holders of box seats and reserved tickets for the concert in the Music Shed. Simultaneous demonstrations of the student symphony orchestra, student chamber music and the school's opera department will be given at 6 p. m. Members of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center will present a concert at 7 p. m. on the steps of the Main House.

OSSINING, N. Y.
CITIZEN-REGISTER
JUL 21 1954

Mrs. Leon E. Kienholz of 10 Ellis Place has returned from attending the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Sunday, August 8

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, 8 AUG

Berkshire Festival

Chamber Orchestra Plays And Lukas Foss Conducts

By Francis D. Perkins

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7.—Opening the Berkshire Festival's fifth and semi-final week end, Lukas Foss, conducted last night's chamber orchestra program in Tanglewood's Theater Concert Hall before the largest Friday audience of the season thus far —3,350, including 2,000 listeners on benches and on the grass.

The program which exerted this notable advance drawing power offered no familiar favorites. It included Stravinsky's ballet "Pulcinella" based on music by Pergolesi, Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat major, K.450, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist and excerpts from Mozart's opera "Idomeneo."

Advance interest was matched both by the appeal of the music itself and the prevailing quality of the performance. The Stravinsky score was played nearly in full with Regina Sarfaty, soprano; Jefferson Morris, tenor, and McHenry Boatwright, bass, as soloists with the ensemble of Boston Symphony musicians.

A suite from this thirty-four-year-old score has been played in New York occasionally but the entire work is rewarding. It is satisfying as concert music away from the ballet stage. At times, Stravinsky is Pergolesi's sympathetic servant in presenting the short-lived eighteenth-century genius' delectable melodies in modern istrumental dress, but sometimes Stravinsky takes the foreground in this musical scene. A few harmonies recall Petrouchka and that ballet is recalled even more in the scoring, especially in the brilliant writing for the brass.

Admirable Playing

The remarkable feature is the successful combination of two styles and atmospheres. It is not a case of Pergolesi wearing modern clothes or Stravinsky turning antiquarian. The score is pervasively fresh, rich in color with a lyricism often punctured by musical wit. One of the vocal items, "Se tu m'ami," is a familiar veteran of the recital platform.

Mr. Lipkin's playing in the Mozart concerto was admirable in many ways. Its technical finish was absolute, and likewise its constant lucidity of medium and thorough revelation of detail. With notable fineness of dynamic nuance, the interpretation gave an impression of innate musicianship. In the first half of the first movement the speed seemed slightly too high and unrelieved, while without prejudice to clarity. Sometimes the dynamic range was a little restricted, but Mr. Lipkin's playing also had its proclamative and outspoken measures, as in the cadenzas. With some expressive reserve, the performance was sympathetic. This was a well thought out authentic interpretation.

Poised Interpretation

"Idomeneo" is already associated with Tanglewood, where it had its first American performance in 1947. The soloists in last night's excerpts were Marvin Worden as Idomeneo, Miss Sarfaty as Idamante, Charlotte Holloman as Ilia, and Theresa Green as Elektra. The chorus was composed of Berkshire Music Center students and boys from the near-by Indian Hill Music Workshop.

All the selections from this opera represent Mozart's genius and inventiveness, although some measures, as in the leisurely chorus, "Placido E il Mar," are less dramatically cogent than the others. Dramatic intensity was highest in two other choruses, "Corriamo" and "O Voto Tremendo," which tell irresistibly of storm, terror and awe.

Mr. Foss's conducting was marked by communicative skill. The performances under his direction were clear in detail, expressively discerning and just in vocal and instrumental balance. He understood and conveyed the differing atmospheres of the three works. The solo singing, slightly tentative from an expressive standpoint at first in "Pucinella," was persuasive later on and especially in "Idomeneo."

Mr. Worden in his well poised interpretation of that title role and Mr. Morris were the most consistent in tone quality, but the others were also appealing in vocal timbre as well as in conveying the purport of the music. The choral singing was praiseworthy.

Twenty-nine hundred persons heard this morning's public rehearsal of the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch in the Music Shed. They performed Brahms' Second Symphony, which closes the festival week end tomorrow afternoon and, with Eleanor Steber as soloist, the song cycle "Summer Nights" which is a feature of tonight's all-Berlioz program. Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti as soloist, also figured in the rehearsal.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Zino Francescatti, violinist. Overture to "Alceste," Gluck; Violin Concerto, Beetheven; Brahms, Symphony No. 2.

Wednesday, 8:30, Zino Francescatti, violinist, and Artur Balsam, pianist. Violin Sonata in A major, Brahms; Suite in C (violin alone), Bach; Violin Sonata in D minor, Brahms.

Thursday, 8:30, Chamber Orchestra of Boston Symphony Musicians, Jean Morel conducting. Overture to "La Scala di Seta," Rossini; Symphony in B flat (K 319), Mozart; Mother Goose Suite, Ravel; "Der Buerger als Edelmann," R. Strauss.

Friday, "Tanglewood on Parade" (Benefit for Berkshire Music Center). Opera scenes 4 (for box and reserve seat holders only); Fanfare and welcome, 5:45, Berkshire Music Center orchestra, opera and chamber music demonstrations; 8, Concert, 8:15. Concert program, first half, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Thomas Schippers conducting, Symphony in C major, Bizet; "Salome," final scene, R. Strauss, soloist, Brenda Lewis, soprano; second half, Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting, Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa; Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Offenbach; Bolero, Ravel; "Look Sharp," arr. Hayman; "Look Sharp," arr. Merrick-Bennett. Dance [illegible] and waltzing on the [illegible] Prizes

Saturday, 8:30, Boston [illegible] Orchestra, Charles Munch [illegible] Overture, Brahms; [illegible] Tragic ton; Le Tombeau [illegible] Symphony No. 2, Saint-[illegible] Power Biggs).

Sunday, Aug. 15, 2:30, [illegible] Symphony Orchestra, Charles [illegible] conductor, with David Poleri, [illegible] and Berkshire Music Center [illegible] Festival Chorus. Spring-field Symphony Orchestra, chorus. Requiem, Berlioz (in memory of Serge Koussevitzky).

[299]

August 8, 1954

ORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUG

Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at Tanglewood as the Berkshire Music Festival enters its last week.

Music

B. Post – Aug. 8

By TUCKER KEISER

By now Charles Munch's way with Berlioz is well known. He has brought many of the scores of this composer, hitherto identified principally with the Fantastic Symphony, back into the popular repertoire. Berlioz has "arrived," belatedly but unmistakably.

But one can expect even the most inspired conductor to preside over an occasional lacklustre performance, and the presentation of "Romeo" at Tanglewood during the past Berkshire Festival week end was such an event.

The orchestra knows the work thoroughly, the conductor exhibits exceptional insight into its myriad complexities, and the soloists sing with competency; nevertheless there was a curious lack of spirit in this latest reading of the work.

Nicola Moscona can be credited with saving the evening. His long scene in the finale in which he as Friar Laurence brings peace to the feuding Montagues and Capulets provides an effective focal point around which orchestra and singers can rally.

To add further complications, a thunderstorm with ensuing downpour sent 3000 people seated on the lawn rushing under the cover of the shed. The delicately orchestrated "Queen Mab" Scherzo could not compete with the noise and with apparent irritation, Mr. Munch stopped the music. At Mr. Burgin's whispered suggestion, the conductor announced intermission then and there. The second part of the concert began with the Scherzo.

Neither the contralto nor the tenor soloist gave the conductor much suport. Beatrice Krebs brought little distinction to her few verses in the opening section, and John McCollum vocalized his aria in a labored fashion. Despite the evident hard drilling by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, the Festival Chorus is no match for a precise, well-balanced choral group such as the Harvard-Radcliffe or the New England Conservatory choristers who appear with the orchestra in Symphony Hall.

Berlioz "Requiem"

The final concert in the Berkshire Festival will be given next Sunday afternoon in the Shed at Tanglewood. At that time Berlioz' monumental "Requiem" will be performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky by the Boston Symphony, the Festival Chorus, and Tenor David Poleri under the direction of Charles Munch. The "Requiem" requires, in addition to soloist, chorus and orchestra, the services of four brass bands and additional percussion.

Week's Concerts

TODAY

Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Gluck—Overture to "Alceste," Beethoven—Violin Concerto, Brahms—Symphony No. 2. Zino Francescatti, soloist. 2:30 p. m.

Mt. Sunapee State Park, N. H. New Symphony Orchestra conducted by Maurice Bonney. Berlioz—Roman Carnival Overture, Haydn—Symphony No. 2 "London," Mendelssohn—"Fingal Cave," Rachmaninoff—Second Piano Concerto, Willie Frey, violinist, and Lenor Umstead, pianist, soloists, 8:30 p. m.

* * *

WEDNESDAY

Plymouth Rock Centre, Duxbury, Mass. Three one-act operas. "The Voice" L. Kondorossy (World premiere), "Babar the Elephant", Nicolai Berezowsky, "Amahl and the Night Visitors"—Menotti. Presented nightly at 8:30 p. m. with matinee on Thursday at 2:30 p. m.

* * *

THURSDAY

Theatre—Concert Hall, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Jean Morel conducting. Rossini—"La Scala di Seta," Mozart—Symphony in B flat, 8:30 p. m.

Marie Wilson in "The Little Hut" at the Marblehead Summer Theatre.

Boston Post – August 8

August 9, 1954

E NEW YORK TIMES,

WEATHER SMILES ON LENOX FESTIVAL

Thousands Turn Out Over the Week-End to Hear Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8—Tanglewood had its biggest weekend of the season thus far, thanks to good weather. There were 10,600 persons in the Music Shed and on the lawns last night for a Berlioz program, and this afternoon 12,700 turned out to hear Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms.

The performances at both concerts were as noteworthy as the crowds. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra with the blend of authority and self-effacing simplicity that is the hallmark of his musicianship. And he had a host of assisting forces, world-famous soloists as well as children from nearby summer camps, to help him achieve memorable interpretations.

Music Wears Well

There was nothing off the beaten track today—just Gluck's "Alceste" Overture, Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Zino Francescatti as the soloist, and Brahms' Second Symphony. How well this music wears and what a rich concert it made. Gluck's overture, all grave and lyrical song, was spaciously read. Mr. Francescatti played the concerto with a loftiness of style, clean and elegant and searching in its grasp. Mr. Munch and the orchestra accompanied him admirably and they ended with an appealing performance of the Brahms.

If this afternoon's fare was made up of familiar masterpieces, last night's Berlioz program was distinctly off the beaten path. The "Royal Hunt and Storm" from "The Trojans" gets played with some regularity, but you will rarely encounter the exquisite song cycle, "Nuits d'Ete," or the tumultuous "Te Deum," written for three choruses, orchestra and organ, with a tenor solo thrown in for good measure.

Eleanor Steber was the soloist in "Nuits d'Ete," and she has never sung with more purity of tone or more intensity of feeling. Most of the piece is elegiac, scored for soprano and orchestra with a subtlety that would do for chamber music. Here Berlioz is the introspective, romantic poet; there is not a touch of megalomania in the score.

The whole thing must be projected with restraint and at the same time with shimmering colors. Miss Steber floated the vocal line as if there were no throat or vocal chords to deal with.

In addition to the festival chorus drawn from the Berkshire Music Center, Mr. Munch had the help of forty lads, aged 9 to 13, from Camp Mah-Kee-Nac and forty-four girls from the Indian Hill music workshop.

The boys had been taught their parts by rote. Lorna Cooke de Varon, assistant to Hugh Ross, in charge of choral work at Tanglewood, and Joe Kruger, camp director, worked long hours with these boys, and they sang with an irresistible will. The girls from Indian Hill were prepared by David L. Buttolph, once a student at the Berkshire Center. They, too, sang with enormous zest.

David Poleri sang the tenor solo with a rich, lyric voice, and Willem Frisco Frank presided at the organ effectively. But the power behind all these elements was Mr. Munch. He and his forces earned the cheers that resounded.

K. 319, Ravel—"Mother Goose Suite," Strauss—"Der Berger als Edelmann."

* * *

FRIDAY

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Annual "Tanglewood on Parade." Boston Symphony Orchestra and Boston "Pops" Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers and Arthur Fiedler. Program includes Bizet's Symphony in C and final scenes from Strauss "Salome" with Brenda Lewis as Salome. Special programs begin at 4:00 p. m. and continue through evening.

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Ania Dorfman, pianist, and Kroll Quartet. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SATURDAY

Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Brahms—"Tragic" Overture, Piston—Symphony No. 4, Ravel—"Le Tombeau de Couperin," Saint-Saens—Symphony No. 3, 8:30 p.m.

Castle Hill, Ipswich, Mass. Ania Dorfman, pianist, and Kroll Quartet. 8:30 p. m.

* * *

SUNDAY

Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conducting. Berlioz—"Requiem" with Festival Chorus and David Poleri, tenor. In Memory of Serge Koussevitsky. 2:30 p. m.

[300]

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Week

Berkshire Eagle – July 8

With an anticipated attendance of 120,000 at its 24 concerts—six chamber music programs by visiting ensembles and 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra; an expected 10,000 on Friday at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center (the summer school of music maintained by the orchestra); and a predicted 45,000 patrons at the 40-odd concerts and demonstrations by various departments of the school, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concludes its 1954 schedule in the coming week. 175,000 persons will have helped shatter records, and prove the popularity of Music Director Charles Munchs decision this year to enlarge the annual summer Festival in the hills of Western Massachusetts within the scope of its previous six-week framework.

The sixth and final week of Festival concerts comprises a recital by Zino Francescatti, violinist, of Brahms and Bach sonatas, on Wednesday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; Jean Morel conducting the chamber orchestra of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of Rossini, Mozart, Ravel and Richard Strauss, on Thursday evening in the Theater-Concert Hall; a symphonic program of works by Brahms, Piston, Ravel and Saint-Saens, with Charles Munch conducting the full 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Saturday evening in the Music Shed; and Mr. Munch leading the Boston Symphony in Hector Berlioz' massive "Requiem," in memory of Serge Koussevitsky, with David Poleri, tenor, and chorus, Sunday, August 15, in the Music Shed.

Zino Francescatti, a neighbor of Tanglewood, summering at Monterey, Mass., is donating his recital on Wednesday to the Berkshire Music Center. Arthur Balsam is his accompanist. Jean Morel, who heads the orchestra and conducting department of the Music Center this summer, makes his second appearance on the podium for a Festival concert, featuring two works new to Tanglewood audiences, the Overture to "Scala di Seta" (The Silken Ladder), the short opera Rossini composed at the age of 20, and Richard Strauss' suite "Der Burger als Edelmann" (Le Bourgeouis Gentilhomme) arranged from his incidental music to Moliere's play. Mr. Munch's Saturday evening concert also has two Tanglewood premieres, Walter Piston's Symphony No. 4, commissioned by the University of Minneapolis in 1951, and Saint-Saens' Symphony No. 3, in which E. Power Biggs is organ soloist.

12,700 at Tanglewood Thrill to Francescatti

Springfield Union – Aug 9

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Tanglewood, Aug. 8—When 12,700 people turn out to listen to the music of Gluck, Beethoven and Brahms it surely indicates that there is little need to worry about the cultural level in this country. That's what happened this afternoon when Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Zino Francescatti, violinist; was soloist. We are told that 27,650 people have heard the three concerts this week end.

Splendid Performance

The program opened with a splendid performance of the overture to "Alceste" by Gluck. It was Gluck who proclaimed that an overture should be the true preparation of the drama to follow. This he has accomplished and it is the first truly tragic introduction to an opera. It is darkly beautiful and enormously effective as a concert piece.

Zino Francescatti played the Beethoven "Concerto in D Major." It was a performance so deeply felt, technically dazzling and personal, that at the conclusion the audience stood up to make known its approval. Mr. Francescatti is a musician of impeccable taste. He draws a rich and vibrant tone from his instrument and phrases superbly. His reading, while traditional, seemed personal and at one with the orchestra and its conductor who provided wonderful collaboration. One of the most interested listeners in the audience was Fritz Kreisler.

The program concluded with a performance of the "Symphony No. 2 in D Major" by Johannes Brahms. Having produced a first symphony at great pains over a number of years, he made known his second symphony just about a year later. In contrast to the somber, dark hued, almost tragic first symphony, this second work was bright hued. Its themes sing smoothly and easily and each development is deftly integrated. It is a symphony which brims with life, strength, deep feeling and charm.

Finely Balanced Performance

It was evident throughout his reading that Mr. Munch sensed the essential spirit of work, for seldom have we heard a more finely balanced, integrated performance. The orchestra responded to every demand and the result was a performance which was spacious, alive and tonally gratifying. Particularly graceful and lovely was the third movement, which is so often treated with too heavy a hand. This has been a good day for everyone be they musician, layman or participant.

Mr. Francescatti will appear with Artur Balsam, pianist, Wednesday night in the final concert of the chamber music series. He will be heard in the Brahms' violin sonatas in A major and D minor and the suite in C for unaccompanied violin by Bach. The chamber-orchestra concert, usually held Friday night, will be held Thursday night and on Friday comes the annual "Tanglewood on Parade."

The Berkshire Festival Enters Last Two Weeks

Boston Globe – July 4

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood in Lenox, is entering its last two weeks. Programs will be as follows:

Today at 2:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Gluck: Overture to "Alceste;" Beethoven: Violin Concerto (Zino Francescatti, soloist); Brahms: Second Symphony.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Chamber music by Zino Francescatti, violin, and Artur Balsam, piano; Brahms: Sonata in A major; Bach: Suite in C major for violin alone; Brahms: Sonata in D minor.

Thursday at 8:30, Theatre—Concert Hall. Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Jean Morel. Rossini: Overture to "Scala di Seta;" Mozart: Symphony in B-flat (K. 319); Ravel: "Mother Goose" Suite; Strauss: "Der Buerger als Edelmann."

Friday at 5:45, "Tanglewood on Parade," for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Fanfare and welcome at 5:45, at 6 simultaneous demonstrations of the Berkshire Music Center in operation, in the Music Shed (orchestra) Theatre—Concert Hall (opera) and Chamber Music Hall (chamber music); at 7, the lawn party and picnic supper; at 8:15 in the Music Shed, the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Thomas Schippers in Bizet's Symphony in C major, and the final scene from Strauss' "Salome," with Brenda Lewis as soprano soloist, and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler in a Sousa March, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," Suite from "Gaite Parisienne," Offenbach; Ravel's Bolero, "TV-Iana," arr. by Bayman and "Look Sharp—Be Sharp," Mernick-Bennett; thereafter, drawing for door prizes and waltzing on the lawn by the main house.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Brahms: "Tragic" Overture; Piston: Fourth Symphony; Ravel: "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" Saint-Saens: Third Symphony (E. Powers Biggs, organ soloist).

Sunday, Aug. 15, at 2:30, closing concert in the Music Shed. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor. Berlioz: Requiem (in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky) David Poleri, tenor soloist; Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center augmented by the Springfield, Mass., Chorus, and four brass bands.

WATERVILLE, ME. SENTINEL

JUL 12 1954

Re Will Spend Six Weeks At Berkshire Center

Prof. Peter Re of the Colby College music department has received a grant to do choral conducting at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass. He is director of both the Colby glee club and the Colby choir.

The award was made to Re by RCA-Victor and covers a six weeks period at Tanglewood which began July 5.

He is to work under Hugh Ross, head of the choral department at the music center, and director of the Schola Cantorum of New York City.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y. STANDARD-STAR

JUL 24 1954

TO VACATION UPSTATE

Mrs. William Reyer of 656 Esplanade, Pelham Manor, will spend a few weeks during August as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ramsay of Brainard, N.Y. During her stay there Mrs. Reyer plans to attend the Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood.

PICNICKERS
A full two hours before concert time people lined up at refreshment stands to purchase coffee and cold drinks for picnic use on the grounds.

This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
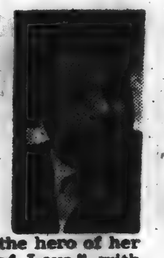
PRESS
JUL 16 1954

Springfield Republican August 8, 1954

Sights and Sounds—
Milt Widder



PASSING PARADE: The Community Fund's fall campaign goal (to be announced early next month) will be about $100,000 below the eight-million-dollar mark; last year the fund went over the top by a good margin. . . . Tom Ryan, ex-Euclid Ford, is new sales manager at Zahner Motors on Lorain. . . . In town visiting is Mrs. Leona Bruckner and her son, the hero of her best-selling book, "Triumph of Love," with her parents on E. 125th St.

Leo Ascherman's daughter (he ran Bill McDermott's mayoralty campaign)—Marjorie Ascherman Bonzo—and Arthur Schorr, partner in Larry Simon, are getting married Aug. 12. . . . Mary Ann Bdell and Mario Zadercsky back home in Cleveland from New York with the thrilling tale that John Hodiak (the actor) was their host at lunch at Sardi's.

Police Chief Frank Story was nabbed by Shaker's radar squad (on Avalon Rd. between Fernway and Van Aken) yesterday morning—going 35 mph in a 25-mile zone. No ticket: professional courtesy.

THE OTHER SIDE: Folks who live on W. 168th St. say that they asked playground officials and police to tag cars parked along the Gunning Playground. This is in answer to yesterday's item about mothers who complained about parking tickets. The neighbors say the lives of several children have been endangered by "indiscriminate" parking.

SALUTE to Patrolman Alex Massiela of the police accident division, who gave a bewildered new papa $1 in cash the night before last so the latter could get home from an accident scene (East Blvd. and Superior) after his auto was cracked up.

Items of Timely Interest Rounded Up Here and There

MIDWAY: The Papa Joe Crematl case—in all its lurid details—is the subject in the current (September) issue of True Police Cases. It's called "Exposing Cleveland's Sin Circus." . . . Violist Milton Katims, who is the new conductor of the Seattle Symphony, will visit his sister, Mrs. Harold Whiting, of the Speedwriting Institute, here a week from Sunday.

Beatrice Krebs, Cleveland singer, has been chosen by Charles Munch to do all the major contralto roles at Tanglewood (Berkshires) this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. . . . Lawrence Murphy, sales manager here for Whirlpool (Kelvinator), leaves here end of the month to be a partner in a large distributorship in Miami.

GOOD PICKER: Florence Roth, who yesterday ran the TV-Guide day at Thistle Down, came away from the track with the prize daily double: $842 for her $2.

ADD BUILDINGS CLEANED: The West Side Market on Lorain and W. 25th—first cleaning since it was built, more than 40 years ago.

WORLD PREMIERE: One of the most interested spectators at the jammed Palace shindig last night—first showing of "Magnificent Obsession"—was Mrs. Della Repent of Bunts Rd., Lakewood. Her daughter's hotel in Lake Arrowhead was headquarters for the location shots in the picture produced by Ross Hunter (ex-Clevelander), and the daughter's yard and surroundings were in many scenes. The daughter is Evelyn (Mrs. Robert) Foehl, West High grad of '25. . . . Mayor Celebrezze was late in showing up for the festivities; he had to dedicate a swimming pool, also cut the birthday cake for his daughter, Susan, 6.

Berlioz' Te Deum Highlight of Tanglewood Week-end

Boston Globe Aug. 9

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 8—A Berlioz program Saturday night which featured the seldom-heard Te Deum was the highlight of the last week-end but one of the current Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

That, and a splendid singing performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti, concluded an enjoyable series.

The audience total of 27,050 persons for this series was the largest of the festival thus far. Of that figure, 10,600 were present Saturday night and 12,700 this afternoon. The remainder attended Wednesday and Friday.

Berlioz' vast and grandiose Te Deum, his last huge choral work and a product of his highest maturity, is almost a curiosity today. Few here could have heard it much before, and indeed I think this was the first time that Charles Munch has conducted it in this country.

Like the Requiem it calls for greatly augmented orchestra and chorus (Berlioz wanted 800 singers and an orchestra based upon 100 strings).

Yet the total effect, which in spirit is truly laudamus, is less a big sound than a big feeling. Loud enough to be impressive, of course, but not the sort of circus effect he obtained with his four brass bands in the Requiem.

Although the orchestral writing is characteristic Berlioz, of much detail and consistent beauty, the real interest here is the choral work, which is demanding, tricky and most ingenious.

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center was augmented by children from Camps Mahkeenac aand Indian Hill, with Hugh Ross stationed directly in front of youngsters as assistant conductor.

The device worked very well indeed: the choral singing of this performance was really superb, both in technical efficiency and expressive power. The tone was full without any sense of strain or shrillness.

David Poleri sang admirably (though his voice seemed a little tight, at first), the tenor solo of "Te Ergo Quaesumus." At the end, there was one of the biggest ovations, directed especially at Mr. Munch, that I have ever heard anywhere. The evening began with the orchestral Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," which went in accustomed fine style.

Another novelty was the song-cycle "Summer Nights," Berlioz' own orchestration of Vilanelle, "Le Spectre de la Rose," "Sur Les Lagunes," "L'Absence," "Au Cimitiere" and "L'Ile Inconnu."

The soloist was Eleanor Steber, and she gave a good account of herself, though it seemed that she might have mustered a bit more variety of expression in the final three songs.

"Sur les Lagunes" ranges low for her soprano voice, but the tone was neither hollow nor unsteady. Especially in those measures where the dynamic volume is slight and the vocal range medium to high, Miss Steber produced lovely sounds. She was well received by the audience, which could not repress a sympathetic chuckle when, as they left the stage, conductor Munch inadvertently stepped upon the train of her handsome light blue gown. The fragment was picked up, placed on a music stand, and snatched up with a laugh and a flourish by Miss Steber when she responded to another round of applause.

This afternoon's program also included Gluck's gravely noble "Alceste" Overture and the Second Symphony of Brahms. Apart from two uneasy moments in the concerto the great violin classic went beautifully. Mr. Francescatti gives it a certain warm, Mediterranean quality that the work takes very nicely, and accordingly his reading is a bit different from the heavier and perhaps more roundly sculptured playing of it you have heard from other artists, especially German or Russian.

But the aspect of the Francescatti reading you remember longest is its constantly singing style.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 31 1954

Cultural Guide

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

A full-page cultural guide runs each Saturday in the Berkshire Evening Eagle, listing in detail the complete summer program for the Berkshire Music Festival, and other artistic attractions.

ERIE, PA.
DISPATCH
JUL 25 1954

JANE WYMAN, at the Plaza this week in "Magnificent Obsession," is already at work on "Lucy Gallant," her new starrng vehicle. Miss Wyman loves vehicles. "Lucy Gallant" concerns a New England beauty who arrives in an oil-booming town and eventually builds one of the most elaborate and successful department stores in the area. In her business struggles she is befriended and falls in love with a railroad worker (Charlton Heston), who later strikes a rich oil field. Thelma Ritter is also in the cast.

* * * *

WILLIS PAGE, who gained his fame from conducting the Boston "Pops" and through his many recordings, will conduct the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra Pop concert Tuesday evening in Kleinhans Hall, presenting music from 'Carmen' to Rodgers & Hammerstein; from Beethoven to Gershwin. Jacob Lateiner will be the piano soloist, playing Tschaikowsky's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Rosemary Kuhlmann, of the New York City Opera Co., makes her Municipal Opera debut (St. Louis) this week in Friml's "The Three Musketeers." Berkshire Festival this week will see three one-act operas—"L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera by Vecchi (1594) first staged performance in U. S.—"Hin und Zuruck," a musical sketch by Paul Hindemith—and "The Princess and the Pea," a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, based on Hans Christian Andersen's tale.

* * * *

BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
JUL 24 1954

Paul Koby

Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto at the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Friday evening, July 30.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS
JUL 25 1954

Festival to Hear Three Operas

LENOX, Mass. — (UP) —Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by opera students of the Berkshire Music Center Tuesday.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso", a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musica lsketch, Op. 45, by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christion Andersen tale.

[301]

Music in Review

Boston Post — Aug. 9

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 8—One has only to look at the totals which mount higher each Sunday afternoon to see that the Tanglewood policy of programming the most popular works by the most standard composers pays off handsomely in attendance.

Today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, which listed Gluck's "Alceste" overture, the Beethoven Violin concerto, and Brahms' Second Symphony, drew the largest audience so far this summer, nearly 13,000.

Mr. Munch turned in a sterling performance of the Gluck, a darkly tragic piece which sets the stage in its original use for Gluck's moving music drama. The strings sang richly in a veiled, somber hue while the woodwinds and brass added even darker colors to the stately music.

Zino Francescatti was the soloist in the centre work of the afternoon, the Beethoven Violin Concerto. His tone was bright; his intonation, except for the opening of the rondo, was on the nose; and his phrasing in the larghetto could serve as a master lesson for every fiddle in the shed or on the lawn.

Mr. Munch, who habitually overdramatizes the Beethoven dynamics, wisely followed the lead of his soloist in bringing to the first movement Latin warmth and mood.

However, in the middle movement while Francescatti played the magnificent song of aspiration with breadth, the conductor directed his orchestra with little continuity. Here, a smoother line in the accompaniment would have provided a softer frame in which to set off the noble solo.

The rondo found both soloist and conductor again in close collaboration for the vigorous finale.

The last piece was Munch's now-familiar reading of Brahm's Second Symphony. Gallacized Brahms with lightning illumination and spirited tempos makes an interesting if not wholly rewarding experience.

If the Brahms did not have all the impact intended, the reason is obvious, a carless grouping of selections in the same tonality. The Brahms and Beethoven were both in D Major and the Gluck in D Minor. Two adjacent pieces in the same key will kill the aural "punch" of the second.

PICNICKERS
A full two hours before concert time people lined up at refreshment stands to purchase coffee and cold drinks for picnic use on the grounds.

Springfield Republican August 8, 1954

This Clipping From CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
JUL 16 1954

Sights and Sounds—
Milt Widder

PASSING PARADE: The Community Fund's fall campaign goal (to be announced early next month) will be about $100,000 below the eight-million-dollar mark; last year the fund went over the top by a good margin. . . . Tom Ryan, ex-Euclid Ford, is new sales manager at Zahner Motors on Lorain. . . . In town visiting is Mrs. Leona Bruckner and her son, the hero of her best-selling book, "Triumph of Love," with her parents on E. 125th St.

Lee Ascherman's daughter (he ran Bill McDermott's mayoralty campaign)—Marjorie Ascherman Beaver—and Arthur Schorr, partner in Larry Simon, are getting married Aug. 13. . . . Mary Ann Ehill and Marie Zadrecsky back home in Cleveland from New York with the thrilling tale that John Medinik (the actor) was their host at lunch at Sardi's.

Police Chief Frank Story was nabbed by Shaker's radar squad (on Avalon Rd. between Fernway and Van Aken) yesterday morning—going 35 mph in a 25-mile zone. No ticket; professional courtesy.

THE OTHER SIDE: Folks who live on W. 168th St. say that they asked playground officials and police to tag cars parked along the Gunning Playground. This is in answer to yesterday's item about mothers who complained about parking tickets. The neighbors say the lives of several children have been endangered by "indiscriminate" parking.

SALUTE to Patrolman Alex Massiola of the police accident division, who gave a bewildered new papa $1 in cash the night before last so the latter could get home from an accident scene (East Blvd. and Superior) after his auto was crashed up.

MIDWAY: The Papa Joe Cremati case—in all its lurid details—is the subject in the current (September) issue of True Police Cases. It's called "Exposing Cleveland's Big Circus." . . . Violist Milton Katims, who is the new conductor of the Seattle Symphony, will visit his sister, Mrs. Harold Whiting, of the Speedwriting Institute, here a week from Sunday.

Beatrice Krebs, Cleveland singer, has been chosen by Charles Munch to do all the major contralto roles at Tanglewood (Berkshires) this summer with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. . . . Lawrence Murphy, sales manager here for Whirlpool (Manufine), leaves here end of the month to be a partner in a large distributorship in Miami.

GOOD PICKER: Florence Roth, who yesterday ran the TV-Guide day at Thistle Down, came away from the track with the prize daily double: $842 for her $2.

AND BUILDINGS CLEANED: The West Side Market on Lorain and W. 25th—first cleaning since it was built, more than 40 years ago.

WORLD PREMIERE: One of the most interested spectators at the jammed Palace shindig last night—first showing of "Magnificent Obsession"—was Mrs. Della Bogard of Bunts Rd., Lakewood. Her daughter's hotel in Lake Arrowhead was headquarters for the location shots in the picture produced by Ross Hunter (ex-Clevelander), and the daughter's yard and surroundings were in many scenes. The daughter is Evelyn (Mrs. Robert) Fuehl, West High grad of '23. . . . Mayor Celebrezze was late in showing up for the festivities; he had to dedicate a swimming pool, also cut the birthday cake for his daughter, Susan, 6.

Items of Timely Interest Rounded Up Here and There

Berlioz' Te Deum Highlight of Tanglewood Week-end

Boston Globe
Aug. 9

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 8—A Berlioz program Saturday night which featured the seldom-heard Te Deum was the highlight of the last week-end but one of the current Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

That, and a splendid singing performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, with Zino Francescatti, concluded an enjoyable series.

The audience total of 27,950 persons for this series was the largest of the festival thus far. Of that figure, 10,600 were present Saturday night and 12,700 this afternoon. The remainder attended Wednesday and Friday.

Berlioz' vast and grandiose Te Deum, his last huge choral work and a product of his highest maturity, is almost a curiosity today. Few here could have heard it much before, and indeed I think this was the first time that Charles Munch has conducted it in this country.

Like the Requiem it calls for greatly augmented orchestra and chorus (Berlioz wanted 800 singers and an orchestra based upon 100 strings).

Yet the total effect, which in spirit is truly laudamus, is less a big sound than a big feeling. Loud enough to be impressive, of course, but not the sort of circus effect he obtained with his four brass bands in the Requiem.

Although the orchestral writing is characteristic Berlioz, of much detail and consistent beauty, the real interest here is the choral work, which is demanding, tricky and most ingenious.

The Festival Chorus of the Berkshire Music Center was augmented by children from Camps Mahkeenac aand Indian Hill, with Hugh Ross stationed directly in front of youngsters as assistant conductor.

The device worked very well indeed: the choral singing of this performance was really superb, both in technical efficiency and expressive power. The tone was full without any sense of strain or shrillness.

David Poleri sang admirably (though his voice seemed a little tight, at first), the tenor solo of "Te Ergo Quaesumus." At the end, there was one of the biggest ovations, directed especially at Mr. Munch, that I have ever heard anywhere. The evening began with the orchestral Royal Hunt and Storm from "The Trojans," which went in accustomed fine style.

Another novelty was the song-cycle "Summer Nights," Berlioz' own orchestration of Vilanelle, "Le Spectre de la Rose," "Sur Les Lagunes," "L'Absence," "Au Cimitiere" and "L'Ile Inconnu."

The soloist was Eleanor Steber, and she gave a good account of herself, though it seemed that she might have mustered a bit more variety of expression in the final three songs.

"Sur les Lagunes" ranges low for her soprano voice, but the tone was neither hollow nor unsteady. Especially in those measures where the dynamic volume is slight and the vocal range medium to high, Miss Steber produced lovely sounds. She was well received by the audience, which could not repress a sympathetic chuckle when, as they left the stage, conductor Munch inadvertently stepped upon the train of her handsome light blue gown. The fragment was picked up, placed on a music stand, and snatched up with a laugh and a flourish by Miss Steber when she responded to another round of applause.

This afternoon's program also included Gluck's gravely noble "Alceste" Overture and the Second Symphony of Brahms. Apart from two uneasy moments in the concerto the great violin classic went beautifully. Mr. Francescatti gives it a certain warm, Mediterranean quality that the work takes very nicely, and accordingly his reading is a bit different from the heavier and perhaps more roundly sculptured playing of it you have heard from other artists, especially German or Russian.

But the aspect of the Francescatti reading you remember longest is its constantly singing style.

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
NEW YORK, N. Y.
JUL 31 1954

Cultural Guide

PITTSFIELD, Mass.

A full-page cultural guide runs each Saturday in the Berkshire Evening Eagle, listing in detail the complete summer program for the Berkshire Music Festival, and other artistic attractions.

ERIE, PA.
DISPATCH
JUL 25 1954

JANE WYMAN, at the Plaza this week in "Magnificent Obsession," is already at work on "Lucy Gallant," her new starrng vehicle. Miss Wyman loves vehicles. "Lucy Gallant" concerns a New England beauty who arrives in an oil-booming town and eventually builds one of the most elaborate and successful department stores in the area. In her business struggles she is befriended and falls in love with a railroad worker (Charlton Heston), who later strikes a rich oil field. Thelma Ritter is also in the cast.

* * * *

WILLIS PAGE, who gained his fame from conducting the Boston "Pops" and through his many recordings, will conduct the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra Pop concert Tuesday evening in Kleinhans Hall, presenting music from 'Carmen' to Rodgers & Hammerstein; from Beethoven to Gershwin. Jacob Lateiner will be the piano soloist, playing Tschaikowsky's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Rosemary Kuhlmann, of the New York City Opera Co., makes her Municipal Opera debut (St. Louis) this week in Friml's "The Three Musketeers." Berkshire Festival this week will see three one-act operas—"L'Amfiparnaso," a madrigal opera by Vecchi (1594) first staged performance in U. S.—"Hin und Zuruck," a musical sketch by Paul Hindemith—and "The Princess and the Pea," a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, based on Hans Christian Andersen's tale.

* * * *

BOSTON, MASS.
Christian Science Monitor
JUL 24 1954

Paul Koby

Doriot Anthony, first flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloist in Ibert's Flute Concerto at the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Friday evening, July 30.

BURLINGTON, VT.
NEWS
JUL 25 1954

Festival to Hear Three Operas

LENOX, Mass. — (UP) — Three rarely-heard one-act operas, two of them Tanglewood premieres, by Vecchi, Hindemith and Toch will be performed by opera students of the Berkshire Music Center Tuesday.

Orazio Vecchi's "L'Amfiparnaso", a madrigal opera composed in 1594, a five-part unaccompanied choral setting, will have its first staged performance in the U. S.

"There and Back" (Hin und Zuruck), a musical sketch, Op. 45/ by Paul Hindemith, was performed first in Baden-Baden, Germany, in 1927, in Philadelphia 1928, at Tanglewood in 1940 when the composer was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center.

"The Princess and the Pea" (Die Prinzessin auf der Erbse), a musical fairy tale by Ernst Toch, guest teacher of composition this summer at the Berkshire Music Center, is based on a Hans Christian Andersen tale.

Music in Review

Boston Post — Aug. 9

By TUCKER KEISER

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 8—One has only to look at the totals which mount higher each Sunday afternoon to see that the Tanglewood policy of programming the most popular works by the most standard composers pays off handsomely in attendance.

Today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch, which listed Gluck's "Alceste" overture, the Beethoven Violin concerto, and Brahms' Second Symphony, drew the largest audience so far this summer, nearly 13,000.

Mr. Munch turned in a sterling performance of the Gluck, a darkly tragic piece which sets the stage in its original use for Gluck's moving music drama. The strings sang richly in a veiled, somber hue while the woodwinds and brass added even darker colors to the stately music.

Zino Francescatti was the soloist in the centre work of the afternoon, the Beethoven Violin Concerto. His tone was bright; his intonation, except for the opening of the rondo, was on the nose; and his phrasing in the larghetto could serve as a master lesson for every fiddle in the shed or on the lawn.

Mr. Munch, who habitually overdramatizes the Beethoven dynamics, wisely followed the lead of his soloist in bringing to the first movement Latin warmth and mood.

However, in the middle movement while Francescatti played the magnificent song of aspiration with breadth, the conductor directed his orchestra with little continuity. Here, a smoother line in the accompaniment would have provided a softer frame in which to set off the noble solo.

The rondo found both soloist and conductor again in close collaboration for the vigorous finale.

The last piece was Munch's now-familiar reading of Brahm's Second Symphony. Gallacized Brahms with lightning illumination and spirited tempos makes an interesting if not wholly rewarding experience.

If the Brahms did not have all the impact intended, the reason is obvious, a careless grouping of selections in the same tonality. The Brahms and Beethoven were both in D Major and the Gluck in D Minor. Two adjacent pieces in the same key will kill the aural "punch" of the second.

[301]

NEWTOWN, CONN
BEE
7/9/54

At Tanglewood

Martial Singher

The 104-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its first concert of the 1954 Berkshire Festival this Saturday night, July 10, with the presentation of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust". The concert will be given in the great Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Appearing with the orchestra will be the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles) and Donald Gramm (Brander). The two and one-half hour performance will begin at 8:30 under the baton of Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony.

This Sunday at 2:30 p.m., Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra in an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist, the occasion marking the 30th anniversary of Mr Arrau's first appearance with the orchestra which was then under the baton of Mr Monteux.

This year's festival will continue for six weeks, 24 concerts will be given by various musical units. The Music Shed concerts on Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons, will honor the 150th anniversary of the birth of Hector Berlioz by performing complete versions of his principal works.

Other programs of the festival include a chamber music series on Wednesday evenings at 8:30 and chamber music concerts on Friday evenings at 8:30, both in the Theatre-Concert Hall. The programs of all concerts for the coming two weeks are detailed in the Weekly Calendar in this issue of The Bee and will continue through the season.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST-STANDARD
JUL 18 1954

DISCussion:

Berlioz 'Faust' Recording Slated for Fall Release

A week ago last night in the great Shed at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.), this writer witnessed a most striking performance of Berlioz' huge dramatic oratorio, The Damnation of Faust.

On hand were Charles Munch and his magnificent Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society directed by G. Wallace Woodworth, and soloists Eleanor Steber (Marguerite), David Poleri (Faust), Martial Singher (Mephistopheles), and Donald Gramm (Brander).

Conceived on a grand scale, the Berkshire Festival provided a presentation to match. Hearing the work in its entirety is a revealing experience indeed, for there is much more to be heard than the customarily-performed fragmentary excerpts such as the Rakoczy March.

What is especially pleasant to report is that virtually the same forces (the lone exception is Miss Steber who has been replaced by Berlioz specialist, Suzanne Danco) have participated in a complete recording to be issued by RCA Victor in September as a three-record LP album (LM 6114).

Recalling the superb Munch-directed Romeo et Juliette of Berlioz (which, incidentally, has just been awarded the Grand Prix du Disque as the best choral-orchestral recording of 1954), it is fairly safe to anticipate another landmark in the history of recorded music and another noteworthy accomplishment of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

NEW RELEASES—MOZART

Mozart: Concerto No. 18, in B-Flat Major, K. 456; Concerto No. 19, in F Major, K. 459 (Epic LC 3047) Epic's ambitious Mozart Jubilee program, celebrating the two hundredth anniversary of the composer's birth (1756-1956), adds new versions of these two piano concerti.

The pianist of the occasion is Hans Henkemans, unfamiliar to this department up to this point. He is an extremely able pianist, and if he adds little that is new to the subjects at hand, he provides readings which are very much alive and further heightened by proper emphasis and variation.

The Vienna Symphony Orchestra is under the direction of John Pritchard, and it should be stated that there is excellent rapport between soloist and conductor. Sonically, the Epic reproduction leaves nothing to be desired, being both beautifully balanced and a model of clarity with minimum distortion.

Mozart: Symphony No. 40, in G Minor, K. 550; Symphony No. 35, in D, K. 385 "Haffner" (RCA Victor LBC 1066) Another Mozart recording—and a distinguished one at that—is this coupling by the London Mozart Players conducted by Harry Blech.

Issued under the Bluebird imprint, this disc represents a distinct value both musically and economically.

The playing by this expert group is uniformly excellent—forceful or delicate by turn as the score demands.

The sound is typical of the velvet-like variety which reflects the best of the British-engineered efforts. There are still no liner notes in this RCA series; most listeners would appreciate their inclusion.

HIGH FIDELITY

Lalo: Overture to Le Roi d'Ys; Norwegian Rhapsody; Namouna Ballet Suite No. 1 (Epic LC 3049). The vibrant performances of the Orchestre des Concerts Lamoureux here conducted by Jean Fournet are captured with spectacular effect by the Epic engineers.

Lalo's music was something in the nature of orchestral music, and in these Radial Sound duplications, there is a tonal richness that seems exactly right for these exciting Wagner-like pieces. This is a disc destined to find favor with the audiophiles.

Marches (Mercury MG 40007). When it comes to wide range recording, Mercury can show most of its competition a thing or two. And in this new effort, Volume 8 of its distinguished American Music Festival Series, the engineers have a genuine field day.

Conducted by Frederick Fennell, the Eastman Symphonic Wind Ensemble (last heard from in Mercury's "American" Concert Band Masterpieces) presents eight marches of John Phillip Sousa (Faithful of the Fair; Manhattan Beach; Black Horse Troop; Daughters of Texas; Rifle Regiment; Corcoran Cadets; Hands Across the Sea, and Semper Fidelis.)

Eight other American marches complete the contents of this issue: Pieces of Eight (Jenkins-Neff); March, Carrillon (Howard Hanson); Cheerio (Edwin Franko Goldman); His Honor (Henry Filmore); Our Director (F. E. Bigelow); Glory of the Gridiron (Harry L. Alford); Pride of the Illini (Karl L. King); and National Emblem (E. E. Bagley).

Deems Taylor: Through the Looking Glass (Five Pictures from Lewis Carroll), Op. 12 (Mercury MG 40008). Volume 9 of Mercury's American Music Festival Series is this sumptuous treatment of the Deems Taylor score based upon episodes from Alice in Wonderland.

The music itself is probably among Taylor's best, and as performed here with respectful affection by Howard Hanson and the Eastman-Rochester Symphony Orchestra, all the humor and originality of the score is realized.

As an example of the art of recording, one would have to look far and wide for a disc to surpass the magnificent dynamic range and brilliance which is afforded here.—B. H. D.

FALL RIVER, MASS.
HERALD NEWS
JUL 12 1954

Music Festival At Tanglewood

Tanglewood — where Hawthorne lived in "The Little Red House" and did some of his best writing, where the music of the Boston Symphony now resounds through the Berkshires—lazes over Lake Mahkeenac, near Lenox.

Besides a Summer schedule of festival concerts, Tanglewood has the Berkshire Music Center, where promising students are trained by eminent musicians under the direction of Charles Munch, Boston Symphony director. Student concerts are presented on Thursday evenings. One of the students is Donald Bravo of 239 Eagle Street, who plays a bassoon.

The route to Tanglewood, winding and climbing about 150 miles, passes through some of the most charming countryside in the State. You drive through Sturbridge, site of a recreated Yankee village, and ascent "[illegible]" into the Berkshires.

There, Saturday night, the Boston Symphony presented Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," with the Harvard Glee Club, the Radcliffe Choral Society, and soloists Eleanor Steber, David Poleri, Martial Singher, and Donald Gramm.

Set in a 200-acre expanse of lawn and meadow is the Music Shed. Elms, pines, and birches, some six feet around, vary the terrain. A rose-tinted blue backdrop fell over the Berkshires as concert time came.

Six thousand persons filled the Shed, and another two thousand lolled on the lawn, most on blankets. There were women in wheel chairs, young men in cord coats, white bucks, and gray flannels, young women in slacks, and many New Yorkers—you can tell by the clothes and magazines.

The sky grew slate gray as the sun sank, a mist hovered above the lake, "Stockbridge Bowl," in the valley below, and the Northern Star blinked patiently in its balcony seat between two oak pillars. No wonder Hawthorne was bewitched by the impulse to resign from society while planning "The Scarlet Letter" in this setting!

The orchestra, set in gold, radiated its rhapsody, swinging into the familiar, joyous Hungarian March. Human emotions rose and fell with the host of horns, the staccato of drums, the volume of vacillating violins, and the frivolity of flutes. Seldom are so many souls, half shoeless, so silent, so swayed.

The voice of Eleanor Steber, singing the role of Marguerite, penetrated the night. Her notes were strong, clear, and warm enough to reach the ridge half a mile distant, perhaps to soar into the valley and scatter the mist lying over the lake.

Berlioz' dramatic legend, adopted from Goethe's poem, of a disillusioned philosopher who, too melancholy and sophisticated for the simple life of country folk, sells his soul to realize a dream, couldn't have been performed in a more fitting setting. Manipulation and dissatisfaction with nature impresses one as over-reaching—at Tanglewood.

R.A.F.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 24 1954

Orchestra, Munch In Great Form

The Boston Symphony Chamber Orchestra and its director, Charles Munch, were in top form last night in the theatre concert hall at Tanglewood.

The exquisite flowing tones of the violins opened the program, the first movement of Handel's Concerto Grosso, Op. 6, No. 4. The spiccato motive in the allegro starting in the first violins, taken up by the second violins, the violas, was offset by the lyricism of the muted strings in the largo of the third movement. Handel's facility with contrapuntal patterns is marvellously evident in this and the other eleven concerti grossi his richly creative mind composed in thirty-two days.

Mr. Munch conducted the orchestra next in Haydn's "Military" Symphony No. 100 with all its humor and gayety underlined. The adagio of the first movement was merely a settling-in for the fun to follow. Flutes and oboe in a high register set the mood in the first motive. An ebullient allegro based on a French arietta, replaced the usual slow movement, and employed a trio of bass drum, cymbals and triangle, considered most exotic in Haydn's time, and adding a tongue-in-cheek flavor. The minuetto, straitlaced and sedate, precluded a tripping finale in Haydn's inimitable style.

An incisive and moving performance of Haydn's Nelson Mass in D minor was directed by Hugh Ross with the Festival Chorus and four student soloists. Naomi Farr, has a mellow soprano voice but a tendency to overemphasize the lyric line. The contralto, Beatrice Krebs, again demonstrated her effortless talents. The pleasing voice of the tenor blended well with the others after too obvious a beginning. Thomas Stewart was outstanding in his solo, resonant and controlled, and a vital part of the quartet.

The audience of 2250 was well rewarded for its attentiveness. Although it was obvious at the beginning of the concert and the second half that buzzers and blinking lights had no effect in urging people to seat themselves for the performance. One wonders at the reason, definitely not tardiness nor disinterest.

Tonight in the big Shed Jean Morel, for his first appearance, will conduct the full Boston Symphony in Prokofieff's Sixth Symphony, Strauss's Tone Don Juan, Elgar's Variations on an Original Theme, and Nicole Henriot, pianist, in the Liszt E flat Piano concerto. Performance starts promptly at 8:30.

M. deB Beaver.

BILLBOARD
CINCINNATI, OHIO
JUL 31 1954

multi-fiddled ork. . . . RCA Victor tried an experiment at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., this week. They placed on sale thru a local dealer advanced [illegible] Berlioz' "Damnation [illegible]" with the Boston Symphony [illegible] under Charles Munch, and 140 of them were moved in one day. Set will be available in September.

[302]

HARTFORD, CONN.
COURANT
JUL 26 1954

Jean Morel Conducts At Tanglewood

Nicole Henriot Gives Dazzling Rendition Of Liszt's Concerto

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 24 (Special) — The Berkshire Music Festival had its second guest conductor here tonight, when Jean Morel took over the podium to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

With the exception of the intial Prokofiev Sixth Symphony, Mr. Morel, who conducts the student orchestra at the Berkshire Music Center and also teaches at Juilliard, chose a safe and sounding program. There was the Liszt E flat piano concerto, with Nicole Henriot to do the honors, Strauss's "Don Juan" and Elgar's "Enigma" variations.

Dazzling Style

The little Nicole, nervous as a hen on a hot griddle as usual, went the three exhibition rounds with Liszt in the most dazzling style. It is no special compliment to call her the finest woman pianist today. There aren't enough other good ones to make the praise meaningful. Just say that regardless of sex and candelabras, Miss Henriot is one of the most brilliant and most sensitive of all our keyboard artists.

The Liszt concerto that she played is in the main a banal business, but at least there is ring and glitter in it, and Miss Henriot gathered them up into a small whirlwind and blew the audience's hats right off their heads. They, in turn, gave her a grand hand, and she had earned it.

Turbulent Work

The Prokofiev Symphony No. 6 is a taut and turbulent work, almost continually somber, even in its final carnival-type movement which seems to be obligatory among Soviet Composers. It is in every bar the work of a master craftsman. Unfortunately, however, this skill of the writing itself is not sufficient to make the symphony very interesting, certainly no rival for either the great Fifth or the gay Seventh.

Mr. Morel proved to be an agitated conductor, tossing out cues like mad in all directions, bouncing up and down in a choreography all his own, and generally working up a fine seat.

There were times when his ideas seemed spur-of-the-moment. At least, he called for forte's and piano's, accents here and emphasis there, that the orchestra paid no heed to, sailing right by him in the mood and manner in which they had been playing.

Rapport Not Sound

Whose fault this was, was, of course, a little difficult to tell. Maybe the players had forgotten what Mr. Morel had ordered in rehearsal. Maybe he was having unpredictable on-the-spot ideas. In any event, the Rapport between conductor and orchestra was not always very sound.

In the main, however, Mr. Morel's account of the three familiar works, the Liszt, the Strauss "Don Juan" and the Elgar "Enigma" variations, was forthrightly standard.

He likes good, vigorous music making, and he is best when the pages of the score allow him to drive solidly ahead. In the more tenuous sections of the program, his interpretations were not sufficiently cohesive to hold the composition together.

Pleased Audience

This was evident right from the beginning of the Prokofiev, where the going is rather patchy, and Mr. Morel further let the momentum out of the movement until the music was treading water and getting nowhere.

However, for most of the customers, Mr. Morel's wares were apparently highly satisfactory. He got enthusiastic response for all works on the program, particularly for the opening Prokofiev. The orchestra, despite the fact that it did not follow him in all his podium details, played well and heartily, keeping up the good record it had made for itself in the earlier concerts this season.

HARTFORD, CONN.
TIMES
JUL 26 1954

Tanglewood Hears Berlioz, Toch and Prokofieff

By CARL E. LINDSTROM

DESPITE the informalities of dress and picnic deportment, Tanglewood audiences have always been rather primly strict about not applauding between movements of a symphony. Another characteristic, and a happy one, is the low boiling point of applause.

An irresistible desire to clap hands at every opportunity and immovable protocol were in collision Sunday afternoon and protocol lost.

Enthusiasm broke through the spell woven by the enchanted processional of "Harold in Italy." This Berlioz festival shall have brought us nothing lovelier, since the composer himself never penned pages so poetical, so idealized that even the literalness of its title, "March of the Pilgrims Singing Their Evening Hymn," can bind it to earth.

The suavely lyrical viola of William Primrose had no little part in this evocation and he was most heartily acclaimed.

* * *

THE LITTLE OVERTURE with which the program opened is about all that remains of Berlioz' only comic opera, "Beatrice et Benedict," whose story is based on "Much Ado About Nothing." No master of the light touch, Berlioz let a light orchestration and superficial themes take the place of wit. But the coloring and the idiom are Berlioz and since the whole festival is dedicated to him we should be grateful for the chance to meet his lesser known works.

Charles Munch lavished as much loving care upon this fragment as he did upon the "Harold" symphony. In both he underlined points of interest which to most conductors, and consequently to listeners, are dull pages. Berlioz was capable of banality, but not of dullness. It is a matter of conviction.

* * *

ERNST TOCH'S second Symphony was the modern half of the program. He has confided to the world that this work was inspired by Albert Schweitzer, "a man whom I had come to revere more than any of those who live today and equal only to a handful of those who lived in the past." He has misgivings about having said even that much because, he adds, "It must remain an open question whether a work can be brought nearer to the comprehension of the listener by hints as to the history of its origin in the mind of its author."

It must indeed, because having begun to think of it as the "Schweitzer" symphony you look for reasons why. It isn't very much like the musician-theologian-physician who inspired it, is profound, humane, calm, dedicated man. Toch's music is restless, clamorous, searching in a nervous sort of way and the description of the first movement, Allegro fanatico ("Like an Oath") is baffling, to say the least.

Lives of great men all remind us of something we could do better than anybody else if we got busy at it. Schweitzer's career reminded Toch that he should be writing a symphony, which he did.

But it is all Toch and very good Toch too—all the better because it doesn't seem to have very much to do with Schweitzer.

Saturday's Concert

I suppose a reviewer should not have favorite pieces, but he does nevertheless, even though he try to keep his preferences to himself. Just sitting down before a shelf of records of a casual evening, I should very likely pull out just such a series of albums as the Boston Orchestra played Saturday night at Tanglewood—Prokofieff because of his flavorsome Russianism as well as his intelligible modernism and his last Symphony—because it was the Sixth that crossed him up with the Soviets; then Don Juan as the most sincerely felt of the tone poems of Strauss; the Enigma Variations because of the aristocratic affection with which Elgar limned his friends; and Liszt's E flat concerto because in spite of its bombast and pretense I happen to like it.

I like to hear women play it because today's young women pianists have a technical skill which is undaunted by the heroics that were once considered a challenge to the long-haired male titans of the keyboard. But today women swim the channel, drive trucks, fly jets, fight bulls and make a Liszt concerto sound mighty pretty.

Nicole Henriot, the willowy blonde from France, took complete charge of it, setting her own pace and dynamics, leaving the orchestra and guest conductor, Jean Morel, to provide suitable support for thrilling adventure in flambuoyant pianism. It is just what a festival audience loves and they recalled her again and again.

Morel is the kind of conductor who still uses score and baton, but there is nothing between him and the musicians. He plays the whole orchestra—even the sections at rest—and the result is that the climaxes in Strauss were electrifying—and in Elgar, too, for that matter.

This was a long program, finishing about 11. Mr. Morel shrewdly placed the Prokofieff symphony first. This kind of music calls for concentrated attention. It is useless to play it to a tired audience. It is pessimistic for the most part, frenetic and often intellectual.

Briefly, I liked all the numbers after Morel's advocacy of them. Maybe that's the big reason for going to concerts.

WORCESTER, MASS.
GAZETTE
JUL 27 1954

STARS FIGURES IN "TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE"

LENOX—Tanglewood will be on parade Aug. 13—the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, aids the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer School of Music. Arthur Fiedler (left), will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra of which Fiedler is celebrating his 25th year as its conductor. The first half of the concert program will feature Thomas Schippers (right), young alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, where he studied in 1948. Since then he has conducted classical and contemporary operas with the New York City Opera Co. among others. The soloist on Mr. Schippers' half of "Tanglewood on Parade" concert will be Brenda Lewis (center), young star of opera and musical comedy, in the final scene from Richard Strauss' "Salome." Waltzing on the lawn will complete the evening's program.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.
HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
JUL 12 1954

Premiere At Tanglewood Captivates Vast Audience

A crisp cool night ushered in the first of the shed concerts on Saturday with the premiere performance at Tanglewood of Hector Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." An audience of more than 8,500 was completely captivated with the unerring presentation by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra of this graphic concert opera. The fresh young voices of the Radcliffe Choral Society and the Harvard Glee Club were an exceptionally fine complement to the solo voices and the orchestra.

Based on Gerard de Nerval's French translation of Goethe's Faust, it unfolds the dramatic story in four distinct parts. The instrumental music is dominant throughout, as Berlioz intended it to be, and therein lies its strength and the enjoyment of the whole.

The first part shows the disillusioned Faust, sung by David Poleri, a tenor with a warm but heady voice, against a background of joyous peasant music, well sung by the chorus, their heads and voices bouncing with the infectious rhythm of the music. Berlioz ended this part with his famous "Rackoczy March," which Charles Munch in his inimitable style brought from a quiet insistence to a rousing finish, the audience applauding before the final notes.

In the second part Faust, about to end his life, is suddenly joined by Mephistopheles, sung with excellent enunciation and in true operatic style by Martial Singher, whose charactization now dominates the story. A wonderfully ingenious development, including "The Song of the Rat" sung by David Gram, a pleasing bass, and "The Song of the Flea" by Mephistopheles and the Ballet of the Sylphs, ends with a clever interplay of the songs of the soldiers and the students.

Marguerite, the important figure in the third part, was sung with tender and impassioned voice by Eleanor Steber, especially the moderately folk-like melody, "King of Thule," using a small orcestra, as accompaniment. A love duet leading to a trio ends with a choral and orchestral ensemble.

During the last part, the lovers are united, then torn apart, Faust is doomed, Marguerite saved and Mephistopheles triumphed. Mr. Munch led the orchestra, soloists and choristers through each phase as it unfolded with a skill that his devotion to Berlioz proves is well-founded.

Sunday afternoon's concert, the second in the shed series, was an all-Beethoven program with the orchestra directed by Pierre Monteux, a great favorite with Tanglewood audiences. It started with tthe Lenore Overture No. 3, performed in true classic style. Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, in his 30th anniversary with Monteux and the Boston Symphony, played the Emperor concerto with delicacy and strength, at times insinuating a South American flavor that was a little distracting. A pianist of amazing power and technique, he used a tremendous range of dynamics. The audience recalled him several times.

The program ended with the popular fifth symphony, Mr. Monteux with his sparse but telling gestures making it a new and exciting experience. The audience of 10,050 was vociferous in their approval and seemed loath to leave this unique place of musical enjoyment.—Martha deB. Beaver.

Syracuse Herald-Journal August 8

Jean Morel, eminent French conductor, now head of the Juilliard School of Music Orchestra in New York; Zino Francescatti, violinist, and David Poleri, oratorio and operatic tenor, pictured left to right. These artists are at "Tanglewood" for participation in Berkshire Festival concerts this week.

'Tanglewood on Parade' Features Boston Pops; 'Allegro' in Lyric

This date in music: 1806, first work of Rossini, then 16, performed publicly, a cantata, produced in Bologna; 1886, Pietro Yon, famed organist born; 1891, Adolph Busch, noted string player, born.

By E. V. W.

IN THE SHED in the second half of "Tanglewood on Parade," Berkshire Music Center gala scheduled both for the spacious lawns and in the halls in "Tanglewood" next Sunday, Arthur Fiedler will lead his Boston Pops orchestra in several numbers.

Also on this program, in the Music Shed, will be the Boston Symphony, conducted by Thomas Schippers, young maestro, and a scene from "Salome," Richard Strauss opera featuring Soprano Frenda Lewis. Schippers and operetta experience. Thomas Schippers, at 17, was chosen by Eugene Ormandy from one of five finalists in a conductor's contest to direct the Philadelphia Orchestra in the Academy of Music that city. The same season Schippers, now 25, conducted New York's Lemonade Opera Company in the first U. S. production of Haydn's "The Man in the Moon" as well as Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" and Mendelssohn's "The Stranger."

THE YOUNG conductor known as a church organist from the age of 11, in his native Michigan, studied in Berkshire Music Center, conducted Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera "The Consul" on Broadway and in Europe. He since has been resident conductor of the New York City Center Opera, has conducted 100 opera programs and has been guest conductor for major orchestras.

A HIGHLY successful season in "Tanglewood," both artistically and in matter of record attendance (some 120,000 for the summer) will close next Sunday afternoon when the Berlioz "Requiem" will be presented in The Shed, Charles Munch conducting. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will participate in this concert to be given in memory of Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, through whose musical plan "Tanglewood" was brought into [illegible]. At last [illegible] concert Soprano [illegible] of the Metropolitan Opera was soloist. This afternoon in The Shed, Charles [illegible] will conduct a program of Beethoven and Brahms. Zino Francescatti, eminent violinist as guest performer with orchestra. On Tuesday night, as a Festival concert of Chamber Music, Francescatti with Artur Balsam, pianist, will play a program of Bach and Brahms in the Theater-Concert hall.

[303]

BLANK PAGE

END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE REWIND